DANCING TAUGHT, in the most fashionable style, by Mr. WILLIS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden-square Private Lessons in the Polka, Cellarlie Valse, and Valse a Deux Temps, at all hours, to Ladies and Gentlemen of any age, where privacy and expedition. An Evening Class on Monday and Friday Terms may be had, on application as above.

PARIS STAYS, at LA REINE DES FLEURS, 27, Lingate-street. Mesdames M'RAE and EVANS invite the attention of Ladies to their extensive assortment of new and stylish Paris Stays of the most elegant shape, and at very reduced prices. Also, a large stock of English Stays of the best manufacture. Depôt for the above MS. FLANAGAN'S, 23, Bish p-street, Londonderry

THE HOUSE for LADIES.—BERLIN WOOLS, Worsted Every article for Fancy Needlework, Fringes, Gimps, and Trimmings, in every variety for made to order. The new rich Satin Gimps.—A choice assortment of these handsome Gimps at very Low Prices. The improved Dress Fastener, a convenient, secure, and economy combined Berlin Wools, 3d per ounce, all colours.—E. D. ROGERS, 101, Borough.

FRENCH CLEANING. — SAMUEL OSMOND and Co., Dyers, 8, Ivy-lane, Newgate-street, inform the Ladies that they clean Silk, Satin, Cashmere, and Moreenline de Laine Dresses, Shawls, Feathers, Ribbons, Gloves, Kid Gloves, and Satin Shoes, every week. They likewise continue to Dye Black every Wednesday. Best Furniture and Moreen Dyed. Means, Pews, and Flannels.

SHIRTS.—Youths' and Gentlemen's Shirts made to fit superior to any house in London, in the neatest style, at the lowest prices, for ready-money. A large assortment kept ready made. At R. I. NORTON'S Ready made Linen and Clothing Warehouse, 74 Strand, Adelphi. An extensive variety to Elevate and Boys, with every description of Hosiery and Under-Clothing

LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN AND INFANTS' INDIA-CLOTHING. Mrs. NORTON'S Show-Rooms, 72, Strand, is now replete with an extensive Assortment of Ladies' Linen and Under-Clothing Flannel Wrappers, Muslin and Cashmere Robes, made to fit in the most becoming and graceful style. A beautiful variety of Children's Dresses and Baby Linen of every description Wedding orders executed with elegance and taste. Outfits to India and the Colonies furnished on the most reasonable terms and at the shortest possible notice. 72, Strand, Adelphi

LESSONS in MILLINERY and DRESS-MAKING.—MRS. HOWELL, of 304, Regent-street, two doors from Margaret-street, finds inventress or Teaching the Art of Dress-making in a manner entirely new and original, to convey it readily to the meanest capacity a correct knowledge of Cutting, Fitting, and Executing in the most Finished Style, in the Lessons, for One Guinea. The correctness of this system is fully proved by upwards of 250 reference to Pupils.—Apprentices and Improvers Wanted.—Millinery Rooms. Paper Models.

SILKS AND SATINS EXTRAORDINARY CHEAP. Rich Silk Gauze, Striped, and Chequed Designs, Grey Royal, Grey D'Armure, and Grecian Satins, at 2s. 6d. per yard for Walking Dresses
Very Rich Pink, White, and Sky Satins at 3s. 6d., for Evening Dresses
Very Rich Pink, White, and Sky Satins at 3s. 6d., for Evening Dresses
For Mantles: all the Damas, and Watered Duchesse, 2 wide, the richest quality, at 4s. 6d. per yard.
Patterns sent Free of Expense to the Country.—Address KING and SHEATH, 264, Regent-street.

SEA ISLAND HOSIERY.—Science has enabled GEORGE SMITH to place before the public this year a new and invaluable manufacture, SEA ISLAND HOSIERY. The extraordinary silk and reputation which his Sea Island Long Cloth and Gauze have acquired, induced him to have manufactured from the same cotton this famous description of Stockings. The elastic perfection of fitting, and their beautiful, fresh colour and unfading quality are magnificent. The assortment vears a of White, Brown and permanent Black, with plain or laced ancles. Every Stocking bears his name and address woven in, and will be replaced, should it fail in wear, or change colour.—Sea Island Cotton Bandelli and Bridges:—Shawls, Silks, Mantles, Dresses Linens, Swiss Curtains, &c

NEW SILKS, £2. 6s. 9d. the DRESS.—GEORGE SMITH, of Ludgate-hill, respectfully announces that his STOCK of BRITISH and FOREIGN SILKS for the Spring Season will be found magnificent in the extreme. The rare and costly fabrics of France are reduced in price this year by the powerful operation of uncoiled ter competition in the peaceful efforts of our own manufacturers. The public is invited to inspect the beautiful productions of this unprecedented spirit of rivalry. The whole Collection, both British and Foreign, is NOW READY for SALE, commencing with every-dress-pattern of the new and fashionable sake at £2 6s. 9d. the dress of seventeen yards, and advancing with every successive price to fifteen guineas a dress. Prices marked in plain figures.—38, Ludgate-hill, late Rundell and Bridge's

SHAWLS.—THE SIKH WRAPPER.—This beautiful long SHAWL, constructed to fold into twenty four different effects, has been arranged with new Patterns, invented, patented, and sold only by GEORGE SMITH; at whose Establishment may be seen all those grand productions of the high-class Cashmere Shawl, manufactures of France, which have recently created the most extraordinary sensation in the world of fashion. Lord Hardinge has done wonders, the graceful designs and India like textures which characterise the Sikh season, prove that high taste has increased with increasing energy in a competition with the Foreigner, not only successful in taste, but in the quality and price of the French Shawls, in charming variety, from 30s. to £50. Plain Shawls, 20s to £10 Silks, mantles, dresses, fancy goods, table-linen, Swiss curtains, &c. Prices marked in plain figures.—GEORGE SMITH, 38, Ludgate-hill, late Rundell and Bridge's

IMPORTANT AND UNPRECEDENTED SALE AT HOLMES'S, Regent-street. Messrs. Holmes having taken several thousand pounds' worth of SHAWLS at an immense sacrifice, in liquidation of a debt due to their firm by an eminent Manufacturer of Cashmere, have determined to submit the whole to public sale this season. the patterns are of a most elaborate and recherché description, and in consequence of the extraordinary sacrifice they are compelled to sell them at a sacrifice unprecedented. The large additions amount of Stock has induced Messrs Holmes to re-mark at a great discount from their original prices the whole of their extensive and valuable assortment of Shawls, Silks, and Furs, with their unrivalled collection of India, French, and British Shawls, to be inclosed in their sale, which, every article is marked in plain figures, will be found to be the most economical on the 15th inst. FOREIGN and BRITISH SHAWL EMPORIUM, 171, 173, and 175, REGENT-STREET.

CHILDREN'S FROCKS, COATS, and PELISSES, Infants' Cloaks, Hoods, Hats, and Bonnets; Long and Short Robes, French Cambric Caps, Day and Night Gowns, Robe Blankets, Lawn and Cambric Nightcaps, with every other requisite in Baby Linen.—MARSHMANN'S, 4 FINSBURY PAVEMENT, several hundreds of Children's Dresses constantly on view, from the cradle indoor at 1s. 11d., medium 5s. 6d. to 12s. 6d., up to the richly embroidered Silk Velvets, &c., where every other article usually required for a young family, thus obviating the trouble and inconvenience so long complained of in going from shop to shop when Jewish clothing is required An Illustrated Pamphlet, affording additional information, sent free on receiving a paid letter.

BEAUTIFUL WOMEN.—The Thorn that veils the Primrose from our view is not more invidious in Nature than superfluous Hair on the Face. Rosa Aerial Bloom. ROWLAND'S ROSEATE POWDER stands pre-eminent Bouver of Counterfeits The Genuine has been signed G. H. HOGARD for the last forty years Sold for the Proprietor by HOGARD, Chemist, 24, Russell-street, Covent Garden; and by most Perfumers. Price 4s., or two in one parcel, 7s

ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, a Pure White Powder for the Teeth, compounded of the choicest and most récherche ingredients of the Oriental Flora, of unrivalled value for preserving and beautifying the Teeth and strengthening the Gums. Its truly efficient and fragrant aromatic properties have obtained for it celebrity by the approbation of the Royal Family of Great Britain, and the nobility throughout Europe. Price 2s. 9d. per box.—CAUTION
Public Brand, the Proprietor's Name, and the words "ROWLAND'S ODONTO," on the Hatton-garden," engraved thereon, is affixed on each box. Sold by them, and by all Chemists and Perfumers

THE REGISTERED PALETOT OF LLAMA CLOTH is the most fashionable coat for both the present and approaching seasons, still retains the same moderate price, which, with its usefulness and gentlemanly appearance, has secured such general popularity. It has been worn by the principal nobility, and by command of Prince Albert, Prince George of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar, his Grace the Duke of Wellington, and the whole Royal Family of the British Nation. In Scarlet it can only be purchased of the patentees, H. J and D. NICOLL, Court Tailors, 114, Regent-street and 22, Cornhill. Agents for Liverpool: Dawbarn and Son, Bold-street. Manchester: George Meadows, Molesworth-street; for Birmingham: Wareing and Son, New-street; Christie and Son, George-street, Edinburgh; and the principal Tailors in other large towns.

SELF MEASUREMENT.—GREAT ECONOMY AND accommodation. The measure may be taken with a piece of tape and reduced into inches stating the height of pe. son, age, if any peculiarity in figure; also whether taken over a Coat

COATS, VESTS, &c	Inches.	TROUSERS.	Inches
Size round Neck, not including Collar, to Help Buttons to Bottom of Skirt	..	From top of Trousers to bottom From under Side Legs to bottom of Trousers	..
From centre of Back to Elbow joint	..	Size round top of Thigh (Gphi)	..
Coatthread so length of Sleeve at Wrist	..	Size round Calf	..
Size round top of Arm	..	Size Waist	..
Size round Chest under the Coat	..	Ditto Hips	..
Size round Waist under the Coat	..	HAT. Measure size round the Head	..

LIST OF PRICES.

MADE TO MEASURE.	£	s	d	READY MADE.	£	s	d
Cashmerette Quadrilles ... from	1	16	0	Blouses	0	5	6
Tagliouis, silk collars and cuffs ...	1	2	0	Cashmerette Codringtons	0	15	6
Cambridge coat, lined throughout ...	1	8	0	Coachdrivers, Cassimeres, Fullers, and all the newest patterns from	0	18	6
Tweed coats	0	16	0	Tweed coats	0	15	6
Sporting coat	0	15	6	Tweed coats	0	6	6
Dress Coat	2	2	0	Sporting coats	0	7	6
Best quality manufactured	2	15	0	Dress coats	1	1	0
Frock Coat	1	10	0	Extra superfine, a superior coat	1	10	0
Best ditto	2	2	0	Frock coat	1	4	0
A cut pattern vest	0	8	6	Extra superfine, a superior coat	2	0	0
Cassimere or cloth	0	6	0	Roll collar vest	0	8	6
Tweed vests	0	5	6	Fancy satins	0	5	6
Single milled doeskin ditto ...	1	2	0	Cloth or cassimere	0	4	6
Best or Dress ditto	1	5	0	Tweed trousers	0	5	6
Boys' hussar or tunic suits ...	1	8	0	Fancy cassimere or doeskin ditto	0	10	6
				Boys' hussar or tunic suits ...	0	18	6

[illegible] and Gone.—Outfitters to [illegible] 84, 85, and 86, J. Gosse, City London

CAUTION.—E. MOSES and SON regret being obliged to guard the public against imposition; but have learned that the unprincipled like falsehood of "being connected with them or "with the same concern," has been resorted to in many instances, and for obvious reasons they have no connection with any other house in or out of London and those who desire genuine and cheap clothing Ac., should call at or send to the Minories and Aldgate, City, London

NOTICE.—No business transacted at this Establishment from Sunset Friday till Sunset Saturday, when business is resumed till Twelve o'Clock.

A New Work, entitled "Costume Cards," containing a detailed List of Prices and full directions for Self-Measurement, may be had on application, or forwarded "Post Free."

BEARD'S COLOURED PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS, At 34, Parliament-street, Westminster; 85, King William-street, City; and the Royal Polytechnic Institution, Regent-street

"A great improvement has been effected by the patentee."—The Times

PURE ST. JULIEN CLARET, 28s. per Dozen; Pints, 18s.; imported direct by HEDGES and BUTLER, Wine Merchants, &c., 155, Regent-street, can be confidently recommended. Also, some superior Gordon's Golden Sherry, 36s. per dozen. On the receipt of a Post-office Order, or reference, will be immediately forwarded.

NO. 61, GROSVENOR-STREET, BOND-STREET.—Messrs. MOSELEY, Surgeon-Dentists have REMOVED from No 32, Haymarket. Their system supplying ARTIFICIAL TEETH, constructed upon a principle to maintain without lessening the base of the palate by artificial covering, or injuring the adjoining teeth by use of wires. Their teeth are unchangeable in colour, and perfectly resemble the original. Decayed teeth permanent y filled and restored to use, superseding extraction

SCARBOROUGH.—SHARPIN'S CROWN HOTEL, ESPLANADE, (Contiguous to the Saloon, Spa, and Cliff Bridge Pleasure Grounds)—Families and Gentlemen visiting the Season or Sea Bathing are respectfully informed that a considerable reduction will be made in the usual charges at the above Hotel, during that time

A fine the day pres ts will always ensure suitable apartments.

AIR GUNS and AIR CANES.—An entirely new and further improved assortment of these portable and gently destructive weapons, now on view, adapted for Rifle Practice, Sporting, Pigeon Shooting, So ial Rifle Bowl, &c., with the small birds with shot, Fish with harpoons, &c Prices commencing at 35s. each, going and apparatus complete.—Rody, Gun-maker, No —Oxford street—Entrance in Vere-street

ELEGANCE and ECONOMY in PAPER-HANGINGS.—French Satins, 2s. 6d. per piece; Flock, 6d. per yard; 20,000 pieces in Stock. Patent Decorative Enamels, Gold, Oak, as cheap as other inferior Papers. Terms, Cash. Established 33 years W. CROSBY, 22, Lowther Arcade. N.B.—Three doors from the Strand entrance

MESSRS. WILKINSON and DOBSON, 32, PICCADILLY, respectfully announce, that the retirement of one of the firm will enable them to offer for a limited period, their extensive stock, including Jewellery, Plate, and Watches, on the most favourable JEWELLERY, SILVER PLATE, ENGLISH and GENEVA WATCHES

Also SHEFFIELD PLATE. Messrs. Wilkinson and Dobson, specially solicit an early inspection of their Patrons and Friends who are acquainted with the superior character of their Stock.

JONES' £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. They comprise every modern improvement, and are warranted to perform correctly in all climates, and to keep time. Fitted in cases of pr e at once sets sacks all rivalry, either of the Swiss manufacturers, or any other Or receipt of a Post-office Order payable to John Jones for £4 4s., one will be sent free by return of Watchwork, sent free for a Twopenny Stamp

"HOW VERY COMFORTABLE," exclaim all who use NEW MODEL SPRING TRUSSES. A radical cure of rupture, however complicated, fourteen shillings to forty shillings, according to size and quality. JOHN INGRAM and SONS, Manufacturing Upholsterers, 29, CITY-ROAD, Finsbury-square.

CHILDREN AND INVALIDS' CARRIAGES.—Invalids' Wheel Chairs, from £3 to £35, with hoods, second-hands as well as new; Rolnal and Selfacting Chairs, Children's Chairs, Perambulators, Pleasure Carriages, Bath Chairs, from 35 shillings to Twenty Guineas Immense and varied collection on SALE or HIRE, at INGLAND'S Repository of Invalid Carriages, 3, Leicester-square, Leicester-square

CORK LEGS.—W. R. GROSSMITH'S PATENT ACTION LEGS enable all who have lost a leg to walk with ease and comfort. They are much lighter, and considerably less expensive than the old style. Ladies and children wear them with perfect safety. They are covered by nature in shape and texture, and do not require any other deformities (occasioned by the use of crutches and the common pin legs) are entirely removed.—Artificial Arms by Grossmith, 179, Fleet-street. Established 1760.

GROSSMITH'S READING HAIR NOURISHER, 1s. per pot. Thickens, strengthens, beautifies, improves the growth, and preserves the colour of the hair more effectually than any preparation ever known.—Grossmith's unrivalled Shaving and Food soaps. Scouts, Tooth Powder, &c., are the well known articles which the whole world to require continued puffing The Proprietor merely reminds the public that it is the highest price, and that his article can only be obtained in London of his Son, CHARLES GROSSMITH, 125 Strand, London

TORTOISE-SHELL COMBS.—J. PROUT, Brush and Comb Maker, 236, Strand, London respectfully invites the attention of purchasers to his unrivalled Stock of Tortoise-shell Combs, it is at present in fine condition, at once varied and extensive, of the choicest colours, and most elegant workmanship. Families residing in the country may be perfectly safe abroad, can furnish themselves at this house with goods that can be depended upon for any climate, and at very moderate prices Orders post paid for carefully executed. PROUT'S Brush and Comb Manufactory, 236, Strand, London

BED FEATHERS, DYED by STEAM with PATENT MACHINERY, whereby they are rendered perfectly sweet and free from dust

Mixed	1s. to 0d. per lb.	Best foreign Grey Goose ...	2s. 0d. per lb.
Foreign	1s. 6d. per lb.	Best Irish Grey	2s. 6d.
		Best Dantzic ditto ...	3s. 0d.

Purchasers of not less than [illegible] pounds carriage free. Prices, sent to [illegible]

THE PANKLIBANON IRON WORKS and GREAT WESTERN EMPORIUM STOVE GRATES, kitchen-ranges, fenders, and fire-irons, ornamental fenders, ironmongery and cooking stoves and ranges, improved kitchen-ranges, and cooking apparatus, and all kinds of smiths' work, Sheffield plate, and table cutlery, Japanned paper and iron tea-trays, tea-urns, tea-kettles, coffee-pots, and every description of metal and iron goods, patent oil stoves for the use of which are recommended for verandahs, use of paper and iron tea-trays, patent oil stoves for candle or oil Every article is warranted, and marked at the lowest prices, in plain figures, for cash. Address, PANKLIBANON IRON WORKS, 27, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury

ROOK SHOOTING. — AIR-CANES and AIR-GUNS of the most perfect description, and brought to perfection, now in general request for Rook, Rabbit, Waterfowl Shooting, and numerous other sports They are loaded with ease, discharge without noise or recoil, and are very portable. The ball has been known to go to 150 yards for killing deer game, vermin, &c., with harpoons, for killing fish, and by great experiments, will throw small shot and arrow for the best Wood of the leather lining to surpass anything ever before done with air Letters stating what sports they are for, will receive suitable advice. Rods of bone expressly prepared and strongly mounted with brass, canes and apparatus included Trial on the premises. BLISSETT, Gun-maker (formerly with W. Hy. Ely), 4, Coventry-street, Haymarket

TO FAMILIES.—French and English Soups, Made Dishes, Jo.Jos. Cracons, French Pastry, Rout, Macaroon, and Pound Cakes, Victoria Sandwiches, Orange, Lemon, and Citron Rings, Rusolas, Dried Apricots, and Grapes, Mosti Kisses, Nurse Bon-Bons, Crackers, Twelve Sorts of Comfits, Thirty Sorts of Sweetmeats, and all sorts of Confectionery supplied to Town or Country, by J. W. BURROWS, 38, Upper Albany-street.

ASSAM TEA, COFFEE British Wines, Bottled Fruits, Dundee Marmalade, Jams, and Rock Pickles, &c

Also, ALMOND ICED WEDDING CAKE.

THE ROYAL VAUXHALL SWISS, 38 Upper Albany-street, near the Colosseum, Zoological Gardens, Regent's-park. [illegible] Shops supplied on Liberal Terms.

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH and SMYRNA SPONGES Useful Inquiry.—For proof of the extreme durability, power of cleansing, and true economy, ask all who have used Metcalfe's Brushes. The Tooth brush the highly-important office of searching thoroughly into the divisions, and cleansing brushes, with the durable unbleached Russia bristles, which will not rise like common hair Improved Clothes-brushes, that cleanse from grease, in one-third the time The new Velvet brush, and numerous brush of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponge, at METCALFE and CO.'s Establishment 130b Oxford street, one door from Hodge-street.

ROBINSON'S DRYING MACHINE.—Numerous Inquiries having been made for the above, adapted to the use of Small Families, the Proprietor of the Patent begs to inform the Public that this truly useful Machine is now constructed expressly for this purpose, at a very moderate cost. This invaluable article takes the laborious and destructive custom of wringing. It has been adopted in her Majesty's Laundry, Windsor; by the Royal Family at Claremont, Chatham, the Bathand Washhouses, St. Pancras, and Belfast, and in many Public and Private Establishments throughout the Kingdom Copies of Testimonials, and further particulars may be obtained, on application to W. F JENKINS, Sole Manufacturer, 27 Charles-street

SALE OF FIRST-CLASS JEWELLERY, PLATE, and WATCHES, at 56, CHEAPSIDE, adjoining Bow Church.—ABRAM BARBER begs to inform his Patrons and the Public generally that, being about to retire from business at his Establishment, 56, Cheapside, adjoining Bow Church, he is now SELLING OFF the whole of his well-known Superior STOCK, which will be offered at prices that will secure an immediate sale, as the whole must be cleared by the end of the month. An early visit and comparison of prices will at once prove the truth of the above announcement. A. B. is anxious to avoid any identity with the numerous fictitious attempts at SELLING OFF now being made, where goods of no inferior quality are fixed at prices that are only nominal. Every article marked in plain figures, from the smallest price, without subterfuge or misrepresentation.—56, Cheapside, adjoining Bow Church.—A very superior Stock of English and Swiss Watches, of guaranteed performance, at less than established prices.

PROTOBOLIC HATS.—JOHNSON and Co., 113, Regent-street, corner of Vigo-street, Hatters to her Majesty and the Royal Family, Patentees for the application of Velvets and Air Cushions to Hats.—This luminous combination of a Velvet which is placed in the Crown of the Hat, giving free exit to heat and perspiration, and of a covered apparatus forming a cushion of air between the head and the leather lining by which air is admitted. The Protobolic Hat possesses the following advantages.—the regulation of the amount of air admitted into the crown of the hat, by the open and closing of the valve at the pleasure of the wearer, thus adapting it to any temperature, and preventing perspiration—Impermeability to grease around the head—extreme lightness, coolness, cleanliness, and durability—and, lastly, their acknowledged comfort to all who suffer from headache, or who are in the habit of taking violent exercise —Johnson and Co., 113, Regent-street, corner of Vigo-street, Hatters to her Majesty, 70, Bond-street, Piccadilly

CAUTION.—A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton-garden, London, beg to caution the Nobility and Gentry against being misled by the attempts of some Shopkeepers, who to compounds of their own manufacture give the titles of "MACASSAR OIL" "KALYDOR," and "ODONTO," and thereby cause under the implied sanction of A. Rowland and the Government Departments, with similar attempts at Deception, while they copy the Labels, Bills, Advertisements, and Testimonials, closely resembling those used to exhibit the genuine Articles, and thus deceive the unwary. The only genuine "MACASSAR OIL," "KALYDOR," and "ODONTO," are "ROWLANDS'," and the Wrapper and Label of each bear the name of "ROWLANDS'," preceding that of the Article, with their Signatures at the foot in RED INK, thus—"A. ROWLAND & SON." Sold by them, at 20, Hatton-garden, London; and by all Chemists and Perfumers.

MECHI'S NEW SHOW ROOMS FOR PAPER MACHÉ MANUFACTURES, 4, Leadenhall-street, London.—MECHI, determined to carry out his principle of being in the foremost rank, has brought out many novel specimens and specimens in Papier Maché. Finding it impossible to display them advantageously in his old premises, he has, at considerable expense, fitted up a splendid show-room, to which he invites all those who are desirous of seeing the most artistic specimens this country can produce. It is not expected that visitors will purchase, as they are of a costly nature, but merely happy to tempt his customers and sup ly their wants His principle is, and always will be, to exchange or return the money for any article purchased if it may be found objectionable. The blinds line to quality. He has always found that his customers never leave him, because they are always satisfied. Among the numerous specimens of Papier Maché are to be found some decorated with admirable copies of Edwin Landseer's most popular and modern paintings, together with some exquisite landscapes of Windsor Castle, Virginia Water, the Isle of Wight, &c

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH, New-road, London.—Notice is hereby given, that the NEW LIST, for 1847, of the HYGEIAN AGENTS duly authorised to vend Morison's Vegetable Universal Medicine throughout the world, is now ready, and may be had on application at the College, as above, and at any of the Agents'. N.B. No chemist or druggist is allowed to sell the Vegetable Universal Medicine (Morison's Pills), and the public is hereby further informed that Hygeists have no connection with the pills or other things sold at chemists' shops. Dated the 30th day of March, 1847.

TONIC ALE.—This splendid description of Bottled Beer is now in perfection It is strongly recommended by the Faculty as possessing peculiar stomachic qualities, promoting appetite, &c. Sold in quart and pint bottles, corked by Bate's patent Capsule. JOSEPH STOCKTON, Sole Agent, Stores, No 1, Johns-mews Bedford row

ELEGANT PICTURE FRAMES, LOOKING GLASSES, CORNICES, &c. The acknowledged really economic House for every description of Carving and Gilding, of the best materials and masterly workmanship, is PHILLIPS'S old established Plate-G ass and Moulding Warehouse 63, Fleet-street. Priced sheets of chaste designs on receipt of 24 stamps Artists, Decorators, and the Trade, liberally dealt with. The Art Union engravings framed and glazed &c., from Eight Shillings. 63, Fleet-street. Observe corner of Serjeants-inn

PRESERVED PROVISIONS.—Families in Town and Country should have a supply of these exquisite-ly cooked comforts, consisting of two hundred different dishes in the French and English st le, always ready to be put on table, and may be eaten hot or cold. Spiced Beef, Salmon, Green Peas, Mock Turtle, and Multigatawney, cold Partridges and Pheasants; the most convenient, economical, and delicious things to take abroad. Sample hampers forwarded on receipt of a Post-Office order for 20s., payable to HENRY BARKER and Co., 9, Size-lane, Mansion House

JEAN VINCENT BULLY'S celebrated "VINAIGRE de TOILETTE."

This Aromatic Vinaigre, the qualities of which have been tested and fully appreciated for many years in France and on the Continent is now, for the first time, on a larger scale, imported into England Amongst its other properties it is sufficient to mention its efficacy in refreshing the skin, rend ring it perfectly smooth and white preventing and removing all injury and pimples and tetters. Sold, wholesale and retail, in bottles, 2s. 6d. each, by A. ROUHET, Agent, 59, George-street, Portman-square. A liberal allowance to the trade

LONDON CARPET WAREHOUSE.—WAUGH and SON, 4, Moorfields, and 4, Goodge-street (established 1760), have the attendance of the Nobility, Clergy, country, &c., to an inspection of their large and magnificent collection of Brussels, Royal Velvet Pile, Axminster, Patent Tapestry Turkey, Patent Felt, or Victoria Carpets, and every other description of Carpeting, of Kitchen and Fore-ign manufacture, comprehending the most tasteful and elegant designs, the colours and quality of which can be warranted, being all manufactured under their immediate inspection. The large per-onage and experience they have had, their establishment being exclusively for the sale of carpeting, per chases upon the most favourable principles, and their determination to adhere to small profits, and at reasonable prices, must recommend them to public notice.

THERE is not probably any existing art which confers a more genuine and more lasting pleasure, than that which perpetuates the features of those endeared to us by the ties of relationship, or by still closer bonds, and we all must be [illegible] the painter's art, raised to our chief and right to the dignity and expression of those we most honour we hold most dear. Mr. HYMAN DAVIS, PORTRAIT PAINTER, Student of the [illegible] visitors from ten till five. Having studied the works of the best masters, more particularly those who have devoted their talents to the art of Portraiture including the late Sir Thomas Lawrence, he has succeeded in producing Portraits [illegible] patronage, a well-painted post cre, in addition to a perfect resemb ance Specimens may be seen at 3, Cecil-street, Strand, from ten till five. Miniatures, 5 guineas.

CHUBB'S LOCKS, FIRE-PROOF SAFES, AND CASH-BOXES. CHUBB'S NEW PATENT DETECTOR LOCKS give perfect security from false keys and picklocks, and also immediate notice of any attempt to open them. They are sold by all respectable Iron-mongers in every town where they are required, and are strong, simple and durable. Chubb's Patent Fire-proof Strong Rooms, Safes, Chests, and Boxes, Deed Boxes, Dispatch Boxes, and Japan Boxes of all dimensions on sale, or made to order, all fitted with Chubb's Locks CHUBB and SON, St. Paul's Churchyard, London

NUMBER ONE SAINT PAUL'S CHURCHYARD.—It is a well-known fact that the original cost of the FINEST CONGOU TEA is over 3s 8d., sold 2s. per pound, which, with duty added, makes the cost to the Merchant in the country, 4s. 4d. per pound for the Finest Congou Tea. We have, ever since we have been selling Tea at "Number One" sold this description at 4s. 6d. per pound. Hundreds and thousands of people have tried it, and are thankful for the strength and richness of flavour. Nobody ever dealt with it, and it pleases everybody because it is both good and cheap

DAKIN and SONS, Tea Merchants, Number One, Saint Paul's Churchyard, London.

THE LATE WILLIAM COBBETT, M.P., in his "Register" for June, 1833, there depicted the sufferings he had endured for twenty-two years, from the want of a perfect TRUSS; and, having obtained one from Mr. COLES, was instrumental in inducing thousands of persons of rank and fortune to apply to him for relief—whose patronage has ever since been liberally bestowed.

 "COLES'S PATENT, 3, CHARING-CROSS," is marked upon all his TRUSSES.

COLONEL FRANKLIN informs those who have ruptures, that he has been wearing TRUSSES 30 years, and he never met with but one individual who was master of the complaint. He has known an elder brother, a colonel in the Honourable East India Company's service, who had for a number of years worn a truss, which can say the same. Mr. COLE's, of CHARING-CROSS, is the individual alluded to—[illegible] beach Feb. 17, 1835

 The Colonel was likewise cured of Rheumatism by Mr Cole's Medicated Galvanic Bands, and gave him an excellent testimonial to that effect.

THE THEATRES.

ASTLEY'S.

Under the intelligent superintendence of Mr. Broadfoot, a very effective taster piece has been produced at this house, called "The Bride of Abydos." Our contemporaries have generally fallen into the mistake of noticing the piece itself as a new one, but it is merely a remodelling of the old piece of that name, in which Mr. Dimond's tragic play of the same name, which was first produced at Drury-Lane Theatre in 1818; the principal characters being sustained by Kean, H. Johnston, Pope, T. Cooke, and Mrs. Hardyn. The liberties we have taken with Byron's story, and parts of "The Corsair" are amalgamated with it, Selim killing Giaffer at the conclusion, and winning Zuleika. There is also a comic underplot, without which no Astley's piece would be complete, a similar kind of treat for comicality not be content with anything they saw. Everything has been done to give eclat to the present production; and it will, without doubt, prove a hit. There is some capital scenery in the piece, and the manager has introduced much more quadrupeds horses, camels, zebras, shy ponies, donkeys, and an elephant than ever we saw together on the stage. We never criticise the acting at Astley's; all those who have attempted to do so have fallen into the error the area of sound-absorbing saw-dust on which they appear; and in this they usually succeed admirably. All the company appear in the present spectacle, including Mr. Broadfoot himself, in their best manner. Mr. Broadfoot still terms it "treble production" of the "extensive establishment of equestrian and dramatic artistes, troops of gymnastic performers, voltigeurs, and antipodean wonders."

Certainly we love to be confused by such grandiloquence; we rejoice to witness the "Bounding Ball of the Pyrenees," the "Jingling Jumpers of Pekin," the "Flying Trapeze," the "Wonderful Leaps of the Brother of the Lion King of the world only to be met with over Westminster-bridge, and to believe that such marvels really are. And we counsel everybody who inclines to the same propensity to go to Astley's, and be as bewildered as we were with the gay, human and quadrupedal; the trappings, and banners, and costumes generally; the armour, and spangles, and red fire that are to be witnessed there "every evening until further notice.

LYCEUM.

Since our brief notice of last week, Mr. Shirley Brooks' three act drama of "The Creole," has been played with effect every night, and is evidently drawing money. The plot of the play is at the period of the French revolution, and the scene passes in the Mauritius, the action of the plot being founded on the hatred existing between the Creoles and the French residents. The has before been made the subject of several plays, but has been treated as well as in the present instance; and, it does not often occur that the parts are so equally and so effectively divided. The entire piece is a great improvement upon "Le Docteur Noir," a drama based somewhat upon the same notion. Mr. Emery has the chief character of the male dramatis personæ to play that of Le Creole, Antony Lafour; and he performs it admirably—his concluding death scene, in which he is shot by the French revolutionists, being one of the most excellent part of a Jew, appearing somewhat in a new phase; and Mr. Leigh Murray, as Alphonse le Nyon—an officer in the revolution-ry army deserves the highest commendation for his easy, natural, and gentlemanly bearing. But the part of the piece is Mrs. Keeley's Irradine, Belcora St. Mast [illegible] has evidently written up to her, and succeeded admirably; the alternations of jealous and enthusiastic being portrayed with her accustomed humour, in which Mrs Keeley is unapproachable. Miss May played the heroine of the piece, Louise Fournel, very gracefully; and Miss Mary Keeley was cheered in a sweet song, introduced in the piece, "Waves of gold in sunset breaking." Altogether, we had the part of a fop alloted to her, which she interpreted in a manner that gave us a higher opinion of her than we have before entertained. Some appropriate scenery has been very well painted by Messrs. Phipps and Rawlings. The last speech, admirably given by Mrs. Keeley, deserves to be quoted. As the heartwarm Irradière, she says—"The day of claptrap has gone by, and a wiser generation has taken the moral to be gathered from the play, rather than pointed by the actor. But may we be permitted to remind those who have sympathised in the sorrows of our poor slave girl, that there exist at this moment, in other lands, speaking our own language, maidens as worthy as she, as fair, as loving—as liable to be sold like beasts of the field. We may be able to do but little towards lightening their fate; but may we not remember, with a thankful pride, that our own is cast in a land where, with all its faults, the chain is unknown—where every human being is shielded by the brand of slavery."

On Wednesday evening, an apropos bagatelle, called "Jenny Lind at Last," was brought out, with entire success. It is beyond the scope of criticism; but it keeps the audience in a continuous roar of laughter for half-an-hour, and what with Mrs. Keeley's exquisite operatic imitations, Mr. Wigan's cleverly dressed German student, and some good-temper ed hits at the manager of Drury-Lane, serves to form a very agreeable entertainment—far better than many pieces of higher pretensions. We should give a word of praise to Messrs. Knight and Bellingham, for their very correct "making up" as two young scholars of Heidelberg. We cannot conclude without recommending to the jokes flung at throughout the trifle; and especially applauded the prima donna, when, at the conclusion, she observed, after pulming herself off to the English manager as Jenny Lind, that "although not the lowest in nightingale, she trusted they had no [illegible] to an English 'lark.'" The piece is from the ready pen of Mr. Angus Reach; and will run until perhaps, until the real Jenny makes her appearance; for no solid like beasts of the field. We may be able to do but little towards lightening their fate; but may we not remember, with a thankful pride, that our own is cast in a land where, with all its faults, the chain is unknown—where every human being is shielded by the brand of slavery."

On Wednesday evening, an apropos bagatelle, called "Jenny Lind at Last," was brought out, with entire success. It is beyond the scope of criticism; but it keeps the audience in a continuous roar of laughter for half-an-hour, and what with Mrs. Keeley's exquisite operatic imitations, Mr. Wigan's cleverly dressed German student, and some good-temper ed hits at the manager of Drury-Lane, serves to form a very agreeable entertainment—far better than many pieces of higher pretensions

But the Arabs are wonderful persons—some twelve or fourteen in number—and go through such a series of extraordinary evolutions—such leaps, flights, contortions, and balancings—that the audience become dizzy with watching them. We are not aware whether they are in any way connected with the troop who performed in London some ten or twelve years ago, or whether such agility is an attribute of the Bedouin race generally. If the latter, they must be very remarkable people to live amongst—like the footstools of the quarrelsome couple in the song, guessing the greatest part of their time in the air—in which they seem to be quite as much at ease, and masters over their voluntary movements, as when upon the ground. They appear to be of all ages—some, indeed, are mere boys—and are mostly small in stature. We should conceive, however, that their well-knit muscles were like cords when in a state of action. The capacious stage of the Surrey Theatre is well calculated for their display; indeed, the house altogether is one of the best constructed in the metropolis. We know no other from all parts of which so excellent a view can be obtained of every portion of the scene.

HAYMARKET

We have not often witnessed such a scene of theatrical excitement as that which the Haymarket Theatre presented on Monday evening, when Mrs. Nisbett reappeared upon its boards. As soon as the doors were opened, a rush took place to every part of the theatre; and at the commencement of the overture there was nothing like standing room anywhere. The play selected for the occasion was "The Hunchback," Mrs. Nisbett performing her old part of Constance. The opening scenes passed in a buz of expectation; but no sooner was the old familiar ringing laugh of the favourite heard at the wings, than a simultaneous shout of welcome burst forth, amidst which the lady came on the stage. The scene that then ensued was most extraordinary. The pit rose, and appeared suddenly to become a mass of waving hats; while handkerchiefs were flourished from the boxes; and the occupants of the slips and gallery were evidently possessed of ten times more enthusiasm than their hands could give vent to. This continued for several minutes, and was as last with some difficulty sufficiently quelled for the play to proceed. But the cheering broke out again almost every time Constance spoke or laughed until the act drop fell, when another prolonged round of applause shook the very house.

It was the general remark of the audience that Mrs. Nisbett had never looked better in her life: in fact, during the period of her retirement from the stage, Time appears not merely to have remained still, but actually to have taken to a retrograde flight. All her vivacity, all her unequalled joyous laughter, all her attractions are fresh as ever; and if we mistake not, she will prove the best card that Mr. Webster has played during his management.

With respect to the other characters in the play, we have but little to add: so completely was all attention engrossed by the star of the evening. Mrs. Glover was still the glorious Widow Green of old; and gracefully turned an allusion in her last speech, to the return of Constance. Mr. Tilbury was a very commendable successor of poor Strickland, in Sir William Fondlove: and all the rest of the dramatis personæ played with their wonted excellence. At the conclusion the cheering surpassed, if anything, the previous welcome. Mrs. Nisbett was loudly called for, as was Mrs. Glover, and both appeared amidst renewed acclamations. We heard in the theatre that the terms of Mrs. Nisbett's engagement were £50 a night.

A very wild drama—almost as good a thing in its way as "The Flying Dutchman,"—has been produced at the Queen's Theatre, called "The Ship of Glass;" and deserves favourable mention, for its capital scenery and ingenious effects. Another translation of the French drama "L'Incendiaire," is announced as an afterpiece. A version is also playing at the City of London Theatre, where Mr. R. Honner and his clever wife, Mr. Lyon, and Mr. E. F. Saville, help to form a very superior melodramatic company.

The Easter season at the Olympic is brought to a termination, after a short but not merry life of a week; and some Ethiopian Serenaders are now giving their entertainments there.

Monk Lewis's drama of "One o'Clock" has been revived at the Eagle, and is really very well done. The theatrical taverns—"Saloons," as they are termed—form a curious feature in the dramatic life of the present time.

Amateurs.—A Committee of Compositors on the Metropolitan Daily Press announce an Amateur Dramatic Performance on the 24th inst., at the Olympic Theatre, the proceeds of which will be given in aid of the Printers' Pension Society. Last year, the Institution derived from a Performance of this kind, £64.

MRS. NISBETT, AS "CONSTANCE," IN "THE LOVE CHASE."

M. SOYER'S MODEL SOUP KITCHEN.

The first soup depôt, erected on the plan devised by M. Soyer, on the Royal Barracks, at Dublin, was opened on the 5th inst., when the public were invited to attend on the occasion. A large and brilliant assemblage arrived on the spot at about three o'clock, and proceeded to inspect the various arrangements, and to taste the soups prepared by M. Soyer; and all who tasted, declared them to be excellent. There were present, amongst others, his Royal Highness Prince George of Cambridge, and a large circle of distinguished individuals.

M. Soyer thus describes the plan of the Kitchen, and its operations, in a pamphlet, which he has just published, entitled "Charitable Cookery; or, the Poor Man's Regenerator." In addition to these details, are some excellent Receipts for Economical Soups, and other Food for the Poorer Classes. The following is the ingenious inventor's

DESCRIPTION OF THE MODEL KITCHEN.

The exterior and covering is of a temporary nature, being formed of boards and canvas, enclosing a space of forty-eight feet long, and forty feet wide.

The interior consists of a steam-boiler, on wheels, thirteen feet long, and four feet wide, with a glaze-pan over it, capable of containing three hundred gallons; and at the end an oven, to bake one hundred weight of bread at a time; and all heated by the same fire. Under the boiler is an excavation to contain coals, and round it an elevated platform to give access to the glaze-pan. At the distance of eight feet, round the boiler, are eight iron bain marie pans, with covers, six feet long, and twenty-two inches wide, on wheels, and made double, to be boiled by steam, and contain, together, one thousand gallons. At each end, extending between the pans, are the cutting tables—at one end the meat, and at the other the vegetables; and under which are placed wooden soaking tubs, on wheels, and chopping-blocks for the meat drawers and sliding shelf. Four feet beyond these are placed a row of tables, eighteen inches wide, in which a hole is cut, and therein is placed a quart iron white enamelled basin, with a metal spoon attached thereto by a neat chain: there are one hundred of these, and this table forms the outer boundary of the kitchen; leaving a space of two feet six inches between it and the wall. Inside of the table are fastened tin water-cases, at the distance of ten feet apart, containing a sponge, &c., to clean out the soup-basins.

Round the two supports of the roof are circular tin boxes for the condiments. Seven feet from the ground at each corner is placed a safe five feet square, and seven feet high, with sides of wire, for ventilation, which contains, respectively, meat, vegetables, grain and condiments. At the same elevation as the safes are sixteen butts, containing 1792 gallons of water.

At the entrance, in the centre, is the weighing machine. The fire being lighted, a certain quantity of fat or dripping is placed in the glaze-pan, and in the soup-pans the farinaceous ingredients, or thickening, along with the water. As soon as the fat is melted in the glaze-pan, the vegetables, cut into thin slices, or dice, are placed therein; after the lapse of ten minutes, the meat, which has been previously cut into small pieces, is added, and allowed gradually to fry, until the juice is extracted, and a good glaze formed, which will be in about thirty-five minutes.

The condiments are then added, and the glaze is removed, and distributed equally in the bain marie pans: it is boiled for twenty minutes, and the soup or food is complete: this is the time used in making the soup, when such farinaceous ingredients as flour, oatmeal, and rice or barley, previously soaked, are employed; but peas, Indian corn meal, and many other ingredients, will take longer boiling. It is then ready to be removed by ladles into the basins in the surrounding tables. Outside the tent is a zigzag passage capable of containing one hundred persons in a small space in the open air; at the entrance is a check-clerk, and an indicator, or machine which numbers every person that passes; and on the other side is a bread and biscuit room, where those who have partaken of the soup, and are departing, receive, on passing, a quarter of a pound of bread or savory biscuit; as I prefer giving it then instead of with the soup and food, it being sufficient for one meal without, and will not only save time, but, when eaten afterwards, will be more wholesome, and act more generously on the system, than when eaten in haste. When the soup, or food, is ready, notice is given by ringing the bell, and the one hundred persons are admitted, and take their places at the table—the basins being previously filled, grace is said—the bell is again rung for them to begin, and a sufficient time is allowed them to eat their quart of food. During the time they are emptying their basins, the outside passage is again filling; as soon as they have done, and are going out at the other side, the basin and spoon is cleaned, and again filled: the bell rings, and a fresh number admitted; this continuing every successive six minutes, feeding one thousand persons per hour: but as there are three thousand quarts more to distribute, which occupies only seventy minutes to make, other means must be used for distributing the food, for which purpose a door is provided at the entrance of the kitchen, to which persons come with tickets, which are given to them by district visitors, or subscribers; or, if not with tickets, to purchase the food, and which they take home with them. There are also provided carts and barrows for either horses, donkeys, or men to draw, containing from twenty-five gallons to two hundred gallons each, with free attached, so that the soup or food contained in them shou'd be hot or cooking on its way to the place of distribution. Such is a brief description of the kitchen. I also propose to change the diet every day, according to the provisions obtainable, and, on fast days, to give meagre food.

I propose that these kitchens be erected in populous districts, and where there are any already erected, to adapt them by as little expense as possible, to my plan, so as to economise both fuel material, and hands. I then propose that the food should be distributed by carts to the surrounding villages by a party appointed for that purpose: thereby saving the expense of separate establishments, and the chance of bad food, from ignorance in its manufacture; it will also prevent the distribution of raw meat, or raw food, which, at the present moment, is in many cases abused; besides, from the want of knowledge in its preparation, causes disease, and does more harm than good.

M. Soyer, having fulfilled his philanthropic object, has returned. Previous to his departure, the friends of the chef de cuisine entertained him on Saturday evening, at the Freemasons' Hall, College Green; when, about thirty gentlemen sat down to dinner, which was provided by Mr. Mitchell, in first-rate style. The chair was filled by Thomas M. Gresham, Esq., who, after the cloth was removed and the usual loyal toasts given, proposed the health of M. Soyer, whose mission to Ireland he looked upon as one which would confer a lasting benefit on the country by raising the general condition of the people, and giving them lessons in an art which was calculated to improve their present state, and permanently improve their condition physically and morally. In conclusion, Mr. Gresham presented M. Soyer, in the name of the company, with a very elegant snuff-box, manufactured by Mr. Bennett, of Grafton-street, as a memento of his visit to Ireland.

The following is a copy of the inscription engraved upon the lid of the box:—"Presented to Monsieur Alexandre Soyer, in testimony of the high sense entertained of his valuable scientific and philanthropic services while engaged in this country on his mission of good in behalf of the destitute poor, by some of his admiring friends, who gladly avail themselves of an early opportunity to mark their regard for himself personally, and the esteem in which his beneficent and truly useful labours have been held by them.—Dublin, April 10th, 1847."

The toast was drunk with enthusiasm, and M. Soyer thanked the company in an address characterised by excellent taste; observing that if, by his practical knowledge, he had been enabled to economise the food of a nation, it was no more than a true philanthropist ought to do. In conclusion, he acknowledged the beautiful token of esteem which had been presented to him. Several other toasts were drunk, and the company separated, after a most agreeable evening.

At the particular desire of some charitable ladies, the Model Kitchen was set to work on Saturday last. The Ladies Ponsonby, Mrs. Peter Digges La Touche and daughters, Sir J. O. Vandeleur and Lady, Mrs. Williams, Miss Geale, Sir Thomas Deane, George Ron, Esq. (High Sheriff), D. Kinahan, Esq., Mrs. Windsor, Mrs. Elrington, Miss Bligh, Mrs. Holt, &c., were present, and most cordially seconded the efforts of M. Soyer, in dispensing with their own hands the food so amply supplied to them from this most admirable dépôt. There were nearly three thousand persons supplied.

A few of M. Soyer's Receipts will be found in "Our Domestic Column," in the present Number.

M. SOYER'S MODEL SOUP KITCHEN.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—Saturday, April 17, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 260.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE PRUSSIAN DIET.

NEGATIVE is exceedingly difficult to prove; it is not much easier to describe one; and some such difficulty seems to have been felt by the King of Prussia in defining to the newly-organised Diet what it really is, what it is to consider itself, and what he considers it — two points of view that promise shortly to exhibit very different prospects indeed. A plan that has been maturing for thirty years ought to be tolerably complete; yet, from the many qualifications, corrections, admonitions, limitations contained in the King's Speech to his "faithful Orders," it is quite certain they can gather but a vague idea of what they are to be, or to do; it may even be doubted whether his Majesty has any distinct idea of it himself. Certainly, he did not succeed in expressing one in spite of an evident wish to be hopeful and congratulating, his eloquent address lapsed repeatedly into an admonitory strain, as if the snakes of fear and suspicion lurked under the flowers of his rhetoric. When he tried to be positive he felt himself checked by the dread of giving too much power to an institution he wishes to be nothing but a form. So he dealt largely in negatives, finding > easier far, alas

> To say what it was not, than what it was.

In judging a constitutional change in another country, we ought not to refer it to the standard created by the institutions of our own; it is difficult not to do so, but the tendency to pronounce summary opinions on all that comes short of our own estimate in such matters, is a very common one with Englishmen, and must be considered a fault. Because the Prussian Diet does not come up to our ideas of a representative body, it is not therefore altogether valueless. We should hesitate to condemn it merely on that ground; but we do not believe it at all approaches that sort of institution that Germany expects, and for which Germans are fully prepared; and, therefore, it will utterly and miserably fail. The Diet will claim greater powers than the Crown will grant; there will be struggle and contention for years to come: the people will insist on a full performance of old promises; the Crown will exclaim against the ingratitude and disobedience of the people; but, as it is not in the nature of things in this age to go backwards, the popular force will prevail, and Frederick William will find that he cannot play at Liberalism; he cannot grant even the smallest power with the idea that it will not be used to the utmost, and increase by use. He may, in disgust and terror, attempt to crush what he has called into existence; but if the new Chambers are allowed to act freely in what the King acknowledges as their duty, they contain the germ of a power that will in one generation compel the Monarch of Prussia to speak and act as a Constitutional King, and less like an Oriental despot, or the Sovereigns of the palmiest days of "right divine," to which Frederick William, in feeling and heart, belongs.

It is the curse of Kings that they are so often "nurtured in a creed outworn," and belong, in mind and soul, to an age anterior to the time they live and work in. The King of Prussia thinks with the fifteenth century; he is governing in the nineteenth; and his Diet is an attempt to patch up a compromise between his ideas and the spirit of the age; he draws out an old feudal institution—modifies it, and places it in the midst of the men and circumstances of a society that has lost even the traditions of feudality; he will find it will not work, or work very differently from what he anticipates.

THE WHITE HALL.—MEETING OF THE PRUSSIAN DIET.

This change will not be accepted by the Germans as the performance of all the promises of the late King; it does not come up to the distinct pledge given by the Prussian Monarchy in the day of its distress and danger; it was for freedom and a Constitution that the German people fought in the War of Liberation; when the Crown was in the dust, and Napoleon was carving Germany into Dukedoms for his Marshals, and Principalities for his brothers, the King and the Nobility, though detesting the spirit of political freedom heartily enough, saw no other means of expelling the invaders. A Constitution and freedom were therefore promised—the invaders were driven out—the Monarchy and the Nobility were restored to their former power—and the promises and pledges from that moment forgotten. The debt is acknowledged only by this step of the King in 1847; but it is not paid.

Instead of a Representative Assembly, all that is granted is this—the Diets of the different provinces are called together into one assembly at Berlin, without one single new privilege, except that of concurring in any fresh taxes that may be imposed, which, as nearly as we can liken it to anything in England, is much as if the courts of quarter sessions from the English counties, that manage the country roads and bridges, were called together in London and told to back the financial demands of the Crown on the people, give their advice to the King when he should be pleased to ask for it, and petition the Crown if they had any grievances. Anything beyond that to be considered treason and rebellion! Over and above these rights, this Diet is to represent not "public opinion," but the "orders" of the State. In fact, Prussia, in her new Diet, has got a conglomeration of the rights of a meeting in Exeter Hall, that of petitioning, but exceedingly limited; the local functions of a court of quarter sessions in the matter of roads, bridges, rivers, &c.; the Ministerial duty of advising the Crown (when asked); and the office of Committee of Privileges of our House of Peers, extended to three orders in the State instead of one. The limitations and distinctions drawn by the King in his speech—some of them quite metaphysical in their obscurity—will utterly break down in practice. The stronger and simpler principle of a representative body will force its way through them all.

It would not require much trouble to prove that the very basis of the new assembly is a fallacy one. The Diet is formed by the representatives of "Orders," (stande) that is, the Nobles are represented, the Burgers (or citizens) are represented, and the Commons (gemeinde) are represented, all severally and separately; but of the nation, the people, the State, the community as one body, there is no representation at all. This is the feudal principle put in action, in an age that does not recognise it; allowing that a Nobility exists in all countries, yet it is not the nobility of the age when aristocracy was a higher caste. It now means only birth and wealth that has been inherited, or wealth without birth that has purchased a title; but in neither case can it have a different interest from the rest of the world. Nay, in Germany, of all nations, the Nobility is perhaps the most degraded; rank is as purchasable as an estate; Austria makes Barons by the hundred, and sells its patents even to Jews; the last creation of a peerage in Bavaria, is in favour of a notorious adventuress, who, in England, would not be received in decent society. Money is breaking down the "order" of Nobility everywhere, and in Germany the bounds between it and the plebes are as indefinite as in other lands. If that is the case, with the best defined class, the Nobility, how is it possible to keep up the other distinction between Burgers and Commons? They are now one class; there was a time when the rich free citizen could despise and plunder the peasant serf, much as the noble trampled upon and robbed both; but the day is gone. There are no longer castes and classes; there are only communities. This truth the King of Prussia does not recognise; but the German people are fully conscious of it, and will not be bound down to such antiquated, not to say insulting, distinctions. They carry the seeds of discord within them; the Nobility may ally itself by a natural tendency to the Crown; but the Burgers and Commons will assuredly join against both.

The Royal reluctance to see in the new assembly anything like a national representation will be of no avail; "It is not your function to represent opinion, or to bring questions of this or that school into discussion." Wherever men are gathered there will thought be expressed, and that thought will be the opinion of the age.

The King repeatedly admonished his faithful Orders not to consider themselves a constitutional representative body; yet, by a curious oversight, he imparted to his speech all the features of an address from the Throne to the Chambers of France or the Commons of England. There were congratulations on the material prosperity of the country, regrets at the temporary and local distress caused by scarcity of provisions, a communication upon the finances, and a reference to the "friendly relations which have long subsisted with the Foreign Powers." Why mention these things to a Diet which has nothing to do with them? But all restrictions and reservations will be useless: the struggle has already begun. In drawing up the reply to the King's Speech the Liberal party has triumphed, and his Majesty is told, in the very first communication he receives from the Diet, that his scheme is not accepted as satisfactory, that it must be extended, and made more accordant with a representative institution, particularly as to the periods of meeting, which must not depend on the King's caprice. Other demands are also preparing, and we apprehend his Majesty will have little for it but to declare such demands rebellious, refuse them, and break up his new assembly in disgust, or recognise the "tendency of the age," and concede them.

OPENING OF THE PRUSSIAN DIET.

THE first meeting of the General United Diet of Prussia was held on the 11th inst., the proceedings being opened by a long address from the King to the [illegible] assembled. The sittings are held in a portion of the Palace at Berlin, which has been fitted up for the purpose. The apartment is known as the Salle Blanche, or White Hall; it is said to be admirably adapted for the meetings of the several "orders," to accommodate whom arrangements are necessary, not required where the different ranks are not brought together in one assembly.

After divine service (the Diet opened on a Sunday) "His Majesty was followed to his Palace by the officers of the Royal household, the dignitaries of State, the Ministers, the Protestant and Roman Catholic Bishops, and finally by the deputies, who were conducted to their places in the Salle Blanche by the Grand Chamberlain of the Palace, Count de Keller. The Queen and Princesses of Prussia had seats prepared for them in one gallery, and the corps diplomatique in another. Amongst the latter the Earl of Westmoreland appeared pre-eminent, and shortly represented his Sovereign. All the arrangements having been completed his Majesty entered the Salle Blanche, preceded by General Kanebeck, who bore the Crown; by General Brauschweck, who bore the orb (Reichsapfel). "His Majesty was followed (the same who was Governor of Paris during the occupation of that city by the allied armies), who bore the sceptre, and by other officers who bore various insignia of Royalty. On his Majesty's entering the Salle Blanche the Deputies rose and remained standing until the King took his place on the throne, having the Prince of Prussia on his right hand, and the Ministers of State on his left." His Majesty then delivered his address, of which we gave an analysis last week.

A CROWDED IRISH STEAMER NEARLY LOST.—The Duke of Cumbridge, an Irish steamer, crowded with passengers, ran aground near the Needles, in the Isle of Wight, on Tuesday morning at four o'clock, during a dense fog. If it had been rough, not a soul would have been saved. She got off at about three in the afternoon, and experienced very little damage.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARISIANA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Wednesday.

The journals have published the change about to take place in the French Embassy at the Court of St James's, but they have not given any connected version of the affair. The Count de St. Aulaire, as I told you long since, only came to England at the earnest entreaty of the King—and a point of honour not to leave his post at a moment when the entente cordiale had been so suddenly, so unexpectedly, and so violently broken. Affairs restored to some degree of serenity, M. de St. Aulaire determined to retire, urged by his lady, one of the most accomplished and most truly pious women of France, and who entertains at present strong religious prejudices against joining in the vain pomp and frivolous pleasures of society. There is another motive—the numerous progeny of M. de St. Aulaire, who enjoy a great grandfather, as I among whom he was to live. One of his daughters, by his first wife, a Danish Princess, married many years since the most unworthy of political refugees, the Duke de Cazes, who, by her, is father to the Duke de Glucksberg, the clever Chargé d'Affaires of France at Madrid. Another of his daughters is married to Count d'Harcourt, the brother of Mr Wm. Harcourt, of St. Leonard's; the two others have been united to Baron de Langsdorff, Minister at Carlsruhe, and Count d'Ozeron. All have numerous children. He has likewise a son married, a most estimable man, the Baron de St. Aulaire, lately a member of the Chamber of Deputies, and expelled most unjustly at the last election, as being a Fritchardist. The real successor to Count de St. Aulaire will be the Duke de Mon tebello, if affairs are still too unfavourable for Count Bresson. The Duke de Broglie only comes temporarily—and as peacemaker. It is the second time he has had such a mission to London. It was he that came over to negociate the New Slave Trade treaty between the two nations, when that signed by the Count de St. Aulaire, in common with all the representatives of the great Powers at this Court, had been refused ratification in Paris, to the scandal of all Europe, and with imminent danger to the peace of the two countries—for such a diplomatic occurrence had not occurred for time almost immemorial. The Duke de Broglie's success passed all expectation. M. Guizot considers it as a great triumph to have brought matters to a close on the part of the Duke de Broglie; the only man in France who, by high birth, large revenue, and irreproachable character, enjoys at all times, and under all administrations, predominant moral influence in this country. The Duke de Broglie's residence at your Court as Ambassador Extraordinary, will be but of comparatively short duration, is certain. The first reason is, that his health has been recently greatly disturbed by the gout; the next is, that at all times able to enter into office, he has for years shown the greatest distaste, in addition to what his wife, the daughter of the celebrated Madame de Staël, at her death-bed exacted the promise from him that he would never hold office permanently. With the Duke will come ultimately his son, the Prince Albert de Broglie, a most well-known amateur writer of the ascetic sect in the Revue Nouvelle, and at present Secretary of Embassy at Rome. From the earliest days of the peace, the Duke de Broglie has been intimate with the Whigs, and particularly with that portion of the party headed by the Marquis of Lansdowne. This is another reason why M. Guizot so anxiously desired he should come to England at the present moment. His arrival in your great city will coincide with that of the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, and will be shortly after followed by a visit from the Duke and Duchess of Nemours.

There is another visit which has set all the badauds of Paris on the tip-toe of curiosity: it is the visit of the Emperor of Russia to Paris. Having, in the shape of two millions starving, given the real substance to us French Revolutionists, it is expected he cannot fail to wish to impart to the Government a moral power, through which to recover his money with interest—that is to say, in the co operation of France in his plans in Turkey, and above all in Germany, where the Emperor's brother in-law, the King of Prussia, has raised so ominously to Russia the constitutional standard. At the grand dinner of reconciliation of M. Guizot and Lord Normanby, M. de Kisseleff, the gay and witty representative of the Czar in Paris, was besieged with questions on this subject: a cross fire of curiosity that began on his very first coming in. "Is it true?" was the general demand. "I have not doubt it," replied the diplomatist, with a satirical smile; "it must be, for it is printed in the newspapers." The Czar, however, is a strange and a brave and a daring man, and we have since known, from good sources here, that his courage is anything but impossible. When in London, every one knows he was obliged to have, on account of the fogs, a warm coat of petticoats, as well as of side-de-camps. Imagine what it would be here, with thousands of Poles, who have sworn his destruction, and tens of thousands of the boldest Democrats ready to second them! His cousin, Cæsar and his fortunes would get into a very dangerous boat, and on a most stormy sea.

One of the freaks of our younger folk has been extinguished. The journal, the Bourbonnais, written and published in lithography, and supported by the young collegians of Paris, was last Thursday suppressed by the police. Well might a truly great statesman, passing through Paris, say, that the greatest evil in France is, that no decision will be decided on till man but those who are not out of their teens. To spend before they have earned, to command before they have learned to obey, to teach before they have studied, are the errors of all Frenchmen of the new régime.

FRANCE.

The Journal des Débats states, although not officially, that the Duke de Broglie will succeed the Count de St. Aulaire as the French Ambassador at London.

Despatches from Algiers announce the capture of the celebrated Ben Maza by Colonel de St. Arnaud. This is an event of very great importance to the interests of the French in Africa, especially as it was preceded by the submission of Ben Salem. Ben Maza will, it is said, be sent to Paris. It was he who in 1845 agitated the whole of Algeria, and threw even Abd-el-Kader into the shade. During more than a year he has been wandering among the southern tribes, and at the time of his capture was in the mountains of Kabylia, where he would probably soon have succeeded in arousing the fanaticism of the people.

General Concha has left Paris for Madrid. The Patrie states that when he waited upon Queen Christina, her Majesty informed him that she intended to pay a visit to Rome and Naples, and, therefore, he was silent as to his having been instructed to dismiss her from returning to Spain, as it was supposed she had intended to do.

The Duke of Devonshire arrived on the 12th instant, at Bordeaux, from Spain, with a numerous suite.

The Chamber of Deputies has passed, by the majority of 243 to 17, the bill whereby the Bank of France is authorised to issue notes of 200f. Several amendments were either rejected or withdrawn, the discussion that took place on them being quite undeserving of notice.

The Chamber of Peers has accepted, by 107 to 7, the project of law relative to the establishment of a line of steam packets between Havre and New York.

M. Guilbert (the Conservative candidate), has been elected Deputy at Marchiennes, in the place of M. Martin du Nord, by 180 votes out of 181 voters.

The accounts in the Paris papers upon the subject of food are very gratifying this week. The arrivals of vessels laden with grain in all the ports of France are incessant, and the appearance of the crops, notwithstanding the occurrence of snow and frost, is most satisfactory. From Savoie, under date Rumilly, the 14th inst., precisely similar accounts had reached Paris. The Echo Agricole states that the rise in the price of grain which had manifested itself last week in different markets of France had made no further progress. In the north and north-west the prices were stationary, but in the north east, where they had risen so high, and at Orleans, Tours, Angers, Nantes, &c., they have undergone a marked diminution. Lyons, Dijon, and Besançon, were almost entirely supplied, and it was expected that the immense quantity of grain which has of late arrived at Marseilles would contribute to reduce the prices, which were still very firm throughout the south of France.

Twelve men capitally convicted of murder, during the corn riots at Buzençais, in the month of February last, were executed yesterday week, in the market place of that town. This example, it is said, produced, it appears, a profound sensation in France. Prince Frederick of Denmark has arrived in Paris.

SPAIN

It appears from the Madrid papers that a demonstration of an equivocal and painful character took place on Sunday, the 11th inst. The Queen drove out on that evening, herself driving her handsome pair of cream-coloured horses. As the people love me, and I (re-lying her voice) love my people—the Spanish people!" One of the pigeons took refuge in the lap of the Queen: she caressed it, and handed it to her aide, Don Ramon Narvaez, Duke of Valencia. Various others also alighted in the carriage, which she handed to her attendants.

The leader of a deputation then cried, "Viva la Reina!" "Viva la Constitucion!" which was repeated by the crowd. The demonstration rose to frenzy when the Queen herself repeated a vivo. The Queen bowed to the multitude, and then drove to the Prado, still followed by the shout

To this demonstration succeeded one of a graver character. The people began to cry "Down with the Moderados,' Live the National Guard!" It is even said that "Down with the King" was heard; but compact did the crowd become that, on the Puerta del sol, the Queen's carriage was completely blocked, and it required the efforts of the civic guard to clear a passage. At this moment a shot was fired, by which a police officer was wounded. The Eco del Comercio, a supporter of the Government, declares that the first acts of violence were committed by the police, and provoked retaliation on the part of the people.

Questions were put to the Ministers in the Chambers on the following day, to which Senor Benavides replied that the Government had witnessed these disorders with extreme regret. He admitted that he was aware that demonstrations of honour of her Majesty were to take place, but he had no idea that matters would have gone to such lengths, or he would have adopted measures accordingly. When disorders did take place, he considered it would have been most dangerous to have made an ostentatious display of armed force, where thousands of people were assembled, all of whom, he believed, with the exception of an insignificant minority, animated with the best intentions. He could, however, assure the Chamber that such scenes should not be repeated, and the disturbers of the peace on Sunday evening had already been brought to justice.

Among the persons arrested were Averanzta, a Carlist, and Francisco Chico, an inspector of police; the former has been sent off to Alicante. The Espanol contains an order addressed by the Minister of Grace and Justice to the Fiscal of Madrid, requiring him to proceed against the rioters, followed by a bando of the Political Chief of Madrid, prohibiting crowds to assemble in such numbers as might be of a nature to compromise public tranquility. Shouts of "Long live," or "down with," so and so are prohibited; even acclamations in honour of the Queen not excepted. This prohibition extends to theatres and places of public exhibition. Crowds unmoved to dispersal are, if they resist, to be dispersed by force, and the ringleaders arrested and prosecuted. Any one approaching her Majesty's carriage, or attempting to stop it, shall be arrested and punished. It has further been determined upon that the Queen shall, for the future, be attended in her promenades by an escort of 200 horse. On the 12th, however, the Queen was present at a bull-fight, and in the evening went to the theatre, and on both occasions the bando of the Political Chief was respected.

When the Queen entered her box at the bull-fight, one universal cry of "Viva la Reina!" "Viva la Reina Constitucional!" was heard. In one of the compartments of the amphitheatre, exactly opposite to the Royal box, an ingenious device was made use of to manifest the popular affection for her Majesty, and at the same time evade the regulations of the police. A man, dressed as a negro, or Andalusian dandy, held at arm's length, and supported by those sitting at his right and left, an immense fan, measuring at least five feet in diameter. This was suddenly opened the moment the Queen entered, and displayed the words, in enormous letters, Viva la Reina on one side, and on the other Constitucional. This was followed by the acclamations already described each time the mighty instrument was flung open. This new species of telegraph was worked eight or ten times in the course of the evening, and was responded to. The Queen appeared to be much amused, and laughed heartily at the originality of the contrivance.

Senor Olozaga has returned to Madrid and taken his seat as a deputy. Senor Benavides paid M. Olozaga a visit on the following morning, and congratulated him on his looking so well, and returning unchanged in appearance from exile. "The same," replied Olozaga, quite obviously alluding to the compliments paid him, "my conscience was at rest. Had my friends in Madrid the same advantage, no change would have taken place in their good looks." The Minister of the Interior bowed in silent acquiescence to this reply.

Our letters from Madrid are of the 15th. They state that in spite of the bando of the Political Chief against any public demonstrations being made on her Majesty's appearance in public, a vast number of people assembled on the following day to witness her Majesty proceeding to a bull-fight, and on her appearing loud cries of "Viva" were heard. Her Majesty, on this occasion, was attended by an escort.

The Union Monarchique announces the capture of the town of Balaguer in Catalonia by the partisans of the Count of Montemolin. The Commerce confirms the above statement, and adds that the Carlists had plundered the town of 80,000 reals, together with arms and ammunition. The Heraldo, Barcelona journal, of the 12th inst., announces the dispersion of the Carlist band, commanded by Tristany. M. Benitez, the Alcalde of Martorell, had been arrested and lodged in the citadel of Barcelona, for allowing the armed Carlists to traverse unmolested the district placed under his jurisdiction.

PORTUGAL

In our latest edition last week, we stated that, according to our Lisbon letters of the 5th inst., up to that time no serious battle had taken place, but the capital had been thrown into confusion by a very probable report that the Conde de Mello was advancing towards Lisbon, and that he would be joined, near that city, by Sa da Bandeira, the Regent himself having intimated to the British forces could not interfere with the internal concerns of Portugal, but that in case of danger to the Queen, an asylum would be afforded to her Majesty on board the Hibernia, and a guard would be landed to cover her Majesty's safe retreat to that vessel.

The position of the Queen is a very melancholy one. The provinces of Algarve and the Alemtejo are completely in the hands of the insurgents; and when the Conde de Mello's forces effected a junction with those of Sa da Bandeira, their forces will amount to 6,000 men, who will advance at once to the Tagus, and may even cross it without much difficulty, and march to Lisbon.

The state of affairs in the capital is lamentable. The price of provisions has risen to an excessive height, and wheat has been sold for 14s. a-quarter. Every species of food is scarce, and a large part of the population is reduced to beggary. The currency is depressed 40 per cent., and the Treasury is exhausted. The Queen is said to have become the object of great animosity, and is looked upon as the cause of these evils. The prison of Limoeiro and the Castle of St. George are full of political prisoners, but they are not ill-treated. The British

THE OVERLAND MAIL.

The half monthly Overland Mail from India arrived yesterday, with news from Bombay to the 15th of March.

The most perfect tranquility prevailed in the Punjaub, and nothing was [illegible] ceptible to occasion fears for new troubles

The disturbances in the country of Hazareh were at an end.

Akhbar Khan, son of Dost Mohammed Khan, is dead.

Scinde is perfectly tranquil, and its sanatory state is satisfactory. Discont and disorder continue to agitate the possessions of the Nizam and the country of Gwenna.

The news from China, which is to March 1, relates an appalling [illegible] rely that had taken place in Chimmo Bay, near Amoy. Two revenue ships, the Kwang Chow and Cavalier, were boarded on the evening of the 5th ult. by Chinese pirates, and the officers and part of the crew of both barbarously massacred. The pirates succeeded in carrying off plunder to the value of £35,000. Kwang, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Canton province, has been degraded from office, and sent prisoner to Pekin, and will have to save his life at the expense of a heavy [illegible] His crime was that of concealing the fact of his mother's death, that he might not be compelled to resign office for three years, as is the custom of China.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS MONDAY.

The business to-day was of a mere formal character. A conversation took place upon the subject of the Government education measure.

The Mutiny Bill, the Marine Mutiny Bill, and the Indemnity Bill, passed through committee.

The House adjourned at an early hour.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. MONDAY.

THE GOVERNMENT EDUCATION MEASURE.

An extraordinary number of petitions against the scheme of Education set forth in the minutes of the Council of Education were presented; likewise a great many in favour of that scheme. The floor of the House was literally covered with these petitions

Lord J. RUSSELL explained the result of a communication which had passed between the Government and the Wesleyan body, through the instrumentality of Lord Ashley. The result of the explanations given to the questions put on behalf of the Wesleyan body was that the Government did not consider that persons who had ecclesiastical functions would be eligible to the office of pupil teachers, that the authorised version of the Scriptures would be required to be used in all the schools; that persons approved of by the Wesleyan body might, if approved by the Government, be made inspectors of Wesleyan schools; and that, of the grant proposed for this year, no portion was intended to be granted to schools exclusively Roman Catholic. Whenever the question of the Roman Catholic schools should be brought before the Government, and when the Roman Catholic prelates and clergy should express their views, then the Government would consider that very difficult subject; and if any plan could be devised in respect to Roman Catholic schools, new minutes would be framed, and a proposition would be proposed, either in supplementary or miscellaneous estimates this year, or be postponed to the next year. The noble Lord, having given this explanation, moved the order of the day for going into Committee of Supply on the Education Grant; and, in doing so, made a general explanation of the minutes of the Committee of Privy Council, and answered the principal arguments advanced by the opposers of the Education plan. He commenced his speech by demolishing the gross exaggerations that had been asserted to, and the attempts that had been made to overawe the calm judgment of the House by rascket ous out of doors, and by surrounding hon. members to answer for their conduct at the hustings. The noble Lord minutely traced the history of the Education grants, and detailed the reasons which had impressed the Government with the necessity of increasing the number of inspectors, of allotting sums to assistant schools, and giving certain allowances to masters, of encouraging the establishment of workshops and gardens, of providing pensions for schoolmasters, &c. He then proceeded to answer the chief objections urged against the minutes of August and December last. To the objection against the powers exercised by the Committee of Privy Council, he replied that in 1839 the various Dissenters of the country had applauded the Government when they proposed that the question of public education should be vested in the Committee of Council. To the objection against the giving any assistance for education, he answered, if such a principle were carried out, it would go to the abolition of the Regium Donum, of the pecuniary grants given to the clergy of Scotland, and, in fine, to the establishment of the voluntary system of religion and education. To the argument, that sufficient had already been done for education, he referred to the lamentable state of crime, and the deficiency of education which existed, as he gave convincing proofs, drawn from the admissions of the objectors themselves; and, he asked, was it not better to put a guide post at the beginning of life, than a gibbet at the end? He put it to the House, if the basis means of improvement, transportation, and the scaffold, were alone to be maintained as sufficient means of religious instruction, of school education, of imparting available knowledge, and of preventing crime? To such a proposition, he at least, would never consent. He did not entertain the expectation that crime would be completely obviated by education, but he confidently trusted that by it the number of criminals would be considerably diminished. The noble Lord then objected to the scheme, were to him incomprehensible. No question of the Church undertaking the whole education of the people had arisen from these minutes. All that the Church of England consented to was, that in Church of England schools, aided by Church of England subscribers, the Liturgy and Catechism should be taught, whilst in all the schools raised by Dissenters, no formulary or catechism would be insisted on. As to secular education, and secular education only, he thought that to omit altogether from the instruction of the working classes lessons of conscience, of duties, of love of God and of our neighbours, would be an irreparable error. In addition, besides the objection to the minutes on the score of principle, would be impracticable; it would not be acceptable to Parliament, and for less acceptable to the people, who would look upon it in reality as a scheme of infidelity. Lord John Russell, in conclusion, called on the House to allow the grant to be disposed of according to the minutes of the Committee of Council, and not to agree to the vote of censure on the Government, for such it was, involved in the amendment about to be proposed by Mr. T. Duncombe. With respect to the Roman Catholics, no part of the grant would be applied to their schools, and, therefore, there was no reason for embarrassing the question by adding their cause to it. Half a million had already been expended by the State for education, and not a shilling had been expended for purely Roman Catholic schools. He expressed his deep regret at the defection of his usual supporters caused by this question; but let the opposition be formidable as it might, it would be his (Lord J. Russell's) consolation, that he had attempted to diminish the empire of ignorance, and to raise the people of this country to a state of religious and intellectual freedom, equal to the other civilized nations peoples of the earth. Lord J Russell then again formally moved that the "order of the day for the Committee of Supply be now read."

Mr F. Drummond then moved the following amendment:—"That, [illegible] grant of any public money being assented to by this House, for the purpose of carrying out the scheme of national education, as developed in the minutes of the Committee of Council on Education in August and December last, which minutes have been presented to both Houses of Parliament by command of her Majesty), a Select Committee be appointed to inquire into the justice and expediency of such a scheme, and its probable amount of cost: Also to inquire whether the regulations attached thereto do not unduly increase the influence of the Crown, invade the constitutional functions of Parliament, and [illegible] religious freedom and the civil rights of her Majesty's subjects." The hon. gentleman prefaced his arguments in support of his proposition by denying that it was intended as a censure upon the Government. He said if his proposition failed it would be because he would have to cope with the Ministerial influence which would be unsparingly brought to bear against him, and with those secret compacts with those communities which had been made between certain members of the established Church and certain Dissenters, which, though unsuccessful to the Ministers who had sanctioned them in the face of all their former opinions and avowed principles. Having denied Lord J Russell's assertion that great and overwhelming petitions had been signed by the Dissenters in favour of the scheme, and coerce the votes of members of Parliament on this question, he called attention to the unjust fallacious influence which had been used on the other side to get up deputations in favour of the Government plan. He said that from the first the central committee for supporting that plan at long in Gordon-square, circulating in every district of the country forms of petition in its favour, drawn up after a pattern sent by Capt. Shuttleworth, and emporting the clergy to get signatures, and they had got those petitions properly signed, to send the n, post-paid, either to Lord Ashley or to Lord J Russell. Although, however, there were more than 5,000 parishes in England and Wales, no more than 80 or 90 petitions had as yet been presented after this extraordinary canvass to procure them; and it gave him sincere pleasure to know that this scheme was beginning to excite dissatisfaction even among the clergy of the Established Church itself. Mr. Duncombe then condemned Lord J. Russell very severely for his determination to exclude the children of Roman Catholics, who required gratuitous education as well as those of any other class of Christians in the country, from the advantages of this scheme, if there were any in it Why had his Lordship so excluded them? Because he wished to please the Wesleyan Methodists by truckling to their base cry of "No Popery." He asked the House whether Ministers would have dared to consent to this exclusion of the Roman Catholics had Mr. O'Connell been well enough to attend on his post in that House? He had been told, but he would not believe the information, that the Protestant members of that House would be left alone to fight this battle for the Roman Catholics, and never till his speech would be credit the rumour that Mr. Shell would cut into the same lobby as the gentleman with Lord John Russell. The hon. gentleman then said that this scheme would for some years cost £2,000,000 annually. Never was such a piece of quackery devised. He then pointed out various defects in the Government scheme, and observed that, even if they had been less than they were, he could not give his assent to it, as the experiences of the past convinced him that the grants have not been, and would not be, equally distributed among the Dissenters and the members of the Established Church. Mr. Duncombe's next point was that the scheme was proposed by the Ministers to increase their influence. He said that, after obtaining for themselves the patronage of a new Railway Board, of a new Poor-Law Board, of four New Courts for all [illegible] and four Judgeships, [illegible] necessary or [illegible] a Gordon-square would doubtless be made, the Government was now grasping at the patronage of all the schoolmasters and schoolmistresses in the kingdom, and at the power of possessing every one of them off at the end of fifteen years. He asked for a Committee to inquire into the amount of this [illegible] and the expense of the [illegible] tions. If the noble Lord should flinch from the probe which an inquiry into the matter would apply to his scheme, he should come to this conclusion, that there was something in it which would not bear the light of day, that it was calculated to increase the power of the Ministry and the influence of the Crown rather than to advance the instruction and improve the morality of the people; and he should not shrink as a friend to intelligence, as a friend to [illegible] from supporting the motion.

Lord DUNCAN seconded the motion of Mr Duncombe, strongly commenting upon the exclusion of the Roman Catholics from all participation in the grant proposed by the Government

Sir R INGLIS said that his opinion was that all State Education should be confined to the Established Church of the Church, but as it was impossible now to adopt that principle he would take the scheme proposed by the Government, he would not say cheerfully, but thankfully.

Mr. MACAULAY, in an eloquent speech, advocating the measure of the Government, instanced the rapid advance of Scotland and Switzerland after the first establishment of a system of State Education, even although that system was [illegible] from being perfect. Previously, Scotchmen were considered in [illegible] and, in the days of Fletcher of Saltoun, as little better than Esquimaux, but [illegible] the establishment of State Schools the language of contempt rapidly gave way to the language of envy, and with the advantages of education Scotchmen soon became distinguished, and eminent in every country they visited, and there were but few incidents which they did not find their way The right hon. gentleman also contended that all classes, Dissenters as well as Churchmen, whether they availed themselves or not of the advantages of the Government plan of education, had one common interest in the education of the mass of the people, as the increased security which it would afford to person and property

Mr. ROEBUCK said the first duty of the Government was to educate the people, but in attempting this they should not throw obstacles in their own way—they should not introduce a principle calculated to render wholly nugatory the object they had in view. It unfortunately happened that religious animosity and fanaticism were common to all religious sects in this country, and the Government, by entering into the error of siding with one of those sects by insisting on the reading of the authorised version of the Bible in the schools—thus virtually excluding from the benefits of education all but the members of the Church of England. In doing this the Government would be only half in fault, for, if left uncheated the Catholics, the Presbyterians, and other sectarians who could not avail themselves of the proposed scheme.

The debate was adjourned.

HOUSE OF LORDS. TUESDAY.

THE PUNISHMENT OF TRANSPORTATION.

On the question that the Mutiny Bill be read a third time, some observations were made by the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH upon the subject of soldier convicts in India.

Earl GREY in reply said that no change whatever was made, or intended to be made, in the law of transportation with regard to soldiers in India The only difference was in regard to England. Where this—Under the existing law, persons convicted of certain offences would be subject to the sentence of transportation. That sentence would still be passed, but the convicts would not, at present, at all events, be sent to the colonies, but would be kept at home. With respect, however, to the punishment of transportation in India, no order in Council had been issued to interfere with the existing practice of removing the convicts from that country to Van Diemen's Land.

Lord BROUGHAM protested against the new doctrine which had for the first time been promulgated by the present Government, that it was in the power of any Secretary of State, or of the Crown, or of an order in Council, to alter the criminal law of this land. The law of this country declared that for certain offences the Judge should inflict the punishment of imprisonment or of transportation. The punishment of transportation was by law intrusted to the Judge, and, if the Judge sentenced the convict to transportation, that was the sentence to be carried into execution by the Crown. The noble and learned Lord said he should have to present the report of the Committee on the subject of transportation, from which it would be seen that the thirty-four Judges of England, Scotland, and Ireland were unanimous upon the subject of transportation.

Earl GREY said, Let the noble and learned Lord read what a most visionary and fantastical charges, and had presented to their Lordships a picture of a very alarming character of something which the Government were about to do contrary to their own law. Under the authority and the credit of the noble and learned Lord, the alarm which he had sought to create was the mere effect of his imagination; for it so happened that there was not any foundation in fact for a word which the noble and learned Lord had uttered. Earl Grey then read Mr. Justice Lord Brougham's grounds of alarm, threw onto him that the propensity of the noble and learned Lord to talk. The noble and learned Lord's remarks upon the general question it must be obvious to every one had not the influence whatever to shake the resolution of their Lordships; and he (Earl Grey) could account for the noble and learned Lord's speech from no other reason but for the extreme anxiety of the noble and learned Lord, in season and out of season, to attract notice, and to reason, whether worth their Lordships' attention or not worth it, under all circumstances and on all occasions, to hear his own voice in that House. He (Earl Grey) could resume no other reason for so long a discussion on the subject.

To this taunt Lord BROUGHAM replied that if he had any very vain desire to do that which the noble Earl had, with his peculiar felicity of manner, and with such generous candour, imputed to him, namely, the desire of obtaining the credit of the noble and learned Lord Brougham's grounds of alarm, threw onto him that absurd the propensity of the noble and learned Lord to talk. The noble and learned Lord's remarks upon the general question it must be obvious to every one had not the influence whatever to shake the resolution of their Lordships; and he (Earl Grey) could account for the noble and learned Lord's speech from no other reason but for the extreme anxiety of the noble and learned Lord, in season and out of season, to attract notice, and to reason, whether worth their Lordships' attention or not worth it, under all circumstances and on all occasions, to hear his own voice in that House. He (Earl Grey) could resume no other reason for so long a discussion on the subject of transportation. [The noble and learned Lord had interrupted the noble Earl (Lord Brougham) would teach the noble Earl a short lesson, which would be of use to him, and save him the trouble of calling any noble Lord to order again. He would tell the noble Earl that, according to the orders of the House, nothing was more clear than this, that no Peer should speak when there was no question before the House; but there was no one thing more certain than this, that the constant course pursued by all noble Lords was that of speaking, not when they chose but half-a-dozen times, where there was no question before the House (Loud laughter.) Lord Brougham then addressed himself again to Earl Grey, and said that he would discharge his duty as long as he had the faculty of making himself heard, and that when their Lordships should cease to lend him their attention, he should cease to trouble them. He had only to advise the noble Earl to attend upon any subject. He had sat in their Lordships' house for fifteen or sixteen years and upwards, and he had never yet learned, he had never till that moment been told, and that, in a sneer—that he would not term it a sneer—never maybe something pointed, something clever, something that sank deep, and embedded itself in the memory, by having an epigrammatic sting attached to it; but he had learned by the noble Earl, and that in a manner which he should treasure with the most perfect complacency, that he (Lord Brougham) had totally misunderstood the object and intention of the Government on the subject of transportation, a subject which only a few days before had attracted so many strictures and had been a member of their Lordships' house. He (Lord Brougham) had never said that the law of transportation was altered by an order in Council. What he had say was, that the execution of the law was altered; and he would discharge his duty as long as he had the faculty of making himself heard, and that when their Lordships should cease to lend him their attention, he should cease to trouble them. He had only to advise the noble Earl to attend upon any subject.

The bill was then read a third time and passed.

The Marine Mutiny Bill, the Indemnity Bill, and the Exchequer Bills Bill, were also read a third time and passed.

WASTE LANDS IN IRELAND. The Marquis of WESTMEATH moved the second reading of a Bill for Preventing Waste on Lands in Ireland.—The Lord CHANCELLOR and Lord CAMPBELL, while admitting that the subject was one demanding attention, pointed out, that the noble Lord would have to prove the case of injustice in its operation, and would, therefore, oppose it.—Lord CAMPBELL opposed the bill; and Lord MONTEAGLE, whilst admitting the necessity of some [illegible] measure, suggested that it should be referred to a select committee.—The withdrew it. This he consented to do; and the House adjourned till Thursday

HOUSE OF COMMONS—TUESDAY

RELIEF OF THE POOR Sir G. GREY gave notice that on the 29th instant he should move for leave to bring in a bill to amend the law for the relief of the poor in England.

THE ADJOURNED DEBATE ON EDUCATION

The adjourned debate on the Government Education plan was resumed by Mr. EWART, who objected to making a grant for the encouragement of religion, and gave his opinion that the condition of the schoolmaster would not be materially elevated by outfitting pensions and occasional allowances. He had many objections to the scheme, but, as he agreed with many portions of it, he could not vote for the amendment.

Sir C. NAPIER could not conscientiously vote for any plan of education from the benefits of which Roman Catholic Dissenters would be practically excluded.

The Earl of ARUNDEL and SURREY regretted that the Government should have come to the conclusion of excluding Roman Catholics from any participation in the grant; but he was ready to vote for a portion of the scheme, and, if not for the Government scheme, as he did not feel disposed to deny to others the benefits of education which others denied to the religious conscientious to which he belonged.

Mr. SEYMER supported the Ministerial proposition.

After several other members had spoken,

Lord MORPETH made an elaborate speech in favour of the proposal. Only one member (Mr Gisborne) had opposed it on the ground that Parliament had no right to educate the people. He had never heard anything more preposterous than this allegation. He thought the Government deserving of great credit for originating and paying more liberally a class of men who were at present not too well remunerated, the rewarding of a few schoolboys, could ever be turned to the Jurand India, as engine of corruption which those who have proposed against the scheme were disposed to consider it. Lord Morpeth then adverted to the connexion of crime with the want of education, and illustrated it by reference to various criminal returns from the county of York. He lamented the painful difference of opinion which had separated him on this subject from many of those with whom he had hitherto been proud and pleased to act; but, however much to his personal concern he felt himself compelled to do so, he must say that the old Protestant Dissenting interest of England, associated as they were with so much that was valuable in our constitutional history, should have committed themselves to the course in which they were now engaged. He regretted it, because he believed that the cause they now refused to sanction, and were resolute in opposing, was emphatically the cause of the working man and the working woman of this country (hear, hear), and because he believed that they were in the main disposed to take a full share in largely contributing to the education of the poor. He regretted it on his own account, because he should miss the encouragement and the companionship which he had now proved through a political connexion of some duration, and to which he had become accustomed. He regretted it for their sakes, because he sincerely believed, and he therefore, however their opinions brought them to the [illegible] saved they would in the end most assuredly fail. (Cheers.)

Mr. BRIGHT was opposed to any system of State Education, and quoted various facts to show the extent to which educational means now possessed by the Dissenters. Any Nonconformist who should consent to take a single sixpence of a grant would abandon the principles upon which Dissenters [illegible] the United Church, and would deprive himself ever after of the right to say one word against the domination and usurpation of the Established Church He protested, in the strongest terms, against any addition to the aggrandisement of a Church which was hostile to the principles of liberty against any addition to its powers of doing mischief, convinced that the time was not far distant when the country would refuse any longer to maintain it as an establishment

Sir G. GREY denied that the hon. gentleman spoke the feelings or opinions of the Nonconformists of England, and said that his reading of history was to little purpose if it had not informed him that the opinions of some of the most eminent of the Nonconformists were not in unison with those he had that night declared, for some of them had not only recognised an Established Church, but had held livings, and had only quitted the Church in consequence of that measure which was in fact the first blow the Church had ever received, and from the effects of which it had scarcely yet recovered—the Act of Uniformity. The right hon. Bart. said he felt bound to admit that the Roman Catholics had reason to complain; for he resolved to find that there was not one opinion in the House as to the injustice of their exclusion, and should feel delighted to find himself called upon, as a member of the Government, to alter, in deference to public opinion, those terms of the Act which operated so hardly against a large portion of their fellow countrymen

Mr HINDLEY said he could not concur in those minutes. He thought that they ought to be modified in several important particulars, and, above all, he thought that the voluntary principle—which had not yet failed—ought to have been tried for a year longer

On the motion of Sir W. CLAY, the debate was then adjourned till Thursday.

The House adjourned at a quarter past twelve.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. WEDNESDAY.

THE FACTORIES BILL.—On reading the order of the day for bringing up the report on the Factories Bill, Mr. TRELAWNY again offered his opposition to the bill, reproducing many of the arguments against it which had formerly so copiously offered to it in its earlier stages.—Mr. HUME then moved that the report be brought up that day six months. Every hour for which the bill was delayed afforded fresh proof of its injustice and impolicy, and he felt called upon to avail himself of every opportunity with which the forms of the House presented him, of giving it his most strenuous opposition. He could not refrain from again expressing his astonishment and regret at the extraordinary course which the Government had thought proper to pursue in regard to the bill. Several hon. members then stated their views.—Lord J. RUSSELL deprecated renewing the discussion upon the bill at this stage of it. He regretted that it had been changed in Committee into a Ten Hours Bill, regarding the weight of experience as only in favour of an Eleven Hours Bill. He would, however, support the bill as it stood, although it might be necessary to reconsider it during a future session.—Mr. ROEBUCK censured the conduct of the noble Lord in supporting a Ten Hours Bill, while he admitted that an Eleven Hours Bill would be preferable.—The House then divided, and the report was ordered to be received by a majority of 104 to 46. The report was then brought up and agreed to, and the third reading was fixed pro formâ for Friday, with the understanding that a specific day would then be named for taking the discussion on the 3rd reading.

The House then went into Committee on the Naval Pensions Bill, after which the House resumed to

The House, which met at noon, adjourned at a quarter to six

HOUSE OF LORDS. THURSDAY

The Marquis of WESTMEATH complained of an alleged misrepresentation in regard to Irish affairs in the Queen's Speech, and moved that the printed of those papers should be called to the bar of the House; but the Marquis of LANSDOWNE having suggested that every respectable journal would be willing to correct any error, the Marquis of WESTMEATH withdrew his motion.

The Fever (Ireland) Bill went through committee; and the House adjourned at an early hour.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—THURSDAY.

REPEAL OF THE SEPTENNIAL ACT. Mr. D'EYNCOURT gave notice of a motion for the 6th of May, for the repeal of the Septennial Act

THE DIVISION ON THE EDUCATION MEASURE.

Sir WM. CLAY moved the adjournment of the House, in pursuance to vote for the motion of his hon. friend the member for Finsbury (Mr T. Duncombe), but he did not do so under the impression that that motion was tantamount to a vote of censure upon the Government. He regretted that he felt himself called upon to oppose the measure of the noble Lord; but, if the noble Lord, in consequence of pressure from a certain quarter, chose to differ with himself, he (Sir William Clay) could not help that difference.

The House was then addressed by Mr. Home, Mr. S. Crawford, Sir William Molesworth, and other members

The discussion was closed by Sir R. PEEL, who gave his support to the Government, but disapproved of the part of the scheme excluding the Catholics, and stated he should hereafter be prepared to submit them to the benefit of the plan in common with all classes of their fellow Christians

The House then divided, when there appeared

For Mr. Duncombe's Amendment	..	47
For the original motion	..	372
Majority for Ministers	..	325

The House adjourned at one o'clock.

COUNTRY NEWS.

VISIT OF SIR R. PEEL TO LANCASHIRE. On Tuesday (last week) Sir R. Peel breakfasted with his relatives at Accrington-house, and then proceeded on a tour through the farms in the neighbourhood, of which he is the proprietor. The inspection of the farms and buildings was made with great minuteness, and regulated in orders by Sir Robert for the complete repair of the buildings, and the improvement of the land, a thorough drainage, &c. The right hon. Baronet in his peregrinations met with some adventures, which will furnish materials for capital after dinner stories. Among others was an obstreperous invitation by an old woman who occupied a cottage on a farm, to "come an' look at th' heaven hoo it raised th' roof." Sir Robert carefully examined the tenement, and gave instructions for its repair. The old lady took her visitor for the head factor REPRESENTATION OF EAST SUFFOLK.—The Ipswich Journal states that the rumour respecting the retirement of E. S. Gooch, Esq., from the representation of East Suffolk is incorrect, and congratulates the constituency upon the determination of the gentleman to come forward.

BOROUGH OF AYLESBURY. In consequence of his continued ill-health, Mr. [illegible] Hamilton, M.P., does not intend to come forward again for this borough, and Mr. Disraeli will offer himself as a Conservative Protectionist candidate on the [illegible] vacancy. We have reason to believe that the learned sergeant will not be allowed to "walk over the course."

REPRESENTATION OF GREENWICH. In the event of a vacancy occurring in the representation of Greenwich, it is the intention of a portion of the constituency to put in nomination David Williams Wire, Esq.

THE LATE GENERAL ELECTION. The Liberal Electoral Registries have made arrangements for bringing forward two candidates at the general election. The gentlemen selected are Thomas Acock, Esq., of King's Wood Warren, and the Hon. Captain Cavendish, son of Lord Waterpark.

WINDSOR IMPROVEMENTS.—The demolition of the houses of the Military Knights of Windsor, on what is called "The Lower Foundation," commenced on Tuesday last. Eight houses were erected in the reign of James I., on the benefactions of Sir Peter de Maire and Sir Francis Crane, Chancellor of the Order of the Garter in the reign of that Monarch, and have for some years past been in a very dilapidated state. The Queen's Private Library and Museum at Windsor will throw open an extended prospect of the forest scenery westward of the town and castle, especially when the space they occupied shall be converted into a handsome public promenade, in harmony with the north terrace as laid out by her Majesty and Prince Albert. When this object is accomplished, the Royal Chapel of St. George will be seen for the first time since its erection from the surrounding country, and will form a picturesque addition to the view of the Castle

THE LATE BARON DE BODE.—The will of the late Baron de Bode, written by him in pencil in the year 1834, says:—"I leave everything to my son, except the following; but this calculation is made in case Government pay me, or to my son after me, £250,000. If less, then the following legacies to be reduced in proportion. Should Government pay more than £250,000, they to receive the amount of the following legacies to remain, and the more will be left to my dear son Clement. My son to pay an annuity of £2000 to his mother for her life; £10,000 to each of my daughters; £5,000 to my brother Louis; £2000 to my brother Charles; nothing to Felix. £5,000 to each of my illegitimate sons, Augustus and Frederic, and £10,000 to Mr. Robert Laugslow; £5000 to his sister Frederica, and [illegible] to his sister Clementina." He has executed two codicils in 1836 and 1837, increasing the amount of these bequests. His son, the Hon. Clement A. C. F. Baron de Bode, has administered to the will in England. The [illegible]

ADMISSION OF THE PUBLIC TO THE NEW [illegible] to-night's Gazette contains the following announcement: [illegible] ter, Lord Great Chamberlain's Office, April 21. Tickets to see the New Houses of Lords, on [illegible] will be issued from the Lord Great Chamberlain's Office, [illegible], between the hours of ten and four o'clock, for the admission of [illegible] Each ticket will admit the bearer and three other persons. All applications for tickets must be made personally, or through a responsible agent, as it will be impossible to send tickets or answer written applications. Persons making such applications are required to leave their names and addresses with the Lord Great Chamberlain's Messenger, between the hours of ten and five o'clock. (Signed) WILLOUGHBY DE EREsby, G.C."

THE NEW HOUSE OF LORDS.

(Continued from page 247.)

HE elaborate richness of the decorations of "the New Palace at Westminster," we are assured, will warrant our extension of their Illustration beyond the space originally contemplated; so chaste is the character of the embellishments, and the proportional beauty of "the House" itself

We resume with Mr. Williams's highly artistical details of

THE PEERS' LOBBY.

The Peers' Lobby, which is the chief entrance to the House of Lords, is a very beautiful apartment; and its decorations, both architectural and pictural, are extremely elegant and appropriate. In plan, the Lobby is square, each side being divided into a wide central, and two smaller compartments, by buttresses. The lower division of each buttress is square, paneled on the face, gabled with crocketing and finials, resting on a deeply moulded base; and the upper is octagonal, moulded, and having a small angular buttress on its face. At the tops of the buttresses are demi-angels, coroneted; bearing shields, surrounded by the Garter, with V.R., entwined by a cord, upon them. From the angels spring the spandrils which support the roof.

The wide central compartments, on either side, have lofty arches, or doorways, all of precisely similar proportions and arrangement. The doorways on the east and west sides correspond with each other in detail, having quatrefoils in the spandrils, with the rose and portcullis in their centres. Above each arch is a series of six small ogee arches, having crockets and finials, and separated by small buttresses with pinnacles: within them are painted the arms of the six different Royal lines who have swayed the English sceptre—the Saxon, Norman, Plantagenet, Tudor, Stuart, and Hanoverian—each surmounted by a Royal crown. Below each arch, and forming, as it were, a base to it, is a small panel, quatrefoiled, and bearing in its centre a shield, on which the initials S.N.P.T.S.H. are painted, to correspond to the armorial bearings above them. The north doorway opens into the long corridor leading to the House of Commons; whilst the eastern and western open into corridors connected with the Libraries, and other rooms. The doors themselves are of oak, the hinges and locks being of exquisitely designed and wrought brass.

The East, and West, and North Doorways have recessed doorways, with arches of lower pitch, to correspond in general character with the South Door, but of much plainer design. Each recessed doorway is divided, by slender buttresses, into three parts a central and two narrow compartments. In the central one is the doorway, the spandrils of which have roses within quatrefoils; and above it the wall is formed into three quatrefoil panels, having, within them, shields containing the arms of England, Scotland, and Ireland, Royally crowned, and with blue labels, on which are Anglia, Scotia, and Hibernia respectively. The narrow compartments have a deeply-moulded base, and are paneled, with quatrefoils, headed arches, and quatrefoils with roses in them. A string-course, with battlements, runs along, above the doorway, the whole length of the recessed portion, thus dividing it into two stories. The doors are of oak, richly paneled and traceried, having plate-glass in the tracery. Over the East and West Doors are clocks, the dials of which are beautifully enamelled in white, gold, and blue. On either hand, in the thickness of the wall, are small doorways, with embattled cornices, and decorated spandrils, which lead to the staircases, to the galleries, and into small rooms. The soffit of the recessed portion is highly enriched with quatrefoiled arches.

CORRIDOR.

The South Door, in its general form, corresponds to those on the other sides of the Lobby, having six arches over it, embellished, like them, with the Royal armorial bearings; but, in the details of the archway itself, the utmost magnificence is displayed. The arch is deeply moulded, and round it rose-leaves, well chiseled and richly gilded, form an elaborate and appropriate enrichment; whilst, at intervals, Tudor roses, very boldly sculptured in alto relief, royally crowned, painted and gilded, add their gorgeous hues to the whole.

Recessed about four feet is another arch, but not of so lofty a pitch as the external one, and, within the mouldings of this, oak-leaves, gilded, are introduced. The space over the arch is divided into five compartments, or panels, the central one quatrefoiled, and bearing in its centre a shield of the Royal Arms of England, surmounted by a crown, and having the motto "Dieu et Mon Droit" on a blue label; whilst, in the panels on either side, likewise quatrefoiled, are the lion and unicorn, each bearing a small banner: roses and thistles fill up the other panels, whilst shamrocks form a cresting round the extrados of the arch; and, as all parts are coloured and gilded, the effect is truly magnificent. Indeed, this, the chief entrance to the House of Lords, may justly be called "the beautiful," its decorations are so exquisitely arranged and carried out.

THE BRASS GATES.

The BRASS GATES which hang in the inner arch are perfect specimens of the art of working in metal; so beautiful and intricate in design yet so skilfully worked out, that they are marvels of art. The Gates are of two wings, each divided by mullions into three compartments, and forming arches having floriated quatrefoils in the angles above the arches. The space between the mullions are filled with rows of small trefoil-headed arches and quatrefoils. The arches are trefoiled, and in their centres are traceried lozenges of delicate workmanship. The quatrefoils have the rose, thistle, and shamrock clustered together, and royally crowned, within them. A broad band of brass crosses each gate a little below the lock, and on either is engraved "Dieu et Mon Droit." Roses are studded at intervals round the Gates, and a beautiful piece of pinnacle work passes up the centre to conceal their junction. The key to these Gates, a representation of which is at the commencement of this article, at the initial letter, is well worthy of notice for its elaborate workmanship. It is of wrought steel, and is five and a half inches in length. All the key-s to the doors in the House of Lords are of steel, and of good design, but not so elaborately finished as this one.

STANDARD FOR GAS LIGHT IN THE PEERS' LOBBY.

The compartments on either side of the doorways are exactly alike in architectural ornament, but the upper stories on the south side are of solid wall; though mouldings, as for windows, are worked on them, whilst the others are pierced for windows. Each compartment is divided into two stories, by a bold moulding and band, on which is carved "Domine salvam fac reginam." The lower stories have three ogee arches in them, rising from a deep base, crocketed, and terminated by finials, within obtuse quatrefoiled arches; the spaces above the ogee arches being filled with a dispering of flowers, sculptured in the stone. The upper stories, or windows, are divided by mullions and transoms into six quatrefoil-headed lights, those in the top ranges being subdivided and traceried. All the windows are glazed with stained glass, representing, on a richly dispered ground, the armorial achievements, mantled and helmeted, of the oldest noble families of England, with labels giving their names; in the pseudo windows on the south side, the surface of the wall is gilded; and on it are emblazoned armorial bearings, in style to correspond exactly with the windows. Since the drawing, whence our Engraving is taken, was made, the tracery in the upper parts of the pseudo-windows have been enriched, by rosse being painted within them.

ROOF.

The spandrils, which rise from the angels on the buttresses, to support the roof, are filled with quatrefoils; and they, as well as the beams which they sustain, are deeply ribbed and moulded, and decorated by small patterns painted upon them in various colours slightly relieved by gilding. Pendants, richly carved and gilded, are at the intersections of the main beams. The spaces between the beams, and also between them and the walls, are subdivided into squares by lesser beams; and in the centre of the whole is a circular compartment, within which is painted a white and red rose, surrounded by a radiating nimbus, on a deep blue ground. Within the squares the ceiling is gilded, and on it are painted roses, thistles, and shamrocks, on a blue ground, surrounded by circular borders, enriched with small quatrefoils, having foliated ornaments of red and green spraying from them. This ceiling is peculiarly chaste and effective, its decorations being very rich without any tendency to garishness, the prevailing tint of the beams &c. inclining to an olive green.

The ENCAUSTIC PAVEMENT of this Lobby irresistibly attracts attention, and is of surpassing beauty. Double narrow alleys of black marble stretch across from buttress to buttress, and skirt round the room also, and within them is repeated the motto "Dieu et Mon Droit" in tiles, having white letters on a rich deep blue ground, surrounded by a narrow fillet of a Gothic pattern on a red ground. In the centre of the pavement is a Tudor rose, within a star of sixteen points, formed of various-coloured Derbyshire marbles, within a square border, intersected by a lozenge, of brass, on which an elaborate flowing pattern of roses is engraved; the space between the points of the star and the brass border, being filled with cement of an ultramarine tint. The remaining portions of the floor are incrusted with blue and red tiles, alternately—the former having V.R., encircled by a cord; and the latter, the lions of England, upon them, and interlaced by bands of ornament in narrow tiles.

GAS LIGHT STANDARDS

At the corners of the Lobby are magnificent standards of brass for gas lights. They consist of a shaft about 12 feet high, rising from a moulded plinth, coloured to represent black marble; from each corner of the plinth rises a small circular pillar, or buttress, to support the shaft, crowned with a lion's head. The space between the buttress and shaft is filled with trellage, wrought with great delicacy; and every part of the pillars and shaft is elaborately worked out in lozenges and hexagons, with quatrefoils. The shaft is surmounted by a highly wrought coronal for the gas jets. The standards are gilded, relieved by gilt bronze. The representation we give will enable our readers to form a correct idea of this beautiful work of art. In our view of the Peers' Lobby, the general effect of the architectural members and decorations is displayed, and especially of the "beautiful" south entrance; the Brass Gates are given in detail in the Illustration beneath the Lobby, and a good idea of their exquisite design and workmanship may thus be formed; the Standards for Gas Lights are shown in the large view, in their respective places, and the detailed engraving will enable our readers to judge of their picturesque and characteristic design and decoration.

CORRIDORS.

The representations of the Corridors show, in one of the views, the general character of the Lobby with its paneled walls and roof, and its recesses at the sides for seats; and for the windows as described in a previous page: whilst the other, which delineates one of the extreme ends of the Corridors, shows the beautiful stone roof, richly groined with fan tracery, and having a semi-globe light pendant from its centre. On the right hand is indicated the entrance to the gallery for Members of the House of Commons, and Strangers' Gallery; whilst on the left, is the door to a little room, over which is inscribed "Judicial reporters." The door which separates this compartment from the long Corridor is of oak, the upper panels having plate glass in the tracery.

The arches in the lower stories are all glazed with plate glass, as on either side of the Brass Gates is a room; that on the right being for the person who has the care of the apparatus for ventilating the house, which is arranged in this room; and that on the left for door-keepers, &c. In the south-east and south-west are staircases leading to the Peeresses' and Strangers' and Reporters' Galleries; and on the north, north-west, and north-east sides, are small rooms, of size corresponding to those on the south. The room on the north side is for reporters only on the west side for the receiver of fees, on the east for barristers.

CORRIDOR.

THE CLERKS' TABLE IN THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

The CLERKS' TABLE is eight feet long, and seven feet wide, and two feet ten high. It is of walnut, and is supported by twelve legs, each resting on a projecting foot, richly foliated. The legs are fashioned like small octagonal clustered pillars, decorated with a leaf ornament, having moulded bases and capitals. They are connected with each other by a deeply-moulded bar, and bars stretch across from foot to foot, having sunken panels between them, so as to convey, in plan, the general character of a portcullis. At the sides of the table, the brackets which tend to support the top, are enriched with scroll-work, whilst those at the ends are quite plain. At either end there are drawers: on the surface of the table the wood is inlaid in lattice fashion, and is very highly polished. This table was made by Mr. Webb, of Old Bond-street.

Hereafter we shall engrave the Victoria Hall, access to which is obtained from the House, by two doors, one on either side of the Throne. This is a kind of withdrawing room, answering to the Lobby below the Bar. Here we have two large oak tables, and some eighteen or twenty red Russia leather chairs, of the Gothic pattern, studded (we suppose) with silver, and admirable both in design and execution. This is a quieter apartment than the House; still, it is rich in gold and colour, disper work in compartments, armorial bearings upon string-courses (the arms of the ancestors of Queen Victoria), and old English letters upon early English scroll-work.

We add a few notes from two of our contemporaries:

"The Palace, to the eastward, presents a frontage of nearly one thousand feet when complete, it will cover an area o nine statute acres; the great tower at the south-western extremity, which has already been raised to the height o ninety feet, will ultimately reach the gigantic elevation of four hundred, tower of lesser magnitude will crown other portions of the building; fourteen halls, galleries, vestibules, and other apartments of great capacity and noble proportion be contained within its limits; it comprises eight official residences, each first-rate mansions; twenty corridors and lobbies are required to serve as the great roadways through this aggregation of offices; two-and-thirty noble apartments facing the river will be used as Committee-Rooms; Libraries, Waiting-Rooms, Dining-Rooms, and Clerks' Offices, exist in superabundant measure; eleven greater Courts and a score of minor openings give light and air to the interior of this superb fabric; its cubic contents exceed fifteen millions of feet, being one-half greater than St. Paul's; and it contains not less than between five and six hundred distinct apartments, amongst which will be a Chapel for Divine Worship, formed out of the crypt of old St. Stephen's."—(Times.)

CLERKS' TABLE, HOUSE OF LORDS.

THE NEW HOUSES OF LORDS.

THE PEERS' LOBBY.

"Two years must elapse, it is said, before the House of Commons is ready, and five, it is supposed, before the whole structure is complete. The chief features of the exterior will be the front towards the river; the Victoria Tower, and the Clock Tower; of the interior, the two Houses of Parliament, the octagon or Central Hall, the Victoria Gallery, St. Stephen's Hall, old Westminster Hall, and the crypt of the ancient chapel of St. Stephen. The Westminster-bridge end will contain the apartments of the Speaker and the Sergeant-at Arms, and the Vauxhall-bridge end, the apartments of the Usher of the Black Rod and the Lords' Librarian. The exterior is of hard magnesian limestone, from Bolsover, in Nottinghamshire, and the interior of Caen stone. The main beams and joists are of iron throughout; and the number of statues already about the building upwards, it is said, of 250.

Trees thick as statues, statues thick as trees.

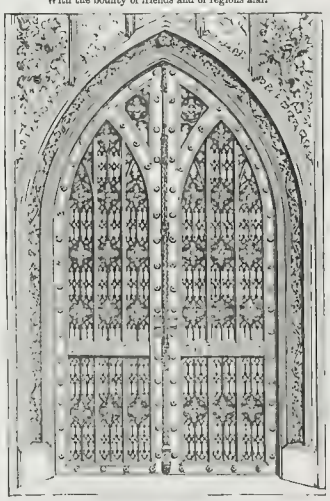
And yet, we are told, 200 more will be required to complete the building. We may mention, among the more unusual features of the exterior, the thirty-five shields of arms of the Sovereigns of England, and the use of cross-tiles (a picturesque addition), as at Exeter Cathedral. Two steam-engines are erecting to hoist the stones on the Victoria Tower. Such is the nature and extent of the New Houses of Parliament, while the style employed may be best described in the architect's own words:—'It has been his aim to avoid the ecclesiastical, collegiate, castellated, and domestic styles, and to select that which he considers better suited to the peculiar appropriation of the building.' The lighting of this national structure is on Faraday's principle; and the ventilation has chiefly been entrusted to the same gentleman. We may add that the clocks are Vulliamy's, and that, like the stained glass in the windows, they all wear mediæval hands and mediæval faces." (Daily News.)

THE AMERICAN FRIGATE LADEN WITH PROVISIONS &c., FOR THE RELIEF OF IRELAND.

[The United States ship of war, Jamestown, under the command of Captain Forbes, laden with bread stuffs, and provisions for the relief of the distressed Irish, left Boston, on the 28th ult., and, after a splendid voyage of 15 days, arrived at Cork, on Monday evening, on her mission of mercy. She brought 8000 barrels of flour. This is a free contribution from the States.]

The Alps in their heaven-crown'd might are sublime,
And gloriously throbs the proud breast of the sea,
Whose waves should be links to unite clime to clime,
Enfolding all mankind as men ought to be:
And the fair, fearless barque, though a creature of art,
Sublime must appear to all true men and free,
Which wafts the life-blood to the market and mart,
And whose mission is hallow'd from seaboard to lea.

And surely God's smile must descend on the sails
Most brightly, which forego the terrors of war,
To succour the land where dire Famine prevails,
With the bounty of friends and of regions afar.



THE BRASS GATES, PEERS' LOBBY.

When the decks are not arm'd for the fratricide strife,
But freighted with plenty by brotherly love:
When Death must recede from the blessings of life,
And the vulture of Moloch from Charity's dove.

Ay! glorious the path of that barque o'er the wave!
Columbia forgets not the old Father-land;
Her citizens stretch forth the strong hand to save,
And the heart of old friendship is puls'd in the hand.
From the senate to cottage, the cry of distress,
The death-cry of Erin, with anguish was heard;
And the God of all goodness that people must bless,
Who so nobly have follow'd his merciful word.

Albeit most welcome the life-saving boon,
Yet not here alone shall its influence dwell;
It will cherish the seeds of kind feeling, which soon
To a friendship eternal may gloriously swell.
Though a different flag may stream forth from the mast,
The blood, tongue, and souls of the lands are the same;
And their children will smile at the feuds of the past,
In pity, and strive for life's genuine fame—

The fame which the olive of peace may enwreathe,
The fame never sullied by widowhood's tear,
The soul's pure renown which for ages will breathe,
When the clay that enshrined it is mouldering here.
This, this, is the trophy, the triumph, whose car
Leads the spirits of men in the noblest chains:
It beams on their souls like the Bethlehem star,
When "Peace" swell'd the anthem of angelic strains.

Then bless'd be the sails of the life-freighted barque,
And happy the homesteads of those who can feel
For the land wherein Famine and Pestilence stark
Might make e'en to rocks; a successful appeal.
The death-clouds are passing; Hope's morning will dawn,
And Plenty may speedily smile on the plain;
But men will remember, till life is withdrawn,
Columbia's brave barque with her freight o'er the main.

L.

MR. WINTERHALTER'S PORTRAITS OF THE ROYAL FAMILY.—Her Majesty, anxious to comply with the wishes of those who many persons to be allowed to see the pictures lately painted by Mr. Winterhalter, viz.: one representing her Majesty, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales in a sailor's dress, has been graciously pleased [illegible] and that they shall be exhibited in the banqueting-room in St. James's Palace. At first the tickets will be limited to the Foreign Ministers, the Members of the late and present Cabinets, and the Great Officers of State. After the 28th inst., tickets will be issued for about three weeks to ladies and gentlemen, upon personal application at the Lord Chamberlain's office, between the hours of twelve and four; at the end of which time tickets may be obtained in the same manner as the orders to view the state apartments in Windsor Castle, until the end of June, when the pictures will be removed to Osborne, for which place they were painted. The pictures were exhibited, on Tuesday, to the Diplomatic Corps and the Ministers and Officers of State.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, April 25. Third Sunday after Easter: St. Mark the Evangelist. Princess Alice Maud Mary born, 1843.
MONDAY, 26. The Length of the Day is 14h. 28m.; the Day has increased 1h. 13m. since the Shortest Day.
TUESDAY, 27. The Sun rises 1 N.E. at 4h. 43m.: is S. at 6h. 42m.; and sets at 8h. 41m.
WEDNESDAY, 28.—Venus at her greatest W. Elongation at 3h. 19m. p.m.
THURSDAY, 29.—Day breaks at 2h. 9m.; and Twilight ends at 9h. 47m.: Venus sets at 10h. 22m. p.m.; midway between N.W. by N. and N.W.
FRIDAY, 30.—Full Moon at 1h. 26m. in the afternoon.
SATURDAY, May 1.—SS. Philip and St. James.
On the 28th, Venus with the Pleiades and Aldebaran form a right-angled triangle, she being situated 10° E. of the former, and 6° N. of the latter; she is moving to a point N. of Jupiter.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAY 1.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. A. M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.	M. A.
0 26 11 0	1. 35	2 4	2 50	3 37	4 26	5 17

* * There will be no high tide during the afternoon of Monday.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Syren" will find some important details of the adaptation of the Archimedean Screw to Steam-Boats, in No. 63 of our Journal, or in No. 996 of the "Mechanic's Magazine."
"R. S." Abingdon, should apply to a magistrate.
"D. W. I." is thanked.
"H. M. S." Stoke-on-Trent. We do not understand the question.
"R. P. P." Glasgow. "Adelpha" is Greek for "Brothers."
"X. Y. Z." Glasgow.—Raining.
"An Ex-Churchwarden." Bolton.—A letter addressed to Mr. John Scott Russell, Society of Arts, London, would, probably, elicit the required information; Mr. Russell having paid considerable attention to the Acoustics of Building. About twenty years since, the pulpit of Attercliffe Church, near Sheffield, was provided with a concave sounding-board, which some important defects were most successfully remedied. The construction of this board is described in the "Philosophical Magazine for 1828," and in the "Arcana of Science for 1829," pages 54 and 55.
"A. M." had better apply to a Solicitor.
"E. E."—No; but the communications must be authenticated!
"T. Attle."—Miss Burdett Coutts will, very shortly, lay the first stone of a new Church in Westminster.
"Jobbings Jones," Cumbridge.—Certainly, not.
"Amicus," Newport.—See the account of the Agricultural College at Cirencester, in No 171 of our Journal.
"B. B. C." is thanked; but we have not room.
"C. W." suggests a small bell as a desirable means of communication between the passengers and conductor of an omnibus, or other public carriage.
"J. S."—Too late.
"J. E." Dunmow, is thanked; but the subject is not of sufficient importance for illustration
"Regina" is recommended to apply to a Music-seller: the expense of publication will not be at so much as Fi'ss Minto" We do not know.
"R. L.," Jersey.—We cannot entertain the proposition.
"A. J. B." Space is too precious.
"P. H. D."—A Portrait of the Rev. Dr. Croly, (a good likeness), appeared in No. 103 of our Journal; it can, however, only be purchased in the Volume.
"R. H. S.," Cambridge.—Our Journal is supplied throughout the kingdom at 6*d., if paid in advance.*
"B. B. B."—We have not heard the number of Children at the June Anniversary in St. Paul's Cathedral, stated beyond 8000. "Clericatory" is of three syllables
"A. S.," Selby.—"Rocket" is the name of a herb, as well as of a firework. The etymologists, generally, derive it from the Italian rochetto: but Lemon refers it to the Greek for hissing; but, this is only "may rather, perhaps." (See his "English Etymology.")
"A Servant" is correct in the interpretation of the term.
"A. R." Archbishop Whately's "Elements of Rhetoric" is admirable for its sound rules built upon sure experience.
"S. H.," Hoxton, will not, in all probability, obtain the sum named; nor do we recommend him to advertise the work at that price.
"G. W. S." The Royal Academy of Music is in Tenterden-street, Hanover-square.
"J. P. R." We have not room for "The Supposed Long Range"
"Erratic" The prices of admission to Her Majesty's Theatre may be learned from the bills or advertisements. Books of the operas in Italian and English may be bought in the Theatre
"J." The Cape Colony has, perhaps, the finest climate in the world.
"Dr." will find a Plan of the New Houses of Parliament in No. 74 of the Illustrated London News
"A Constant Reader." Miguet's "History of the French Revolution," just published in a volume at the European Library, is a work of great research and worth
"A. H.," Portland Place.—The public will be admitted, without fee, to view the New House of Lords. (See next page.)
"W. R.," Bristol.—Her Majesty's Theatre will hold about 2700 persons; Covent Garden, it is stated, above 3000.
"A Subscriber." Material, as thanked for the Sketch of the Oratorio Performance, but, we have only room for a few of the details
"A. B"—A younger s n is entitled to the same arms as his elder brother, with the usual mark of cadency
"E. V."—Our.o resses are, according to the laws of heraldry, those ladies who have no brother, or whose brothers have died without issue.
"A Subscriber," Cumberland. The Inspector-General a Commission in the Army (Hospital Staff) is [illegible]
"Spes." S. S. P. [illegible] Association
"A Constant Reader."—We are not in possession of the information.
"G. F."—The circumference of the Isle of Wight is about 56 miles
"J. S. Kennington.—Yes.
"An Old Subscriber." with a fellow-parishioner, should give notice of the nuisance to the constable, who is bound to prosecute at the next sessions or assizes.
"Nona" had better address her inquiry to the Secretary of the Royal Academy of Music, Tenterden-street, Hanover-square.
"W. W. W." must be more explicit as to the purpose for which the Wax is to be used
"C. A. B."—Apply at the Government Annuity Office, Old Jewry.
"H. H. M."—The height of the equestrian statue of George III., in Windsor Great Park, is 22 feet; the total elevation of statue and pedestal exceeds 50 feet. Our Correspondent will find the dimensions of the Great Wellington Statue in No. 231 of our Journal
"G. B. C. E." should obtain the interest of a Member of Parliament. We do not know the salary
"A Constant Reader," Cumberland.—The pronunciation is too arbitrary for us to [illegible]
"R. S."—We must await the proof; we remember our Correspondent to have written on a case precisely to that of his present letter, some time since, impugning the merits of M. Vite
"Inflation."—No
"S. W."—Apply to Messrs Messenger, or Mr. Hatchard.
"L. F. B."—The postage of a Newspaper to Frodsham is 2*d.*
"J. C. E."—The Lancaster and Carlisle Railway passes within two miles of Kendal.
"Zeta"—should avoid the use of his Books to Mr. Lumley, Bookseller, Chancery-lane
"Basse-Chantante."—Refer to Hamilton's "Musical Dictionary," published by Cocks and Co.
INELEGANT.—"Orchel," by "Fokz" lines, by "J. D."—"Invitation," by "E. G. F."—Lines, by "E. B. B."—Lines, by "W. H. P."
 We are requested to state that the Mr. William Carpenter mentioned in our pages of last week, as having taken the chair at a meeting of Artists, is not Mr. William Carpenter, of the British Museum, or his son.

BOOKS RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK
Neilson's Life of Zumbo.—The Rev. J. Dapton on National Education:—Parlour Library, Vol. 3.—Hand Book to Paris

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1847.

THE arrival of the United States ship-of-war, Jamestown, at Cork, with a cargo of provisions, is a cheering event for those who hope that nations may use their resources as wisely by sharing them, as by devoting them to purposes of mutual destruction. The gentle spirit of Cowper would have rejoiced in such a practical illustration of how hostile prejudices are weakening their grasp upon mankind, as one Freedom and Commerce have no barriers placed in their way. The [illegible] lot was cast in an age when war seemed the natural state [illegible]

[illegible]

He had too much reason for his sadness; the commanding intellects of the time seemed to devote their greater powers to the greatest mischief; long before his age, and long after it, the destruction of the "kindly fruits of the earth," was part and parcel of the art of war; to turn a fertile province to a fire-blackened desert was a triumph of policy; and to hem in an army, and starve a town into surrender, were master strokes of skill. The ravages of disease were calculated as accurately as the number of cannon-balls, and regarded as a cheap substitute for them; and if a "natural enemy" was afflicted by an unusual visitation—a famine for instance—it was considered a chance not to be lost; the hour of weakness was the best for an attack, and sword and fire completed what hunger and pestilence began.

But a short time ago, we are ashamed to say, the spirit of party thought there was an advantage in appealing to the old and evil prejudices, and attempts were made to excite a war between England and America. It did not succeed; and hereafter we hope the mere endeavour to excite such a feeling will sink those who make it into contempt.

We believe the Jamestown is the first ship-of-war belonging to an independent power that has ever entered an English port unarmed, with the implements of slaughter replaced by the "staff of life." We have partially employed our own navy in conveying pensions along our own coasts; but that a great rival should send out one of its vessels of war equipped as an ark of peace, is a pleasing novelty. The whole transaction deserves, and will receive, a more durable record than can be furnished by the columns of a journal. It is an incident that marks the character of the age, which, in spite of all appearances to the contrary, seems to be emerging from the accursed and senseless ferocities of the past. It is better than a brilliant campaign or a "glorious victory," and far more than such incidents merits that men should

Set it down
With gold on leading pillars!

The country has bestowed a public reward on the gallant Spanish Captain, Bernardo Camp, who rescued the survivors of the wreck of the Tweed; might not some public acknowledgment be made of the service rendered by the Jamestown, and those who furnished her freight? They are both noble facts, and prove that the spirit of chivalry, which was essentially self-sacrifice for the good of others, has not yet departed from the earth.

THE debate on the Education plan of the Government has occupied the entire week, with the exception of Wednesday. The most important speech was Lord John Russell's, who gave a clear and full account of what is proposed to be done, which, after all, is little enough, at present. To talk of removing the heaped-up ignorance of the lower classes in England, the accumulation of ages of neglect, by a grant of £100,000 a year, is like "turning the sun to ice by fanning in his face with a peacock's feather." The end and the means are sadly disproportionate; the plan will neither realise the hopes of its friends, nor justify the fears of its enemies; and it leaves an impression on the minds of those who look forward for half a generation, that the scheme has yet to be devised that will merit the name of National.

The speech of Mr. Macaulay was an able defence of the principle on which the whole question rests—that it is the duty of a State to provide education for the people. We apprehend the principle merely as such is past arguing; the State has done it for ages—for the rich: there is no sound reason in principle why it should not for the poor. All our endowed schools, colleges, and universities, have fallen practically into the possession of the wealthy or the comparatively wealthy; and they are all allied with the Church and Government of the State. The difficulty is not about providing the means of Education, so much as in the total inability of the great masses of the people to avail themselves of them. In a society where to refrain from toil for one hour is to diminish the means of life, and where the whole existence is toil almost from infancy upwards, it is idle to talk of schools: there are millions who cannot attend them; if life is ever made easier in this country, if children are released from the wheel and spindle, and the industrious can creep the highways and hedges, and, having gathered them in, can read as well as teach those they find struggling with existence, then the full benefit of State Education may be realised. At present the Factory Bill will do more in the right direction than all the minutes a Privy Council could draw up. Mr. Macaulay never touched on the thorny part of the question, the Religious Instruction, and how it is to be given: he confined himself to the advantages of an Education generally; a question as inoffensive for all popular tumults and outbreaks, such as the riots of 1780; but it is not ignorance alone that displays itself in such excesses. It is poverty that makes "dangerous classes;" and in large cities will desperate destitution ever cease to exist? It is food, work, wealth that creates public contentment; while the greatest learning may not save the possessor from absolute starvation, which opens the door for temptations to countless crimes.

THE WEATHER.

The weather during the past week has been generally unseasonable, and particularly so during the first four days. The progress of vegetation has been quite checked, having been subjected to a great and frequent cold at night from reaction, and during the day from evaporation, the latter owing to the dryness of the atmosphere; at the same time a keen N., N.E., or E. wind has been blowing.

The following are the particulars each day:—Friday was a cold day; the wind was blowing from the N., and at times from the N.E.; the reading of a thermometer on grass in the morning was 18°; and that in air, at the height of four feet, was only 29°; during the day, the latter increased to 51½°, at which it stood during a short time only, and sank to 39° before midnight. The sky was almost one-half covered by cloud. Saturday, the reading of a thermometer on grass was 14°, that on flax over grass was 8°, and the temperature of the air was 21°, which increased during the day to 38°, and sank to 28½ before midnight. The sky was rather more than one-half covered with cloud. The air during the day was dry, which, in connection with a quick moving air from the N., caused a feeling of cold greater than shown by the instrument. Sunday was similar to the two preceding days: the thermometer on grass read 15°; that on flax, 10°; and that in air, 25°; the latter rose to 52½° during the day, and sank to 42° before midnight. Monday, the reading of the thermometer in the air, in the morning, was 36½°; which increased to 51½°, and sank to 40° before midnight. The wind had continued in the N. till four, P.M., at which time it changed to S.W., and set in boisterous rainy and unsettled weather. Tuesday was a fine day: the thermometer read on grass 23° in the morning; that in air was 34° 5′, but which increased to 63½° during the day, and decreased to 38° after midnight, or during the morning of Wednesday. This day was fine and warm before noon; but, about this time, the wind blew again from the N., and it was cold; after four, P.M., it became calm, and the evening was warm. Thursday the lowest reading of a thermometer on grass, was 29°; and that of one in the air was 37°2′. Early in the morning the wind was from the North, which afterwards shifted to the East. During the day the thermometer reading increased to 57½. There was but little water mixed with the air. The afternoon was cloudy and dull.

The average temperature of Friday, was 40°; that of Saturday, was 36½°; that of Sunday, was 35½°; that of Monday, was 44°; that of Tuesday, was 45½°; that of Wednesday, was 47°; and that of Thursday, was 47½°.

The extreme thermometrical readings each day were—

Friday, April 16	the highest during the day was 51½ deg.	and the lowest was 29 deg.
Saturday, April 17	39°	24
Sunday, April 18	52½	25
Monday, April 19	51½	36½
Tuesday, April 20	63½	34½
Wednesday, April 21	57½	33
Thursday, April 22	57½	37½

Blackheath, Friday, April 16, 1847. J. G.

[illegible] AND THE GOVERNMENT EDUCATION SCHEME.—The [illegible] are happy to be able to state, on authority, that the [illegible] entirely disappeared. It will be remembered that similar excitements made at the same place last year at this season, had very different results—except in those cases in which the tainted stems were cut off and those having prevailed extensively, and were then and there [illegible]

SUNDAY TRAINS.—A requisition has been prepared for presentation to the Lord Provost of Glasgow, desiring him to call a public meeting to elicit an expression of public opinion respecting the stoppage of Sunday trains by the Directors of the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway. This railway has put down all passenger trains on Sundays, and the inhabitants of their stoppage at Sunday trains has rendered travelling on that day, however urgent the necessity, impossible. The requisition has been numerously signed. The result is expected to be a petition to Parliament to compel all railway companies to run a sufficient number of trains on Sundays for the accommodation of the public.

[illegible] ON THE WEDNESDAY'S DEBATE.—[illegible] LATER PRESENT CIRCUMSTANCES, NOT TO OFFER ANY FURTHER CONSTITUTIONAL OPPOSITION, OR TO TAKE ANY FURTHER CONSTITUTIONAL ACTION IN REFERENCE TO THE GOVERNMENT MEASURE ON EDUCATION, as these Committees understand it to be now explained, and intended to be ultimately proposed to the House of Commons.'"

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

The Queen and Prince Albert, the ladies and gentlemen of the Court, and the domestic household, attended divine service last Sunday in the private chapel in Buckingham Palace. The Hon. and Rev. C. Leslie Courtenay officiated.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent visited the Queen on Monday, at Buckingham Palace, and remained to luncheon with her Majesty and Prince Albert.

Her Majesty and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Princess Royal and the Princess Alice, took an airing on Tuesday afternoon in an open carriage and four. The Royal dinner party at Buckingham Palace included her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, their Excellencies Baron and Baroness de Beust, Lady Augusta Bruce, Baroness de Speth, the Marquis of Salisbury, Lord and Lady Willoughby de Eresby, Lord Robert Grosvenor, the Hon. Francis and Lady Anne Charteris, and the Right Hon. Mr and Mrs. Fox Maule.

The Queen and Prince Albert rode out on horseback on Wednesday, attended by the Hon. Miss Kerr and the Equerries in Waiting, Major General Wemyss and Captain the Hon. A. H. Gordon. Lord John Russell had an audience of her Majesty at Buckingham Palace.

DINNER AT APSLEY HOUSE.—Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, attended by Lady Augusta Cadogan and Mr. Edmond Maltmay, entertained the Duke of Wellington with their company at dinner on Wednesday, at Apsley House. In the evening their Royal Highnesses accompanied the Duke of Wellington to the Concert of Ancient Music, at the Hanover-square Rooms, his Grace being the Director for the evening. The other noble Directors also accompanied the illustrious party to the performance.

AMERICAN TRIBUTE TO ROYALTY.—An article of millinery, consisting of a bonnet of peculiar and costly description, is immediately expected to arrive, if once be not already the case, from New York, for her most gracious Majesty the Queen. It is rumoured that it has been the joint manufacture of several ladies, residents and natives of the principal commercial city of the United States of America.

RESIDENCE FOR LORD JOHN RUSSELL.—The Queen has been most graciously pleased to apportion for Lord John Russell's residence, Pembroke Lodge, in Richmond-park, last held by the late Earl of Errol, which his Lordship's family and suite will immediately occupy.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

THE HEALTH OF TOWNS BILL.

On Monday, there was a general Conference of Delegates from the various metropolitan parishes, Brighton, and other provincial towns, at the COURT HOUSE, Marylebone, with reference to the bill introduced into Parliament by Government, for the improvement of the health of towns.

The Rector of Marylebone, Dr. Spry, was appointed to the chair, at which time Mr. Slight, the Town Clerk, and a numerous deputation from Brighton, and deputations from nearly every parish in the metropolis and its suburbs, were in attendance. Sir B. Hall, Bart, M.P., Sir James Hamilton, Bart., and a large number of the vestry of Marylebone, were also present.

Several delegates intimated the intention of the localities which they represented to oppose the bill.

Mr. W. L. Clarke (Chair) said that the trustees of that parish would support the bill as a sanatory measure, but nothing beyond it. They had 85,000 inhabitants, and had out £5000 a year in sanatory regulations; they were, therefore, determined to oppose being made into a Government district. (Hear, hear.) Sir William Clay had determined to oppose the measure. (Hear, hear.)

Resolutions were agreed to in opposition to the bill, and expressive of an opinion, that, under the pretence of sanatory enactment, it was really and essentially a political bill, designed to extend the power of the Government at the expense of popular institutions, inasmuch as it strikes at the root of those locally elected bodies by means of which the great part of the English people has at all times been kept alive, while it altogether passes over the most essential element in the improvement of the health and morals of the town populations, viz., the free admission of light and air, by the repeal of the unjust, unequal, and oppressive window tax

At the meeting of the Marylebone vestry, on Saturday, a series of resolutions were brought forward, which had been adopted at a numerous meeting of the parochial committee, recommending a prompt and determined opposition to the above bill; and suggesting that a deputation should immediately wait upon the Government, and also hold conferences with other metropolitan boards, and members of Parliament, with a view of defeating the measure.

THE NEW SHERIFFS.—The Lord Mayor has named Mr. James Hartley, Chairman of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Packet Company, for Sheriff for the ensuing year, and it is expected that that gentleman and Mr. William Cubitt will be put in nomination on Midsummer-day next. Both gentlemen have expressed their readiness to accept the office if elected.

THE JUDGES AND CORPORATION AT ST. PAUL'S.—Sunday being the first Sunday in Easter Term, the Judges and the Corporation went in state to St. Paul's Cathedral, where they attended divine service. Full choral service was performed, and a sermon preached by the Lord Bishop of London, who selected for his text the tenth verse of the second chapter of the second epistle by St. James—"Whoever keepeth the whole law, and yet offendeth in one point, is guilty of all."

IRISH IMMIGRATION INTO LONDON.—The importation of Irish paupers, so much complained of in Liverpool, has now begun to wear a threatening aspect in London. On Sunday, the Prussian Eagle, from Cork, and the Emulo, from Dublin, landed 1200 Irish paupers at Alderman's-stairs, Lower East Smithfield. The new comers, who were in the most wretched state of distress, were forthwith distributed over the eastern part of the metropolis. The same vessels landed 1200 Irish paupers on Sunday week.

LOSS OF THE "TWEED."—On Monday, a meeting of merchants interested in the late melancholy loss of the Tweed took place at the London Tavern, with the view of raising a subscription for the master and crew of the Spanish brig Ensulo, by whose gallant and praiseworthy efforts many of the passengers and crew of this ill-fated vessel escaped with their lives. Mr. Pole took the chair. Amongst those present were Mr. Baring, Captain Mangles, Captain Chappell, R.N., and a number of merchants connected with the trade of South America. A statement was made that her Majesty's Government had voted to Captain Camp a gold medal and £500, the committee of Lloyd's a silver medal to the captain, a bronze medal to the mate, Villaverde, and £270 to be divided amongst the crew of the Emulo. The Royal Mail Steam-packet Company had voted £200 to Captain Camp, £100 to the mate, and to the crew of the Emulo £150. A list of other subscriptions was also read, which was greatly increased by the gentlemen present. A committee of thirteen was then appointed to take charge of the present and future subscription, and to apply them to the objects intended.

SESSIONAL COURT.—The Court was opened on Monday morning for public business. Mr. G. Clive, the Judge, presided. There was a vast number of complaints to be heard, which are likely to occupy the attention of the Court for several days. The Judge has determined not to hear any attorney's clerk, or any agent on behalf of the parties, except a barrister or attorney.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS IN THE METROPOLIS.—The Births last week amounted to 1288—of which 654 were males, and 644 females—being 151 less than the previous week. The Deaths amounted to 981—493 males, and 488 females—being 70 less than the previous week, and 67 more than the weekly average for the last five spring qs.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE RIVER.—On Sunday evening, a small wherry, containing six persons, was upset in the Thames off Milbank, and a young woman named Anne Jervis, residing at 42, Salamanca-row, Lambeth, was drowned. All the others were saved by the exertions of the crew of a boat; and, in their exertions to get out of the way or an approaching steamer, the brother of the young woman who was drowned dropped his scull in the water, and in reaching after it fell overboard, when the whole of them got into the boat and upset the boat. The accident was observed from the shore, and the whole were saved with the exception of the female.

DEATH OF MRS. DISRAELI.—Accounts have been received of the demise of the lady, the wife of Benjamin Disraeli, Esq., the celebrated leader of the Conservative party in the House of Commons. Mrs. Disraeli was the widow of Mr. Wyndham Lewis, M.P. for Maidstone, when he was united to the present Mr. Disraeli, in her sixty-fifth year, and died at her seat in Buckinghamshire, much regretted by a numerous circle of friends.

ACCIDENT TO LORD DE LA WARR.—Lord LAWRENCE.—At the Irish Grand Military Steeple Chase, which came off at Dunboyne, on Monday last, Lord St. Lawrence had his collar bone broken, by his mare falling, and rolling over him. He was immediately attended by Dr. Hayden, after which he was conveyed into town, accompanied by Captain Wilkis and the Earl of Howth.

DEATH OF MR. NIGHTINGALE.—The Liverpool papers announce the death of William Nightingale, Esq., one of the proprietors of the Liverpool Chronicle. He had been all his life connected with the Lancashire press, and his uncle, Mr. Harrop, was the proprietor of the first paper published in Manchester, the Founder. The Liverpool papers eulogise the private character of the deceased gentleman.

INCENDIARISM IN ESSEX.—On Thursday night (last week) three fires broke out within a quarter of an hour of each other, and nearly simultaneously, in the parish of Burnham, upon farms in the several occupations of Mr. Parnell, of Burnham Hall; Mr Rogers, of the Green Farm; and Mr. Henry Crouch, of Quarry Garden Farm. At Mr. Parnell's a large barn, four stacks of hay, and several buildings, were destroyed. At Mr. Rogers's, one wheat and several haulm stacks, two barns, and other outbuildings. At Mr. Crouch's a wheat and several barns. The hay and other stock in the yards were rescued from the flames. The police have apprehended a man on suspicion.

A NEW POTATO CROP.—The Perth Courier makes the gratifying and important announcement that three successful crops of potatoes, brought to maturity in 13 months, have been raised at Pitfour Castle, by Sir John Stewart Richardson's gardener, each all produced sound crops. There was a slight taint upon the young tubers of the first crop, but that gradually disappeared. It will be remembered that similar experiments made at the same place last year at this season, had very different results—except in those cases in which the tainted stems were cut off and those having prevailed extensively, were then and there [illegible]

SUNDAY TRAINS.—A requisition has been prepared for presentation to the Lord Provost of Glasgow, desiring him to call a public meeting to elicit an expression of public opinion respecting the stoppage of Sunday trains by the Directors of the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway. This railway has put down all passenger trains on Sundays, and the inhabitants of their stoppage at Sunday trains has rendered travelling on that day, however urgent the necessity, impossible. The requisition has been numerously signed. The result is expected to be a petition to Parliament to compel all railway companies to run a sufficient number of trains on Sundays for the accommodation of the public.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

ROYAL ASSENT. The Royal Assent was given by Commission to the Mutiny Bill, the Marine Mutiny Bill, the Militia Bill, and Fairs Clauses Bill.

The Lords Commissioners were the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Montrose, and the Marquess of Lansdowne.

THE MARQUESS OF LANSDOWNE said he should not put any questions to inquiries relative to the execution which has recently taken place at Bury St. Edmund's, to which their Lordships' attention was called a few nights ago by the Marquess of Westmeath. He could inform the noble Marquis and the House that the greatest decorum was observed on that occasion, and that the unfortunate person did not undergo a greater degree of suffering than was absolutely necessary for the purpose of carrying into effect the sentence which had been pronounced upon her.

THE CUSTOMS DUTIES BILL.

The Earl of CLARENDON moved the second reading of this bill.

Lord STANLEY having made a few observations upon it,

The Duke of MONTROSE expressed his disapproval of the measure, on the ground that the Government had neglected the interests of the home distillers; at the same time he would not oppose the bill being read to a Select Committee.

The Earl of HARDWICKE seconded the observations.

Lord CAMPBELL hoped that inquiry was necessary, and said that the Government must have overlooked the measure.

Lord STANLEY said he should support the amendment, as he considered that inquiry was necessary.

The Earl of CLARENDON then defended the course pursued by the Government.

Lord MONTAGGLE was in favour of inquiry.

On a division the numbers were—

For the second reading	.. .. ..	57
For the amendment	.. .. ..	48
Majority for the second reading	..	9

The bill was therefore read a second time.

The House adjourned at half-past nine.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

PRIVATE BUSINESS.—Considerable time was devoted to private business.

Monday, the 3rd of May, was appointed for the third reading, of the Factories Bill

THE GOVERNMENT EDUCATION MEASURE.

The order of the day for going into Committee of Supply having been read,

Sir W. CLAY, on the motion that the Speaker should leave the chair, with a view to the grant for the promotion of Education, moved—"That it is expedient that in any plan for promoting the education of the people by pecuniary assistance from the State, provision should be made that, in schools receiving such assistance, the opportunity of participating in all instruction other than religious should be afforded to children whose parents may object to the religious doctrines taught in such schools."

Mr. CHRISTIE opposed the amendment, and said he should support the Government plan.

Mr. VILLIERS supported the amendment.

Mr. FORBES and Mr. MUNTZ shortly addressed the House.

A long debate ensued; but, as Sir G. GREY observed, in the course of it, the discussion turned upon mere repetition of points which had been fully discussed during the three preceding nights.

At midnight the House divided, when Sir W. Clay's amendment was rejected by 210 to 74.

The House soon afterwards adjourned.

NEWMARKET FIRST SPRING MEETING.—FRIDAY.

Handicap Sweepstakes of 10 sovs each, for three and four-year-olds.	D.M.
Vert Vert	1
Don Cæsar	2
Sweepstakes of 50 sovs each for three-yr-old fillies, 8st 7lb each.	R.M.
Duke of Bedford's Bridle	1
Lord Exeter's f by Herman Platoff, out of Macromma	2

The Newmarket Stakes of 50 sovs each, h ft; for three-yr-old colts, 8st 7lb; 8st 9lb. D.M.

Mr Fetley's Cossack
Mr. Bouverie's War Eagle	2

S.s ran. Won by a length.

Sweepstakes of 100 sovs each, h ft. Last half of Ab. M.—Sir J. Hawley's Piccinino walked over.

Swerpstakes of 100 sovs each, h ft, 8st 4lb each. T.Y.C.—Mr. Newton's Reminiscence walked over.

DEATH OF THE BISHOP OF SODOR AND MAN.—We regret to hear of the death of the recently-appointed Bishop of Sodor and Man (Dr. W. A. Shirley) which took place on Wednesday last. His Lordship was the Hampton Lecturer of the present year, and had delivered only two of the Lectures when his course was thus unfortunately ended. His illness was occasioned by sleeping in a damp bed at Liverpool, on his last journey from Oxford to the Isle of Man.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

THE PRUSSIAN DIET.

In the sitting of the Diet of the 13th, the draught of the Address was materially modified, both with regard to the observations of the Diet by the speech of the Chancellor, and to the suggestions of the Committee, to which the former had referred. In particular, to what the latter had proposed in favour of the Jews, it was added that the Diet, while it would not refuse to take into consideration any petitions which might be presented to it for the amelioration of the civil position of the Jews, was of opinion that it was not competent to it to interfere in the matter. The Address was then carried by a majority of 278 to 106. It was as follows:—

"We, the Estates, have assembled around the throne of your Majesty, and have received with joy the declaration of your Majesty, that you have called us together, in order that we may, by the communication of the views of the different provinces, which many of us have had the opportunity of acquiring in the course of their public duties, assist your Majesty's counsels. For this object your Majesty has graciously granted us the right to address you with our opinions and wishes. We feel ourselves impelled to co-operate with your Majesty for the profit and welfare of our beloved country—those whom we represent must be alive to the conviction, that while we recognise, and, as faithful subjects of the throne, value the representative rights granted to us by our Kings are dear to us, and that we preserve and cherish such as powers beyond all price.

"If the Diet, by its deliberations, if your Majesty by the grounds which it may respectfully adduce, should be convinced of the existence of such discrepancies between the earlier laws and these later ordinances, we do not doubt that your Majesty's wisdom and justice will choose a way which may lead to their reconciliation in a manner consistent with the welfare of Prussia, well re-founded on the strength of the foundation of principle, and in a secure and well-regulated relation to other States."

The Address, as thus amended, was voted by an immense majority.

SPAIN.

El Madrid papers of the 16th state that the Minister of the Interior presented to the Chamber of Deputies that day a project of law for the sale of the property of the Jesuits and the Inquisition, and of the property of the clergy of the province, and the Ministers of finance, three others, relative to the sale of the property of certain corporations, and to the capitalization into Three per Cents. Stock of the arrears due to all classes of the State; and to the claims of the passive classes in particular. M Henderson, representing the foreign creditors, had addressed a memorial to the Minister of Finance, urging him to take measures for the settlement of the foreign debt. The Madrid papers state that the Carlist party would gain no advantage if the Queen were to marry a Prince of Portugal, with that object in view. The latter, it says, would be looked on by the Spaniards as a foreigner, and as Queen Victoria's husband. Don Carlos, Don Sebastian had not yet reached Lord Aranjuez. He (Queen Isabella) was to be detained at Cardinal Van Hulen, Osorio, and several other Progressists emigrants.

IRELAND.

SERIOUS OUTRAGES. The Irish provincial papers record outrages, some of a serious character. On the night of Wednesday week, an armed party appeared before the house of [illegible] Esq., at Ballyhea, in the county of Cork, and demanded Mr. Carpenter, who had been of late [illegible]. On his asking what they wanted, to which they replied, "Arms," and he rejoined, "You must have wanted, to which they replied, "Arms," and he rejoined, "You must have them." Crowe proceeded to his room, as they supposed, to get the arms, and [illegible] Mr. Carpenter [illegible] with a double-barrelled gun, one of which he [illegible] and fired it, but missed aim. Crowe asked [illegible] he [illegible] Mr. Carpenter [illegible] with a double-barrelled gun, one of which he [illegible] and fired it, but missed aim. Crowe asked he believe to be sent to [illegible] when [illegible] Crowe asked "Are you there, boys?" "Yes!" was the reply;" upon which Crowe and his servant fired in the direction whence voices were heard, and each shot took effect. The one fired by Crowe was fatal to a man named Privy, that fired by the servant to one named Fitzgerald. Having fired, both master and man rushed out, and the remaining assailants, two in number, ran away. Fitzgerald was given into custody of the police, and has been recognised as an old offender.

There are other cases of outrage recorded in Limerick, Clare, and Tipperary. In one instance, a farmer's house was attacked, robbed of a gun, and, it being day-time, they insisted on having dinner prepared for them, waited while it was being cooked, partook of it, and departed. In another case, a constable was discovered on the murder and robbery of a pay-clerk, and one of the conspirators, a man named Meany, has been committed.

TUMULTS IN THE PROVINCES.—There have been manifestations of tumult at Youghal, in the county of Cork; and at Tuam and Banagher, in the King's County. At the two former places nothing serious occurred; but at the latter, the outbreak assumed at one time a very alarming appearance. It is thus described in a letter published in the Western Star:—"On Thursday (last week), about one o'clock, P.M., a large body of labourers, numbering about 300 strong, marched into town from the far famed demesne of Rape Mills. Just as they were entering the town, they were met by Mr. Samuel H. Kendall, J.P., Chairman of the Relief Committee, who exhorted them in the mildest terms to keep from outrage, and commit no violation of the laws, assuring them at the same time that the Government and gentry of the country were doing their utmost to contribute to their employment [illegible] Kendall, who will be long remembered for his [illegible] was [illegible] by a number of the mob, who commenced [illegible] and [illegible] like mad. After [illegible] shouting in the most frightful manner, and rushed pell-mell into the yard attached to the [illegible] Here they [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

EXHIBITION OF THE NEW SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

THE Thirteenth Annual Exhibition of the New Society of Painters in Water Colours opened on Monday last, at the Gallery of the Society, No. 53, Pall-Mall. The Exhibition consists of 316 Works of Art, contributed by fifty-three members, eight of whom are ladies. If we compare it with former Exhibitions, we shall find a general, but not a great improvement; and if we contrast it with the labours of the Old Water Colour Society, we shall find it infinitely superior in subject pictures, but sadly deficient in landscapes, for which the Old Society has long been deservedly distinguished, and wherein we believe the Exhibition that opens on Monday next, will be found to maintain its wonted superiority. The two Societies can, and do exist, independent of one another, and the members of both would appear to have less of envy and more of emulation about them than is commonly reported to belong to rival artists and rival societies. It may be necessary to remind our readers that the Exhibition is limited to the works of "Members," for the Gallery is small, and the fifty-three constituting the Society are more than sufficient to cover its walls, and to attract and repay attention.

No. 1. "Lane Scene in Kent." Henry Jutsum. Pretty—but that is all. There is a much better work by Mr. Jutsum in the present Exhibition.

2. "Grecian Girl." C. H. Weigall. Small, full-length, seated. Her head is covered with the coloured close-fitting cap of her country, and, not like Wordsworth's Grecian Maid, "adorned with wreaths of myrtle."

4. "Group of Roses." Fanny Harris. Nicely grouped and coloured. Ladies seem particularly fitted to excel in flower and fruit painting. There are some capital instances of this in the present Exhibition.

10. "Cavan's Wall." F. W. Topham. A circular drawing, and engraved in our present paper. The subject is simple—an old man leaning over a young girl kneeling at her devotions before an image of our Saviour on the Cross, carved in relief, on a rude heap of stone. The incident is somewhat similar to a small picture, by Mr. Goodall, at the British Institution, and also engraved in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. The treatment, however, is different. This, indeed, is a charming drawing, and we are glad to have it in our power to add that it is already "sold."

22. "La Reine des Fleurs." F. Rochard. A small three-quarter portrait of a girl in white, holding a basket of roses, placing one in her bosom at the same time, and looking round. The composition is tasteful, but there is some dirty colouring about the shoulder. This, also is "sold."

29. "Vanity! Vanity!" Alfred H. Taylor. A small full-length of a kitchen-maid engaged in peeling turnips, and placing a rose to her cheek, which she contemplates, with extreme satisfaction, in a small mirror on the wall. At her back is the kitchen copper, with a bottle of blacking upon it; and, in the back-ground, a leg of mutton is suspended—this we should remove. There is a touch of nature in the composition, and the incident is capitally told. The execution is good.

33. "Buildings on the Bridge, at Vernon, on the Seine, Normandy E. H. Wehnert. There is a capital effect of light and shade in this picture. The water in the foreground is but indifferent. To our tastes this is Mr. Wehnert's best picture in the Exhibition, though he has spent more time and thought, as we shall see, on a larger and less successful work.

42. "The Attack." G. Howse. A spirit-stirring little sketch, slight but effective. This, also, is "sold."

43. "The Nile during the Inundation"—Thebes. Henry Warren. One of Mr. Warren's long drawings, with his yellow effects of sun and sand. It seems a little unfinished. The general design is good.

44. "Prince Charles Edward in the Island of Skye." John Absolon. The young Pretender is represented asleep in a cave, with a trusty Highlander keeping watch at his feet. This is cleverly composed, and the expressions of weariness and watchfulness are capitally rendered If we have an objection, it is that the red tartan is a little overdone. This also is marked "sold."

50. "Helvelin Borrowdale Fells and Langdale Pikes, looking over

"MUSCLE GATHERERS ON THE FRENCH COAST."—PAINTED BY J. J. JENKINS.

Bassenthwaite Water." E. Duncan. Large, and that is all. Both distance and foreground clumsily managed.

55. "La Prigioniera." Henry Warren. An attempt to embody the following lines:—

> Oh! wherefore sought she daily at one spot,
> That one returning ray? 'Twas the same light
> That on her native hills fell cheeringly
> But in the recollection of those hills
> Was surely more of sorrow than of joy,
> And she was sad enough. Yet ever still
> In very thankfulness she hailed the sun.

Mr. Warren has given us a kneeling female figure—with the sun shining upon a face of subdued sorrow. The lower part of the figure is not sufficiently in shade, and there is some bad drawing in the hands.

61. "Fishing the Weir, Swansea-bay." E. Duncan. Clever and quite in the style and manner of poor William Collins. We are glad to observe that it is "sold." It is worth twenty of No. 50, by the same artist.

65. "Gleaners Resting." J. H. Mole. Two girls resting on a stile—a mill in the distance. There is much sweetness in the face of the younger girl. The trees and flowers are of too general a character.

69. "Going to the Chase." G. Dodgson. An Exterior, with an old Hampton Court-like Hall, and Nash-like figures in the foreground. Here, again, the trees are slighted.

72. "St. Patrick's Day—Scene in the West of Ireland." F. W. Topham. A large and clever drawing, occupying the centre of one side of the Gallery. There is surely a want of concentrated purpose in the composition. Some of the groups are good, and the colouring, in parts, especially clever.

79. "Sweet Summer-Time." G. Dodgson. A semi-circular drawing, with stone steps like as at Haddon, on the left of the spectator, and a fountain on the right. Mr. Dodgson appends a quotation, which we we copy, because the passage is pretty in itself, and is, moreover, by Mr. Longfellow, an American poet, who is hardly as well known as he deserves to be:—

> Pleasant it was, when woods were green
> And winds were soft and low,
> To lie amid some sylvan scene,
> Where the long drooping boughs between
> Shadows dark and sunlight sheen
> Alternate come and go.

87. "Sunday Morning." John Absolon. This is a country churchyard, peopled with picturesque groups. The incident of the children playing on the tomb-stone is somewhat out of character. Hogarth's beadle, in one of the "Idle and Industrious" Plates, would have taught them, had they been older, an admonitory lesson.

91. "Devotion." Alfred H. Taylor. A pretty, Frank-Stonish-looking girl reading the Bible to her mother and her lover. The mother has fallen asleep, and the lover takes the opportunity of pressing the girl's hand. The dress of the girl is prettily painted

94. "In Dartmouth Castle—a Relic of the Times of Queen Elizabeth." W. Collingwood. A rusty old cannon, crowned by a couple of red hollyhocks, and evidently suggested by Landseer's "Peace" and "War," in the last Royal Academy Exhibition.

100. "Hop Gathering." C. H. Weigall. A large drawing, wanting in effect. The same colour and character throughout.

115. "Cromwell Reproved by his Daughter on her Death-bed." L. Hicks. Mrs. Claypole is in bed holding up an admonitory finger at her sther. The Protector turns aside thoughtfully, with his hand on his brow. Both are too pretty; and Cromwell with green velve breeches, is quite preposterous.

123. "Morning." George B. Campion. This is a composition drawing; large in size, and without character.

128. "The Meeting of Jacob and Rachel." H. P. Riviere. Too ambitious. One cannot but lament to see so much art expended useless on a subject beyond the reach of the painter.

141. "The Spire of Harfleur." R. K. Penson. Too bright in effect Mr. Penson should study both Roberts and Prout who never offend in this way.

151. "Caller Herring." Jane S. Egerton. A regular Edinburgh fishwife and capitally sketched.

175. "The Death of Jean Goujon, the Celebrated French sculptor E. H. Wehnert. Jean Goujon was shot in 1572, during the Massacre of St. Bartholomew while at work on his scaffolding, finishing some bas-reliefs in one of the courts of the Louvre. We cannot commend this work so thoroughly as we could wish. The emotion on the man's face is scarcely suitable to his end, and the action of the figure is somewhat poor. Mr. Wehnert has done and can still do better.

187. "The Happy Time—Brittany." Two full-length figures—a girl and a man—leaning against a wall, and looking affectionately at one another. The girl's face is exquisitely simple. This is "sold."

191 and 201. "Grapes" and "Still Life." Mrs. Margetts. Almost equal to Mr. Lance. High praise, but not by any means undeserved.

196. "Meeting Room of the Brewers' Corporation, at Antwerp." L Haghe. Eleven full-length figures, forming a kind of Conversation Piece. The light and shade and truth of colour and execution quite wonderful. Mr. Haghe (always good) was never so good before. It is really a disgrace to our "patrons" that this is still unsold.

EXHIBITION OF THE NEW SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

207. "Going with the Stream—Brittany." Jos. J. Jenkins. The happy couple of 187 in an open boat, but a far inferior drawing.

212. "The Unc 's Charge." E. H. Corbould. This is from the "Children in the Wood," but poor and spiritless. Mr. Corbould is really retrograding in his art.

215. "Haddon." John Chase. Hard and harsh, but reminds us of the spot, and of Creswick, who has done so much to perpetuate its beauties.

218. "John the Baptist Preaching." Henry Warren. We can only repeat what we have said before of Mr. Riviere's "Jacob and Rachel."

222. "Lord Thomas and Fair Annet." Jane S. Egerton. Contains some good character and colour, but the story is not well told.

229. "The Farrier's Shed." G. H. Laporte. We have seen, and still can see, coloured lithographs of the same subject infinitely superior to this.

251. "The Streamlet." Henry Jutsum. The best landscape in the Exhibition, and so some one has thought it to be for it is sold.

260. "Muscle Gatherers—on the French Coast." Jos. J. Jenkins. A circular picture, with a pretty girl in the foreground quitting the coast, and turning her face to the sea and smiling. The general arrangement is excellent, and the colouring good. We have engraved it for our present number.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

"I Due Foscari," although, in some respects, differing greatly from Verdi's other operas, has this feature in common with them all, that repeated hearing greatly enhances its merits, which cannot be fully appreciated at first. Of the masterly treatment of many parts of the work we had no adequate idea till its repetition forced the conviction upon us that this opera is inferior in scientific skill to none of Verdi's, while it contains a greater flow of melody than any other of his works. The chef d'œuvre, in a musical point of view, of this opera, is, we think, the scene in the prison, which, from beginning to end, is admirable. It commences with Fraschini's recitative and arioso, then the fine duet, "Ah! non Marria," between Montenegro and Fraschini, which is followed by a superb trio when the Doge enters, and it concludes with the quartet, which we specially pointed out last week. The trio is one of those masterpieces of harmony in which Verdi delights; and here may be easily recognised the hand of the composer. The combination of voices and the melody vary continually with the conflicting feelings of the actors, preserving, at the same time, unity as a whole. Nothing could be more splendid than the ensemble produced by Fraschini and Coletti in the first part of the trio we have just mentioned. Their voices, both so full and so powerful, their styles so admirably adapted to each other, render it quite a treat to listen to them.

Madame Montenegro's style of performance in this opera keeps up the feeling of pleasure which so perfect an ensemble produces. It is not often considered how greatly the effect of music is improved by being executed by artists of the same school and the same stamp. Here the advantage of such a combination may be clearly seen, and gives a perfection to the cast of this opera which few others enjoy to so great a degree. Of Coletti's performance in this opera we spoke last week, and in terms of praise certainly not exaggerated; for it would be difficult to over-estimate his performance of the Doge. But Fraschini delights and surprises us every time we hear him in this opera: the absence of that effort which somewhat marred his performance before, the admirable taste and feeling, the pure flowing style, and the softness and tenderness of his tones when the occasion requires it, render his impersonation of Jacopo a delightful performance. On Tuesday, we had the opportunity of contrasting him with a still greater favourite, Gardoni, who appeared in a scene of "La Favorita," and o observing again the remarkable difference of voice, character of execution, and of type, if we may so express it, of two artists, both admirable in their respective styles.

On Tuesday Perrot made his first pirouette this season before a London audience, and was greeted tumultuously. He is certainly the first of male dancers, and the only one whose performance we can look at without a slight feeling of the ridiculous mingling itself with our astonishment of their feats; and his very ugliness, which partakes of the grotesque, gives a superior ideality to his performances. He appeared in a divertissement, with Rosati, who was enthusiastically applauded: above all, in a certain little step, which for neatness, for precision, and for grace, we have rarely seen surpassed. This danseuse has certainly made an extraordinary advance in public favour since her début, and we remain in doubt whether her remarkable merits were concealed from some cause at her first appearance, or whether the English climate, English gold, or English applause, have stimulated her to efforts, of which, excellent dancer as she from the first appeared, she might not have been nevertheless deemed capable.

On Thursday night, there was a combination of all the talents of the theatre. The female voices were, unfortunately, all labouring under violent attacks of that influenza which is so prevalent at the present moment; but all the male singers were in excellent order. Nothing could be more delightful than the contrast between Gardoni's plaintive tones in the part of the love-stricken

CAVAN'S WELL."—PAINTED BY F. W. TOPHAM.

Nemorino, and Lablache's joyous, inexhaustible drollery. The performance of the great Neapolitan in this charming opera is well known, and as popular as all his parts, whether tragic or comic, invariably are; while the charming "Vera fortuna Lagrima," and the other morceaux assigned to Nemorino, are specially adapted to Gardoni's voice, and his exquisite style. Besides this, the last act of the "Foscari" was given, and all the danseuses of the theatre, beginning with Cerito, who made her rentrée, appeared in turn. The combination, in the ballet, of so many and such various talents, all striving for supremacy, has been observed to resemble, in the feeling of excitement it produces, the spectacle of a horse race. The advantages of the system have been proved ever since the memorable pas de deux given three years since, while the astonishing effect of the "Pas de Quatre," and the "Pas des Déesses," is fresh in the memory of every Opera goer. Her Majesty and his Royal Highness Prince Albert honoured the performance with their presence, attended by Lady Charlemont, Lady Augustus Bruce, Honourable Miss Kerr, Lord Morton, General Wemyss, and the Honourable Captain Gordon.

Mdlle. Jenny Lind.—This celebrated artiste, in spite of all predictions to the contrary, has now arrived in this country. She was present at the performance at Her Majesty's Theatre on Saturday, and the news of her arrival spreading like wildfire, every glass was directed to the box where she sat. Perhaps no artist has ever created such interest before her début as Mdlle. Jenny Lind: the very uncertainty of her arrival giving additional importance to every particular concerning her. Her first appearance is anxiously awaited by all lovers of art, and even by all those who, careless of art for its own sake, are, nevertheless, swayed by the whim and fashion of the moment. Her début in England, so important an event in the life of an artist whose fame is now established beyond the reach of vicissitude, will, singularly enough, take place in the part of Alice, in "Robert le Diable," the same in a portion of which she performed on the outset of her theatrical career after the years of discouragement which followed her prosperous childhood. If this part, though containing delightful music, is not very prominent as regards the singing, it makes up for it as regards the acting. The character of Alice is touching and beautiful, and calls forth those dramatic resources which Mdlle. Lind possesses in the most extraordinary degree. If her acting be art it is truly the perfection of art, which, we have often heard, consists in concealing it. What is the most extraordinary feature of her genius is its versatility. Those who are acquainted with the story of her life, and have watched, in her speaking countenance, the depth of thought and intellect, and the profound sensibility, which illuminate it, could hardly believe that her comic power is equal to her tragic genius. Lablache, who went to see her on her arrival, was amazed by her power as a mimic. The opinion of this great artist of the voice of the Swedish prima donna may be instructing to our readers. He says that each note is like a pearl, and, on another occasion, he exclaimed that here was the "singing of heaven." She pronounces Italian so faultlessly, that we hear she corrected the prompter himself in a provincial pronunciation!

There has not been a great deal of novelty during the week in the dramatic world, but various new pieces are in preparation. A five-act comedy—it is said by Lady Dufferin is underlined at the Haymarket; and a new farce, "Wanted a Heroine," by the author of "To Parents and Guardians," will be produced next week at the Lyceum; the burlesque of "The Wood Demon" being also in rehearsal. The Strand is about to be opened by Mr. Fox Cooper, at reduced prices; and the termination of the engagement of Mr. Higgler's Mammoth Establishment is approaching at Drury Lane.

Mrs. Butler will appear at the Princess' on Monday evening, in her original character of Julia; and Mr. Creswick is engaged, and will perform Master Walter. A new farce is also in rehearsal at this theatre.

The Lyceum company, which has worked so well together for three years, will be scattered in the course of a few weeks: Mr. and Mrs. Keeley will make a long tour through the provinces; and Mr. Wigan is engaged, we hear, at the Haymarket.

ADELPHI

"Jenny Lind" made another appearance at this theatre on Monday evening, and was received with favour equal to that shown to her a few nights before, at the Lyceum. A pièce de circonstance of the kind, is, as we observed when speaking of the other, beyond the pale of criticism. The only object to be gained is that of keeping the audience in such continuous fits of laughter, that they cannot stop to think about the probability or absurdity of what they are hearing or, Allusions to passing topics must be plentifully introduced; squibs must be thrown about with unsparing liberality, more or less personal; puns of any degree of badness may be distributed for delivery amongst the chief characters; and the garnish of some light popular music, will, altogether, make up a very passable entremet.

The plot of the Adelphi "Jenny Lind" is not so natural as that of Mr. Reach's piece at the Lyceum; which, by the way, is not saying a very great deal for its probability. And the heroine is personated by Mr. Wright, who makes up after Mr. Mitchell's portrait, and sings what we presume is a song, in the Swedish dialect, to the tune of "My Beautiful Rhine;" and winks at the pit until its inmates cannot contain themselves for laughter; and, at the end, runs off to the railway, the train of which is seen just starting. In a hurried mixed costume of his own trousers and a lady's "Polka" and bonnet. The author is happy who writes for the Adelphi, explosions of laughter, from its merry audience, reward not only all the speeches intended to be jokes, but all that are not. Mr. Paul Bedford appears as the mighty bass Lablache; and Mr. Bunn, Mr. Lumley, and Signor Costa are each introduced. All this was the weakest part of the affair, for the reason that not the slightest attempt was made on the part of the performers to "make up" after the originals of their rôles Miss Woolgar had a trifling part, which her lively intelligence raised to an agreeable feature in the bagatelle. In a concerted piece of music, she was loudly and deservedly applauded. Mr Wright was called for at the conclusion There is no doubt that "Jenny Lind" will reign as long at the Adelphi as she will at the Lyceum.

SURREY.

An interlude, called "The Buffalo Gals," intended to introduce various lady members of the Surrey company as female Ethiopian Serenaders, was brought out here on Wednesday evening. The piece itself is below notice, being even bad as a mere vehicle for the songs, and might be cut away altogether with advantage; but the seven young ladies for whose appearance such a lavish expenditure in white dresses and burnt cork was gone to, performed their parts very creditably The band consists of a violin, banjo, three tambourines, bones, and (as the bill observes) "the powerful triangle." The young lady who plays the violin—somewhat of a novel exhibition by the way—handles the bow in very good style and "bones" is unexceptionable. She has evidently taken a lesson from her immortal predecessor at St. James's. There is the same inherent belief in the excellent qualities of "Old Dan Tucker," the same unfeigned delight at being permitted to pronounce his name; the same deep regret at hearing that he was unfortunate enough, one day, to die in "Old Kentucky." Miss E. Terry was the principal singer, and acquitted herself very well. We do not, however, think that the extravaganza will do much for the treasury. The songs ought to have been parodies, suited to female performers; all the original had been heard "to death;" and somewhat wearied. The applause was general, but not enthusiastic The house was well filled.

Some more "Female American Serenaders," rejoicing in the names of Mesdames Cora, Jumba, Wowski, Miami, Turico, Womba, and Rosa—young ladies whose performances, according to the announcement in the ad vertisements, "have been made the theme of eulogium by the provincial press" made their first appearance on Wednesday, at the St. James's Assembly Rooms. The room was crowded to excess, and it was evident that much was expected from the oddity of the entertainment. This expectation, however, was far from realised, although the exertions of the singers were deserving of praise. The ladies were dressed in Indian costumes, and bespangled with that economical species of jewellery peculiar to the stage. Their faces were corked after the most approved fashion; and the audience were not disposed to find fault with the varie y of tints displayed. The songs selected for the occasion were tolerably well chosen; many of them having already won the favour of the public at the performances of the original Ethiopian Serenaders. The airs which had the recommendation of novelty were not of such a character as to be likely to equal in popularity "Lucy Neal," "Mary Blane," "Buffalo Gals," and the other choicest morgeaux of the Ethiopian school. The accompaniments were played on the banjo, the tambourine, and castanets, which last were substituted for the bones. In the centre of the stage was a seraphine, at which the mistress of the ceremonies presided. Some dissatisfaction was expressed at the end of the first part of the performance; but, as the entertainment proceeded, the singers increased in confidence and animation; and the audience appeared at last to come to the conclusion that the female American Serenaders "were not so bad after all." But they have not made a decided hit.

ORNIBOMANCIE.—The performance at present to be witnessed at the Hanoverian Rooms is a very curious one. It professes to be an exhibition of the power of mesmerism; but it is deprived of its more experimental and quasi medical character, and is blended with artistic effects, which are really very beautiful. The magnetiser is Mdlle Laurent. Any of the spectators may hand in a card suggesting a pose, or scene, for some sculpture or the drama; and the idea is embodied by Mdlle. Ida Prudence (the "Ecstatica"), while in the magnetic sleep Of the mode of operation we cannot speak; but the attitudes struck are dramatic, and so artistic that they might be taken as studies.

In reading Mrs. Nisbett's performance at the Haymarket last week, we inadvertently spoke of Constance in the "Hunchback." It should have been in the "Love Chase."

MUSIC.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Bellini's "Sonnambula" was given for the début of Marlo, on Tuesday evening. The handsome and popular tenor was received with great acclamations, and it was some time before he was permitted to commence his part of Elvino. He did not acquire the full possession of his magnificent voice until the second act; but when the moment came for Elvino to describe his despair at the pretended infidelity of his Amina, then did Mario burst forth with a passion and pathos that carried the whole auditory with him. His skill and energy seem to increase every season, and we never recollect an instance of any artist who has risen so completely, step by step, as Mario, since we were present at his first appearance, at the Académie Royale, in Paris. He was rapturously encored in the adagio, and called for after the scena.

Madame Persiani's Amina, has for Lucia, is an exquisite performance, vocally and dramatically. In fioriture and ornaments of vocalisation, she is still unrivalled. The sensation she created in her two cavatinas, was, as the Times truly observes, quite electrical. Her intonation, which is not always to be depended upon, was but little at fault, and the marvellous facility of her throat was never more conspicuous. It requires a language of itself to afford any notion of her astonishing vocal feats. The vigour and éclat of her singing, as well as the finish and taste of her execution, proved that with her genius, she has attained a school of bravura, which, novel, and fanciful admirably adapted to the sentiment of Bellini's music, and the style of the composer. The ovations at her superb achievements were incessant.

Signor Tamburini's gentlemanlike assumption and expressive singing of the Count raised this trifling character into importance, and he was much applauded in the "Vi Ravvisa." Mdlle. Nau, who played the Lisa has interpolated a scena of Donizetti in the last act, which was certainly not in good taste, although her excellent interpretation gained the hearty applause of the audience. She possesses a beautiful voice, which with care and cultivation, may advance her position materially. She is wanting in ease and graceful deportment on the stage, on which she only made her début last season. Since that period she has had experience at the Italian Opera, in Paris. When we said that Polonini underrated the trifling part of Alessio it will be seen what careful attention is paid to the ensemble in the cast. The orchestral accompaniments were conducted and coloured by Costa with consummate skill. We never heard the "Sonnambula" go off with greater applause. The new ballet, by M Albert, called "La Reine des Fées," was produced, for the first time, and was completely successful, not that there is the slightest originality in the story, but it has been mounted with great splendour and the scenic and decorative effects are superb. Flora, the Queen of the Fairies, is beloved by Argant (O'Bryan) and Tirsi (Petipa), two mortals, the former inhabiting the forest of Archeroth which displease her fairy Majesty, who bestows her affections on the more retiring Ulrick; and she eventually resigns her throne in the skies to be of the "earth earthy" with her devoted lover. M. Albert has defined the characters and situations with much taste; the groupings of the fairies are charming: and the costumières, the scene painter, and the decorator, have largely contributed their aid. The appearance of the fairies on wending platforms is admirably contrived, and the exterior and interior of the Haunted Tower are both clever tableaux. But, if the ballet were not indebted at all to a costly mise en scene, the dancing of Dumilâtre alone would have insured it success. Her improvement has been very remarkable. She was always distinguished for the grace, poetry, and intelligence of her school; but she has acquired a force and precision in flowing, gliding, and flying steps, as novel as they were astonishing. Petipa is one of the best of the male dancers. A pas de deux, between Mdlle Bertin, a very clever danseuse, and M Maillle, will also not pass unnoticed in the run of this pretty ballet.

On Saturday night, Rossini's "Semiramide" was given for the fourth time, her Majesty and Prince Albert honouring the performance with their presence. The illustrious and accomplished amateurs were observed to applaud Grisi and Alboni and Tamburini frequently; and we learn that the general gratification has been expressed at the decorations of the house, and those for the Royal suite of rooms.

On Thursday evening was the first extra night, when the first act of "Semiramide," with Grisi, Alboni, Tamburini, Tagliafico, and Lavia; and the second act of the "Sonnambula," with Persiani, Corbari, Mario, and Tamburini, were given, with the second representation of the new ballet of "La Reine des Fées," for Dumilâtre, Bertin, and Petipa. The house was crowded in every part, and the performances went off with the greatest enthusiasm. Tamburini was in better voice than on any previous occasion, and sang splendidly. Alboni's aria d'entrata excited unbounded applause. Grisi was very much applauded. Mario was encored with fervour in the "Tutto è Sciotto;" and Mdme. Persiani again electrified the house in her bravura finale.

This evening (Saturday), Rossini's "Italiana in Algieri" will be given for the débûts of Marini, Rovere, Mdlle. Angulni, and Mdlle. A. Bellini. Alboni, Salvi, and Polonini are also in the cast.

PRINCESS' THEATRE.

On Thursday night, Mrs. Hampton, a sister of Osborne, the clever pianist and composer, who is resident in Paris, made her first appearance on any stage in the character of Amina, in the "Sonnambula." This lady has been long known as the Parisian and London circles as an accomplished amateur, who sang Italian airs and Irish Melodies with great taste and feeling. We think that her place will be more in the concert-room than on the stage; but she evinced considerable dramatic powers. Her action, although redundant, was graceful; and her vocalisation at times, agreeable, but she exerted herself most strenuously in the earlier scenes, as to lose all her strength before she attained the finale. She was very cordially received, and called for at the close of the opera. Her method is evidently derived from the best schools, but her execution was unsteady, and she was more ambitious in fioriture than she was able to achieve with finish. Her fence may, however, modify considerably the imperfections of a debût. Mr. Allan and Mr. Joddrell as the music of Elvino and the Count effectively.

CONCERTS OF THE WEEK

CONCERTS OF ANCIENT MUSIC.—The second Concert was given on Wednesday night, under the direction of the Duke of Wellington. Prince Albert, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, Earls Howe, Cawdor, Powis, and Devon, the Marquis and Marchioness of Downe, the Duchess of Roxburgh, Countess of Desart, the Archbishop of Armagh, Bishops Sumner, C. Wellesley, St. Vincent, Clive, Bickersteth, G. Lennox, Sirs A. Barnard, T. Acland, J. Campbell, S. Gynne, C. Sullivan, Miss Burdett Coutts, Mdlle. Jenny Lind, M. Benedict, &c., were present. The celebrated Jenny Lutzen, called in Germany the "Viardot Garcia of the North," who sang in the German troupe that was here some years since, made her appearance, and sang Mozart's "Deh! vieni," from "Figaro," and "Non mi dir," from "Don Giovanni." She has a powerful soprano of excellent quality, has great executive facility, and is a thoroughly cultivated vocalist. She produced a great sensation. Staudigl appeared for the first time this season, and gave Haydn's air from the "Creazion," "Now heaven in fullest glory shone," and Mozart's "In diesen hal'gen Hallen," from the "Zauberflöte." Nothing could be more finely delivered than the former, but the latter was spoilt by taking the time too slow, and by altering the text. Garcisi sang the air assigned to Semiramide, "Per Pieta," and the "O cara immagine" of Mozart, very pleasingly; but he has a trick of producing a clap-trap effect, by a forte on his favourite note at the close of his pieces, which he would do well to abandon. He has a beautiful voice; and, if he husbands his resources, and cultivates his method, may eventually arrive at great distinction. Miss Dolby sang Dr. Arne's "In infancy," tamely, but sweetly. Of Miss Dolby and Mr. Hobbs's unfinished "Hebrew Quatre" overture; and "Charmante Gabrielle," were the other pieces.—Prince Albert directs the third Concert, on the 5th of May, when her Majesty will be present. Jenny Lind, it is expected, will appear at this Concert.

ORGAN CONCERTS.—The fourth and last of the series was given on Monday night, at Exeter Hall, conducted by Mr. May, with the aid of Mr Willy's organ. The vocalists were Mrs. Wales, Miss Dolby, Misses Gill and Kent, Messrs. [illegible] (promised), W. H. Seguin, J. A. Novello, and Mr. Hobbs. The selection comprised pieces from Handel, Crotch, Russell, and Attwood, in the sacred part; from Weber, Spohr, Schield, G. Smith, Storace, Stevens, Cooke, and Sir H. R. Bishop, in the secular music; thus going over a very small period of the musical epoch embracing the last half century. These concerts [illegible] style of music.

MENDELSSOHN'S "ELIJAH."—This oratorio, which was received on its first performance at Exeter Hall with tremendous applause, there being four encores, was given by the Hanoverian Choral Society at Manchester, on Tuesday evening, conducted by the gifted composer, with similar enthusiasm. It was to be repeated last evening (Friday), at Exeter Hall, in presence of her Majesty and Prince Albert. The Duke of Cambridge attended the first performance. All the tickets are sold, even for the third time that it will be given. On Tuesday next it will be performed at the Town Hall, Birmingham, directed by Mendelssohn. There have been some improvements made by the Composer in his task of revision [illegible] changes are more apparent to the skilful professor than to the amateur [illegible] lofty inspiration, carried out with amazing vigour and closeness, and its reception by the Sacred Harmonic Society has been one of the most glorious achievements of this spirited body of amateurs, who have engaged the [illegible] the age to come unwearied to the last day to conduct it on the 26th will be the [illegible] and final execution of the oratorio, under the bâton of Mendelssohn, who then departs for Switzerland.

BEETHOVEN'S QUARTET SOCIETY.—At the fourth meeting, on Monday last, Joachim, the youthful violinist from Vienna, performed in two of the quintets, as first violin, with astonishing skill. Sainton led the other. Vieuxtemps will appear at the fifth meeting, on the 3rd of May.

ROYAL SOCIETY OF MUSICIANS.

The 109th Anniversary Festival of this admirable institution was celebrated on Monday evening in Freemason's Hall, Lieut.-Gen. Lord Saltoun being in the chair, supported by Sir Andrew Barnard, Drs. Bluing, Elliotson, Combe, and Hawes, Messrs. Hall, Bailey, Broadwood, Ellis, Oliphant, &c.

The galleries were filled with ladies, as on this occasion a great musical treat is provided. The grace (a Welsh melody harmonised by Mr. Parry), and the Non Nobis, were finely given by Messrs. J. O. Atkins, J. Bennett, Bradbury, Barnby, T. Cooke, Collyer, Hows, Hill, Lee, J. A. Novello, Spencer, Stretton, E. Taylor, Walmesley, Young, &c. Glees and madrigals by Horsley, Spofforth, Festa, and J. F. Smith, were sung. Miss Rainforth and Miss M. Williams sang ballads charmingly. Signor Emiliani performed a brilliant Violin Fantasia; and Mr. W. H. Holmes, Handel's "Harmonious Blacksmith," with variations the subject of which, by the way, was not by Handel, but by a French composer—on the pianoforte. Mr. Sloman, Mr. Bennett and Mr. W. L. Phillips officiated as accompanyists.

Mr. Horsley, Mus. Bac. advocated eloquently the interests of the Society, and proposed the gallant Chairman's health, who responded with soldier-like brevity and frankness.

The subscription list was handsome, including £30 from the King of Hanover, £25 from Prince Albert, ten guineas from Grisi, ten guineas from Mario, £10 from the Director of the Italian Opera, £10 from Lumley, £10 from the Harmonic Union, Broadwood, a tenth donation, £5, from Addison and Hodson, ten guineas from T. Oliphant, Esq., ten guineas from J. Walker, Esq.; Lord Saltoun, £10. Sir A. Barnard, ten guineas; C. L. Gruneisen, Esq., and Professor Taylor, five guineas each; W. Allen, Esq., £5; Signor F. Lablache, five guineas, &c. The sum given away in 1846, amounted to £2291 3s. 1d., of which the item for expenditure was remarkably small. Her Majesty and every member of the Royal Family, and the most distinguished amateurs patronise this excellent Society, which is managed by twelve Governors, and a Court of Assistants, consisting of forty-eight members, thus putting the affairs out of the reach of abuse or partiality.

MUSICAL GIFT CHAT

This morning (Saturday) will be the Philharmonic rehearsal for the fourth Concert on Monday evening. Costa conducting the first part, and Mendelssohn the second act, the latter playing Beethoven's Pianoforte Concerto in G; in the former Beethoven's Symphony in F, Weber's "Euryanthe" Overture, Mendelssohn's Overture and scherzo, at the St. James's Theatre, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and his Symphony in A, are included in the selection. Her Majesty and Prince Albert will honour the Concert with their presence. The third meeting of the "Musical Union" will take place on Tuesday afternoon, in Willis's Rooms; and in the evening, the prize for the "Druidical Ode" will be awarded at the Melodists' Club. This day week (the first of May) will be the second Concert of the Royal Academy of Music. The meetings of the Amateur Musical Society continue every Friday; the last one was honoured with the presence of Prince Albert, who warmly applauded the skill of the aristocratic amateurs. The Ethelman Records, at the St. James's Theatre, have met with a host of imitators; but now there is a party of Female American Serenaders, at the St. James's Assembly Rooms (late Crockford's), morning and evening. We are glad to find so many Concerts given in the provinces in honour of Sir H. R. Bishop. Leeds and Manchester have distinguished themselves in thus passing a deserved compliment to one of our greatest English composers. Mr. James, an English tenor who gained great fame in Italy, is now in London. Mdme. Anna Bishop returns in May. Mr. Henri Laurent's opera of "Quentin Durward" will be the next novelty at Drury-Lane Theatre. The musical hons in the London season are Sivori, Henri Herz, Leopold de Meyer, Burke, Samuel Lover, the Seguin operatic troupe, and the Italian company.

MUSIC IN CANADA.

(From a Correspondent.)

MONTREAL, March 2[illegible], 1847.

GRAND ORATORIO,

PERFORMED IN AID OF THE LADIES' BENEVOLENT SOCIETY OF MONTREAL, MARCH 11, 1847.

It is a subject of very high gratification to the lovers of the Divine Art to witness the very laudable efforts now being made in the metropolis of her Majesty's North American Provinces for the cultivation of music, both in its vocal and instrumental departments. The recent Oratorio furnishes abundant evidence of what may be accomplished. Good materials were there, with the taste and judgment of a few gentlemen amateurs. The performances of the band of the 52nd, on the occasion referred to, were of a very high order of merit, and the selections by the accomplished officers of the regiment were made with the usual excellent judgment and skill. The entertainment was given during the solemnities of the Lent season, and both the music and the ecclesiastical decorations corresponded to the hallowed intentions of the meeting which they encompassed. By the wise and kind authority of our holy Church. The interior of the large and handsome Drill Hall in which the Oratorio was held was arranged and decorated with appropriate designs and characteristic symbolisms, in imitation of the richly-ornamented style of the Middle Ages, was constructed on each side of the orchestra; forming a very imposing and beautiful back-ground to the orchestra; and among the various illuminated decorations of the Lady's English period, the sacred monogram I.H.S. was conspicuous, embracing the cross, together with the appropriate motto, assumed by the Charity on this occasion

"Pius sum omnia Domine et de, tuis dabimus tibi."

It was on this occasion of a public charity a truly touching and affecting memorial of Him "who went about doing good," and in the benignity and loveliness of His saintly character declared that it "was more blessed to give than to receive."

The performances commenced with a portion of the "Stabat Mater" of Rossini, and was executed with good effect, under the direction of Mr. Van Maanaen, the band-master of the 52nd. Selections from the celebrated oratorios of Handel and Haydn, and some of Kent's admired anthems, were performed during the evening. The Oratorio was honoured by the immediate patronage of his Excellency the Right Hon. the Earl of Elgin, &c. &c. &c. the newly-appointed Governor-General of the Provinces; and under the supervision of the following gentlemen, who con-ducted the committee of arrangements, viz., the Hon. Lieut.-Colonel Prince, Commander Granville, the Hon. P. McGill; Colonel Wetherall, C B, the Hon. the Attorney-General; T. B. Anderson, Esq.; and Major H. S. Davis, 52nd Regiment.

The decorations and musical arrangements were kindly undertaken, and successfully completed, by a field officer of the 52nd Regiment, whose band sustained nearly all the vocal and instrumental parts.

The large assemblage of beauty, fashion, and intellect, which thronged the Hall, repeatedly evinced their entire approval and admiration of the whole, but the climax of the enmity reverberations of a sickening applause, but by that earnest attention and visible appreciation of performances which so forcibly discover the pleasing emotions of the mind. Selections from Handel's "Creation" were given with great effect and spirit

To speak of the Messiahites that occasionally fall upon the ear would be a fastidious and unamiable task: especially when it is recollected how few of the most eminent vocal performers of Europe have passed the scene of this difficult composition without an occasional failure or miss note.

The excellent performance of the "Hallelujah Chorus," of Handel, received, as it justly merited, the applause of the delighted audience. The beautiful Latin Hymn of "Adeste Fidelis," by Reynolds, was also, in parts, alternately.

Among the many happy occurrences which contributed to the gratification of the assembled audience, and gave a complete success to the generous effort, was the unexpected appearance of Mr Chapman, Gentleman of her Majesty's Chapel Royal; who most kindly came forward and proffered his services in this noble work; a characteristic [illegible] of the true spirit of the [illegible] The favourable impression which the performances of the band of the 52nd have made here upon the public [illegible], and of those who are qualified to judge, will, it is to be hoped, lead to more liberal efforts for the cultivation of music in the [illegible] as well as the accounts which [illegible] of the continental journals, are commendatory of the [illegible] and we have succeeded in the [illegible] of the regiment by Major Shirley. Several other promotions will, of course, follow. No one can state precisely what view the Commander-in-Chief took of the Hounslow flogging case, but the public may [illegible] interference from the following circumstances. The maximum amount of corporal punishment has been reduced to 50 lashes from 200. The Adjutant-General, Ireland, a prominent mover in the affair, was permitted to exchange from the corps some months since, immediately after issuing, by the way, his adjutant's order. Mr. Warren, the surgeon, who superintended the flogging of White, and who could have stopped it any moment he chose, is no longer medical officer of the Regiment. Next, the 7th Hussars, which were to have remained at Hounslow for the usual period, were prematurely ordered to Ireland.

EVERYBODY'S COLUMN.

BY ALBERT SMITH.

THE SMITHFIELD NUISANCE.

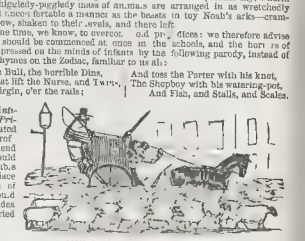
IT TO last market-day the accounts of the riots in Smithfield [illegible] the most alarming character, and unless the steel pens of the authors are united to write away the wooden pens of the cattle, there is no telling what frightful accidents may not soon be looked for. The proverb must be realised of everybody taking their pigs to a better market. The powers that swept away the flying embers of the martyrs' faggots, must remove the living stakes of the doomed ox. The tournaments held here of old, abolished at last, must be followed by doing away with the butting and spiking, and kicking and torturing constantly going on in the melée of the present day, wherein the crowded higgledy-piggledy mass of animals are arranged in as wretchedly confused and uncouth a manner as the beasts in toy Noah's arks—crammed in any how, shaken to their wits, and there left.

It takes some time, we know, to overcome old prejudices: we therefore advise that the task should be commenced at once in the schools, and the horrors of Smithfield impressed on the minds of infants by the following parody, instead of the [illegible] and rhymes on the Zodiac, familiar to us all:

The Ram, the Bull, the horrible Dins,
The Horns that lift the Nurses, and Twins,
And Virgin, o'er the rails:

And toss the Porter with his knot,
The Shopboy with his watering-pot,
And Fish, and Stalls, and Scales.

Indeed, the Anti-Smithfield Primer, illustrated in the manner of our old friend Fleming, would be an admirable work to place in the hands of youth We would have the idea thus carried out:



SOME USEFUL FABLES

I. Of the Man that is not have a Cab.

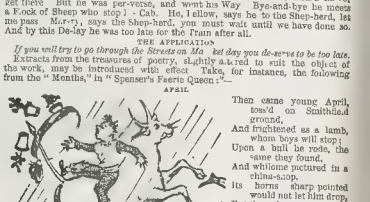
There was a Man who said he would [illegible] Cab to the mail-way, al-though his friends said it was Mar-ket Day in Smith-field, and [illegible] he would never get there But he was per-verse, and went his Way Bye-and-bye he meets a Flock of Sheep who stop [illegible] Cab. He, Fellow, says he to the Shep-herd, let me pass Mas-ter, says the Shep-herd, you must wait until we have done so. And by this De-lay he was too late for the Train after all.

II. Of the Child that is afraid to [illegible]

If you will try to go through the Streets on Mar-ket day you de-serve to be too late.

Extracts from the treasures of poetry, slightly altered to suit the object of the work, may be introduced with effect. Take, for instance, the following from the "Months," in "Spenser's Faerie Queen:"—

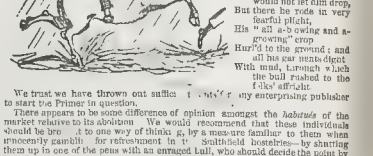
APRIL.



Then came young April, toss'd on Smithfield ground,
And frightened as a lamb,
whom boys will stop;
Upon a bull he rode, the same they found,
And whilome pictured in a china-shop.
Its horns sharp pointed would not let him drop,
But there he rode in very fearful plight,
His "all a-b-owing and a-growing" crop
Hurl'd to the ground; and all his ear rend-light
With mud, through which the bull rushed to the folks' affright.

We trust we have thrown out suffi[illegible] enterprising publisher to start the Primer in question.

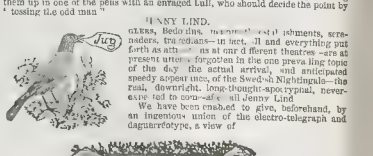
Some of the most glaring differences of opinion amongst the habitués of the market relative to its abolition We would recommend that these individuals should be bro[illegible] to one way of thinking, by a measure familiar to them when innocently assembled for refreshment in the Smithfield hostelries—by shutting them up in one of the pens with an enraged bull, who should decide the point by tossing the odd man "



JENNY LIND.

GLEES, Bedding, [illegible] entertainments, serenaders, tragedians—in fact, all and everything put [illegible] as it were if different theatres were at present utterly forgotten in the one prevailing topic of the day the actual arrival, and anticipated speedy appearance of the Swedish Nightingale—the real, downright, long-thought-upon-typical, never-existed to compare with Jenny Lind

All has ceased to [illegible] before, and, by an ingenious union of the electro-telegraph and daguerreotype, a view of



THE OPERA ON JENNY LIND'S FIRST NIGHT

Some of the people will talk up their places the night before, as the mob does when awaiting an execution; and the execution of Jenny Lind, it is said, will pass anything ever before known.

The Jenny Lind mania [illegible] the wondrous epidemic only just commencing—will form a feature in the annals of the nineteenth century. She has already found her way to the theatres: that is only the first symptom of the approaching excitement We shall have Jenny Lind polkas, shirts, and stands, Jenny Lind [illegible], yachts, and, of course, [illegible] We are desirous to see how many of the latter will [illegible] of the different [illegible] plates, and sweepstakes of the approaching season The Coiffure à la Jenny Lind will spread all over the prevailing headdress, and, beyond all, [illegible] Never will invent a Pâté des Rossignols Suédois, and a Jenny Sublime, as a compliment to the Charbotte Rose.

To meet the expected crush on the opening night. Many of the intended visitors are already in training for the expected struggle, as they would [illegible] for a fight, or any exertion requiring great powers of physical endurance. The large area for their accommodation both inside and outside the Opera, and the very narrow passages between them, will render their entrance to the Theatre very like the transit of the grains of sand through the [illegible] hour-glass: [illegible] ter, as here reversed [illegible] We minister will be requested to sit all night long at the Café de l'Europe, and the tents of the Humane Society will be pit[illegible] along the arcades

We have [illegible] agreed to the Lady Ethiopians who [illegible] the Surrey Theatre and St. James's Assembly Rooms, that they should [illegible] and take away Jenny Lind as their principal topic, and follow out these notions in their

JENNY LIND NIGGER MELODIES.

No. 1. "Old Dan Tuckee

I went to d' Opera tudder night
To see de noise and hear de sight
De people all was crowding round,
'Case Jenny Lind had come to town.

Get out ob de way, my tier's the upper,
Get out ob de way, my tier's so I go,
Get out ob de way, my tier's the up, er,
We shall all have earned our supper, &c.

No. 2. "Ole Joe"

Massa Bunn knocked at the front-last gate—
Couldn't get in 'cos he was too late
Found a Jenny Lind her part had done,
And that the ballet had just begun.

[Knocks.] "Poke dere!" "Massa Bunn!"
"What, de real Bunn?" "Yes! dat 'dentical and 'spectable Bunn."

Bis. { Cecile a-kling up behind and before,
And Sir Leon kicking up behind Cecile
Dere's thoms rals in the house before me,
Dere's thousands in the house, I'm done;
Dere's thousands in the house before me,
And no corner left for Bunn, &c. &c.

No. 3. "De Boosoons Dance"

De bets and de bets are gone a[illegible] long all night, on your opening night
De Jenny Lind is come at last. And put all de rest into mourning.
All de other managers making their wills, Oh! oh! de stalls bravo.
Setting in the treasury biting dere nails. Jenny Lind's Alice will be de go.

Sing de Jenny, sing—
Sing de Jenny, sing.

Oh! oh! and each pit row
Fills wid the rush le overflow, &c. &c.

EPITOME OF NEWS.—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

Letters from Strasburg of the 12th inst., mention that the Bavarian railroad from Ludwigshafen to Spire and to Neustadt had been opened.

An official return of the number and nature of accidents and injuries to life and limb which occurred on railroads from the 1st of July to the 31st of December, 1846, has been printed. The total number of persons killed during the half-year amounted to 91, and that of the persons injured to 184.

The New York packet ship Rochester has been wrecked at Blackwater-bank, on the Irish coast, near Wexford, but happily the crew were saved.

Constantinople letters of the 31st ult., state that the Greek Government had not replied to the ultimatum sent by the Porte, and on the following day diplomatic relations between the two Governments were to cease.

Another most alarming destruction has taken place of one of the towns of Silesia by fire. The largest and finest part of the town of Neustadt was completely destroyed; 91 dwelling-houses, 23 barns, and 76 stables and outbuildings were reduced to ashes. Above 180 families have lost their all, and very much distress and misery prevails in consequence. We have not heard whether any lives were lost.

It is stated that at this season of the year, young nettles, when boiled, are a most excellent table vegetable, and, as a purifier of the blood, are unequalled—they are more nutritious than most of the greens in common use.

Accounts have been received at Lloyd's, of the merchant brig Canning having been destroyed by fire in the Straits of Magellan, on the 16th of December last. The carpenter and two men were supposed to be drowned.

The shipping intelligence of the Limerick Chronicle of Saturday last notices the arrival in that port, within three days, of nineteen vessels from New York, Baltimore, the Azores, Glasgow, Marseilles, Alexandria, and other ports, of which thirteen were laden with provisions. During the same period thirty three vessels left that port, all with passengers for America.

On Tuesday in one tide no less than 128 vessels, of which 45 were coasters, and the remainder bound to foreign ports, went out to sea from Liverpool. The scene was one of lively interest. Many of the vessels were American, and others of large class.

The King of Bavaria has dissolved the Committee which was charged to draw up a new body of civil and criminal laws. A new Committee has been nominated, under the Presidency of M Maurer, Minister of Justice, and with M. Molitor, Attorney General of the Supreme Court as one of its Members. Both these gentlemen are zealous advocates of open counsel and oral trials.

The Chamber of Commerce of Lyon has just voted the sum of 200f. towards the necessary studies for cutting through the Isthmus of Suez.

Advices from Adelaide (Australia) to the 10th of December notice the continued success of mining operations in the colony. Specimens of the ore recently raised from the South Para property are favourably mentioned. Affairs, particularly considered, show no great change. The next season had commenced rather earlier than usual. The markets were well supplied with grain, and wheat was selling at 5s to 5s 3d., and oats at 3s. to 3s. 6d. per bushel.

A young woman, the only daughter of a rich shopkeeper in the Rue des Lombards, Paris, threw herself into the Seine, on Sunday, from the Pont Marie, in order to avoid a marriage which displeased her. She was carried rapidly down by the current, and, the instinct of life prevailing, she seized a ring hanging from the quay wall, and was soon after rescued by some boatmen.

We find the following in the Gazette du Midi of the 16th:—"Don Enrico, on his arrival at Rome, demanded an audience of the Pope, who, in reply, desired that he should be pre ented by the Spanish Ambassador; but, as this functionary made pretension to being present at every audience, the Prince declared that he could not admit of any witness to any conscientious intercourse that might take place between him and the Supreme Pontiff. Consequently he announced his intention of addressing his Holiness directly the first time he met him in public

The Dutch papers state that the King of Holland went out on Sunday last, for the first time since his illness, accompanied by the Queen, the Princess of Orange, the Hereditary Grand Duchess of Saxe Weimar, Prince Henry, Prince Frederick of the Netherlands, and Princess Louisa. His Majesty proceeded to attend Divine Service in the Klooster Kerk. The crowd, who hastened to attend at this ceremony, seemed to be filled with the deepest gratitude at the speedy recovery of the King from his severe illness. The whole scene was very imposing.

A Church of England training school is about to be added to the other public institutions of Cheltenham.

A dispatch has been received at Lloyd's, announcing, from a letter received from the British Consul at the Island of Owyhee, the existence of sulphur in abundance in that island, at a distance of 26 miles from a shipping port.

The States of the Zollverein have given notice of the cessation of the treaty of Commerce and Navigation concluded between England and Prussia in 1841, its execution being impossible in its present form.

Nine workmen and day labourers were accused at a recent sitting of the Court of Assizes of the Indre (France), having taken part in the corn riots, and the pillaging of grain at Luant and Lapérouille. Four were acquitted, two were condemned to five years hard labour, three to four years' imprisonment, and all five to 200f. fine and costs.

It is stated, in a letter from Munich of the 13th, that the Prince of Leiningen, who, during the last session was President of the First Chamber of the Diet, was about to go to London, in order to accompany his Royal mother, the Duchess of Kent, on a visit to the Continent

It is stated from St. Petersburg, under date of the 6th inst., that the Emperor of Russia is not yet able to leave his apartments in the Winter Palace. He is suffering from a liver complaint. Leeches have been copiously applied, and he is much better.

An Irishman was taken to the police court, Liverpool, on Tuesday, for seeking parish relief. He told the officer he was destitute; but, on being searched, 15s. and the half of an Irish bank-note were found on him. Of course he told the magistrate that his distress was urgent, but the money found upon him proving the contrary, he was indulged with fourteen days' imprisonment at his own expense.

Accounts from Vienna notice a great fire at Bucharest, in Wallachia. The fire had consumed a large portion of the city, but had not yet reached the quarter in which the warehouses of the principal merchants are situate, although several warehouses in the city had been burnt down. The Austrian Observer of the 13th states that one fourth of the town was destroyed. Another account gives 1000 as the number of houses which were burned. Many lives were lost. The church and convent of the Franciscans and the palace of the Roman Catholic bishop are now a heap of ruins.

The Secretary for the Home Department has notified to the Court of Aldermen that he has learned from the Magistrates of the Metropolitan Police District not to allow certificates to policemen for their attendance, and to take care that in no matter whatever they shall directly or indirectly receive any personal benefit.

The distress in Savoy is, at the present moment, so great that, throughout every part of that country extending along the lake of Geneva, bread is now selling at ten sous per pound.

By a letter from Rouen, 17th of April, we learn that no less than 150 ships came up to that port by one tide last week, nearly all from England, and many of them laden with grain.

The first turf on the Brackley and Buckingham Railway was cut on Tuesday last, near Stowe-Nine, in the presence of a number of the contractors, by Dr. Field, of the firm of Brassey and Co., the contractors for the formation of the whole of the Buckinghamshire scheme, of which the above forms a portion.

At a meeting of the Catholic Institute, held on Wednesday night, at which the Earl of Shrewsbury presided, and at which there was a large attendance of Bishops and Clergy, a resolution was unanimously carried, characterising the exclusion of the Roman Catholics from any participat on in the intended grant, as an outrage on the rights of conscience, and calling on all classes of their Catholic fellow subjects to unite in one cry of indignant reprobation of the insult and injustice thereby offered to their religion and themselves.

At the Middlesex Sessions on Wednesday, Major Beniowski, the Polish refugee, who was convicted last session of an aggravated assault on Mr Urquhart, at the Freemasons' Tavern, was brought up for judgment. He was sentenced to be imprisoned in the House of Correction for one month and find security for good conduct, himself in £50, and one security in £25. The Major intreated the Judge (Mr. Sergeant Adams) not to imprison but to fine him, upon which the Judge altered the sentence to a fine of £50, which was soon afterwards paid, and the Major was liberated

The Dorchester Railway will be opened next month. This event will cause an entire revolution in the conveyance of the mails throughout the South of England.

A return relative to the constabulary force in England and Wales (just laid before Parliament), shows that the total number, officers and men, is 9328 in the Metropolitan and City of London Police Forces; 4928 in Constabulary Forces in boroughs named in the schedules of the Municipal Reform Act; and 142 in Boroughs not included in those schedules making a total of 10,598 officers and men

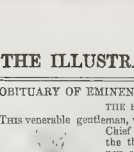
On Wednesday the extension line of the London and York Railway to the proposed terminus at the Middlesex House of Correction was staked out to within a short distance of the Fever Hospital, at King's-cross, Battle bridge.

Advices from St. Petersburg to the 8th inst. state that in the grain market there was less activity in consequence of the fuller reports from England and France, but prices were still firm, on account of the dealers having already sold so largely. The weather having again become wintry, threatened to retard the opening of the navigation.

The Augsburg Gazette of the 16th inst. announces the arrival of our British ships of war at the Dardanelles, and adds that the British Minister at Constantinople has received orders from his Government to support the Ottoman Government in the most energetic manner, and to advise that no concession be made to the Colonel Mavrey.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

THE HON. JOHN RODNEY



THIS venerable gentleman, who for so many years filled the office of Chief Secretary to the Government of Ceylon, was the third son of the famous Admiral Lord Rodney, and the eldest by his Lordship's second marriage, with Henrietta, daughter of John Cliffe, Esq. Mr. Rodney, at an early age, became a member of his father's gallant profession; but after a comparatively brief service, retired, while holding the rank of Post Captain. He was married three times—first, in 1784, to Catherine daughter of Thomas, sixth Earl of Westmeath by whom (who died in 1792) he had three daughters; secondly, in 1799, to Louisa, eldest daughter of John, this Earl of Aldborough, by whom he had two sons and six daughters; and thirdly, in 1815, to Antoinette, only daughter of Anthony Pierre Reyne, Esq., by whom he had one son and four daughters. Mr. Rodney died at Boulogne, on the 9th instant, at the advanced age of ninety-two.

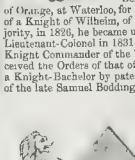
SIR WALTER SCOTT, BART., OF ABBOTSFORD

How few of the illustrious names of literature are perpetuated in their descendants. Shakspeare, Milton, and Byron, live only in their immortal verse, and the death of the last surviving son of the author of "Waverley," now adds Scott's name to the list. That melancholy event occurred at the Cape of Good Hope, where Sir Walter stopped on his way home from Madras. The deceased Baronet, who married the 15th Princess, was born in 1801. He married, in 1825, Jane, daughter of Henry Robert Duff, Esq., of Lochore, county Fife, but has left no issue. The Baronetcy consequently becomes extinct, while the estate of Abbotsford passes to Walter Scott Lockhart, a Cornet in the 16th Lancers, only son of the editor of "the Quarterly," and only grandson of the great Novelist of Scotland.

SIR HENRY VASSALL-WEBSTER, KNT.

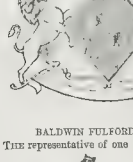
This gentleman, whose death took place on Tuesday morning, at twelve o'clock, from the effects of a wound inflicted by himself the previous day, at the family residence, in Brook-street, was second son of the late Sir Godfrey Webster, fourth Baronet of Battel Abbey, by Elizabeth, his wife, daughter and heiress of Richard Vassall, Esq., of Jamaica (which lady—her marriage with Sir Godfrey having been dissolved by Act of Parliament, in 1797—married, in the same year, Lord Holland.) and uncle of the present Sir Godfrey Webster, Bart., of Battel Abbey. Sir Henry was born in 1794: entering the army in 1810 he served in the Peninsula, Holland, and Belgium, and was Aide-de-Camp to the Prince of Orange, at Waterloo, for which he received a medal and the insignia of a Knight of Wilhelm, of the Netherlands. Having attained his majority, in 1826, he became unattached, and was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel in 1831; in the following year he was nominated a Knight Commander of the Tower and Sword of Portugal; in 1835 received the Orders of that of St. Bento d'Avis; and, in 1843, was created a Knight-Bachelor by patent. Sir Henry married Grace, only daughter of the late Samuel Boddington, Esq., of Upper Brook-street.

THE RIGHT HON. LADY SUSAN PERCY.



HER Ladyship, whose death occurred suddenly at Rome, on the 7th inst., was second daughter of Algernon, first Earl of Beverley, and granddaughter of Hugh, first Duke of Northumberland. Her elder sister, Lady Charlotte Percy, was married to George, third Earl of Ashburnham.

BALDWIN FULFORD, ESQ., OF GREAT FULFORD, DEVON.



THE representative of one of the oldest families in England, and the possessor of extensive estates, this lamented gentleman gained by his personal character, his integrity, and his benevolence, a claim to public esteem far more enviable than any his long line of ancestry or his hereditary possessions could have given. Even in Saxon times, the Fulfords were seated at Fulford; and, at the Norman Conquest, are recorded in the Domesday Survey as holding that estate, then written Folefort. The mansion, at which they have resided for centuries, is still in good repair, though one of the most ancient in the kingdom, standing in a park well diversified with fine timber, and surrounded by woods and plantations. In the great Civil War, this chivalrous family were of course Royalists, and Fulford House stood a siege against a part of Fairfax's army. At a far earlier period—the period of the Crusades—another monarch, Richard I., required and obtained the gallant services of many Knights of the family—of Sir Baldwin de Fulford, more particularly; and, at a subsequent epoch—a critical one for the reigning Sovereign—Sir Thomas Fulford accompanied the Earl of Devon to the relief of Exeter, when beleaguered by Perkin Warbeck.

The immediate ancestor of the existing family was Sir Baldwin Fulford of Fulford, Sheriff of Devon, 38 Henry VI., and Knight of the Sepulchre, whom Prince the historian styles "a great soldier, and a traveller of so undaunted resolution, that, for the honour of his mistress (or lady, in a Castle besieged by the Infidels, he fought a combat with a Saracen, for bulk and bigness an unequal match (as the representation of him cut in the wainscot in Fulford Hall doth plainly show), whom yet he vanquished, and rescued the lady."

Colonel Fulford, whose death we record, held the Lieutenant-Colonelcy of the Devon Militia, was Chairman of the Quarter Sessions, and long acted as a Justice of the Peace. By Anna-Maria, his wife, eldest daughter of the late William Adams, Esq., of Bowden, and sister of William Dacres Adams, Esq., formerly Confidential Secretary to Mr. Pitt, he leaves five sons and six daughters.

EDWARD FRANCIS COLSTON, ESQ., OF ROUNDWAY PARK, WILTS.

THE melancholy death of this gentleman has occasioned deep regret throughout the neighbourhood of Devizes. On Friday, the 16th instant, as a labourer was passing near the newly-formed fish-ponds in Roundway Park, he discovered the body of Mr. Colston floating in the water.

From the evidence adduced at the Coroner's Inquest it appeared that the deceased was taking the shortest way across a steep bank, upwards of twenty feet high, when, either from apoplexy, to which he was predisposed, or from some accidental stumbling, he fell into the water.

The lamentable event is much deplored. Of a cheerful and amiable disposition—courteous, affable, and kind-hearted—Mr. Colston enjoyed universal esteem. His chief delight seemed to be in living at home, in improving his estate, in employing the poor, and in dispensing hospitalities to his friends and neighbours. He held the Commission of the Peace for the counties of Somerset, Wilts, and Oxford, and possessed large property in each. His father, the late Colonel Colston, of Filkin's Hall, was grandson and heir of Alexander Ready, Esq., who took the name of Colston from his third wife's great uncle, EDWARD COLSTON, the philanthropist of Bristol.

The gentleman whose decease has given rise to this brief notice had completed his fifty-second year the day before he died. He married, in 1819, Marianne, only child of William Jenkins, Esq., of Shepton Mallet, and has left two sons and two daughters. He was one of the Nominees of Colston's School, at Bristol, and attended regularly at the annual commemoration, by the Dolphin Society, of his great and good ancestor.

THE POTATO DISEASE.

MR. ALFRED SMEE, F.R.S., announces that, at length, the direct proof of the identity of the Aphis Vastator to destroy the potato plant has been obtained, an experiment which has already been performed with the same result upon slips, cresses, and other plants.

Several Russian tubers, apparently sound and well filled with starch, were landed in a greenhouse, and thoroughly healthy plants were produced. Upon one of the best of the number, when about two feet high, was placed a colony of Vastators, which fed and throve abundantly, and which were prevented from travelling to neighbouring plants by a covering of gauze.

For a time, this plant throve as well as its neighbours; but eventually, the nitre hualin died and withered up, as was observed last year in the blighted fields. Its neighbours had no insect to suck the vital fluid, were persistently healthy, forming a striking contrast to the withered and dead stalk.

On examining the collar, it was found partially decayed in the manner which Mr. Smee has described as being especially attributable to the ravages of Aphides. The roots were found to be extensively rotten; and the little tubers, although not one-sixth the bulk of the original set, presented a hardness characteristic of disease

Mr. Smee then invites any one who doubts the destructive power of the Vastator, to "repeat this experiment, that, all being of one mind, we shall not be diverted upon matters which are irrelative, but shall be enabled to concentrate our energies on the annihilation of the destroyer, and the protection of our crops."

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

MURDER OF A WIFE AND CHILD, AND SUICIDE OF THE MURDERER

Last Sunday morning, a man named James Young, about twenty-five years old, certified cabinet-maker, residing in High-street, Lower Norwood, murdered his wife and child, and afterwards committed self destruction with a table knife in a manner.

Young lived with his wife, Jane Young, aged twenty-six, and an infant named Jane Bolton Young, aged only three months, at a small shop in the High-street, where they exhibited artificial flowers, &c., for sale. The murderer Young had been of intemperate habits for some time past, which had often attracted the notice of the sober people in the village, who were often speaking of his peculiar antics. There is no doubt that they had suffered great privation and distress, from the state of the house and the general appearance of the victims and the murderer.

Shortly after six o'clock police constable Joseph Armstrong, 278 P, was going off duty to his residence, but at that time nothing attracted his attention; but shortly after he reached his home he was alarmed at the cry of "Murder" and loud screams. He instantly ran out only partially dressed, and saw another constable named Robert Archer, 299 P, hastening towards Young's house By the time they had reached the place several of the immediate neighbours were running from the front of the premises, and, as the officer Archer proceeded to the doorway to ascertain the cause of the alarm, the man Young came on to the threshold, with his hands covered with blood, and a table knife in the left hand, also smeared with gore. He for a moment stood, and the constables, seeing him armed with such a weapon, and fearing what had taken place from their previous knowledge of his habits, they drew their truncheons and followed him into the house. He rushed upstairs to the first floor, and when the officer reached the first landing-place a most awful spectacle presents itself. The lifeless body of Mrs. Young was with her head almost severed from her body The blood stream from the wound down the stairs Her head was on the top stair, and her feet were in the bedroom. They pursued him into the front room, and before they had time to secure him he sharpened the knife by rubbing it on the hob, and down the stone work round the fireplace, and stood before the looking-glass, where he drew the knife across his throat, inflicting a frightful wound. When the officers had entered the room he was standing in a stooping position behind the door, and bleeding from the wound he had inflicted on his neck. Whilst he was lying on the floor, the officers rushed into the adjoining room, and there discovered the lifeless body of the poor infant on the bed—its head cut completely off, only hanging by a small piece of skin at the back

Several persons by this time came to the aid of the two constables, who, seeing the man Young still alive, and the other unfortunate victims quite warm, instantly despatched a messenger with all possible speed for the aid of Mr. Chapman, surgeon, of Norwood, who attended with promptitude, but when he reached the house another and child were quite dead. The man was still alive, but when the surgeon saw the injuries on his person, he was of opinion that he could not survive many minutes. He was placed on the bed, but, notwithstanding every thing means and skill could devise and suggest, he died, about a quarter of an hour afterwards. A knife was found on the bed in the front room, and the stone work round the stove was smeared and covered with blood, where he had sharpened the deadly weapon.

The man Young had been under the care of his friends at Hackney, owing to his mind being somewhat impaired. But on Saturday afternoon he returned in the care of a relative, who had great trouble with him on the way to Norwood in the omnibus. The whole of Saturday night Mrs. Young sat up at work for the purpose of completing a small order, and the general supposition is that Young laid on the bed with part of his clothes on; and, at the time of the murder, his wife, worn out with labour, went to sleep by the side of him, when he awoke at the time above named and committed the dreadful deed. The fire in the grate was still burning, and the few articles on the table which stood in the room were two cups and a slop-pail, which looked as if that they had only recently partaken of tea.

The fingers on the left hand of Mrs. Young were much cut, no doubt in endeavouring to save herself from his grasp, and in the struggle. Her death must have been instantaneous from the appearance of the injuries, and the poor little infant must have died in a few seconds.

On Tuesday, Mr. W. Carter held a Coroner's inquest on the deceased, James Young, his wife, Jane Young, and their infant child, Sarah Jane Young.

Several witnesses were examined, whose evidence confirmed the above account. The latter of the suicide stated that his son was of weak and insane mind

The Jury returned a verdict, that "the deceased, Sarah Young and Sarah Jane Young, were wilfully murdered by the deceased, James Young; and that the deceased, James Young, destroyed himself while labouring under temporary insanity."

SUICIDE OF SIR HENRY VASSAL WEBSTER.—We are sorry to announce the decease of Sir Henry Webster, which took place at midnight on Monday, at his residence in Brook-street, from the effect of injuries inflicted on himself at an early hour in the morning of the same day. It appears that Sir Henry had but lately returned from the Continent, where he had been travelling with Lady Webster. Latterly he suffered from indifferent health. Since his return his malady increased, and he laboured under general debility. He was left in bed on Sunday night in his usual state, nothing particularly being observed by his demeanor. Next morning his servant knocked at the door, but, receiving no reply, became alarmed, and informed Lady Webster of the circumstances. Her Ladyship ordered the door to be broken open, when the man found his master lying at the foot of the bed on the floor in a senseless state, with a severe wound in his throat. Medical assistance was promptly obtained, and the wound in the throat dressed, but at twelve o'clock at night the unfortunate gentleman expired from exhaustion, consequent upon loss of blood. On Wednesday evening an inquest was held at the house of the deceased. Several eminent medical men gave their opinion that he had been in an unsound state of mind for some time, and the Jury returned a verdict to the following effect:—"That the deceased Sir Henry Webster, died from the effects of wounds inflicted on himself while labouring under temporary insanity."

A WOMAN COMMITTED FOR MANSLAUGHTER.—On Monday, an inquest was held at the Grand Marines public-house, in the Whitechapel-road, on the body of William Hough, a pastry and glass-cutter, aged 54, who died in the London Hospital on Sunday, the 11th inst., from the effects of violence inflicted upon him by a woman named Mary Burns, the landlady of the King's Arms beer-shop, in New Grave-street, Shadwell. After a long inquiry, the Jury returned a verdict of "Manslaughter" against Mary Burns, who is at present in the Westminster Bridewell. The Coroner immediately issued his warrant for the prisoner's committal to Newgate for trial, and bound over the witnesses to prosecute

EXECUTION AT BURY ST. EDMUND'S.—On Saturday last the wretched convict, Catherine Foster, condemned to death by the Chief Baron Pollock, at the late Suffolk Assizes, for the murder of her husband three weeks after marriage, by poisoning a dumpling with arsenic, expiated her dreadful offence on the scaffold adjacent to the county gaol, at Bury St. Edmund's. The convict made a confession, in which she stated that she bought the poison of a chemist, at Sudbury, three days before she mixed it in the dumpling which she gave to her husband. She stated that she had no cause of complaint against her husband, but she had never any affection for him. The crowd assembled to witness the execution was very great; at nine o'clock the number of persons was not less than 10,000. A few minutes before nine o'clock, the High Sheriff and Under Sheriff having arrived, proceeded, with the other authorities, to the cell in which the miserable woman was confined, when she walked with a firm step and unsupported to the drop, where she stood unmoved. The preliminary arrangements having been completed, the signal was given, and the drop fell. The body, after hanging the usual period, was cut down and interred within the walls of the prison. The last execution of a female in Bury St. Edmund's was forty seven years ago for setting fire to her master's house. The Marquis of Westmeath attended to the subject in the House of Lords on Monday night, and said it was reported that the execution was conducted in such a manner as to prolong the sufferings of the unfortunate woman for a considerable time, to the great disgust of the spectators, many of whom exclaimed, "Shame, shame," and others, "Murder"

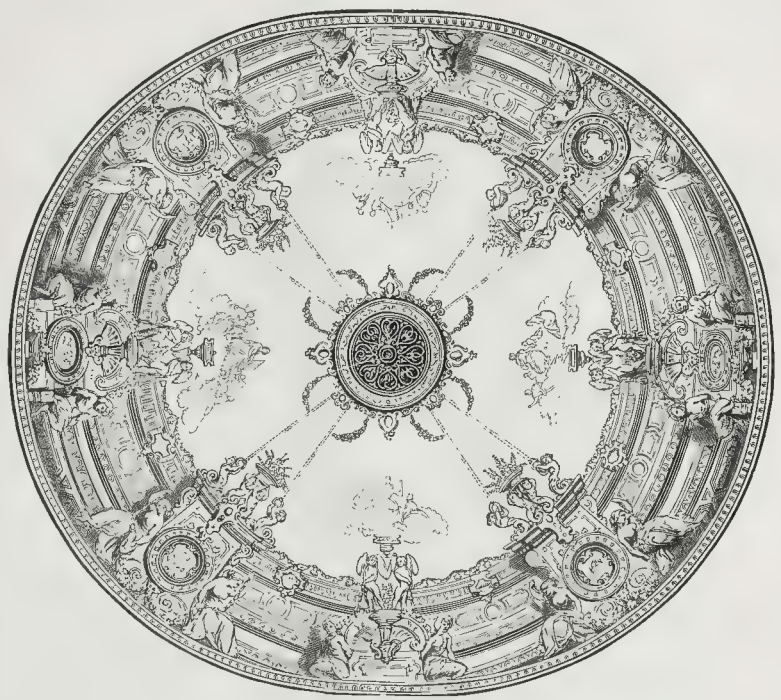
SUDDEN DEATH OF MAJOR A. M'ARTHUR.—Major A. M'Arthur, on the Madras establishment of the East India Company's service, died suddenly at his residence in the Albany, Piccadilly, yesterday week. The deceased, on that evening, appeared in his usual health, but not coming down at half-past eleven on Saturday, his housekeeper went to call him, and found him lying on the floor of his bed-chamber, lifeless. Dr. Pettigrew, of Saville-row, was sent for, and, on his arrival, he found that the deceased had evidently been suffocating when he expired. At the request the doctor stated that he had opened and examined the body, and found the blood-vessels generally in a diseased state, the vessels of the brain were gorged with blood, and the sac containing the heart was filled with blood, which had escaped from the pulmonary artery, producing instantaneous death. Verdict, "Died from natural causes."

THE CEILING OF THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Our artists have this day presented an Engraving of the Ceiling, admitted on all hands to be a great work of art. For the form, which is oval, 70 feet from the proscenium to the gallery, and 62 feet broad, Mr. Albano claims the entire merit. It is spheroidical in the centre, and elliptical at the base. The painting of the Ceiling was by Signori Ferri and Verardi, the same artists who painted the Renaissance ceiling in Paris. M. Zarra has executed the figures: the decorative portion of the Ceiling has been the work of Mr. Ponsonby. The critic of the Daily News calls the Ceiling the great glory of the house—"A most beautiful representation of the sky, shadowed off from golden sunshine to a border of deep serene blue, around which there is a broad belt of chaste and exquisite ornament." The decorations consist of a large richly-gilt scroll centre ornament, perforated for the purpose of ventilation, and the remainder mounted with bold fruit and flower moulding, with egg and tongue, and other small members, so as to form five different margins, which are embraced on the outer edge by eight massive shields, and again are connected with lines of golden rope, running to the outer circle of the Ceiling. Nothing can be more light and aerial than the effect of this ensemble, contrasted with the circle of garlands, in which are interspersed some excellently finished grotesque masks and other ornaments.

This painted Ceiling is supported by a very bold and large egg moulding, finished in solid gold ring. The painting itself is divided into two compartments, an inner and outer circle. The interior as will be perceived by our Engraving, contains four distinct groups, connected together by bouquets, garlands, wreaths, &c.; the first group, nearest the proscenium, is Music, distinguished by the attributes, and surrounded by the children of Genius; the second group, next to the gallery, is composed of Lyric Tragedy; the third group, to the right, looking at the stage, is Comedy; and the fourth group to the left, is Art, with the emblems of painting and sculpture. The exterior circle of the painting is architectural, with emblematical decorations, divided into eight groups, four of which represent Astronomy, Mechanics, Industry, and Commerce, surrounded by figures in bas-relief, garlands, flowers, &c.; the remaining groups are descriptive of the Four Seasons; and, in the intervening spaces, the names of the most distinguished composers are inscribed on tablets.

The Ceiling is altogether of noble proportions and classical in conception, and most artistical in the execution. The Proscenium Ceiling is not shown in our Engraving, but it is very elegant; the same egg and tongue mouldings repeated and formed into margins, with a bold red frieze, consisting of birds and squirrels in high relief, richly gilt, and taken from the antique. This is repeated in the upper and lower edge of the Ceiling; the centre part is again formed into smaller panels of rich oval moulding, the centres of which are filled with ornamental paintings, by Verardi. The Royal Arms in the centre were expressly modelled for the occasion, and are very handsome. The two pair of Corinthian columns in burnished white and gold, as also their capitals and the two figures of Italy and Britannia, on gold back-grounds in the spandril above, excite also great admiration. The Chandelier, which descends through the large scroll (See the centre of our Engraving) gives such a chaste and powerful light, that the branches on the first and grand tiers for wax candles, might be well dispensed with, especially as they diminish the effect of the graceful curves of the boxes.



CEILING OF THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.

PRINTERS' PENSION SOCIETY.—The Annual Dinner of the Printers' Pension Society took place on Tuesday, at the London Tavern. Luke James Hansard, Esq., presided. The usual loyal toasts having been disposed of, the Chairman proposed "Success to the Stationers' Company," a toast which was received with much cheering. The Chairman then rose, and in proposing the toast of the evening, namely, "The Printers' Pension Society," observed that it was a Society the prosperity of which it was the object of the present meeting to promote. Its aim was to help old and disabled printers, and to rescue them from that poverty which their inability to work would entail upon them, and not only them, but their widows. Lord Dudley Stuart proposed the "Health of the Chairman," and he took that opportunity of stating that he was rejoiced to find the Society so flourishing as he then was; expressing his astonishment that it was so little known to the public at large. The public could not, he added, do without the printers. Mr. Hansard returned thanks, and several other toasts having been drunk, the company retired. The total amount of subscriptions announced, was £3211 6s., including a list of subscriptions from lady authoresses, handed in by Lord D. Coutts Stuart, amounting to £35 16s. 6d. Prince Albert sent a donation of £50, and consented to be the patron of the society. We find from the report of this society, that its funded property amounts to nearly £4,894; its income for the last year arising from interest of the above sum, donations and subscriptions, was upwards of £1000, of which £959 was divided amongst pensioners; the sum of £400 having been funded.

BURNING OF THE STEAMER "GRANA UILE."

WE regret to record another frightful steam-boat catastrophe—the destruction of the Grana Uile, by fire, attended with very considerable loss of life.

The Grana Uile sailed from Liverpool for Dregheda, on Tuesday evening (the 13th inst.), about eight o'clock. There were on board about 43 regular passengers, a crew of 20 persons, and a few other individuals, making in all, as nearly as can be calculated, about 90 souls. The Grana Uile was 245 tons register, and was commanded by Captain Rawdon. The cargo was chiefly grain, but she had on board a number of bales of flax, which were stowed with every care, and covered with a tarpaulin, in the lower hole. About six A.M. on the following morning, when off Lambay, all on board were roused by the cry of "Fire! fire!" For a length of time, every exertion was made to subdue the flames; but, in vain. The scene that followed was one of the most heart-rending description. There was a frantic rush, in the first instance, to get possession of the vessel's boats; both boats were swamped, and, unfortunately, all perished.

The vessel kept her course till about seven o'clock, when she was observed by a fishing-smack, the Bessy, of Ringsend. The captain, Mr. William Pullen, immediately proceeded to rescue the crew and passengers on deck; and all who had the good fortune to stay by the vessel were saved, except the commander, who vowed that he would not stir until passengers and crew were all safe, a determination which cost him his life, for, in the last extremity, he took a life-buoy, and jumped overboard, and was picked up in the steamer's wake dreadfully burnt. The crew of the smack, seeing all hope of saving the vessel at an end, bore straight for Dublin [where she arrived about six o'clock on Wednesday evening], and soon lost sight of the steamer. None on board saw her sink and the general impression was that she still continued to float when they lost sight of her. Those who are lost are supposed to number 23 persons.

An inquest has been held upon the body of the captain, when the mate stated in evidence that if the passengers had been calm, and taken the captain's advice, every one might have been saved; that from 15 to 20 persons were certainly lost; and that a signal was hoisted on seeing the fishing-smack, Frederick, of which they took no notice; this, he thought, disheartened the captain, and produced fright amongst all on board.

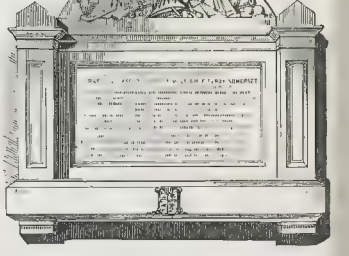
The Coroner, after highly landing the conduct of the crew of the Bessy, detailed the evidence to the Jury, who found a verdict to the effect that the captain was accidentaly drowned, but there were no means of ascertaining how the fire originated; and that no blame or want of precaution are attributable to the owners, captain, or crew.

The Jury expressed their high admiration of the spirited conduct of Captain Pullen and the crew of the Bessy, and recommended them to the notice of the Humane Society. They also censured the crew of the Frederick.

TAKING OFF THE CREW AND PASSENGERS FROM THE "GRANA UILE" STEAMER.

MONUMENT TO THE LATE MAJOR FITZROY SOMERSET.

THE officers composing the brigade of Foot Guards have just erected a Memorial, in the Military Chapel, Birdcage-walk, to the memory of their gallant companion in arms, the late Major Fitzroy Somerset, who, it will be remembered, fell at the battle of Ferozshah, on the 21st of December, 1845, while acting as Military Secretary to the Governor-General of India. The Memorial, with the consent of the Master-General of the Ordnance, has been placed in the chancel of the chapel. It consists of a slab of white Carrara marble, supported on a groundwork of black Galway marble. The Tablet is surmounted by military emblems, and beneath are the armorial bearings of the deceased officer's family. The Memorial bears the following inscription:—



TABLET TO THE MEMORY OF THE LATE MAJOR FITZROY SOMERSET.

Sacred to the memory of
BREVET-MAJOR ARTHUR WILLIAM FITZROY SOMERSET,
Eldest son of Lieutenant-General Lord Fitzroy Somerset, K.C.B.,
Lieutenant and Captain in the Grenadier Guards,
And Military Secretary to the Governor-General of India,
Who died of his wounds, at Ferozshah,
On the 28th of December, 1845, in the 30th year of his age.

His military career, though short, was eminently distinguished. The official despatches of the Commander-in-Chief attest his individual heroism during the campaign of 1814 in Gwalior. The same records exist of his zealous exertions at the brilliant victory of Moodkee, on the 18th of December, 1845, and at Ferozshah, on the 21st of December, 1845. He fell, covered with wounds, while cheering the British troops to an attack upon the formidable batteries of the enemy. His brother officers of the brigade of Guards, earnestly desirous of marking their admiration of his valour and their regard for his memory, have caused this monument to be erected.

The deceased officer in early life was one of the pages to his Majesty George IV. When only seventeen years of age, he was gazetted to a lieutenancy in the Grenadier Guards, and subsequently served on the staff in Ireland, where his memory will be long cherished by all parties, for his courtesy while acting as Aide-de-Camp to the Commander of the Forces. He first departed on foreign service on the occasion of Lord Saltoun proceeding to China; and, while under that nobleman, he received some severe wounds. He next proceeded to the Continent of India as Military Secretary to Lord Ellenborough. He was present at the desperate battle of Maharajpore, and in subsequent operations terminating at Gwalior. He there received four severe wounds in a sharp rencontre, having made a desperate but unsuccessful effort to save Major-General Churchill, in attempting which he slew two of his antagonists, and disarmed a third. For this bold exploit, which was noticed in a most flattering manner in the despatch of Sir Hugh, now Lord Gough, he received his brevet majority. The termination of Major Somerset's career was thus appropriately described, in the despatch of the Governor-General, who, it will be recollected, acted as second in command of the troops on that occasion:—Major Somerset, my military secretary, much about the same time as Major Broadfoot, was shot through the body, conducting himself with the hereditary courage of his race. He was always foremost where difficulties were required to be overcome. I deeply regret his loss."

SALE OF THE "GREAT WESTERN" STEAM SHIP.—The Great Western steam ship has been sold at Bristol to Captain Claypoll, the secretary of the Royal West India Steam-Packet Mail Company, for £20,000, exclusive of her plate. It is intended that she shall sail from Southampton for a five months' voyage, and at the expiration of that period it is the company's intention to lay her up and expend a large sum upon her (report says £10,000) in repairs, refitting, &c.

BIRTH-DAY OF THE PRINCESS ALICE,

APRIL 25, 1847.

Fair Child! fair child; the opening dawn
Of life beams brightly on thy brow;
And playful as the glancing fawn
In Windsor's Royal glades art thou.
Sweet budlet of the regal rose,
Which England treasures in her breast,
E'en as the dawn may prove life's close,
Cloudless as summer's golden West.

Thy happy Mother's watchful eye
Exultingly beholds thee bloom;
A father's yearning heart is nigh,
And hails thy virtues' young perfume.
And brothers who shall bravely guard
Thee and the land that greets thy birth;
And Nations Three whose shields can ward
Far off the shafts of all the earth.

And well may England thank her God,
Who saves her from such harrowing scenes,
Where civil strife pollutes the sod
Which blushes for Iberia's Queens.
Well may the Land's soul-thanks be given
For Freedom's smile and gifts of Peace,
Which bid all bondage be unriven,
And the mind's starless night to cease.

Fair Child! fair Child! thy birthday this.
May happiness without alloy
Beam o'er thy path, and afterbliss
Receive thee in eternal joy.
Life's vista glows without a cloud
For thee, young Princess! So may shine
Thy soul from cradle to the shroud—
The soul, that image most divine.

L.

HER ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCESS ALICE.—DRAWN BY BALGNIET.

THE NEW HALL OF THE BRITISH MUSEUM.

On Monday, the splendid Entrance-Hall and principal Staircase to the New British Museum were opened to the public, who were then enabled to form some idea of the extent and superior accommodation of the new edifice. The number of visitors, throughout the day, was very considerable; and, in the afternoon, we recognised several gentlemen of literary and scientific eminence.

Thus, the public are now admitted to the Museum by the principal entrance, under the [illegible], which, together with the whole of the south facade, is a magnificent [illegible] of the Grecian Ionic order of architecture. It will be found engraved [illegible] Sir R. Smirke's design, at page 28 of our 4th Volume.

After passing beneath the Portico, the visitor, by a lofty doorway, of carved oak, enters the Hall, a noble apartment, 62 feet by 51 feet, and 30 feet high, and of the Grecian-Doric order. The ceiling is trabeated (cross beamed), deeply coffered, and enriched with Greek frets, and other ornaments, painted in encaustic, in various colours, most harmoniously blended: the large gold star upon a blue ground, in the centre of each coffer, has a superb effect. The floor is laid with large squares of Portland stone, and small grey marble diamonds at their angles. On the east side of the Hall are the rooms devoted to the Manuscript Department; the entrance doorway being flanked with Roubiliac's statue of Shakespeare, and Chantrey's statue of Sir Joseph Banks.

At the Western extremity of the Hall is the Principal Staircase. The centre flight is 17 feet wide, and is flanked by pedestals of grey Aberdeen granite, upon which will be placed colossal sculpture. On the first landing are two beautiful vases, on pedestals, of Huddlestone stone; and the balustrades are of the same material. The walls and ceiling are painted in oil, and in encaustic colours; and the ceiling is trabeated, coffered, and decorated to harmonise with the Entrance Hall.

The rooms immediately entered from this Staircase are those appropriated to the Zoological Department, which occupy, on the upper floor, the Eastern portion of the South Front, and the whole of the Eastern and Northern sides of the Quadrangle.

We are happy to find that the interest taken by the public in the Museum is evidently on the increase; on Easter Monday last, there were no fewer than 19,170 visitors; whereas, the number of visitors [illegible] was but [illegible]. We perceive, by the Parliamentary Estimates [illegible] issued) that, during the ensuing year there will be required for the new buildings in progress, exclusive of works, fittings, and furniture, £37,300. There is, also, an item of £2900 for ornamental sculpture.

London Society for Teaching the Blind to Read.—On Tuesday a very crowded and fashionable meeting assembled at the Hanover-square Rooms, Hanover-square, convened by the Society for Teaching the Blind to Read, in aid of the Funds of the Institution. An interesting feature in the day's proceedings was the attendance of several of the blind pupils, who, without preparation, read extracts from different parts of the Bible, by means of the raised type, and sang and played several sacred airs. The Bishop of Oxford took the chair, and made an eloquent appeal on behalf of the Society. The Bishop of Tasmania proposed the first resolution, which was seconded by Archdeacon Robinson, as follows:—"That the meeting do most heartily respond to this cause, and join in an expression of gratitude to Almighty God for the success which has attended the Society for the past year." Lord Dudley Stuart and the Reverend Richard Munro, having spoken in favour of the resolution, it was carried unanimously. The Secretary read the report of the Society, which is under the patronage of their Majesties the Queen and Queen Dowager, by which it appeared that more than 500 blind persons have been taught to read in the Society's schools, which at present contain 57 pupils. The funds were in a flourishing state, the balance in hand on the 31st Dec., 1846, being £59. From the crowded state of the [illegible] institution, and the numerous applications for admission, which are received [illegible], the Committee feel called on to erect a suitable building for the schools of the Society. A suitable site has been selected in the Avenue-road, the whole expense for which would not exceed £1800, and liberal donations are therefore earnestly solicited by the Committee. The report proceeds to state that the pupils are instructed in music, basket-work, fancy needle-work, &c.

ENTRANCE HALL AND PRINCIPAL STAIRCASE, NEW BRITISH MUSEUM.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

PROBLEM No. 168. We have received nearly a hundred letters on the subject of this position—some very petulant, and some wise, but all anxious as to the suppositious discovery that there is to be effected in two instead of four moves. We have not space to address these communications individually, and must therefore refer the writers to our solution in to-day's Paper, by much it will be seen that they, and not the author of the Problem, are at fault, as checkmate cannot possibly be given in less than the prescribed number of moves.

" Britannicus." They shall be examined.

" A. D. A."—The quarterly subscription of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle," including postage, is 4s 4d. We have no recollection of the Solution mentioned.

" Frank."—There is no law to prevent your "castling" a second time on each and every move," or saying fifty "absurd and ridiculous things: if good breeding and common sense are not sufficient restraint upon your inclination to be foolish when playing Chess, you should "sue to prevent.

" A Constant Reader."—The first coming "Hand-book for Chess Players" is not a collection of games well-contested, but an analytical Treatise on all the openings—illustrated by copious observations, diagrams of positions, and occasional played games.

" A Veteran." —You are right respecting Enigma 133. All applications concerning the St. George's Chess Club should be made to Mr. Lyndhalton, the Secretary.

" J. B." Very acceptable, and shall be duly examined.

" T. T. H."—See the solution of No. 169 to-day's ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

" A Subscriber, Y. H." Under such circumstances, the King could certainly take the Queen.

" V. I. V." We have not room to give the solution in full: play, 1. R to Q Kt 8th; 2. Q to Kt 7th, 3. Q takes Kt; and 4. Kt mates.

" H. B. A."—Type can be procured for Chess Diagrams of the Type-Founders. Cuzion's is the best.

" C." It would not be fair to do so.

" Juvenis."—Study Mr Kenny's translation of Calvi's Chess Lessons in the "Chronicle:" you will soon then "get over the Rook."

" J. N."—Next week.

" W. W." Have you seen Dr. Roget's method? You will find it in Tomlinson's "Amusements of Chess."

Solutions by "C. E. R.," "G. A. H.," "L. D. K.," "Sopwarth" (except 169), "P. B.," "Galesheed," "H. Y. Z.," "N. D." (except 169), "N. V. I.," "J. S.," "E. G. B.," "A. H. W.," and "J. R. R." are correct. To "T. H.," "Frank," "C. C." "Paisley," "J. B. W." "V. V. V." "F. J. H." "a Pupil," "Urbanus," "A. C. B." "F. P." "R. E." "Ernest," "Julia," "Warwick-square," "D. D." "M. P." and "S." are all wrong.

 Any Amateur desirous of playing a Game of Chess by Correspondence is requested to address to "Cato," 7, Grange-place, Grange-road, Bermondsey.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, No. 169.

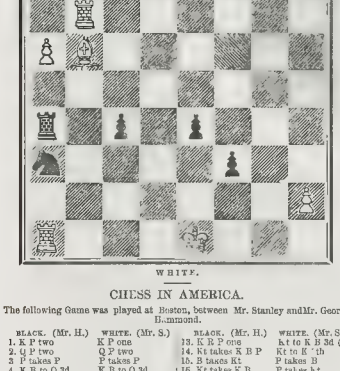
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE	BLACK.
1. P to K B's 6th	1. K takes R	3. Kt mates
2. P to Q Rs 7th	K to K 8th (ch)	4. R mates	Any move

PROBLEM. No. 170.

By Mr. Mc. G—y.

White to mate in four moves.

BLACK.



WHITE.

CHESS IN AMERICA.

The following Game was played at Boston, between Mr. Stanley and Mr. George Hammond.

BLACK. (Mr. H.)	WHITE. (Mr. S.)	BLACK. (Mr. H.)	WHITE. (Mr. S.)
1. K P two	K P one	13. K R P one	K to K B 3d (a)
2. Q P two	Q P two	14. K takes K B P	Kt to K 7th
3. P takes P	P takes P	15. B takes Kt	P takes B
4. K B to Q 3d	K B to Q 3d	16. Kt takes K B	P takes kt
5. Q B to K 3d	Q B to K 3d	17. R to K 7th	P takes K Kt P
6. K Kt to B 3d	K Kt to B 3d	18. K takes P	R to K B 3d
7. Q Kt to B 3d	Q B to Q 2d	19. B takes R	R takes B
8. Q Kt to K 2d	Q Kt to Q 2d	20. Q to Q Kt 4th	Kt to Q 4th
9. Q Kt to K 3d	Castles	21. Q to Q R 3d	Kt to K B 6th (ch).
10. Castles	K Kt to Kt 5th	22. K to R sq	B checks
11. Q to Q 2d	K B P two	23. K B P one	Q to Q 2d
12. Q B to Kt 5th	Q to Q 3d	And White wins (b)

(a) But why not capture the K B P, instead of retreating?

(b) This is a brief and smartly conducted skirmish, with two or three pretty features towards the end.

CHESS IN GERMANY.

GAME OF A MATCH NOW PLAYING BETWEEN HERRN O. W. AND HERRN V. OF LEIPSIC.

WHITE. (O. W)	BLACK. (V.)	WHITE. (O W)	BLACK. (V.)
1 K P two	K P two	19. Q R to K sq	Q to K 4th
2 K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	20. Kt to Kt 5th	Q R to Kt sq
3 B to Q B 4th	B to Q B 4th	21. Q takes Q B P	Q to K R 3rd
4 Q to K 2nd	Q P one	22 kt to K 4th (c)	Q to K R 5th
5 K P one	K P one	23 Q to Q B 4th	P to K B 4th (d)
6 Q B P one	K Kt to B 3rd	24 kt takes K P	Q to K Kt 6th (e)
7 Castles	Castles	25. P to Q 4th	Kt takes K R P
8 Q P one	Q B P two		(check)
9 Q Kt to Q 2nd	B takes B	26. K to R sq	Kt takes K B P
10 Kt takes B	Q Kt P two		(check)
11 Q Kt to K 3rd	K P one	27. R takes Kt	Q takes R
12 Q Kt to K 5th (a)	Q Kt to K 2nd	28. Q to K 6th (ch)	K to R sq
13 K Kt to R 4th	K takes Kt	29 Kt takes P (ch)	K to Kt 2nd
14 Kt takes K R P (b)	Q to K R 3rd	30. P takes K B P	R takes P
15 Q to K Kt 4th	Q to K B 3rd	31. R to K 3rd	K to K R 4th (ch)
16 Q B takes K R P	K Kt P one	32 R to Kt 3rd	R takes kt (ch)
17 B takes R P	B P takes B	33 P takes B	Q to K B 6th (ch)
18 Kt to K 3rd	Q B P one	34 K to K 2nd	Q to B 7th (ch)

Black now draws the game by "perpetual check."

(a) This is generally a fine commanding position for the Kt.

(b) Very by the by (merely enabling White to bring his distant co-operation with the Kt.

(c) P to Q Kt 4th would have been better play.

(d) Black should now have taken the K B P (check with his Kt, e. g.—

23	Kt (take P (ch)
24 P take. Kt (Cast)	Q takes R (ch)
25 K to R sq	Q takes R P (ch)

Drawing the game, at least, and winning if the P compels the play K to Kt 3rd, &c. wed by K to K R sq.

(e) Again Black could have drawn the game, by taking the K R P with his Kt.

This clever little affair came off lately between Mr. Horwitz and Mr. O., an Italian amateur, the former giving the enormous advantage of the Q Rook, Q Kt, and Q K P (which must be removed from the board).

WHITE (Mr Horwitz.)	BLACK (Mr. O.)	WHITE (Mr. Horwitz.)	BLACK (Mr. O.)
1. K P two	K P two	7. P takes Kt	Kt to K 2nd
2. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	8. Q to K B 3rd	K P one
3. Q P two	B takes P	9. Kt to K 4th	P takes Q
4 K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	10. Kt to B 6th (ch)	K to d sq
5 to Q 5th	K Kt to B 3rd	11. B mates
6 Kt to K 5th	Kt takes B

CHESS ENIGMAS.

(HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.)

No. 166.—By C. F., Dublin.

WHITE	BLACK	BLACK
K at his 2nd	K at his 5th	K P to K 4th
R at Q R 6th	Pieces K 4th & Q 3rd	B's at K K 3rd and K 3rd

White playing first, mates in five moves.

No. 167.—By Mr. S. BODEN, of the Hull Chess Club.

WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q R sq	K at his 4th
Q at her B 7th	P at Q R 7th
R at Q 6th
at K Kt 3rd
P at K Kt 2nd, Q 2nd,
Q B 6th, and Q Kt 3rd

White to play, and mate in two moves.

No. 168.—By Mr. A. L., of Ipswich.

WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q R 7th	K at Q K Kt
B at K Kt 8th	P's at Q R 4th and
Kts at Q Kt 2nd, and	6th
Q 8th
P's at Q 3rd and 4th, and Q R 2nd

White to play and mate in four moves.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—During the present week a very limited supply of wh[illegible] millers has come to hand, causing the sales, as by last week, to be confined [illegible] the increased attendance of buyers the [illegible] was unusually small. Owing to which [illegible] instances, 2s per quarter and an [illegible] clearances was effected. A good d[illegible] Scotch and has taken place, yet a large quantity re- taken to Essex and Kent [illegible] 2s per quarter me e money [illegible] Barley was good the tra[illegible] ums, at very full prices. The quantity of mal[illegible] on sale was not [illegible] the trade on [illegible] were wholly inactive at unaltered [illegible] Nearly 20,000 quarters [illegible] of oats arrived. All kinds moved off [illegible], at last year quotations. Beans [illegible] were [illegible] at 6s per, with a steady inquiry.

[illegible] Wheat, 3810; barley, 940; malt, 3430; oats, 630. Irish: Wheat [illegible]; barley, —; oats, 320. Foreign: Wheat, 7100 quarters; flour, [illegible] sacks.

[illegible] Flour: 3410 sacks, — [illegible]

[illegible] Wheat: Essex and Kent, 70s to 82s; ditto white, 82s to 86s. Norfolk and Suffolk, 77s to 81s; ditto white 82s to 86s; rye, 54s to 56s; grinding barley 42s to 42s; ditto [illegible] 46s to 50s; malting ditto, 54s to 56s; malt, [illegible] to 80s; ditto [illegible] Kingston and Ware, 78s to 76s. Chevalier, 76s to 78s; Lincolnshire and Lincolnshire [illegible] 36s to 38s; potato ditto, 34s to 36s. Youghal and Cork, black, 34s to 36s; ditto [illegible] 37s to 40s. Beans, new, 44s to 47s; ditto old, —s to —s; grey peas, 42s to 45s; maple, 43s to 48s; white, 54s to 57s; boilers, 58s to 60s, per quarter. Town-made flour, 40s per sack; Essex and Suffolk, 38s; Hertfordshire, 37s; Yorkshire, 36s per 280 lbs. Foreign: Barley, [illegible] 7s. 7d to 10s 2d; white, 7s 6d to 8s 10d; barley, 4s 2d to 4s 8d; oats, 2s 1d to 3s 2d; beans, 4s 4d to 5s 3d; peas, 4s 4d to 5s 3d per quarter. Flour, American, 27s to 28s per 196 lbs; Hamburgh, —s to —s.

[illegible] In clover seed, next to nothing has been [illegible] either on spot or [illegible] almost English, and 40s to 50s Italian, trifling [illegible] [illegible] to the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

COLOSSEUM.—NOTICE.
The whole of the Magnificent Establishment
IS THROWN OPEN
DAY OF READING
FOR TWO SHILLINGS.
Children Half Price
Open from Ten till Half past Five, and 8 to 11 Half-past Ten

ST MARK'S, VENICE.—DIORAMA, REGENT'S-PARK.
JUST OPENED, with a new and highly interesting exhibition, replete with the Interior of St. Mark's, at Venice, lately considered one of the most magnificent Temples in the Christian World, and a View of TIVOLI, near Rome, by Mr. Danson, at 8 o'clock. The Picture of St. Mark's is painted by Mr. Johnson, and Mr. Danson, from sketches made on the spot, expressly for the Diorama, by the late Mr. Bouton. The View of Tivoli is painted by Mr. Bouton. Both interesting with the novel and striking effects of light and shade. Open from 10 a.m. till 5 p.m. Admission, 1s.; Stalls, 2s.

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS. The tenth Annual Exhibition is NOW OPEN, at the Gallery, 53, Pall Mall, next to St. James's Palace.—Admission, 1s.—Catalogue, 6d. JAMES ORRIN SMITH, Secretary.

VELASQUEZ. THE LONG-LOST PORTRAIT of PRINCE BALTHASAR CARLOS, afterwards Philip IV., when a Child, on Horseback, and the Prince's Stay at Madrid, in 1623, when his marriage with the Infanta was proposed. This superb work, one of the extraordinary powers of the artist, is now EXHIBITING Daily, from Eleven o'Clock to Dusk, at 21, Old Bond-street.—Admission, 1s.

BRUNETTI'S MODEL of ANCIENT JERUSALEM.—Recent Visitors.—The Duke and Duchess of St. Albans, Bishop of London, Duchess of Gloucester, Lady Diana Beauclerk, Lady Dacre, Lady Talbot, the Baroness de Stonborg Lord and Lady Castlereagh, Hon. and Rev. Montagu Villiers and family, Lady Rodd Archdeacon of Bedford, Earl of Hopetoun, Lord and Lady Colvill, Archbishop of Armagh &c. 218, Piccadilly. Illustrated by a gentleman every hour.—Eleven till Five, and Seven to Nine. Admission, 1s.; children and schools, 6d.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—LECTURES in illustration of ANIMAL MECHANISM by Mr Rymer Jones, Esq., on Comparative Anatomy at King's College, on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at half-past Three o'Clock.—LECTURES on ARTIFICIAL LIGHT, and the Agents that produce it, by Professor Guenlin, by Dr Bachhoffner.—EXPERIMENTS with ARMSTRONG'S HYDRO ELECTRIC MACHINE. The WORK-ING MODELS—and many other interesting Novelties in MECHANICS and OPTICAL EFFECTS.—Open from Ten in the Morning till Five in the Evening.—WELL, Sec. &c. Admission, 1s.; Schools, Half-price

ILLUSTRATED EDITION.—COMPLETE.
THE NEW TESTAMENT,
IN
SIXTY ILLUSTRATIONS BY KENNY MEADOWS.
AND
THE MINIATURE.
A Large Copper-plate View of the Holy Land, Historical and Descriptive.
"The ILLUSTRATED NEW TESTAMENT contains some fine bold and imaginative sketches, where it is made evident Mr. Kenny Meadows and the artist are both well fitted for the task."—Monthly Review.
"Mr. Meadows has been shown in the execution of such cuts; and even those which have been, as it were, pitched in a hurry, are not wanting of originality and power."—Daily News.
"A publication characterized by the spirit of the well-known proprietors of the 'Illustrated London News,' and deserves, we doubt not, to circulate far and wide. The Illustrations are characterized by a daring originality, and finish, with a boldness and beauty that make them eminently attractive."—Weekly Times.
London: Published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. Sold by all Booksellers.
PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE (NOW READY).
No. V. will be published on the 30th of April, and Monthly on the 30th of May.

ORDER "THE MAN IN THE MOON."
Edited by ALBERT SMITH and ANGUS B REACH
"This Monthly, so racy in its jokes, is the best comic serial we have. We only melancholy itself to stand against it."—Edinburgh Weekly Register.
"This is a publication fully equal to the brightest days of 'Punch.' Wit and humour stood hold emblem, but it is the wit that philosophizes, and the humour that leads to reflection. To the laughter loving we cordially recommend this little monthly."—Somerset County Gazette.
Nos. I., II., III., and IV., have been reprinted, and may be had at every Railway station, Library, and of every Bookseller in the Kingdom. Price 6d. only.
Office 17, Warwick lane.

NEW NOVEL BY MRS TROLLOPE
Now handy, in 2 vols., post 8vo.
THE THREE COUSINS.
A NOVEL.
BY MRS. TROLLOPE,
Author of "The Barnabys," "The Widow Barnaby," &c.
HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS: History of the succession of the Ancient Roman Emperors, with the Prices of their Coins. Beautiful Portraits, their Dates and Actions, is just published by F. WILLIAMS, Dealer in Ancient Coins, 48 Strand (Lowndes's corner), post 8vo, 1s. 6d.; or by post, 1s. 8d. Catalogue gratis.

TWENTY-TWO STEEL ENGRAVINGS, from Designs by Eminent Artists, to Illustrate the new Classic Edition of PICKWICK, now publishing in Monthly Parts, at Two Shillings, or, in complete sets, price One Shilling and Eightpence! forming the cheapest Illustrated Work ever offered to the Public.
London: J. NEWMAN, 45 Wat-lane-street.
Now Ready, in large type, price 1s., PEACOCK'S EDITION of MARTIN THE FOUNDLING. By EUGENE SUE. The only UNMUTILATED LONDON extract, every sentence of the original both fully and faithfully rendered. Posted in a wrapper, 1s. 4d.
The beautiful Portrait of the Author. Be sure and order Franklin's Edition the only [illegible]
To be had of all Booksellers, or of the Publisher, 10, Paternoster-row.

WHAT TO EAT, DRINK, and AVOID; with Diet Tables for [illegible] HAPPY; on Regimen, Exercise, and Air. By [illegible] JAS CULVERWELL, M.D. M.R.C.S., L.S.A. &c. Sixth Edition. The Author, 19, Argyll-street Regent-street and all Booksellers.

"I come, I come, to the aid of the brave and the free,
To the land of the brave and the free."
JENNY LIND'S FIRST APPEARANCE in ENGLAND will appear in THE PIANISTA, for MAY, No 80 with two others, as many by heart and [illegible] every by Pischek. The standard Bal[illegible] The [illegible] ARTISTS' Album, for [illegible] 97, Fleet-st. 78 or 12 Nos. THE PIANISTA contains 16 Songs by Russe, and No 77, [illegible] pian Songs, &c.

LONGCHAMP.—All the Novelties introduced at this annual [illegible] are faithfully represented in the TOILETTES PARISIAN COSTUMES for MAY, containing four quart[illegible] sheets, with descriptions and numerous Cuts [illegible] An [illegible] of any of the [illegible] numbers of this work, which has now been established [illegible] years, may be had. Fashions have been taken from these models. To be had of all Booksellers, [illegible] One Shilling.

ALL THE FASHIONS FOR MAY, six Plates, including a SUPERB PORTRAIT OF JENNY LIND, consisting of the most unexampled array from the Palace of Millinery, Morals, Wedding, and Carriage Dresses Evening Dresses, Coiffures, &c. &c., will form the Jan Fashion Book of THE WORLD OF FASHION, MONTHLY MAGAZINE OF LONDON and PARIS. To be Published on THURSDAY NEXT, the 1st of APRIL, by J. BELL, 186, Strand, London. Orders will be received by all Booksellers and Newsmen whatever residence.

STARTLING NOVELTIES in the LADIES' GAZETTE of FASHION for MAY, the only Work that contains the correct SUMMER FASHIONS [illegible] Part-One, 1s 6d.) The most complete collection ever published under this [illegible] work; all the Paris Fashions and Out-door Costume in one sea variety. [illegible] 100 new Patterns. 16 Working Designs for Vests, Collars, Morning [illegible] &c. &c. Also, Children's Dresses, &c. A supb Coloured Giant Plate, also 16 others, [illegible] of the Paris riglolets in cut, Poetry, Music, Guide to Ladies of London Knitting, Netting, and Crochet. 27, BARRETT, Bolt-court, Fleet-street. Sent [illegible] Mess. LONGMAN and Co.

MARTIN THE FOUNDLING, COMPLETE.—THE FAMILY HERALD of LAST WEEK contains the conclusion of the above Extraordinary Tale, in FIRE or SIX. Order Nos. 108 or 109, or Part 22, 2d or 2s. 6d. A New Volume of the Family Herald, and commences in a Week. Time is the most estimable, the most useful, and most destroying gift of nature—hourly the best periodical ever published for One Penny. All Booksellers sell the Penny Herald.
Just Published, in a neat pocket volume, price 2s. 6d.
THE ECONOMIC CHESS-BOARD; being a Chess-Board, provided with a complete set of Chess-Men, for playing Games in Carriages, or out of doors, and for defending the men and carrying them in the pocket, without disturbing the Game. Invented by the Rev. [illegible] Rector of Bucknell, Oxfordshire.
"The Chess-Board is peculiarly adapted for working out Chess Problems, and for the study of published games."—Bell's Life.
London: LONGMAN, Brown, GREEN, and LONGMANS

MONS. LEPAGE'S L'ECHO DE PARIS: being a Selection of Familiar Phrases which a person would hear daily, if living in France. With a vocabulary and idioms.—"Mons. Le Page's pocket Book must be a treasure to those who are going to journey through any part of France."—Bell's Life in London. "Little is deserved. His book is the very thing for a traveller."—Sun. "A variety of useful information."—Morning Herald. "Contains many valuable hints, and the pronunciation of the French language, inasmuch as it approaches nearest to that best of all possible Books, familiarity with words."—Observer. "Mons. Le Page's pocket Book is Swedish Song, Composed and Sung by Mademoiselle Jenny Lind.

Allegro con brio.
VOICE.
PIANOFORTE.
Come and see the dance - ing; Let us go and join them, Pair and pair ad - vance ing.
Kom och låt oss dan - sa. Du och jag ej par ej bli - va da.
Komm' und laßt uns tan - zen. Du und ich wie paa - ren, daß ein Paar wir blei - ben.
Lisi-en, lit-tle maiden, yet to me,
Hör du lil-la fi-cka på et ord,
Höre du kleines Mädchen noch ein Wort:
Tell me, will you love me, mine, oh! will you be?
säg vill du bliva mig en vän så god?
Sag' willst mir ei - ne gu-te Freundin seyn?
Lisi-en, lit-tle maiden,
Hör du lil-la fi-cka
Höre du kleines Mädchen
yet to me, Tell me, will you love me, mine, oh! will you be?
på et ord, säg vill du bliva mig en vän så god?
noch ein Wort: Sag' willst' mir eine gu-te Freun-din seyn?
Tra la la la, No, I will not, no! tra la la la, No, I will not, no! —
nej det vill jag ej — nej det vill jag ej —
Nein das will ich nicht! — Nein das will ich nicht! —
Jenny Lind.

MDLLE. JENNY LIND.

HERE is a general rule, that nothing can be more fatal to the enthusiastic veneration with which great geniuses are regarded, than a personal acquaintance, or a too intimate knowledge, of the details of their history and character. The qualities of mind and heart do not necessarily go together; and nature, too often, to keep the balances even, compensates for uncommon gifts by uncommon deficiencies. Happy are those who meet with the exceptions to this rule. Of these, the artist with whose portrait we this day present our readers is one. Great as is the fame of her genius, the peculiarities of her character and disposition are almost equally well known; and these have created a prepossession in her favour which the perusal of the few simple details of her life will fully confirm.

The love of her art has been the ruling sentiment of the life of Mdlle. Jenny Lind, who, from her earliest infancy, displayed that marvellous musical organisation with which, from time to time, some few favoured beings are endowed, and which presents such a curious phenomenon to the observer. In her it has triumphed over discouragements and difficulties, which, had her vocation been less decided, would have made her abandon her art. Almost as soon as she began to speak, she began to sing; at the age of three years she retained by heart every melody she heard, and when a little older, whatever tasks were set her, the little girl's clear ringing voice was heard lightning her toil. Her parents were at the head of an establishment for children at Stockholm, where Jenny Lind was born; and, engrossed by their avocations, took but little notice of the child's wonderful aptitude; when Jenny had reached the age of nine years, however, a Swedish actress, named Frau Lundberg, perceiving this dawning genius, strongly advised the adoption of a theatrical career for her. Madame Lind, who entertained a strong prejudice against the stage as a profession, at first positively refused; but, over persuaded by the thought of the brilliant success which all assured her awaited the child, she relented—and yet the parents remained in doubt whether the shy quiet girl would ever possess the courage and self-confidence for such a career. The little Jenny, however, when the proposal was mentioned before her, contrary to all expectations, entered into it with ardour, and the matter ended by her being placed under Croelius, a famous music master of Stockholm.

The latter, delighted by the child's astonishing aptitude, brought her to Count Fluke, who was director of the Court Theatre, and begged him to listen to her. The director measured the pale delicate girl with his eyes, and asked Croelius angrily if he was mad to propose bringing a baby like that on the stage. Croelius insisted; and, no sooner did the Count hear the sweet clear tones of the child's voice than he was as eager as the other to produce her, and, soon after, the little Jenny appeared in a child's part at the Court Theatre. Again, she astonished all by the unlooked for vivacity and originality of her acting.

Thus she reached her twelfth year, when an unlooked-for misfortune deprived Jenny Lind of the position she had attained, and seemed to menace all the brilliant dreams of future greatness which even then haunted the young girl's imagination. Her voice left her almost entirely. M. Berg, who was then her music master, endeavoured in vain, by dint of practice, to recall its silver tones. They were gone. Poor Jenny was reduced to the minor parts, and all thought her career ended, like that of many another infant prodigy. She endured this change in silence and resignation, but the disappointment sank deep into her heart. Amongst her most ardent aspirations was that of performing Weber's "Agatha." This part had awakened all her sympathy, and she had hoped some day to perform it. That hope was gone; but, though she had fallen from her dreams of ambition, she yet, with admirable perseverance, continued her musical studies, in which, even then, she acquired an uncommon proficiency. Four years passed in this manner, when a happy circumstance brought her again into public notice. The fourth act of Meyerbeer's "Robert le Diable" was to be performed at a public concert at Stockholm; a singer was wanted for the part of Alice, who, in this act, has nothing but a solo very little known, and of such small importance, that no singer could be found to undertake it. Jenny's master, M. Berg, then thought of his poor little pupil, and proposed to her to study the part, which she did, though with fear and trembling. As the time approached, her tremors redoubled; but, on the evening of the performance, as if by magic, her voice returned, and the astonished public, recognising in little favourite, listened with such deep attention, and applauded her with such enthusiasm, that the despised solo became the most important feature of the evening's performance. From this moment her fate assumed a brighter aspect, and what was her joy when the delighted Berg declared that she must now study the part of Agatha. She had obtained the object of her earnest longings, for "Der Freyschütz" was the opera in which she made her début at Stockholm, and laid the commencement of her future greatness. After this she entered into an engagement for all the principal parts.

Those who witness the marvellous facility of vocalisation which is one of the most striking features of Jenny Lind's performance, would hardly believe that, at this period, she and her master laboured in vain to subdue the stubbornness of her voice, which, though pure and powerful, was totally deficient in elasticity; but nothing would dismay her; step by step, and with indefatigable patience, vanquished the difficulties that her organ thus presented. Her great desire, however, was to reach Paris, and to put herself under the tuitelage of Garcia, who was considered the first master of the day. She laboured indefatigably to obtain the sum necessary to pay her expences in Paris for two years. Her parents could not accompany her without giving up their position and means of subsistence; but nothing could the fervent, high-minded girl, whose love of her art overcame even her natural timidity, and, at eighteen years of age, she set forth alone for the French metropolis, accompanied by the good wishes of all.

Arrived in Paris, she presented herself immediately to Garcia, who received her kindly, and begged her to sing, which she did with an anxiety she could not suppress. Hardly had she finished, than the master said, "My child, you have no voice!"—terrible words for the poor girl—"or," said he, correcting himself, "you have had a voice, and are on the point of losing it. I can give you no lessons now, but my advice is, that you remain three months without singing a note, and then return to me;" and thus he dismissed the poor girl, the hope of whose life he had thus overthrown.

For the first time, far from her home and friends, Jenny Lind became disheartened and almost despairing. During these three months, "I lived," said she afterwards, "with my tears." At the end of the time, however, Garcia found her voice improved, and began to give her lessons. With what energy she must have laboured to profit by them is shown by the fact that she had but nine months granted her to take the instructions of her new master. At this time a countrywoman of Jenny's, Fraulein Nissen, was likewise taking lessons of Garcia. She had no genius, but possessed a most powerful voice; and Garcia often said of his two pupils, "If Jenny Lind had the voice of Nissen, or the other had the genius of Jenny, she would be the greatest singer in Europe." But, nevertheless, Garcia did not comprehend the whole extent of his young pupil's resources; for, though her facility of invention was such that he frequently copied her fioritures, and adopted them instead of his own, no one was more surprised by the wonderful improvement of her organ, and extraordinary success of her first public appearance, than the master himself. Jenny Lind had been a year in Paris, when she received the visit of a countryman, a musical composer, who had known her in Sweden, and who came to bring her back to Stockholm. This gentleman procured her an introduction which has had considerable influence on her after fate—she made the acquaintance of Meyerbeer. Great was the admiration her genius and her voice excited in the illustrious composer, who, curious to ascertain the effect of her singing in a large space, obtained the permission for the young artist to make a trial before a select circle of listeners at the Académe of Paris. She there sang three long scenas from "Robert le Diable," "Norma," and "Der Freyschütz," with such magnificent effect that Meyerbeer immediately proposed to her an engagement for Berlin. By this time, however, Jenny was home-sick, and longed to revisit Sweden. She left Paris soon after this for Stockholm, and was received with enthusiasm in her "father-land." Universal were the entreaties that the gifted songstress should remain at Stockholm, and all Jenny's love for her home and country coincided with this proposal; but, on the other side, the offer of Meyerbeer opened for her such a prospect as it seemed like madness to reject; and Jenny Lind concluded the engagement. She then went to Dresden, where Meyerbeer was writing his last opera, and studied her part with him, at the same time acquiring an acquaintance with the German language, to which she had hitherto been a stranger. She was, however, after a month's absence, recalled to Sweden to perform on the occasion of the coronation of the King of Sweden.

In October, 1844, Jenny Lind made her first appearance at Berlin, and the effect she produced there will be remembered by all; for, from that time forward, her name became a familiar word throughout Europe. She had yet, and has still, retained all her timidity of character; and the idea of a public appearance in a great capital like Berlin agitated her exceedingly. Besides this, she had another difficulty; but two months before her début, she had not been able to speak twenty German words consecutively; and those who are acquainted with the difficulties of that fine language, will wonder how she was enabled to master them in time for her first appearance. She remained four months at the Prussian capital, creating an enthusiasm there of which the quiet Germans would hardly have been deemed capable. Since that time she has been travelling all over Germany, always with the same results; and, even at Vienna, before that "people of judges and critics," the effect produced by her appearance almost exceeded that which she created elsewhere. She was treated with the most flattering marks of consideration by the Empress and Archduchess Maria; and it is quite amusing to hear of the enthusiasm she excited amongst all ranks of society in this capital, which evinced itself especially at her departure for England. On the last night, the spectators, who had witnessed her performance with interminable calls before the curtain, and applause in every form, accompanied her home. She was obliged to appear thirty times running at the window of her apartment—the crowd constantly repeating, "Jenny Lind, say you will come again."

We publish this day, with a Portrait of Mdlle. Lind (a remarkable resemblance), with a Swedish song of her own composition, when only a child.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—Saturday, April 24, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 261.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, MAY 1, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE BROKEN COMMISSION.

HE power that makes can unmake, and the Parliament-created sovereignty of the Poor-Law Commissioners may now be considered virtually abrogated. No matter in what altered shape their power seems to survive, it has received a blow from which it will never recover; and, with it, the principle of centralization, never popular, has, after the most extensive trial it ever received, been visited with something like condemnation. Whether the personal conduct of the Commissioners has brought this about, or whether it was the tendency of the law itself to break down, is not yet settled. Many persons believe that, better administered, the system would have answered; others contend that had a Howard himself been entrusted with such powers, he could not but have used them harshly, from mere ignorance of men and things in different localities. Our own belief is that the Poor-Law Commissioners were guilty of singular mismanagement in most of their proceedings, as if they were destitute of all knowledge of the world. They had a most unfortunate facility of offending those they were appointed to direct; they got their official deputies into difficulties, and then abandoned them without scruple; in many cases of local management, they first defied public opinion, then tried to stifle it, and at last succumbed, as if frightened at the storm they raised—doing that finally by apparent compulsion which they should have done at first by free-will.

It might be thought that the management of the pauperism of a country could never be an office that would awaken pride. The regulating a Dietary, numbering the quarts of gruel and ounces of bread of a pauper's subsistence, with all the sordid details of workhouse life, appears in itself rather a humiliating function—the dirty work of the lowest department of a State. Yet, there was not a Government office that exhibited more superciliousness and disregard of the feelings of those who had to apply to it, as the records of many a Board of Guardians could prove. The dignity of Commissioners disguised the undignified nature of the business, and concealed, also, the fact that the great mass of the public had no belief in their utility, but thought, on the contrary, that three highly-paid officers, to act as dampers on the superfluous liberality of parish overseers, were not very necessary. The tendency of parishes is not to err on the side of liberality in expenditure; and, the pinching, and starving, and getting rid of the poor, by the relief officers under both systems, old and new, required no encouragement from a Central Board. But there were such things as abuses—peculation, and misuse of funds, and so forth, which the Commissioners were to put an end to: if people paid the slightest attention to the management of their own affairs, such abuses would be impossible; and in those parishes that are well-managed and independent, we believe those abuses are as carefully checked as in any under the Commission. At all events, no parish under a "local act" has afforded such revelations as the Union-house at Andover. The Commission was, in fact, an elaborate and expensive machinery for doing that which the people preferred doing for themselves: there was from the beginning a conviction in the public mind that the Board was unnecessary. The questions submitted to them were rarely beyond the reach of the local intellect, and might as well have been left to the Guardians themselves: nay, in nine cases out of ten it would have been much better, for they knew all the circumstances of the case, and the Commissioners could not. This was the feeling in the rural districts, and a very natural one. If there is anything that Englishmen hate more thoroughly than another, it is the multiplication of forms for doing what may as well be done at once and directly. It is edifying to see how an Englishman frets and growls himself into a fever over the endless formalities of German and Prussian official business when he comes in contact with it. He consigns all their schreiberei and printed documents and forms to summary perdition, feeling always prompted to knock the nail on the head at a blow. Yet the mania for officially regulating ordinary and common things, when once indulged in, may be carried to an incredible excess. The directions and rules for a railway traveller in Germany are equal to a long Act of Parliament; and the Government cannot conceive that nine-tenths of what they provide for so carefully might be safely left to the common sense of the passengers themselves. Once give over a matter to official regulation, and the tendency is to overdo it. Something of this kind has happened with the Poor-Law Commission: whether the dietary of a workhouse should contain an ounce more or an ounce less of meat, and whether the dinner on such a day should be of pudding or soup, were matters that might be left to the Guardians, without requiring to be settled by a Board in London, through whole quires of official correspondence. So of other things: the impression produced of the Commission in half it did was that it was not necessary. This would have been felt had it conducted itself faultlessly; but it added to this impression the positive faults of being harsh, not a little imperative, and sometimes discourteous.

It was not till a late period that suspicions began to be entertained of its administrative capacity; it was not till the Committee of Inquiry sat on the proceedings connected with the Andover Union, that those suspicions were confirmed. And it was with no little surprise the revelations of that inquiry were received. It was hardly considered possible that such a forgetfulness of the law could have occurred in the very centre of its power, and among those who were its interpreters. Those who were daily consulted on points springing out of the Act, were habitually disregarding the authority that created them. As a contemporary observes:—"When the complex nature of the old Poor Law abuses, which had so long baffled the attempts of Parliament to correct them, suggested the propriety of creating for the purpose a powerful central agency, it was natural and legitimate to argue that such an agency might be safely employed in a country where the character of public men stands so high, and where the controlling power of public opinion is so great as it is in England. It was fair to expect that the conduct of Commissioners invested with high powers would be distinguished by the sanctimonious observance of the Law, the same exactness in the details of business, the same tone of humanity and courtesy, and the same respect for the rights of others, to which we are accustomed in Judges and Ministers of State." All these fair expectations, however, have been deceived, and by the reluctant testimony of a friend of the system; there have been instead, "habitual violations of the express provisions of an Act of Parliament, harshness and insolence of tone towards the public, and unrelenting severity in crushing individuals personally obnoxious," "results which might be supposed as little to be apprehended in the present age as bribery in the Court of Queen's Bench, or high treason inthe Home-Office."

THE HIGH LEVEL BRIDGE, BUILDING AT NEWCASTLE.—FROM A PICTURE BY MR. CARMICHAEL.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

The remodelling the Commission is a virtual condemnation of it; but the system that has been created appears to render some central control necessary; the principle of that central authority is, however, weakened. And, in truth, the management of the pauperism of the country, varying as that destitution does, in its causes and effects, in almost every district, does not seem capable of being brought under one uniform system. The enforcing one code of regulations on all, must create hardship in those places for which they are unsuited; if it is said that the central power will be guided in its decision by the opinion of those conversant with the locality, what is this but acknowledging the unfitness of the central power, and its dependence on the local interests? And if it is, at last, the local opinion that decides, why not give it the direct management, instead of forcing it to reach its own sphere of action by passing through a distant, and not well instructed Board? England has really many centres; the north and the south are almost as distinct in character as two nations, and, from natural circumstances, will remain so. And if there is any matter of Government in which centralization is less necessary than another, it is certainly the administration of the Poor Law. When the law of settlement is simplified, it will be still less necessary than now; an innate conviction of this is at the bottom of the failure of the Poor Law Commission.

THE HIGH LEVEL BRIDGE, NOW IN PROGRESS AT NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE.

(From a Picture by Mr. Carmichael.)

The prefixed Engraving represents an intended structure, which promises to surpass the numerous extraordinary works already called up by the railway genius.

This gigantic undertaking is the project of Mr. Hudson, for the Newcastle and Berwick Railway Company; and the name of Robert Stephenson as engineer, conveys assurance that the work is in able hands. Mr. T. E. Harrison is assistant engineer. The contract for mason work, which was let for £192,300 viz., £97,000 for the bridge, £86,000 for the viaduct in Newcast e, and £9,000 for the viaduct in Gateshead has been undertaken by Messrs. Rush and Lawton and Messrs. Wilson and Gibson. Messrs Hawks and Crawshay are the contractors for the iron work.

We quote the accompanying detail of the designs from the Sunderland and Durham County Herald, March 19, 1847:

"The bridge will extend from the Castle Garth on the north to the high ground on the south side of the river. The approach on the south side will commence on the York and Newcastle Railway.

"There will be two roadways; one on a level with the Castle Garth, for carriages and foot-passengers; and the other, at an elevation of 22 feet above it, with three lines of railway for locomotives. The carriage road will be 1350 feet in length on a straight line, and the locomotive way will be immediately above, with the exception of a space at each end; the locomotive line diverging at a point about 270 feet from each end; to the west, on the north side, to run into a general station to be built at the Forth, a piece of open ground on the western side of the town; and to the east, on the south side, to form a junction with the main line southward. These diverging portions of the locomotive-way will be supported on a handsome colonnade, each consisting of twenty metal pillars, which will give to the entire structure a magnificent finish

"The bridge itself will consist of six river arches, with four land arches on each side - the former 124ft. 10in., and the latter 36ft. 3in., span; the former diminishing in altitude from the foundation upwards, corresponding with the steep bank of the river basin. These arches will be supported on piers of solid masonry, and will be constructed of cast-iron. The piers will be 46ft. by 16ft. 6in. in thickness, and in extreme height 134ft. from the foundation, having an opening in the centre through each. These piers will be built on piles piercing the bed of the river, about 50ft. on the north side, and 30ft. on the south side.

"The roadway for carriages and foot passengers will be 55ft. above the level of high water mark, suspended by rods of cast-iron arches, springing from the piers to the carriage-road, and the railroad will rest on the arches of the same description, being supported also by stays from the arches at points of the spaces between each suspension. The stays and rods, ending rods will be surrounded by a covering of metal, so that altogether they will present a very light appearance, and will make them harmonious with the general appearance of the structure. This will strengthen the work without materially increasing its weight, and will greatly add to the beauty of the whole. The carriage-way will occupy the centre of the lower bridge, being 20ft. wide, and it will be separated from the footpaths on each side by a row of light metal pillars, the footpaths being each 6ft. wide, with handsome balustrading on the outside about 4ft. high, so as not to intercept the magnificent panorama that will be presented to the eye of the spectator as he passes along it. The locomotive-way will be protected by a similar row of balustrading

"The approaches to the carriage-way and footpaths will be through a grand triumphal entrance on each side of the river, in three proportionate arches, forming a splendid mass of solid masonry, which will be surmounted by a statue of George Stephanson, Esq., the eminent engineer, a native of Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

"This, it is stated, will be the first bridge in which the suspension and ordinary principles of a viaduct have been combined in one structure.

"Between the two courses of three-inch planking, on which the railway will be formed, a layer of thick felt (Borrowdale's patent) will be placed, saturated with tar, pitch, &c., to render the floor perfectly water-tight The carriage road beneath will be paved with wood blocks, or by a layer of asphalte, and the arch will be laid with packing.

"The total quantity of iron entering into the structure will be about 6000 tons.

"The cost, including ironwork, masonry, &c., but exclusive of the purchase of lands, buildings, &c., in Newcastle and Gateshead, will exceed £300,000.

The general station, to which allusion has been made, will amalgamate the to mun. of all the great lines of railway traversing the district. North, South, East, and West; and it is understood that at least Eight Acres will be required daily. Some idea of its proportions may be gathered from the fact, that it will cover eleven acres of ground. and will afford about 2500 running feet of platform for the arrival and departure of passengers, the superficial extent of the platform being about a

In October, 1845, workmen were employed in boring for the foundations of the Bridge; they were carried down to the depth of 24 fathoms, and an excellent foundation has been obtained both for the piers and abutments.

The first stone of the intended elevated line of railway, by which the High Level Bridge is to be connected with the general station at the Forth, was laid on Tuesday, January 19th, 1847, near the end of the Postern which adjoins Westgate street, close to the building formerly occupied by the Bank of England. On the following Thursday, the Bridge works were laid out, and the masonry proceeded with.

Various projects for connecting the higher parts of Newcastle and Gateshead, have appeared since the year 1834; but Mr. Hudson's design comprises a two-fold object—the construction of such a Bridge as may accommodate Newcastle and Gateshead, whilst it answers, at the same time, for the purposes of the Newcastle and Darlington Railway then formed, and the Newcastle and Berwick Railway then projected.

Negociations were proceeded with relative to this matter; long discussions took place in the Town Councils of Newcastle and Gateshead; and, as it was of the utmost importance to Mr. Hudson and the Newcastle and Darlington Company, of which he was Chairman, to obtain the assent of the inhabit ants of Newcastle and their representatives to the Newcastle and Berwick scheme, which was then opposed by Lord Howick (now Earl Grey) and the Northumberland Company, who had a rival line, the "Railway King" pledged himself to introduce a compulsory clause in his Bill for making the High Level Bridge, and on this pledge he received the hearty support of the town, and was thereby enabled to defeat the project of his noble opponent.

The following is the clause referred to, as passed by Parliament

And be it enacted, that the Company hereby incorporated shall commence the works of the said bridge, by the Act authorized to be made, within nine months after the passing of this Act, and shall proceed with such works with all reasonable speed, so that the said Company shall not commence and proceed with such works, the right of the Company to demand tolls for the use of the railway hereby authorized to be made, or any part thereof, shall not, and in case the said bridge and railway shall not be completed and opened for the passage, not only of the said railways, but also of passengers, horses, cattle, and carriages, within four years after the passing of this Act it shall be lawful for the Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses of the Borough of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and for the Mayor, Aldermen, and Burgesses of the Borough of Gateshead, in case they shall see fit, to complete the said bridge, and to recover from time to time against the said Company, in a summary way, as penalties are recoverable under the provisions of the Railway Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, all and every such sum and sums of money as they shall expend in the completion of the said bridge.

The Royal assent was given to the Act on the 31st of July, 1845. The four years, therefore, will expire on the 31st of July, 1849.

The capital picture from which the accompanying Engraving was copied, has recently been painted for Mr. Hudson: the size of the painting is 5 feet 4 inches by 3 feet 4 inches. It is a repetition, varied, however, in effect and in the arrangement of the foreground, of a picture painted by the same artist for Mr. R. Stephenson, the Engineer. Mr. Carmichael, the painter, has recently settled in London, after having acquired in the North of England a great reputation for the truth and artistic excellence of his works, especially marine subjects.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE

PARISIANA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Wednesday.

The very essence of all things in France is vicissitude. Already are the arrangements as regards the new Ambassador to the Court of St. James's under going doubts, and at all events procrastination. Count de St. Aulaire will not return at least for a month; then he must, of course, take a formal and becoming adieu of Queen Victoria and all his friends in England. Your session of Parliament lasting this year deathed to be very short. the Duke de Broglie will scarce have time to arrive before the end of the political season; which, unless any great unforeseen event occurs in Europe, will not return again until January, 1848.

When the Duke de Broglie resides at your Court, the English ladies will not require to visit Paris to inspect the feminine fashions of the day. The Countess d'Haussonville, his beautiful daughter, is the most elegant woman in Paris, with a touch of the blue stocking carved off the parfum du haut monde, and her costume reflects in the most refined manner the chameleon changes of that Protean fashion. She will do the honours of the Duke's house, whilst her husband attends to his duties Parliamentary and literary; for he is an amateur writer in the political part of the Revue des Deux Mondes. He is at present a Member of the Chamber of Deputies; but, being very deaf, he is desirous to do something marquant, which may justify his translation and apotheosis in the Chamber of Peers, where the senators may be said rather to write than to talk at each other. M. d'Haussonville belongs to a party which has lately arisen in the Chamber of Deputies, in imitation of one that exists in your House of Commons "Young France," after the examplar of "Young England." It consists of twelve or fifteen members, sometimes by sudden accession amounting to fifty—and has that very cumulative functionary St. Marc Girardin, Metaphysician, Journalist, Professor of the University, &c. &c. They may justly boast of being as Utopian and impractical as the corresponding party in England, and give great hopes of affording here at least as much amusement to those who go about, not seeking, like the lion, whom they may devour, but, like the monkeys, whom they may laugh at. Except Sunday's horse-race in the Champ de Mars, no amusement as little adapted to the genius of the people as it is to the day on which it is held, Paris may be deemed more sombre than it has been for years. The foreigners who rejoice the hearts of our bourgeois, are all flitting away, or only pass strong on the wing, during the interval of nursing (as the Revue des Modes, or leaving feathers behind for the shopkeepers. Two visitors, we have, it is true—the one is Prince Frederic of Denmark; but things are too "rotten" in that state to allow his Highness to show with any eclat, or attract any obsequiousness. The other immediate visitor is Bou Maza—the right-hand man of Abd-el-Kader, just taken prisoner in Algeria. Thanks to certain gifts of jugglery and legerdemain, joined to a wiry and agility of all kinds extraordinary, he has raced to death in his pursuit, under the burning sun of his desert country, thousands of French soldiers. When our officers overtook him at last, they thought they had caught a Royal tiger; now they have him, they find he is only a cat.

FRANCE.

Nothing of particular moment has occurred in Paris during the week. The Ministry received a slight check in the Chamber on Monday. They desired to avoid discussion on the subject of slavery in the French colonies; but such fearful disclosures in regard to the system were made by M. de Lasteyrie and M. Ledru Rollin, that, in spite of the opposition of the Minister of the Colonies, the petitions on the subject were referred to the President of the Council, the Minister of the Colonies, and the Minister of Justice, a proceeding which is almost equivalent to according to the request of the petitioners. The debate commenced last Saturday. Petitions in favour of the immediate and unconditional abolition of slavery, without compensation to the slave proprietors, bearing 11,000 signatures, were presented to the Chamber. The ground on which this measure, or some modification of it, was urged upon the Legislature, was mainly the fact that the law of 1845, by which immediate abolition of slavery, with the concurrence and co-operation of the colonial proprietors themselves, had been utterly ineffective, and rendered dormant through the bad faith of the slave owners and their obstinate resistance to carrying its provisions into effect. The Committee on the Petitions had agreed that they should be referred to the President of the Council, and the Minister of the Colonies, and the question was before the Chamber whether that recommendation of the Committee should be carried into effect. The Minister of the Colonies opposed the recommendation of the committee.

The provincial French papers speak of an advance in the prices of corn in some of the country towns, but in the markets about Paris, the price was decidedly lower. The Debats returns once more to its panic question, insisting that no serious prices, or even apprehensions of them exist, the necessaries of life will, in all probability, be dear during the next year.

The Duke de Broglie, the new French Ambassador at the Court of St. James's, is to leave Paris in a few days. The Count de Jarnac does not come out time in the office of first secretary. The Prince de Broglie (the Duke's eldest son), who is at present Secretary to the French Embassy at Rome, is appointed to the same post in London. It is for London that Count de Jarnac is to be appointed Minister at Munich, in the place of M. de Bourgoing, who is to retire without public service.

On the 22d ult. M. O'Connell left Lyons for Valence, in a steamboat, accompanied by a physician of the former town. The learned gentleman was to sojourn in the south of France until he recovered strength enough to resume his journey to Rome

The Journal des Débats of Sunday contains an important telegraph dispatch from Algiers, according to which the great mountain range of Kabylia or Jurjura had made submission, and become subject and tributary to France. According to the terms of the treaty the mountaineers engage to bring in 120,000 francs a year to Algiers. No enemy of France will be received in the mountains. All Europeans shall be allowed to travel without being molested, the roads being kept free and secure. On the other hand, the Governor General engages that so long as those conditions are observed no French troops shall be marched into the country. This vast country forms a triangle, of which the base extends from Dellys to Bougie, upon the Mediterranean, the top being the Setif, Bougie, and Gigeli, the natural ports of the Setif are now freed from the blockade in which they were held by the tribes under the Jurjura as soon as the latter shall be in possession of the ports. The Jurjura is said to be rich in iron mines, which will henceforth be opened to French enterprise. The Débats gives great credit to Marshal Bugeaud for having effected so important a treaty.

A Toulon letter of the 22nd ult. states that orders had just been received at that port for all the vessels which are to join the Mediterranean squadron, under the command of the Prince de Joinville, and now off the Hyeres, to put to sea as soon as possible. Early in May the squadron will consist of five ships of the line, of which three are first-rates, two frigates, and a steam corvette. The Prince is to leave the Hyeres about the 10th of May.

The first Chamber of the Royal Court of Paris, before which the case of the Marquis of Hertford again involving the question of Monday, pronounced the latter to refund to the Marquis a sum of 77,710 francs, of which he was unable to justify the gift, but which evidently formed the complement, with the 44,340 francs in question, of that 121,050 francs on coupons deposited in the desk of the Marquis. The Court considered that serious, precise, and convincing presumptions resulted from the circumstances of the alleged gift on the one hand, the Marquis's confidence one day, and at all hours, the apartment in which the desk containing those coupons was placed; from the affectation of Sulzee declaring that he was labouring under pecuniary difficulties at the moment he received upwards of 120,000 francs from his having secretly sent to bankers in Paris detached coupons to the amount of 44,330 francs; and, finally, from the 121,050 francs, or amount of the coupons, having been kept in the safe and secret custody of Auriol, the notary.

"There was a double family fête celebrated on Monday at the Tuileries," says the Constitutionnel. "The Queen, being born on the 26th of April, 1782, entered her 65th year, and the Duchess d'Aumale, born on the 26th April, 1822, her 25th year. On Tuesday, Queen Maria Christina, Duchess of Rianzares and Montmorot, entered her 42d year, having been born on the 27th of April, 1806."

The Paris journals of Wednesday are all more or less engaged in criticising and commenting upon a discussion that took place in the Chamber of Deputies on Tuesday, respecting the secret funds. The Ministerial project for granting them was passed by an immense majority, there being 220 for, and 56 against it.

SPAIN

Our latest letters from Madrid state that General Narvaez has made a formal communication to the Cortes that he should be compelled to absent himself from its sittings, having been appointed Ambassador to the Court of the Tuileries.

A bill has been presented by the Government to empower it to call on any senator to perform any civil or military service; and that in the event of any senator refusing, he should be liable to be prosecuted for such disobedience. The bill was referred to a Committee to report on it.

The Espectador states that the express desire of the King that General Serrano had been recalled to Madrid.

The Madrid papers say that the Queen and her husband had become formally reconciled, and had on the 19th ult. promenaded in public. A rumour of further Ministerial changes had gained strength, and the post of Captain-General of the Queen, and on the establishment of a Regency to govern in the name of her son.

On the 20th ult. his Majesty received all the members of the Cabinet, for the first time during the previous fortnight. General Serrano had returned to Madrid. It was believed that General Santiago Mandez Vigo would be appointed Captain-General of Galicia. General Leygorri, Count of Vista Hermosa, was to have obtained the command of the corps of observation on the frontiers of Portugal; but General Manuel Concha, having returned to Madrid, was to be continued at the head of that army. It was again reported that the Cortes would be adjourned or dissolved.

PORTUGAL.

We have received accounts from Lisbon, of the 20th ult., which, however, are of a contradictory character. According to some of the letters, the Queen had determined to agree to a change of Ministry, as the Ministry decided to reject the terms of negotiation offered by Sir H. Seymour. Some English sailors had been landed to protect the Queen.

No actual importance had taken place, but the whole of the Queen's troops on the south of the Tagus, with the exception of 600 men, who, with General Schwalbach, have shut themselves up in the fortress of Elvas, have recrossed to the north, and have partly abandoned all Alentejo and Algarve to the Patulea. The force of Count de Mello (the insurgent General) was joined on the 17th ult. by Visconnt Sa da Bandeira, with 1500 men, and the two together mustered up wards of 6000 well drilled and well armed volunteers, with nine field pieces and about 300 cavalry. The main body of the insurgents was at St. Ubes, with an advanced post on the hill of Palmella, which commands all the surrounding country, and the old castle of which they have vivalled, and put in a formidable state of defence The Patulea have other forces at Evora, Portalegre, Narvao, Faro, and Lagos, and, in fact, are masters of the whole country beyond the Tagus.

An insurrection had again broken out among the peasantry in the district of Cintra, and from thence all the way to Torres Vedras.

The Durward states that the following version of the state of affairs, but it is believed in well-informed quarters that there are some inaccuracies in the account. The Débats anticipates the probable termination of the civil war, through the co-operation of England, France, and Spain, according to the terms of the Quadruple Alliance, as invoked by the Queen of Portugal. The Queen, it says, offers a complete amnesty, the re establishment of the Charter, the convocation of the Cortes, with a mixed Ministry composed of the moderate men of both parties. A portion of the crews of two British ships, of a French brig, and Spanish corvette, had been disembarked in order to protect the Queen as well as the capital. Upon the 19th, the left bank of the Tagus had been invaded by Count Mello, who had entered Istubal and seized on Palmella, from which he had driven General Abreu, who had taken shelter in the fortress of Almaia, within half a league of Lisbon, on the right bank. The Canopus was moored opposite the Place au Commerce. The Queen had arrived on the 11th. There was no doubt felt that the insurgents would accept the offered terms.

PRUSSIA.

According to accounts from Berlin of the 23d ult., the Second Order of the States received on that day communication of the reply of the King to the Address presented to his Majesty by the eight Marshals on the 21st. The King thanked the Diet for their frank and loyal conduct, and promised to convoke them again in four years. The reply was read by M. de Rochow, and several deputies reported that the King had said that he would convene the Assembly of the States every four years.

The Prussian State Gazette of the 24th ult., announces that, on the previous day, there were some disturbances in Berlin. Tumultuous assemblages were formed in different quarters of the city, and after the necessary measures had been taken by the civil authorities proceeded in visit the different bakers' shops and to demand bread. The multitude formed so quickly, and attacked the bakers' shops so suddenly, that they succeeded in their object. During the afternoon the city was patrolled by detachments of troops, who succeeded in arresting the progress of the disturbances, without any resistance having been offered except in two quarters, nor were the military compelled to use their arms; 175 persons were arrested.

THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO.

We have received New York papers to the 9th ult. They contain a confused account of the taking of Vera Cruz, with a loss of 800 men by the assailants; but the credit of the story rests upon the statements of passengers in a mail-boat arrived at Washington, who say that "as they were leaving Charleston an agent came running down to the boat and hallooed to them that a vessel had just arrived with the intelligence"

We find by the papers that General Taylor's army was encamped on the late field of Buena Vista, and that General Taylor himself, at the head of 1000 horse, had arrived at Cerralvo in pursuit of General Urrea, and that the latter, hearing of General Taylor's approach, had fled with his force in the direction of Victoria, and leaving open the communication between Camago and Monterey.

Santa Anna, it is stated, was in full retreat for San Luis Potosi Many of the Mexicans who were taken prisoners, state that they had not eaten anything for three days previously to the battle, that the army of Santa Anna was in a state of utter destitution, and that unless he could get supplies in four days his army would disband, or that they must inevitably starve

The Spanish newspapers received in Paris currently reported that Santa Anna had lost an arm, and had been shot in the hip; that Generals Ampudia, Mejia, and Ortiga, had been killed, and Gevera. Salas made prisoner.

Although the following is the latest authentic advices from Vera Cruz, the line of investment having been completed, and all communications into the city shut off, General Scott had given the foreign residents notice to leave the town, and they had generally gone out, and that the foreign vessels of war off the port. Many citizens of Vera Cruz were in favour of an early capitulation, but the military violently opposed any movement of the kind. It was reported by the foreign residents that several citizens had been shot for proposing the surrender. The firing from the city and castle was kept up incessantly, but had, so far, been harmless.

Colonel Persifor F. Smith, with his Rifles, had had an engagement with a force of Mexicans from the city, and compelled them to retire, with a loss of about 25 killed and several severely wounded, and sustaining a loss of two or three privates killed and wounded.

The French vessels had, however, succeeded in evading the blockade.

The Philadelphia correspondent of the Morning Chronicle, in a letter dated April 8th, says, "A merchant of this city has received a letter from his partner at Montgomery, Alabama, which states that just as the mail was leaving an express had arrived from New Orleans, which stated that General Scott has been killed, General Worth dangerously wounded, and the Alabama Regiment cut to pieces, before Vera Cruz" The letter from Montgomery is dated April 2, and the New Orleans papers of the 30th say that the Oregon was before at that port, with three days' later advices from the Gulf. The above unfortunate intelligence, if true, might be her news. It is placarded at the Ledger, Inquirer, Times, and other bulletins in the streets of this city, and has created a deep sensation. I hope, however, that it is either exaggerated or incorrect. But at the same time it will be remembered that we first received the news of the battle of Buena Vista exactly in the same way."

COUNTRY NEWS.

BOROUGH OF WOODSTOCK.—It is understood that on the first vacancy the Marquis of Blandford is to have the representation of Woodstock, on the Duke of Marlborough's interest, in the room of the present member, who will give way to his brother.

NORTHUMBERLAND.—A strong feeling has exhibited itself in the northern division of this county to have Sir George Grey, the Home Secretary, for one of its representatives in Parliament at the next election. A requisition is in course of signature, requesting Sir George to offer himself. It has already received the signatures of numerous and influential persons.

REPRESENTATION OF NEWARK.—Lord John Manners has announced to the electors of Newark, that when the general election shall arrive, he shall not "feel himself at liberty of the trust confided to him in 1841. His Lordship, in his farewell address, says:—"I would willingly solicit your suffrages again; nor is it owing to any political disagreement between us that I refrain from doing so, still less from a wish to represent any other constituency. The motive which induces my retirement is one to say more as to its cause." Mr. John Manners Sutton has offered himself as a candidate.

CELEBRATION OF SHAKSPEARE'S BIRTH-DAY AT STRATFORD-UPON-AVON.—The anniversary festivities in honour of the birth-day of Shakspeare, took place at Stratford-upon-Avon on Saturday. Although many parties came from the adjacent towns, were, perhaps, fewer present than on some former occasions. There was some little public procession in the morning, with the wreath from the tower above the poet's last resting-place, and a banner floating above the Shakspeare Hall; everything was quiet, peaceful, and unpretending There was no grand pageantry. The principal anniversary dinner was held in the evening, in the Shakspeare Hall, Charles H. Bracebridge, Esq., in the chair. Another dinner took place at the Falcon, a favourite "hostelrie" amongst the old Shakspearians, and at which the Club was established. The party was a very merry one. It consisted of many of the most respectable tradesmen of Stratford and the neighbourhood.

DISTRESS IN MANCHESTER.—The stagnation of trade is producing great distress in Manchester. For several months past, more than 7000 factory hands have been wholly out of work, whilst upwards of 11,000 are working on an average little more than three days a week. A report issued by the directors of the town mission gives some shocking details of the misery and distress which its agents are hourly in the habit of encountering, and their lot has begun to show itself, and is expected to increase rapidly with the warm weather. The workhouse is full, and there is scarcely room even for those who go there but to die, having held back as long as possible from that feeling which inspires those hitherto unaccustomed to degradation to ask relief from the Board of Guardians. To increase accommodation, and to prevent, as much as possible, disease from spreading in the workhouse, the guardians have engaged a large separate building for those afflicted with fever.

CONFLAGRATION NEAR EXETER.—A fire broke out on Tuesday last, in the village of Stoke Canon, four miles from Exeter, which was not extinguished until upwards of 30 houses were destroyed. Most of them principally occupied by the families of the poor working men employed in that neighbourhood. The origin of the calamity is believed to have been entirely accidental.

THE FEVER AT BOCHDALE. Typhus fever is very prevalent in the low lodging-houses amongst the Irish at Rochdale, and deaths are occurring nearly every day. The inhabitants are becoming much alarmed, and not without occasion.

MORE POISONINGS IN ESSEX.—Another case of attempted poisoning was brought before the Magistrates, at Newport, Essex, on Monday. A poverty-stricken weaver, named Dallen, being out of employment, procured a quantity of laudanum, part of which she gave to her illegitimate child, and then swallowed the larger portion herself. Both mother and child lay under a heavy insensible al. night, but, being found in the morning, medical aid was rendered, and neither died. The mother will, it is understood, be committed for trial for the attempt to murder.

EXTRAORDINARY AND FATAL ACCIDENT AT MIDDLEHAM. The Manchester Courier states that yesterday week, while at exercise at Middleham, Sir John Gerard's mare Curiosity, and Mr. Johnstone's Little Nell, and one of the lads, were struck dead by a flash of lightning. The poor lad was "shivered to pieces, dmb from limb."

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

THE ARMY SERVICE BILL.

Earl GREY moved the second reading of the Army Service Bill, which he supported on grounds similar to those adduced in its favour in the House of Commons. Earl Grey traced the various ameliorations which had been made in the position of soldiers, and remarked upon the diminution of corporal punishments. Fifty lashes now was the extent of the punishment that could be inflicted, but in the year 1835 a general court-martial sentenced a man to receive no less a punishment than 1900 lashes. Of that sentence no fewer than 1200 lashes were inflicted.

Viscount CONSERMERE opposed the bill, on the ground that it would impair the efficiency of the army, and deprive it of the services of old and experienced soldiers. He moved as an amendment that the bill be read a second time that day six months.

The Duke of WELLINGTON supported the bill, and gave his opinion that, regard being had to the advantages already incidental to the soldier's position, and to the additional rewards in store for him, it would not have the effect of depriving the army of the services of old and experienced soldiers, nor did he desire that it should. Although he was not one of those who were very sanguine in their expectations in this respect, that the operation of the bill would be to induce a superior class of men to enlist for the army, yet he had no doubt that it would contribute to no loss of experienced and valuable soldiers, for a good soldier, who had received a reward after a service of ten years, would, in his opinion, infallibly re enlist. The noble Duke spoke of the advantages of old soldiers in these terms:—"I maintain that old soldiers are absolutely necessary to the very existence, even, of the army. (Cheers.) I will not direct any observations as to what ought to be the condition of the army when engaged in active service, because I am aware that it is unpalatable to a British House of Parliament to consider in time of peace what is necessary in a period of warfare. I, therefore, will refer only to the army in time of peace. I have always been of opinion that it would conduce to the army which you maintain for the service of the country. This country cannot exist without such a body in its service; and I earnestly entreat your Lordships to attend to the circumstance in dealing with this measure, and to take care that it shall not deprive the country of the services of old soldiers. (Cheers from the Opposition.) It is they who set the example, it is they who at all times put a stop to everything that is bad, and it is they upon whom you must rely for the performance of those services which are required from an army in time of peace as well as in war. (Hear, hear.) I must observe that, although this country has been under the protection of treaties of peace for thirty years and more, I have, during that time, had under my consideration military operations of great extent and importance, not only in the Mediterranean, but in North and South America, and all over Asia, nearly at the same time, and in succession. If you had not had the highest discipline and the best troops in the world, it would not have been possible for you to carry on those operations." The Duke of Wellington then urged the House to permit the bill to pass, when he was confident that the commanding officers, and he could answer for himself, would do their best to carry its provisions into effect.

Various objections were stated to the bill by the Duke of Richmond, Lord de Ros, the Duke of Cleveland, Lord Stanley, the Earl of Hardwicke, and Lord Brougham; the last-named noble Lord advising their Lordships to let the British army alone, and insisting upon it that the Duke of Wellington would never SERENADE DES TAMBOURS, ON THE 1ST OF MAY, AT PARIS.

THE SERENADE DES TAMBOURS.

Our Illustration represents one of the annual celebrations of the Fête du Roi (May 1), at Paris. The locale is the Courtyard of the Tuileries, within the iron railings which separate it from the Place du Carrousel. The Serenade takes place in the morning, beneath the windows of the central pavilion of the Palace: the assemblage of drummers is usually very great; and the effect of their music, played with wonderful precision, under the direction of the Tambour-Major, is electrifying; and notifies to the capital the commencement of the celebrations of the King's Natal Day.

PEMBROKE LODGE, RICHMOND PARK.

Her Majesty has just been graciously pleased to apportion Pembroke Lodge, Richmond New Park, to Lord John Russell; and his Lordship will speedily take up his residence there.

"The Lodge" is a neat stone edifice; and its history is thus pleasantly told in one of Horace Walpole's letters to his friend, Sir Horace Mann:—

"Queen Anne had bestowed the rangership of Richmond New Park on her relations, the Hydes, for three lives, one of which was expired. King George, fond of shooting, bought out the term of the last Earl of Clarendon, and of his son, Lord Cornbury; and frequently shot there, having appointed my eldest brother, Lord Walpole, ranger nominally, but my father in reality, who wished to hunt there once or twice a week. The park had run to great decay under the Hydes, nor was there any mansion better than the common lodges of the keepers. The King ordered a stone lodge, designed by Henry Earl of Pembroke, to be erected for himself; but merely as a banqueting-house, with a large eating-room, kitchen, and necessary offices, where he might dine after his sport. Sir Robert began another, of brick, for himself and the under-ranger, which, by degrees, he much enlarged, usually retiring thither from business, or rather, as he said himself, 'to do more business than he could in town, on Saturdays and Sundays.' On that edifice, on the thatched house, and other improvements, he laid out fourteen thousand pounds of his own money. In the meantime, he hired a small house for himself, on the hill without the park; and in that small tenement the King did him the honour of dining with him more than once after shooting. His Majesty, fond of private joviality, was pleased with punch after dinner, and indulged in it freely. The Duchess, alarmed at the advantage the Minister might make of the openness of the King's heart in these convivial unguarded hours, and at a crisis when she was conscious Sir Robert was apprised of her inimical machinations in favour of Bolingbroke, enjoined the few Germans who accompanied the King at those dinners to prevent his Majesty from drinking too freely. Her spies obeyed too punctually, and without any address. The King was offended, and silenced the tools by the coarsest epithets in the German language. He even, before his departure, ordered Sir Robert to have the stone lodge finished against his return—no symptom of a falling Minister, as has since been supposed Sir Robert then was, and that Lord Bolingbroke was to have replaced him, had the King lived to come back."

Horace Walpole forgets to tell us that it was during the rangership of Sir Robert that the permission, or rather right, to a free passage through the park was first contested, and the ladder-gates taken away from the entrances. The result of this rash and inconsiderate proceeding was an action at law against the Princess Amelia, which, after many delays, was tried at Kingston Assizes, before that upright judge, Sir Michael Foster.

The result of this suit is well known: ladder-gates were ordered to be put up at some of the entrances, which was done.

PEMBROKE LODGE, RICHMOND PARK.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES &c.

OXFORD. April 24.

The following gentlemen of this University have been preferred, viz.:—The Rev. Francis Dyson, M.A., formerly Fellow of Merton College, Rector of North and South Tidworth, near Andover, has been collated by the Lord Bishop of Salisbury to the Honorary Canonry of Hurstbourne and Burbage, in the Cathedral Church of Salisbury, vacant by the death of the Rev. Dr. Hurlock; the Rev. Charles G. Davies, M.A., of St. Mary Hall, Vicar of Tewkesbury, to the Vicarage of Walton Cardiff, Gloucestershire (patrons, the Warden and Fellows of All Souls College), value £53, population 68; the Rev. E. W. Pears, B.A., of Magdalen Hall, has been appointed Chaplain to the labourers on the railway at Repton and Radipole, Dorset.

CAMBRIDGE. April 24.

At the last Congregation, Robert Montgomery, M.A., and Edward Hussey Adamson, M.A., of Lincoln College, Oxford, were admitted ad eundem.

Caius College.—Alfred George Day, B.A., and John Hopwood Boardman, B.A., have been elected Fellows on the Perse foundations.

The Bishopric of Sodor and Man.—The vacant Bishopric of Sodor and Man will be conferred on the Hon. and Rev. R. Eden, Vicar of Battersea, and brother to the Earl of Auckland.

The Rev. Hugh M'Neile.—The University of Dublin has just conferred the degrees of B.D. and D.D. on the Rev. Hugh M'Neile, Canon of Chester and Incumbent of St. Jude's, Liverpool. It is said that this honour is meant more especially to mark the approbation of the University of Mr. M'Neile's last work "The Church of Christ and the Churches of Christ."

SCOTLAND.

Spinning Mill Destroyed by Fire, at Glasgow.—Last week, a fire broke out in the spinning and weaving works of Messrs. Ferguson and Co., at Mile-end, Glasgow. The building consisted of five flats, with attics, and the fire originated in the fourth flat of one of their mills, occupied as a card and picking room. Every effort was made by the workers to extinguish the flames, but the smoke became so dense and overpowering that their efforts proved quite ineffectual. The damage is estimated at £20,000, of which only a portion is insured. Three hundred individuals will be thrown out of employment by this disaster. There was also a fire in Washington-street, Glasgow. The total amount of property destroyed at the two fires, in Burnside Mill, Mile-end, and Washington-street, is estimated at £30,000.

Sunday Observance by an Englishman in Scotland.—The foreman of the section now forming near Abernethy of the Edinburgh and Northern Railway, was a few days ago brought up before a Justice of the peace in Perth, charged with a breach of the decorous observance of the Sabbath. The party was an Englishman, and only lately come to Scotland; and had caused six men to be employed on the previous morning on some preliminary work connected with laying the rails, which had been attended with considerable noise, had attracted a crowd of the villagers, and disturbed the parish minister at his morning studies. The case was established; but, in consequence of the alleged ignorance of the offender of the strictness with which the day is observed in Scotland, and that the work ordered was of a trifling nature, the fine was mitigated to 5s. and costs.

Leith.—Leith still continues crowded with shipping, an unusually large number of foreign vessels giving variety to the scene. Grain, too, continues to be largely exported, 2000 quarters being named as the quantity despatched in four days, while within the same period about half the quantity came in coastwise. A number of Ayrshire cattle have also been shipped for Sweden.

Burial of Sir Walter Scott.—The body of Sir Walter Scott was brought home in the Wellesley, and is now on its way for interment in the grave of the author of "Waverley" in Dryburgh Abbey. Abbotsford does not, as was previously stated, pass at once to the son of Mr. Lockhart. Lady Scott, by her marriage settlement, has a life interest in the estate.

The Royal Society for the Protection of Life from Fire.—The annual meeting of this society took place on Tuesday in the Hanover-square Rooms, Henry Pownall, Esq., V.P., in the chair. The report showed the amount of subscriptions and donations to be £1,685, and the total expenditure £1,705. The fire-escape stations had been increased more by controlling these expenses than by an adequate increase of subscriptions. At the present time there are 22 stations between Brompton and Aldgate, but there are several intervening localities still unprovided. During the year 136 fires were attended by the conductors with their respective escapes, and by their means eleven persons were saved. The official and authenticated details of these cases having been read, several of the society's silver medals were presented, as well as testimonials on vellum and pecuniary rewards. Resolutions in behalf of the society were carried, including one of thanks to the chairman.

PARLIAMENTARY PORTRAITS.

MR. P. SCROPE, M.P.

AMONG the earliest advocates of a real Poor Law for Ireland was Mr. P. Scrope; and of all its supporters he has certainly been the most zealous. The measure is now safe, except from a contemplated mutilation in the Lords; and its rapid progress during the later debates on it may be ascribed in some degree to the alarm occasioned by the influx of thousands of Irish paupers into our sea-ports, the natural consequence of one country affording them a legal security against perishing by hunger, which they have not in the other Before the fact was thus strikingly illustrated, many English Members gave the Bill a doubting support; but no doubt or hesitation ever mingled with Mr. Scrope's advocacy of the measure; he always pointed out its necessity, and urged it on with a perseverance and pertinacity that almost created the impression of his being a man possessed of one idea. He is a proof, however, of how much earnestness can effect; events have seconded him, and the mockery of a Poor Law—which was all Ireland had before—is superseded by a system less jealously guarded, and more completely admitting the principle that the property of Ireland must provide for its poverty, not merely by relief—which is the direct effect of the Bill—but the more beneficial means of employment, which the Act will indirectly compel the landowners to furnish; the question is reduced to this—in which shape shall we pay, rates or wages? Before, they were under no obligation to pay at all.

Mr. George Poulett Scrope, F.R.S., F.G.S., &c., represents the Borough of Stroud; he is the second son of J. Poulett Thompson, Esq., of Roehampton, Surrey, and brother of the late Lord Sydenham, who was Governor of Canada. He took the name and arms of Scrope on his marriage with the daughter and heiress of W. Scrope, Esq., of Castle Combe, Wilts. Mr. Scrope is a Liberal, and has constantly supported the Whig party. He is known to the literary and scientific world as a geologist, from his "Considerations on Volcanoes," and "Geology of Central France;" he has also written pamphlets on Banking, Currency, and the Poor Laws, and a "Life of Lord Sydenham." He is a frequent speaker in the House, more especially on questions connected with the Poor Laws; on Wednesday, he opposed the Rating of Tenements Bill. His style is clear and business-like, and on the Irish Poor Law question he brought to bear an immense mass of facts and statistics, which exhibited great industry and powers of arrangement. He has sat for Stroud since 1833.

MR. G. POULETT SCROPE, M.P.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

During the past week, choreography has been in the ascendant at Her Majesty's Theatre. The return of Cerito, while we retain all the remaining danseuses, has given a splendour and brilliancy to the troupe of the ballet, which, even at this theatre, has been rarely, if ever, equalled. The fair Neapolitan and our other old-established favourite, Lucile Grahn, have now to contend with the daily-increasing popularity of the two new dancers, Rosati and Marie Taglioni; and, as they usually appear all four on the same night, the struggle for pre-eminence is amusing in itself, besides that it stimulates them to greater efforts, and presents much interest to those who take delight in observing the differences of style and the peculiarities of execution which characterise each of these ballerine. Cerito, enthusiastic, full of life and spirit, and gifted with astonishing muscular power—Lucile Grahn, vigorous and intellectual—Rosati, elegant and finished—the young Marie Taglioni, whose every movement is marvellous for its flexibility, grace, and poetry—present such a combination as can hardly fail to interest even those who are usually indifferent to the ballet.

It is so arranged that each danseuse appearing in turn, executes the step or which she is most celebrated; as, for example, Cerito in the "Pas de Quatre," from the "Lac des Fées;" Rosati in the "Pas de Deux," with Perrot; Marie Taglioni in the "Pas de la Rosière," and Lucile Grahn in one invented by herself. The effect of these successive pas can hardly be imagined, and gives an interest to the ballet it never possessed before the adoption of this system. The famous "Pas de Quatre," from the "Lac des Fées," the very music of which is identified with the remembrance of Cerito, has been given twice during the past week, and displays her peculiar gifts to the utmost. There is an enthusiasm, a joyousness in that fine step of hers, which carries the spectator along with it; it is the very perfection of that style of dancing. Another attraction was the "Pas de Deux" between Rosati and Marie Taglioni, given on Tuesday and Thursday. Rosati's pas displays that genius for combination and for grouping, which places Paul Taglioni at the very head of the list of ballet-masters. There is a poetry, a gracefulness of idea about the pas, and a comprehension of the peculiar gifts of each dancer, which have characterised, more or less, everything which he has given this year; and we must again congratulate the management of Her Majesty's Theatre on an acquisition of so much importance. Rosati was immensely applauded in this pas; the profusion of little steps, which she executes with inconceivable celerity and with exquisite neatness and grace, are really marvellous, and form an admirable contrast to the broader and more majestic style of Marie Taglioni. Rosati's was a very long and fatiguing "variation" (to use the technical term); and, although vehemently redemanded on Tuesday night, she was fully justified in refusing to repeat it. This pas, introduced into "Orithia," greatly enlivens this little ballet, the great merit of which, we think, consists in its beautiful grouping and dresses. The effect of the first scene is admirable, and Lucile Grahn looks remarkably well in her amazon costume. So long and varied, however, is the list of choreographic performances, that it would be vain to attempt to dwell on everything which calls forth remark at the time.

The operas given during the past week have been the "Elisir d'Amore," the "Due Foscari"—performed better than ever on Tuesday—and "I Puritani." Great is the charm which Mdme. Castellan's grace, beauty, and feminine manner give to her performance of Elvira. If, owing to the influenza under which she has been labouring, she has not all her wonted strength, the sweetness of her voice, the delicacy and rapidity of her execution, render her performance of Bellini's music delightful. In the famous polacca, "Son Vergin Vezzosa," she sings admirably; it is excellently suited to her voice; and the air of naïve coquetry which she puts on, gives it a triple charm. Gardoni executes the music assigned to Arthur with all his wonted sweetness, feeling, and musical taste. In the scene with the Queen he is truly admirable; and here his fine notes burst forth with an electrical effect. His acting in the last scene is impassioned in the extreme. Of Lablache's Giorgio it is unnecessary to speak; his voice seems more magnificent every time we hear him. Coletti's Riccardo, also, it is difficult to praise too highly.

ST. JAMES'S.

A most brilliant audience, including her Majesty, Prince Albert, and suite, assembled at this theatre on Tuesday evening, to witness an amateur performance of a distinguished character, for the benefit of the funds in aid of the distressed Irish and Scotch. The play chosen for the occasion and it was not followed by any other piece—was "The Hunchback." The services of three professionals—Mr. Vandenhoff, Mrs. Butler, and Miss Jane Mordaunt—were secured, to give due effect to the characters of Master Walter, Julia, and Helen, but all the other parts were sustained by amateurs, with whose histrionic accomplishments the lovers of private theatricals, in the higher circles, have for some little time been familiar. In a case like the present, criticism is not expected In fact we consider it would be against etiquette; but we may say that a singular appearance of experience and knowledge of stage business, coupled with more than ordinary judgment and good sense, characterised the performance.

Without drawing any comparison, we may, perhaps, be allowed to speak in especially high terms of Captain de Bathe, whose conception of Lord Tinsel was most perfect. The character was played throughout with a polished frivolity, and, withal, gentlemanly ease and bearing, which we have frequently looked for in vain upon the professional boards. Should circumstances demand it, he might, with effect, exchange the Scots Fusilier's cap and sword for the sock and buskin. Mr. Vandenhoff's Master Walter was not of the lightest. Mrs. Butler's Julia, as we have spoken of it at the Princess' Theatre, on the preceding evening; and Miss Mordaunt's Helen quiet and lady-like.

To Lord Morpeth, the amateurs were indebted for a clever prologue, delivered by Mr. Vandenhoff: and Lady Dufferin contributed an epilogue, to which Mrs. Butler did full justice.

The house was quite full, and the list of names comprised nearly everybody of rank and fashion now in town. The Queen and Prince Albert occupied the Royal box, attended by the Duchess of Sutherland, the Countess of Charlemont, the Hon. Miss Kerr, the Earl of Morley, Colonel Bouverie, and the Hon. Captain Boyle. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge was also present; and among the general company might have been observed the Duke and Duchess of Bedford, the Duke and Duchess of Beaufort, Baron and Baroness de Rothschild, the Belgian Minister and Madame Van de Weyer, Marchioness of Clanricarde, Marquis and Marchioness of Lansdowne, Marquis and Marchioness of Abercorn, Marquis of Douglas, Earl and Countess of Morley, Earl and Countess of Clare, Earl and Countess of Granville, Earl and Countess of Ellesmere, Earl and Countess of Grey, Earl and Countess of Sheffield, Earl and Countess Cowper, Earl and Countess of Rosebery, Earl and Countess of Guernsey, Earl and Countess of Newport, Earl of March, Countess of Jersey, Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston, Viscount and Viscountess Castlereagh, Viscount and Viscountess Canilnpe, Count de Pozocki, Count de Blacas, Count Revel, Lord and Lady Foley, Lord Harry Vane, Lord Sydney, Lord Clarendon, Lord Ernest Bruce, Lord and Lady Saunvale, Lord Alfred Paget, Lady Frankland Lewis, Lord and Lady Macdonald, Lord Somerton, Lady Charlotte Fitzroy, Lady Wallscourt, Lady Seymour, Lady Honoria Cadogan, Lady Caroline Lascelles, Lady Throgmorton, Lady Clinton, Lady F. Bentinck, Lady Fitzroy Kelly, Lady Molesworth, Lady Agnes Duff, Lady Georgiana Fullerton, Honourable Mrs. Fitzgibbon, Honourable E. Stanley, Honourable George Byng, Honourable Charles Howard, Honourable S. Russell, Sir Wilmot and Lady Horton, Sir George Talbot and Miss Talbot. Sir Stratford and Lady Canning, Sir Charles Ibbotson, Sir Ralph and Lady Howard, Sir Robert Dundas, Sir John Lyster and Lady Kaye, Sir Walter Stirling, Sir Michael Shaw Stewart, Sir Richard and Lady Hunter, Sir John Walsh, Mr. Holland, Mr. Alfred and Mrs. Montgomery, Mr. Charles Greville, Mr. Brinsley Sheridan, Mr. Landseer, Colonel Powell, Mr. R. Milnes, Mr. Baring Wall, Mr. Repton, Mr. Dashwood, Mr. Augustus Barrington, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert de Burgh, Mr. Clay, Mr. Mauleverle, Mr. Heneage, Mr. Bailey, Mr. Westmacott, Mr. Grenfell, Mr. Belfour, Mr. C. Belfour, Mr. Blake, Mr. N. Macdonald, Mr. Dodwell, Mr. Bowyer, Mr. A. Bernal, Mr. Grey, Mr. Carew, Mr. West, Mr. G. Hibbert, Mr. Wells, Mr. Augustus Craven, Mr. and Mrs. Matheson, Mr. and Mrs. Hodgson, Mr. and Mrs. Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. Fairfax, Mr. Tufnell, Mr. Robinson, Mr. Johnston, Mr. Drummond, &c.

PRINCESS'.

On Monday evening Mrs. Butler made her re-appearance on the London boards, after an absence of fourteen or fifteen years, as Julia, her original character in "The Hunchback." As Miss Fanny Kemble, our readers may remember that she made her début at Covent Garden Theatre, on the 5th of October, 1829, when the affairs of that establishment were in great confusion, and proved so attractive that the proprietors were enabled to pay off a debt of £13,000, and avert the ruin which hung over that fine property. A short time since, having been unable to effect an arrangement with Mr. Bunn—to which we allnded at the time—she entered into an engagement with the lessee of the Manchester Theatre, and performed there with great effect, the provincial press being loud in its praises of her acting.

Expectation had been much excited with respect to her appearance in London; and, as such, we were surprised to see the house so differently filled on Monday evening to what we had expected. The pit was crowded, and the dress circle tolerably full; but the upper tier and slips were nearly empty at the commencement of the overture.

The greeting which Mrs. Butler received on her entrance was general and enthusiastic—not so hearty, perhaps, as that which awaited Mrs. Nisbett's return the week before last to the Haymarket, but still sufficiently warm to affect her sensibly. She acknowledged the welcome in a series of graceful courtesies; and was evidently much overcome.

In the earlier scenes of the play, Mrs. Butler certainly did not create the effect we had anticipated. The applause appeared to be rather friendly, than called from impulse; and, indeed, one or two of her best points of former times—we allude to the lines—"Helen, I hate you!" and "I call him Clifford, and he calls me Madam!"—fell quite flat. The words, "Do it!" however, were given with all the effective energy of old, and brought down a storm of approbation. She is altered in appearance, as might be expected, in the lapse of years. Her voice is, at the same time, we think, improved, and she has obtained more judicious command over it; whilst evidences of care and intelligence—of matured judgment and acute perception—were visible throughout the performance. Without doubt, she will again occupy a high position on our stage. She comes to strengthen a line of acting of which Miss Helen Faucit and Miss Laura Addison are, at present, the only representatives.

Mr. Creswick played the Hunchback, and evidently to the satisfaction of the house, although his uncertainty of intonation marred many of his points, especially in the last scene. Mr. Compton was a sensible Modus, and Mr. J. Webster a less refined Clifford than we could have wished. Mrs. Stirling's Helen was lively and graceful—a "safe" performance—as this lady's always is, in whatever character may be assigned to her. Mr. James Vining was an excellent Lord Tinsel.

At the fall of the curtain the applause was very great. Mrs. Butler was loudly called for, and, on being led on, gratefully acknowledged the compliment. Then Mr. Creswick was made to appear, amidst renewed cheers; and then Mr Compton and Mrs. Stirling.

Mrs. Butler appeared as Juliet on Wednesday, and will, most probably, perform all the leading characters of her repertoire in turn. It is to be regretted that she is not more strongly supported. We do not find fault with the company at the Princess' individually: they are an excellent working troupe, and get through all they are obliged by their position to do very creditably, but still they are not capable of giving any great effect to high-class plays. The intentions of the management appear to oscillate between opera and the drama, and so each corps is imperfect.

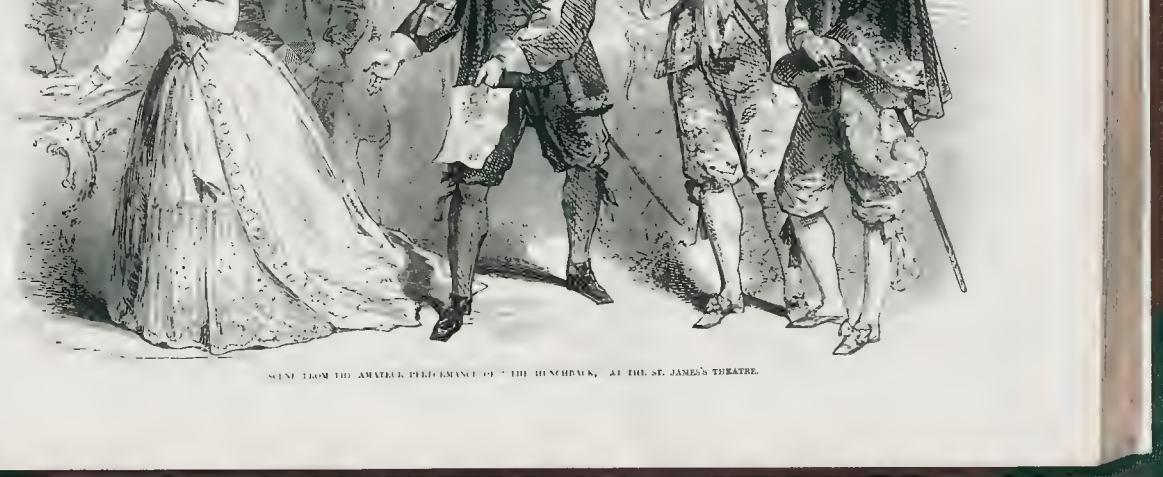
FRENCH PLAYS.

The charming Mdlle. Rose Chéri, who has exhausted every term of praise in the vocabulary of the critics, took her benefit at this theatre on Wednesday evening, on which occasion were performed "Les Grisettes," "Jeanne et Jeanneton," and



SCENE FROM THE AMATEUR PERFORMANCE OF "THE HUNCHBACK," AT THE ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

"Un Changement du Main"—the middle piece having been translated and played at the Princess' Theatre some time ago, under the name of "The Violet." M Carligny on this occasion performed the character of Galuchet, the jeweller: acted before by M. Lafont. We think the change was for the better. Mdlle Rose Chéri was one of the daughters, and Mdlle. Duvergez the other. The house was well filled, and the satisfaction of the audience only allayed by the regret at Mdlle. Chéri's approaching departure. There is not a star in Mr. Mitchell's bright galaxy of talent who so wins upon an audience as this accomplished and esteemed young lady.

Au reste there has been little to notice during the week at the theatres. A farce at the PRINCESS', called "A Wife for an Hour," has been favourably received, and Mr. FOX COOPER has opened the STRAND, with a drama embodying some of Hogarth's pictures as tableaux, and a ballet called "The Arabian Nights' Entertainments," at a very moderate rate of admission.

A morning representation of the animals of Mr. Hughes' establishment took place at DRURY-LANE on Thursday, and was honoured by the presence of her Majesty, Prince Albert, and the other members of the Royal Family, as well as by a very large assemblage of the rank and fashion of the metropolis. The performances gave the highest gratification to the distinguished audience. The beautiful little white Seal, which our readers may remember to have seen in the spectacle of the "Desert," is intended as a present for her Majesty.

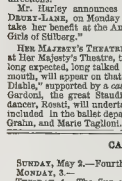
At the Minor Theatres, Female Ethiopian Serenaders are springing up in all directions.

Mr. Harley announces the revival of "Guy Mannering," for his benefit at DRURY-LANE, on Monday next; and on the same evening, Miss Woolgar will take her benefit at the ADELPHI, when Mr. Webster will appear in the "Pretty Girls of Stilberg."

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—Brilliant as have hitherto been the performances at Her Majesty's Theatre, those on next Thursday will eclipse them all. The long expected, long talked of Jenny Lind, whose name is now in every one's mouth, will appear on that occasion, in Meyerbeer's splendid opera, "Robert le Diable," supported by a cast in every way worthy of her. Castellan, Fraschini, Gardoni, the great Staudigl, and Borelli, are all included; and that beautiful dancer, Rosati, will undertake the part of the Phantom Abbess. She will also be included in the ballet department, with her graceful compeers, Cerito, Lucille Grahn, and Marie Taglioni.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, May 2.—Fourth Sunday after Easter.
MONDAY, 3.—
TUESDAY, 4.—The Sun rises at 4h. 29m.
WEDNESDAY, 5.—Venus sets at 10h. 37m., p.m., near the N.W. point of the horizon.
THURSDAY, 6.—St. John.—Venus and Jupiter in conjunction.



FRIDAY, 7. The Moon enters her last qr. at 10h. 49m., p.m.
SATURDAY, 8.—Half Quarter.—Easter Term ends.
On May 6th, Venus and Jupiter are near together: their relative situation with respect to themselves and to neighbouring stars are shown in the annexed diagram. Venus is drawn on a scale of 40 seconds of arc to an inch; the place of Jupiter is only indicated, as, if drawn, it would have given the appearance of overtopping Venus, whilst there is some distance between them, and Venus is much the brighter object at present.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAY 8.

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A	M	A
h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m	h m
3 5	3 24	3 39	3 57	4 19	4 30	4 50	5 10	5 35	5 50	6 21	6 50	7 19	7 52

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"M. A. T."—The couplet—

"Immodest words admit of no defence,
For want of decency is want of sense"— is from the Earl of Roscommon's elegant "Essay on Translated Verse."

"T. T." Bolton.—We have not issued any Map of London, but two Panoramic Views, both of which may be obtained, by order, of any Bookseller.

"X. A." Probably, the London and Westminster Bank.

"W. L. R."—The lines are full of excellent feeling, but do not reach our poetic standard.

"Whitney," Manchester.—The interception would not be justifiable by law, though it might apparently be by circumstances

"Lindsay."—The début of Mdlle. Lind will take place next week.

"B.," Scarborough. Application for Subscribers' Shares has been, in some cases, construed into a liability for expenses: in our Correspondent's case, we recommend passive resistance.

"W. H. T.," Coblenz, is thanked: see our Journal for April 24. We have not room for the Speech entire.

"Scrutator."—The European (Subscription) Library in St. James's-square.

"A. B. C. D.," Portsladc.—The Loan is projected.

"B. L.," Farnham.—"The moon shines brightly." Johnson's example, quoting Pope, is "it brightly dasoing shone the morn."

"J. J. L., Edinburgh.—A small work on Carpentry and Joinery is published by Taylor, Wellington-street, Strand.

"A Constant Reader," Manchester. Gorton's "Biographical Dictionary" is a sound compilation—certainly, preferable to Dr. Watkins's. Bate's Dictionary is a work of higher character than Gorton's; but it is expensive. Our Correspondent will find a List of Treatise in Haydn's "Dictionary of Dates."

"A Clifton Subscriber."—The Jewel in the Imperial Crown to which our Correspondent refers is "the inestimable Sapphire."

"Τοβάκκα Πίπε the Second," Chigwell. Meerschaum (from meer, the sea, and schaum, foam, in Germans), of which the best tobacco pipes are made, is a yellowish and greyish-white earth, composed of silica, magnesia, lime, water, and carbonic acid. It is dug in Natolia, and near Thebes; and the Pipes are principally made in Turkey. Beer chaum is the écume de mer of the French.

"A Constant Reader," Exeter.—A white or light colour reflects heat copiously, and absorbs little; while a dark, or dark colour, absorbs copiously, and reflects little.

"A Young Beginner."—A Dissolution of Partnership, to be legal, must be Gazetted.

"Bezar."—We will inquire.

"A. M. H."—The Nereid's Marbles have been removed by the French savans.

"Daily."—Alas.

"C. L. P." is thanked; but we have not room for the Sketch

"A Constant Reader" should apply at the Exhibition Room.

"P. F.'s" (Dublin) suggestion was not received in time.

"Jacob."—Only at the latter Theatre.

"An Inquirer" will find Pycraft's "Greek Grammar Practice" very useful.

"G. H." The British Museum is engraved in Vol. I. pp. 153, 178, 180, 185, 212, 257, and 260, of our Journal

"T. C.," Chester. The Meeting was fully illustrated in our Journal, last season.

"Enquirer," Carlisle.—The Windsor View will appear shortly. Carlton House had the Dry Rot.

"Capt. E." must, surely, be a non de circonstance, and not a fortunate assumption for so absurd a question as that proposed by him.

"A Subscriber."—A small work on Horse-Racing is published by Bogue, 86, Fleet-street.

"G. J. S.," London Road. A Portrait of the late Bishop Sharley is engraved in No. 246 of our Journal. Our Correspondent is thanked for the lengthy letter.

"Aphrodite."—We cannot answer for the truth of the town gossip of other journals.

"Paulus" should apply to the Secretary to the Polytechnic.

"M. R. C. S." can recover from the party by whom he was called in.

"Cato," Liverpool.—The "Illustrated New Testament" may be had bound, price 5s.

"Arthur Martyn" is altogether mistaken as to the architecture of the British Museum, which was correctly described in our last. His notion that it is "Corinthian and Ionic" is a flagrant blunder." Correspondents should test their information before they impugn that of others.

"Φάταν ἐβλε," Brighton, had better study the fashion of the Esplanade.

"Sigma," Perth. (Old and New Style.) The author of the Paschal Epoch—or way of computing from the Birth of Christ—was an Abbot of Rome, one Dionysius Exiguus, who flourished under Justinian about the year 507, or, as some say, 527. Till his time, the generality of Christians computed their year from the building of Rome. Dionysius began his account from the Conception or Incarnation, by us popularly called Lady-day, or the Annunciation. This method continued in use till 1752; at this time, the Gregorian Calendar having been admitted by Act of Parliament, the year was reckoned from the first day of January, as it did generally in the other countries of Europe.

"A Constant Reader." Marco made his début at the Académie Royale de Musique, in Paris, in 1838, as Meyerbeer's "Robert le Diable."

"An Artist."—We know of no Treatise on Harmony as applied to the Guitar.

"A Subscriber."—The external walls of Covent Garden Theatre stand on sufficient ground to have enabled Mr. Adams to render the Royal Italian Opera the largest theatre in the world; but, out of his three plans, the medium size was adopted.

"A Subscriber."—The wearing of the signet ring, with the coat of arms engraved thereon, would render the year was probable for the days on armorial bearings.

"Quiz."—No such precedence as that stated by our Correspondent belongs to a Clergyman.

"Ambatan."—The title of "Honourable" is not accorded to the sons and daughters of the younger sons of Dukes and Marquises; but the Queen's Maids of Honour have it in virtue of their office.

"Jules," Camberwell. We do not know the place of residence, or, indeed, the fact of the existence, of the lady in question.

"G. T. N.," Liverpool, is thanked for his letter: Mr. J. L. Williams, the draughtsman and engraver of our Illustrations of the New House of Lords, is a son of Mr. S. Williams.

"Mars."—About 21 or 22 is, we think, the latest age to get a commission in the Army. The name of an applicant ought to be placed on the Commander-in-Chief's list, at the age of 16. Nineteen is not too old: but, then, interest should be brought to second the application.

"Vavasour." The right to "supporters" is confined to Peers of the Realm, Knights of the Garter, Thistle, and St. Patrick: Knights Grand Crosses of the Bath (G.C.B.); Knights Grand Crosses of St. Michael and St. George; and to those Baronets and others (of whom the number is extremely limited) who may have obtained them by special grant. Further, in addition to these, supporters are assumed and borne, but without any legal right, by the heirs-apparent of Dukes, Marquises, and Earls, and by all the children of Peers to whom courtesy allows the prefix of "Lord" or "Lady." The variation in the form of the cockade is merely a matter of taste.

"Gulliver." The pay of a Lieutenant-Colonel in the Life Guards is £1 9s 7d. per diem; of a Captain, 12s. 1d.; and of a Cornet, 8s. The daily pay in the other Cavalry Regiments is—of Lieutenant-Colonel, £1 3s.; of Captain, 14s. 7d.; and of Cornet, 8s.

"W. M. C." —There will be a Fancy Sale for the Benefit of the Orphan Working School, Haverstock Hill, Hampstead, held on the 8th and 10th, and two following days of next month; apply to the Secretary, 19, Gresham-street.

"N. O. P."—The Scottish Marriages Repatriation Bill, now in progress through Parliament, if carried, will put an effectual stop to Gretna Green Marriages.

"Reformer," Stockton-on-Tees.—Mr. Jackson's Letters on Capital Punishment appeared in early Numbers of the Daily News.

"R. J. O." is thanked; but we have not room for the Lines.

"F. M. G.," Moorpat.—Mrs. Nisbett made her first appearance on the stage under the name of Miss Mordaunt

"W. W.," Tiverton.—Apply to a Magistrate.

"A Country Housekeeper."—The usual Board Wages of Servants is 12s. or 13s. per week.

"H. B."—1. No. 2. "Old and Young Stagers" was written for the first appearance of Mrs. Charles Matthews; Mr. Liston playing also in the piece.

"F. W." —Declined.

"W. C. G."—For Tickets of Admission to St. Paul's Cathedral, on the Charity Schools Anniversary, apply to Messrs. Remington's, St. Paul's Churchyard.

"H. E."—We cannot undertake to answer the Questions to our Correspondent's letter of six sides.

"Alice" must excuse us.

"G. T. P. S."—The meteorological paper has been forwarded to "J. G."

BOOKS RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Webster's Royal Red Book.—Thoughts on the Poor Relief Bill. By the Earl of Shrewsbury.—Meadows's Notes on China.—The Opera. By Sedgley Marvel.

THE NEW HOUSE OF LORDS.

NEXT WEEK, we shall complete our present Series of Illustrations of

THE NEW HOUSE OF LORDS,

with the following Engravings:—

The Royal Throne, her Majesty's State Chair, Chairs for His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales and His Royal Highness Prince Albert, &c.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, MAY 1, 1847.

THE Enlistment Bill has passed the House of Lords, but only by a small majority: the opposition to it was nearly successful, and even the advocacy of the Duke of Wellington, a high authority on most questions, and the very highest on this, had less than its usual influence; it did not prevent votes being given against it. And, what is perhaps more strange, Lord Brougham, for once, did not echo "The Duke," but expressed his fears of the injury it would do the Army. Coming after the express declaration of the Duke of Wellington that it would not operate to its injury, the opinion of the learned Lord, like that of many others who spoke, did not seem particularly well founded. His speaking on the constitution of the Army and on military affairs at all, in the presence of the greatest soldier of our age, somewhat resembles the self-complacency of the Pedant who is said to have read Hannibal a Lecture on the Art of War. In this case, too, it seems that in the only part of the question which the ex-Chancellor might be supposed to understand, namely, the Law of Enlistment, he was totally wrong; he had better not have spoken at all, for Earl Grey administered a rebuke to his learned Lordship as severe as it was well deserved. It is a miserable sight to see the most ordinary and practical improvements, changes of detail rather than alterations in principle, opposed by men who, in their early years, were the champions of all reforms; whose fame and fortunes have been built on that championship. Even Reformers, when they have reached the summit of their age, and not imagine that progress stopped short at the point where they and action parted company, or they degenerate into for whom the world has a very qualified respect.

The dull retarders, chainers of the wheel,

The shortening the term of Enlistment in the Army, though regarded with much fear by nearly all the old military men in both Houses of Parliament (with the one great exception, whose opinion is worth that of all of them put together), is really but bringing the law into correspondence with what has long been the practice; a soldier who has distinguished himself well, could, under the old system, claim his discharge after twelve years' service; without good-conduct marks, he could do the same after fifteen years. It was better that this should be made certain and legal than dependent on regulations and orders; and this is all that is done.

As to the effect of the change, since it will differ so little from the present practice, it is but reasonable to conclude that it will be but slight. It is not the term of service alone, but the position of the soldier during that term, that makes the ranks of the Army only the last refuge of an inferior class. The agricultural labourer, starving on seven or eight shillings a week, rises by entering the Army; a man quitting any other employment certainly makes a sacrifice both of money and freedom. If an individual does it on the chance of promotion to the rank of non-commissioned officer, and has talent and steadiness, the chance is in his favour; if he looks higher, he has no chance at all; rank and wealth monopolise all above the humbler grades of the service; the few exceptions are nothing as compared with the bulk of the Army, and they occur mostly in time of war; at any time they are too few to be reasonably calculated on. These causes will always prevent what is called a "better class of men" from entering the Army.

Even now, with all the improvements made and making, the physical condition of the soldier is far from what it ought to be. The accounts given of the accommodations of life provided in barracks even in England are a reproach to the country. The whole of the Canteen system is an anomaly, and ought to be forth with changed. Imagine the same authorities who punish a soldier for drunkenness, licensing the sale of spirits, and making a profit of the rents of these dens of demoralization! And they are the only places within the barracks open to the soldiers, who have no rooms or apartments for any purpose but sleeping. In the same way, appearing dirty on parade is a military offence; yet, till lately, a wash-house in a barrack was a thing unknown, and such a thing as a soldier's bath, except, perhaps, in an hospital, does not, we believe, exist.

In these respects the officers are not much better off than the privates: the official routine of custom and carelessness is very impartial. The department that provides barrack accommodation for our troops has but one object—doing as little, and that as badly and stingily as possible. It is no fiction to say that our prisons are built with more care and cost than the places where our Army, officers and men, are housed. We have a vivid recollection of the sordid wretchedness of many of the lath-and-plaster abominations called barracks, particularly the "officers' quarters:" the arrangements for lighting, warming, and ventilating the prison at Pentonville are absolutely palatial in comparison with them. Yet for the mere accidents of occupation, a broken window, or a fallen chimney-pot, the utmost sum is screwed out of the whole regiment, when it leaves, in the shape of "barrack damages." There is much in this direction requires altering, as well as the term of service. And, behind both these, and greater than either, remains the system of promotion by purchase of commissions, under which the Army will never be a popular profession: rank is decided by a test applied in no other. If ever we are again involved in a long war it will have to be abandoned; but we shall have extraordinary luck if, in the first campaigns of that war, it does not subject us to severe disasters. It is laid down as a principle, by Burke, that any rule of selection and promotion that does not include fitness and ability as elements is a bad one; purchase does not do this; nor does the other rule of seniority. Neither the longest liver nor the wealthiest may be the better man. But we cannot enter into the discussion here, though it is one of the questions that will have to be solved before the lapse of another generation.

THE total indifference and apathy of the English public on all questions connected with foreign politics, form a strange contrast with what we read of ourselves in the French journals. In them we are described as a nation of more than Machiavelian craft and subtlety—pursuing our own purposes of aggrandisement with a watchfulness that never sleeps. The Paris journalists give us by far too much credit: as a body, the English people are more indifferent to their foreign affairs than any nation in Europe. We pay, perhaps, too little attention to them; while, on the other hand, the French are too much engrossed by them. They neglect internal reforms and social improvements, but are thrown into a popular frenzy by a squabble in a group of islands in the South Seas. We are absorbed by domestic questions, opening lines of communication, changing financial systems, altering import duties, and look on the quarrels of foreign Cabinets and Ministers with a coolness amounting to contempt. "It's no business of ours," may be taken as expressing the general feeling. In this one particular the press of the country rather exaggerates than represents popular opinion, and the interest the leading journals take in foreign politics is a reflection of the feelings of parties and Cabinets rather than that of the nation. Except the Spanish bondholders, there are not ten men in a thousand throughout the empire who care two straws about the composition of the Spanish Ministry.

The merchants connected with the Oporto trade are interested in the struggle going on in Portugal, and wish for a speedy restoration of peace; but, generally, the quarrel is looked on as contemptuously as the snarling of a couple of curs, neither of whom has the strength or courage to bite. A motion connected with Spanish or Portuguese politics would not command "a House;" honourable members, who know to a shade the depth of public feeling on all questions, would consider such motions useless. And even when we have, as a State, a direct money interest in the situation of a Government, as we have in that of Greece, it is impossible to attract attention to it. The House was "counted out" on Tuesday, during Lord John Manners's speech on his motion respecting the state of that country; on any other question, Lord John Manners would have been listened to with pleasure. But Greece is one of those "unfortunate nations" that are never heard of except as beggars, bankrupts, or thieves; it is rather an approach to good order and Government when its Ministers are not cutting each other's throats. It is impossible to feel any interest in them; it is almost as impossible to understand them or their Government, which seems to us, both in its German King and its modern Constitution, to be a mistake, for which the "Great Powers" are more to blame than the people. The accounts that reach us of the doings of the men who hold authority in that country, read more like the history of a band of brigands than anything else; and it may be doubted whether greater barbarity and extortion were ever practised by the Turks. There are nations, as well as individuals, that cannot be assisted; all help is thrown away upon them; the materials and elements of prosperity are not in them, and they are hopelessly given up, even by their best friends. Greece seems to have reached that point: men cannot be got even to talk about it.

THE WEATHER.

The weather during the first three days of this week was fine; the sky was nearly cloudless, but the atmosphere was hazy, and the nights were cold vegetation in consequence made but little progress. On the 26th a strong wind from the West and W.S.W. blew, and continued blowing with slight intermissions till the 28th day. On the 27th and 28th the temperature amounted to a gale, the sky was frequently covered by clouds, and the nights were warmer than the preceding had been; consequently vegetation progressed, but not very rapidly. The following are some particulars of each day:—Friday was a fine day the wind blowing from the E.; its average temperature was 45½°; Saturday was a fine day; the wind was principally blowing from the E., although for a short time it was from the S.; the average temperature of the day was 46½°; Sunday was a fine day; the wind was from the West, with generally a cloudless sky; the average temperature was 45½°. On Monday a strong wind blew at times from the W., and at other times from the W.S.W.; the sky was frequently cloudy; its average temperature was 46½°. Tuesday, the wind blew very strongly from the S.W., at times amounting to a gale; the sky was cloudy; early in the morning some heavy showers of rain fell; the average temperature of the day was 52°. Wednesday, the wind blew very strongly from the S.W.; the sky was frequently covered by very dark clouds, and showers of rain were falling frequently till towards evening, when the wind subsided, and the sky was generally clear; its average temperature was 52°. Thursday was a stormy day: the wind was blowing strongly from the west; there were occasional showers of rain, mixed at times with hail. After noon, there were several flaps of thunder, which first were heard from clouds situated in the S. W., and, towards the last, the electrical clouds were situated in the S. E., from which the thunder was heard. The average temperature of the day was 50°, and that of the week was 48½°.

The extreme thermometrical readings each day were—

Friday	April 23, the highest during the day was 51½	deg., and the lowest was 39½	deg.
Saturday,	April 24	52½	31
Sunday,	April 25	63½	30
Monday,	April 26	56½	37
Tuesday,	April 27	59	45½
Wednesday,	April 28	60	45
Thursday,	April 29	58½	41

Blackheath, Friday, April 30, 1847. J. G.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

Last Saturday afternoon her Majesty held a Privy Council at Buckingham Palace.

On Sunday the Queen and Prince Albert, the Ladies and Gentlemen of the Court, and the Domestic Household, attended Divine Service in the private chapel at Buckingham Palace. The Hon. and Rev. C. Leslie Courtenay officiated.

The Queen gave a juvenile party on Monday afternoon, in celebration of the birthday of her Royal Highness the Princess Alice.

The Queen, accompanied by the Hon. Miss Kerr and the Hon. Miss Cavendish, took an airing in an open carriage and four on Tuesday. His Royal Highness Prince Albert rode out on horseback, attended by Colonel Bouverie. Lord John Russell and Viscount Palmerston had audiences of her Majesty.

The Royal dinner party at Buckingham Palace on Thursday evening, included her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, his Excellency M. Van De Weyer, his Excellency Don Pedro de Sousa Monteiro, the Countess Dowager, the Marchioness of Lansdowne, Lady Augusta Bruce, Baroness De Speth, Viscount and Viscountess Villiers, Lord and Lady Beauvale, Sir Robert and Lady Peel, the Right Hon. H. and Mrs. Goulburn.

THE QUEEN'S LEVEE.—The Queen held a Levee on Wednesday afternoon, in James's Palace. Her Majesty and Prince Albert arrived from Buckingham Palace at two o'clock. The Lord Steward, the Lord Chamberlain, and the Master of the Horse, received her Majesty and her Royal Consort at the Palace. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge was present at the Levee. The Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Duke of Cambridge, and attended by the Ladies and gentlemen of the Court, having entered the Throne-room, the foreign Ministers were introduced, and the presentations to her Majesty took place in the diplomatic circle.

STATE BALLS AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.—It is the intention of her Majesty to give two State Balls and two Concerts this season, at Buckingham Palace. The first State Ball will be given on the 14th inst. We have authority to announce that the guests will be in full dress.

BIRTHDAY OF THE PRINCESS ALICE.—Last Sunday was the birthday of her

Royal Highness the Princess Alice. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent arrived early at Buckingham Palace to pay a visit of congratulation to the Queen and Prince Albert. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge also paid a congratulatory visit to her Majesty and her Royal Consort.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER.—Her Majesty the Queen Dowager and her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent attended divine service, last Sunday, in the Chapel Royal, St. James's. The prayers were read by the Rev. Dr. Wesley, and the lessons by the Rev. W. Hall. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. Wesley. The anthem was "The Lord is King." (Arnold)

THE DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER'S BIRTH-DAY.—Sunday last was the birthday of her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester. Her Majesty and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Princess Alice, paid a visit of congratulation to her Royal Highness, at Gloucester House. The Royal Duchess also received visits of congratulation from her Majesty the Queen Dowager, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, and his Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar.

MINISTERIAL BANQUET.—Lord John Russell gave a grand banquet on Wednesday evening, at his mansion in Chesham-place, to a circle of his supporters in the Lower House. The guests included Viscount Duncan, Mr. Deuristoun, Mr. Aglionby, Mr. Adam, Mr. David Barclay, Mr. Bellew, Sir William Clay, Captain Hatton, Sir John Easthope, Sir Thomas Esmonde, Mr. Ewart, Mr. Forster, Sir Robert Price, Mr. Phillpotts, Sir George Strickland, Lord Marcus Hill, Sir Charles Napier, Mr. Tancred, Mr. Thornely, &c.

APPROACHING MARRIAGES IN HIGH LIFE.—A marriage is immediately to take place between the Lady Alexandrina Vane, the daughter of the Marquis of Londonderry, and the Earl of Portarlington.—The marriage of Gustavus Lambart, Esq., eldest son of Gustavus Lambart, of Beau Pere, county of Meath, Esq., to the Lady Frances Conyngham, second daughter of the Marquis of Conyngham, will shortly take place.—The marriage of the Marquis of Sligo, and the Hon Ellen Sydney Smyth, daughter of Viscount Strangford, will take place early in the ensuing week.

THE LORD MAYOR'S BANQUET TO THE MINISTERS.—The Lord Mayor will give a grand banquet on the 12th of this month to her Majesty's Ministers and a distinguished circle.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

ART-UNION OF LONDON.

There was a very numerous assemblage at Drury Lane Theatre on Tuesday morning to witness the annual drawing of the prizes of the London Art-Union The lottery wheels, containing the names of the speculators and the tickets for the prizes had been deposited, were placed upon the stage, which was densely crowded with spectators, who had been specially invited by the committee. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge presided; and among the gentlemen present were the Marquis de Saumarez, the Earl of Arundel and Surrey, Right Hon. Sir Milner Gibson, Bart., M.P., Sir Charles Lemon, Bart, M.P., Sir W. Ross, R.A., T. Uwins, Esq., R.A., A. Cooper, R.A., J. Addis, Esq., Major Addis, &c. &c.

His Royal Highness, in taking the chair, said that he had great pleasure in stating that the number of subscribers for the present year exceed by one thousand that which he had announced at the last general meeting, at which time they amounted to 16,000. This increase, especially when the state of the times and the many heavy calls upon the purses of the public were taken into consideration, was a gratifying proof how rapid was the extension of a taste for the arts

The report was then read by the Secretary. It was a document of great length, commencing with the details of the proceedings in Parliament last session on the motion of Mr. Wyse, which had resulted in the Art-Union being specially legalised by an act of the Legislature, and subsequently incorporated by Royal Charter The subscription for the year 1846 amounted to £16,597, and upon the award of the prizes, 288 works of art had been selected by the fortunate holders. This year the subscriptions extended to £17,871, of which £10,720 was to be set apart for the purchase of works of art, and allotted as follows:—30 works at £100, 40 at £15, 36 at £20, 36 at £25, 28 at £30, 28 at £40, 20 at £50, 15 at £60, 12 at £70, 12 at £80, 6 at £100, 8 at £150, 3 at £200, 2 at £300.

W. Thompson, Esq. moved the adoption of the report, which was seconded by J. Auldjo, Esq., and carried amid great applause.

Sir. W. Ross, R.A., moved a vote of thanks to the Council.

Mr. Uwins seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

Thomas Wyse, Esq , M.P., moved a vote of thanks to the honorary secretaries, Messrs. Godwin and Pocock, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. Godwin acknowledged the compliment.

The President being compelled to vacate the chair, Mr. Wyse was elected thereto, and moved a vote of thanks to the Royal Duke, which was unanimously adopted.

The prizes were then drawn, an operation which occupied more than two hours. The first of greatest value were thus announced:—The two £300 prizes to R. Potter, Esq., and Joseph Estcourt, Esq.; £200 to W. Hogg, Esq., J. Stanmore, and G. M. R.; the five of £150 to Colonel Wood, (of Venezuela), T. Hughes, Esq. (Halifax), T. Kennedy, Esq., Morel, Esq., and Rawdon, Esq. Among the lesser prizeholders, his Royal Highness Prince Edward, Duke of Cambridge, £40; J. Deabelle, £100; Baldock, £100; Dormer, £100; H. Thompson, £100; C. Battersea, £100; D. Scanlan, £80, F. Garnett, £80; R. Wilson, £80; J. Brandon, £80; H. Colemun, £80; Miss Brown, £80; Mrs. Collier, £70; J. Sandham, £70; Mr. Southbeach, £70; J. Tooner, £70; Mr. Fripp, £80; J. Ricketts, £70; Miss C. Dow, £70, Miss C Alexander, £70; Cook, £70;—Greenly, £70; W. Smith, £70; A. Dickson, £70; Vincent Aitchison, £70; G. Godwin, honorary secretary to the society, £15, &c., &c.

ARMY AND NAVY CLUB COMPETITION. The decision of the Club upon the designs for their new house was given by ballot on Thursday last. There were 91 competitors and 71 designs. Two premiums were to be awarded, one of £200, the other of £100, for the two designs which should be most highly approved. Of these, one was awarded to the design by George Tattersall, Esq., and the second to the design by Messrs. Fowler and Fisk. The whole of the designs are now on view to the competitors and their friends at the old club-house, in St. James's-square.

POOR RATE IN MARYLEBONE. At a meeting of the five district societies of St Marylebone, held at the Court House on Wednesday—present, the Rev. John Hunt Spicy, D D., the Rector of the parish, in the chair. The reports from the several districts were read, from which it appeared that during the past year 3,742 persons had been relieved by their visitations, and the sums distributed amounted to £1,361 2s. 10d.

ST. MARYLEBONE DISTRICT SOCIETIES. At a meeting, held at the Court House, on Wednesday, the reports from the several districts showed that, during the past year, 3742 persons had been relieved by visitations; and that the sums distributed amounted to £1361 2s. 10d.

WESTMINSTER IMPROVEMENTS.—On Wednesday, by order of the Westminster Improvement Commissioners, the sale of the Great Almonry one of the worst localities in Westminster took place, for the purpose of being cleared away for the new and splendid thoroughfare to be called "Victoria-street." There were altogether 19 houses disposed of, some being above 200 years old, and which adjoined the once celebrated Westminster Sanctuary, and Queen Elizabeth's printing establishment, which was constructed of lath and plaster, and when fell down a short time ago.

TEETOTAL MEETING ON KENNINGTON COMMON. Last Sunday, an aggregate meeting of the Metropolitan Teetotal Societies, to make a collection for the relief of the distressed Irish and Scotch, was held on Kennington-common. About 8000 persons assembled. Dr. Oxley was called to the chair; and, in addressing the meeting, urged the claims of the starving Irish and Scotch. He was followed by several other speakers, the collection being made during the addresses.

PEOPLE'S INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE. On Wednesday, a meeting was held at the Crown and Anchor Tavern, for the purpose, as stated in the requisition, for forming an association, "Whose object shall be to spread over the widest field the principles of national liberty and progress, and to aid in establishing a good understanding among the people of all countries." At eight o'clock, Dr. Bowring, M.P., took the chair, and recommended the association to public support. Mr Ashurst said that the view with which they had assembled was to establish an association far different from those which he remembered, whose only object of shaking hands, nation with nation, would be universally recognised. Mr. Ashurst concluded by moving the first resolution, to the effect:—That the persons present form themselves into an international league on the principles that had already stated. Mr. P. A. Taylor seconded the resolution, which was unanimously agreed to. Resolutions, appointing council and officers of the society, and fixing its laws, were then put and agreed to.

BRANDESTON HALL, SUFFOLK, DESTROYED BY FIRE. This fine specimen of Elizabethan architecture, the seat of Mr. Austin, Q.C., situate on a prominent eminence, near the road-side, between Cretingham and Framlingham, Suffolk, caught fire in the morning of Thursday (last week). It was built about three centuries since, and was very capacious, having a noble frontage of upwards of 100 feet. Soon after twelve o'clock, a boy, an assistant of the contractor, discovered smoke issuing from the sitting-rooms over the library, on the south west wing. It had been used by the contractor since he had had the care of the building, and was the only apartment in which there had been a fire for several days. He immediately ran to Mr. Sidell, the principal tenant in the immediate neighbourhood, and on their return found the fire had communicated with the roof

EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

PUBLIC attention in this country was never so strongly engaged in the contemplation of works connected with the Fine Arts as it is at the present moment. The door of the Lord Chamberlain's office is besieged with applications for tickets to see the first exhibition of pictures in St. James's Palace; and the door of the office of the Lord Great Chamberlain, for tickets to see what architecture has accomplished in the New House of Lords. On Saturday last, the Minister who carried the Corn Bill threw open his Gallery, in Whitehall Gardens, to nearly three hundred people, consisting of painters, sculptors, architects, engravers, art-auctioneers, picture-cleaners, picture-dealers, print-sellers, critics. The prizes of the London Art Union were distributed this week. Four Exhibitions are already open—one at the British Institution—another in Suffolk-street—a third in Pall Mall, East—and a fourth in Pall Mall, West. On Monday, the Royal Academy opens. Nor is this all there is to see. There is a charming statue, by Mr. Nelson, of Dublin, of "Venus Attiring," now on view at the Egyptian Hall. The New Hall of the British Museum is still a novelty in art; and a most noble collection of etchings and engravings, the property of the late Lieutenant-Colonel Durrant, is catalogued for sale at Sotheby's, in Wellington-street. Nor in an enumeration like this, should the Panorama be omitted; or the Cosmorama, in Regent-street; or the Diorama, in the Park; or even (on reflection) the pictures for the £1000 prize, still, we believe, on view at the Gallery of the Chinese Exhibition.

Among the "sights" we have enumerated, the Old Water-Colour Exhibition is one of the most pleasing. English artists thoroughly understand the resources and capabilities of Water-Colour drawing, and the English public appreciate as thoroughly the wonders of the art. The Exhibition is always a popular one with the ladies. There is much that they can learn from; and much for them to see, without trouble and fatigue.

This—the forty-third Exhibition of the Society—is one of the best the Society has had within the last five years. It would seem, indeed, as if Copley Fielding, and Prout, and Evans, and De Wint, had roused themselves to maintain the excellence of the Exhibition; and supply the temporary absence of Mr. Cattermole, and the permanent retirement of Harding and Frank Stone. Mr. Fielding, indeed, is unusually prolific: he has, altogether, forty-three pictures—one for every year, it would seem, that the Society has been established. Nor can we find fault with him for engaging so much space as he must necessarily occupy with so large a number of pictures; for he appears to great advantage, in spite of a certain monotony of manner hardly to be avoided in so prolific an exhibition. Mr. Gastineau is the next to Mr. Fielding in number, though not in importance. He hardly deserves, indeed, to occupy so large a space upon the walls as his fellow members have awarded him; or, by the rules of the Society, he is (unfortunately for us), perhaps, entitled to engross.

"JEALOUSY."—PAINTED BY THE LATE G. HARRISON.

1. "The Lake of Geneva, from Clarens, looking towards the Valley of the Rhone." George Fripp. A large and charming landscape—something between Callcott and Clarkson Stanfield. The execution, in parts, is extremely good.

12. "A Watermill near Corwen, North Wales." P. De Wint. Perhaps, the most remarkable example in the Exhibition of the merits and defects of Mr. De Wint's peculiar style. The treatment is extremely broad, and the execution almost woolly.

22. "View of Snowdon, from the Mountain Road between Pont-Aberglaslyn and Tan-y-booch." Copley Fielding. One of the finest of Mr. Fielding's works: the effect of distance admirable. The mountain and the sky are kept capitally apart, and yet together.

27. "A Day in the Forest of Atholl." Evans, of Eton. Mr. Evans has other Highland pictures in the Exhibition (three we think), conceived and executed with great truth of character and pencil. This is one of the finest.

31. "The Isle of Staffa—a View of Clam Shell Cave." Copley Fielding. Wild and effective; but we prefer Mr. Fielding when dealing with wastes and downs. The Wastes of Cumberland and the Downs of Sussex are his peculiar home.

38. "Chapel in the Cathedral, Bruges." Joseph Nash. The chapel door is represented open; and, in front, a man kneeling at his devotions. The effect is somewhat cold; but the execution, as is usual with Mr. Nash, extremely careful.

41. "View in Epping Forest, near High Beech, Essex." P. De Wint. Effective; but too broad and too broken.

45. "Rover Llygyn, from Pont-y-Kyfyn, near Capel Cürig." D. Cox. An upright drawing—boldly conceived, but broad, streaky, and even dirty.

56. "Drumadoun." W. A. Nesfield. A fine poetic drawing of a lovely coast, with a red lurid sky, a foundered ship, a vulture in the foreground, and a flight of sea-gulls.

58. "Claddagh Fisherman's Cabin." Alfred Fripp. An Interior, broadly and freely painted. A young mother is represented feeding her child; a boy at her feet is mixing the food.

69. "Piazza del Duomo, Trent, in the Tyrol." W. Callow. A clever drawing; very different from either Prout or Nash, and, therefore, not mannered.

72. "Jupiter Nursed by Amalthea, the Nymphs, and Corybantes, in the Island of Crete." J. Cristall. Cold and careful, and much in the manner of Westall or Howard. We prefer a different subject from the same pencil.—(No. 77) "A Gleaner of Herefordshire."

76. "Windsor Park." D. Cox. A large and violently-painted picture—the Castle in the distance, and a storm coming on. A lady and child running in the foreground. This is not Pope's Windsor Forest, or the Forest of Herne the Hunter, or of her Majesty Queen Victoria.

80. "Italian Landscape, with sea-port—composition." Copley Fielding. A most beautiful drawing—full of Claude-like painting and poetry.

85. "Augsburg, Bavaria." S. Prout. Very large and full of figures A capital example of the master.

97. "The Necker, from the Konigstuhl, Heidelberg." T. M. Richardson, jun. Should be contrasted with Mr. Pyne's large picture of the same subject in the present Suffolk-street Exhibition. There is more air and light, and distance in the oil picture of Mr. Pyne; but this is still an excellent drawing.

106. "Matlock Vale, Derbyshire." P. De Wint Too broad again. The haycocks or wheatsheafs look like pitched tents.

109. "The Eagle Tower, Haddon." S. Rayner. A fine drawing, but too large for the little subject that is in it.

116. "Bolton Abbey." D. Cox. A bold, dashing, and effective drawing—much in the manner of Gainsborough; and by far the finest work from Mr. Cox's pencil in the present Exhibition. The abbey is seen reflected in the water, and on the right of the picture cows are represented driven by girls with milk-pails. No kind of architectural style is observed—the building is Gothic, that is all.

127. "View on the Witham, near Lincoln." P. De Wint. A long, narrow picture exquisite in feeling and execution throughout. It has been bought by Mr. Lewis Pocock, one of the Secretaries of the Art Union.

[illegible]. "Haddon Hall, Derbyshire." W. C Smith. Haddon, in the time of the Vernons, and nicely conceived, but somewhat hard and green.

142. "The Black Knight and Jester Riding through the Forest." Joseph Nash. A truer name would be, "Scene in a Forest—Black Knight and Jester in the distance."

150. "Arundel Castle, from the upper part of the Park, Sussex." Copley Fielding. A fine representation of a fine view, and in Copley Fielding's best manner.

160. "A Tramper." W. Hunt. A woman seated on a roadside, tired and thoughtful. This is a clever drawing.

172. "The Hallowed Relic." Alfred Fripp. A very large drawing, with very little in it more than a figure kneeling at a cross. In the foreground is a skull, which we would recommend Mr. Fripp to remove when the picture is returned to him.

176. "A Landscape — Sunset." Poetic in parts, but surely that mottled scagliola marble sky is not true to nature.

183. "Milan Cathedral." S. Prout. Clever, and with the architecture more in detail than is usual with Mr. Prout.

188. "A Page." W. Hunt. A boy in a yellow dress, asleep on a chair. The attitude is easy and unaffected.

198. "Chrysanthemums." 201. "Poppies." V. Bartholomew. Beautifully true.

204. "Camellias." 205. "Jar of Flowers." 206. "Spring Flowers." Maria Harrison. All are excellent.

212. "Devotional Offerings." W. Hunt. A female figure kneeling, with flowers thrown down on the ground before her. The face full of tranquil sorrow.

232. "Christmas Pie." W. Hunt A boy on a chair, with a pie before him, a knife in one hand, and a fork in the other. The expression of happiness extremely clever. A piece of holly on the table relieves the rest of the yellow colouring. We have engraved this characteristic drawing in No. 246 of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

276. "Trampers at Home." W Hunt. Two female figures—one seated sewing, the other standing pealing potatoes. Clever, but certainly inferior to the "Tramper Resting," already noticed.

290. "Pluma." W. Hunt. Beautifully coloured, and, with the blue meal upon them, exquisitely given.

299. "A Corn Field, near Iffley, Oxfordshire;" 307. "Stacking Hay." P. de Wint. Two companion drawings. Detail is always sacrificed by Mr. de Wint. We do not mean Denner-like detail, but the distinctiveness of nature.

304. "Jealousy." The late G. Harrison. A garden scene, with three figures in the central walk. We have engraved it in our present Number. Mr. Harrison was an artist of promise, unfortunately lost to the arts before his genius was fully ripe.

315. "Butcher Boy." W. Hunt. A three-quarter figure of a butcher boy, with a pig in his arms. You can almost hear the squeak of the little porker. The quiet enjoyment of the boy's face is perfectly irresistible.

LITERATURE

ONE HUNDRED SONGS OF PIERRE JEAN DE BÉRANGER, with Translations by WILLIAM YOUNG. Chapman & Hall.

A translation that should re-produce the beauties of Béranger's verse in English, is one of those difficulties that border on the impossible. Many of Béranger's Lyrics, in sentiment, appeal to the whole world; but the exquisite delicacy of his language defies imitation, and the skill with which he introduces and repeats his "refrains," cannot be approached: in a translation, they inevitably become stiff or heavy, or must be paraphrased or evaded. In feeling, too, he is wholly French; his opinions are those of the nation when it levelled the Bastile, with that admiration of Napoleon and the military greatness of the Empire that succeeded the political enthusiasm of the Revolution. Like Michelet and others we could name, he still believes that France and her armies are the regenerators of the world, only held back from their mission by "the system" of Louis Philippe, and the timid bourgeoisie, with its spirit of commerce, that prefers selling sugar to fighting. He launched a few satires at Napoleon when he was sinking from the great chief of a nation into a vulgar Emperor; but, when he fell, Béranger turned from the stupid legitimacies of the Restoration to the glories of the past, with all a patriot's fire and poet's affection; and, when it was dangerous to sing save in unison with the Court choir, he addressed the Republic of his early years, half in playfulness, hiding his meaning by apostrophising it as his "Lisette." In some of his songs, it is difficult to say whether he mingled politics with his love, or threw a little love into his politics. The despotism of the old regime, it is said, was "tempered by epigrams;" the Restoration was shaken by songs; and Béranger incurred the honours of fine and imprisonment. And, when the hopes of the "three days" were fading, he drew his pen against the Revolution of July; but the new dynasty, stronger or wiser for a year, frowned at the veteran marching to execution, expressed in the phrases of the barrack-room, is terribly natural; but, in English, this character and colouring cannot be given. This, however, the reader, who cannot enjoy the original, will not miss; for general ability and faithfulness we can heartily recommend Mr. Young's translation; he has given every song in the original on the opposite page; and, to those who have a knowledge of both languages, the comparison of the two texts is at once a useful exercise and a delightful occupation.

[illegible] ideas that are sometimes heavy and common-place. These chymists;" the "Beggars" (with the exception of that stumbling-block the refrain), is capital. It is in the light playful pieces like the "King of Yvetot," or those where the language is that of the common people, with its slang and abbreviation, which Béranger alone could render poetical, that the deficiency of the translation is most apparent; the "Old Corporal" is an instance. In the original, it is very proud of the veteran marching to execution, expressed in the phrases of the barrack-room, is terribly natural; but, in English, this character and colouring cannot be given. This, however, the reader, who cannot enjoy the original, will not miss; for general ability and faithfulness we can heartily recommend Mr. Young's translation; he has given every song in the original on the opposite page; and, to those who have a knowledge of both languages, the comparison of the two texts is at once a useful exercise and a delightful occupation.

LOUIS PHILIPPE AND LORD HOLLAND. The King of the French has just presented a magnificent porcelain vase of Sevres to Lord Holland. By a delicate attention his Majesty has caused to be painted on the vase the house at Twickenham in which he resided when in England, and in which he often received the father of Lord Holland, with whom he always maintained the most friendly relations. On the other side of the vase is a representation of the Palace of the Tuileries. Some time ago the King consented to accept from Lord Holland a portrait of his father, after Leslie, which is considered a striking likeness.

DEATH OF LADY ALICIA GORDON.—The above lady died on Saturday last, at her residence, in Hertford street, May-fair. Her ladyship was daughter of the late, and sister to the present, Earl of Aberdeen, and to the Right Hon. Sir Robert Gordon, Bart., G.C.B., and was born in 1788. Lady Alicia was for several years Lady of the Bedchamber to her late Royal Highness the Princess Sophia Matilda of Gloucester.

THE YEAR'S REVENUE.—The tables have been published of the national income and expenditure for the year ending the 5th April. The total receipts were £54,493,761 19s. 10d., and the expenditure £51,708,570 16s. 2d., giving an excess over expenditure of £2,765,191 3s. 8d. The principal items of receipt, dropping the odd numbers, are—Customs, £21,000,000; Excise, nearly £14,000,000; Stamps, £7,600,000; Land and Assessed Taxes, £4,957,000; Property Tax, £5,464,000. The total charge of the funded debt on the other side of the account is £27,636,194, and the remaining large items are—Army, £6,300,000; Navy, £7,700,000; Ordnance, £2,645,900; Miscellaneous, including £550,000 on account of distress in Ireland, nearly £4,000,000. The balances in the Exchequer on the 5th ult. were £5,459,000

THE NEW HOUSE OF LORDS.—THE VICTORIA LOBBY.

(Continued from page 261.)

THE VICTORIA LOBBY.

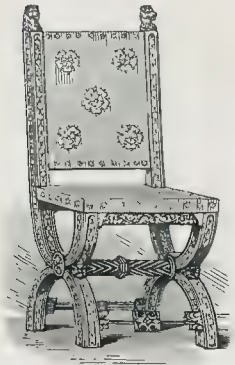
FINGER-PLATE.

F the superb character of this apartment, only a proximate idea can be formed.

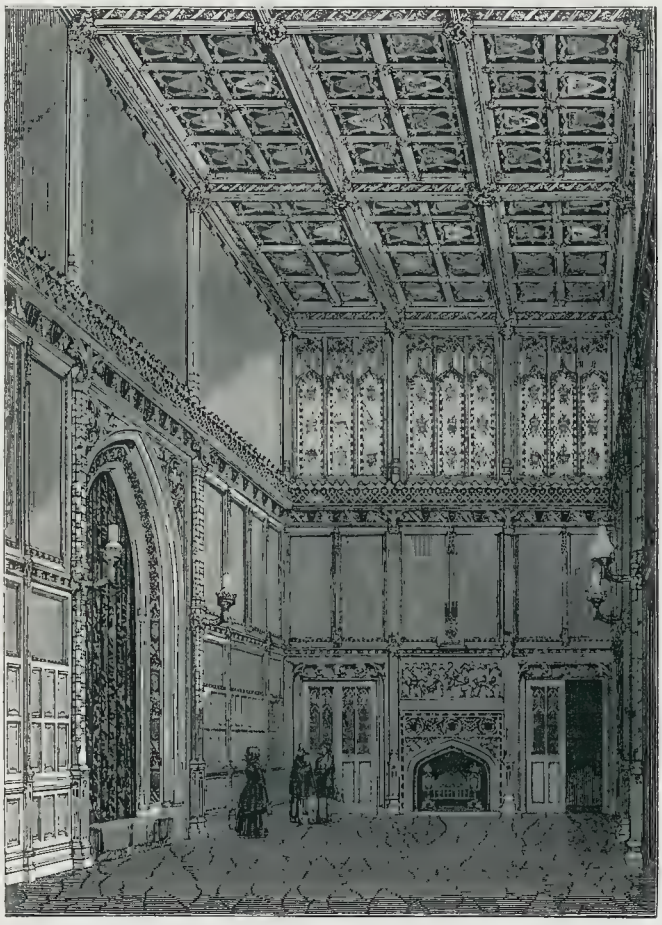
Even in its comparatively unfinished state, it is a most magnificent apartment; but, when the intended frescoes on the walls, and Regal portraits in the paneling, are inserted in their several places, the general effect will be of excessive richness and Regal splendour. The walls are each divided into three compartments; those on the east and west having fire-places in the centres, and doors into the lobbies in the side divisions; the south side has only a lofty arched doorway communicating with the Victoria Gallery in its central division; whilst in the centre, on the north side, is an archway, to correspond, though it is merely an enrichment to a blank wall; and in the side divisions are doors leading into the House of Lords.

The walls are paneled to a considerable height, having a deep frieze, with an elaborate cresting to it, running all round the room. On the north and south sides, the walls above the paneling are, at present, covered with drapery of a dark marone, having roses and crowns diapered upon it in gold colour, as a temporary adornment to blank walls; it being intended, at a future period, to have frescoes painted in the vacant spaces, between the pillars. The east and west ends have each three windows, above the paneling, each window being divided by mullions into three days or lights, having quatrefoiled heads and tracery. The windows are filled with stained glass, of simple but characteristic pattern, consisting, in each light, of the rose, thistle and shamrock, surmounted by Royal crowns, on a ground of elegant disper-work; and the whole is bordered by a narrow fillet, having roses at intervals. The tracery in the heads of the windows has sprays of roses. The effect of these windows is exquisitely beautiful. The rich colours in them, and the softened tone of the light which streams through their various hues, and latticed work, add an impressive magnificence to the lavish decorations of the apartment.

A deeply moulded base runs round the room, and from it rises the paneling of wainscot, of an excellent and enriched design, in the napkin pattern. There are three rows of paneling of this pattern; and, above them, on either side of the apartment, is a series of spaces, nearly square, which are to be filled with bassi-relievi, carved in oak, representing important events in the lives of the Queens of England. Six of these spaces occur on the sides of the room, and above each fire-place is a long space or panel. In the space over the west fire-place, an experimental bas-relief has been introduced, to ascertain the general effect which may be expected from the intended series; and it harmonises exquisitely with the character of the room. Over these sunken panels for bassi-relievi, and separated from them by a deep moulding, enriched with pateræ of varied and elaborate design, is another series, but of tall panels, within which portraits of the Sovereigns of England will be painted, on a gilded ground. Of these spaces there are twenty-eight in all, six being at either end, and eight on either side of the room. All the vacant panels have been hung, temporarily, with a superb paper of the richest colours, on a gilt ground. The frieze above these panels is most elaborately enriched with oak leaves and acorns, having shields charged with the armorial bearings, properly blazoned and gilded, of the different Sovereigns of England since the Conquest. At intervals, and between each shield, is a narrow label, running diagonally over the oak leaves, painted vellum colour, on which are the names of the Sovereigns whose arms are delineated on the shields. The cresting above the frieze is of most exquisite design and richness of character, consisting of Tudor flowers and quatrefoils, with roses on pierced tracery. The compartments of the paneling are divided from each other by carved pillars, rising to the height of the frieze; and between each tall panel also is a slender pillar of similar delicate workmanship. The pillars are elevated on square pedestals, having moulded bases to correspond to the base of the paneling to the room, with sunken panels and quatrefoils upon the respective faces. These pillars are octagonal, and each side is elaborately carved with small quatrefoils in alternate series. About midway up the pillars is a foliated lozenge-shaped ornament, above which the pillar is again of octagonal form and quatrefoiled. From the lozenge ornament on the pillars, on the north and south sides of the room, spring the branches for gas-lights, which are most elaborately wrought in diamond pattern, and end in a rich coronal. Small shields with the arms of England are affixed to the fronts of the branches. The lesser pillars between the panels terminate in crocketed pinnacles. Slender pillars rise from short pedestals above the frieze, to correspond to those below; they have beautifully carved capitals.



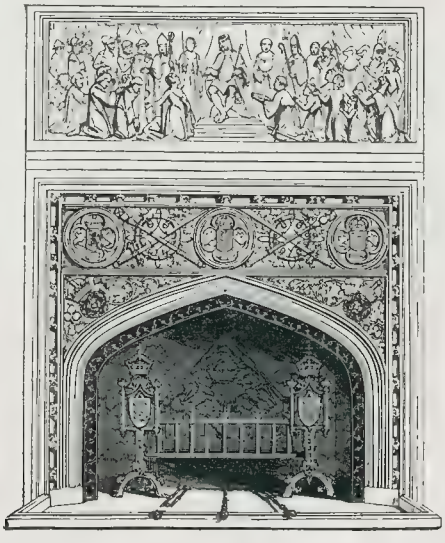
CHAIR IN THE VICTORIA LOBBY.



THE VICTORIA LOBBY.

The small doorways leading into the House of Lords and the Corridors are precisely similar to each other in decoration; they are slightly recessed, the upper corners of the recesses having segments of arches with fleurs-de-lis in them. Three boldly sculptured bosses are over each door. The doors themselves are each of two wings, paneled in elegant pattern, in the lower portion, pierced for two lights, with traceried heads, in the upper, and filled with plate glass. The brass work of the hinges is of simple, yet effective design, but the finger-plates and escutcheons to the locks are of exquisite detail. We have engraved one of the finger-plates in our initial letter: it will be seen, it consists of a quatrefoil, bearing a rose in the centre; and from it sprays treillage of exceedingly complicated design and arrangement, forming an elegant ornament to the door, strictly in keeping with the architectural members in its vicinage.

TABLE IN THE VICTORIA LOBBY



FIRE-PLACE.

The large doorway on the south side, leading into the, at present unfinished, Victoria Gallery, is of lofty pitch, very much decorated, and deeply recessed. Four shields, with crowns over them in alto-relievo, and bearing the arms of England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, respectively, are at intervals in the mouldings on either side of the door, roses filling up the vacant spaces; whilst small labels, on which are inscribed Anglia, Scotia, Hibernia, and Wallia, are under each shield. Around the arch, a series of small quatrefoils is introduced, and the spandrils have quatrefoils with a rose and a fleur-de-lis within them. The archway on the north wall corresponds exactly in design to its companion opposite; and magnificent curtains of damask, with deep gold fringes, conceal the spaces left for both doors, which are, as yet, unfinished. As the door on the north side is a false one, a statue of her Majesty will be placed on a pedestal in front of it a future period. We believe that it is already commissioned. The seat shown in our view is not a fixture, but has only a temporary right to its locality.

THE CEILING.

The Ceiling of the Victoria Lobby is excessively rich in decoration. It is divided by massive tie-beams into nine large compartments, and each of these is again divided into eight by small ribs; at the intersections of which, and at their junctions with the tie-beams, are exquisitely sculptured bosses, all varied in character, and richly gilded. The faces of the tie-beams are deeply moulded, and along them is carved an intricate treillage, having labels at intervals, intertwined and running diagonally amidst it, painted vellum colour, and bearing the motto, "Dieu et Mon Droit." The treillage is coloured and gilded. At the intersections of the tie-beams are bosses of great diversity, richness, and vigour of design; consisting of lions in varied attitudes, surrounded by a bold foliage, gilded and painted, in vivid tints. The surface of the Ceiling is painted a dark blue. Within the compartments are heater-shaped shields, containing, alternately, the arms of England, Scotland, and Ireland; and around them are enriched quatrefoil borders, with fleurs-de-lis and coronals, the former in the central angles and the latter at the corners. At the points where the tie-beams enter the walls, an elaborate foliage rises from the capitals of the slender pillars at the sides, and similar foliage from the pillars at the angles of the room. From the variety and richness of the sculptural decorations of this Ceiling, and the vivid colours employed in their enrichment, the effect is gorgeous in the extreme, almost surpassing in splendour that of the House of Lords, yet so softened by the tone of the stained glass as to be perfectly free from intrusive brightness.

THE FIRE-PLACES

The Fire-places are of very elegant design and elaborate workmanship. The opening for the fire is a low arch, deeply recessed; the sides and back, incrusted with red and blue encaustic tiles, having the lions of England and the Royal monogram on them respectively. The spandrils of the arch are enriched with Tudor roses, crowned, painted and gilded; and from them flow, in graceful arrangement, the thistle and shamrock, also gilded. In a long panel, immediately above the arch, are three quatrefoils, within circles, having, in their centres, shields of the arms of England, Scotland, and Ireland; and, in gilt letters, on blue labels twining under the shields, the respective mottoes "Dieu et Mon Droit," "Nemo me impune lacessit," and "Quis Separabit." In the spaces between the quatrefoils are circlets of oak branches, with sceptres and swords placed saltire-wise upon them, intertwined by a cord and tassels. The stove is very low, and along the top bar are fleurs-de-lis. The reredos, or back, rises high in gable form, and has upon it the Royal Arms of England, with its supporters and crest. The fire-dogs are of brass, and represent shields, with the lions of England upon them, pendant from standards of enriched design, resting on splayed feet, ornamented with foliage; the standards being surmounted by Regal crowns. The fire implements are of wrought brass, elegantly designed. It will be seen, by our representation, that fenders, those necessary adjuncts to modern fire-places, are dispensed with; a raised moulding round the hearth serving in lieu thereof, besides being made in accordance with the style of architecture of the room. We should observe that the bas-relief represented in our delineation of the Fire-place is not carved in oak, but is merely in plaster, coloured to imitate oak: the subject is Queen Philippa interceding with Edward the Third in behalf of the Citizens of Calais. On brackets, over each Fire-place, are clocks, in oak cases, beautifully carved. The cases have gables, with crockets and finials, and at the corners are small turrets with pinnacles: they were made by Webb. The works of the clocks are by Vulliamy. The dials are exquisitely enamelled in blue and gold, and colour.

THE FURNITURE.

The furniture of the Victoria Lobby is of truly artistic design and character, and shows how much is gained in effect and style, by having an artist's master-mind to direct the upholsterer's skill. In arrangement and details, nothing can be better or more in unison with the architectural features of the room than the chairs and tables; and the tout ensemble produced by them, in their proper places, is perfectly beautiful. In point of workmanship, they are of exquisite finish, and add to the repute of Mr. Webb, of Bond-street, in whose establishment they were made.

The Chairs are of oak. They have straight backs, with lions' heads at the top. Russia leather, of a red colour, is strained tightly over the backs, and secured by brass nails, of Gothic pattern and form. Tudor roses are stamped on the leather and gilded.

The seat is of Russian leather also, but without stuffing, the stout leather resting on the webbing underneath. The legs are formed like a carved X, and are strengthened by a middle bar. The legs are exquisitely foliated, and richly carved, and the middle bar is of an extremely beautiful pattern and workmanship. Our Engraving gives an accurate representation of the admirable effect of Costa conducting the first part, and to it we refer our readers, premising that much of the carved work is so delicate, that we can only give a general idea of it. There are sixteen Chairs in all, all of them being of one pattern. Each is three feet four inches and a half in height at the back; the seat of the sixteen being one foot seven.

Two Tables are in the Lobby, of octagonal form, and peculiarly effective design. As the tables are alike in form and ornamentation, we need only describe one of them, and refer our readers to our engraved representation to elucidate points which may not be readily understood from a verbal description. It has four legs resting on moulded plinths, and supporting bearers, stretching from corner to corner; and four other bearers radiate from the centre to the sides of the Table, the extremities of all the bearers being carved in elegant foliage. The legs are delicately enriched by a leaf pattern; and the bearers have plain moulded capitals and bases; whilst, on the ends of the plinths from which they rise, are winged lions and dragons couchant. Ogee arches span from leg to leg, each ornamented with elaborate pateræ, in narrow sunken panels; and on their under sides are bold carved enrichments, trefoiled. The tops of the Tables are formed of three concentric circles of wood inlaid in a lattice fashion, and very highly polished. The general character of these Tables is great strength, blended with richness of decoration, and perfect keeping with the florid embellishments of the room. The Carpet is of the same pattern as that in the House of Lords, a deep blue, with gold-coloured roses.

In the View we give of the Interior of the Victoria Lobby, we have omitted the chairs and tables, that the general architectural features of the apartment might be unbroken; and, consequently, our readers must imagine, in the mind's eye, the appearance of the furniture, the tables, surrounded by seats, and the benches for candles upon them. The View is looking west, showing the great door to the Victoria Hall on the left hand. The fire-place is given in detail, to show its sculptural adornments, and the fire-dogs and stove on a larger scale than in the general view.

It is impossible to conceive a more Regal apartment than is the Victoria Lobby, every detail being in such exquisite taste, and so gorgeously enriched by colour and gold; and, in addition to its splendour, there is the prevailing feeling that the embellishments are ALL ART, no hackneyed design or copied enrichment being introduced: all are new and beautiful. Indeed, we doubt whether even King Louis of Bavaria, that art-loving Monarch, ever imagined a more perfect specimen of art-decoration than this room will present, when all the architect's intentions are carried out. Even now, there is not a single decoration, or piece of furniture, which does not bear the stamp of genius and consummate taste; and when the pictorial beauties are added to its architectural, no room in Europe will exceed it in magnificence and appropriateness.

Next week we shall illustrate the Regal Throne, and other Royal enrichments, in the House of Lords.

MUSIC.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Rossini's "L'Italiana in Algeri" composed in 1813 for the Theatre San Benedetto, in Venice, after the fashion of the ballad-opera, or "Tarocchi" at the French, in the same year—was performed on Saturday night, in presence of her Majesty and Prince Albert, and a brilliant assemblage of rank and fashion—the hero of a hundred fights being seen, and heard, in the Duke of Bedford's box. This comic opera has not been given for some years, and its story, therefore, not being so familiar to the habitués, as buffa operas of more modern date, the audience were not so alive to the admirable points in the acting of the troupe. About the singing, however, there was no unapprehension; it was certainly a remarkable fact, to meet with a first-rate company of artists, entirely new to this country, without having recourse to the talents of Grisi, Persiani, Mario, Ronconi, Tamburini, &c., in the cast. Alboni was Isabella, the Italian in Algiers; Mdlle. Angelini, Elvira, the turncoat wife of the Bey: Mdlle. A. Bellini, Zulma, her attendant; Marini, Mustapha, the Bey: Salvi, Lindoro, the Italian captive; Romero, Taddeo, the henpecked husband of Isabella; and Polonini, Haly, the Captain of the Algerine Corsairs. The action of the piece is very slight. Mustapha, the Bey of Algiers, tired of the Eastern beauties of the Harem, consents Haly to direct a Christian captive, resolving to transfer Elvira to Lindoro. Haly, meeting with Taddeo and Isabella, who are shipwrecked on the coast of Algiers, conveys her to Mustapha, Taddeo passing himself off as her uncle to save his life. Isabella is a spirited Italian, who at once brings the Bey to submission; and meeting with her former lover, Lindoro, the three captives conspire together, and, by making Mustapha become a chief of the Pappataci, a supposed sect, the scheme of womanliness and plying him with wine, manage their escape from Algiers. The situations in the second act, in which the Bey puts on, over his rich Oriental costume, a dress coat, powdered wig, &c., and takes the advice of Pappataci oath, are finely laughable. Rovere, so long the great star of the Viennese Imperial Theatre, and of the Scala at Milan, managed to ingratiate himself in the favour of the public before the second act had closed, although many of his jokes were lost, from the want of knowledge of his peculiar style. One more familiar with his audience, Rovere will prove a welcome addition. He has inexhaustible fun in his nature, and he has the advantage of being an excellent singer, a quality rarely met with in buffo actors. Salvi was unfortunately labouring under combined indisposition and stage-fright, and did not create the great sensation that had been anticipated. But he will take the highest position eventually. He is the most famed basso profundo of Italy, genuine in style, dramatic, musician, and musical vocalist. He has wonderful flexibility, and his powers are very versatile. In the finale of the first act, and in the "Pappataci," he greatly distinguished himself, despite of the drawbacks we have referred to. He was too ill to repeat his part on Tuesday, and a change of opera was the consequence. Salvi sang the tenor part deliciously, difficult and high as it is for the voice. Nothing could be more charming than his singing in the sentence "Languir per una bella," was in the duo with Marini, "Se inclinassi." He was greatly applauded. Polonini's "Haly" was of great aid in the concerted pieces. The great hit was, however, made by Alboni, who again created quite a furore, not only by the never-equalled charm of her contralto notes, but by her marvellous execution of the most florid divisions in the mezzo soprano register. There never, perhaps, was an instance of any artiste coming to this country with such little noise, having such a decided success. Everything she sings is received with a torrent of approbation. Her intonation is so perfect, and her organ is so symmetrical, that she contends for the palm with any artiste that we ever recollect, except Malibran. She proved the varied excellences of her style by thus appearing as a cantatrice buffa. Her acting is so natural, and the play of her features so amusing, that she would be appreciated highly if she were not the great vocalist she is felt to be. She has two cavatinas in this opera, "Cruda sorte," in the first act, and "Pensa alla patria," in the second; the slow movement of the latter is pathetic and lyrical in the extreme, and it was sung with a fervour as to insure a rapturous encore; in the allegro, Alboni executed some sparkling cadence with consummate skill and finish.

On Tuesday night "Lucia" was repeated for the third time. At the first performance Ronconi, who made his début as Enrico Ashton, was too hoarse to do justice to the music. On the second occasion Tamburini was to have played it, but was taken ill, and Ronconi was announced as the substitute at the eleventh hour. On Tuesday, however, Ronconi appeared with all his vigour, and a finer piece of acting we have never witnessed; his singing being also remarkable for power and brilliancy, although the quality of the voice in the level passages is not of the most musical order.

Of the charming Lucia of Mdme. Persiani, of the impassioned Edgar of Salvi, and the incomparable Raimondo of Marini, we have written in terms of only qualified eulogy; and, on Tuesday evening, these parts were equally as superbly rendered, despite of a cough which seemed to annoy the prima donna in the earlier scenes. Every credit was bestowed during the evening, but Costa's excellent discretion in not accepting encores is much to be praised. The Duchess of Kent and suite occupied her Majesty's box

On Thursday night, Bellini's "Puritani" was given for the first time, with Grisi, as Elvira; Mdlle. Angelina, Henrietta; Mario, Arturo; Tamburini, Giorgio; Tagliafico, Riccardo; Tulli, Bruno; and Polonini, Walton. The Diva was in splendid voice, and never sang more beautifully. In the Polacca, "Ai Miei Vergin Vezzosa," she introduced some novel divisions, which created quite a sensation. Her acting in the finale of the first act was admirable. In the mad scena, "Qui la voce sua soave," she displayed her histrionic genius quite electrified the house. Her duo with Mario, in the last act, was also superbly rendered. We never saw this great prima donna looking better, with more power and sweetness of voice. The entire opera, from beginning to end, was a perfect disc-ription in not accepting encores is much to be praised. The Duchess of Kent and suite occupied her Majesty's box

On Thursday night, Bellini's "Puritani" was given for the first time, with Grisi, as Elvira; Mdlle. Angelina, Henrietta; Mario, Arturo; Tamburini, Giorgio; Tagliafico, Riccardo; Tulli, Bruno; and Polonini, Walton. The Diva was in splendid voice, and never sang more beautifully. In the Polacca, "Ai Miei Vergin Vezzosa," she introduced some novel divisions, which created quite a sensation. Her acting in the finale of the first act was admirable. In the mad scena, "Qui la voce sua soave," she displayed her histrionic genius quite electrified the house. Her duo with Mario, in the last act, was also superbly rendered. We never saw this great prima donna looking better, with more power and sweetness of voice. The entire opera, from beginning to end. Mario, who had two picturesque costumes of a Cavalier in the time of the First Charles, also shared in the honours of the evening. His "A te o cara" was rapturously encored; Grisi refusing as successful as in the duo in the quartett. Mario acted with more than ordinary vigour, and his "Ella fu Fremente" was sung with impassioned feeling. Tamburini sang the music of Giorgio with infinite expression, particularly his recitative in the second act. He was to have played his original part of Riccardo and Marini that of Giorgio, but, on Wednesday, a change was rendered necessary, owing to the latter artist being indisposed. Tagliafico's Riccardo, undertaken at a very short notice, was creditable.

The "Scuol la Tromba" duo was well commenced by the two band; but, in the ensemble at the close, their voices did not blend well together, and the absence of a singer with the masterly quality of a Lablache was felt. The opera, however, on the whole, never gave us more unmitigated satisfaction.

CONCERTS OF THE WEEK.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—The fourth Concert, on Monday, was honoured with the presence of her Majesty, Prince Albert, and the Duchess of Kent. There was a numerous attendance of rank and fashion, and the rooms were crowded to excess. The Royal amateurs arrived at eight o'clock, and were received with the National Anthem, and remained until the end of the Concert. The programme exhibited the remarkable event of Costa conducting the first part, and Mendelssohn the second act. Beethoven's Symphony in F, beautifully played, was the opening piece. Misses A. and M. Williams than sang Rosalin's duetto, "Quis est homo," from the "Stabat Mater," very smoothly, the cadenza being nicely executed. Then came the lion of the evening, Mendelssohn, in Beethoven's Pianoforte Concerto in G. Costa directing the orchestral accompaniments. The sensation produced by the performance of this wonderful work of the dead but, in Mendelssohn's hands, it came out with a charm and freshness, impossible to describe in conventional language of criticism. He introduced two splendid cadenzas apart from those which Beethoven himself has left in endless variety of contrapuntal treatment. The flow of ideas seemed to be inexhaustible, and the glorious impulse of the whole irresistibly captivating. He played the Concerto entirely from memory; and his working up of the themes of Beethoven quite electrified even the accomplished members of the orchestra. Her Majesty and Prince Albert applauded the pianist warmly. Miss M. Williams sang an elegant air, by Costa, composed in 1846, "Ah! verdure quel core," charmingly. Weber's chivalrous overture, "Euryanthe," closed the first part. Costa conducted it with an ardour and impetuosity that were communicated to the executants, and created quite a corresponding furore from the listeners. Mendelssohn conducted the second part, comprising his own Scotch Symphony in A minor, No. 3, and his Overture, Scherzo, Song with Chorus, "You spotted snakes," and the Wedding March, and Choruses, from the music to "Midsummer Night's Dream." It is needless to add, that these well-known inspirations so replete with fancy, feeling, and imagination—were received with the highest enthusiasm. The Misses Williams, and Weber's duet, "Come, he gay," from the "Freischütz," completed the vocal selection of this memorable concert, which reflected the highest credit on the artists engaged in it, and on the spirited Directors, for presenting such an attractive scheme. Mr. Anderson, the hon. treasurer, made admirable arrangements for the reception and accommodation of the Royal visitors. The next concert will be on the 10th of May, on which occasion Madame Persiani and Signor Salvi will appear, by command of her Royal Italian Majesty, in the most liberal manner, given consent that these great artists should appear.

THE MELODISTS' CLUB.—On Tuesday evening there was a very delightful meeting, his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge in the chair; on which occasion, the prize of ten guineas, for the best Druidical Ode, given by Geo. Andrew Barnard, G.C.B., one of the Vice-Presidents, was awarded to the popular vocal composer, Mr. J. Hatton, gained the second prize, given by W. Foster White, Esq.; and Mr. Charles Horn the third prize of five guineas, given by W. Dixon, Esq. The three compositions were sung by Mr Machin, in excellent style, accompanied by Sir Sir. Bishop. The decision gave general satisfaction. The Brothers Helmsberger, from Vienna, played a Concertante Duo for Two Violins, by Maurer, very brilliantly, and were deservedly cheered for their finished execution. Benedict, the pianist and composer, accompanied them, with his customary skill. Herr Hoelzel sang some German songs admirably. Glees were sung by Messrs. Handel Gear, King, Mowatt, and Foord, Barnby, E. Taylor, &c. The Duke of Beaufort, Lord Saltoun, Lord Colbell, Esq., M.P.; E. Goldsmid, Esq.; T. Fitzherbert, Esq.; A. Bunn, Esq.; Oliphant, Esq.; C. L. Grunelsen, Esq.; W. Anderson, Esq., &c., were amongst the members and guests present on this festive occasion. Mr. Parry, the hon. secretary, whom the Chronicle properly calls the life and soul of the Club, was indefatigable in his exertions to provide a great musical treat.

THE MUSICAL UNION.—At the third meeting of this excellent institution, on Tuesday afternoon, in presence of his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, and a host of amateurs, Haydn's Quartet in G, Op. 76, Beethoven's Quartet, No. 1, Op. 59, in F; and Spohr's second Concertante for two violins, comprised the scheme. The executants were Joseph and George Helmsberger, the sons of the leader of the Imperial Opera in Vienna; M. Deloffre, second violin; Mr. Hill, tenor; Herr Hausmann, violoncello; and Lindsay Sloper, pianoforte. The brother violinists made most delightful débuts on this occasion. Joseph, the elder, is a first-rate artist, who proved himself to be as capable of leading in the Haydn quartet as he was of conquering Spohr's difficult combinations; Hausmann, Hill, Deloffre, and Sloper also exhibited their executive powers to the best advantage. Amongst the artists present were Herr Schuloff, the pianist from Prague; Madame Oury, the pianiste; Sainton and Vieuxtemps, the violinists; Piatti, Wallace, and Lucas, &c. At the fourth meeting, on the 11th instant, Vieuxtemps will lead, and on the 25th, the youthful genius, Joachim.

SACRED HARMONIC SOCIETY.

The third performance of Mendelssohn's "Elijah," conducted by the gifted composer, took place on Wednesday night at Exeter Hall, which was crowded in every part. The chorus, so full of Paganish character, "Baal we cry to thee," was encored; and the newly-written trio—a charming inspiration—"Lift thine eyes," so admirably sung by Miss Kirkham, Miss Duval, and Miss Dolby, was also demanded a second time. Miss Kirkham is a niece of Mrs Anderson the pianiste to her Majesty, and a pupil of Mr. Costa: she has a soprano voice of considerable range, and is a young vocalist of much promise. Miss Birch and Miss Dolby, as well as Lockey and Phillips, sang the solo very artistically. The marked improvement in the choral singing is also worthy of praise

The Oratorio was given last night for the fourth and last time, Miss Hawes resuming her original part of the Queen, which she sang so finely at the Birmingham Festival; and Staudigl, Elijah. Mendelssohn's presence has given a fresh impetus to this admirable Society.

MUSICAL CHIT CHAT.

This morning will be the second Concert of the pupils of the Royal Academy of Music at the Hanover-square rooms. On Monday, at the fifth Meeting of the Beethoven Quartet Society, Vieuxtemps will lead. On Wednesday, will be the third Concert of Ancient Music, under the direction of Prince Albert: her Majesty will be present. Lablache, Alboni, Persiani, Tamburini, of the Royal Italian Opera; and Staudigl, Gardoni, and Lablache, of her Majesty's Theatre, will sing. On Friday, is the ninth Concert of the Amateur Musical Society, and the violinist Roucher's Romance, at Willis's Rooms; also the Annual Concert in aid of the Royal Society of Female Musicians—an excellent institution.

Mr. Edney gave a Concert at the Amwell-street Rooms, Pentonville, on Wednesday last, at which Mr. John Parry sang; Mr. Wilson had a full attendance last Monday at the Music Hall. Messrs. Gollmick (pianist), and Oberthur (harp), gave a Concert on Friday at the Hanover-square Rooms, for Lucile Grahn's benefit.

At the last Concert of the Amateur Musical Society, in Store-street, Mr. H. Leslie, the Hon. Secretary, distinguished himself in a violoncello solo, on "Non più mesta." Mr. Cubitt, the violinist, and Madame Oury, the pianiste, are in town for the season. Verdi, the composer, is daily expected in London, to direct the production of a new opera at her Majesty's Theatre. His "Macbeth," so recently so successful at the Pergola, in Florence, has been purchased for the Royal Italian Opera, and Grisi will appear as Lady Macbeth. Verdi's "Lombardi" has failed at the Italian Opera in Vienna, but his "Ernani" has been triumphant. Madame Tadolini, and the English singer, Miss Hayes, and the French artiste, Mdlle Borghese, are in the Viennese troupe; as also Ivanoff, the Russian tenor. The firm of Mechetti, in Vienna, has given Balfe £240 for the right of representing the "Bondman" in that capital, and in the Austrian domin-ions. Mr. Sowe Rea gave the last and last of his Concerts of Classical Chamber Music, at Crosby Hall, on Tuesday evening. He is a clever and rising pianist, and played Beethoven's sonata in E flat with great skill. A pretty song of his was sung, "The stormy night," sung by Mr. Ferrand, gained an encore; as also a ballad by J. J. Harte, "When the daylight departing," nicely sung by Miss E. Turner. Messrs. Rockstro and Rea performed Moscheles's duo for two pianos, "Romance à la Mazurka," brilliantly. Miss Helroyd, Mrs E. Holroyd, Messrs. Watson, Chipp, and Reynolds, assisted Mr. Rea in his classical scheme.

Madame Stoltz has definitively quitted the Parisian Académie Royale de Musique; and M. Pillet's secession as director is duly attempted; he is at law now with Carlotta Grisi, the danseuse. Berlioz, after a brilliant reception in St. Petersburgh, had left for Moscow. Ernst was giving concerts in the Russian capital.

Madame de Lozano, a vocalist of great abilities, has arrived in London for the season. She is a Spanish lady of high connexions, compelled, by adverse circumstances, to devote her musical talents to concert singing.

Mr. Oliphant requests us to correct an error in our list of subscriptions last week, to the Royal Society of Musicians, his name having been put down as a contributor of ten, instead of one guinea.

Willmers, the Danish pianist, who has created a sensation in Italy, Germany, and France, has arrived in London

IRELAND.

SERIOUS ILLNESS OF LORD BESBOROUGH.—We are sorry to state that the Dublin letters give melancholy accounts respecting the state of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. Up to a late hour on Monday night the reports of the progress of his Excellency's disorder were of the most alarming character, and great fears were entertained that the noble patient could not survive till morning. His Excellency's disease is aneurism, accompanied, it is said, with water on the chest. All through the night inquiries continued to be made at the Castle, and at four o'clock on Tuesday morning, it was said, that his Excellency was no worse than he had been for the two previous days. On Wednesday, however, the prospects of recovery further decreased, as will be seen by a copy of the bulletin issued at nine o'clock a.m.:—

"April 28, 1847.

"His Excellency continues in a very precarious state."

A little before three o'clock a fresh and equally unfavourable bulletin was issued. It was as follows:—

"His Excellency continues in a very precarious state up to half-past two o'clock."

ACCIDENT TO LADY ELIZABETH BUTLER.—On Tuesday morning (last week), Lady Elizabeth Butler rode out at eight o'clock, to arrange some matters relative to two poor persons. When on the way home from Killamory, her ladyship's horse stumbled violently in crossing the noble Lady heading on the road, where she lay in a state of insensibility amid the groups of the peasantry who ran to her assistance. Lord Walter Butler was soon on the spot, and her Ladyship was conveyed to Carrydoon Lodge pale and scarcely breathing. The fall has occasioned a severe concussion of the brain, but as her Ladyship spoke a few words on Wednesday, and showed some consciousness, it is hoped that she will be again restored to her afflicted family.

DEATH OF THE BISHOP OF CLONFERT. The Dublin papers mention the death of the Right Rev. Thomas Coen, Bishop of Clonfert, in the archiepiscopal province of Connaught.

REPORTED DEATH OF MISS MARTIN. A letter from Ballinalinch announces the death of Miss Martin, the daughter and heiress of the late representative for Galway county, in consequence of a severe fall from her horse. It was stated, on hearing of the death of her beloved parent, she swallowed poison, and instantly expired. The estate of Mr. Martin was, in regard to extent, a principality. It extended from the bridge of Galway to the straight line of sixty miles, by about thirty in breadth. The length of his avenue has often been the subject of dispute. From the gate house on the high road to his house is upwards of twenty-one miles in length. His tenantry number about 10,000 souls. Still, Mr. Martin was not a wealthy man.

THE PROGRESS OF FEVER.—Fever and dysentery continue to make fearful ravages among all classes. The last accounts from Sligo, Belfast, Fermanagh, Moy, and Charlemont, in the county of Armagh, speak of the rapid spread of the contagion in those localities, and the great want of a properly organized system of medical charities, which, if judiciously carried out, might have been the means of saving many of those who have fallen victims to the prevailing diseases. The number of deaths in the Cork workhouse for the week ending April 24, is stated to have been 84.

MORE OUTRAGES. The Irish papers contain accounts of two murders of a character nearly similar, though perpetrated in localities far apart from each other; the one in Meath, the other in the county of Cork. In the county of Meath, a man named Molloy was murdered by his own brother, aided by one or two others. The cause instigating to the crime was that the murdered man, the elder of the two, promised the younger a portion of a farm of land he occupied, upon the marriage of the latter; but, when that event took place, he refused to perform his promise: hence the younger man became enraged, slew his brother with a hatchet, and, in conjunction with an accomplice, carried the body in a sack a distance of fourteen miles, and flung it into the canal, where it was discovered after several days. The murderer and two persons charged as accomplices have been arrested. The other case, in Cork, the victim was a man named Sheehan, and the murderers his brother and his sister-in-law. The cause of the murder was that the victim had issued execution against his brother on foot of certain promissory notes of his for a sum of £50.—On the night of yesterday week, a barbarous murder was committed in the barony of Lower Ormond, North Tipperary. A respectable man, of the name of Liddell, who had been steward to Mr. Synge, was shot dead at his house in the village of Terryglass. This unfortunate man bore an excellent character, and as yet the cause of the deed has not transpired. The Tipperary Constitution says "A poor man, named Lonergan, was brutally murdered on Saturday night (last week) near his own door, at Killeagh, in the neighbourhood of Newcastle, by two men, who robbed him of a cwt. of meal, which he had purchased in this town"

DEATH OF LORD COWLEY.—We announce with regret the death of the Right Honourable Lord Cowley, Ambassador from England at Paris. His Lordship had been for some time ill, and the lamented event took place on Tuesday night, at his residence in the Place Vendome, Paris. The noble Lord was in his 75th year, having been born in 1773. His Lordship was a brother of the Duke of Wellington, whose junior he was by four years

OUR MAGAZINE COLUMN FOR MAY.

ON THE PORTRAIT OF THE QUEEN OF SPAIN. *

(From the New Monthly Belle Assemblée Magazine.)

BY THE SISTERS (CAMILLA TOULMIN).

The eyes of Nations watch thee, Crowned Child,
The lab'ring monarch, and now pleads his wife
A song to thee should be to measure wild
Broken by discords—emblems of thy life!
Yet no: I will believe that civil feuds
Henceforth shall calm them at thy will and speech
Our thou a pitying seraph fondly broods,
Instilling Truths which only Sorrows teach
That wisdom greater than the ardent schools
With all their aids to their disciples show,
And yet the knowledge that supremely rules
Life's tangled woof of mingled joy and woe!

Be brave, young Bourbon!—thou art all a Queen
Fear Him on High—but know no other dread,
Be firm in right as thou hast bravely been,
And fear shall bend, like reeds, beneath thy tread
For a shattered throne the golden, silvery lute
Of love and allegiance—empire's worst, Which sometimes wielded as by some fabled wizard,
Its magic withdrawn with its crime—is she woes
Oh, Isabella—be it thine to sheathe
The sword of strife; or, breaking it in twain,
Rid it be melted by the furnace breath
To gentle instruments for honest gain!

Not easy for the proud Hidalgo race,
With creeds belonging to a darker age
To feel the beauty of the kneeled a changing face,
And labour noble, on its history's page;
But as the realm used to dangers grim
Not all at once can meet the orb of day,
So must they sink by slow degrees
The power to track bright PROGRESS on her way

Teach them as from its womb Truth will be received
To seek example in our northern realm.
Free Institutions to up-raise—and find
They then must surely Justice at the helm.

The forceful contrast which thy heart-wrung words
Picture so darkly of thine early years
With those of Our Loved Queen, must wake in thy cheeks
Of sauregeons pity, till it break in tears
But Thou art young—and God on HEAVEN is good.
And earth is fair, and life itself most sweet,
And Regal Power once rightly understood
A privilege for noblest natures meet.
May'st thou be His own chosen instrument,
Made fit by suffering's purifying flame,
For many Spain a regeneration sent,
And Europe's Love to sanctify thy Name!

* For some allusions in these stanzas, see the Times and other newspapers during the last week. April 19, 1847.—C.T.

A DESOLATE HOUSE.

There were not two dragon sentries keeping ward before the gate of this abode, as in magic regard are usually found on duty over the wronged innocence imprisoned; but besides a glowering visage, with its thin lips parted wickedly, that surveyed all comers from above the archway of the door, there was a monstrous fantasy of rusty iron curling and twisting like a petrifaction of an arbour over the threshold, budding in spikes and corkscrew points, and bearing, one on either side, two ominous extinguishers, that seemed to say, "Who enter here, leave light behind!" There were no talismanic characters engraven on the portal, but the house was now so neglected in appearance, that boys chalked the railings and the pavement—particularly round the corner where the side wall was—drew ghosts on the stable door; and being sometimes driven off or by Mr. Towlinson, made portraits of him, in return, with his ears growing out horizontally from under his hat. Noise ceased to be, within the shadow of the roof. The brass band that came into the street once a week, in the season, never brayed a note in at those windows; but all such company, down to a poor little piping organ of weak intellect, with an imbecile party of automaton dancers, waiting at the end at folding doors, fell off from it with one accord, and shunned it as a hopeless place Dombey and Son.

A SUBURBAN VILLA.

Sir Barnet and Lady Skettles, very good people, resided in a pretty villa at Fulham, on the bank of the Thames, which was one of the most desirable residences in the world when a rowing-match happened to be going past, but had its little inconveniences at other times, among which may be enumerated the occasional appearances of the river in the drawing-room, and the consequences of disappearance of the lawn and shrubbery. Sir Barnet Skettles expressed his personal consequence chiefly through an antique gold snuff-box, and a ponderous silk pocket-handkerchief, which he had an imposing manner of drawing out of his pocket like a banner, and using with both hands at once. Sir Barnet's object in life was constantly to extend the range of his acquaintance. Like a heavy body dropped into water—not to disparage so worthy a gentleman by the comparison—it was in the nature of things that Sir Barnet must spread an ever-widening circle about him, until there was no room left. Or, like a sound in air, the vibration of which, according to the most ingenious modern philosopher, may go on travelling for ever through the interminable fields of space, nothing but coming to the end of his moral tether could stop Sir Barnet Skettles in his voyage of discovery through the social system.—Dombey and Son.

A LYRIC FROM THE BRITISH FISHERIES.

I stood at Brighton on the beach,
(At Brighton where they brought up Toots)
The shingle was beneath my feet,
And some of it was in my boots
Old boats were there stuck up on end,
Machines for bathing, too, were near,
The packet for Dieppe was scrubbing
Her sides against the famed Chain Pier.

I stood and thought I'd have a carriage—
For many on the Steyne were seen—
Drawn by those stately boats and horses,
And trot away to Rottingdeane!
When up there came a British seaman,
Very nearly on the chin,
Says he—"Your honour, go a fishing,
This here's the time to pull 'em in."

"Happy thought," thinks I. "I'll doit,
Catch no end of cods and crabs,
Eels and herrings, mullets and flounders—
Called by vulgar people, 'dabs'"
"You'll have sport, Sir—never fear, Sir,
No one never knowed it fail,
When the breeze hangs off, here, it'ocard,
Blow it—one might kitch a whale".

So we started. In the stern sheets
Of the tiny-built sail I sat;
It was called the "Royal Albert"—
Name of boat as well as hat.
Lots of prog was stowed on board,
Such prog as one can eat, sans dishes,
With periwinkles, à la hooks,
Adapted to the tastes of fishes.

So at least we deemed and flung
Overboard the tempting bait,
Threw a sedger into the ocean,
And for bites began to wait
Began to wait—a long beginning—
'Twixt the bottom and the top,
Not a fish would give its custom
To our perwinkle shop.

The ocean stirr'd, as in the fidgets,
And tossed and rolled our skiff so light;
We bobbed and baited, bobbed and baited,
Not a bite—no—not a bite!

The lazy swell kept rolling shorewards
The surf broke on the shingly cornfields.
We bobbed and baited, bobbed and baited,
Not a shadow of a bite!

The Brighton clocks they chimed eleven,
The pocket steamed with all its might,
We bobbed and baited, bobbed and baited,
Not a bite—no—not a bite;
The ocean still kept on its fidgets,
The Dieppe boat was out of sight,
Still we bobbed, and still we baited—
Not a bite—no—not a bite!

The Brighton clocks they all chimed seven,
The setting sun withdrew its light,
And still our kedge was on the ocean,
And still our hooks without a bite.
"Confound the fish," I shouted wildly,
"We must cut it for to night."
"Belay there," said the British seaman,
"Your honour's got a charming bite."

And so I had—I felt it tugging
In the ocean depths so dark;
Perhaps a whale, perhaps a wh-ting,
Perhaps a shrimp, perhaps a shark.
"Haul away sir!" said the sailor,
"And the fish stand by to nab"
I did so, 'twas a wriggling flounder,
By the vulgar called a "dab."

Sullenly I said, "Row shoreward."
Sullen looked upon that shore,
Smilingly my British seaman
Said, "Your honour, one pun' four."
One pound, sterling; four bob, ditto!
"As certainly as A B's ab"
I murmured, looking at my flounder,
"You're a most expensive dab!"

Then turning to my friend the sailor,
On the shingle-covered beach,
Hitching up his tarry trowsers,
I spoke this wisdom-laden speech:
"Fools are they who on the ocean
Go to fish for whales or yearn;
Wise are they, on terra firma,
Who go out to fish for fish!"

—The Man in the Moon.

A NICE WIFE.

The fact is, I never was fond of needlework at the best of times, and really and truly, I never could see the fun of passing the heyday of one's youth darning stockings, and cobbling up a pack of old clothes as full of holes as a sieve or a sieve shovel. So I longed to Lave an instrument just to amuse myself with for an hour or two in the day, or play over an air or two to Edward of an evening. And it wasn't as if I hadn't got any music-books, besides, I really and truly was sick and tired of doing kettle-holders and working a pack of filthy copper kettles in Berlin wool with a stupid "Mind it bolls" underneath them, or else working a lot of braces and slippers for Edward, which, in his nasty vulgar way, he said were too fine by half for use, or else sitting for hours with your toe cocked up in the air netting purses and spending a mint of money in steel beads for a pack of people that you didn't care twopence about, and who never gave you so much as a trumpery ring or brooch in return (I hate such meanness).—The Greatest Plague of Life.

A MISTAKE.

I declare it really wasn't prudent to trust dear Emma to do a thing, and even that little lamb of a Kitty of mine was scarcely safe with a stupid, like her, in the house. For I recollect once, I had been thinking the simpleton had a great deal of sense in her hands, and might just as well do a little more than sit and sit twiddling her finger and thumb of an evening. So I told her that my little poppet of a Kitty was growing so fat that all her things were getting too short for her, and she really wanted a tuck out in her best frock, and would certainly look ill the better for it, so I would thank her to attend to it that night, and let it be done before she went to bed. In the evening, I was in the parlour, boiling down some quarts of pips to make a nice flxature for my hair, and all the while I could hear that sweet little cherub of mine down stairs crying as if I said to myself what the dickens can that idiot be doing with the child in the kitchen at this time of night, when it ought to have been undressed and in bed a good hour ago? Off I trotted to see what precious bit of naughty my Kit was at now. And when I reached the kitchen I thought I should have fainted, for there sat that Emma, with my little angel on her knee, dressed out in its best frock, and with its dear Little innocent face daubed all over with treacle, just as if it had been tarred. "What on earth have you been doing with the child, Emma?" I exclaimed, "I thought as you said it was to have a tuck out in its best frock, ma'am," she replied, "it could have nothing nicer than plenty of bread and treacle." And then to my horror I learnt from her, that when I told her I fancied the child would look ill the better for having a tuck out in its best best frock, bless and save us, if the stupid oaf didn't imagine that I wished it to have a grand feast in its Sunday clothes.—The Greatest Plague of Life.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED

THE DUKE OF ARGYLL.

JOHN DOUGLAS EDWARD HENRY CAMPBELL, DUKE OF ARGYLL, was born in 1777. In early life he entered the army, and served under the Duke of York and Sir Ralph Abercrombie, in Holland. He afterwards represented the county of Argyll for more than twenty years, as Baron Sundridge. He retired from Parliament about the year 1821, and chiefly resided at Ardencapel Castle, his seat in Dumbartonshire, till his accession to the title, on the death of his brother, the sixth Duke, in 1839.

His other titles were, Marquis of Lorn and Kintyre, Earl of Campbell and Cowal, Viscount Lochow and Glenilla, Lord of Inverary, Mull, Morvern, and Tiry, in the Peerage of Scotland; Baron Sundridge, of Coombank, county Kent, and Lord Hamilton, in the Peerage of England.

His offices were, Hereditary Master of the Queen's Household, and Keeper of the Great Seal of Scotland, Admiral of the Western Isles, Keeper of Dunoon Castle, and of Dunstaffnage and Carrick, one of her Majesty's State Councillors for Scotland, and Lord-Lieutenant and Hereditary Sheriff of the county of Argyll. He was a Fellow of the Royal Societies of London and Edinburgh, and Knight of the Thistle.

He married first, Elizabeth, eldest daughter of William Campbell, Esq., of Fairfield, but had no issue by that lady, who died in the year 1818. The Duke married secondly, 17th April, 1820, Joan, only daughter of John Glassel, Esq., by whom (who died in 1828) he had two sons and a daughter.

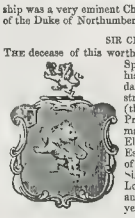
His Grace is succeeded in his estates and honours by his only surviving son, George, Marquis of Lorn, who married, in 1839, the eldest daughter of the Duke of Sutherland. The Duke died on the 26th ult., at Inverary Castle.

LORD ROKEBY.

EDWARD MONTAGUE, fifth Lord Rokeby, who died on the 7th instant, was eldest son of Matthew Montague, Esq., who succeeded to the Barony at the decease of his brother, Morris, third Lord. At the period of his decease he had completed his 59th year. He was never married, and is, consequently, succeeded in the title by his brother, the Hon. Col. Henry Montague. The first Peer of the family was the most Rev. Richard Robinson, Archbishop of Armagh, and Primate of all Ireland, created Baron Rokeby in 1777. His Lordship was a very eminent Churchman, and held, under the Lieutenancy of the Duke of Northumberland, the dignified office of Lord Almoner.

SIR CHARLES PRICE, BART.

THE decease of this worthy Baronet took place on the 26th ult., at Spring Grove, Richmond, Surrey. He was in his 71st year. By Mary Ann, his wife, daughter of William King, Esq., of Kingstreet, Covent-garden, he leaves three sons (the eldest the present Sir Charles Rugge Price, Bart.), and four daughters—viz., Mary, married to William Pott, Esq.; Harriet; Eliza-Albinia, married to Ralph Charles Price, Esq., of Sydenham; and Emily Harriet, wife of Henry Curry, Esq. His father was the late Sir Charles Price, Alderman of and M.P. for London, who filled the Civic chair in 1803, and was created a Baronet in the following year.



DR. SHIRLEY, BISHOP OF SODOR AND MAN.

THE Right Reverend Walter Augustus Shirley, D.D., Bishop of Sodor and Man, was the son of the Rev. Walter Shirley, Rector of Woodford, Northamptonshire, and was born at Westport, in the county of Mayo, on the 30th May, 1797. He was educated at Winchester College, and at New College, Oxford. He was a scholar of New College in 1821 he gained the Bachelor's Prize, for an essay "On the Study of Moral Evidence," a work which displayed vast theological knowledge and great powers of argument. Mr. Shirley was ordained in 1821, and, after being Master of the Schools, at Oxford, in 1826, he, in 1828, succeeded his father in the Rectory of Woodford, on the nomination of his cousin, Earl Ferrers. In 1841 he was appointed a Prebendary of Lichfield Cathedral, and Archdeacon of Derby. On the 17th December, 1846, he received his degree of Doctor of Divinity from the University of Oxford; on the 10th January, 1847, he was consecrated Bishop of Sodor and Man; and now his demise has occurred within little more than three months from the time of his elevation to the episcopal dignity. Dr. Shirley belonged to what is termed the "Evangelical Party" in the Established Church, but he held no extreme views either with respect to doctrine or discipline. His modest retiring demeanour, and his extremely amiable disposition, endeared him to all who knew him, and his untimely loss is most generally deplored.

SIR DAVIDGE GOULD, G.C.B.

SIR DAVIDGE GOULD, G.C.B., Senior Admiral of the Red, was the son of Richard Gould, Esq., of Wells, Somersetshire, and nephew of Sir Henry Gould, a Justice of the Common Pleas. He was born in 1758, and entered the Navy early in life. His career has been a glorious one, The name of Davidge Gould is connected with the memorable actions of Lord Rodney and Lord Hotham, and with the Battle of the 1st of June. The Grand Cross of the Bath, the Medal of the Nile, and a good-service pension of £300 per annum, marked publicly the estimation of his worth. Sir Davidge Gould rose to the rank of Admiral of the Red in 1825. He was also Vice-Admiral of the United Kingdom.

This gallant and venerable officer died on the 23rd instant, at his seat Hawkshead, Hertfordshire, in the 90th year of his age.

Sir Davidge married, in 1803, Harriet, eldest daughter of the late Rev. William Willes, Archdeacon of Wells, by whom, who survives him, he leaves no issue.

MOHAMMED AKBAR KHAN.

This restless Eastern warrior, the inveterate opponent of the English in India, was the favourite son of the Affghanistan Sultan, Dost Mohammed Khan, whom the British Government deposed from the throne of Cabul, placing the Shah Shuja-ul-Mulk in his room. Akbar Khan fiercely avenged his father's wrongs. A dreadful revolt took place at Cabul on the 2nd November, 1841, and many English were slain in the town, among them the ill-fated Alexander Burnes. Akbar Khan immediately joined the insurgents; and, on the 25th of the same November, he shot Sir William M'Naghten in open council, met to deliberate on the evacuation of Cabul. On the 25th Dec., 1841, pursuant to a convention made between Akbar and Major Pottinger, the English, to the amount of 4000 men, quitted their camp near Cabul; they were, nevertheless, in breach of all faith, attacked in a defile by the Affghans, and a horrible massacre ensued. These deeds of Akbar, the war that ensued, the restoration of his father Dost Mohammed, the murder of the miserable Prince Shah Shuja, are events of too recent occurrence, and too generally known, to need repetition here.

Since the settlement of affairs in Affghanistan, Akbar remained on a kind of half terms with the English, who, though friendly with his father, knew not well how to act towards the son. His death relieves our Indian Government from its embarrassment. At the time it occurred, Akbar Khan was his father's Wuzeer, and was engaged in carrying on a bitter warfare against the Ghilzies: he had just attacked the village of the Marna Kail tribe, with unmerciful slaughter, sparing neither age nor sex. Delirium tremens, brought on by excessive drinking, terminated this monster's career of treachery and brutality.

The news of his demise reached Lahore at the end of last January, and in him may well be said to have perished the most fearful foe the Anglo-Indian Government has encountered since Tippoo Saib.

THOMAS BARNEWALL MARTIN, ESQ., M.P., OF BALLINAHINCH, COUNTY GALWAY

This gentleman fell a victim to an attack of fever, caught in the discharge of his duties as one of the Poor Law Guardians, on Friday, the 23rd April. By his death, a vacancy occurs in the representation of the county of Galway. Mr. Martin was son of the late eccentric Richard Martin, Esq., who has given his name to the Act for the prevention of cruelty to animals. His possessions in Connaught may, from their extent, be called a territory, but their value is by no means commensurate with their extent. They descend to the honourable gentleman's only daughter and heiress, Miss Martin, of Ballinahinch.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

THE LIABILITY OF RAILWAY ALLOTTEES.—The celebrated case of Woolmer v. Toby was again argued in the Court of QUEEN'S BENCH on Monday. The case, as will be recollected, was originally tried at the Exeter assizes, in 1846. It was an action to recover from an allottee the sum of £21 12s. 6d per share, on 40 shares of the Direct Exeter, Plymouth, and Devonport Railway, and the Jury returned a verdict for the plaintiffs to the full amount, £105 In the course of last term, Mr. Sergeant Kinglake obtained a rule to show cause why the verdict should not be entered for the defendant upon the chief pleas; why there should not be a new trial on the ground of misdirection; why the verdict should not be reduced to £6; or why there should not be an arrest of judgment. Mr. Crowder and Mr. Greenwood on Monday appeared to oppose the rule; Mr. Sergeant Kinglake and Mr. Smith in support of it.—Mr. Justice Erle read the notes of the learned Judge who presided at the trial. The counsel on both sides argued the case at considerable length, and the Court took time to consider the judgment.

WARLEY, M.P., v. COOK AND ANOTHER.—This was an action for a libel brought by the member for Finsbury against the defendants as proprietors of the Medical Times, which contained the publication complained of. The case was tried during the sittings after last term, before the Chief Baron, and the plaintiff had a verdict for £5 for damages. Mr. Cockburn, on Monday, moved, in the Court of EXCHEQUER, for a new trial on the ground of misdirection; and the Lord Chief Baron granted the application.

TRAMWAY AND ROAD CRAGE.—MORLEY v. ALSTON.—The Lord Chancellor gave judgment in this case, in the COURT OF CHANCERY, on Wednesday. We last week noticed the arguments before the Vice Chancellor. His Lordship decided that the owners of tramways must be allowed. The judgment of the Vice-Chancellor of England overruled, and the injunctions which had been granted dissolved.

CRIMINAL INFORMATION.—In the BAIL COURT, on Thursday, Sir F. Thesiger said he was instructed by Mr. Mantz, M.P., to apply for a rule calling upon the proprietor, printer, and publisher of the Railway Times, to show cause why a criminal information should not be filed against them, for publishing several libellous articles in that journal of the dates of November 28, September 5, December 5th, and the 17th of the present month. The articles complained of in general terms, charged Mr. Muntz, as Chairman of the Birmingham and Leicester Railway, with lending his assistance to forward the views of a bubble and swindling company; and they advised Mr. Spooner, M.P., who, as they said, always appeared anxious to maintain a spotless character, to look well after the acts and doings of his colleague (Mr. Muntz), and certain other officials connected with the Birmingham and Leicester Railway. The different articles complained of, some of which are rather long, characterised the whole affair as a bubble company, and imputed improper motives to those concerned in the management.—Mr. Justice Coleridge: Take a rule to show cause.—Rule nisi granted.

THE QUEEN v. MUNTZ, M.P., AND OTHERS.—Mr. Cockburn moved, in the same court, for a rule calling upon Henry Muntz, Esq., M.P., and eleven other Directors of the Birmingham and Oxford Junction Railway Company, to show cause why a mandamus should not issue, commanding them to elect by ballot four persons to fill the office of Directors of the Company, to call a meeting of the proprietors for that purpose, and then and there elect four gentlemen to supply the places of four others who were now in the direction. The learned counsel said this case had lately occupied much of the time and attention of the two branches of the Court of Chancery, and the result of it was that, by the decision of the Lord Chancellor, the parties for whom he appeared were obliged to come to a court of law to ask for relief. The question in dispute arose out of the construction of two acts of Parliament, the 9th William IV. and 8th Victoria. The learned counsel then read the provisions of the statutes, and contended that the defendants not having acted under them, a rule for a mandamus ought to issue. Mr. Justice Coleridge: Take a rule to show cause.—Rule nisi granted.

POLICE.

THE COUNTESS OF MORNINGTON A PAUPER.

A lady, accompanied by a gentleman, understood to be her legal adviser, made an application at MARLBOROUGH-STREET, on Wednesday, to Mr. Bingham, of a painful nature. The gentleman said:—

"Sir, I have to solicit your advice in a case of a very painful nature. It is a case in which I do not know whether it is in the province of this Court to give assistance; and this increases, if possible, the painfulness of this public application. This lady is the Countess of Mornington, she has been separated from her husband, the present Earl of Mornington, for about fourteen years. At the time of the separation, the Earl of Mornington settled on this lady £1000, to be paid out of his estates. The arrears, which have accumulated for thirteen or fourteen years, amount to £14,000; or, if Lady Mornington is entitled to charge interest, to £17,500. About six or seven months ago, Lady Mornington came to England, to see about her Chancery suit. She resided at Hatchett's Hotel. The proprietor, seeing no prospect of payment, gave her Ladyship notice to leave the hotel on Saturday. Lady Mornington, therefore, at this moment, is really in a state of complete destitution—she has not a farthing in the world. Lord Mornington's agents have been applied to, but they all refuse to interfere in any matter in which Lord Mornington is concerned; and state that, in everything connected with Lord Mornington, the law must take its course. My application to you, Sir, is to know if you, by any summons, can bring Lord Mornington, who is now at Mivart's Hotel, before you, to show cause why he does not properly maintain his wife? I hope your worship will give this lady your advice."

Mr. Bingham: I see no difficulty in the case whatever; the course to take appears to me perfectly plain. This lady complains that her husband does not allow her support. I understand she lives at Hatchett's Hotel, which is in the parish of St. George, Hanover-square. She is at present without the means of support, and she therefore comes within the description of a casual pauper. The lawful course is for her to apply to the parish authorities to be relieved. The husband is bound to supply means of subsistence to his wife, and a parish has power to compel him to support her

The gentleman, on behalf of Lady Mornington, thanked the Magistrate for his advice, and withdrew.

On Thursday, the Countess of Mornington came to the office, to make the usual declaration on oath of her being in such a state of destitution as to require parish relief. Her Ladyship had, it appeared, applied for relief as casual poor to the parish; and, having been relieved, her deposition was taken, according to the statutory form. The deposition was to the effect that she, Helena, Countess of Mornington, had been lawfully married, in 1826, in Hertfordshire, to the present Earl of Mornington; that she had recently applied for assistance to her husband; that she had been refused any kind of support; and that she was at present entirely destitue of any means of ordinary subsistence. Her Ladyship, who trembled violently, and who appeared to feel acutely her peculiar situation, was then sworn to the truth of her statement.—A warrant was at first in contemplation, but on consideration Mr. Bingham decided to issue his summons in the first instance.

THE FORGED SCRIP.—West and Farmery, who have been charged with uttering forged scrip, were brought up at the MANSION-HOUSE, on Monday, for further examination Mr Clarkson attended for the prosecution, and Mr. Ballantine and Mr. Miller for the prisoners. Additional evidence was adduced to prove the identity of West with Perry, the writer of several letters instructing brokers to sell forged shares.—Mr. Clarkson then brought forward a new case against West. It was that he had uttered 100 forged shares of the Lyndon and South-Western Railway Company, to Messrs. Berkeley and Co., stock-brokers. Evidence similar to that adduced in the other case was called, and distinctly showed that West had uttered the forged scrip, and obtained the market price of the real scrip for them.—The Lord Mayor refused to take bail

THE GOODS STOLEN FROM THE CAMDEN TOWN STATION.—On Tuesday, the individuals charged with having been concerned in a robbery of £700 worth of goods, at the Camden Station of the London and North-Western Railway, the property of Messrs. Crowley and Co., the well-known carriers, were re-examined at MARYLEBONE. We have already published the circumstances connected with the robbery. Mr. Phillips, the clerk, read over the mass of evidence which had been given; two of the parties were liberated, and Page, whose statement implicated most of the accused, with whom he was living in the same house himself, will be properly secured, so that he may be forthcoming at the sessions. Eight of the prisoners were committed for trial.

MURDER OF A CHILD AND SUICIDE OF THE MOTHER. -A very painful act of murder and suicide occurred at Woolwich on Tuesday afternoon. The Salsette, which has returned off the dockyard, is used as a receiving ship for the seamen (and their wives in some cases) who are attached to steamers and other vessels undergoing repair in the dockyard. On the return of the Bloodhound steamvessel, Lieutenant Phillips, from the Mediterranean station a few days since, the vessel was taken into the basin and the crew drafted on board the Salsette, amongst whom was the captain's cook, a man named Robinson, and his wife, who had an infant about fifteen months old. Some domestic differences of a very painful nature occurred between this man and his wife since his arrival at Woolwich, and on Tuesday afternoon, between one and two o'clock, when in a fit of excitement, she jumped overboard from the Salsette with her infant in her arms. An intrepid seaman on board the bulk immediately sprang in after her, and made a clutch at her dress, but, it is said, as she was in the act of sinking This heroic action, however, was unfortunately of no avail, and both mother and child sank beneath the water. Neither of the bodies has yet been recovered.

MAY.

Mother of Hermes! Goddess-month of mirth,
Of love, and hope! we welcome thee, sweet May!
The floral sylphs kept vigil at thy birth,
And hymn'd thy praises on thy natal day.
As Venus rising from hoar Ocean's spray,
To bless the world, e'en so thy beauties rise,
Blooming and bright from April's tearful sway,
Gladd'ning the earth, and 'lumining the skies.
Cold is the heart, sweet Month! which cannot thrill
With redolence of hope, and pleasures fled,
When thou com'st smiling o'er the orient hill,
Crown'd by the Loves, and by the Graces led.
Ah! well, indeed, may bloom the grove and dale,
To greet thee and thy minstrel-nightingale.

He harbinges thy coming, and the flowers
Open their breasts to drink his nectar song.
Mute are the meaner birds of Beauty's bowers,
While he, the glory of the feathered throng,
Pours out his soul of melody. Oh! sweet
To hear his love-notes in the morning fair,
Or dewy eve, when whisp'ring lovers meet,
In rural lanes, perfumed by white-thorn rare.
Queen of the flowers, we greet thy presence well.
Hope, lark-like, springs aloft and hails thee here.
Though clouds may lour, thy sunny smiles repel
Their enmity, and bid the world good cheer.
Oh! may thy blessings prove without alloy,
Sweet May! fair month of Nature's teeming joy. L.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR MAY.

It was not at Longchamps that the newest fashions might be sought this year; for, on that occasion, there was nothing to be seen but the pouring rain and a few closed carriages; we must, therefore, refer to the réunions and promenades which followed, both in Paris and London; and to the great magasins de modes, where those novelties are preparing which are to burst into being (under the directions of our élégantes) with the butterflies, as soon as the present cloudy atmosphere assumes a more genial aspect.

In consequence of the gloomy state of the weather, everything in the shape of spring costume has been behindhand this year, at Paris no less than in London; yet, the milliners have been busy enough to enable us to satisfy the curiosity of our fair readers in regard to the most important particulars. Straw bonnets will still maintain their strong position as the most useful and elegant style of morning bonnet. The variety even of these, however, is endless. All the great houses—such as Beaudrout, Barenne, Lauré, Maurice Beauvais, Ode, &c.—have each their particular bonnet: one is made of straw mixed with whalebone; another is of a shape more or less open; another has a particular mode of trimming; some have flowers, others feathers; but the highest authorities in these matters assert that the straw bonnet cannot be too simple; and that a small quantity of ribbon or a single flower well placed is generally acknowledged to be the most comme il faut style of trimming. The prettiest ribbons for this purpose are those brocaded with flowers called Pompadour. Blue-bells, coquelicots, and ears of corn are much used, as are also mixtures of fruits, currants, grapes, nuts, chesnuts. Natier has even employed peaches, but we should be much inclined to doubt the good taste of the latter ornament.

For a more habillé bonnet, tulle, gauze, and paille de riz, are the only materials that can be used at present. Some of the modistes make them of a larger shape, and more coquet; but the generality still continue in the convenient juste milieu, and each lady is at liberty to choose the form that suits her best, and yet to follow the fashion. Feathers are much used in trimming these bonnets, but they must be of a very light description; ostrich feathers are often mixed with marabouts, and tipped with the most delicate shades. Pink, lilac, white, Nemours blue, and maize, are the favourite colours; but some of our most distinguished élégantes have adopted such colours as the vert d'Italy, nut, Caesar, Candle, Chinchilla, and straw colour. Nankin, which is merely a deep maize, is also worn at Paris; but it is, of course, only suitable to very decided brunettes.

Morning Caps are made in embroidered muslin, trimmed with ribbon, and in a most coquettish and becoming shape. Many of the most elegant are trimmed with ribbons of different kinds and different shades.

For Evening Head-dresses, blond, handsome ribbons, gold ornaments, and small feathers, are the most in requisition. A very favourite style is the coiffure Grecque, made in black lace, trimmed with large pink roses, without leaves. Others are made in white blonde, forming in a point on the forehead, with drooping branches on each side. In general, all the coiffures are made so as to adorn the face, and are only trimmed at the side. The young ladies' flowers still maintain their vogue. Wreaths of all shapes are worn.

Morning Dresses are still made in glacé silk, en redingotte, and quite high. For walking dresses, striped Pekins, Royales pointilles, roseaux silks, striped Pontaynes, are most worn; but, whatever be the material, undecided colours, such as slate, nut colour, dust colour, are much worn; Nemours blue, pink, and black, are also employed: flowers are universally worn.

For dinner dresses, the richest materials are used; such as damasks, velouté, the Mexicaines Pompadour, Moires antiques, with large bouquets, Lampas, &c.; and always with a mixture of two colours, such as a gold colour, or blue Napoléon, China pink, or chesnut, or dark lilac, on a white ground. These dresses are made in a point, and trimmed à la antique; they may either be open in front over a satin under-skirt, or closed. The body and sleeves may be trimmed with lace or blonde, with bows of ribbon to match.

Ball dresses are made in crêpe, tulle, or tartatan, with several skirts; each of the skirts being looped up with flowers, either in bouquets or wreaths; the bodies pointed, the sleeves very small, and folds, which have now completely supplanted the lace berthes.

The approaching fêtes at the Palace, and in the higher circles, will give us abundant matter for our next bulletin of Fashion, when we shall also be able to speak more at length of the numerous light and graceful tissues in readiness for the advancing warm season.

In the Illustration, the bonnet is round, somewhat wider in the crown than last year, and yet setting close to the cheeks: the material is a magnificent paille d'Italie, trimmed with the same, instead of ribbon, set far back, and bearing two pure white ostrich feathers. A bonnet of paille de riz, trimmed with blond colour straw, and having on one side a feather of a deeper yellow, twisted towards the crown, is also worn. We have seen, also, two capotes, called Reine Margot, wide towards the temples, but, as it were, hermetically inclosing the cheeks: one of them was white, trimmed with wreaths of blue and white marguerites; and the other with China and marguerite roses.

The Mantelets and Cachemires most in request, are the Isly green, Turkish yellow, Syrian blue, American red, Nankin shade. Chinese black, and amaranth. Mantelets of clear and blended colours, are in high favour.

HEADS OF THE MONTHS.—DRAWN BY KENNY MEADOWS.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR MAY

Railway Speed.—A special train, consisting of five carriages, was taken from London to Birmingham on Wednesday morning in two hours and 30 minutes. The actual time of travelling did not exceed two hours, being an average speed of 56 miles per hour, the train being stopped four times on the journey to allow other trains to be clear of the line, besides stopping at Wolverton to change engines. The engine which started from London (No. 157) is one of Mr. Stephenson's ordinary patent engines, and the latter part of its journey, 21 miles, was performed in 21 minutes The maximum speed over upwards of a mile was 75 miles per hour. The engine from Wolverton to Birmingham was also a patent engine of Mr. Stephenson's, having three cylinders, and it performed the first part of the journey, 41 miles (until it was stopped by another train), in 42 minutes; maximum speed on this portion of the journey 64 miles per hour. Lord George Bentinck, and several gentlemen going to the Chester races, were in the train. A side-wind was blowing throughout the journey. Mr. M'Connell (the Locomotive Superintendent of the London and North-Western Railway Company) and Mr. Winter (the Superintendent of Mr. Stephenson's Patent Engines) were on the engine, and describe the motion at the highest velocity as being perfectly steady.

The Chinese Junk "Keying."—This vessel, commanded by Shing-Shing, now on her passage from Hong Kong to this country, is daily expected to arrive at Woolwich. She is the bearer of most valuable presents from the Emperor to her Majesty and Prince Albert. This will be the first Chinese vessel ever brought to England. She is solely manned by Chinese sailors. It is understood that a troop of celebrated jugglers are on board, and have been engaged to perform in this country.

The Kentish Railway Lines.—One of the most important struggles of the session, viz, that between the Brighton and South Eastern Companies, was, on Tuesday, so far as the Committee of the House of Commons is concerned, decided in favour of the latter company, the preambles of the South-Eastern Company's Bills, with trifling exceptions, having been declared proved, while those of the Brighton were rejected.

M A Y F A S H I O N S.

THE IRENE MANTELET.

The great features of the season seem to be novelties in Mantelets: of these we are enabled to give three varieties. The first, styled the Irène, is of pale blue satin, and trimmed with broad borders of rich

THE LOUISA TERNANDE MANTELET

black lace. No. 2, named the Louisa Ternande—also of satin, and of a light green tint—is almost entirely covered with volants of Chantilly lace, which give it a very magnificent appearance. No. 3—copied at the establishment of Madame Frederick, in Albemarle-street—is of green colour silk, trimmed with volants of black lace, and is distinguished for its elegant simplicity.

MANTELET.

STRAW COLOUR GAUZE BONNET.

The Bonnet belonging to the same figure, and copied at the same establishment, is of a pale coloured gauze, encircled with blonde of a precisely similar tint, which also hangs in graceful falls over the crown; a wreath of flowers tastefully disposed on the right side completes the outside trimming. The Bonnet underneath, which we have engraved on a larger scale, is from the establishment of Vouillon and Lauré in EVENING DRESS—PALE PINK SATIN.

MORNING DRESS—LAVENDER SILK.

Hanover-street, Regent-street. It is of pale straw-colour gauze, with a trimming of broad black lace carried over the crown, and round the left side, in a very bold style; from this two large pink roses admirably relieve themselves. The strings are also of pink.

EVENING CAP.

Our three next Illustrations, likewise from Vouillon and Lauré's, are, first—a Morning Dress, of pale lavender silk, with stripes of dove and EVENING DRESS—BLUE GLACE SATIN.

green colour, the two inside stripes being green; and next, an Evening Dress, of the palest possible pink satin, with a cross-bar pattern running over it rather darker in colour: the trimmings are of gauze, the same tint as the ground of the dress, and ribbon corresponding in colour

CHILDREN'S DRESSES.

NEW RIDING HABIT.

with the stripes. Round the narrow cape of the dress, and round each sleeve, are two rows of pink fringe. The Evening Cap is of rich lace, trimmed on the left side with a green rosette, formed from the feather parts of quills, and a wreath of green and brown vine leaves: the strings are, of course, green.

PARASOLS, NOS. 1 AND 2

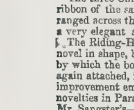
Our next Illustration is an Evening Dress, copied at Madame Frederick's. It is of blue glacé satin, trimmed with deep flounces of elegant Brussels lace. With the exception of a cape, of the same material, the body is quite plain. In the skirt, the edges of the satin are worked into small scollops, the two upper rows of which hang over the lace flounces.

The three Children's Dresses are of light-coloured silks, trimmed with ribbon of the same colour, and narrow rows of lace, which, when arranged across the skirt in the style represented in the first figure, has a very elegant appearance.

The Riding-Habit we give a representation of is not only elegant and novel in shape, but possesses this advantage, viz., that the contrivance by which the body and skirt can be separated one from the other, and again attached, is a great improvement over the old methods. This improvement emanates from Mr. Ford, of Holles-street. Among the novelties in Parasol's the most striking is the Indian, an invention of Mr. Sangster's—a return to the simple and elegant in shape, and which, by means of a circular band of India-rubber attached inside the Parasol, at the upper part, causes it to keep closed without the assistance of the external ring. It is represented in the Engraving, marked No. 2 No. 1 was copied at the establishment of Messrs. Morland and Son, Eastcheap.



NEW OPERA CAP.

Our last Illustration is a new style of Opera Cap, the front of which is formed of crimson velvet, the back part being of rich gold lace.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—Very limited supplies of English wheat have come to hand this week; and as the demand for all kinds was quite To-day the quantity on offer was also, while the demand for all kinds was very steady, at fully previous quotations. The show of foreign wheat was trifling, owing to which the holders were firm, and fully realised in obtaining full prices in every instance. The arrivals of barley, oats, beans, and peas, and the sales of other descriptions of grain, were still supported. Malt was in moderate request, at unaltered currencies. The oat trade was very steady, and, in some instances, 6d per quarter more money was obtained for the best. Beans and peas had an upward tendency. The flour trade was very brisk.

ARRIVALS.—English: Wheat, 1962; barley, 260; malt, 2340; oats, 180. Irish: Wheat, —; barley, —; malt, —; oats, 1050. Foreign: Wheat, 1865; barley, 970; malt, —; oats, 3000; beans, —; barrels

English: Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 75s to 85s; ditto white, 87s to 95s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 77s to 81s; ditto white, 82s to 85s; rye, 54s to 56s; grinding barley, 42s to 42s; distilling, 43s to 51s; malting ditto, 52s to 56s; Lincoln and Norfolk oats, 27s to 29s; Yorkshire ditto, 27s to 28s; Kingston and Ware, 75s to 76s; Chevalier, 75s to 78s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 20s to 24s; potato ditto, 24s to 26s; Tenghal and Cork, 24s to 25s; ditto white, —s to —s; tick beans, new, 42s to 46s; ditto old, —s to —s; grey peas, 54s to 57s; maple, 52s to 56s; white, 54s to 56s; boilers, 56s to 60s, per quarter. New grinds flour, 52s to 54s. Suffolk, 52s to 56s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 50s to 55s per 280lbs. Foreign: Dantzig red wheat, —s to —s; white, 70s to 80s, barley, 40s to 44s; oats, 22s to 23s; beans, 44s to 46s; peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 40s to 42s per 196lbs; Baltic —s to —s per barrel

The Seed Market.—For all kinds of seeds we have to report a very slow sale, and last week's prices are with difficulty supported.—

Linseed: English, sowing, 56s to 58s; Baltic, crushing, 49s to 50s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 47s to 50s. Hempseed, 32s to 36s per quarter. Coriander, 18s to 21s per cwt. Brown Mustard seed, 8s to 10s; white ditto, 8s to 10s. Tares, 6d to 7s 6d per bushel. Rapeseed: English Essex and Kent, £29 to £29 10s per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes: English, £13 to £13 10s; ditto foreign, £9 to £10 10s per ton. Rapeseed cake, £7 to £7 10s per ton. Canary, 50s to 60s per quarter. English Clover-seed, red, —s to —s; ditto white, —s to —s; extra, 70s to —. Foreign ditto: red, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; extra, —s per cwt.

Provisions.—Irish butter has ruled very dull and prices have given way from 10s to 20s per cwt. Foreign and Colonial qualities have also declined in value, and the sales have been limited. Bacon has moved off slowly, at barely previous currencies. Hams are a dull sale, at rather lower prices. Lard has been in limited request, at 2s per cwt less money.

Irish butter, new, 76s to 78s; ditto, old, 70s to 74s; Carlow, 76s to 78s; Cork, 76s to 78s; Limerick, 76s to 78s; Waterford, 76s to 78s; Dublin, 76s to 78s; Sligo, 76s to 78s; Belfast, 76s to 78s; Foreign and Colonial, 60s to 70s per cwt. Bacon, new, 52s to 54s; ditto, old, 50s to 52s; Waterford, 52s to 54s; Limerick, 52s to 54s; Cork, 52s to 54s; Hams, 60s to 70s; Lard, 40s to 42s per cwt.

The Tea Market.—Wheat, 72d; barley, 50s 3d; oats, 31s 6d; rye, 55s 3d; beans, 52s 11d; peas 53s 3d

TEA.—On the whole there is a better more business doing in this market, and prices are fully supported in every instance.

Sugar.—All kinds of raw sugar—owing to the large quantities pressing for sale—have met a very slow inquiry at a reduction in value of from 6d to 1s per cwt. Refined goods are, also, cheaper.

Rice.—Most qualities are held at extreme currencies, but the actual business doing is by no means large. White Bengal is quoted at 21s 6d per cwt.

Provisions.—There is a steady business doing in Irish butter, and, in some instances, the quotations have somewhat improved. Carlow, now, is selling at 78s to 80s; Sligo, 80s to 82s; Cork, 80s to 90s; and Waterford, 80s to 81s per cwt. Foreign butter is in good supply and ready demand, at very full prices. Prime Friesland may be quoted at 100s to 102s, and Kiel, 96 to 102s per cwt. Prime parcels of bacon are producing 4s to 5s per cwt more money.—Waterford being held at 78s to 79s per cwt. Bale and tierce middles are firm, at a trifle more money. The best Dorset butter is in fair request, at 84s per firkin, and fresh, 14s per dozen lbs. Hams are a slow sale, at 74s to 84s per cwt. Bladdered lard, 70s to 84s; and Kegs, 64s to 74s per cwt. All other kinds of provisions, especially American Cheese, support late rates.

Hops, Friday.—There is a slight improvement in the demand for nearly all kinds of hops, especially for the best qualities of last year's growth, and last week's p ices are steadily supported in every instance. The present rates are as under.—

Sussex pockets 43 18s to £4 8s; Weald of Kent ditto, £4 4s to £4 16s; Mid and East Kent ditto, £4 10s to £5 10s per cwt.

Farnham fine [illegible] Alder, Aylesford, Suffolk, and Worcester ditto, £5 5s to £6 6s; Farnham and Surrey ditto, £6 6s to £7 7s; Bavarian, £3 10s to £4 4s; Saxon, £3 10s to £4 4s; Belgian, £3 10s to £4 4s; Mid and East Kent bags, £3 10s to £4 4s; Weald of Kent ditto, £3 10s to £4 4s; Sussex ditto, £3 10s to £4 4s per cwt.

Potatoes.—Owing to the limited supply of really fine potatoes, the trade has ruled very firm, at full prices. Yorkshire realised 70s per ton; Scotch, 80s to 90s; Dutch, 90s to 100s; French, 100s to 110s; Belgian, 110s to 120s; Jersey and Guernsey, 120s to 130s per ton.

Coals.—Hetton's, 19s 6d; Lambton's, 19s 6d; Wallsend, 19s 6d; Hetton's, 19s 6d; Lambton's, 19s 6d; Wallsend, 19s 6d; Hetton's, 19s 6d; Lambton's, 19s 6d; Wallsend, 19s 6d per ton.

Oils.—Linseed, £28 10s per tun; Rape, £39 per tun; Cocoa-nut, £40 per tun; Palm, £36 per tun; Spermaceti, £90 per tun; Seal, £36 per tun; Fish, £30 per tun; Turpentine, 46s per cwt.

Tallow.—Yellow Russia, 44s per cwt; Town Melted, 43s per cwt; Rough Fat, 2s per 8lbs.

Wool.—Since our last report the demand for wool has been very limited, and prices have given way fully 1d per lb. The imports into London last week were 1,200 bales.

Hides.—Market dull, and prices 1s per hide lower. Market Hides, 56lbs to 60lbs each, 30s to 32s; 60lbs to 65lbs, 32s to 34s; 65lbs to 70lbs, 34s to 36s; 70lbs to 75lbs, 36s to 38s; 75lbs to 80lbs, 38s to 40s; 80lbs to 85lbs, 40s to 42s; 85lbs to 90lbs,

TO WOOD ENGRAVERS.—The Parents of a YOUTH, in the eighteenth year of his age, are desirous of placing him with a Master to complete his knowledge of the art. He has been nearly two years a pupil. Satisfactory reasons will be assigned for his leaving his former master. Specimens of the work will prove how far he has advanced.—Address, post paid, G. H., 26, Westgate-street, Gloucester

ORNAMENTS for the DRAWING-ROOM, Library, and Dining-Room, consisting of a new and elegant assortment of Vases, Figures, Groups, Candlesticks, Inkstands, Bread Trays, Candelabra, Paperweights, Pedestals, &c. in Alabaster, Marble, Bronze, &c. Imported and manufactured by J. TENNANT, 149, Strand, near Somerset House, London

ELEGANCE and ECONOMY in PAPER-HANGINGS.—The French Satins, 5s. 6d. per piece; Flock, 6d. per yard; 20,000 pieces in Stock. Panel Decorations, Flowers or Oak, as cheap as other Papers. Terms, Cash. Established 20 years. W. CROSBY, 22, Southey Arcade. N.B.—These rooms from the Strand entrance.

NO. 61, GROSVENOR-STREET, BOND-STREET.—Messrs. A. MOSELEY, Surgeon-Dentists, have REMOVED from No. 32, Haymarket. Their system of supplying ARTIFICIAL TEETH, ensures the power to masticate without lessoning the taste of the palate by artificial coverings, or injuring the adjacent teeth by use of wires. Their teeth are unchangeable in colour, and perfectly resemble the original. Decayed teeth permanently filled and restored to use, rendering extraction unnecessary.

JONES' £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. They comprise every modern improvement, and are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reduction of the present price has been rendered necessary, either of the whole movement or any other house. On receipt of a Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 4s., one will be sent Free. Jones' Sketch of Watch-work, sent free for a Twopenny stamp.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—A Pamphlet, explaining the various construction and the advantages of each, with a List of Prices, will be forwarded, Gratis, by post, if applied for by a post-paid letter.—T. COX SAVORY and CO., Goldsmiths, Watch and Clock Manufacturers, 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street).

ORNAMENTAL CLOCKS.—Recently received from Paris, an unusually large variety of FOURTEEN-DAY CLOCKS, to strike the hours and half-hours, in Cornice, Marble, and Chaste. The dies are as Pastoral and Historical, and include a few of great merit in the style of Louis XIV. The prices in Sets, five, six, and seven guineas each, and upwards.

A. B. SAVORY and SONS, watchmakers, 9, Co rnhill, London, opposite the Bank.

MUSICAL BOXES.—A large stock of the first quality, playing upwards of 600 airs, overtures, &c., including selections from the following favourite operas: "The Bohemian Girl," "Maritana," "Daughter of St Mark," the "Il mio tesoro." &c. A catalogue of the music is now published at the Manufactory, 72, Cheapside, also at 7, COX SAVORY and Co., Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street). London

SILVER PLATE, New and Second-hand.—T. COX SAVORY and Co.'s Pamphlet of Prices, with outlines, may be had gratis or will be sent post free if applied for by a paid letter. The contents are the prices, weights, and patterns of new and second-hand Silver Spoons and Forks; new and second-hand Tea and Coffee Services; Tea Trays; Silver-edged Pasted Goods, the new plated on white metal Spoons and Forks, Watches, Cocoa Cutlery, Lasting Gold Necklaces, and Jewellery.

T. COX SAVORY and CO., No. 47 Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

SILVER TEA SERVICES of New Patterns.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS Working Silversmiths, 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank, respectfully inform their friends that they have recent y finished a new one design, in which the combination with the present improved taste, and that they are sold at reduced prices from those customary in the trade.

Uxbridge Pattern.			Thistle Pattern
Strong Silver Tea-spo	..	£10 18 0	Strong Silver Tea-spo	..	£13 0 0
Ditto Sugar Basin	..	6 14 0	Ditto Sugar Basin	..	7 11 0
Ditto Cream Ewer	..	4 10 6	Ditto Cream Ewer	..	5 5 0
Ditto Coffee-pot	..	14 10 0	Ditto Coffee-pot	..	16 17 0
Complete	..	£36 13 6	Complete	..	£42 3 0

A variety of upwards of 50 Silver Tea and Coffee Services may be seen in the Show Room and on application the illustrated engraving, containing nine drawings, with the weights and prices of recent designs, will be forwarded to any part of Great Britain, Ireland, India, or the Colonies. Drawback on silver plate exported 1d. 6d. per ounce.

LESSONS in MILLINERY and DRESS-MAKING.—MRS. HOWELL, of 304, Regent street, two doors from Margaret-street. Sole Inventress of Teaching the Art of Dress-making in a Series of Lessons, undertakes to convey to pupils the most complete and exact knowledge of Cutting, Fitting, and Executing in the most Fashionable Style, in Six Lessons, for One Guinea. The correctness of this method can be fully substantiated by references to Ladies now Dress-making Wanted. Dress-making Rooms—Regent-street, Adelaide-place, London-bridge.

THE attention of LADIES is particularly requested to the NORWICH COTTON COMPANY'S 3 and 6 Cord Sewing Cotton, as being of the most beautiful and even texture ever produced, as will be proved on reels, containing 50, 100, 200, and 500 yards. The 6 Cord is not only the very best Cotton for Sewing, but is especially adapted for Knitting, Netting, and Crochet. To be had at all the most respectable Mercers, Hosiers, Haberdashers, and British Repositories; and wholesale only of the proprietors, Messrs. J. L. BARBER and CO., Norwich; and of their Agent in London, Mr. W. W. TRIPP, 35, Friday street, Cheapside

EVERYTHING for the WORK-TABLE, at MECHI'S MANUFACTORY, 4, LEADENHALL-STREET, LONDON.—Ladies are respectfully informed that Mechi's Emporium of Elegance is select their Scissors, Thimbles, Needles, Pincushions, Reticule guards, Silk-winders, Needles, Pins, Pincers, Netting-boxes, and Materials, and all other requisites for Ladies' work. MECHI'S Manufactory is open to the public from 10 to 4 daily. Elegant Tables and Work-boxes, in Papier Mache and Fancy Woods; also, a great variety of Ladies Cutlery, such as Ivory-handled Knives, Silver Fruit Knives, Scissors, Tweezers, Pen and Pencil Cases, Writing-cases, Card-cases, Card-racks, Watch-stands, Playing-card-cases, Pole-screens Inkstands, &c. Chessmen in ivory and bone, some superbly beautiful

ELEGANT PICTURE FRAMES, LOOKING GLASSES, CORNICES, &c.—WM FOLLIT, 63, Fleet-street, is acknowledged by all who are honoured him with commands, to be the cheapest known Manufacturing Carver and Gilder; and the assurance he can safely and confidently repeat, cannot be disputed. Observe, WM. FOLLIT'S House to Decorators, Artists, and the Trade. Priced Sheets of Chaste Designs on the receipt of six stamps. The Art-Union Ring—Every Design registered. Observe, WM. FOLLIT'S Old-established Composition, Ornament, and Moulding Manufactory, 63, Fleet-street.—Observe Corner of Bouverie-street.

A LADY, who has had much Practical Experience in Domestic Arrangements, is desirous of a RE-ENGAGEMENT, either as USEFUL COMPANION and HOUSEKEEPER to a LADY, or to SUPERINTEND the HOUSEKEEPING of any elderly Gentleman. She would have no objection to travel, or to reside in the country. Would take the Plain Education of any Children under seven years of age. Salary a minor consideration, provided with a comfortable home. Unexceptionable references to the family where trust, confidence, and kindness, are required; and can offer references of the highest respectability as to character and principles.—Address W. C. D., Lutcharaw's Library, Adam-street West, Bryanston-square

THE TIMES WE LIVE IN require the greatest domestic economy and in order to enable families to effect this, W. J. MARTIN, TEA MERCHANT, 370, Oxford-street, London, guarantees to supply families with Tea in 2, 4, 8, 8, or 12lb. cases, at 4s. per lb., fully equal to that which is sold as the best Black Tea, at prices varying from 5s. 6d. to 7s. per lb.; Gunpowder, from 4s. to 6s. per lb.; Gift of the finest Hooks or Jamaica Coffee for 12s. All orders delivered carriage-free, upon being accompanied with a Post office order, or a reference in town. W. J. MARTIN, 370, Oxford-street.

BED FEATHERS, PURIFIED by STEAM with PATENT MACHINERY, whereby they are rendered perfectly sweet and free from dust

Mixed	.. 1s. 9d. per lb	Best Foreign Grey Goose	.. 2s. 6d. per lb.
Grey Goose	.. 2s. 0d.	Best Foreign White ditto	.. 3s. 0d.
Foreign ditto	.. 1s. 8d.	Best Dantzic ditto	.. 3s. 6d.

HEAL and SON'S List of Prices, containing particulars of every quality, size, and price, sent free by post on application to their Factory, 193 (opposite the Chapel), Tottenham-court-road

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH, and SMYRNA SPONGES. Both possess the extreme flexibility, power of cleansing, and fine economy, and all who have used Metcalfe's Brushes say "The Tooth Brush performs the highly-important office of searching thoroughly into the crannies, and cleansing in the most effectual manner, the hairs never come loose: in Nursery or Family use, Metcalfe's Brushes, with the durable unbleached Russia bristles, which will not soften like common hair or Bristles; Children like that cleans harmlessly, in one child or the tenth. The new Toothbrush, and numerous Stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponge, at METCALFE and CO.'s only Establishment, 130b, Oxford-street, one door from Holles-street.

Price Twenty-six Shillings

ALEXANDER'S COLONY BEE HIVE.—This Hive is so constructed as to afford every facility to the Bee Master for examining the state of the Hive, to allow the easy passage to and from, and to ensure abundance of food for winter stores. It is also fully adapted for artificial swarming, and for the union of stocks, and all whereby an easy guide for the management of Bees may be obtained. Price 30s. Manufactured by the inventor, JNO. GLADDING, Bookseller, 20, City-road, opposite Bunhill-fields, of whom only the above Hive can be obtained. Packing case, 3s. extra

ELASTIC SURGICAL STOCKINGS, and KNEE-CAPS, of a NEW FABRIC, for various veins, weakness, &c., are introduced by POPE and PLANTE, 4 Waterloo-place, Pall Mall. They afford the requisite support without compression, and are sold by the yard, or made to order. WITHOUT THE TROUBLE OF LACING. The very great convenience of this ingenious application, and the efficiency of its uniform pressure, are attested by the particular approval of the most eminent London practitioners. Instructions for measures to be had on application, and the article sent by post

WINDOW BLINDS.—The Venetian Blinds manufactured by PAGE can confidently assert a long reputation for the neatness with which they are made in the best manner, and of thoroughly well seasoned materials. Price, painted of any colour, 8d. per square foot. T. and P. have completed a new and extensive manufactory of transparent blinds, comprising landscape scenery, imitation stained glass, birds, flowers, and ornamental subjects, adapted for halls, staircases, and drawing-room windows, varying in price from 1s. 6d. and upwards to Two, Five, and Ten Guineas.—TYLOR and PAGE, Patentees of the Perforated Zinc Blinds, and Manufacturers of Gauze Wire, Spring Roller, Venitian, and every description of Sash and outside Window Blinds, 3, Queen-street, three doors from Cheapside. Detailed lists of prices forwarded on application, post free

CHOCOLAT-MENIER. Prepared at the Hydraulic Manufactory, at Noisiel, near Paris. Established in 1825.—The Proprietor, Monsieur Menier has caused it to be acknowledged in France as one of the most valuable daily aliments. Its consumption in that country alone exceeds one million pounds per annum. In general request among all classes of society for breakfast, and is much used by the beau monde at evening parties, and for flavouring creams, custards, and various other warm dishes. Likewise highly recommended by the most distinguished members of the faculty. To obviate persons and children for its nutritive and digestive properties. Chocolat-Menier being ready prepared and sweetened, is a necessary article to Travellers, Yachts, and Luncheons, &c. This remarkable production has obtained from the French Government four silver and six gilt medals. Sold in packets, 1s. 6d., 3s., and 6s. each, by the proprietor, No. 1 St Paul's Churchyard; and Messrs. HEDGES and BUTLER, 155 Regent street.

THE NEW PALACE OF PARLIAMENT.—TAYLOR, WILLIAMS and JORDAN, MACHINE CARVING WORKS, Belvedere-road, Lambeth, near Westminster-bridge.—The Patent Carving Machinery, invented by one of the Partners of this Establishment, was submitted to the notice of the Architect of the New Palace of Westminster, in 1845; and, after undergoing the strictest investigation, and comparison with other methods of producing carved Decorations, was, on his report, adopted by the Hon Commissioners of Her Majesty's Woods and Works, for the purpose of assisting in the execution of the interior fittings of the Houses of Parliament. The Government workshops were consequently fitted with this Machinery, and it has been employed for the last eighteen months in producing the carvings now covering the walls and ceilings of the New Houses of Peers, and its approaches. The Proprietors can, therefore, solicit the attention of the Public with a confidence arising from the complete success, and have only to assure those who may oblige them with orders, that they shall meet with every possible attention.

The Machinery is not confined to any particular style, but is alike applicable to every possible variety of Decorative Carving, being capable of working on the round, or executing any amount of under-cutting.

WEBSTER'S ROYAL RED BOOK AND COURT LIST.—Now Ready, Price Three Shillings COMPRISING a CORRECT LIST of the NOBILITY and GENTRY, Alphabetically Arranged, the Ambassadors, Consuls, Law and Crown Officers a Comprehensive Royal Guide, and other useful Information

Published by WEBSTER, and Co., 60, Piccadilly.

This Day is Published One Volume, Post 8vo, Price 8s. 6d. cloth, with Coloured Illustrations, RECOLLECTIONS DE MALTA, SICILY, AND THE CONTINENT. By PENRY WILLIAMS. Jun., Esq.

London: W. S. ORR and Co., Amen-corner, and 147, Strand; and FRASER and Co., Edinburgh

EVERY LADY HER OWN FLOWER GARDENER. By LOUISA JOHNSON. Eighth Edit on.

London: W. S. ORR and Co., Amen-corner, and 147, Strand

On the first of May, No. I. price Sixpence, of FAVOURITE FIELD FLOWERS; or, Wild Flowers of England Popularly Described; the Localities in which they Grow, their Season of Flowering, &c. &c. With a Coloured Group of Flowers

HOULSTON and STONEMAN, 65, Paternoster-row

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS: History of the Reigns of the Emperors from Augustus to Constantine, with the Prices of their Coins, being Portraits, their Dates and Mottoes, is just published by P. WHELAN, Dealer in Ancient Coins, 48, Strand, London, price 1s.; by post, 1s. 2d. Coins sent by post, Bought, Cata ogued, &c.

Just Published, price 1s.; Large Edition, 2s.

HOW TO LOOK YOUNG AND HANDSOME. Conclusions from Natural Philosophy and Opinions of the most Celebrated Physicians. Applicable to both Sexes. By a PERSON of FASHION. "This volume little vers, which treats as much of health as of good looks, ought to be in the hands of all who value both."

C. ROWLAND, 154, Strand.

ETHIOPIAN MELODIES, 52 of the most Popular, performed by the Serenaders, and other Negro Melodists, the music arranged for all instruments, by ROBT. PELHAM; including "Mary Blane," "Buffalo Gals," "Who's dat knocking at de window," "Dandy Jim," "Lucy Neal," "Old Dan Tucker," "Jim Crow," "Coal Black Rose," &c. for 1s.; or in 4d. post-free.—Published by DUNCOMBE, Middle-row, Holborn; and all Booksellers.

JENNY LIND'S PORTRAIT, drawn by KENNY MEADOWS, and engraved by LINTON, unbid ables THE PIANISTA No. for MAY. No. 89. Contains No genuine Likeness of Jenny Lind ever seen in England. "Come I come, to the Land of the Free," composed expressly for her, by her friend Gustavus Pruses (a Swede), and two other songs sung by her; also Each's 4 pops at songs, "The Standard Bearer," "The Rhine, and "Home." Price for the whole, 2s. Post-free, 36 stamps.

Pianista Office, First Floor, 67, Paternoster-row

Ready this week, Part the 3rd of

HEALTHY SKIN: or the Management of the Skin as a means of Promoting and Preserving Health. By ERASMUS WILSON, F.R.S., Consulting Surgeon to the St. Pancras Infirmary, &c.

London, JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

The Art of Health, Happiness, and Long Life, in Two Volumes, 1s. each; by post, 1s stamp,

WHAT TO EAT, DRINK, and AVOID; (with Diet Tables for all Complaints); 2. HOW TO BE HAPPY; on Regimen, Expediency, and Moral Government. By ROBT JAN CULVERWELL, M.D. of Edinburgh, L.S.A., &c.—SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, and Co., Paternoster-row; HATCHARDS, 187, Piccadilly; and TEGG, 73, Cheapside. Sold by all Booksellers

PAPERS!—You will find "What Suffolk Street Gallery Ought to Be," in the MAN IN THE MOON!

HIGH ART VICTIMS. You will be Cured for Sixpence by the MAN IN THE MOON!

WANTED, a Remedy for Quackery. It is wanted now! You will find it in the MAN IN THE MOON!

SMITHFIELD NUISANCE MONGERS!—Trimble bef re the MAN IN THE MOON!

KNIGHTS.—Look out for a better "Land we live in" than yours, in the MAN IN THE MOON!

PARIS CORRESPONDENT OF THE TIMES.—Take warning before it is too late.—Read the MAN IN THE MOON!

COLD WATER CURE.—[illegible] in the MAN IN THE MOON!

MANCHESTER ART-UNION.—MISCHIEF MAKERS.—[illegible] in the MAN IN THE MOON!

HINTS TO [illegible] NOTHING ON THE WING.—[illegible] in the MAN IN THE MOON!

THE MAN IN THE MOON FOR MAY.

Edited by ALBERT SMITH and ANGUS B REACH.

Office, 7, Warwick-ane

MR. COLBURN'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

A NARRATIVE of an OVERLAND JOURNEY ROUND THE WORLD. By SIR GEORGE SIMPSON, Governor-in-Chief of the Hudson's Bay Company's Territories in North America. 2 vols. 8vo, with Map, &c. 31s. 6d. bound

II.

THE THREE COUSINS A NOVEL By MRS. TROLLOPE. Author of "Father Eustace," &c. 3 vols.

III.

A SECOND EDITION OF TANCRED By B. DISRAELI, M.P. 3 vols

"Tancred is a brilliant book. It has entertained us more than either 'Coningsby' or 'Sybil,'—and, we think, may stand higher in public favour.' Athenæum.

IV.

LORD LINDSAY'S LETTERS on the HOLY LAND. FOURTH and CHEAPER EDITION, Revised Complete in 1 vol. 7s. 6d. bound

HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13 Great Marlborough-street.

ILLUSTRATED EDITION COMPLETE.

THE NEW TESTAMENT,

WITH 100 WORDS OF

NINETY ILLUSTRATIONS BY KENNY MEADOWS,

AND OTHER LEADING ARTISTS.

A Large Copper-plate View of the Holy Land; and Notes Historical and Descriptive

The Illustrations are from Original Designs, and consist of Pictures and Characteristic sketches which do much credit to Mr. Kenny Meadows and the artists who have aided him. Much taste has been shown in the choice of subjects, and even those which have been often given are classically used up, are treated with originality of conception."—Daily News

"A publication characterised by the spirit of the well-known proprietors of the 'Illustrated London News,' and destined, we doubt not, to circulate far and wide."—Times. The illustrations are characterized by a daring originality, and finished with a boldness and beauty that make them immensely attractive."—Examiner.

London: Published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. Sold by all Book sellers. PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE ONLY.

ELEGANT LADY'S PRESENTS.

Beautifully Illustrated with Coloured Plates, in watered silk binding, richly gilt (dedicated, by permission, to her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent),

THE LANGUAGE OF FLOWERS. Tenth Edition, revised, by the Editor of "The Forget Me Not."

The public should be aware that this is the original "Language of Flowers," the popularity of which has given rise to so many imitations To secure the delivery of the genuine work, the Publisher will be given for "The Language of Flowers, Coloured," by permission to the Duchess of Kent" which guarantee, for the unexceptionable nature of its contents, can be offered to no other Also, uniformly with the above,

THE BOOK OF FLOWERS. By Mrs. HALE Containing Poetical Illustrations of "The Language of Flowers."

THE LANGUAGE OF BIRDS, Comprising Poetic and Prose Illustrations of the most favourite Cage Birds, uniformly with the above with Coloured Plates By Mrs. SPRATT.

SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Publishers, Conduit-street

THE 71st Number of the HYGEIST for MAY contains most important Observations on Dr. Crosby's Trial; also, Observations on Mr. Wakley's Attack on Homœopathy, and Sir Thomas Wilde in their Testimonials, &c. &c.

Office, 36a, Strand Price 1d., or 2d. per post.

CHILDREN'S and INVALIDS' CARRIAGES.—Invalids' Carriages, with Couch, from £3 to £8, with Lamps, Second-hand Chariots and Sociables, Chairs, Chelsea Chairs, Vis-à-Vis Waggons, Phaetons, Barouches, &c., from Ten Sovereigns to Twenty Guineas. Immense and varied collection on SALE or HIRE, at ROBIANO'S Manufactory, 35, City-road, the Nearest Repository to the Railroad Catalogues.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, a White Powder for the Teeth, compounded of the choicest and most recherché ingredients of the Oriental Herbal, of inestimable value for preserving and beautifying the Teeth and strengthening the Gums. Its truly efficient and fragrant aromatic properties have obtained for them the highest patronage, the Court and Royal Family of Great Britain, and the Nobility throughout Europe. Price 2s. 9d. per box.—CAUTION—To protect the public from fraud, the Government Stamp, with the words "A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton-garden," engraved thereon, is affixed on each box Sold by them, and by all Chemists and Perfumers.

SALE OF FIRST-CLASS JEWELLERY, PLATE, and WATCHES, at 56, CHEAPSIDE, adjoining Bow Church.—ABRAM BARKER begs to inform his Patrons and the Public generally that, being about to make extensive alterations at his Establishment, 56, Cheapside, adjoining Bow Church, he is now SELLING OFF the whole of his well-known Superior STOCK, which will be offered at prices that will ensure an immediate sale, as the whole must be cleared by the end of the month. An early visit and comparison of prices will at once prove the genuine nature of this announcement, as A. B. is noted for a ready and liberal way of doing the numerous fictitious attempts at SELLING OFF now being made, where goods of an inferior description are palmed on the Public at unfair prices Every article warranted, and will be sold at the marked price, without subterfuge or misrepresentation.—A. B., Cheapside, adjoining Bow Church.—A very superior Stock of English and Swiss Watches, of guaranteed performance, at less than advertised prices.

PROTOBOLIC HATS.—JOHNSON and Co., 113, Regent-street, Waterloo-place, beg to call the attention of the Nobility and Gentry to their Patent for the application of Valves and Air Conductors to Hats. This invention consists in a new which is passed in the Crown of the Hat, protected by the sweat and perspiration, and of a peculiar construction, so that the whole case be opened at the end of the month. An early visit and comparison of prices will at once prove the genuine nature of this announcement, as A. B. is noted for a ready and liberal way of doing the numerous fictitious attempts at SELLING OFF now being made, where goods of an inferior description are palmed on the Public at unfair prices Every article warranted, and will be sold at the marked price, without subterfuge or misrepresentation.—A. B., Cheapside, adjoining Bow Church.—A very superior Stock of English and Swiss Watches, of guaranteed performance, at less than advertised prices.

PROTOBOLIC HATS.—JOHNSON and Co., 113, Regent-street, Waterloo-place, beg to call the attention of the Nobility and Gentry to their Patent for the application of Valves and Air Conductors to Hats. This invention consists in a new which is passed in the Crown of the Hat, protected by the sweat and perspiration, and of a peculiar construction, so that the whole case be opened at the end of the month. An early visit and comparison of prices will at once prove the genuine nature of this announcement, as A. B. is noted for a ready and liberal way of doing the numerous fictitious attempts at SELLING OFF now being made, where goods of an inferior description are palmed on the Public at unfair prices Every article warranted, and will be sold at the marked price, without subterfuge or misrepresentation.—A. B., Cheapside, adjoining Bow Church.—A very superior Stock of English and Swiss Watches, of guaranteed performance, at less than advertised prices.

PARR'S LIFE PILLS, a mild, safe, and most effectual cure of Indigestion, Bilious, Liver, and Stomach complaints, Sick Headache, Costiveness, &c. Their composition is truly excellent; they are compounded entirely of vegetable matter, from all drinking and deleterious matters, which render their operation mild and [illegible] they do not require the least confinement or alteration of diet, and may be taken at all times and with perfect safety, as an occasional dose is all nervous and debilitated cases, recreates from protracted diseases, &c., they will be found highly valuable, imparting vigour and tone to the system, when emaciated by disease.

Their value as a general tonic and restorative of the impaired stomach and biliary system is daily manifested to the Proprietors by their increasing rapid sale, and the numerous testimonials forwarded by those who have proved their efficacy.

Sold in Boxes, at 1s 1½d., 2s. 9d., and Family Packets at 11s. each, by all respectable medicine vendors throughout the World.

THE NOBILITY and GENTRY are respectfully informed that the WHITEHALL Season has commenced

THOMAS GUY, GENTLEMAN'S

MAY 1 1847 CROWN AND SCEPTRE, GREENWICH

CURRALL and SON, Importers of COGNAC BRANDY, of the highest quality: choice Old Pale at 42s., and Brown at 46s. per Dozen. Bottles, 2s. per Dozen. Hampers, in. Remitties at 31s. and 34s. per Gallon. Pale High-flavoured Sherry at 42s. per Dozen.—35, Bishopsgate-street Within.

PURE ST. JULIEN CLARET, 28s. per Dozen; Pints, 18s.; imported direct by HEDGES and BUTLER, Wine Merchants, &c., 155, Regent-street, who are constantly recommended. Also, some superior Gordon's Golden Sherry, 36s. per Dozen. On the receipt of a Post-office Order or reference, will be immediately forwarded.

PARTIES of PLEASURE, Buy the Deal-partitioned CHEST, containing 6 BOTTLES. Make your selection of either Champagne, Port, Sherry, Hock, Claret, or Moselle, one of each, or two of three. Sample Order, 30s.; Nos. 1, 2, and 3, 100 miles rail-Stores under 17 and 18, Charles-street, Haymarket.—SANDELL, Inspector.

ABBOTT and SON, Late HODGSON and ABBOTT'S.—PALE ALE.—This original and highly-celebrated Beer, as universally recommended by the Faculty, may be had, on application at the Brewery, Bow, Middlesex, or 98, Gracechurch street, either in Bottles, or Casks of 18 gallons.—N.B. The Trade Supplied TONIC ALE.—This splendid description of Bottled Beer is now in splendid condition. It is strongly recommended by the Faculty as possessing quality unattainable in Pales, promoting appetite, &c. Sold in quart and pint bottles, secured by Betts's Patent Stoppers.—JOSEPH ATKINSON, Agent, No. 2, Arthur-street, E.C., near London-bridge.

EXTRAORDINARY IMPROVEMENTS in PIANOS, most elegant and desirable in every respect. To be seen, only at MOTTS, 76, Strand, where Lessons and Instructions are granted for those new Patent Inventions. N.B. Good Pianos on Hire, from 10s. 6d. per month.

PIANOFORTES.—The cheapest house in London to purchase these first-rate instruments is at H. TOLKIEN'S manufactory, 28, King William-street, London Bridge. H. T., having completed his extensive alterations, begs a friend to view the splendid Stock of PIANOS, which is not to be equalled by any house, and at one half the price charged by them. H. T.'s much admired Pianos, each given £25 Old instruments taken in exchange. 28, King William-street, London Bridge

DOUBLE-ACTION HARP, and OIL PAINTINGS.—The Harp is elegantly decorated cream-coloured enamelled soundboard, equal to new, without spot or blemish on it, made by Bouvroux from Erard's, No. 6310. Price 30 guineas The Oil Paintings are [illegible] Also, a Grand Piano, by Broadwood, Cramer, and Wood, to sell it immediately, for the above Low Price. To be seen at H. R. Wilcocks's, 61, London-road.

DANCING TAUGHT, in the most fashionable style, by Mr. WILLIS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden-square. Private Lessons in the Polka, Cellarius Valse, and the Lancers. Schools attended. Mr. Willis, a Gentleman of age, with a wife, combines privacy and expedition. An Evening Class on Monday and Friday Terms may be had, on application as above.

PARIS STAYS, at LA REINE DES FLEURS, 277, Tudgate-street, Messrs. MUNRO, NEAL and EVANS, with the greatest deference to Ladies in their extensive assortment of woven and unbleached Paris Stays of the most elegant shape, and at very reduced prices from 14s. Extra strong stays for Ladies residing in the country, 21s. Also, the best description. Depôt for the above, Mrs. FLANAGAN'S, 35, Bishop-street, Londonder

FRENCH CLEANING.—SAMUEL OSMOND and Co. Dyers, 8, Ivy lane, Newgate-street, inform the Ladies that they clean Silk, Satin, Cassimere and Muslin Dresses, Shawls, Scarfs, Blankets, Counterpanes, Parasols, Feathers, Kid Gloves, and Satin Shoes, every week. They likewise continue to Dye Black every Wednesday. Best Furniture and Window Curtains Cleaned, Dyed, and Finished.

LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN and INFANTS' UNDER-CLOTHING. Mrs. NORTON'S Show-Room, 72, Strand, is now replete with an extensive assortment of Ladies' Linen and Under-clothing, Flannel Wrappers, Morning and Cashmere Robes made to fit in the most becoming and graceful style. A beautiful variety of Children's Dresses and Baby Linen of every description. Wedding orders executed with dispatch and economy. Outfits to India and the Colonies furnished on the most reasonable terms, and at the shortest possible notice. 72, Strand, Adelphi

THE MOST SPLENDID DRESS-TRIMMING for the Season is the NEW RICH SATIN CORD. Ladies are requested to observe the sumptuous effect of these magnificent ornaments of dress, and respectfully cautioned against a paltry imitation, which is now attended to, and patterns sent, if requested. E. D. ROGERS, Berlin House, 61, Borough

EXTRAORDINARY CHEAP SILKS FOR EVENING, DINING, and WEDDING DRESSES.—Very Rich Glace, Striped, and Checked Damps, Gros Royals, Gros de Suisse, and Gros des Tours, at 2s. 6d. and 3s. 6d. per yard. The Richest Qualities, at 3s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. per yard. The French Wats out of Date, for Wedding and Evening Dresses, at 2s. 6d. The 46-inch Black Gros Satins and Watered Drapes, at 3s. 9d

Patterns sent free to any part of the country

Address KING and SHEATH, 264, Regent-street

MANTLES taking so decidedly a lead for promenade and carriage costume, and lace forming so marked an embellishment to them, determined LISON, on his recent visit to Paris to have some of the most recherché models made expressly for him, to which he wishes to draw ladies' attention, offering them, as an inducement to purchase, at the first week of their appearance, at a reduction of 25 per cent. This is established a most popular house for [illegible] Mantles, Dresses, Lace, Millinery, Flowers, Feathers, Ribbons, Hosiery, Gloves, Parasols, Fans, Head-dresses, &c. Ladies are invited to inspect the Parisian Models, which will be found to be the most tasteful and recherché. Observe, 257, Regent-street, corner of Vere-street.

CHILDREN'S FROCKS, COATS, and PELISSES; Infants' Cloaks, Hoods, Hats, and Bonnets; Long and Short Robes, French Cambric Caps, Day and Night Gowns, Robe Rosettes, Lawn and Cambric Nightcaps, with every other requisite in Baby Linen.—MESDAMES TAYLOR and FARMER'S Several Instructions for Cutting Children's Dresses constantly on view, from the useful indoor at 1s. 11d., medium 2s. 6d. to 10s. 6d., up to the rich cambric and lace Dress, at 42s. Ladies waited upon with Patterns and Prices at their young family; thus obviating the trouble and inconvenience so long complained of in going to many. Also, a New Baby-linder existing, at a reduced charge. Illustrated Pamphlet, affording additional information, will be sent free, on receiving a paid letter

SEA ISLAND HOSIERY.—Science has enabled GEORGE SMITH to place before the public this year a new and invaluable manufacture, SEA ISLAND HOSIERY. The extraordinary silk and cotton material which the Sea Island Cottons and Calicoes have acquired, indicated him to have manufactured from the same cotton that famous description of Hosiery. The valuable properties of fitting, and beautiful fresh colour and enduring quality are unequalled. The assortment consists of White, Brown, and parasol shades, in Hose, Half-hose, Socks, and Gloves. Stocking lengths, with directions and address woven in, and will be replaced, should it fail to wear.—29, Ludgate hill (late Rundall and Co.'s), corner of Bridge-street, and 3, Cornhill, Sweet Swithin's-lane.

TWENTY-FOUR SHAWLS IN ONE.—Explanation is again necessary to protect from imposition those who have never seen this extraordinary shawl, Invented, Patented, and SOLD ONLY by GEORGE SMITH, of Ludgate-hill, and known by the name "Kish Wrapper." It is a Cashmere Shawl, four yards long, and two yards wide, with a border seven inches deep, and fringe all round. The four standard shawl dresses of India form the centre; these are in four colours, green, red, orange, and white, are arranged in all the beauty of their Eastern hues, in such a manner that the Shawl can be folded into 24 different effects, viz., four square shawls showing one colour only, six showing two colours two showing three colours, and two showing all four colours; four long shawls showing two colours, two showing three colours, and two showing all four colours; one scarf showing two colours, and one showing all four colours.—A charming variety of French shawls, from 35s. to £30; Paisley manufactory, from 12s. to £10. Rugs, Satins, Towels, Muslins, Dresses, Ladies-hose, Arctic Clothing, &c. Invented in plain figures.

29, Ludgate-hill (late Rundall and Bridge's).

BERDOE'S LIGHT OVER-COAT, for the SPRING and SUMMER MONTHS, intended also, to warm weather, in lieu of an under-coat. The WATERPROOF PALLIUM possesses especial claims to the attention of the respectable classes. Its superior quality, gentlemanly appearance, and moderate charge, undeniably must continue to sustain its established reputation, as the most convenient, economical, and permanently popular Garment ever invented. An extensive assortment kept to select from, or made to measure in a day.—BERDOE, Tailor and Woollen-draper, 96, New Bond-street, corner of Brook (near Oxford-street), and 69, Cornhill (north side).

THE REGISTERED PALETOT or LLAMA CLOTH OVER-COAT, the fashionable over-coat for the present and approaching season, still retains the same moderate price, which, with its usefulness and gentlemanly appearance, has secured a most favourable reception. It has been made, by especial command, for their Royal Highnesses Prince Albert, Prince George of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar, his Grace the Duke of Cambridge, and the several Royal Families of the North Coast. In London it can only be purchased at the patentees H. J and D. NICOLL, Coast Towns, 114, 116, 118, Regent-street, and 22, Cornhill. Agents for Liverpool, Dawbarn and Son. Hull-street, for Dublin, George Simpson and Co. Edinburgh, Forrest and Son. Glasgow, Wilson and Son. Bristol, Thrasher and Son, George street, Edinburgh; and the principal tailors in other large towns

SELF MEASUREMENT—GREAT ACCOMMODATION.—The following directions will ensure an exact Fit, and will be found a most convenient accommodation. The measure may be taken with a piece of tape, and reduced into inches, stating the height of person and if any peculiarity in figure; also whether taken over a Coat

COATS, VESTS, & CLOAKS.	Inches		Inches
From Back of Neck to Bending Collar, to Hip Buttons	..	From top of Trousers to bottom	..
From Hip Buttons to Bottom of Skirt	..	From under the Legs to top of Trousers	..
From centre of Back to Elbow	..	Size round Calf	..
Continued to length of Sleeve	..	Size round Leg	..
Round Chest	..	Ditto Waist	..
Size round top of Arm	..	Ditto Hips	..
Size round Waistcoat under the Coat	..	HAT
Size round Waist under the Coat	..	Measure size round the Head	..

MADE TO MEASURE.	LIST OF PRICES.	READY MADE.	£ s d
Cashmerette Coddrington	from 0 16 6	Blouses	0 7 6
Beaver, dark colour, and Cashmere	1 1 0	Cashmere Coddrington	0 12 6
Cambridge coat, lined throughout	2 5 0	Cambridges, Chesterfields, Polkas,	0 15 0
Frock	2 10 0	Full silk Blue serge Garibaldi	0 18 0
Sporting coat	3 0 0	Twill ditto	0 8 5
Shooting ditto	3 3 0	Sporting ditto	0 9 6
Best quality manufactured	3 15 0	Dress coats	1 0 0
Frock Coat	4 0 0	Extra superfine, a superior coat	1 12 0
Dress ditto	3 3 0	Frock ditto	1 4 0
Rich pattern vest	0 8 6	Extra superfine, a superior coat	1 6 0
Superfine or cloth	0 9 6	Roll collar vest

IMPROVED OMNIBUS.

CHESS

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

*B. J. A."—"Greco."—The celebrated "Indian Problem" appears every month on the wrapper of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle:" it is there correctly given. If, after trying for a week, you fail to solve it, we will give you the solution.

*G. A. H."—We think Castling is not fairly admissible in a Problem; but those who adopt it are, of course, of a different opinion, and the public must decide. The first instance of its being introduced in this way occurs, if we mistake not, in "Bilguer's Handbuch," p. 124, at the end of the book.

*S. B."—It will appear some time in May. Thanks for the positions.

*N. O."—The Black King cannot move into the range of the White Knight, in the position adduced.

*Brattonsun."—Diagrams for noting down Problems or Ends of Games may now be obtained, for a mere trifle per hundred, of Hastings, in Carey-street.

*A. D. A."—Calvi's Lessons commence with the new series.

*Navy Argo."—The King cannot Castle, if any of the squares over which he has to pass are attacked by an adverse piece. But the Rook, in Castling, may pass with impunity the range of one of the enemy's men. Your solution is right.

*J. M."—In the first instance, Calvi plays Kt to K 2nd from apprehension of the check Black's Queen can give at K 2nd, which would prevent White from Castling, or otherwise embarrass his game. We think Calvi right. With regard to the second case, it has occurred to us occasionally, but we have no recollection of its result.

*Sly."—You are right respecting the 6th move, which should be—6. Kt to Kt 5th but the 3rd move you are wrong in.

*B. S."—The Great Yorkshire Chess Meeting is appointed for the 12th of May. Applications for Tickets should be made at once to the Secretary, at the Public Rooms, Kingston-square, Hull.

*J. D. G." "A Member," &c.—We believe it is in contemplation to provide Chess-boards and men for the Reading Rooms of the New Literary Club.

Branxholm." You can forward a Post-office Order to Hurst, the Publisher of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle," for that work; and to Williams and Norgate, for Hirschbach's "Leipsic Magazine."

*Major ——"—"M. P."—"Gates-hill."—The "Hand-book" is expected to be ready by the end of May; and we are promised, in addition to the contents already advertised, a series of masterly Problems composed for it by the Rev. H. Bolton, Mr. Kling, and Mr. McG——y.

Bimbro."—The shortest solution is the best—and yours in four moves is very pretty. The signature you adopt should be written legibly.

"P. B."—Your friend is in error. The King certainly cannot pass the check of an adverse man in Castling, but the Rook may always do so.

"Juvenis." "Robin Hood."—The collection of Games and Problems published in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS during the last two years, would, doubtless, form an interesting volume; but they are not likely to be procurable in that shape: to obtain them, therefore, you should buy the last four Volumes of the Paper.

*Solutions by "G. A. H.," "Sopracitta," "J. G. H.," "W. S. L.," "Echess," "J. H." "J. A. J." "T. D. B. S." "W. F. T. H." "Sly." "Bimbro," "Pasoube," and "P. B." are correct. Those by "W. F. J." "R. K. S." "Jacobus B.," and "Inquirer," are wrong.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, No. 170.

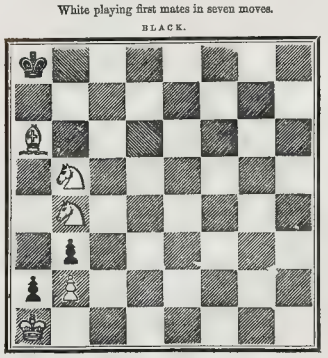
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Castles	Castles	3. B checks	R interposes
2. R to K Kt sq (ch)	K to R sq	4. B takes R (ch)—Mate.

PROBLEM, No. 171.

By MR. KLING.

White playing first mates in seven moves.

BLACK.



WHITE.

CHESS IN GERMANY.

The following is a Game in a Match played lately at Leipsic between Count Vitzthum and Mr. O. Wigand.

WHITE (Mr. O. W.)	BLACK (Count V.)	WHITE (Mr. O. W.)	BLACK (Count V.)
1. Q P two	K B P two	16. Q R P one (e)	K Kt P one
2. K P two (a)	Q P one	17. Q B to K Kt 5th	Ks to K B 4th
3. Q Kt to B 3rd (b)	P takes P	18. K B P two	K B to K Kt 2nd
4. Kt takes P	Q B to K B 4th	19. Q Kt P one (f)	Castles on K side
5. K B to Q 3rd (c)	Q to her B's sq	20. Q R to Q sq	Q R to K sq
6. Q Kt to K Kt 3rd	B takes B	21. Q to K B 3rd	Q to K B 2nd
7. Q takes B	K Kt to B 3rd	22. Q to K Kt 4th (g)	Kt to K 6th
8. K Kt to K 2nd	Q Kt to B 3rd	23. Q takes P	Kt takes Q R
9. Castles	Q R P one	24. P takes Kt	P takes P
10. Q R P one	K P two	25. Kt takes P	R to K 8th
11. Q P one (d)	Q Kt to K 2nd	26. B to K B sq	B to K 4th
12. Q B P two	K R P two	27. P to K Kt 3rd	Q to K B 4th
13. K R P one	K R P one	28. Q to K R 6th	R to K 7th
14. Q Kt to K 4th	Kt takes Kt	29. Q takes Kt P (ch)	Q takes Q
15. Q takes Kt	Q to her 2nd	30. Kt takes Q	B to Q 5th (ch)

Black wins.

(a) This move first occurs in one of the games between Messrs. Staunton and Horwitz (See "Chess Player's Chronicle," vol. 7, p. 190)
(b) K to Q 3rd would also be a good move.
(c) Q Kt to K Kt 3rd is, perhaps, stronger play.
(d) We should have preferred—11. K B P two.
(e) Again K B P two appears a better move.
(f) Lost time. He should have taken P with P.
(g) A fatal oversight.

GAME LATELY PLAYED BETWEEN MESSRS. HARRWITZ AND G. W. MEDLEY, THE FORMER GIVING A PAWN AND TWO MOVES.

(Remove Black's K B P from the Board.)

WHITE (Mr. M.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)	WHITE (Mr. M.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)
1. K P two	Q P one	31. Q to K B 3rd (a)	K to K B 2nd
2. Q P two	K P one	32. B to Q B 3rd	Q Kt P one
3. K B P two	K Kt P one	33. R takes R	Kt takes R
4. K B to Q 3rd	K Kt P one	34. R takes Kt	R takes R
5. K Kt to B 3rd	K Kt to R 3rd	35. Q takes R	Q takes Q
6. Q B P two	K B to Kt 2nd	36. P takes Q	P takes R
7. Q Kt to B 3rd	Castles	37. P takes P	B takes P
8. Castles	Q Kt to B 3rd	38. K to R 2nd	B to Q Kt 6th
9. Q P one	Q Kt to K 2nd	39. Kt to K B 4th	Q R P one
10. K R P one	Q B P one	40. Kt to K 2nd	B takes P
11. Q B to K 3rd	K to R sq	41. Kt to Q 4th	B to Q B 5th
12. K Kt to Q 4th	Q B P takes P	42. Kt to Q B 2nd	Q R P one
13. Q B P takes P	P takes P	43. Kt to Q R 3rd	B to Q 6th
14. P takes P	Q Kt to K B 4th	44. K to Kt 3rd	K to B 3rd
15. B takes Kt	B takes B	45. K to B 4th	K R P one
16. K Kt P two	B to Q 3nd	46. K to K 3rd	B to K B 8th
17. Q to Q 3rd	Q R P one	47. K to B 4th	Q P one
18. K R to B 3rd	Q R to Q B sq	48. Kt to Q B 2nd	B to Q 6th
19. Q R to K B sq	Q to K sq	49. Kt to R 3rd	B to Q R 3rd
20. K B P one	P takes P	50. Kt to B 2nd	B to B 8th
21. P takes P	R to K Kt sq	51. Kt to R 3rd	B to Q 6th
22. K to R sq	Q to K R 4th	52. K to K 3rd	B takes K B P (b)
23. Kt to K 6th	B to K 4th	53. P takes B	K takes P
24. B to Q 4th	Kt to K B 2nd	54. K to K B 3rd	K R P one
25. Q R P two	Q Kt P two	55. Kt to Q B 2nd	K R P one
26. Q Kt to K 4th	R to K Kt 5th	56. Kt to Q R 3rd	K to K 4th
27. Kt to K B 6th	B takes Kt	57. K to Kt 4th	K to K 5th
28. B takes B (ch)	K to Kt sq	58. K takes P	K to Q 6th
29. R to K Kt 3rd	Q R to Q B 5th	59. Kt to Q Kt 5th	K to B 5th
30. R to K Kt sq	Kt to K R 3rd	And White resigns.

(a) B to Q 4th is apparently a much stronger move, and, if we mistake not, would have quite reversed the fortunes of the day.
(b) The latter portion of this game is very entertaining and instructive.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

(HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.)

No. 149

Is the exact termination of a Game the other day between two distinguished amateurs of the St. George's Chess Club.

WHITE.	BLACK.
K at K Kt 3rd	K at his R's 2nd
R at Q R 5th	R at Q R 7th
Kt at Q B 7th	Kt at Q 6th
Ps at K R 5th, K B 3d, Q 5th, Q B 4th, Q Kt 4th, and Q R 3d	Ps at K R 3rd, K Kt 2nd and 4th, and Q R 5th

Black having now to play, gave mate in three moves.

No. 150.

By MR. CLARE.

WHITE.	BLACK.
K at his sq	K at his 5th
R at Q R 7th
Kts at K 6th and K 8th
Ps at K Kt 4th, K B 6th, Q 6th, and Q R 4th

White to play and mate in three moves.

No. 151.—By PUTTINO.

WHITE.	BLACK.
K at his 5th	K at his 5th
Q at her 7th	Q at her R 2nd
R at Q R 4th	Rs at K B 4th and Q 6th
Bs at Q Kt 4th and 7th	B at K B 5th

White to play and mate in four moves.

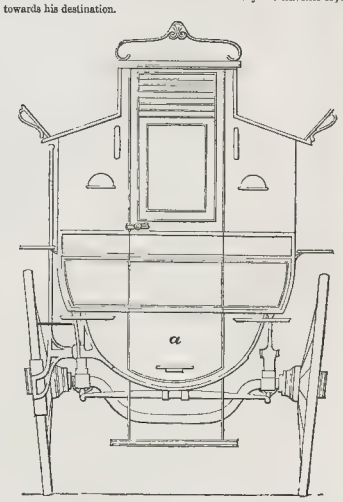
FAMINE RELIEF FUND FOR IRELAND AND SCOTLAND.—On Tuesday the committee of the National Club Fund, in Palace-yard, made a report of the manner in which they had distributed the funds which had come to their hands for the relief of extreme distress in Ireland and Scotland. To the following dioceses in Ireland grants have been awarded, viz.:—Armagh, £740; Meath, £1030; Tuam, £1007; Kilmore, £1295; Derry, £893; Clogher, £297; Down, £200; Dublin, £55; Cashel, £1155; Limerick, £742; Killaloe, £510; Ossory, £858; Cork (including special grants), £3715. The grants to Scotland have been £1733. The total sum received by the club was £16,800.

IMPROVED OMNIBUS.

THIS new Omnibus involves two points of importance to the public—improved construction, and consequent reduction of fare.

Several of the new carriages are now building for the Economic Conveyance Company, by Messrs. Adams and Co., at their works, Fairfield, Bow; who have patented this vehicle. Its prominent differences from the omnibuses in general use, are—its easiness of access, that roof of the carriage being raised, so as to admit the free entrance, without stooping, of a tall person; whilst a safe mode of holding on is afforded till the passenger is seated.

The interior of the roof of the carriage is to be appropriated to advertisements, whilst its exterior will form a seat for the outside passengers. Thirteen passengers may be carried within, and about fourteen without. For the interior conveyance, twopence per passenger, and for the outside one penny, for an average distance of a mile, will be charged. It is not however, intended to convey passengers strictly by the mile, but from one part of the metropolis to another, averaging the distance of a mile; and other Omnibuses will be in attendance to convey the traveller to, or towards his destination.



IMPROVED OMNIBUS.

Instead of the ordinary iron-pointed pole, which protrudes through the panel of another carriage, when any accidental collision takes place, the pole of the newly-invented Omnibus has an elastic buffer at the end, similar to that used in railway carriages; so that a motion forward only, and no damage, is occasioned by any contact. To prevent the delay which usually occurs in pulling up the horses, and stopping the vehicle, when a passenger makes a call to be taken up, a strong break, with a long lever, is under the control of the conductor, which brings up the Carriage instanter, and is sufficiently powerful to supersede the necessity of stopping to put on a drag on descending a hill. The ventilation of the new Carriage is arranged above the heads of the passengers, so that they are subject to no draught, and a mode of communication is thereby made as well with the coachman as with the conductor.

Another variation from the present construction consists in the fore-wheels being four feet in diameter, thereby closely approaching the size of the hind-wheels, and making a diminution in the draught equal to the saving of one horse in a stud.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand aforesaid. SATURDAY, MAY 1, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 262.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, MAY 8, 1847. [Sixpence.

ENGLISH INFLUENCE.

One of the most remarkable speeches ever delivered by Lord Palmerston was his statement, in reply to the motion of Lord John Manners, on Monday evening, on the affairs of Greece. It was a most effective exposure of the utter worthlessness of what is called "influence" over the Government of another nation, when it is founded only on the miserable cabals and intrigues of diplomatists, instead of the relations of two countries to each other by commercial intercourse. It is a pretty general belief that Lord Palmerston is fond of diplomatic triumphs, and that he will pursue them even to the detriment of the real interests of the country. That, at least, is the fixed opinion of the French journals and French politicians, who regard Lord Palmerston as a State sorcerer, always prepared with some dark spells, some secret and inexplicable devices and plots, all directed against the name, fame, and power of France and its people. These direful machinations are never, or but rarely, described; but, when they are, they are ludicrous in the extreme. The report spread by the French papers some time ago, that Lord Palmerston was negotiating the purchase from Mehemet Ali of the sovereignty of Egypt, after the old Pacha's demise, is but one of many similar absurdities. But the mischief of these statements is, that public opinion in France becomes tinged with a belief in them, and the most ordinary act of the Foreign Minister of England is distorted and exaggerated, till the simple pressing a fraudulent Government to pay up an arrear of a debt, or giving the protection of a couple of English ships to English merchants in a revolutionised capital, are magnified into little less than an invasion of France, and a violation of the independence of the Great Nation.

It is the trick of the dynasty that now governs France to divert the attention of the people from internal improvements by the affectation of a brilliant foreign policy. With a commercial code full of glaring and oppressive anomalies—an electoral system that secures the nomination of the Deputies to the Government, and fills the Chamber with placemen—with the public finance exhibiting a perpetual deficiency, and abuses and peculations in more than one public department positively asserted—the journals of France, whether from fear of bringing themselves under the ban of the law, or because they think what is distant is most important, pay a most absurdly disproportionate attention to foreign politics. They, in fact, fight their party battles, not on their own soil, but in Constantinople, Madrid, or Athens. Whether French influence is in the ascendant in the Cabinet cabals of those places is the all important question. And great talents and energies are thus wasted. One half of the passion and earnestness exercised on the "home department" would soon compel the most stationary of Governments to be a progressing one; but while they are engrossed in painting Lord Palmerston as an arch fiend, and England as the embodiment of all that is grasping and ambitious, they are letting their own affairs decline in a gradual deterioration. A nation enterprising in its character and industrious will make wealth, and by its wealth it will continually extend its commerce, thus creating for itself an "influence" with all other countries. Diplomacy is the direction and expression of that influence; take away the basis it stands on, and diplomacy becomes mere individual trickery, more or less clever, but, as to real effect, the hollowest delusion by which ever men were blinded. Diplomacy is an instrument, not a power. Powerful nations will have their influence, though their diplomacy were the worst in the world—as, speaking of it as a profession, we believe English diplomacy to be. Napoleon was always a successful negotiator after he had won a battle or got hold of a capital: with power in his hands, he was a first-rate diplomatist. What did diplomacy do for him when power departed from him, and he negotiated, not as victor, but vanquished? All the skill of Talleyrand, could it by a miracle have been enlisted on the losing side, would not have saved him from deposition and exile.

But diplomacy occupies a high place in the opinion of French politicians, and to form a French party in a foreign Court they will sacrifice money and means that might be far better employed. For we believe Lord Palmerston's estimate of the nature of such factions to be the true one; all they can do for the nation they pretend to represent is worthless. There is in Greece a French party, an English party, and a Russian party; that is, there are three associations of men who are trying to get office, and claim the support of those foreign nations to obtain their object. As far as it is possible to judge, the great purpose of all Greek Ministers is to cheat the foreign creditors, plunder the people, and embezzle the funds. It is difficult to understand what any State, with a regard for its own character, can gain by any connection with such a gang. England utterly disavows any alliance with men such men; and Lord Palmerston declares any Ministry that would be decently honest in its dealings, pay up the debt, and not embezzle the public money, should be welcome to power, as far as England is concerned: and the Foreign Secretary expresses the opinion of the nation. We want no influence, save that which springs from our dealings; and, as to bolstering up this or that Ministry, for the mere sake of exhibiting diplomatic "influence," it is not our mode of proceeding. And we are thankful that the present Greek Government is not in any sense English, for the majority of the Ministers seem qualified for a penal settlement.

MDLLE. JENNY LIND AS "ALICE," AND HERR STAUDIGL AS "BERTRAM," IN MEYERBEER'S OPERA OF "ROBERTO IL DIAVOLO," AT HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—(SEE PAGE 301

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE

The Paris papers this week have ample food for excitement in the discovery of some very equivocal proceedings between General Cubières, a member of the late Cabinet, and M. Teste, who is connected with the present Cabinet. Those individuals are charged with bribery of a flagitious character. It seems that in a process which lately came before the Court de Premiere Instance of the department of the Creuze, a most extraordinary correspondence was produced. Letters were read, which had been addressed to one of the parties in the cause, by General Cubieres, a Peer of France, and who, only a few years ago, was himself a member of the Cabinet, as Minister of War; from which it seems that General Cubieres, in 1842, negotiated between the Minister of Public Works and a Company which was apply ng for a concession of the salt mines of Gouhenance. Despairing of success, notwithstanding the favourable terms in which the demand was received by some of the authorities, except by corrupting the heads of the Department of Public Works, he determined to try to gain the support of the Minister of Public Works, by making him a present of a certain number of shares in the concern. A great deal of bargaining and haggling took place, the Minister demanding eighty shares, the Company offering twenty-five, and at length General Cubieres writes to the Company to say that the Minister agrees to take fifty, and he recommends that the Company should authorise him to offer forty-five shares. The result does not appear, excepting by the fact that the Company received the concession of the mines; but the letters of General Cubieres are published at length in some of the papers. In one letter, after describing a conversation which he had with M. Legrand, the Under Secretary of State for the Department of Public Works, in the course of which that gentleman said that the Council of Ministers would probably have to decide who should get the concession of the mines, and that he would therefore advise that proper precautions should be taken, the General continues:—

"I hasten to communicate to you this piece of advice, which is so important and so grave in the month of the person that gave it. There is not a moment to be lost. You must not hesitate in selecting the means by which we can create for ourselves an interested support in the Council itself. I have the means of arriving at that support. It is for you to consider as to the means to be adopted in order to interest the party in question. Do not forget that the Government is in the hands of greedy and corrupt parties (mains avides et corrompues), that the liberty of the press runs the risk of being strangled, without noise, one of these days; and that there never has been a time when the bon droit stood more in need of protection."

Such an affair as this could not be passed over unnoticed. It was accordingly brought forward on Monday in the Chamber of Deputies, and both M. Dumon and M. Guizot declared that a thorough investigation should take place, and that legal proceedings should be instituted against the parties implicated.

The papers are full of accounts of this extraordinary case, but most of them seem to doubt if the Ministry has any serious intention to prosecute either the party corrupting or the party corrupted.

On Sunday last, Mdlle. Cheri returned to Paris from London with her mother, and soon after her father and family went with her to the theatre. Whether excited with joy at his daughter's return, or from whatever cause, M. Chéri was attacked with fatal apoplexy on the brain, and was carried home, where he lingered til the morning, and then expired. Mdlle. Rose Chéri was to have been married last Thursday, but the marriage was of course put off. M. Chéri was forty-four years of age.

Louis Philippe's fête day, on Sunday last, passed off with éclat, but there was hardly so much gaiety and ceremony as on some previous occasions. In the provinces, it was arranged that, in consequence of the existing distress, no fêtes should take place, but that the amount usually expended should be given to the poor. The weather was very favourable, the illuminations and fireworks brilliant, the crowd in the Champs Elysées and the garden of the Tuileries enormous, and the reception of the King and Royal Family, when they appeared at the concert, as warm and as enthusiastic as at any period since his Majesty's accession to the Throne.

In the course of the day, the King held a Court, at which he received addresses from the corps diplomatique, the Chambers of Peers and Deputies, the Judges, and Magistracy, and other public functionaries

The King, in answer to the Address of the Apostolic Nuncio, in the name of the corps diplomatique, said:—

"It is but too true that my heart is deeply afflicted by the sad trials which the dearness of provisions has caused the most of our land to undergo. With you, I hope that Providence will soon put a term to their duration, and that an abundant harvest will console the human race for their sufferings. But, as you justly observe, what has most contributed to alleviate the burden of these sufferings, is the maintenance of that beneficent peace which the happy accord of all the Governments confirms more and more every year. I thank the Almighty for having permitted me to co-operate in this great result, and I have a firm confidence that it will continue to bless our constant efforts in common to remove everything that might trouble it.

"I am exceedingly sensible to the felicitations and kind wishes which you express in so touching a manner in the name of the Diplomatic Corps, and it is with the utmost sincerity that I return you thanks for the same, as well in my own name, as in that of the Queen and all my family."

His Majesty, in acknowledging the Address presented by M. Sauzet, the President of the Chamber of Deputies, again referred to the sufferings of the labouring classes, and proceeded to say, "We have reason to hope that these sad sufferings draw towards their close. There will remain one great example from it, that they have not roused any of those political passions which have so often envenomed public sufferings. The popular opinion, more enlightened, has discovered what it would have to lose by those agitations, without it being possible that they might hope for anything from them. Thanks to Heaven, the happy accord which reigns among the great powers is a pledge of our institutions—

Trois pouvoirs etonnes du mond qui les rassemble

"To day we see in the midst of us these three powers united by the confidence which they mutually inspire, and which must support each; they lend each other, and in the certainty that neither would be guilty of aggression on the other, but, on the contrary, that it is in that accord, in that confidence, that they find the force which is necessary for the free exercise of their rights, and of their constitutional attributions. We see them void of all jealousy, only rivalling each other in zeal for guaranteeing liberty, public security, and national prosperity, against those shocks which human passions and errors seek to excite.—[The King was here interrupted by unanimous acclamations.] —It is by your powerful concurrence, by that accord so precious, that I have been able to see realised the first words which I addressed to France as Lieutenant-General of the kingdom 'The Charter will be henceforth a verity.' [Fresh and prolonged acclamations here arose from all sides. His Majesty was strongly moved, and advancing towards the Deputies who pressed around him, said to them:—] I am deeply affected by these acclamations and by the sentiments which you express towards my family, and myself; believe me they go to my heart, and that I am deeply penetrated with them." Fresh cries of "Vive le Roi!"

SPAIN

Our advices from Madrid state that on the 28th ult. M. Olozaga, M. Mendizabal, M. Cortada, and other leading members of the Progressist party, waited on the Queen and supplicated her Majesty to extend the benefits of the amnesty to the ex-Regent. The Queen received them with great affability, and said that, as far as she was concerned, nothing would be more agreeable than the union of all classes of her subjects; but that the affair on which she was now applied to was one which must be referred to her responsible advisers, who alone could decide on the propriety of granting their request.

General Narvaez was expected to take his departure for Paris in the course of two or three days. One of the papers denies that General Narvaez has been created a Knight of the Golden Fleece. It says that the number of Knights is limited, and that no vacancy has occurred. The eldest son of the late Duke of Saragossa has had the title conferred upon him, with the dignity of Grandee.

On the afternoon of the 26th the Queen went to the Prado, accompanied by her uncle, and the King went to the Retiro, with his usual attendants. The Princess de la Paz, wife of the once celebrated Prince of the Peace, has addressed a long letter to the newspapers, complaining of the exile of her husband, and the confiscation of his property.

A letter of the 26th ult., from Barcelona, states that an engagement had taken place on the previous day between a band of Montemolinists and the Queen's troops at Baseka, near Solsona, when the former were defeated, with the loss of 12 killed and 24 made prisoners. Another band had been beaten at Sedanola, and several prisoners taken and conveyed to Berga.

PORTUGAL

We have Lisbon letters to the 29th ult., the contents of which are important. The Queen of Portugal has wisely consented to the terms proposed on the part of the British Government. Colonel Wylde was about to depart for St. Ubes, to put a stop to hostilities. The Queen and Government surrendered their objections in the most handsome and liberal manner.

There is scarcely a shadow of doubt that Colonel Wylde's mission will be successful soon after he arrives, and communicates the terms of which he is the bearer, and the nature of his instructions. Those instructions imply an immediate armed intervention by England in support of the Queen's prerogative, should the terms not be accepted

A new Ministry has been formed. Count Tojal, however, remains Minister of Finance for the present. The other appointments are: Interior—Francisco Tavares de Almeida Proenca. Justice and Ecclesiastical Affairs—Manoel D'arte Leitao. Foreign Affairs and ad interim, War—Ildefonso Leite.

Letters from Oporto of the 29th ult., speak of that city remaining tranquil. Saldanha continued at his old quarters of Oliveira

Casal and the Queen's troops have definitively abandoned the provinces of the Tras-os-Montes and the Minho, and established their head-quarters at Lamego, on the south of the Douro.

The English steamer, Royal Tar, which had been bought by the Portuguese Government from the Peninsular and Oriental Company for £10,000, was captured by the insurgents on the 21st of April, as she was about to enter the Tagus. She had on board 10,000 rockets and 50,000 cartridges. Admiral Napier, belonging to the Queen's party, was also taken by the insurgents, whilst on her way from Gibraltar.

GREECE.

Our letters from Athens of the 18th ult., inform us of the changes made in the Greek Ministry. M. Colettl has been appointed Minister for Foreign Affairs and President of the Council; M. Regas Palamidies, late President of the Chamber of Deputies, Minister of the Interior; M. Corphiotaki, Deputy from Sparta, Minister of Finance, in the room of M. Psnyropoulos; M. Constantine Colocotroni, Deputy from Corinth, Minister of Marine; M. Glarakis, Senator, Minister of Ecclesiastical Affairs and Public Instruction; M. Boulgari, Senator, Minister of Marine, in the place of Admiral Canaris: General Travelias retains the Department of War

THE OVERLAND MAIL.

The Overland Bombay Mail of the last of April has arrived, and brings several items of interesting news. The account of the death of Akbar Khan is confirmed; but the manner of it is still enveloped in mystery. It was at first thought that he had died of diarhœa Khan subsequently, but he is now said to have been poisoned by orders of his own father, who was unable to control his turbulence, and against whom he was preparing to raise a rebellion.

The Delni Gazette asserts on the authority of its Cabul correspondent, that Akbar Khan had, in concert with the Chiefs of Candahar, who receive annually large sums from Persia, entered into a league with the Shah, for the invasion of British India, via Shikarpoor. Yar Mahomed, Herat, and Dost Mahomed, his father-in-law, Akbar Khan, the aid of 3,000 men. The journey of Akbar Khan from Cabul to Candahar in last December, is said to have been undertaken for the preceding purpose. Akbar Khan subsequently returned to Cabul, had a dispute with his father, went then to attack the chief forts of Gelizies, which he did with his wonted ferocity. Akbar Khan's troops were encamped near Gundamuck, already famous for the treacherous slaughter of the British forces. Here Akbar Khan became ill, as it is affirmed, of poison, and it is said that he proceeded towards Jellalabad, and died at Lughman.

The inhabitants of the Bombay and Bengal Presidencies have made large subscriptions for the relief of the suffering poor of Scotland and Ireland.

The disturbances in the Goomsoor districts, and disorders in the Nizam's dominions, continue as formerly. With these exceptions, India in general remains tranquil.

The ship Mary, bound for Dundee, was totally destroyed by fire in the Calentta river on the 19th March.

In regard to financial matters the Bombay Times of the 1st of April, says:—"So severe continues the pressure in the money market that discounts have been raised by the banks to From 11 to 12 per cent. About three millions sterling have been raised by the Five per Cent. Loan, which will, it is understood, be kept open for at least twelve months to come. Our expenditure for the past seven years has exceeded our income by above a million and a quarter annually; at this moment the sum just named is nearly absorbed by Scinde. From four to five millions are at present understood to be required by Government."

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

The Queen and Prince Albert, the Duchess of Kent, the ladies and gentlemen of the Court and the domestic household, attended Divine service on Sunday, in the private chapel in Buckingham Palace. The Hon. and Rev. C. Leslie Courtenay officiated.

The Queen gave a Concert on Monday. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent and the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge were present. The Royal Family were received by the Comptroller of the Household, who conducted them to the Yellow Drawing-room, where her Majesty and Prince Albert received their illustrious party in the State Dinner-room The tables were very tastefully ornamented, and were brilliantly illuminated with wax-lights in numerous candelabra of silver gilt.

The Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent and his Serene Highness the Prince of Leiningen, entered the per[illegible] Drawing-room, where they were joined by [illegible] Royal Highness Prince Albert of Prussia, the Hon. [illegible] Miss Kerr, Lord Marcus [illegible], the Hon. [illegible] and Mr. Bowers.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge and Prince Albert of Prussia, the Marquis of Westmeath, and Hon. Miss Lascelles [illegible] Buckingham Palace. At a quarter-past eight o'clock Lord Liverpool, accompanied by the Hon. Miss Jervis, one of the Directors of Her Majesty's Concerts of Ancient Music, left Buckingham Palace for the Hanover-square Rooms, to honour the performance of the Concert of Ancient Music with her presence

DEPARTURE OF THE COURT FOR THE ISLE OF WIGHT.—The Queen, the Prince Consort, and a portion of the Royal Family, left Buckingham Palace yesterday, for the Isle of Wight, to pass a few days at Osborne, previously to the State Ball, on the 14th Instant, for which the Court will return to London. It is also probable that the Queen (agreeably to her Majesty's custom) will then pass two or three days at Claremont, including her birthday, the 24th instant, and return to town for the State Drawing Room on the 27th. The Court, it is understood, will remove to Windsor Castle on the 29th or 31st, to be present at Ascot Heath Races, on the 1st of June

INSTALLATION OF PRINCE ALBERT.—Her Majesty the Queen will be present at the installation of Prince Albert, which will take place at Cambridge on Tuesday, July 6th. The commencement will open, as usual, on the 3rd of July. Professor Walmisley has received the words of the ode from the Poet Laureate, Wordsworth, and is busily engaged in adapting them to music. It is expected that there will be a musical festival, as has been the custom on similar occasions; the last took place in July, 1842, when the Duke of Northumberland was installed

THE GREEN RIBAND.—The Earl of Elgin is to have the Green Riband vacant by the death of the Duke of Argyll.

THE PRINCE OF LEININGEN.—His Serene Highness the Prince of Leiningen arrived at Buckingham Palace on Monday, from the Continent.

ARISTOCRATIC MARRIAGE.—The Marquis of Ailsa was, on Monday, married, at All Souls Church, Langham-place, to the Hon. Ellen Augusta Smythe, daughter of Viscount Strangford.——On Thursday, the 29th ult., the marriage of the Marquis of Salisbury with the Lady Mary Catherine Sackville West, was solemnized at Knowle, in Kent, the residence of the Earl and Countess Amherst. The Duke of Wellington was present at the ceremony.——The marriage of the Hon. Caroline Harriet Gage, third daughter of Viscount and Viscountess Gage, and the Hon. S. Greenhow Vereker, eldest son of Viscount Gort, was solemnized on Tuesday at St. Mary Abbot's Church, Westminster.

PARISH OF ST. ANNE AND ST. ANDREW'S, BLACKFRIARS.—The Rev Michael Biggs, M.A., has been elected Lecturer of this church, in the room of the Rev. Michael Gibbs, M.A., who has resigned.

MARRIAGE OF MR. JOHN BRIGHT, M.P The Wakefield Journal says that, at the Waxefield Board of Guardians, on Monday, amongst the notices of marriages read, was one between John Bright and Margaret Elizabeth Leatham, for the first time. It is entered in the notice book as follows:—"John Bright, widower, cotton spinner and manufacturer, of full age, resides at One Ash, near Rochdale, and Margaret Elizabeth Leatham, full age, Heath, near Wakefield. Marriage to be solemnised at the Friends' Meeting House, Wakefield." The Mr. John Bright referred to is the hon. M.P. for Durham.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF CHEMISTRY.—His Royal Highness Prince Albert, President of the Royal College of Chemistry, met the Vice-Presidents and Members of Council on Tuesday, to inspect the newly-erected laboratories of the college, which have just been completed, in Hanover-square. His Royal Highness first visited the analytical laboratories, where he took a lively interest in the most interesting processes then being carried on were explained to him by the Professor of the institution, Dr. Hoffman; and, among others, the investigations into the chemical constitution of coal gas. A flute of Hanoverian wine, the store rooms, weighing room, museum, the professor's private laboratory, &c. His Royal Highness next visited the basement story, in which are the various furnaces for organic analysis, the combustion, vapour, and other drinking gas-stoves. His Royal Highness expressed himself highly pleased with the new building and all the arrangements of the laboratories. His Royal Highness afterwards presided at a meeting of the council.

MURDER NEAR MANCHESTER.—On Wednesday evening a shocking occurrence took place at the village of Chorlton-cum-Hardy, near Manchester, arising out of a quarrel between two men on a question of intoxication. A man named George Leach, a mechanic in the employ of the Manchester and Leeds Railway Company, keeps a beer-house at Chorlton, and about four o'clock in the evening he and three or four companions were there drinking together, when a dispute arose between Leach and his wife. Leach used bad language to her, when one of his companions, Francis Deakin, a farmer and market gardener, interfered, and said this was not manly, and tried to reconcile them. Leach, however, became more incensed at her for the interference, and attempted to strike her, but she ran out of doors. Upon this Deakin and Leach had some sharp words, when Deakin challenged him to fight, if he would go out of door. Leach made no reply, but, taking out a drawer from a table in the room, containing some knives, he picked up one of them and instantly stabbed Deakin to the heart. Deakin died almost immediately, and Leach was given in charge to the county police.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY

The Incumbered Estates (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed.

The Army Service Bill went through Committee pro formâ, it being stated, on the part of the Government, that a future day would be appointed for the recommittal; and, in the meantime, the alterations which had been suggested would be considered.

THE LAW OF LANDLORD AND TENANT IN IRELAND.

The Marquis of WESTMEATH moved a resolution, declaring that the existing law of Landlord and Tenant in Ireland required immediate revision and amendment. He stated various anomalies which existed in the present law, particularly as regarded ejectment. For instance, in Ireland, if a landlord wished to get rid of a tenant, he must first ascertain the name and description of every one who happened to be on the land in question; and he defied any one to possess himself of this information except by inspiration; and, besides this, the service of notices might be defeated; and if the commencement of the tenancy was uncertain, it was necessary that the notice should run twelve months. The difficulty of proving the tenancy was, in short, sometimes so great that it became necessary to take means for enforcing a distress merely for that purpose. The noble Marquis cited a number of cases to show the very defective state of the law as regarded the protection of the rights of landowners in Ireland, and the variety of ways in which those rights might be defeated

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE hoped their Lordships would not agree to an abstract motion such as that of the noble Marquis, which condemned the existing system without venturing to lay down a remedy for its defects. There was a bill in the other House of Parliament which proposed to alter the law of Landlord and Tenant in Ireland, and if that bill should reach their Lordships' House there would be an opportunity of considering the subject practically, and making such amendments in the law as to the wisdom of Parliament might seem proper. He did not wish to give the matter a direct negative, and would therefore move, as an amendment, that the orders of the day be then read.

Upon this statement, the Marquis of WESTMEATH withdrew his resolution, and the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. MONDAY.

THE STATE OF PORTUGAL.—In answer to questions from Mr. Borthwick, Lord PALMERSTON stated that the state of things in Portugal was not such that the Treaty of the Quadruple Alliance was applicable to them; and that it was the desire of the British Government to be instrumental in bringing about a pacification, or accommodation, between the contending parties in Portugal; and that no efforts would be neglected to bring about that accommodation

THIRD READING OF THE FACTORIES BILL

On the motion that the Factories Bill be read a third time,

MR. TRELAWNY said he was opposed to the bill in toto, and would move that it be read a third time that day six months.

MR. LABOUCHERE seconded the motion

MR. GRIMSDITCH supported the bill as it stood.

MR. LABOUCHERE viewed the measure with great apprehension, believing it would be the occasion of discord and controversy between the employers and the employed, and the occasion of incalculable mischief before the nature of its operation could become known. He would oppose the third reading of the bill language.

MR. STANSFIELD also opposed the bill, as being of a dangerous character, more particularly to small manufacturers.

After some arguments from Mr. HUME against the measure,

The House divided

For the third reading	.. ..	151
Against it ..	.. ..	88
Majority ..	.. ..	—63

The bill was read a third time and passed.

On LORD MORPETH to go into a Committee of Supply, Lord J. MANNERS moved for a return of all money paid to Prussia by Great Britain on account of the interest of the Greek Loan up to the 1st of January, 1847. The noble Lord again brought the condition of Greece before the House. Lord PALMERSTON made no objection to the return. The noble Lord expressed his regret that the benevolent intentions of the Three Powers in establishing the independence of Greece had not been more fully realised. The internal condition of that Kingdom was certainly most deplorable. Pecullion was chargeable against the Ministers of the Crown, and corruption against the representatives of the people. Violence and acts of various atrocity had been committed by the officers of the Government, and even worse had been inflicted. Some arrangement should be entered into, and the public accounts were falsified, in order to prevent the guaranteeing Powers from claiming any surplus. England had paid about £200,000 to make up for the deficiency in the interests of Greece required it, under existing circumstances it became the duty of the British Government to insist upon the Greek Government paying the interest on the Greek debt. He was pleased that a struggle had been made in Athens for a French supremacy in the affairs of Greece; but he could not comprehend what benefit such a supremacy would confer on France. England had no desire to establish any exclusive or overwhelming influence in Athens; all she desired was to uphold the independence of Greece and her own honour. After a few remarks from Sir R. Ingils, Sir J. Hanmer, Dr. Bowring, Mr. Borthwick, and Mr Hume, the motion was withdrawn.

THE RAILWAYS, PIERS, AND HARBOURS (IRELAND) BILL.—On the motion that the report on the Railways, Piers, and Harbours Bill be received, Mr. HUME and Mr. WILLIAMS severally expressed their disapprobation of the vote; while, on the other hand, Mr. HUDSON said that the Government had at last taken a step in the right direction, and would find that this was the best measure for Ireland it had brought forward during the session. The report was then brought up and received COMMITTEE OF SUPPLY.

THE NEW HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT.—The House having resolved into Committee of Supply, a vote of £17,709 was proposed for the temporary Hon es of Parliament. This gave rise to an interesting discussion respecting the new Houses

MR HUME wished to know when the House might expect a detailed account of these expenses, and also when they were likely to get into their new House.

(Laughter.)

Viscount MORPETH would use all diligence respecting the accounts, but could make no promise respecting the new building. (Laughter.)

Dr. BOWRING hoped that some such steps as had expedited the House of Lords, should be tried by the Commons, to get the apartment intended for their de berations completed.

Mr. GOULBURN said that the hon. gentleman that there was an obvious reason why the new House for the Lords had been finished before that for the Commons, in the fact that, very much to their own inconvenience, the Lords had given up their chamber to the Commons, putting up themselves with an apartment wholly inadequate for the purposes of their duties. He thought it much more desirable that the works should go on progressively, than that, by being hurried, they should, as would probably be the case, afterwards find it necessary to incur great expen-e in alterations. The Commons, too, it should be remembered, were not suffering inconvenience by the delay.

Mr. FOCKETT expressed a hope that some understanding had at length been come to between the architect and the Speaker as to the accommodation of the new building, in order that all further delay on that ground might be avoided. He conceived that the House of Commons would be rather gainers than otherwise by the House of Lords having the start of them, as the architect, benefiting by his experience of that House, would, no doubt, by avoiding such elaborate decoration, provide a chamber for the Commons better calculated for hearing. (Hear)

Lord MORPETH said the satisfactory thinking of the questions in dispute between Mr. Barry and Dr. Reid, exhibited more favourable symptoms of an amicable adjustment than they had hitherto done. (Hear, and a laugh.)

Mr. P. BORTHWICK considered that the Lords' case as well adapted for the purposes of sound as any building he knew. The vote was agreed to.

On the proposed vote of £150,000 for the New Houses of Parliament,

Mr. HUME complained of the enormous sum of money having been expended in the decorations of the new House of Lords. He had no objection to such new so generally prevailed, was going on that the [illegible] should prevail in the completion of the other parts [illegible] the original estimate, which, according to the [illegible], was to have been £700,000, and to the amount of £1,035,000 [illegible] these new Houses would be upwards of £2,000,000 He wished to know whether plans and estimates had been given in [illegible] of the cost of [illegible] the new Houses, or whether he—like [illegible] Commons—was to [illegible] for his glorification—was to be allowed to [illegible]

Lord MORPETH conceived that Mr. Barry and Dr. Reid, to whom the House had left some discretion, would together arrange the plan, and that it would be carried out

Mr. PROTHEROE deprecated the style of architecture adopted in the new building, which he thought altogether unsuitable, and at the same time most expensive; but defended Mr. Barry from the charge of consulting only his own glorification

Mr. HUME, with regard to the style, observed that the Committee of taste, with two exceptions only, were unanimous in favour of that which had been adopted; but Mr. Barry had pledged himself that he could carry out the whole work for £700,000. In this matter the Woods and Forests were to blame, as they were the parties who should have exercised control over the architect; but, having sanctioned the innumerable deviations from the original plan, they found themselves unpleasable. He was sorry to say that, notwithstanding the enormous expenditure, the building would be unsuitable, both externally and internally, for the purposes for which it was designed. There was only one point from which the sun could penetrate to the new house: that was the south west, and there it was to be shut out by the enormous and useless Victoria Tower He wished to know what was to be done as to the ventilating and warming should Mr. Barry and Dr. Reid again disagree?

Lord MORPETH, with regard to the estimate, believed Mr. Barry's original estimate referred to the building, exclusive of the internal decorations. The Woods and Forests had nothing to do with decoding upon those decorations; all they had to do in the matter was to check the accounts, and order the money to be paid. As to the ventilation, he had directed Dr. Reid to prepare detailed plans which he had submitted to the architect, and he hoped there would be no difficulty in carrying them out. It was unfortunate, no doubt, that a concurrent control had been given on this subject to two persons (Sear); but he had done his best to obviate the inconvenience arising therefrom. (Hear).

Mr Escott hoped there would not be that enormous quantity of gilding and painting in the new House of Commons as disfigured the House of Lords.

Lord MORPETH replied that all the other parts of the new building would be finished in a much plainer style, and without gilding altogether.

The vote was agreed to.

NEW POOR-LAW BILL.

Sir G. GREY, in moving for leave to bring in a bill to amend the laws relating to the administration of the law for the relief of the poor in England, explained that the object of his bill was confined to the administration of the laws and to the constitution of the body which should have the duty of administering them. Although it was not intended to continue the Poor-Law Commission, yet it was quite impossible to dispense with some general authority. Without a central general authority, to guard against the evils which, under the former system, had threatened to pauperise the whole country, it would be impossible to proceed with any safety, and it was, therefore, proposed to have a combination of a local administration, together with a general central authority, subject to a direct responsibility to Parliament. In order to effect this, it was provided in the bill that the powers of the Poor-Law Commissioners should cease that the Crown should have the power of appointing a new Commission, and that it should be appointed on the plan of the Board of Control which superintended the affairs of India. The Board should consist of the President of the Board, who should be responsible for the administration of the law, and with him there would be associated persons holding high offices in the Government, who would be ex officio members of the Board. Those persons would be the President of the Council, the Lord Privy Seal, one of the Secretaries of State, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer. It was intended that there should be two secretaries to the Board, one of whom, as well as the President, should be eligible to a seat in Parliament, though it would not be indispensable that both should sit in the same House. In addition to these changes in the Board itself, several changes were also proposed in the mode in which the new Board was to exercise its functions, surrounding its operations with the most stringent precautions, and having all its reports made to the Crown, and subsequently laid before Parliament. It was also intended to increase the number of Inspectors (who would have to perform the duties of Assistant-Commissioners) to twelve; and, finally, it was proposed that the Commission should last for five years, at the close of which period the whole subject must again be brought under the consideration of Parliament.

Mr. FERRAND announced his intention of offering his decided opposition to the bill.

A long conversation arose upon the subject, and leave was then given to bring in the bill.

The House adjourned at a quarter past twelve.

HOUSE OF LORDS TUESDAY.

The FACTORY BILL was read a first time, and ordered for a second reading on Monday the 17th instant

SQUADRON OF EVOLUTION.—The Earl of ACKLAND stated, in reply to a question put to him by the Earl of HARDWICKE, that he hoped, in the course of this summer, to have a naval squadron of evolution in the channel and in the Mediterranean, for the instruction of the officers and the exercise of the fleet.—The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH thought the realisation of the hope would depend upon the continuance or release of the ships now stationed at Lisbon and Athens. It appeared to him that the presence of our ships in the Tagus had postponed the settlement of the affairs of Portugal; and he considered that it was worth observing that if the fleet at Athens were intended as a demonstration merely, another demonstration, and of a superior force, was there also made on the part of France. —The Marquis of LANSDOWNE refused to discuss subjects, without due notice, that involved the question of the right of interference with foreign nations. The interference that had taken place on the part of England in Portugal and Greece, he would, at the proper time, be ready to prove was based on the soundest principles of impartiality and justice.

THE MONETARY CRISIS.—Lord WHARNCLIFFE put some questions in reference to the agitation in the money market. He wished to know whether there had been any applications to the Bank of England by the Government for advances from the former beyond the usual amount required upon deficiency bills for the current public service, during the latter half of the year 1846 and down to the present period.—The Marquis of LANSDOWNE answered that, beyond the mere formal correspondence which at all times took place between the Government and the Bank of England, no correspondence had passed between them during the period referred to by the noble Lord. The Chancellor of the Exchequer had had, during the last quarter, personal communications with the Bank upon that subject, but none of the communications between them had taken the shape of a written correspondence. In the course of these communications, the Bank had been uniformly apprised of the amounts of the demands which the Government would have on them those amounts not exceeding the amounts of ordinary years. With respect to the excess of the securities in the Bank, of which so much had been said, he wished to observe that it had been an excess of private securities much more than of securities belonging to the Government.

LANDED PROPERTY (IRELAND) BILL. The Marquis of LANSDOWNE moved that their Lordships should resolve themselves into Committee upon the Landed Property (Ireland) Bill.—The Duke of WELLINGTON said, he looked upon this bill and the Incumbered Estates (Ireland) Bill as the most valuable measures which had been brought forward during the present session. He should, however, move a clause in Committee, to compel the landlords availing themselves of the bill, under the bill, to pay those whom they might employ in actual money, and not in land, as was too often the case, which, in his opinion, was a most serious evil The bill went through Committee, and the House adjourned till Thursday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. TUESDAY.

The second reading of the Dublin Improvement Bill was rejected on a division by 120 to 108.

NEW POOR-LAW BILL.—Mr. FERRAND gave notice, that, on the order of the day being read for the second reading of the new Poor Law Bill, he would move, as an amendment, that it be read on that day six months.

PARLIAMENTARY ELECTORS BILL.—Lord J. RUSSELL gave notice that on May 18th he would move for leave to bring in a bill to regulate the rates and taxes payable by Parliamentary electors.

The remainder of the business was of a miscellaneous character.

Lord J. RUSSELL postponed the Dublin Bill to Friday, the 14th inst., and gave notice that he would bring it on the first thing that day.

Mr. T. DUNCOMBE moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the operation of the Metropolitan Buildings Act. Mr. MORPETH moved, as an amendment, for leave to bring in a bill to amend the Metropolitan Buildings Act.—Mr. DUNCOMBE consequently allowed his motion to be negatived, and leave was given to Lord Morpeth to bring in his bill.

Mr. WATSON moved for a Select Committee to inquire and report upon the taxation to which suitors in law and equity are subjected by the collection of fees. The ATTORNEY-GENERAL made no objection, and the Committee was agreed to

On the motion for the appointment of the Committee on the removal of Smithfield Market, a discussion took place, and the gallery was cleared for a division, but forty members not being present, the House was adjourned at a quarter before eight o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

The House met to-day at twelve, and sat till six

THE REGISTRATION OF VOTERS.—Mr. WALPOLE moved the second reading of the Registration of Voters Bill; the object of which is to give greater facilities for the registration of bona fide electors, and to prevent the vexatious objections frequently made to those who apply to be placed on the registry.—Sir G. GREY expressed his approval of several of the provisions of the bill, and considered some measure on the subject desirable. Several Hon Members offered suggestions, and the bill was read a second time.

THE HOSIERY MANUFACTURE BILL.—Sir HENRY HALFORD moved the second reading of the Hosiery Manufacture Bill, the chief object of which is to abolish frame-rent, and protect the operatives from the many abuses of the middlemen. The Hon. Baronet explained, at considerable length, the principles and provisions of the bill, and proposed the second reading, with the intention of referring it to a Select Committee to determine its details. Mr. WYNNE ELLIS opposed the bill, as quite unnecessary; and objected to the proposals to refer it to a Select Committee, on the ground that such a course would mislead the operatives, and persuade them that they had obtained a triumph over their masters. The Hon. Member moved, as an amendment, that the bill be read a second time that day six months. Mr. GISBORNE thought it would be impracticable to legislate for such an object as the hon. Baronet had in view. The debate upon the bill was adjourned.

The other business was unimportant.

Mr. WARLEY, at the request of Sir G. GREY, postponed to Monday next the second reading of his Medical Registration and Medical Law Amendment Bill; and gave notice that he would, after the second reading, propose that the bill be referred to a Select Committee.—Sir G. GREY said he had appointed Saturday to receive five deputations, who had objections to urge against the bill.

HOUSE OF LORDS. THURSDAY.

THE MONETARY CRISIS.

Lord BROUGHAM wished to know whether any steps had been taken with reference to a petition that had been presented, calling attention to the present state of the Money Market. The pre-sure on the Money Market was exercising a most injurious influence, in Lancashire and the West Riding of Yorkshire particularly. Very large orders had come from America, but the scarcity of money and the necessity for paying the wages of operatives in ready money, had rendered it impossible that these demands could be supplied, and the mills were stopped while large orders remained unfulfilled.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE said he had communicated with various persons in the City on the subject to which the noble Lord had called attention, but he was not prepared to say what were the results of the communications he had received.

After some observations from Lord ASHBURTON,

Earl FORTESCUE said he thought that it would be very wrong to attribute the present commercial evils that affected the country to one cause, or to suppose that the recent mania for railway speculation was, by any means, the principal cause.

Lord BROUGHAM agreed with the noble Lord, although he was of opinion that, among other causes, the rashness with which railroad speculations had been carried on a short time ago had had its influence in bringing about evils which now pressed so heavily on the commercial, and, in fact, on all classes of the community.

POOR-LAW RELIEF BILL.

On the order of the day for going into Committee upon this bill being read,

Lord ROBERTS rose and said that he had mistaken the purport of the bill: it did not give a positive right to relief; it merely conferred large powers on the Commissioners. It would create a great revolution in property in Ireland.

Lord MONTEAGLE then moved the amendment of which he had given notice, limiting the operation of the relief clauses of the bill to one year

The amendment was supported by several Irish Peers, and, though strongly opposed by Earl Grey and the Marquis of Lansdowne, was carried against the Government on a division, by 63 against 50

Their Lordships adjourned at Half-past Twelve.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. THURSDAY.

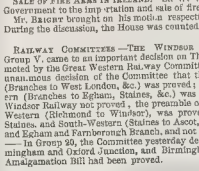
SALE OF FIRE ARMS IN IRELAND. Sir W. VERNER called the attention of the Government to the importation and sale of fire-arms in Ireland

Mr. BRIGHT brought on his motion respecting the growth of cotton in India. During the discussion, the House was counted out.

RAILWAY COMMITTEES.—THE WINDSOR RAILWAY. The Committee on Group V. came to an important decision on Thursday, in regard to the bills promoted by the Great Western Railway Committee. The Chairman announced the unanimous decision of the Committee that the preamble of the Great Western (Branches to West London, &c.) was proved; the preamble of the Great Western (Branches to Egham, Staines, &c.) was not proved; the preamble of the Windsor Railway not proved, the preamble of the Windsor, Staines, and South-Western (Richmond to Windsor), was proved; the preamble of the Windsor, Staines, and South-Western (Staines to Ascot, &c.), proved only for the Staines and Egham and Farnborough Branch, and not proved for the Wokingham Branch —In Group 20, the Committee yesterday decided that the preamble of the Birmingham and Oxford Junction, and Birmingham, Dudley, and Wolverhampton, Amalgamation Bill had been proved.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

HENRY, LORD COWLEY, G.C.B.



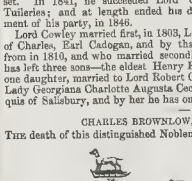
THE distinguished diplomatist died at Paris, on the 27th ult. He was youngest brother of the Duke of Wellington, being fifth son of Garret, the Earl of Mornington, by Anne, his wife, daughter of Arthur, Viscount Dungannon. At the period of his decease, he had completed his 74th year. His official career commenced in the Foreign Office, where he remained, as a precis-writer, nearly two years. In 1797, he accompanied the Embassy of Lord Malmesbury to Lille, and, within a few months after, went to India in the capacity of Private Secretary to his brother, the Governor General, being nominated, within a brief period, one of the Commissioners in Mysore. He subsequently rendered important service to his country as Lieutenant Governor of the Provinces of Oude; but our limits prevent the possibility of following the details of his Eastern career. On his return to England, he obtained a seat in Parliament for the borough of Eye, and was nominated one of the Secretaries to the Treasury.

Soon after, his diplomatic abilities first found employment in Europe. In 1809, he became British Envoy at the Court of Madrid, and for a lengthened period—the most eventful in the annals of Spain distinguished himself by the exercise of consummate skill, and the achievement of greater diplomatic triumphs than could be supplied from a chapter of equal extent in the life of almost any British Envoy of the nineteenth century. In 1823, Sir Henry Wellesley arrived at Vienna, as Ambassador to the Emperor of Austria, and remained there until 1828, when he was created Baron Cowley of Wellesley, county Somerset. In 1841, he succeeded Lord Granville at the Court of the Tuileries; and at length ended his diplomatic services, on the retirement of his party, in 1846.

Lord Cowley married first, in 1803, Lady Charlotte Cadogan, daughter of Charles, Earl Cadogan, and by that lady (whom he was divorced from in 1810, and who married secondly the Marquis of Anglesey) he has left three sons—the eldest Henry Richard, now Lord Cowley—and one daughter, married to Lord Robert Grosvenor. His second wife was Lady Georgiana Charlotte Augusta Cecil, third daughter of James, first Marquis of Salisbury, and by her he has one daughter.

CHARLES BROWNLOW, LORD LURGAN

THE death of this distinguished Nobleman is deeply felt in his unhappy country. A Christian in the highest acceptation of the term, a kind and considerate landlord, the munificent patron of every institution having for its object the good and happiness of his fellow man, his Lordship could ill be spared at the present moment of national suffering. His whole life was one of usefulness. Under his auspices, Lurgan rose to be the important and flourishing town it now is, and to his devoted zeal and unbounded liberality, it is chiefly owing that the Province of Ulster possesses the establishment for the education of the Deaf, the Dumb, and the Blind, than the most valuable of all the public charities which so creditably distinguish the north of Ireland.



At the outset of his political career, the deceased Nobleman belonged to the Ultra-Tory party; but, during the agitation on Catholic Emancipation, he became a convert to religious toleration, and thenceforward adopted moderate Whig principles. By Lord Melbourne's Administration, he was raised in 1839 to the Peerage, as Baron Lurgan.

The family from which his Lordship derived was established in Ireland by Sir William Brownlow, Knt., a native of Derbyshire, who was appointed, in 1628, a patent and grant of lands in the County of Armagh, in which he was succeeded at his decease by his grandson, Arthur Chamberlain, Esq., who assumed the surname and arms of Brownlow. The latter's grandson, the Right Hon William Brownlow, of Lurgan, represented the County of Armagh in Parliament, and was long one of the leading Commoners of the Sister Kingdom. By Judith Letitia, his first wife, daughter of Dean Meredyth, he was father of Lieut.-Colonel Charles Brownlow, of Lurgan, who married Caroline, daughter and coheir of Benjamin Ashe, Esq., of Bath; and left, at his decease in 1822, a son and successor, the noble Lord whose death it is our painful duty to record. That melancholy event—the effect of an attack of typhus fever —took place on the 30th ult., at Brownlow House. His Lordship had just completed his 52nd year. He married, first, in 1822, Mary, daughter of John, fourth Earl of Darnley, but that lady died in the following year, leaving an only child, Mary Elizabeth. His Lordship's second wife was Jane, daughter of Roderick Macneil, Esq., of Barra, and by her he leaves two sons and one daughter; the elder of the former, Charles, being now Lord Lurgan.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS IN THE METROPOLIS.—The total number of births that took place last week in the district within the bills of mortality was 1267, of which 632 were male, and 634 female. This shows a decrease in the number of births, as compared with the previous week, of 150. The number of deaths was 963—503 male and 480 female, being two deaths more than the previous week, and 69 more than the average for the last five springs.

MODEL LODGING-HOUSES.—On Wednesday, one of these excellent institutions was opened at Charles-street, Old Gravel-lane, near the London Docks. The building was originally an extensive sugar bakery, and at present only the ground basement, capable of accommodating about fifty individuals, is opened. The principal object of the establishment is to afford cleanly lodging to the labouring classes, the charge being only threepence for each individual per night. There are refreshment and reading-rooms attached, and the whole place is thoroughly warmed and ventilated. No spirituous liquors, unless medicinally prescribed, are allowed on the premises. When completed, the building, which is six stories high, will be capable of accommodating upwards of 600 individuals.

STATE OF TRADE AT MANCHESTER.—The Times, in its report of the state of trade at Manchester on Tuesday, says:—"There is certainly no evidence to-day to confirm the notion of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, viz., that the worst has passed; it is rather thought by many that the worst has yet to come. Indeed, the means of the most wealthy are now scarcely available. How long is this suicidal and monstrous state of things to exist? Till the starving masses, whose present portentous quietude is like the calm which precedes the storm, burst forth in open insurrection? The misery and destitution which are extending in these districts are beyond belief; and the number of mills closed, or only partially worked, daily increases. Meantime, food of all kinds continues to advance. The prospect of the future is appalling."

EPITOME OF NEWS.—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The Keymer branch of the Brighton Railway is fast approaching completion. An engine has already made its way through the tunnel under Lewes.

The foundation of the first lock of the barrage of the Nile was laid at Alexandria on the 9th ult. by his Highness Mehemet Ali with considerable pomp. A general salute of artillery concluded the ceremony; 70 bulls were slaughtered and given to the workmen, and a large quantity of rice and 2000 sheep were distributed amongst the poor. The work will cost an immense deal of money. The prospect of the ensuing harvest in Egypt and Syria is very favourable.

The receiving houses in London are now kept open till six o'clock, p m., instead of till half-past five as hitherto, for the receipt of inland, foreign, colonial, or ship letters. After half-past five, payment of the fee of one penny will be required, either in coin or a stamp. Otherwise, such "late" letters will be detained till the next despatch.

A few days ago, as one of the gentlemen commoners of Winchester College was discussing a barrel of oysters with a friend, he was surprised on finding in his mouth something harder than the general nature of the oyster. It turned out to be a very large pearl, valued by a Winchester jeweller at 200 guineas. The jeweller affirmed that it was the largest he had ever seen.

All the inhabitants, about 1700 in number, of the village of Glenan, near Wolkenstein, in Saxony, have just abandoned the Lutheran for the German Catholic Church.

The Kendal and Windermere line of railway, which is 10 miles long, has just been opened for general traffic. It is essentially a pleasure-line, and the fares and number of trains will be fixed accordingly.

Letters from the Levant state that the British Minister had been charged to convey to the Greek Government the disapprobation with which the English Ministry viewed the conduct of Greece in the late affair with Turkey.

A fearful accident happened yesterday week at the Madeleine church, Bruges. One of the priests, while performing mass, was suddenly struck to the ground by the falling on his forehead of the marble head of an infant Jesus, which had become detached from its body. Fracture of the skull and a severe wound were the consequence to this unhappy clergyman, who, after lingering in great agony, died on the following day.

A vessel, arrived from Virginia, United States, has brought the very large quantity of 30,764 bushels of Indian corn, in addition to 100 bags of the same article, 535 barrels of flour, 59 barrels of peas, several of hams, and 999 barrels of corn meal.

A Paris paper says that a rumour prevails that Mehemet Ali, in imitation of the Emperor of Russia, has offered to exchange two millions sterling worth of corn against French Treasury Bonds.

The 2590th anniversary of the foundation of Rome was celebrated at that city on the 21st ult. by a grand banquet in the Grotte di Pite, which was attended by about 800 citizens, of all classes and ages. After the repast speeches were made, verses recited, and national hymns sung. An immense concourse of people was assembled to witness the ceremony, at which the greatest order prevailed.

On Monday the branch line of the London and Brighton Coast Railway to Epsom was completed, and will be opened on Monday next to the public. This direct railway to Epsom is within 10 minutes' walk of the course.

The negroes of Antigua have subscribed out of their scanty resources the sum of £144 towards the relief of the distressed poor in Ireland

Baron Albert Nota, one of the most distinguished dramatists of Italy, died lately at Turin, aged 72

A letter from Altenburg, of the 24th ult., states that the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia arrived there with the Russian Ambassador at the Court of Dresden, and that on the following day the betrothal of the young Prince with the Princess Alexandra, youngest daughter of the reigning Duke, took place.

By letters from Russia we learn that two General Officers and twelve Colonels have been committed for trial on the charge of having embezzled monies destined for the service of the military hospitals.

The Prussian Diet, in the sitting of the 27th ult., adopted two important resolutions. It voted first, that the exportation of potatoes should not be allowed, and next, that they should not be employed in the distillation of brandies or spirits

In order to diminish in some degree the consumption of bread, or rather to make it go further, the Saxon Government has forbidden new bread to be sold in all its dominions.

The Archbishop of Bologna died on the 25th ult., announce that the Pope had sanctioned the principle of the establishment of national guards throughout the pontifical dominions, and that a decree to that effect would be shortly published by his Holiness

M. Labedoff has published at St. Petersburg a work relating to the six first years of the reign of the Emperor Nicholas. Hardly, however, had the work appeared than it was seized by the police, although written in the most laudatory language towards his Imperial Majesty, and the author himself was imprisoned as being guilty of having infringed the law, which ordains that all writings treating of the reigning Sovereign must, before publication, be submitted to the Minister of the Court.

Our files of Continental papers show, that there have been riots from the dearness of food at a great many Continental towns. At Stettin, a group, consisting principally of women and children of the lowest class, surrounded the bakers with potatoes, after which the mob proceeded to attack the bakers' shops, from which they carried off whatever they could lay their hands upon. The military restored order. At Frankfort-on-the-Oder, disturbances of the same kind have occurred. The accounts from all the principal markets of Germany are lamentable. In all directions famine prevails. A crowd of persons at Nuremburg had likewise been the theatre of great tumults. A crowd of persons having assembled on the demolition of the house of a corn merchant, they were fired upon by the troops. The result was, that several persons were wounded. There have also been food riots at Bernburg, and at Schöningen, in Brunswick.

The following notice was issued on Wednesday in the Underwriters' Rooms, Liverpool.—"Steamers landing from Ireland, which take passengers, will have to proceed to the quarantine ground, to be inspected by the medical officer in charge, and any of them suffering from fever, or other contagious disease, will be removed to the lazaretto."

Prince Scipio Gaspard Borghese, Duke de Salviati, son of the Prince and Princess Aldobrandini, is to be shortly married to Mdlle. Isabelle de Fitzjames, daughter of the Duke de Fitzjames.

An Imperial manifesto, dated 27th September, April 24, announces that the Princess Maria Alexandrowna, wife of the heir apparent, was delivered of a son on the 22nd. The child's name is Wladimir; his title, "Imperial Highness."

Alderman Humphery has placed his presentation to Christ's Hospital in the hands of the Common Council of his ward, which is Aldgate, with instructions to give it to the poorest and most deserving family in the ward who have a boy eligible for presentation

A letter from Vienna, of the 27th ult., again speaks of the rumour of the marriage of the Archduke Albert as Viceroy of Galicia, and adds that he is to reside at Cracow. The same letter states that the Emperor and Empress of Austria are to proceed to Cracow to receive the homage of the country at the ancient palace. Prince de Metternich, it is said, is to accompany his Sovereign on this occasion

On the night of the 26th ultimo forty-eight houses of Serigny, a village near Tonnere, in the department of Yonne (France), were entirely destroyed by fire, caused, it is believed, by an incendiary.

The Directors of the London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway, have decided on abandoning the atmospheric system on the Croydon line.

The sales of wheat in the markets which government use for the purpose of ascertaining the increased last week, viz., from 98,632 to 128,221 qrs., but there was a reduction of 4000 qrs. in the quantity of barley sold, and of 2000 qrs. in that of oats.

On Good Friday an interesting ceremony was performed at the chapel of the English Consulate at Jerusalem. The Bishop, assisted by his Chaplain and two Missionary Clergymen, baptized five Jews; three men and two women. A considerable number of Englishmen were present; but the service was read in German by Dr. Nicolaysen and the Bishop.

The express train on the South Western Railway is about to be still further accelerated. It is found that the whole distance between Southampton and London (nearly 80 miles) can be regularly and safely done in an hour and three quarters.

The market town of Egri Szalonte (Hungary), which had already suffered severely by famine, with a population of 12,000 inhabitants, was destroyed by fire on the 17th of April, by a dreadful fire, which left only a fifth part of the town standing. The church of the Protestants, with its steeple and bell, the school, parsonage-house, the town-hall, the magazine of the country, with all the stores and all the principal buildings, are destroyed. It was not ascertained how many lives were lost.

The number of passengers between England and Boulogne last week was 1070; of these, 524 were from England to Boulogne, and 546 from Boulogne to England. Of the 524 from England, 400 were from Folkestone, 43 from Dover, and 81 direct from London. Of the 546 from Boulogne, 388 went to Folkestone, 52 to Dover, and 78 direct to London. The total (1070) only a fifth number returned for the corresponding week last year, by 4. The number of passengers to and from Calais was 260, being 12 more than the corresponding week last year.

The Chinese Repository gives an account, which could hardly be credited had we not positive proofs of the density of the population of the Chinese empire. A civil war, or rather feud, lately took place between the two neighbouring departments of Chang-Chow and Chewer Chao, in the province of Gokien, in which 24,515 houses and 668 huts were pillaged and burnt to the ground, and 130,638 persons killed or wounded. It appears that wars of this nature are of frequent occurrence in the interior of this country, without the Government caring to interfere.

THE CASTLE OF SAN JUAN D' ULLOA, AND CITY OF VERA CRUZ.

MEXICO.—CAPTURE OF VERA CRUZ AND SAN JUAN DE ULLOA.

THE New York Journal of Commerce, of the 16th ult., contains an article which leaves no doubt of the correctness of the report of the capture of Vera Cruz and the Castle of San Juan de Ulloa by the American force under General Scott, though, in the absence of the intermediate papers between the 7th, the latest previous date, and the 16th ult., we are unable to furnish our readers with any details of the operation in question. The loss on the side of the Mexicans is estimated at 1000 men, while the Americans are said to have had only 15 killed and 50 wounded.

The Journal of Commerce states:—"On the first day of the present month (April) we published the first authentic intelligence of the battle of Buena Vista, in which General Taylor, with [illegible] men, defeated Santa Anna, with [illegible]. Since that date, we have announced the recapture of Los Angeles, which had risen against the new authorities in California, and the re-establishment of American rule throughout that territory. Also, the defeat and dispersion of the insurgents in New Mexico. Also, the unconditional surrender of Vera Cruz and the Castle of San Juan de Ulloa, with 4000 troops, to the American forces under General Scott. And lastly, the capture of Chihuahua, capital of the state of the same name, by a force under Colonel Doniphan. Such a succession of victories (two of them most important) is something new in our annals, and, it is to be hoped, may lead the Mexican Government, if there be such a Government, to treat for peace."

Vera Cruz is the most important commercial town of the United Mexican States, lying on the south-western shore of the southern part of the Gulf of Mexico. Opposite the town, at the western extremity of the largest shoal, is a rocky island, on which is built the fortress of San Juan de Ulloa; the strait between which and the town is less than 200 yards wide.

The town is built on a level and arid shore, and is inclosed by walls, and the houses are built of a porous white coral, which composes the cliffs on the coast.

The fortress is of extraordinary strength, and the island on which it is built was visited for the first time by Europeans, under the command of Juan de Grixalva, in 1518; and in the following year Coster landed his army at the place where the town now stands. For a considerable period after Vera Cruz fell through the Spanish arms, the castle of San Juan de Ulloa continued in the possession of the Spaniards. During this interval, the commerce of Vera Cruz was almost entirely transferred to the port of Alvarado, twelve miles to the south-east.

HORSES STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

THE Illustration represents a fearful accident which happened, a few days since, to two of the horses of Mr. Thomas Dawson, the trainer, at Middleham Moor, in the North Riding of Yorkshire. It appears that as a string of horses were returning from exercise on the Moor to the adjacent stables, they were overtaken by a violent storm of thunder and lightning; flash upon flash followed in rapid succession, and in another moment the two rearmost animals (Little Nell and Curiosity) were struck dead, as was also one of the attendant boys; the other succeeded in disengaging himself from the stricken animal as it fell, and thus escaped. The clothes of the poor boy who was killed were torn from his body, which showed no other mark than a small blue puncture and spot on either side of the thigh, where the lightning had entered. Mr. Dawson's lad was at the same time carried off, though he escaped any further personal harm than a shock to the nervous system, which has caused him to keep his bed for several days. The scene of confusion that ensued was frightful—the lads throwing themselves from the horses in terror, and leaving them to gallop wildly over the moor.

NEW ENGINE ON THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY.—Saturday last was selected as the day for a new engine on this railway, called the Iron Duke, to make its first [illegible] on the Great Western Railway, between Wootton Basset and London, which it did with the ordinary train that arrives at Paddington station at 8 o'clock a.m. The engine in question has eight wheels, of which the driving wheels [illegible] feet diameter, the [illegible] feet [illegible] inches. It started from Swindon with [illegible] carriages, at [illegible] past ten o'clock, and [illegible] at a average speed of [illegible] miles. At Reading it got an additional load, making a gross total of 130 tons, with which it acquired a maximum rate of 54½ miles, the last quarter of which was at the rate of 56 miles an hour. In the course of the journey one of the eccentrics got out of order, which, occasioned a delay of [illegible] at Maidenhead, and a slight delay at Slough, which with a [illegible] at Reading [illegible] minutes. The average speed acquired between Swindon and London throughout the entire run, taking the above facts into consideration, was 53 miles an hour.

HORSES STRUCK BY LIGHTNING ON MIDDLEHAM MOOR.

THE NEW HOUSE OF LORDS.

(Continued from page 282.)

THE THRONE.

We this week illustrate the gorgeous Throne and Canopy in the House of Lords, and our illustration gives a faithful portraiture of its general form and details; yet both illustration and description can convey but a feeble idea of the golden glories of this most exquisite marvel of art. The intricacy, variety, and appropriateness of its decoration are so wonderful, that many visits to the House must be taken before they are all detected, and every visit will excite still greater admiration at the genius displayed in the design and enrichments of the Throne and its towering Canopy.

The Throne is elevated on steps, the central portion having three, and the sides two steps, covered with a carpet of the richest velvet pile. The ground colour of the carpet is a bright scarlet, and the pattern on it consists of roses and lions, alternately. A gold-coloured fringe borders the carpet.

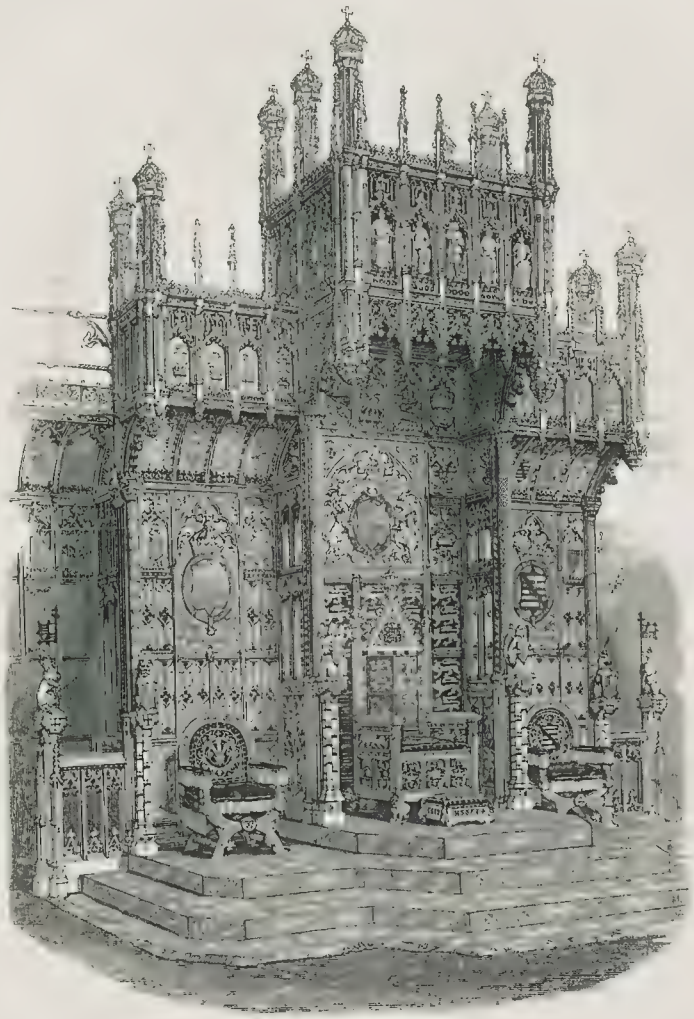
The Canopy to the Throne is divided into three compartments; the central one, much loftier than the others, for her Majesty, that on the right hand for the Prince of Wales, and that on the left for Prince Albert. The back of the central compartment is panelled in the most exquisite manner. The three lowest tiers have the lions passant of England, carved and gilded, on a red ground, and above them, in a wide panel, arched, and enriched with quatrefoiling, are the Royal Arms of England, surrounded by the Garter, with its supporters, helmet and crest, and an elaborate mantling forming a rich and varied background. The motto, "Dieu et Mon Droit," is on a horizontal band of a deep blue tint. In small panels, traceried, parallel with the large arched one, are roses, shamrocks, and thistles, clustered together, and crowned; and above them, in double arched panels, the Royal monogram, crowned and interwoven by a cord, are introduced. In a string course immediately above, "Dieu et Mon Droit" is repeated, in perforated letters, and an exquisite brattishing of Greek crosses and fleurs-de-lis crests it. Above the brattishing is a series of five panels, with ogee arches, elaborately traceried, in them. The crests of England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, richly carved and gilded, fill the panels. The ceiling is flat, divided into many small squares, by ribs, having most delicately sculptured bosses at their intersections. In the centre, is the monogram V.R., surrounded by a border so beautifully designed and carved, that it defies all power of description. The flat surfaces of the ceiling are enriched by stars painted on them. As before mentioned, the overhanging canopy of the central division projects considerably before the sides, and is supported by spandrils rising from octagonal pillars, having small roses and fleurs-de-lis wrought in trellis-work, with the most exquisite delicacy and marvellousness of execution, upon their several sides. The capitals of these pillars are peculiarly beautiful, so excessively rich in design, having a coronal form, with floriated enrichments. The spandrils are enriched with quatrefoil tracery, and in their angles are representations of St. George and the Dragon, beautifully executed. The front of the canopy is divided into five deeply recessed niches, having ogee moulded arches, quatrefoiled; and, above them, between each niche, is an angular buttress, elaborately ornamented, rising from a foliaged pendant, and terminating in a crocketed pinnacle. A bold string course of rich trefoilage is under the niches, and beneath it, and springing from the before-mentioned pendants, are traceried ogee arches, having quatrefoils in their angles. In the base of each niche is a brattishing of perforated Tudor flower ornament. Above the niches is another string course of elaborate detail, and the whole is finished by a brattishing of exquisite lightness of design. In the niches, on pedestals with floriated capitals, are figures of knights armed cap-a-pie, that in the centre representing St. George vanquishing the Dragon, whilst those on either side hold shields, in form resembling those used in the tournament, on which are emblazoned the emblems of the Knightly Orders of the Garter, the Bath, Thistle, and St. Patrick. The angle buttresses of this canopy have most elaborate pendants, the lower parts, octagonal, being sculptured as coronals, and on the fronts and sides are animals, whence rise angular buttresses of similar pattern to those between the niches, and serving as flying buttresses, above the topmost brattishing, to sustain octangular shafts, with canopied heads, on the summit of which are open worked Royal crowns. The sides of the canopy have deeply sunken panels, enriched with shields of the arms of England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, most beautifully carved, painted, and gilded. Affixed to the pillars supporting the canopy, are octangular pedestals, ornamented with pastoflia, and having canopied and crocketed capitals, on the faces of which are shields charged with the escutcheons of England, Scotland, and Ireland. Upon these pedestals are statues of winged angels, sitting, and holding shields with the arms of England enamelled upon them.

The panelling at the sides, on either hand of the Chair of State, consists of two rows of open-worked arches, with elaborate tracery, and above them other panels filled with floriated enrichments of the most exuberant fancy.

The side compartments of the canopy are alike in general architectural detail, but differ in heraldic insignia, the one side having the symbols of the Prince of Wales, blended with the architectural features; whilst the other has those relating to Prince Albert. Both compartments are a little in advance of the arched cove to the Peeress' gallery; but, like it, they both have coves arching over, and gilded; pillars of rich foli-work are at the angles of the canopy, and, from their beautifully carved capitals, in graceful sweep, is the spandril to support the angle buttresses. Octagonal pedestals, of precisely the same form and ornamentation as those to the central compartment, are affixed to the lower parts of these pillars, having small shields painted on their fronts and sides, with the red cross of St. George. On the pedestal at the Prince of Wales's side, is a lion holding a shield, on which the arms of England are displayed; and on that at Prince Albert's, is an unicorn holding a shield similarly charged.

The paneling is alike in both compartments, the lowest row containing fanciful bands, with rich foliage interwoven; the second and third series quatrefoils; and the fourth richly traceried ogee arches. Within the quatrefoils F. W. and P. A., respectively, are carved and gilded, relieved by a deep blue background. The arches in the upper row have shields of arms helmeted and crested with Royal crowns. Tall arched panels, with foliage in the spandrils, display the armorial bearings of the Princes, in all their glory of gold and colours, surrounded by the Garter, and having crowns above them. Exquisitely rich mantlings twine in varied form about the shields, and the gilded surface of the background is diapered. On blue labels, under the arms, are the respective mottoes, "Ich Dien," and "True and Fast," in slightly raised letters. The same mottoes are introduced in the string courses above the panelling, and above them a brattishing of like character to that which is carried round the House. The arched coves are each divided into four panels by enriched ribs, the two central panels containing shields helmeted and mantled, in which, in the Prince of Wales's Canopy, are the armorial ensigns of the Principality, and the Royal Arms of England; and in Prince Albert's are the escutcheons of Saxe Coburg Gotha, and England, the two outer panels have lions and unicorns sitting, and holding banners displayed, on which are the triple ostrich feathers on an azure ground, and a red cross on a white ground, respectively. The fronts of the side compartments of the canopy are each divided into four panels, having richly-traceried ogee arches within them, embracing the ostrich plume of the Prince of Wales, and the plumed helmet of Prince Albert. Between the panels are slender angular buttresses, with pinnacles, elaborately carved, but of different design to the buttresses on the front of the Queen's canopy. The angle buttresses have exquisite coronal-like pendants, and are similar in arrangement to those described to the Queen's canopy, terminating also in shafts surmounted by crowns.

Trellage work, and elegant brattishing are not spared in the decorations, as may be seen by our illustration. Stretching out on either hand, are dwarf wings, having three open-worked arches within them, enriched by quatrefoil tracery, and other decorations, and, at their extremities, are octagonal pedestals, supported by buttresses, with crocketed pinnacles. The pedestals have canopied and groined capitals, on which are seated the Royal supporters, the lion and unicorn, holding standards, the shafts of which are of twisted brass, enamelled with the arms of England.

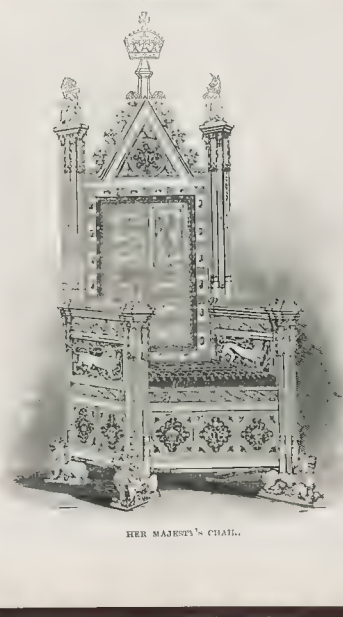


THE NEW THRONE.

THE CHAIRS OF STATE.

The Queen's Chair of State, or Throne, is particularly splendid in its enrichments. In general outline it is similar to the chair in which the Sovereigns of England have been wont to sit at their coronations, but in detail it differs widely from its plain prototype. The legs of the Chair, resting upon four lions couchant, have pinnacled buttresses on each side, those at the back being, of course, considerably higher than the front ones. The base of the Chair is deeply moulded, and in the front and back are three sunken panels containing quatrefoils, having crowns in their centres, with sprays of roses, shamrocks, and thistles radiating from them. In similar quatrefoiled panels at the sides the Royal monogram V. R. is repeated. On a broad bar below the seat is a rich border of roses amidst leaves. The arms of the Chair are boldly moulded, and in the sunken panels beneath them, in pierced work, are lions passant, surrounded by most elaborate trellage. On moulded capitals, above the pinnacles to the back legs, a lion and unicorn are seated holding scrolls. The back of the Chair is gabled, of lofty pitch; and within it, in a circle, is the exquisitely enamelled ornament, of eight points, we have selected for our initial letter. It represents the monogram V. R. entwined by a cord; whilst, from a circular border, eight trefoil-shaped sprays radiate into the quatrefoil mouldings of the points. The angles of the gables are floreated. On the exterior ridge of the gable eight sprigs of roses are sculptured, and form a bold crocketing, whilst from its apex rises an octagonal moulded stem to support a richly-decorated crown. A band herb parsley is the square part of the back of the Chair, on which are, at intervals, large and brilliant egg shaped pearls of rock crystal, and 1 pearls within quatrefoils enamelled. The Tudor flower varies the enrichments to the Throne in a peculiarly happy idea, as the effect, the sparkling brilliancy they impart, is most charming. Within this border are the Royal arms of England, worked in exquisite embroidery on velvet.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S CHAIR.



HER MAJESTY'S CHAIR.

PRINCE ALBERT'S CHAI

The State Chairs for the Prince of Wales and Prince Albert, are exactly alike in form and general details, the only variations being in the embroidery on the velvet backs, and in the monograms. The backs of the Chairs are circular-headed, and the legs are carved in the form known as the curule, or X-shaped, strengthened by bars. A most exquisite floriated pattern is carved round the back, and a similar one on the fronts of the legs, under which a boldly carved flower sprays out. Similar flowers are at the angles of intersections of the legs; and in the front is a richly-foliated circular boss, and where the shafts for the arms take their rise, circular bosses, enriched roses, are introduced. The sitting have moulded bases, and are enriched with carving in diamond wise. The bars between the legs have small quatrefoils carved on them, and on the rims round the back, &c., a similar pattern is introduced. The velvet backs are most magnificent specimens of embroidery, and in design command unqualified praise, elaborate ornament and appropriateness being so happily blended. We must describe the embroidery in the back of each Chair separately, and, of course, commence with that appertaining to the Prince of Wales

Within borders of gimp, secured by rose-headed nails, is a broad circle, containing semée roses, having at their points trefoils, this surrounds a narrow band of blue, ornamented with white spots, and within this are worked the Ostrich Plume of the Prince of Wales, issuing from a coronet, and having the motto "Ich Dien" beneath it. In circles on either side of the Plume are the letters P. W. respectively. Within the eight semicircles are worked alternately Greek roses and fleurs-de-lis, thus forming a regal coronal round the plume, and in the spandrils of the semicircles are quatrefoils. The cushion to the seat is of crimson velvet, and is richly embroidered.

Prince Albert's Chair has similar borders of gimp, and also a series of eight semicircles, within a broad border, terminating in trefoils; but the enrichments within these are of fleurs-de-lis only, thus forming a coronal of lily flowers, instead of lilies and crosses. Within this circle the arms of Prince Albert are worked on a shield, and, in circles at the sides of the latter, the letters P. A. are elegantly worked. The chairs were made by Messrs. Webb, of Bond-street.

As every portion of her Majesty's Throne, and the Chairs for the Princes, is gilded, some idea may be formed of their excessively splendid appearance; and standing as they do under a canopy of the richest design, glowing with gold and colours, they produce an effect absolutely bewildering, from its gorgeousness—and certainly no English Monarch ever sat upon a throne of such consummate magnificence as this prepared for her Majesty Queen Victoria.

The Footstool to the Queen's Throne is of oblong shape, about one foot four inches in length. It is supported by eight, having Parliaments on their under sides; and round its sides is a series of small sunken panels, having pierced quatrefoils within them, and a flat gilded to correspond to the Throne. The tops covered with the richest crimson velvet, and is gorgeously embroidered in gold. The pattern is a rose of eight leaves, with in a circular border, from whence small roses spray out towards the corners, and the whole is inclosed in a border, to the outer form of the footstool, of fleurs-de-lis, &c. The tassels are of crimson silk and gold thread.

In the enlarged representation we give of the Chairs of State, to show them more in detail, it will be perceived that the Chairs for the Prince of Wales and Prince Albert are too large in proportion to her Majesty's Throne; the reader will, therefore, bear in mind that it is only in the GENERAL view of Throne and Canopy that the relative proportions of the Chairs are preserved.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, May 9. Rogation Sunday. Fifth Sunday after Easter.
MONDAY, 10.—Length of Day, 16h. 16m.
TUESDAY, 11. No real night in Scotland
WEDNESDAY, 12. The day has increased 7h 37m. since the Shortest Day.
THURSDAY, 13. Holy Thursday. Ascension Day.—Old May Day.
FRIDAY, 14.—New Moon at 8h. 23m., p.m.
SATURDAY, 15. Day breaks at 3h. 6m.—Twilight ends at 10h. 47m.

The two bright planets Venus and Jupiter are still splendid objects during the evenings: the former planet, during this week, is crossing the Milky Way, and moving towards a point south of the two stars, Castor and Pollux. Mars and Saturn are near together, and may be seen near the eastern horizon, before sunrise.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE, FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAY 15.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. A. M.	M. A. M.	M. A. M.	M. A. M.	M. A. M.	M. A. M.	M. A. M.
h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.	h. m. h. m.
8 35 9 0	9 17 10 23	11 0 11 33	* *	0 30 0 54	1 20 1 44	2 10 2 30

* During Wednesday there will be only one time of high water, which will take place at noon.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Omega."—The last of the earl of English Navies per known is 1632; still, this could be by no means looked as a whole of general information, such as was established. Thus Sir Roger L'Estrange, in 1663 'The English Mercurie,' of 1588, to contain an account of the Spanish Armada in the British Channel, long believed to be the earliest English newspaper, and one of the British Museum curiosities, was, in 1839, discovered to be a forgery, "for the nonce." (See "Popular Errors," pp 238, 239.)

"M. B. W."—Consult a treatise on Odology

"Nachforscher," Peterborough, should appeal to the Income-Tax Commissioners of the District.

"Zeta" Friars and Wakes are of Saxon origin, and were first instituted in England by Alfred, A D. 885. Spelman.

"Viz Ascripter," Dudley, has the correct title of the work, to be had, by order, of any bookseller

"Vocalist," Worcestershire. Miss Lind's engagement at Her Majesty's Theatre is an item not to be in the season. The 'provincial tour' is improbable

"Lovelace," Worcester. "Taylor's Short-hand, improved by Harding,' 2*s. 6d.*

"H. H. J." is better consult a Solicitor

"T. T. G." will be done.

"H. A." Preston, is thanked for the hint; but, our present intention is to confine our very successful illustrations of the New House of Lords to this Journal.

"J. D. R." Bermondsey, Jones does not appear to have published any Supplement to his useful "Lessons on Chemistry."

"Akka," Chelsea. Palestine is 150 miles in length, north and south, and nearly as much in extreme breadth. At present, it forms a part of Syria, being included under the pachalics of Damascus, Akka, and Tripoli, and forming part of the viceroyalty of the Pacha of Egypt.

"K. B." Glasgow.—The 76th Exhibition of the Royal Academy opened at the "National Gallery," on Monday last; this being the tenth exhibition since the removal of the Academy from Somerset House.

"A Senior." Beckwenen and Vanderville are the most celebrated marine painters of the Dutch School. Berkhuysen's works of a tempestuous character are superior to those Vanderveldes, beautiful as the works of the latter unquestionably are in subjects of wild and tranquil character.

"F. F. H.," Pangbourne. See "The Gardener's Monthly Volume." (Groombridge and Sons, Paternoster-row.)

"E. G. C."—The Furry Day, on the 8th of May, at Helstone, in Cornwall, is supposed to be a corruption of Flora's Day, from the garlands commonly then worn. (See "Gentleman's Magazine," June, 1790.)

"Veritas," Manchester.—We cannot give any information as to the Picture Lottery in question. We eschew all lotteries.

"Agricola." The statement is not altogether correct; but, we cannot undertake to specify the respective claims of the architects named

"W. H. H.," Burton. We do not remember to have received the Coin in question

"An Old Subscriber," Sunderland. We are not up in the statistics of fat pigs, and have never been fat enough for a pig. Many years since, there was fatted at Bocking a hog to the weight of 1120 stone. And we have computed that, if fatted properly, a bullock would reach to 240 stone. This animal exceeded the fatness of both the last and boy of the year 1543

"D and H.," Some Subscriber. We have not room

"E. T." Would be sent you. Ere al

"A constant Reader." Advertised reviewers and a better look for your purpose than "Bell's Pictorial Shakspeare" and "Chambers' Cyclopædia"

"A. T." Bath. We have, are thanked

"J. L.," Dymchurch. We do not recommend any Tuition, Foreign or English

"J. D. R." Bermondsey. The Lines are acceptable

"Spectator." Should apply to the Philosophical Instrument Maker; as, Knight and Cary, Fleet-street, Cheapside

"C. L.," Dublin. The Newspaper referred to, Professor Chevalier's Report on the Paris Universal Exhibition. The notice, Neptune's passage to the Planet by the French Board or Longitude, with the sanctioning of Le Verrier himself, is a mere assimilation to other unfledgeted names of the Planets then known.

"Senex," Bath. Mendoza's "Spanish Dictionary."

"C. S.," Richmond.—Declined.

"Tyro"—See the History of Wood Engraving, with beautiful Illustrations, in the 4th Volume of our Journal.

"Spectator." The Manager is as Sheridan's comedy of "The Rivals." The Author, however, we believe, Sheridan's original conception.

"Inquirer."—The price of admission to the Pit of Her Majesty's Theatre, of pass admission to the Stalls, &c.; but Tickets may generally be bought of music-sellers for 8s. 6d

"S. M." Declined.

"A Constant Reader and Subscriber." The sense of design is, certainly, original

"Z. H. N." Huddersfield.—To which Bee-hive does our Correspondent refer?—

"The Barrel Hive," by Sholl.

"Omicron."—The Derby will, this year, be run for on the 19th inst.; the Oaks on the 21st.

"H. H.," Suffolk. We cannot precisely tell.

"W. G. A."—See Bourne's work on Railway Engineering.

"W. C. M." "A pair of scissors" is correct. "Sir Roger wore a pair of scissors in his pocket" (See Arbuthnot.)

"A Dweller among the Welsh Rocks." Odology is the name for the Study of Birds' Eggs. In the matters of the heads of our complexion we cannot assist

"A Irish Subscriber." "Shall" and "Will," are the Sculs and Carybdis of our Grammarians. We both devote a few pages of the Introduction to his valuable Standard Dictionary, to the application of these troublesome auxiliaries, and claims attention to the following Rule, "which embraces the whole of the subject:"—"If the speaker is nominative to the verb, and also determines its accomplishment, or, if he is neither the nominative to the verb, nor determines its accomplishment, the proper auxiliary is WILL: in every other case it is SHALL.

"G. B. C.," Kingstown, informs us that Kirk, the Dublin sculptor, has a mask which was taken from the face of Oliver Cromwell, after death. Our Correspondent should write Shall the Protector's Statue be admitted into the New Houses of Parliament, or, for not has mass to be copied?

"W. G. S.," Brighton.—Probably, next week.

"A Constant Subscriber."—The height of the Venus de Medici, in the Imperial Gallery, at Florence, is 5*ft.* 11*½ inches, without the supporting plinth*

"G. W., Windmill-street" The point is correct

 Replies to a few Heraldic and Genealogical Questions are, unavoidably, deferred till next week.

THE NEW HOUSE OF LORDS.—We are compelled, by pressure of new, to omit the details of the Lighting and Ventilation, but they will appear in our next.

BOOKS RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

The Three Cousins. By Mrs. Trollope. Vol. 1.——Heroines of Shakespeare. Part 12.——Manual of Cage Birds.——Wyld's Popular Atlas No 3 ——Blackwood's Monthly Review No 1 ——Journal of a Residence in Portugal —— A Year of Consolation. By Mrs. But er —— Dr Stebbing's Letter to Lord John Russell —— Bradshaw's Railway Guide, for May

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, MAY 8, 1847.

THE three Parliamentary events of the week have been the advance of a Loan to Irish Railways, the passing the Factory Bill, and the re-modelling of the Poor Law Commission. With respect to the Loan, the Government consents to it in the teeth of its own declarations on Lord George Bentinck's "comprehensive measure;" on the Factory Bill, the Ministry is divided; part of the Cabinet thinking it a good and safe measure, while the other part regard it as the one thing that will ruin the nation; and in reconstructing the Poor Law Commission, it is very evident that the Ministry is driven to act considerably against its will; but there are some things "too bad" for defence, and the careless ease with which the Poor Law Commissioners dispensed with the provisions of the Act of Parliament, is among them; so it is re-modelled, and one of the Commissioners and a Secretary are henceforth to sit in Parliament, to relieve the Home Secretary from the badgering of Anti-Poor Law members, and bear the onslaughts of those ferocious philanthropists, who, like Mr. Ferrand, in their love for the people, have neither pity, love, nor mercy, for such of their fellow men as are Ministers and Commissioners. Lord John Russell reserves to the Crown the full right of re-appointing the present Commissioners, if it thinks fit; the report of the Committee of the House of Commons does not appear to have completely overthrown them. The arrangement will remove a constant source of annoyance from the Home Secretary; he will no longer have to keep himself continually en rapport with Somerset House, or to plead want of "official information" to a sudden query as to some stupendous case of abuse and mal-administration. Nor will the House tolerate from the Parliamentary Commissioner that ignorance of particular facts which was excusable in a Secretary of State, who has such an enormous weight of business on his shoulders. The Commissioner will be expected to know something more than "what he had seen in the public journals," which is so frequently the extent of official knowledge; it the Poor-Law functionary is not fully informed on details, he must be prepared for every variety of Parliamentary attack—sledge-hammer blows from Mr. Ferrand, cuts from the dissecting knife of Mr. Wakley, and the rapier thrusts of Mr. Roebuck—all three having in them "something dangerous," which it has often been officially prudent to fear. The scene at the Home Office, which was described with such effect before the Committee—Sir James Graham closeted with a Commissioner, and asking, with respect to a very bad case indeed, "now what are we to tell the House about this?"—can never occur again. If the Commissioners get themselves into a difficulty, they will have to get themselves out of it as well as they can. And this perpetual appearance before the public in "a questionable shape" will, no doubt, have no small influence on their administration. If the Commission fail, under this modified and improved constitution, it will be dissolved altogether; nothing can stand against a succession of changes, and the English public soon becomes intolerant, when the tenancy towards mismanagement appears incurable.

NOTHING has surprised the "Money Market" more than the advance of money, by way of loan, to Irish Railroad Companies, after the Ministry had declared itself so decidedly against the principle of Lord Bentinck's bill, as to make it a question of "confidence," and threaten to resign if the principle should be affirmed. Every argument used in favour of the present grant, is quite as strong in favour of the greater plan; and never was such a complete condemnation of a Minister pronounced, as that quoted by Mr. Roebuck against the Chancellor of the Exchequer, from that gentleman's own speech of a few weeks ago; he declared then that the State ought not to be a money-lender; and now he makes it one. But the objection, after what has been done during the last year, is a vain one; the State has become a money-lender on an immense scale. Does any one know exactly how much has been lent to the landlords of Ireland, in "Presentations" and "Public Works?" Whatever the amount is, the loss of one-half is already contemplated, and the chance of getting the other half we take to be a very slender one. Then the State has been lending money for many other purposes; it had advanced money for draining lands; and on Tuesday evening a further advance was made to the owners of land in Ireland for purposes of general improvement in agriculture. To start an objection "on principle" to the State lending money is rather absurd, after that principle has been adopted in a thousand instances. If lending can secure the advantages to be derived from giving, it is the better course, money laid out where it will reproduce itself, is better bestowed than in spending the roads of a whole nation, and paying the people wages for what is miscalled labour. It is evident now that the Government opposition to Lord George Bentinck's principle" to the State lending money is rather absurd, after that principle has been adopted in a thousand instances. If lending can secure the advantages to be derived from giving it

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

HERSHAM OF SMITHFIELD CATTLE MARKET.—On Monday, at a special meeting of the Farmers' Club, it was resolved by a large majority to express in the form of resolutions a decided opinion as to the removal of this market from the centre of the metropolis. The resolutions were—1. That the removal of Smithfield Market is highly desirable. 2. That the day of market be changed from Monday to Tuesday.

CENTRAL METROPOLITAN POLICE STATION.—An extensive range of building are now in course of erection in King-street, Westminster, extending from Charle street to Gardener's-lane, and covering about an acre of ground, intended as Central Police Station, where men entering the Metropolitan Police will undergo their probationary instruction previous to being drafted to their different divisions

THE ROYAL ENTRANCE.—In Mr. Pugin's Model for a Palace at Westminster—In Trinity the ceiling and groined roof of her Majesty's grand entrance to the new House of Parliament were completed, and the whole of the ponderous scaffold, &c. is in course of removal.

RISE IN THE PRICE OF BREAD.—On Tuesday a general rise of one halfpenny in the price of the 4lb. loaf of wheaten bread took place throughout the metropolis. Bread of inferior quality is now 9d., and the best 10d. the 4lb. loaf

THE NATIONAL GALLERY.—On Tuesday, the picture by Raffaelle, recently purchased by the trustees of the National Gallery for 1000 guineas, of the executors of the late Lady Sykes, was exhibited to the public in the room where the frame containing the picture, which is on a very small scale, is divided into two compartments, the upper containing the picture, and the lower, the original drawing or tracing for it; the frame being enclosed in a beautiful mahogany cabinet. The situation selected for this fine addition to the national collection is between the picture of "St. Cecilia," by Raffaelle, and "The Vision of St Jerome," by Parmegiano, on the south side of the largest room.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.—The Council of the College, at their meeting on Saturday last, approved of a scheme for the application of the dividends on the funds produced by the £2,000 bequeathed to the College by the late Mr Holloway, banker, of Hereford. In compliance with the wish expressed by the testator, they determined that the dividends should be appropriated to paying the school fees or boys in the school distinguished for their merit, and in need pecuniary assistance in their education, the funds meanwhile to remain for time to time to report to the Council the names and circumstances of pupils deserving such an exhibition. The Council had the satisfaction of conferring the first exhibition on Thomas Hood, the son of the late Mr. Thomas Hood, the poet. At the same session the Council appointed Mr. Bennett Woodcroft, of Manchester, to the newly instituted professorship of descriptive machinery

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

RAILWAY LAW AS REGARDS PROVISIONAL COMMITTEEMEN.

The Court of Common Pleas, on Wednesday, gave a decision to the effect that the fact of an individual's name being included in the list of members of the Committee was no evidence against him.

The case was that of Parrott v. Blunt and Cornfoot. It was an action brought by an attorney against the defendants as members of the Provisional Committee of the Jamaica Southern, Eastern, and Northern Railway, to recover a considera ble sum of money for advertisements inserted in various newspapers respecting this Company. The case was tried before Mr. Justice Erle, at the sittings in Middlesex after Trinity Term, when a verdict was entered for the plaintiff. In the following term, a rule nisi was obtained to show cause why a nonsuit should not be entered, or why there should not be a new trial, on the ground that there was no evidence to go to the Jury as against the defendant Cornfoot. Mr. Sergeant Chadwick Jones and Mr. Wordsworth, on Wednesday, appeared to show cause against the rule.

The Court, without hearing Mr. Humfrey and Mr. Willes, who attended in support of the rule, held that there was nothing in this case to distinguish it from those of "Lycett v. Sandel," and "Wyld v. Hopkins." The publication of the defendant's name as a Provisional Committeeman, without proof of any authority from him, could have no effect to bind him; and the only other evidence produced against him was the simple fact of his having called at the Company's office, and received a prospectus containing his name But it was not proved that he afterwards acted as a Provisional Committeeman, and he was not bound to do until the 1st December, when he was to sign the deed, unless he had altogether withdrawn from the concern Upon these facts it could not be said that there was any authority, express or implied, to warrant the Directors in pledging the name of Cornfoot; and, as to the latter, it was a decision on his part of all connexion with the Company. The rule must, therefore, be made absolute for entering a nonsuit.

POLICE.

THE EARL OF MORNINGTON'S ANSWER TO THE APPLICATION OF THE COUNTESS.

The Earl of Mornington attended on Tuesday, before Mr. Bingham, at Marlborough-street Office, in obedience to a summons, to show cause why he neglected to maintain his wife, Helena Countess of Mornington, whereby she had become chargeable to the parish of St. George, Hanover-square.

Mr Clarkson, his Lordship's professional adviser, and his Lordship retired out of court, and had a consultation in the library for about an hour. On their return,

Mr. Smith, the relieving officer of St. George's, said: Sir, this is an application on the part of the parish of St. George, Hanover-square, against the Earl of Mornington, to compel his Lordship to consent to allow Helena, his wife, a sufficient maintenance for her support. It is unusual for ladies in Lady Mornington's station in life to make applications of this sort through the agency of a police court, but I have been sworn to the truth of her statement of utter destitution; and she has declared that she is destitute, and has been for a length of time dependent upon Mr. Thomas, of Hatchett's Hotel, for support. This parish was anxious to avoid this application, and it was hoped that an arrangement satisfactory to all parties would have been entered into; but, as this has not been done the parish has been obliged to apply.

Mr. Clarkson. Sir, I apprehend that, your correct judgment, you will decide that the subject-matter of this inquiry by no means entitles me to cross-examine that party through whom this application of the parish originates, as to the circumstances of her life, or with reference to the enormous sums dispensed by Lord Mornington for her support. I am not permitted to go into the circumstances which may have induced that party who, at the instance of others, has preferred this means of annoyance to Lord Mornington. I am prohibited by Lord Mornington, who is desirous of sparing pain to the distinguished members of his own family, from eliciting these particulars by cross-examination; therefore, the only question open is, as to the distress which Lady Mornington says she endures; whether that distress has been provoked by Lady Mornington's own extravagance, or by the absence of means from Lord Mornington. It is not necessary to inquire. The sums advanced by the parish of St. George will be repaid by Lord Mornington. I will not enter into private transactions further than to state that it is only three weeks ago that £300 a-year on security was offered to Lady Mornington. Lady Mornington declined the offer, possibly because she conceives that, by certain instruments now under investigation in a superior Court, she is entitled to more. I have, however, his Lordship's directions by me to state that, if the parish really thinks he ought to pay money to the parish officers for Lady Mornington's support, he will readily and cheerfully do so; but, if the application is intended to annoy and vex him, I must request you to withdraw. I do not know who you are, but it is not permitted to hear parties not professional.

Mr. Clarkson, on the part of Lord Mornington: I can have no objection to hear whatever that gentleman may have to say to the Court.

Mr. Manning: I only rose for the purpose of paying a compliment to the learned gentleman, for the discreet way in which he conducted the case, and to give a complete denial to the insinuation that Lady Mornington's distress has arisen from any extravagance on her part.

Mr. Bingham: It is unnecessary to address the Court, the matter being now at an end. I must deal with the case in the same way as I deal with ordinary applications from parish officers who apply for an order on a husband to maintain his wife. I must have all reasonable expenses and outgoings, and the parish satisfied. The applicant is not party, and appears infirm, and she must have relief accordingly. If the sum paid by the parish for such relief be repaid, that is all the parish can require, and there is an end of the case.

Mr. Clarkson: Lord Mornington is not properly paid five guineas into the hands of the parish officers for the use of Lady Mornington. We submit to the decision of the Court cheerfully

Mr. Bingham: I can only deal with this case as the case of a pauper receiving relief in the workhouse, that pauper being infirm and advanced in life. I can make no di-tinction between this and any other case in the workhouse. The only difference in these cases is, that some require, from age or infirmity, more relief than others; but I have no power to sanction more than ordinary assistance.

Mr. Smith: With respect to the five guineas, I received the money for Lady Mornington under a pledge that I would not say from whom it came.

Lord Mornington: I thought it advisable then that it should not be mentioned where the money came from. I think it right to state now that I gave it.

Mr. Smith: Lady Mornington refused to receive it as soon as she was told tha she was not to know the person's name who sent it.

All the parties then left the court.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

LOSS OF AN EMIGRANT SHIP, AND TWO HUNDRED AND FORTY PASSENGERS.

We are sorry to have to record the loss of the ship Exmouth, under very painful circumstances, the loss of life being very great.

According to the statement of three sailors, the sole survivors of the wreck and who arrived in Glasgow on Saturday evening, the Exmouth, of 320 tons, had Booth, of Sunderland, master, sailed from Londonderry for Quebec between three and four o'clock on the morning of Sunday, the 25th ult., with a light south west breeze. She had a crew of 11 men (inclusive of the captain), and about 240 emigrants, consisting principally of small farmers and tradesmen, with their families. Many were females and children, who were going out to join their fathers and protectors. Many were females and children, who were going out to join their fathers and protectors. Who had already settled in Canada. There were also three cabin passengers, young unmarried ladies of the middle classes, two of them being sisters, on their way to join their relatives at St. John, New Brunswick. The vessel was regularly laden for 163½ passengers; but, as two children count as one adult, and as a very large proportion were under age—there being only about 60 men amongst the passengers—the survivors of the wreck think that the total number of these ill-fated emigrants must have amounted to 240

The ship lost sight of land about four o'clock on Sunday afternoon. The breeze, which had been light in the morning, increased to a pale during the day, and about eight p.m. it came in terrific squalls, accompanied by heavy torrents of rain. They then furled the fore and main sails. The wind, which had been to the westward at first, veered more northerly, and the storm increased in violence. While blew the two top-sails from the bolt-ropes. The crew then commenced to bend other topsails, which they furled; but about three in the morning they were blown from the gaskets. The ship was now driven to the southward and eastward. The reason of the master not standing to the westward, where he would have ample sea room, was for the purpose of attaining some harbour of refuge, where he might repair their damages, and replace the sails.

On Monday forenoon the long-boat was unshipped by the force of the seas, which broke over the vessel, and in the course of the same forenoon the bulwarks were stove in, and the life boat washed away. The gale continued with the same violence during the whole of Monday night and Tuesday

About eleven o'clock on Tuesday night (the 27th ult.), and, and a light, were seen on the starboard quarter, the first exhibition of the kind since the vessel left the Island of Tory, off the north west coast of Ireland, and, in the belief that he thus had ample sea-room in the course he was steering, he bore along. As he drifted near the land, however, and observed that the light was a flashing, instead of a stationary one, he became conscious of his error and dangerous position, and made every effort to repair it, by bringing the ship farther to the northward and eastward; and, with the view of "clawing" her off the land, the mainsail and the foremost main stay sail were set, and the jib hair hoisted. The effort, however, was an ineffectual one; the ship soon got amongst the broken water, and, at half-past twelve on Wednesday morning, was dashed amongst the rocks and reefs, which, from the description of the maintop, leaving the captain's son, a youth of about fifteen years of age, asleep in his cot below. After remaining in the maintop about three minutes, five of the crew came down for the purpose of ascending the foretop, thinking that they would have a better chance of gaining the shore from that part of the ship. At the same time, one of the crew, named John Scott, went out upon the mainyard with a life-buoy on his person, and then, leaving in the maintop the captain and three seamen, whose names are John Stevens, William Coulthard, and George Lishford, all belonging to South Shields. When the maintop, along with the vessel in front, was driven to pieces in a trice on the rock, Coulthard, then Lightfoot, and finally Stevens, scrambled up the rigging, and obtained a footing on the crags. The captain was heard to follow the men, and a wave dashed over their heads as they clung to the rock, but they succeeded in maintaining their position; and when they looked round about the vessel had entirely disappeared, and the crew of the fore-mast had been broken into splinters by the fourth sea that struck with the rocks, and this recoiling wave had not only dragged the ship, but the fragments of the mast, which adhered to her by the rigging, further into the sea, and thus cut off from the dense mass of human beings on board every chance of escape. Had the wreck remained in the cha-m where it was originally thrown, and from which the three survivors escaped, it might have been used as a bridge by the others; but, unhappily, this last possibility of relief was taken away. The same wave which effected this fearful havoc must also have prevented the five seamen from reaching the foretop, from which they might have had a chance of escaping. A quarter of an hour elapsed from the time of the brig first striking until the three survivors got to on the rock.

There was no cry from the multitude cooped up within the hull of the ill-fated brig; or at least it was unheard, for the commotion of the elements was far higher; or at least it was unheard, for the commotion of the elements was far higher than that the men on the top could scarcely hear each other at the top of their voices. The emigrants, therefore, must have perished in their births, as the rocks rapidly thumped the bottom out of the vessel.

The three men who had escaped to the rock, so soon as the ship entirely disappeared, searched anxiously for some outlet by which they might reach the mainland; but none such could be found, and they finally took refuge in a recess, which, however, did not shield them from the sea, which fell heavily all night, and here remained till grey daylight. They then discovered an opening, through which they scrambled to the summit, and after day had fully broken, they observed a farm house about half a mile distant. Thither they proceeded, and were most hospitably nourished and put to bed. They were thoroughly worn out by exhaustion, not one of the crew having been in bed for the last 48 hours, previous to sailing from Londonderry by the Modern Athens steamer, where they were landed on Saturday last. Here they were consigned to the care of Mr. Fildes, of the Naval Rendezvous, and assistant to Lieutenant Forrest, agent for the Shipwrecked Mariners' Society, and by him they have been comfortably boarded in the meantime.

At the latest date of our advices from Islay, about 20 of the bodies had come ashore. They were principally females, with one little boy amongst them; and as many of them were in their night clothes, the probability is that they were those who had rushed upon deck at the first alarm caused by the striking of the ship

THREE CHILDREN MURDERED BY THEIR MOTHER.

Three children have been murdered by their mother, in the parish of Llanbyddar, in the county of Cardigan. It seems that Mary Hughes, and her three chil-dren (the unfortunate victims) resided with her sister-in-law, who keeps a public-house, called the Carriers' Arms, about three miles from the village of Llanbyddar. On Wednesday (last week) the sister-in-law had occasion to leave home to go to an adjacent village. She started from her house about twelve at noon, leaving the mother and the three children at home. She returned in the evening, between her and home. Nothing remained till about seven o'clock in the evening, when the sister-in-law returned to the house, and found the outer door locked, and the key placed close under the door. On entering the house, she was horror-stricken to see the three children suspended by their necks to one of the beams in the roof. She immediately ran to the house of a neighbour, who hastened to the room, and cut the bodies down, but life was gone. The three children were found in the same bed, each being suspended by two silk handkerchiefs—one was secured to the beam, and the other fastened to it, and then placed round the neck of each. The children were of the respective ages of five girls, and the other a boy. No cries had been heard during the time the sister-in law was absent, to induce the neighbours to suppose that anything unusual had taken place. Suspicion, of course, could attach to no one but the mother. search was made for her, and she has since been apprehended. She had wandered over the mountains to the neighbourhood of Llandovery, about ten miles away, and was met at an early hour on Monday, manifesting that she was going to other places, but taking different directions, whereby she, for a time, eluded pursuit. She was unknown, but people strongly suspected that her native village was Cayo, extensively connected with the lace trade in Nottingham, committed suicide on the 30th ult., by cutting his throat with a razor. Depression of trade was said to be the cause. An inquest was held the same evening, and "insanity" was returned as the verdict.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MR. BROADFOOT, THE COMEDIAN.—An awful instance of the uncertainty of life occurred at Rochester on Wednesday. Mr. A. Y. Broadfoot, the stage-manager of the Theatre, after having been engaged in rehearsal connected with his benefit, which was appointed to take place on Monday next, apparently in his usual health and spirits, returned to the theatre about noon, when he complained of being unwell; he was advised to try a little brandy, but, still complaining, he, accompanied by Mr. Scott, the scenic artist, proceeded to Dr. Ely's, a short distance from the theatre, when the latter left him, whilst the servant went up stairs to call his master. Dr. Ely immediately came into the surgery, when he found the unfortunate Dr. Ely immediately came into the surgery, when he found the unfortunate gentleman lying on the floor a corpse. An inquest was held in the evening, and from the evidence of the medical attendant it appeared that death arose from an attack of apoplexy

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

THE POOR RELIEF (IRE. AND) BILL.

On the motion of the Marquis of LANSDOWNE, the House resolved itself into Committee on the Poor Relief (Ireland) Bill.

The Earl of CLANCARTY moved, that the fifth clause in the bill, tending to prevent the industrious poor of Ireland from receiving out-door medical relief, be struck out. He hoped Government would shortly carry out a bill, which he understood to be under consideration, for affording out-door medical relief to the sick poor

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE defended the clause, which, after a short discussion, was agreed to

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

LOAN FOR IRISH RAILWAYS.—In answer to a question by Mr. HUME, who made some allusion to the proceedings in the House of Lords on Thursday night, Lord J. RUSSELL said he should not proceed with the bill respecting the granting a loan of £620,000 for the construction of railways in Ireland until Friday, the 14th inst.

THE MONEY MARKET.—On the motion that the orders of the day be read, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said the Government had received several deputations lately on the subject of the depressed state of the money market, and he wished to state to the House that her Majesty's Ministers were anxious to do all possible in their power to accommodate the Bank of England and the public. (Hear, hear.) On the 18th of May he should propose that the interest on Exchequer-bills be advanced to 3d. per day. (Hear, hear.) On Monday next he should propose to the House a resolution authorising him to give an increased interest on the prompt payment of instalments of scrip on the new loan. On Monday next he should ask the House to go into Committee on the subject.

MR. O'CONNELL'S HEALTH.—Letters received in London convey very unfavorable intelligence respecting the health of Mr. O'Connell. The hon. and learned gentleman remains at Avignon, in such an exhausted state, that his medical attendants have recommended an abandonment of the idea of proceeding on his journey for some weeks. Notwithstanding Mr. O'Connell's great anxiety to reach Rome, he has reluctantly yielded to the instructions of his physicians. There is no disguising the fact, that within the last ten days the invalid's malady has made fearful ravages on a constitution once so robust and vigorous.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

THE BOMBARDMENT OF VERA CRUZ.

In page 292 of our Journal we have given an account of the capture of Vera Cruz and San Juan de Ulloa. We have since received by the Arcole, which has arrived at Liverpool, New York papers to the 14th ult. They contain the official despatches of General Scott, from which it appears that the General, having completed the investment of Vera Cruz, summoned the city to surrender on the 22nd of March. The garrison having refused to comply, the American batteries opened on the town. Owing to the strong north wind which prevailed for five days, the naval part of the armament was unable to take any effective part in the operations. Upwards of thirty vessels are said to have been driven on shore. According to other statements on the 25th of March, their bombardment continued with terrible effect; nearly one-half of the city is represented as destroyed by the shells. On the 26th, the Mexicans made overtures for surrender, and, on the evening of the 28th, terms of capitulation were agreed upon, of which the following is the abstract

That the garrison of the city and castle shall lay down their arms as prisoners of war, saluting the flag of the city and castle from their own batteries, on striking them, at the moment the troops were surrendering their arms; that the troops, regulars and irregulars, should be dispersed to their homes, upon parole given by their own rolls, and by their own officers, not to serve against the United States until duly exchanged, officers giving at the same time their own parole for themselves individually; that all public property of every description should become the property of the United States; that such portions of the Mexican armament (of San Juan de Ulloa) as may not have been destroyed during the war, may be liable to be restored by stipulations on the conclusion of a definitive treaty of peace: that private property is to be inviolate, and not liable to be taken without arrangement with the owner; that the religion of the inhabitants, its institutions and ceremonies, are solemnly guaranteed; and that the men under parole may remain in the city to settle private affairs, not to exceed five days.

In fulfilment of these stipulations, the Mexican troops marched out of the city on the morning of the 29th, and stacked their arms. The American troops took an advanced on each side of the Mexican line into the town, and in a brief space the stripes and stars waved ove- the city and the fort. At the time of concluding the capitulation, there were only five days' provisions in the town, and no such ammunition as might have served for five days

It is stated by the American papers that one-half of Vera Cruz is destroyed. The Mexican loss is about 1000, one-half women and children. General Valdes is among the killed. The troops dispersed by Colonel Harney were Rancheros, and were not commanded by General La Vega. The brigade of General Quitman was engaged on the 30th to attack Alvarado. Gun-boats and small steamers were sent there. It was the intention of General Scott to push on towards the city of Mexico

Accounts from New Mexico announce further skirmishes with the insurgents.

Colonel Price, with 350 men, had had an action at Camada. The Americans were victorious, and the enemy lost 36 killed. Another took place at San Veda, with a similar result. Alvarado is situated about twelve leagues to the S.E. of Vera Cruz, at the mouth of the Rio Alvarado. Gun-boats and small steamers were immediately to be commenced against it.

IRELAND.

LORD BESBOROUGH'S ILLNESS.

We are very sorry to state that the disease of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland took another unfavourable turn on Monday night, and he was very ill all day on Tuesday. The following bulletins were issued on that day:—

"His Excellency had more cough than usual last night, and does not feel quite so well as he was yesterday

"Monday o'clock.—His Excellency, although not so well as he had been yester day, is better than he was this morning."

His Excellency passed a good night on Tuesday; and, at four o'clock on Wednesday morning, Mrs. White heard him retching very much, and sent her maid to see what was the matter. She found that he had fallen into a fit of apoplexy. A medical gentleman on board immediately resorted to the usual remedies, and on the vessel reaching the Queen's Pier, Dr. O'Donnell was called, who, together with Dr. Formby, rendered every assistance, and the unfortunate gentleman was taken to the Adelphi Hotel, where he expired at five o'clock on Tuesday morning last.

OUTRAGEOUS ATTEMPT AT MURDER.—An atrocious outrage was perpetrated on the 26th ult., within ten miles of Athlone, at Mr. Kelly's, of Scregg, county of Roscommon. Mr. Kelly invited an acquaintance to come on a short visit to him, and he accepted the invitation, and in the evening, before they retired, an argument arose between them; however, when the guests thought all were at rest, the friend proceeded to Mr. Kelly's room, where he and his wife lay in bed, and, having armed himself with a razor, inflicted severe wounds upon their heads, and then proceeded to a bed in which Miss Kelly was sleeping, and perpetrated a similar deed of blood upon her. By this time the servants were alarmed, and ran to the rescue; the first one who attempted to disarm him, by taking away the razor which he was flourishing around his head, was ferociously attacked by this person, and most severely wounded, the other servants not daring to go near. After this series of bloody deeds he ran off, and threw the razor away. Three countrymen who saw him pursued him, finally captured him, and handed him over to the police. The surgeons have pronounced Mr. Kelly's wound as very serious, but those inflicted on Mrs. and Miss Kelly of no dangerous consequence. It is supposed that mental aberration was the immediate cause of these fearful acts.

EXECUTION FOR PARRICIDE.—Yesterday week, the extreme sentence of the law was carried into effect at Lifford, on Samuel Crummer, who had been found guilty at the late assizes for the county of Donegal, of the murder of his father, Mr. Ardara, in that county. His wife had also been convicted together with him of the same offence, but the prerogative of mercy was exercised in her favour by the Lord Lieutenant, and her punishment commuted to transportation for life. The evidence against both was circumstantial, but it was so conclusive, that a most intelligent jury returned the verdict without hesitation, and the wretched parricide made no protestation of his innocence upon his conviction. The executioner having adjusted the rope, the culprit was proceeded to address the crowd in a loud voice, and in a firm and collected manner:—"Gentlemen and ladies," said the wretched man, "I am going to inform you that I am about to die, and I wish to tell you that I am innocent, and that I never lifted hand or die, and I wish to tell you that I am innocent, and that I never lifted hand or did, and I wish to tell you that I am innocent, and that I never lifted hand or foot against my father, and would I do it; but ——, of Ardara, swore my life away for a little money in these hard times. I leave my blessing to my children and all friends, and I forgive all, as I hope to get forgiveness myself." After a few more words, which seemed to be passed in prayer, the bolt was drawn, and almost instantaneously life appeared to have left him

MURDER IN CLARE.—Last Saturday a dreadful murder was committed upon a man named Dogan, at Doon near Broadford. He was fired at from behind a ditch by two men, and when he fell they fractured his skull in several places, and cut his throat, nearly severing the head from his body. The cause assigned for this savage murder is, that the deceased two years since purchased a revers-ionary lease of some land, the title to which expired this May.

SUDDEN DEATH.—On Sunday, Mrs. Noyes, the mother of Mr. Frederick Noyes, the manager of the postal department on the South-Western Railway, was being driven home from chapel, when, as she neared her residence in the Wandsworth-road, she was observed by two ladies who accompanied her, to drop as in a fit. Dr. Statham, who was passing at the moment, was called to the unfortunate lady; he directed her speedy removal home, and she expired immediately after her arrival.

EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

"KING ARTHUR CARRIED TO THE LAND OF ENCHANTMENT"—PAINTED BY W. B. SCOTT.

The yearly Exhibition at the Royal Academy has long been looked forward to as one of the principal sights of a London season. Whatever the sun, or rain, or wind, or snow may do in advancing or retarding flowers, the Exhibition is still unaltered; and the first Monday in May, be what kind of day it will, is sure to witness the opening of the great annual Exhibition of Academy pictures. [illegible] alive now who can remember a season [illegible] Royal Academy Exhibition. Our fathers, however, were content to do without one; but then they had other amusements, somewhat exploded now while the Exhibition of the Royal Academy [illegible] taken an enduring hold [illegible] of this kind to [illegible] — so cold and [illegible] without some [illegible]

The first Exhibition of the Royal Academy was [illegible] ninth annual Exhibition of the Academy since that time. It is one of the best we have had for many years. Some of the [illegible] It is [illegible] content with [illegible] heretofore. [illegible] was not so once; but then we are to remember that art is now much better understood, both by artists and by the public, than in the time of Sir Thomas Lawrence, when it was the fashion for portrait-painting to carry everything before it; and people were pleased, and amply too, in seeing a monopoly of portraits on all sizes—from full-lengths to cabinets occupying the most conspicuous positions in the great room of the Academy at Somerset House. In the three great rooms of the present Exhibition, containing 985 works of art, there are only 186 portraits, [illegible]

The Great Room of the Academy, called in the Catalogue the "East Room," contains pictures from No. 1 to No. 219. The central line of the upper end is [illegible] Mr. [illegible] and [illegible] Mr. [illegible] Mr. [illegible] Mr.

EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

one. We shall reserve any particular criticism upon it till another week, as itis our intention to have it engraved.

22. "A Misty Morning, with figures." F. R. Lee. This is the best landscape Mr. Lee has painted for several years. The composition is extremely beautiful, and the execution careful and happy throughout. In point of feeling it is thoroughly English. The figures are employed in floating timber recently felled.

37. "Righteousness and Peace." S. A. Hart. Two full-length figures representing a passage in the Psalms "Righteousness and Peace have kissed each other." There is much beauty of action in this picture, and a good deal of fine sentiment about the heads. The colouring is good. Mr. Hart should study Mr. Herbert in a certain severity of manner which necessarily appertains to subjects of this description.

42. "Neptune Assigning to Britannia the Empire of the Sea." W. Dyce. This is Mr. Dyce's sketch for a picture to be painted in fresco at Osborne House. The general composition is extremely careful, and some of the colouring the flesh particularly, of the female attendants upon Neptune—warm and truthful. The figure of Britannia is a failure—she is a silly country lass:

O, silly! more silly than my sheep.

Her lion, too, is a sorry representation of the monarch of the forest.

52. "Mother and Child." Margaret Carpenter. A full-length portrait of a lady and child. Finely conceived; and, we may add, well painted

53. "Fashion's Slaves." R. Redgrave. The slave of Fashion in this touching little picture is a milliner girl with sorrow on her face—(the settled sorrow of years and circumstances) —rebuked by a lady of quality reclining on a sofa, while she pouts, scent bottle in hand, to a clock upon the mantelpiece, as if to say—"I told you such and such an hour, and it is now twenty minutes past the time I told." The cold callous manner of the lady of quality is cleverly contrasted with the meek face and modest resignation presented by the other. All the accessories are carefully painted—but the general tone throughout is somewhat raw.

62. "Martha and Mary." C. R. Leslie. Three half-length figures: the Christ with an air of divinity about the head not usually found in modern attempts at portraying the Saviour. The colouring is warmer than usual with Leslie. We look upon this as a successful picture in the very highest walk of art.

71. "The Drive Shooting Deer on the Pass. Scene in the Black Mount, Glen-Urchy Forest." E. Landseer. A large picture, painted, we believe, for the Marquis of Breadalbane, but since resigned by the noble Marquis to his Royal Highness Prince Albert. Two figures, of the size of life, are represented crouching in the foreground; one holding back a couple of fine dogs, while the other reloads his gun for a second shot. The deer are seen driving at a fearful speed in all directions. On the left is a deep ravine, with a burst of light breaking in upon the mountains—most beautifully deceptive. To see this picture "aright," you must see it in the morning, with a fine sunshine upon it. It was perfectly lost on the first day, and some disappointment was unnecessarily expressed by many who were present.

74. "French Troops (1796) Fording the Margra—Sarzana and the Carrara Mountains in the Distance." C. Stanfield. A large and noble Landscape, with all the peculiar excellences of Stanfield's manner. It is impossible to describe a picture like this.

"THE FIRST STEP." (SCULPTURE.)—BY W. C. MARSHALL

85. "Portrait of Mrs. Arthur Shirley." T. M. Joy. A full-length, in white—the face full of beauty. This is the best portrait we remember to have seen from Mr. Joy.

98. "Henry Hallam, Esq." H. W. Pickersgill. A capital three-quarter portrait of the great historian. Mr. Pickersgill has caught all the piercing sagacity of Mr. Hallam's look, as much, we think, as Mr. Phillips has done in a picture now at Mr. Murray's, in Albemarle-street. Sir M. A. Shee missed the character entirely.

104. "A Village Choir." T. Webster. A most admirable picture—a commission from that true patron of art, Mr. Sheepshanks, of Rutland Gate. Mr. Webster has painted a church destitute of an organ; and, for the base, has sought out all the deep solemn mouths, and, for the tenor, the loud-ringing mouths, of the country pumpkins. In looking at this picture one is apt to stifle one's ears like Hogarth's "Enraged Musician." Some of the faces are full of character, and there is a touching little picture in the foreground of the choir—an orphan girl singing from the fulness of her heart and voice, as if, like Sir Philip Sydney's shepherd boy, she never would grow old. One cannot commend too highly the extreme care with which every part is painted care well bestowed, when such a picture as this is the result.

123-4-5. "Story of Joan of Arc." W. Etty. Three pictures in one, some thirty feet long by twenty feet high. The first represents Joan of Arc, on finding the sword she had dreamt of in the church of St. Catherine de Fierbois, devoting herself and it to the service of God and her country. The second—the largest of the three, and the centre of the composition represents Joan of Arc, on horseback, making a sortie from the gates of Orleans, and scattering the enemies of France. The third represents Joan of Arc, after rendering the most signal services to her Prince and his people, dying a martyr at the stake. This is the picture for which 2500 guineas have been given. That it is worth the sum we will hardly undertake to say—that it is a noble picture, nobly conceived, there is no denying. We are assured, by the friends of the artist, that much remains to be done to it, that Mr. Etty was hurried, and that three weeks' work will give it the finish it requires. To come to slight faults in so noble a design surely the perspective is very bad, or, rather, there is no perspective at all. Joan herself is a daughter of Anak, and, but for the quiet ease with which she rides down the enemies of her country, might be taken (in the centre group) for Mary Ambree in the ballad, or at least for Flanders Moll. In the dedication and in the martyrdom pictures (the wings of the composition) we lose this virago-like face. Joan at the stake wants little to render her perfectly poetic.

130. "Our Saviour Subject to His Parents at Nazareth." J. R. Herbert. This is an out-door scene, painted in the Albert Durer style both in feeling and in colour. Joseph is at his work, as a carpenter; Mary setting by his side, spinning; and the youthful Saviour is entering, with a basket in his hand. The look of the Virgin is cast upon our Saviour. This is a fine picture, full of religious beauty; one that will help devotion, and not, like too many modern Scriptural subjects, lessen the feeling that is in you when you approach it. It is by going back to the early masters that Mr. Herbert has learnt to paint like this. By feeling his way safely and deliberately, he may learn to paint like Raphael in his early manner.

134. "Burchell and Sophia." W. Mulready. A small picture, from the hay-making scene in "The Vicar of Wakefield," conscientiously and carefully painted in every part. Burchell is offering to assist Sophia; she is intent on what she is about, with a face replete with modesty and beauty. In the background of the picture, a couple of boys are seen playing with the grass; one is down, and the other is scattering the new cut hay about his ears. This admirable picture was painted for Sir Thomas Baring. It is of the same size as "The Wed-

"THE INVENTION OF THE STOCKING LOOM."—PAINTED BY A. ELMORE, A.

during Gown," by the same artist, and already engraved in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

135. "Children at Play." C. R. Leslie. A boy on a chair, with books for a coach-box, and his two younger sisters in string harness for the occasion. The little girls are quite alive to their parts, and are pawing with their feet, impatient to be off. An elder sister (about twelve years old) sets the fine lady in the coach, with a parasol over her head. This is a charming domestic picture, and in Leslie's best manner.

140 "Giving Alms." C. Landseer. A large, poor picture, with many figures, poor in composition, character, and colour. Everything is here that art, in the absence of genius, can supply

142. "Portrait of Miss Ellen Young." T. Webster. A small full length in white, capitally painted.

146, 169. From "Moore's Melodies." D. Maclise. Well known by Mr. Maclise's illustrated editions of the "Irish Melodies."

177. "The Hon. Mrs. Wortley." F. Grant. A three-quarter portraitin a plum coloured dress, and equally admirable in character and colour. This is not only Mr Grant's best portrait, but the best portrait in the Exhibition. The colouring is quite an Gainsborough's manner.

178. "Noah's Sacrifice—the Ark resteth on Ararat—the bow is set in the cloud." D. Maclise. Mr Herbert imitates Albert Durer and the early German masters; Mr. Maclise imitates himself, and only himself. Here is surely a most useless expenditure of everything but good colour. Noah's daughters are three Iris's girls from the Melodies of Moore

180. "The Hero of a Hundred Fights." J. M. W. Turner. An idea suggested by the German invocations upon casting the bell; in England, called "tapping the furnace." Such is Mr Turner's explanations of his picture—representing Wyatt's Wellington in a sea of yellow. This kind of painting is not the madness of genius—it is the folly and imbecility of old age. "To write like a madman," said Nat Lee, "is no easy matter; it is easy, however, to write like a fool."

186 "Portrait of Mr. Mr. Ambrogh as he appeared with his colonials at the London Theatres." E. Landseer. This fine picture was painted for the Duke of Wellington, who wished to have a picture from Landseer's hand, exemplifying the power of the human eye. Here certainly it is seen, and to great advantage. The great tamer of the wild beasts of the forest is standing in a den with iron bars before it—lions on one side, and tigers on the other, and nothing but a common whip in his hands. The lion chafes and rages at his glance, and all the beasts in his den look upon him with fear, with something like respect, indeed, written in their eyes. The artist has evidently had great difficulty in contending with the iron bars of the cage; but he has managed the difficulty with great skill, and has given us a very fine picture. We know nothing like it but the "Daniel in the Lion's Den," by Rubens, at the Duke of Hamilton's, in Scotland

204. "The Invention of the Stocking Loom." A. Elmore. "William Lee, of St. John's College, Cambridge, was, about the year 1589, expelled from the University, for marrying contrary to the statutes Having no fortune, the wife was obliged to contribute to their joint support by knitting; and Lee, while watching the motion of her fingers, conceived the idea of imitating those movements by a machine." Such is Mr. Elmore's description of the circumstance which occasioned his very clever picture. Lee is represented interrupted while reading, by the particular movement displayed in the fingers of his wife, who is knitting by his side. with a baby at her breast. The incident is well known, and a picture represenating it was once to be seen, perhaps is still, at the Cocking Weavers' Hall in Basinghall-street

205. "A Recollection of Spain." D. Roberts An interior of a Cathedral, of which it is enough to say that it is a very fine David Roberts.

We have now gone through the Great Room of the Academy, and must, there fore, reserve any further notice of the Exhibition till another week. Two pictures, however, in other rooms, and a group in the apartment dedicated to Sculpture, must detain us for a time. It is not always easy, or, indeed, always desirable, to draw our illustrations from one room only. We have already selected Mr. Elmore's picture from the Great Room, and at the same time have taken the "South Sea Bubble" of Mr. Ward from the Middle Room, and Mr. Scott's "King Arthur" from the Architectural Room giving in this way a sample of each. Mr. Marshall's group is an excellent specimen of the contents of the Sculpture Room

The "South Sea Bubble," the subject of Mr. Ward's new picture, was the madness of the year 1720. We had our own mania not very long ago in the shape of railways, and can therefore comprehend the propriety of this very apposite picture. Mr. Ward has found in Lord Mahon's admirable history of England all the incident and circumstance necessary for his picture. "The crowds," Lord Mahon writes, "were so great within doors, that tables with clerks were set in the streets. In this motley throng were all ranks, all professions, and all parties Churchmen and Dissenters, Whigs and Tories, country gentlemen and brokers. An eager strife of tongues prevailed in this second Babel; new reports, new subscriptions, new projects. So few persons enough to munth; and the voice of ladies (for even many ladies had turned gamblers) rose loud and incessant above the general throng." We consider ourselves particularly fortunate in being able to engrave this characteristic picture, which contains, in a little, a world of incident and character—seems perfectly impossible. Mr. Ward, however, tells his own story, and we have nothing to add but a stanza from the "South Sea Project," by Swift:

> There is a gulf where thousands fell,
> Here a little bold adventurer came,
> A narrow sound, though deep as hell,
> Change Alley is the dreadful name.

The subject of Mr. W. B. Scott's picture is from the Romance of Arthur—"King Arthur Carried to the Land of Enchantment." There is a good deal of poetry in this picture; but it is hung too high, and with (we must add) architectural drawings which "kill" it altogether.

Mr. Marshall's first step is a beautiful illustration of a couplet in Rogers

> So soon the child a youth, a youth a man,
> Eager to run the race his father ran.

(To be continued.)

MUSIC.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Her Majesty and Prince Albert, the Duchess of Kent, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, honoured the second representation of Bellini's "Puritani" with their presence on Saturday night. Grisi, Mario, Tamburini, and Tagliafico were in fine voice, and their exertions were immensely applauded The Diva, in the "Polacca," and in the "Qui la voce," electrified the house by her brilliant divisions and impassioned feeling; whilst Mario, in the "A te o cara," and the cavatina in the last act, proved himself to be the worthy rival of Rubini. After the opera, Fanny Elsler made her début in a new divertissement, called "La Bonquetière de Venise," a Carnival scene, in which Elssler, as a flower girl, and in a pas de masque, plays fantastic tricks on the lover, represented by M Petipa. It afforded the celebrated danseuse no opportunity for the display of her mimic powers, in which she is without a rival; but a grand ballet is in preparation, and will be produced next Saturday, for that purpose, the libretto of which is from the pen of a popular author. Fanny Elssler, however, can undertake no part, however trifling in itself, without developing grace and intellect. She created transports of enthusiasm in those sparkling little pas—exclusively her own, and which have originated what is now denominated the Elssler School. She is full of life and spirit, looking remarkably well, and, if possible, accomplishing more flexible and vigorous feats than ever. She bounded with inconceivable celerity, and took her poses in the slow movements with graceful abandon. From first to last, her prodigious exertions were applauded; and, in one series of little steps, she was encored.

On Tuesday night, in "Italiana in Algieri," Marini fully confirmed the high fame he has acquired in Italy and Germany, although he was not entirely recovered from the severe indisposition which cramped his powers on his début. With extraordinary depth of voice, he combines a flexibility and musical quality rarely found in such a basso profondo. In the finale of the first act his notes came rolling in like thunder. The rich comic humour of Rovere in Taddeo excited much laughter, especially in the "Papurani" trio with Salvi and Marini. The finish and delicacy of the accomplished tenor, in his cavatina and duo, were strongly manifested. But what can be said of the vocalisation of Alboni, and how describe the effect it produced on the audience, without being charged with exaggeration? The house rang with the continued plaudits, at her cavatina in the second act, which, for feeling, taste, expression, and brilliancy of fioriture, has never been surpassed. Elssler was again received with enthusiasm, and encored in one of her pas; and Dumilâtre, in the second act of "La Reine des Fées," was also deservedly applauded for her grace and elegance.

On Thursday, "Semiramide" was repeated for the fifth time, with Grisi, Alboni, Lavia, Tagliafico, and Tamburini, and Fanny Elssler danced in the new divertissement

The opera was received with immense enthusiasm by a crowded house from beginning to end Alboni created a greater furore than on any previous occasion. She was called for eight several times, and encored in the large of the cavatina. The duo between her and Grisi was a masterpiece in vocal execution; the blending of the two exquisite voices in the most fanciful cadences was delicious Tamburini was also in superb voice, and sang and acted with the fire of his best days. The chorusses and orchestral accompaniments were admirably executed. In the perfection of the ensemble we never heard a finer performance.

This evening (Saturday) will be produced for the first time in this country, Donizetti's celebrated opera of "Maria di Rohan," in which Madame Ronconi will make her début; and Salvi, Ronconi, and Mdlle. Albeni, will sustain the other principal parts

On Thursday next will be an extra night, and will include the talents of Grisi, Persiani, Alboni, Mario, Salvi, Marini, Tamburini, Fanny Elssler, Dumilâtre, &c.

DRURY LANE THEATRE.

The season for English opera and ballet closed on Monday night, with an address from Mr Bunn Our business is with the musical events of the past campaign; and we can fully award to the spirited lessee our praise for his zeal and activity on behalf of our native talent. Three new operas were produced between the months of October and of April, attest this fact. The first was Mr Lavenu's "Loretta;" the second, Mr. Balfe's "Bondman;" and the third, Mr Wallace's "Matilda of Hungary." A fourth opera—"Quentin Durward," by Mr. Henry Laurent—has also to have been brought out, and all was ready; when it was withdrawn, and the season prematurely closed. In the revival of the "Maid of Artois," Madame Anna Bishop, after her successes abroad, was introduced on the English stage; but, although her executive talents are of the highest order, the quality of the organ had so little charm, that her cleverness was marred.

Mr. Bunn brought out five new ballets, for the choregraphic talents of Flora Fabbri, Mdlle. Bénart, Mdlle. Dubignon, Mdlle. Fuoco, Mdlle. Baderna, M. Brein, M. Croce, M. Hugnet, &c. Fuoco, in the "Wags of Wapping," was a great hit. The pantomime of "St. George and the Dragon," and the spectacle of "The Desert," with Mr. Hughes's mammoth establishment, were the other salient points of the season.

The début of Mr. Travers, in Donizetti's "Favorite," was one which had given rise to the expectation that an undurable tenor was at length found; but he left the theatre without appearing in any second part, to prove how far his first success was justified. The lessee has met with combined misfortunes in the illnesses of his artists, a recurring most inimical at critical periods of the season. Both Wallace's and Balfe's operas were much injured in their runs by these mishaps. We are convinced of one fact, that if Mr. Bunn should retire from the direction, it will be eventually a matter of deep regret to the English profession, since he has done more towards the formation o a national opera than any previous manager.

CONCERTS OF THE WEEK

ANCIENT CONCERTS. The third, under the direction of Prince Albert, was honoured with the presence of her Majesty, accompanied by the Duchess of Kent, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, Prince Leiningen, and Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar The band was given entirely in the selection, comprising a Georgian Hymn, with the apocryphal date of 990; a Mottetto, by Marcelli; the finale to the first act of Mozart's "Magic Flute;" a magnificent overture fugato, by the same composer; an ingenious prelude and fugue on the name of Bach, by that Emperor of fugue writers—the letters, Bach, in German, corresponding to B flat, A, C, and B natural (the last is the German H)—wonderfully executed, on a wretched organ, by the gifted Mendelssohn; a charming romance, beautifully sung by Marlo, of Rousseau, "Dans ma cabane obscure," from the "Devin du Village;" the Easter Hymn; Winter's duo, from the "Oracle," "On non so che," sung by Castellan and Mario; a military air, from Monsigny's "Deserteur," admirably played by Pandiani; Guglielmi's duo, "Oh! guardate che figura," sung by Labiache and Alboni, the effect, however, marred by transposition; and a romance, with chorus, by Martini, "Plaisir d'amour," sung by Madame Castellan. The great sensations of the evening were produced by Alboni, in Gluck's "Che farò," which she gave with the utmost purity and good taste, and by Staudigl, in Mozart's quintet, from "Joseph," and in the "Zauberflöte" finale, in bravura style. Gardoni sang one of the airs attributed to "Stradella" pleasingly The other vocalists were Lockey, who executed all his music carefully, Miss Novello, Miss M Williams, Peck, and Hobbs. The first act of this scene was admirable; the second was weak, containing too many specimens of the French school, and the Easter Hymn being rather out of place. The next Concert will be on the 19th

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—At the second Concert, a selection from Weber's "Euryanthe" was performed by Miss Cole, Miss Holroyd, Miss Rainford, Miss Sermon, Messrs. Gardner, Parker, Barnes, and Lockey Miss Holroyd and Miss E. Holroyd, displayed promise in a duo by Vaccaj. Miss Rainford is one of the stars of the Academy, and bids fair to arrive at distinction. Mr. Chipp played the Adagio from Romberg's violoncello concerto, and Miss Rainford and Master Mendelssohn's Pianoforte Concerto, in B Minor; and Miss M. E. Smith, a movement from one of Hummel's concertos. Mr. C. Lucas was the conductor, and Sainton first violin.

HERR WILHELM KUHE.—This pianist has given a Matinée at the Hanover-square Rooms, aided by the brothers Helmsberger, Hausmann (violoncello), Schulz (cornet), and Madame Dulcken, Madame Jenny Lutzer, Madame Knispel, Mademoiselle de Rapplin; Misses Dolby and Pyne, Signor Marras, Herr Hoelzel, John Parry, &c. Lindsay Sloper, and Herr Kuhe, officiated as conductors.

M. H. U. SPOR.—This violinist in the Russell school, gave his annual Concert at the Eastern Institution, Commercial-road, assisted by Mrs. N. Newton, Miss Felton, Miss Thornton, Messrs. Walsh, Lowick, Pettman, &c

MR. REEVES.—The accomplished harpist gave his second Soirée Musicale on Monday last. The solo instrumentalists were, Stevenières (violin), Hausmann (violoncello), Muhlenfeldt and Herr Gollnick (piano); and the vocalists, Mrs Reeves, Miss S. Novello, the Misses Pyne, Miss E. Nelson, Signor Gatti, Signor Marras, Herr Schnitzler, Mr. J. H. Lee, Signor Cusati, &c. Signor Orsini was the conductor.

BEETHOVEN QUARTET SOCIETY.—At the fourth meeting the quartets performed were No. 2 in G, op. 18; No. 6 in B flat major, op. 18; No. 11 in f minor, op. 95; and No. 17 in F major, op. 135. Vieuxtemps and Sainton alternated the first and second violin parts; Hill was the tenor, and Rousselot the violoncello. On Tuesday a Matinée Musicale was given in honour of Mendelssohn, when a quartet was executed by Joachim, Sainton, Hill, and Rousselot; a pianoforte trio, played by Mendelssohn, Sainton, and Piatti; and a mottette, by Vieuxtemps, Sainton, Stevenières, Joachim, Hill, W. Thomas, Rousselot, and Piatti. The room was crowded with celebrities, literary and musical M. Jullien very handsomely gave the use of No. 76, Harley-street, for the occasion.

M. ALEXANDRE BOUCHER. This distinguished violinist has given a Matinée, patronised by the Duchess de Sermoneta, Mdlle Dulon (harp), Mr. Boucher (violoncello), M. Sainton (violin), Barret (oboe), Baumann (bassoon); and Mrs. A. Toulmin, Miss Duval, Madame Tamplini, Madame Angiolo, Signor Marras, and Herr Brandt, vocalists, were in the programme, with Benedict and Lüders as Conductors

ROYAL SOCIETY OF FEMALE MUSICIANS. At the annual Concert of this Society, established in 1839 for the relief of its distressed members, Benedict and Sterndale Bennett officiated as Conductors; Mrs. Anderson, Benedict, and Sterndale Bennett performed Sebastian Bach's triple Pianoforte Concerto, and the brothers Helmsberger the double-bass. The vocal performers who gave effect to the above artists, their gratuitous services, were Jenny Lutzer, Mrs. W. H. Seguin, Misses Bassano, Birch, Cubitt, Dolby, Duval, Lincoln, S. Novello, Rainforth, Steele, and Poole; Messrs. Braham, Lockey, Manvers, Machin, and W. H. Seguin. Mr. T. Cooke was Leader of the Band

MUSICAL CHIT-CHAT.

This morning, the rehearsal of the fifth Philharmonic Concert, for Monday Evening, when Joachim will play Beethoven's Violin Concerto, and Madame Persiani and Signor Salvi will sing, by permission of the Royal Italian Opera management. The Symphonies will be Beethoven's, in A, and Haydn's in G minor; and the Overtures, Weber's "Oberon" and Cherubini's "Deux Journeés," conducted by Costa

On Tuesday afternoon, will be the fourth meeting of the Musical Union; the four artists that are to play are the same sketched in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS last season, namely Vieuxtemps, Delosffre, Hill, and Piatti. We cannot imagine a more perfect ensemble than by these representatives of the Belgian, French, English, and Italian schools of playing

On Friday morning will be Madame Puzzi's Morning Concert; and in the evening the tenth Concert of the Amateur Musical Society.

On Wednesday evening, Mr. Cohen gives his first Pianoforte Recital, at the Hanover square Rooms

Mr. Wilson continues his Scotch Entertainments every evening, at the Music Hall, Store-street.

Duprez has returned to Paris from Germany. The new opera of "Le Bouquet de l'Infante," the libretto by MM. de Planard and Lauvenu, the music by M. Adrien Boildieu, had been but moderately successful at the Opéra Comique. A new opera by M. Louis, entitled "Marie Therese," had been represented at Lyons with success. The new ballet of "Gisèl," in two acts and six tableaux, by M Coralli, the music by M. Casimir Gide, sustained by Plunkett, Emarot, Fuoco, and Flora Fabbri, and M. Desplaces, had been produced. The story is absurd, but the music and decorations are much praised.

COUNTRY NEWS.

THE GENERAL ELECTION.—The country papers present indications of an approaching general election. Many of them contain addresses of candidates to their constituencies. At Worcester, Mr. Cavendish, a Whig, has come forward in opposition to the sitting members, Mr. East and Mr Escott. Another candidate for the representation of that city, Mr M. Portal, of Freehold Priors, a Protectionist, is also in the field. Mr. Portal is stated in addition to be canvassing. Almost before the requisition to Sir George Grey could be completed, two other gentlemen are put forward as candidates. They are Lord Ossulton and Lord Lovaine. At Lewes, Mr. J. B. Blackett, the second Liberal candidate, has been induced by a committee of electors, has declined to come forward. The Hon Mr Bouverie, and Mr Watson, the barrister, have been named as probable candidates. In the Isle of Thanet, the Hon. A'Court Holmes has announced his intention to retire. Mr. Fleming, already mentioned as a candidate for the vacant seat, is to be opposed by Mr. J. Simson, eldest son of Sir B. Simson, Bart., who represented the island some years ago. The Naval Journal states that in the event of the Marquis of Worcester retiring from the eastern division of Gloucestershire, and contesting the western, "a Baronet and two other gentlemen, all well known for their adhesion to, and advocacy of, the agricultural interest, are spoken of as colleagues for Sir G. W. Codrington." There is also a rumour of the Hon. F Charteris coming forward. Five, if not six candidates are named for the western division of the county; the Marquis of Worcester, R. B. Hale, Esq, the Hon. G. Berkeley, and G Clayton, Esq.

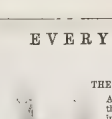
CURRENCY MEETING AT BIRMINGHAM.—A meeting of bankers, merchants, manufacturers and tradesmen of Birmingham, convened by Mr. T. C Salt, was held in the committee room at the Town Hall, (yesterday week), W. Scholefield, Esq., in the chair, for the purpose of "advising on the present derangement of our monetary system, and on the best means of averting the calamities which have invariably been the consequence of such a state of affairs." The meeting was addressed by the Chairman, Messrs. T. C. Salt, S. A. Goddard, and J Harlow; and resolutions were passed condemning the present monetary system, and advocating the necessity of forming a currency to be called "The Birmingham Currency Reform Association." A committee was then appointed.

THE WHEAT CROPS.—We have looked through the provincial papers for accounts of the state of the wheat crops In Kent, the plant is said to be in a healthy state, and barley is generally healthy. The Western Post reports from Devonshire that the late showers came opportunely for the growing crops of corn. The wheat, barley, and oats, are now sufficiently forward, quite thick enough on the land, and generally of a healthy appearance. Many early potatoes have sprung up, and they exhibit no weakness in the shoots. The Norwich Mercury, speaking of a portion of Norfolk, says: "Private accounts from Marshland state that the wire-worm has done considerable damage to the wheats, particularly to those on the black soils, and that in some cases large portions of some fields were rapidly going off." The Doncaster Chronicle speaks more favourable of things in Yorkshire. In Berkshire, the spring corn season has been very favourable. Similar account is given in regard to Leicestershire. In Suffolk, the crops look well. In Lancashire, the wheat plant is in general thin, this plant having been somewhat injured by the late severe frost, but there is no such deficiency as will prevent a good crop, if the remainder of the season should be favourable.

EVERYBODY'S COLUMN.

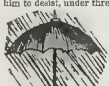
BY ALBERT SMITH.

THE JENNY LIND EXCITEMENT

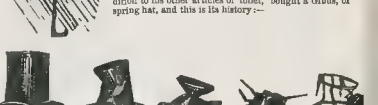


ALF London has been, since Tuesday evening, envying the other half for having been fortunate enough to squeeze into the Opera, and near JENNY LIND, on that eventful night. Whilst one part of town is sickly another is really mad; and where the madness will end nobody may tell: we have already seen Jenny Lind shirts, supplanting the ballet; we shall have Jenny Lind carriages, steamers, and locomotives; inkstands, kettle-holders, and umbrellas; and every other thing before specified. Indeed, all persons about to hold fancy-fairs should prohibit their contributors from working anything relating to the Swedish Nightingale, lest their stalls should be in the position of the picnic, to which everybody brought a cold tongue, but nobody thought of the salt.

Our good friend, Mr. Straggles, who always makes a point of being at the most popular places of resort, was present at the début of Jenny Lind on Tuesday; and, as well as his excited state will allow, he has favoured us with his impressions and adventures, or rather misadventures, on that eventful occasion. We say, "his excited state," for since then Mr. Straggles has been in a most high-pressure fever. He is found by his friends alluding to "Quand je quittais la Normandie" he never having travelled beyond Ramsgate in his life: and when the housemaid came, to call him on Wednesday morning, he, never having been to sleep, addressed her in the words, "Va, dit elle, mon enfant," to her great stupefaction. Then wandering back to Staudigl, he was seen sitting at his open bed-room window, and haranguing the people overlooking the St. ——'s burying-ground, and trying to resuscitate nuns from the dreary monuments mouldering thereabouts, by the mere powers of his voice, until the neighbours compelled him to desist, under threats of giving him in charge to the police.



HE ruin not preventing us, we were fortunate enough to accompany Mr. Straggles on Tuesday, and, unknown to him, made several sketches on our libretto, of the principal features of his career. He was very expensively got up for the occasion, having, in addition to his other articles of toilet, bought a Gibus, or spring hat, and this is its history:—

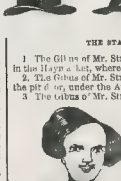


THE STAGES OF MR. STRAGGLES' FRENCH HAT.

1 The Gibus of Mr. Straggles, as it appeared when he left the Café de l'Europe, in the Haymarket, where he had been dining.

2. The Gibus of Mr. Straggles, as it appeared after he had waited an hour at the pit door, under the Arcade

3 The Gibus of Mr. Straggles, as it appeared when it was found.



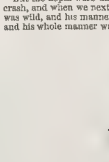
4. The Gibus of Mr. Straggles, as it appeared when its wires had been dislocated in a compound fashion by the crush at the barriers.

5. The Gibus of Mr. Straggles, as it appeared a mere wreck, only the broken wires, and a rag of its fabric, being left—when he, at last, got into the pit.

But this was not all. We have said that Mr. Straggles made up for a great effect. He had a new Joinville (black plain black—for Mr. Straggles is not a gent): a new coat, made by a recognised unadvertising tailor; and he had new boots, that he might not walk the zephyrs of camphine over his neighbours when he applauded. He also hired an opera-glass, at an expense of one-and-sixpence, of Mr. Hemming, over against the theatre; and so he naturally calculated upon an effect.

MR. STRAGGLES, AS HE EXPECTED TO APPEAR WHEN JENNY LIND CAME ON.

But the hopes were dashed to the ground. We were separated in the terrific crash, and when we next saw our friend, he was in a terrible plight. His hair was wild, and his manner frenzied; his Joinville had been pulled right round; and his whole manner was such as we have here represented



MR. STRAGGLES, AS HE UNEXPECTEDLY APPEARED WHEN JENNY LIND CAME ON.

He had lost his opera glass; and we last saw it lying under the foot of a gentleman, whose weight so interfered with its machinery, that it would not screw in or out any more; and, by the time at a long focus, was rendered perfectly useless.

When we parted with our friend, it was immediately after making a sketch of

MR. STRAGGLES, AS HE APPEARED CALLING A CAB AFTER THE OPERA.

His new coat was rent up behind, his physical energy perfectly exhausted, and his whole manner that of a maniac.

In the opinion that he is going mad, we have been strengthened by hearing that he has written some poetry to music, and he has chosen the AIR—ALICE GREY.

She's just as Mitchell published her,
Not lovely, but divine;
And her art is such, to others
She'll ever prove a mine.
Yet love I as man never loved,
Not fleeting as the wind,
But my bat, my hat is broken,
Through my love of Jenny Lind.

Her fair short hair is braided,
Just as dress'd by Mr. Wright,
Whom, singing German melodies,
I heard the other night.

The fair short hair may braided be,
Or comb'd in curls, or pinn'd,
But my new Gibus is broken
Through his love of Jenny Lind.

I've reckoned on the summer sun
To shine on me at last;
But my quarter's income's nearly gone,
From living rather fast:
And when the ticket "four-and-nine"
Is on my next hat plann'd,
They'll say, "His last was broken,
Through his love of Jenny Lind!"

SIR HARRY SMITH'S RETURN.—SONNET.

Welcome brave warrior, to thy native shore!
England ne'er jealously her soldier greets—
The Conqueror of Aliwal, where feats
Of bravery scarce paralled, down bore
The swarthy chivalry of false Lahore;
Trampled upon its sanguinary pride,
Gaining for Hardy's brow one laurel more,
So nobly won upon the Sutlej side.
Welcome to gallant Smith! The sword is sheath'd,
War's direful deality scenes have pass'd away.
Peace o'er the land her blessings pure hath breath'd,
And fair Prosperity resumes her sway
Pure is the sword that's only drawn to save,
The friend of peace is bravest of the brave. L.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Sopracetta."—It certainly seems difficult to find moves, but why not refer to the solution?

"F. G.," Edinburgh, is wrong. See the solution.

"G. B.," Addlestone.—The position, to have occurred in actual play, is pretty enough. We shall find a niche for it hereafter.

"C. S. J.," York.—We are sorry we cannot undertake the examination of the book solutions sent. You can obtain every Number of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, bound in Volumes Apply to the Publisher.

"C. E."—We should say the edition of Philidor mentioned is decidedly dear at the price, unless the volumes are cheerly bound. Your solution of the Indian Problem is a mistake.

"C. E. I."—With some hundreds of others, now under consideration You appear to be right respecting Empress No. 151

"L E I" Halifax.—Somewhat too easy; but they shall have a place in our collection of Unpublished Enigmas

"Britannia."—It shall be examined in due turn.

"Philo-Chess."—Wait till the "Hand-book" appears, and then you can judge for yourself.

"C. E. R."—You may get diagrams for Problems of Hastings, in Carey-street.

"F. P. W."—Volume 5 of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle" contains the whole of the Games in the Great Match between England and France; and Volume 7, the Matches between Mayet, Horwitz and Staunton—Harrwitz and the latter Horwitz and Kieseritzky and the celebrated Blindfold Games of Harrwitz and Kieseritzky. The first of these Volumes is nearly out of print.

"W. H. C."—They are very acceptable, and shall have an early place.

"Real-soap."—"G. C." The "Hand-book" will contain an analysis of the openings of "Rook and Bishop versus Rook" question, and a clear and systematic solution of the celebrated "Sam-Problem"—the latter from the pen of Captain Evans, the inventor of the "Evans' Gambit"

"A. P. G." The annual subscription to the London Chess Club is three guineas. Were to the Honorary Secretary, George and Vulture Hotel, Cornhill

Solutions by "A. Z." "Sopracetta," "W. S. L." "T. D. S." "N. D." Nottingham, "Wallace," "C. E." "C. E. R." "Echo," "Miss Laura C. C." "Britannia," "P. G. D." "C. P." "Judas," "N. F. F." "H. B. P." "X." "W. F. G. T." and "G. A. H." are correct. Thanks by "Bongey," "Phil," "Miles," "Civis," and "S. P. Q. R." are all wrong.

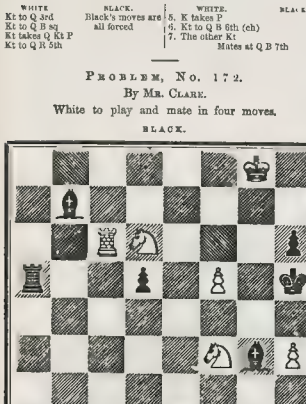
SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, No. 171.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK
1. Kt to Q 3rd	Black's moves are	5. K takes P
2. Kt to Q B sq	all forced	6. Kt to Q B 6th (ch)
3. Kt takes Q Kt P		7. The other Kt
4. Kt to Q R 5th		Mates at Q B 7th

PROBLEM, No. 172.

By MR. CLARE.

White to play and mate in four moves.



BLACK.

WHITE.

CHESS IN GERMANY.

The two following games, from the "Berlin Schach Zeitung," were lately played between Von B. de Lasa and Herrn Andersen, of Breslaw.

WHITE (Herr A.)	BLACK (V. H. d. L.)	WHITE (Herr A.)	BLACK (V. H. d. L.)
1. K P two	K P two	16. R takes K Kt (ch)	Kt takes R
2. K B P two	P takes P
3. K Kt to B 3rd	K Kt P two	17. R to K sq.	Castles (d)
4. K B to Q B 4th	K Kt P one	18. Kt takes Kt (ch)	K to R sq
5. Castles	P takes Kt	19. Kt to Q 5th	Q to K Kt 3rd
6. Q takes P	Q to K B 3rd	20. Q to K R 4th (e)	Q B to K 3rd
7. P to K 5th	Q takes P	21. Q B to his 3rd (ch)	K B to Kt 2nd
8. Q R one	K B to K R 3rd	22. Kt to Q 6th	Q R to Q B sq
9. Q B to Q 3rd	Kt P one (a)	23. Kt takes K R P	Q takes Kt
10. Q Kt to B 3rd	Q to her B 4th (ch)	24. B takes B (ch)	K takes B
11. Q R to K sq	Q to her B 4th	25. Q to K B 4th	Q to K B 4th
12. Kt to B sq	Q F two	26. Q to K Kt 3rd (ch)	Q to K Kt 5th
13. Q to K R 5th	Q to her 3rd	27. Q to K 6th (ch)	P to K B 3rd
14. B takes Q P	B takes B (b)	28. Q to her 5th	Q R takes P
15. Kt takes P	Q Kt to B 3rd	And White resigns

(a) This is Black's best move, but La Bourdonnais advises 13. Q K to B 3rd. Some amateurs perhaps also recommend Castling at this stage, but, if properly opposed, that serves to advance White's game

(b) It is a most point whether Castling or taking the Bishop is now the better move

(c) B to Q B 3rd is, perhaps, a stronger move of sustaining the attack.

(d) If Q B to K 3rd, White can take the B with H, threatening to check with his Kt at Q B 7th.

(e) If Q to K 5th (ch), Black replies with P to K B 3rd, having a piece superiority, and a secure game

WHITE (V. H. d. L.)	BLACK (Herr A.)	WHITE (V. H. d. L.)	BLACK (Herr A.)
1. K P two	Q B P two	12. P to K Kt 4th	R to his 6th
2. Q P two	Q to her 3rd	13. K to his 3rd	R takes K Kt
3. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	14. K takes R (a)	Q to K 7th
4. K Kt to Q B 4th	K P one	15. K to Kt 2nd	Q Kt to K 4th
5. Kt takes Q P	K Kt to Q B 4th	16. P to K R 4th	P to Q Kt 3rd
6. K Kt to B 3rd	K Kt to K 2nd	17. B takes K Kt (b)	P takes B
7. Q Kt to B 3rd	Castles	18. Q B to K B 4th	Q B checks
8. Q B P one	K Kt to his 3rd	19. P to K B 3rd	Kt takes K B P
9. Castles	K B P two	20. It takes Kt	Q to K 3 7th (ch)
10. P takes P	R takes P		And wins
11. K B to Q 3rd	R to K R 4th

(a) If the Queen took the Rook, Black won her by checking with his Kt at K R 6th

(b) B to K 4th would have been better.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

(HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.)

No. 152.—By Mr. Mc. G——

WHITE	BLACK.	WHITE	BLACK.
K at Q 4th	K at Q 4th	Pa at Q 3rd and Q B 2nd
R at Q sq. h

White to play and mate in three moves.

No. 153.

For this and the following Enigma we are indebted to the ingenuity of a distinguished member of the St. George's Chess Club.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
Kt at Q Kt sq	Kt at B 7th	Kts at K sq and Q 8th	R at Q Kt 5th
Q at K R 6th	Q at her R 6th	P at K Kt 3rd	Kts at K 3rd and Q B 5th
B at K B 8th	R at K B 8th		P at Q B 6th

White mates in five moves.

No. 154.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q R 2nd	K at Q B 4th	Ps at K 5th, Q B 3rd, Q Kt 2nd, and Q R 3rd	K 3rd, Q 4th, Q B 5th, and Q R 3rd
B at K R 4th	Ps at K R 3rd, K Kt 3rd, K 4th, and Q B 2nd
Kt at Q B 3rd	P at K 4th,

In this position White plays first and mates in seven moves.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—A very limited quantity of wheat of home produce has arrived hither since Monday, and the show of samples of that grain to-day was unusually small. As several foreign buyers were again in the market, the trade with Essex and Kent was very brisk, at an advance in the quotations paid on Monday last, of from 4s to 5s per quarter. The best Essex, white sold at 100s per quarter. Upwards of 15,000 quarters of wheat have come in from abroad, yet nearly the whole was taken for shipment to France, at a further improvement in value of from 4s to 5s per quarter. The sale for all Ms of barley—The supply of which was on the increase—was so-live, at 1s to 2s per quarter more money. There was only a retail inquiry for malt, but prevarious rates were firmly supported. Very few oats were on show, and a good clearance was effected, as 1s to 2s per quarter more m ney. Both beans and peas were 1s to 2s per quarter dearer. Flour was held at higher prices.

ARRIVALS.—English, Wheat, 2,320 quarters; barley, 1,456; malt, 3,750; oats, 220. Irish Wheat (—); barley, —; malt, —; oats, 2,410. Foreign: Wheat, 13,646; barley, 2,740; malt (—); oats, —; flour, 1,200 sacks.

Essex and Kent Markets.—Kent, red, 81s to 89s; ditto white, 86s to 93s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 81s to 85s; ditto white, 86s to 89s; rye, 60s to 62s; grinding barley, 40s to 50s; distilling, 51s to 56s; malting ditto, 58s to 60s; Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 76s to 78s; brown do., 70s to 72s; Ryeland and Ware, 77s to 79s; Chevalier, 80s to 84s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire feed oats, 30s to 35s; potato ditto, 33s to 37s; Youghal and Cork, black, 30s to 31s; ditto white, 36s to 38s; tick beans, new, 42s to 44s; ditto old, —s to —s; grey peas, 36s to 38s; maple, 40s to 42s; white, —s to —s; pollers, 45s to 48s, per quarter. Town-made flour, 70s to 72s; Suffolk, 66s to 68s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 65s to 68s per 280 lbs. Foreign—Danzig and wheat, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; barley, —s to —s; oats, —s to —s; beans, —s to —s; peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 43s to 44s per 196lbs; Baltic, —s to —s per barrel.

The Seed Market—The demand for all kinds of seeds still continues a very inactive state, but, in prices, we have no material alteration to notice The supplies of cloverseed are unusually small.

Liverpool, Monday.—Since Monday last, the following imports have been declared:—Wheat, 2,000 barrels, 1,000 from Egypt, 1,000 from Turkey; flour, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; Indian corn, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; oats, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; beans, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; peas, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; potatoes, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; rice, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; barley, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; oatmeal, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; cheese, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; bacon, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; lard, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; butter, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; eggs, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; hams, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; tallow, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; linseed, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; linseed cake, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; rapeseed, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; rapeseed cake, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; cotton, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; cotton seed, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; cotton seed cake, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; cotton seed oil, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; cotton seed oil cake, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; cotton seed oil cake, 1,000 barrels, from Egypt; cotton seed oil cake

PARLIAMENTARY PORTRAITS.

MR. FIELDEN, M.P.

On Monday evening, the Factory Bill was passed in the House of Commons, by a majority of 63. Within a short period, it will be the law of the land. The struggle for it has been one of some years' continuance; towards its conciliation, Mr. Fielden, who had always been an influential supporter of the cause, became its leader. Lord Ashley was one of the Conservatives who gave in his adherence to Sir Robert Peel on the Corn-Law question; and, as he had been elected by his Dorsetshire constituents on very different principles, he resigned his seat, and was, of course, lost as the leader of the Short-Time party. The question did not suffer by the succession of Mr. Fielden to the post of Lord Ashley. His Lordship, though most zealous and sincere, was scarcely inflexible enough for the leader of a popular movement: his philanthropy required tempering with that "sterner stuff" of which successful leaders are made; and, on one occasion, his yielding a point to the request of the Peel Ministry, after he had obtained a majority in the Commons that all but broke up the Government, gave rise to some positive dissatisfaction. During the Corn-Law debates, too, the state of the agricultural labourers in general, and those of Dorsetshire in particular, was shown to be not so superior to that of the factory operatives as to give the landed party a right to assume the post of teachers of "the humanities." The tu quoque argument, though the most inconclusive of all, was frequently used against Lord Ashley with much effect; and, more than once, he was broadly told to look at the people at his own door before he ventured to denounce the employers of the manufacturing districts.

To some of these objections or insinuations was Mr Fielden liable. He had been a factory worker himself; he had risen to the condition of an employer, and while advocating the limitation of the hours of labour, was himself the master of one of the largest establishments in England. He spoke with the authority of one thoroughly conversant with both sides of the question; and nowhere has practical knowledge greater influence than in the House of Commons. His simple and earnest advocacy made up for many personal deficiencies

Mr. Fielden is no politician, and makes no figure in debate. His voice is so extremely weak, that, except those immediately around him, no one can hear more than a few broken sentences, spoken with a strong provincial accent. He generally prepares and publishes his speeches himself. He is tall and thin, touched by age, and with an appearance of ill health. But a strong mind, and singleness of purpose are there, and these effect much; they have raised him personally to an influential station, and, as a public man, his name is now connected with one of the great questions of the day. In general politics, Mr Fielden does not much interfere; once only he brought a personal matter before the House. The firm, during the depressed seasons of 1842 and 1843, carried on their business at a loss, and returned their profits to the Income-Tax Commissioners as nil. They were, however, surcharged in a large amount, which they would not pay, and their stock was seized, and, we believe, sold by auction. After endless disputes and appeals, Mr. Fielden brought the case before the House, we never heard with what result, for he got no satisfaction from the Government. Mr. Goulburn's answer was very official and evasive indeed

Mr Fielden sits for Oldham.

MR. FIELDEN, M.P.

THE ROYAL PICTURES AT ST. JAMES'S PALACE.

The two Pictures painted for her Majesty, by Winterhalter, and placed in the Banqueting, or Queen Anne's Room, at St. James's Palace, were opened to the public (by tickets) on Monday last. One of the pictures is large, the other small.

The first Picture is a family group, representing the Queen and Prince Albert, and their five children. Her Majesty and the Prince are seated on a settee, placed upon the terrace of Windsor Castle; the Queen in a white dress, and the Order of the Garter; and the Prince in a suit of black, with black silk stockings. On the Queen's right, and standing by her side, is the Prince of Wales, in a crimson velvet dress, and immediately in front of the Queen is her Majesty's second son, in the act of running to play with his three sisters, who form a charming group on the left of the composition. The two elder Princesses are playing with their youngest sister on a cushion on the ground, and Prince Albert is represented touching the [illegible] hand and directing her attention to the group before her. On the Prince's left is a table with fruit upon it, and on her Majesty's right is a vase of flowers. The floor is carpeted.

The small Picture, which is placed opposite the larger one, and therefore, cannot be shown in our Illustration, is a full-length portrait of the Prince of Wales, in a sailor's dress—blue jacket, duck trousers, and a flat black straw hat—the costume of the Royal Navy.

The larger Picture is, in many respects, the best work of art; the figures are artistically arranged, and the colouring is good.

Among the visitors to view the Royal Pictures on Friday, were the Bavarian, Brazilian, and Netherlands Ministers; the Duke and Duchess of Beaufort, the Duke and Duchess of St. Alban's, the Marquis of Lansdowne, Marquis of Donro, Marquis and Marchioness of Worcester, Earl Delawarr, Earl Auckland, Count D'Orsay, Lord Fitzroy Somerset, Lady Sondes, Lord Colville, Sir George Couper, Sir John Hobhouse, Mr. Bannerman, M.P., and the Hon. W. Ashley.

On Tuesday, were the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London, the Duke and Duchess of Beaufort, the Dowager Countess of Charleville, Earl of Fingall, Lord Sheffield, Lady Lyndhurst, Lady Cottenham, Lord Sondes, the Countess of Arundel, Lady Ormonde, Lady Barrington, the Marquis of Westmeath, Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, Viscountess Glentworth, Lord Colborne, Lord Somers, Sir J. Yarde Buller, Lord Aylmer, Lord J. Stuart, and Lady Charlotte Egerton.

And, on Wednesday, were the Bishop of Rochester, Lords Falmouth, Leigh, Walsingham, and Fortescue, Dowager Lady Suffield, Lady Mary Howard, and Lady Radstock.

Tickets to view the pictures are issued from the Lord Chamberlain's office, from twelve to four o'clock. Each ticket will admit the lady or gentleman whose name will be inserted in it, and five other persons. All applications must be made personally, or through a responsible agent, as it will be impossible to send tickets or to answer written applications

Ladies and gentlemen receiving tickets will be required to leave their names and address, on their cards, at the Lord Chamberlain's office.

These very interesting Pictures, we learn, will be engraved forthwith, and published by Alderman Moon.

The Admirals' Good Service Pension.—The Earl of Auckland has conferred the Admirals' Good Service Pension, which reverted to his patronage on the death of Sir Davidge Gould, on Admiral of the White the Hon. Sir John Talbot, G.C.B., the hero of the Rivoli, and one of the most distinguished officers in the service. He is the brother of the present Baron Talbot de Malahide

Court Martial at Portsmouth.—An inquiry into the circumstances attending the wreck of the steamer, Thunderbolt, in Algoa Bay, in February last, commenced on Monday, at Portsmouth, by court martial, ordered by the Admiralty, to try Commander A. Boyle, and the officers and crew, for their conduct on the occasion. The members of the Court consisted of Rear-Admiral Parker, C.B., president; Captain Pascoe, Victory; Captain Chads, C.B., Excellent; Captain Milne, St Vincent; Captain S. C. Dacres, Avenger. Mr. G. L. Greetham officiated as Judge Advocate. The Court was occupied during the whole day with the inculpatory evidence, and on Tuesday the defence was entered upon. The Court was of opinion that her Majesty's late steamer Thunderbolt had been wrecked through inattention and neglect, and sentenced Commander Alexander Boyle, and Mr. J. D. Milne, master, to be dismissed her Majesty's service; but, in consequence of the production of high testimonials of former character and ability, recommended them to the favourable consideration of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty.—After the conclusion of this court martial, the same members were sworn to try the carpenter of the Thunderbolt for drunkenness, subsequent to leaving her, and while on board the Europa taking a passage to Simon's Bay. The charge was fully proved, and he was [illegible] the service.

Incendiary Fire at Welbeck Abbey.—On Wednesday evening last week, an incendiary fire was [illegible] the house of [illegible], at Wood Barn, near Welbeck Abbey. The damage has been estimated at £400. Owing to the great exertions of the villagers and the police, the farm buildings were preserved.

EXHIBITION AT ST. JAMES'S PALACE OF WINTERHALTER'S PICTURES, PAINTED FOR HER MAJESTY

CEILING OF HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

CEILING OF HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

The subject of interior decoration is now occupying so large a share of artistical attention, that we are persuaded the accompanying Illustration of one of the finest specimens in the metropolis, will be acceptable to our readers. By placing it in comparison with the Ceiling of the Royal Italian Opera, (Covent Garden,) represented at page 268, it will be seen that the work we now engrave is altogether entitled to the highest rank as a masterpiece of art. It has an airy lightness, which is peculiarly appropriate and characteristic for a ceiling; and the surface is slightly vaulted, which, aided by the judicious selection of the designs, gives even additional height to the edifice.

From the central aperture hangs the superb lustre which almost entirely lights the theatre. This compartment has a delicate lake ground; the four figures bear vases of flowers, cleverly painted; and the Grecian bordure, in its design, as well as in the peculiar form in which it is arranged, gives effective distinctness to the entire panel. The continuation of the embellishment outside the main border is very aerial; and the winged head by which it is connected with the next circle, (of exquisite design,) is a clever contrivance. The festoons of flowers, volant birds and butterflies, and the groups of musical instruments, which float, as it were, around the panel, are so delicate as not to interfere with the inclosing circle. This is broken by beautifully executed copies of "the Elements," by Albano, whose poetic fancy, brilliant colouring, and cheerful subjects, fit his works peculiarly for a place here. The intermediate diamond-shaped panels are filled with arabesque figures (fountains), resting upon the next bordure of scallop, crested; upon which are perched birds of superb plumage, which assist the aerial character of the decorations at the same time that they lend their varied and brilliant colouring. The next circle comprises an almost indescribable variety of figures, some of them picturesque and beautiful, and grouped with great skill; each within an arcaded frame-work, flanked by a sort of candelabrum design. The two remaining circles, and the intervening panels, are very chaste; and complete, in true artistical spirit, this charming composition. The main colours, by the way, are lake and bright blue; added to the infinite variety of the hues of the several objects. All is life and activity, or rich and busy fancy, and poetic creation, in most effective combination.

We take this opportunity of stating what was unintentionally omitted in our account of the re-decoration of Her Majesty's Theatre, last year—that the whole of the design, composition, and arrangement, of this beautiful work was intrusted, by Mr. Lumley, to Mr. John Johnson, of John-street, Adelphi, who was travelling student to the Royal Academy (in architecture); during his three years' stay in Italy, he attentively studied the works of Raphael, Julio Romano, and their contemporaries; and the styles adopted by these artists have been very successfully introduced by Mr. Johnson, in his tasteful work at Her Majesty's Theatre.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

FIRST APPEARANCE OF MDLLE. JENNY LIND IN "ROBERTO IL DIAVOLO"

It is barely possible to do justice to the effect produced on ourselves, in common with the concourse of persons assembled on Tuesday and Thursday nights at this theatre. We have arrived at a new stage of our theatrical experience. A new perception of musical art has burst upon us; it is as though we now learned for the first time what singing really is, and have been, with all our fancied knowledge and taste, groping, till now, in darkness and error. The "trick of voice," the well-prepared bursts, the artistic "effects," which we have hitherto applauded to the skies, are discovered to be only so many mistakes, and artists appear to have been labouring all their lives to attain that which they were better devoid of theatrical art; the best way to sing is to appear never to have learned. All conventionalisms are overthrown, all traditions of the operatic stage turned into contempt—and, by what? By the appearance of Mdlle. Jenny Lind at Her Majesty's Theatre. An excitement almost unparalleled in theatrical annals has prevailed as to the appearance of the Swedish cantatrice; the highest expectations were formed, while, on the other hand, there was a fear—not an unnatural one—that she could not equal her immense reputation, and come up to the ideal of those with whom she had been, for so long a period, the topic of conversation, and the object of extraordinary interest. This fear was proved to be groundless—Jenny Lind has surpassed all expectation, because it had been impossible to be prepared for something so startlingly new—so unlike all we have heard before. Each one, it is true, formed his own idea of the vocalist; yet this always bore a certain resemblance to some bygone favourite, or to some existing prima donna; most people expected, indeed, a marvellous superiority in degree, but were unprepared for the superiority in kind of talent which she possesses.

To have attained the perfect control over her voice—that faultlessness, purity, and delicacy of execution which she possesses, Mdlle. Lind must have studied assiduously; but to such profit have been her studies, that there is nothing in her singing to remind one of them. Everything she does appears spontaneous—and yet there is never a fault. The same thing is remarkable in her acting: every movement seems the impulse of the moment; yet, not for a second, does she lose sight of the identity of the character she impersonates—not for a moment are her gestures otherwise than expressive and graceful. Art, by her, has been only used to cultivate nature—not for a moment to disguise it. Were it possible to detect a flaw in the voice, or a slip in the execution of Jenny Lind, her singing would still be realistic, for it reaches the heart and touches the deepest chords of human feeling; but she has, perhaps, never a weak moment; at the instant the listener from the habit of hearing other artists, expects the voice to become weak and fatigued—at that moment it bursts forth in greater beauty than ever. Her voice is astonishing. To the fullest, purest, sweetest tone imaginable, it unites a vibrating and penetrating quality, that makes its softest whisper audible, no matter where the listener is seated; and that, when exerted to its full extent, is truly glorious, and it may be distinctly heard above the greatest din of the orchestra, and of the voices of the other artists.

We are not afraid of being considered extravagant in our praise, at least by those who have witnessed Mdlle. Lind's performances, for the delight of hearing something so new and so natural has taken the most phlegmatic by storm. Seldom has any theatre presented such a scene of excitement and enthusiasm as Her Majesty's on the night of her début. Her reception was overpowering—that said much for the fame which had preceded her, and also, we think, for the universal good-will which Mdlle. Lind, as an individual, has succeeded in inspiring—the feeling of enthusiasm warmed, too, as it was, by the shrinking, timid attitude of the young artist, as she was led forward to receive such unusual time she remained on the stage, which showed that public expectation, after being raised so high, was fully gratified, and even surpassed. We never heard anything more delicious than the sustained notes which commence her first cavatina, "Va dit elle" full, clear, and bell-like, and then dying off to the faintest whisper. This song was interrupted by a thunder of applause, above which, however, could be heard the stentorian "bravo" of the great Lablache, who, after sitting immoveable in his box, like one entranced, suddenly jumped up, as if unable to control his feelings, and applauded furiously. The charming little romance, "Quand je quittais la Normandie," was even more rapturously applauded, each verse being encored. At the conclusion of the last, she gave the roulade "A pleine voix," limpid, pure, and deliciously sweet; and finished with a shake, so delicately, so softly executed, that each one held his breath to listen, and the tumult of applause at the conclusion baffles description. The scene with Bertram was magnificently executed. Her passion of terror was nature itself; and the last act, in which she struggles to rescue Robert from the clutches of Bertram, as a specimen of dramatic power was beyond praise. The house presented at the conclusion such a scene as has been rarely witnessed. The crowded mass, waving hats and handkerchiefs, stamping, knocking, shouting, and endeavouring in every possible manner to express their delight, called the vocalist three times before the curtain, with an enthusiasm we have never seen surpassed, and yet which was no more than deserved

Our space fails us to do justice this week to the great Staudigl, likewise a débutant on this stage. On Tuesday, the night of his debut, attention was so much riveted on Mdlle. Lind, that even he remained comparatively unnoticed at first; besides his voice and execution seemed to our ears to beteken that he partook of the excitement and agitation which prevailed before as well as behind the curtain. But in the last acts of the opera he more than realised all that was expected of him. Both as an actor and singer his execution of Bertram was unsurpassed, and became at times sublime.

We do not so much regret the short space of time which remains to us to notice the opera itself, because "Robert le Diable," though it is some time since it has been played here, has, nevertheless, by its charming melodies, and fine concerted pieces, become well known to all amateurs. It is truly a splendid opera in imaginative power rarely equalled. The music is of a totally different character to that usually performed on the Italian stage: and some of the artists, especially Fraschini, appear new, and somewhat unaccustomed to it; he, however, acts it with his wonted dramatic fire, and sings with a taste and skill that will be yet more striking, when he shall have become more versed in a style of music apparently new to him. Gardoni, having been for so long a time at the Académie, in Paris, has become more au fait at this class of opera; his delightful voice and style gave great charm to the little part of Raimbault. Madame Castellan sings with more than her wonted brilliancy and fire the music allotted to the Princess.

So strong a cast has rarely been seen, but, for the moment, the great interest is centred on the lady with whose name we began this notice—Mdlle. Jenny Lind.

On Thursday, "Roberto il Diavolo" was repeated, and Mdlle. Lind's reception even more enthusiastic than on Tuesday. The theatre was crowded to excess, and the struggles to gain admission were tremendous. The audience, during the evening, repeatedly testified their delight by rising en masse, waving of handkerchiefs, and the most ecstatic applause. Her Majesty, for the second time, honoured the performance with her presence.

HERR STAUDIGL.

This distinguished singer and actor, who made so successful a debut at Her Majesty's Theatre, on Tuesday night, had already obtained extensive popularity in this country. "His voice, in extent of compass, flexibility, fervour, and purity of tone, was certainly never surpassed, perhaps never equalled." The scale of this wonderful organ is thus described in a paper in Fraser's Magazine, in the words of two Professors of the greatest eminence. One says:—"The compass of the voice is from the deep E in the bass, to the high B in the tenor; and I have heard hun sing these two notes from his chest." The other musical informant states that Standigl's voice compri-es almost two and a-half octaves, from the deep E flat in the bass, to the high G in tenor. He adds, all the registers of this splendid organ are developed in equal perfection, energetic or soft, as required for expression, but never either hard or effeminate. To govern this splendid organ he has a mind, taste, feelings, and inspirations of the highest order. As a lyric actor his repertory is very extensive, and his versatility equally extraordinary, a list before us comprises upwards of fifty parts which Standigl has sustained with first-rate success; he is no less great in the performance of sacred music, than he is in profane; and he is, moreover, himself a possessor of the part, he played Pietro, in "Massaniello," with triumphant success. He then studied under Gottank, Demmer, and Cicimara; and, in 1833, on the production of Meyerbeer's opera of "Robert the Devil," produced at Vienna, the part of Bertrava was confided to Standigl, and the attraction of the opera, mainly through him, was very great. He was then engaged for six years; three months of each year he sang with great success in other continental towns, and, in 1840, he joined the German operatic company in London. Since this period, to quote the paper in Fraser's Magazine, "he has been equally a favourite with the country circle at Buckingham Palace, the learned audience at the Philharmonic and Ancient Concerts," and the audiences of Drury Lane and Covent Garden; and now he has begun to gather fresh laurels in the great lyric establishment of Her Majesty's Theatre.

TO MRS. BUTLER (LATE MISS FANNY KEMBLE.)

Daughter of Genius! upon whom the stole
Of kindling inspiration hath fallen in thy face,
Flash forth the mental lightnings of thy race,
The emanations of the Heaven-lit soul!
On seeing, leading the past years unroll
Their panorama, and we fain retrace
The glories of the Kembles the control
Of tragic muse, and wild Thalian grace.
Welcome! fair priestess of the deathless flame,
First fostered on the sacred Avon's side.
Thy native land will echo to thy fame,
And hail thy triumphs with maternal pride.
Welcome, fair Kemble o'er the billows foam,
Welcome to England, thine own hearted home.—L.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Coming events—
I spend what I have, and I save what I owe,
And what's that to any one whether or no?
Irish Melodies.

PRESENTLY we shall be beset with gallant pastimes: yachting, and fresh-water racing, and cricket, and all sports and diversions. The present week was "slow" to speak in the vernacular. The Second Spring Meeting at Newmarket, indeed, was on the scene, but it's a dull affair generally—a sort of Quaker's meeting—a nervous affair, when men fall into their beds, and find the pages overcast with the shadows of coming events. Surely pain and pleasure must be as close allies as, according to—who is it?—are the sublime and the ridiculous. The most popular mercy-making is Great Britain, beyond all comparison, is the Derby Day, whose sun sets upon more sorrowful hearts than any that rises from January to December! There is a well-known couplet of Byron's, to the intent that the gambler has been ruined, and that his sons have gone, and the other loss: this may be true as regards the diceR, but it's just the reverse with your turfite he's never satisfied.....

Losers their luck, because they've lost, deplore.
And winners, theirs, because they've won no more

We purpose canvassing the great coming events, for lack of matter of more account. The Derby which—about seven days will see us engaged with it will be as open a race, there is reason to suppose, as the speculation upo i it has been liberal; that is, as regards the chances of those who might "get on" against the favourites. For that race, the betting has already reached the price of 5 to 1; so that laying against them would be safe investing—with safe customers. But, there's the rub: your man of business is too apt to adopt for the posy of the Ring, the first line of the couplet prefixed to our paper; his motto is, "sus apon tens, aliud profes-us." The extremely confined character of the betting since the commencement of the season has been attributed to the difficulties of the money market, contingent upon a bad harvest and other commercial causes. Such may have been the cause, in a degree; but the bad faith of those who have turned the turf into a profession, has the pun apart—affected the principle. It has not sm-thered the passion, but as it into another channel. The extent of racing speculation under the new system of Sweeps is enormous; a license upon them at five per cent. would enable the Minister to take off the Property and Incometax, and leave a handsome profit. .....

Well, in such circumstances it must be an interesting inquiry, "What's to win the Derby?" Mr. Mostyn looked very like the champion at the close of the Craven week; Dee, the First Spring sally damaged his popularity if not his prospects. His stable was smashed to the tune of 1,000*l.* by the Conyngham's second the trump of the Derbury lot—anon the Cossack: two great cards—in the same hand. Chester races sent Van Tromp to the rear; and, as the Rowley Mile Races on Tuesday was a regular "go as you please" one—saving the advance of Mr. Martin. That new fancy owes his elevation in the odds, of course, to his stable companion winning the Dee Stakes but wherefore on that account, these pressers, who are not to be trusted, will follow suit, the Dee, to shew that Mr. Martin shall win the Derby. Is the retreat of Van Tromp a ruse? is the hope of the Goodwood party clean gone? Is the performance of Conyngham, or that of Cossack good evidence to back an Epsom "cracker?" The Derby probably as open a race as it has been within the last twenty years? and h e often within that space of time has it been won by an outsider? This is a pretty little problem wherewith to dispose of an Epsom week—a harmless fraud during the suspension of more active interest in the racing world.

TATTERSALL'S

MONDAY.—The Van Tromp movement this afternoon excited no small alarm amongst his supporters, for, notwithstanding upwards of £2000 was laid out on him, the odds were so liberal, and the layers so anxious, that we can scarcely look upon his chance as otherwise than gone. The betting was not confined to this horse; but, beyond restoring Conyngham to the ownership and bringing two new outsiders into notice, it was not much of much importance.

SUFFOLK STAKES.

3 to 1 agst Doctrine	5 to 1 agst Hydrangea
9 to 2 —— Faultless	8 to 1 —— Cossachia
10 to 1 agst Woodpigeon

DERBY.

2 to 1 agst J Day's lot (t)	15 to 1 agst Glenrick	40 to 1 agst Nottingham
6 to 1 —— Keats's lot (t)	16 to 1 —— Planet	40 to 1 —— Oxonian (t)
6 to 1 —— Congraham	20 to 1 1 —— Wanota (t)	50 to 1 —— Old Port
6 to 1 —— Cossack (t)	30 to 1 —— Mathematician (t)	66 to 1 —— Sir Hercules (t)
10 to 1 —— Mr. Martin	40 to 1 —— Mathematician (t)	66 to 1 —— Tiresome (t)
12 to 1 —— Van Tromp (t)	40 to 1 —— Epicure	100 to 1 —— Ulysses
	100 to 1 agst Ziska (t)

4 to 1 agst Clementina (t)	6 to 1 agst The Farmer's Daughter	12 to 1 agst Fifty out of Quilt
		Arnold's dam (t)

THURSDAY.—The subjoined quotations are made up to Thursday afternoon, and are partly governed by the last from Newmarket.

DERBY.

7 to 1 agst J Day's lot	15 to 1 agst Glenrick	40 to 1 agst Oxonian
5½ to 1 —— The Cossack (t)	20 to 1 —— Wanota	40 to 1 —— Montpossier
6 to 1 —— Congraham	30 to 1 —— Mathematician	50 to 1 —— Epicure
9 to 1 —— Van Tromp	35 to 1 —— Nottingham	66 to 1 —— Ulysses
10 to 1 —— Mr Martin

OAKS.

2 to 1 agst Clementina	12 to 1 agst Fifty out of Quilt Arnold's dam	25 to 1 agst Brown Bess
5 to 1 —— Farmer's Daughter		30 to 1 —— Nannette
9 to 1 —— Blanche	25 to 1 —— Lady Lift
	No others mentioned

NEWMARKET SECOND SPRING MEETING.—TUESDAY.

Fifty Sovs, for three-year-olds, 6st 9lb; four, 8st; five, 8st 7lb; six and aged, 8st 12lb; T.M.M.: the winner to be sold for 200 sovs.

Mr. Shelley's Tarella, 3 yrs	.. .. ..	.. (Pearl) 1
Lord Exeter's Voronetz, 3 yrs	.. .. ..	.. (Treen, jun.) 2

Fifty Sovs, for three-year-olds, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 4lb. RM (7 Subs.)

Lord Orford's gr c by Clearwell, out of Angelina	.. ..	.. (Nat) 1
Mr. Wigram's Derlades	.. ..	.. (W. Boyce) 2

Sweeps of 100 Sovs each, h ft. Criterion Course. (3 Subs.)

Sir J. Hawley's Piccinino, 8st	.. ..	.. walked over.

WEDNESDAY.

Fifty Sovs, for three-year-olds, 6st 9lb; four, 8st; five, 8st 7lb; six and aged, 8st 12lb; T.M.M.: the winner to be sold for 200 sovs.

Mr. Shelley's Tarella, 3 yrs	.. ..	.. (Pearl) 1
Lord Exeter's Voronetz, 3 yrs	.. ..	.. (Treen, jun.) 2

Fifty Sovs, for three-year-olds, 8st 7lb; fillies, 8st 4lb. RM (7 Subs.)

Lord Orford's gr c by Clearwell, out of Angelina	.. ..	.. (Nat) 1
Mr. Wigram's Derlades	.. ..	.. (W. Boyce) 2

Sweeps of 100 Sovs each, h ft. Criterion Course. (3 Subs.)

Sir J. Hawley's Piccinino, 8st	.. ..	.. walked over.

WEDNESDAY.

The Swoepstakes of 50 sovs each, for four-year-olds. Last three miles of B.C. (4 Subs.)

Lord Orford's Footstool, 8st 10lb	.. ..	.. (Nat) 1
Lord Albemarle's Radiphus, 8st 5lb	.. ..	.. (Robinson) 2

Betting: 9 to 1 agst Footstool, who made all the running, and won by five lengths.

The Champion Stakes of 50 sovs each, h ft; colts, 8st 7lb; fillies, &c., 8st. About one mile and five furlongs. (30 Subs.)

Duke of Bedford's Ziska	.. ..	.. (Butler) 1
Lord Orford's Ziska	.. ..	.. (Nat) 2

Betting: Even on Ziska, and 3 to 1 agst Bridle.

Won easy by a couple of lengths. Sir Peter Laurie a very bad third.

Handicap Plate of 50 Sovs; for 3 yrs, &c. A.F.

Mr. Barnes's Tufthunter, 3 yrs, 8st	.. ..	.. (Dockeray) 1
Lord Strathmore's Secundus, 6 yrs, 8st 5lb	.. ..	.. (Crouch) 2

Betting: 7 to 4 agst Bella Donna, 5 to 1 agst Campanile, and 4 to 1 agst Taft Hunter. The race, from the first to the last, was between Secundus and Taft Hunter; the young one walking to the cords, and winning in a canter by four lengths.

The Suffolk Stakes, of 15 sovs each, 6 ft if declared. Last mile-and-a-half of R.C. The second to receive 50 sovs. Thirty-nine subs., of whom 14 declared

Mr. Greville's Mirmillo, 3 yrs, 7st 3lb	.. ..	(G. Stamp) 1
Col. Anson's Lazarillo, 3 yrs, 8st 5lb	.. ..	(Charlton) 2

Won in a canter by four lengths.

The Jockey Club Plate of 50 sovs. B.C.

Lord Exeter's Hydrangea, 4 yrs, 7st 2lb	.. walked over

THURSDAY.

Handicap Sweepstakes of 20 sovs each. T.Y.C.

Lord Exeter's Circassian Maid	.. ..	.. 1
Col. Peel's Oregon	.. ..	.. 2

Five ran.

Sweepstakes of 10 sovs each, for two-year-olds. T.Y.C.

Mr. Barnes's Blackcock	.. ..	.. 1
Duke of Rutland's Jugleprt	.. ..	.. 2

Six ran.

Sweepstakes of 10 sovs each, for two-yr-olds. T.Y.C.

Col. Peel's Cossack	.. ..	.. 1
Mr. Sandford's The Sheriff	.. ..	.. 2

Ten ran

PARIS SPRING RACES.

A cold, cutting wind, and a cloudy sky, deterred a great number of persons from visiting the Champ de Mars on Sunday, to witness the second of the spring meetings of Paris. Nevertheless, there was a goodly gathering of all classes, and the immense amphitheatre presented an imposing appearance. There could not have been less than 100,000 persons assembled, all of whom appeared to take great interest in the business of the day. The proceedings of the day took place in the following order:—

The Stakes of the Minister of Agriculture and Commerce, 4th class of 2000f. for horses and mares of three-year-old and upwards; distance, 2 kilometres; heats. (28 Subs.)

Count de Pontalba's b c Club Stick, 4 yrs, 118lb	..(Buckle)	1 1
Count d'Angosse's b c Tibi, 3 yrs, 91lb	.. ..	2 dr

The Ecole Stakes of 3000f for horses and mares of 3 yrs and upwards; entry, 150f; distance, twice round the course. Penalty or allowance to be declared for 4000f (3 Subs.)

M. Aumont's b f La Reine Margot, 3 yrs, 99 lb	(Young Hurst)	1
M. Fasquel's b m Tomate, 5 yrs, 132.lb	.. ..	2

The Stakes du Printemps for colts and fillies of 3 yrs and upwards; entry, 200f; distance, once round. (7 Subs.)

M Aumont's b c Morok, 3 yrs	.. ..	(Edwards) 1
Duke de Mouchy's br c Bachon	.. ..	(Count de Gamba) 2

Stakes of the City of Paris. 6000f, given by the Municipal Council, for horses and mares of 3 yrs and upwards, of all descriptions, bred in France or Belgium; entry 200f; the second horse to receive two-thirds of the entries, and the third the remainder, &c. (10 Subs.)

M. Aumont's b c Liverpool, 4 yrs, 119lb	.. ..	(Edwards) 1
Count de Pontalba's b c Philip Shah, 4 yrs	.. ..	.. 2

Hurdle Race: Handicap of 200f offered by the members of the Jockey Club. Entry, 75f; the second horse to save his entry. (6 Subs.)

Baron N. de Rothschild's b h Hack, aged, 142lbs	.. ..	(Smith) 1
M. Tony Montel's b m Decasia, aged, 124lbs	.. ..	(Hardy) 2
M. Didier's b m Mary Jane, 6yrs, 64lbs	.. ..	(Wheeler) 3

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON'S BIRTH-DAY.—Last Saturday was the birth-day of the Duke of Wellington, on which day his Grace completed his 78th year. The Duke's tradesmen assembled to do honour to the occasion at the Albion, Aldersgate-street; Henry Graves, Esq., in the chair.

LORD EDMUND FOLEY, Lord Elphinstone, late Governor of Madras, has returned to England.

MAJOR GENERAL SIR HARRY SMITH, BART., K.C.B.—The distinguished services of this gallant officer have been duly recognised since his arrival in the metropolis. From the day on which he reached town, the complimentary visits of the nobility and gentry, to say nothing of the Government officials and authorities of the Indian empire, have been more numerous than any before paid to an officer holding similar rank in the Queen's service. On Thursday, the gallant General and Lady Smith had the honour of dining with her Majesty the Queen Dowager. Amongst the many testimonials of the gallant General's services, it is understood that a handsome pension will be awarded to him by the Directors of the East India Company, at their first Board meeting.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

THE GREATEST NOVELTIES IN LONDON THIS WEEK, at ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE Under the Especial Patronage of her Majesty the Queen Prince Albert, and the Royal Family Proprietor and Manager Mr. Wm Batty On MONDAY, the 10th and during the week, the First Appearance of Mr. W F Wallett, the celebrated Clown. First Night of new and extraordinary Scenic Attraction, the Unrivalled Equestrian Drama, entitled the Pyramids, or the Arabian Horse, the Children of the Desert, in his Wonderful and Accomplished Exercises in the School of the Manager: he will be introduced in his new and accomplished Exercises by his talented Mr. Tell. First Appearance in England of the four Maxiean and Asean Artistes in their Unrivalled Performance. Gothic Pyramids, &c. At Seven o'Clock each evening Lord Byron's BRIDE of ABYDOS with Mr. Batty's Stud of Horses, Elephants, Camels, &c. Mr. Batty's Unique Equestrians followed by Feats of Horsemanship, Gymnastic Novelties, and conclude with ZAKAH; or, the GIPSY TRIBE in which Mr. Batty, Mr. C. Batty, Upper Boxes 3s.; Pit, 2s.; Gallery, 1s.; Upper Gallery 6d. Doors open at Half-past Six o'clock; Commence at Seven Acting and Stage Manager Mr W D Broadfoot

ETHIOPIAN SERENADERS.—ST. JAMES'S THEATRE. In consequence of the numerous applications which still every morning are given to the celebrated ETHIOPIAN SERENADERS, Pell, Harrington, White, Seamwood, and Germ n, they will continue their inimitable Entertainments at the above Theatre on Tuesday Evening, Wednesday Evening, and Thursday Morning and Evening next. Saturday Evening next, on which occasion there will be a change of Programme. Songs, Duetts, and Tickets may always be procured at the Box-office, St. James's Theatre, Piccadilly; and at the Saloon. They will also appear for the Last time at Sun's Hall, on Monday Evening next, 10th May. All communications intended for "The Ethiopians," should be addressed to the St. James's Theatre

COLOSSEUM.—NOTICE. The whole of the Magnificent Establishment Is THROWN OPEN DAY or EVENING for TWO SHILLINGS Children, Half-price Open from Ten till Half-past Five, and Seven till Half-past Ten PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY, Hanover-square Rooms.—PROGRAMME of the FIFTH CONCERT, MONDAY, MAY 10th, at Eight precisely. Grand Symphony (Haydn) Aria, Sig. Salvi—Concerto, violin, Herr Joachim, Beethoven.—Aria, Mdme. Persiani (Weber) Overture, Sinfonia in A, Beethoven. Leader, Mr. Sainton. Vocalists, Mdme. Persiani and Signor Salvi. Overture, "Les Deux Journees," Cherubini. Conductor, Mr. Costa. Single Tickets, One Guinea and Double Tickets, £1 10s.; to be had of Messrs. ADDISON and HOLLIER, 210, Regent-street.

MUSICAL UNION.—TUESDAY, MAY 11, at Half-past Three o'Clock.—Quartet in D, No. 6, Mozart. Solo Violoncello: Solo Violin. Quartet in E flat, No. 10, Beethoven. Vocalists: Two first public performances this season in London, Dessoffre, Hill, and Piatti. Tickets, 10s. 6d. each, should be immediate, to be had only on application to CRAMER, BEALE, and Co., 201, Regent-street and the Director, 61, Oxford-street.

ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY, REGENT'S PARK.—The FIRST EXHIBITION this Season will take place on WEDNESDAY NEXT, MAY the 12th. Tickets can be obtained by orders from the Fellows or Members, price 2s each, or, on the day, 7s 6d each. Carriages to enter the Inner Circle by the Hanover Gate by the back Gate, and set down either at the Principal Entrance, or at the New Gate connected with the Marquess on the North side of the Circle.

NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS.—THE THIRTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN at their Gallery, 53, Pall-Mall, near St. James's Palace, from 9 till 6 each. Admission, 1s. Catalogue 6d. JAMES FAHEY, Secretary.

WALHALLA, late Miss Linwood's Gallery, Leicester-square. MADAME WARTON'S Unequalled Tableaux Vivans Brilliant and Immense Success of the WHITE MARBLE GROUPISMS. On this enchantic reception by a crowded audience of the WHITE MARBLE STATUE GROUPINGS, with the novel effect produced by the New Chemical Light, by M. G Saville, of the Royal Surrey Zoological Gardens pronounced to be the most perfect living delusion offered to the Public, they will be repeated every MONDAY, WEDNESDAY and FRIDAY EVENING. The Second Part is entirely devoted to illustrating accurately the works of the Painter and Sculptor. Morning Performance at Three; Evening at Half-past Eight o'Clock. Stalls, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 5s.; Promenade, 1s. A Splendid New Series of Tableaux will be produced on Monday, May 10th, for the Benefit of Madame Warton, the particulars of which will be duly announced

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—LECTURES in illustration of ANIMAL MECHANISM by T. Rymer Jones, Esq., F.R.S., Professor of Comparative Anatomy at King's College, on Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at half-past Three o'Clock. On CHEMISTRY, on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday Evenings, at Nine, by F. H. Holmes, Esq. On ARTIFICIAL LIGHT, and the Gases employed in its production by the Electric Battery. EXPERIMENTS with ARMSTRONG'S HYDRO-ELECTRIC MACHINE. The WORKING MODELS and MACHINERY explained. The natural-OPTICAL EFFECTS including NEW DISSOLVING VIEWS, the OXY-HYDROGEN MICROSCOPE, &c. EXPERIMENTS with the DIVER and DIVING-BELL, by Mr. Pepper. For Evening MUSIC, under the Direction of Dr. WALLIS, commences at Seven o'Clock—Admission, Is.; Schools, Half-price.

COVENT-GARDEN THEATRICAL FUND.—Under the Immediate Patronage of the QUEEN.—1st ANNIVERSARY MEETING of this Institution will take place at FREEMASONS' HALL, on WEDNESDAY, MAY 19th. The President, his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, in the Chair

Office, 5, Prince's-place, Hanover-square. DRINKWATER MEADOWS, Covent Garden Theatre. Secretary.

GOWLAND'S LOTION.—This Elegant Preparation, an original formula of the late Dr. Gowland, for all impurities of the skin, continues to main ain a repute commensurate with its specific properties of speedily eradicating every description of eruptive malady, discolouration, &c., and of improving and enhancing the beauty of the complexion, by a congenial action upon the skin, as perfectly innocent as it is agreeable and efficacious. "HIGHEST SHAW, LONDON." is in Waite Letters on the Government Stamp, without which none is genuine. Prices, 9s. 6d., 5s. 6d., Quarts, 8s. 6d. Sold by all Perfumers and Chemists

CORNS EFFECTUALLY EXTRACTED, and the Malformation of the Toe-nails counteracted without cutting pain or tenderness, by MRS. DISNEY, Chiropodist, 18, Newman-street, Oxford-street

ELEGANCE and ECONOMY in PAPER-HANGINGS.—French Satins, 2s. 6d. per piece: Flock, 6d. per yard: 20,000 pieces in Stock. Panel Decorations Flowers or Oak, as cheap as other Papers. Terms, Cash. Established 20 years. W. CROSBY, 22, Lowther-Arcade. N.B. Three doors from the Strand entrance.

DESIRABLE FREEHOLD INVESTMENT in the CITY.—TO BE SOLD, by PRIVATE CONTRACT, an excellent Modern-built FREEHOLD HOUSE, situate No. 1, Crane-court, Fleet-street. The Shop has a 42 feet frontage and is 20 feet in depth, with Counters of basement, or Kitchen floor, with cellars, ground, first, second, and attic floors; was well lighted, in capital condition, and adapted for a Dwelling House, Printing, or other Office. For particulars, apply to Mr. B. BROUGH, House and Estate Agent, No. 5, Palsgrave-place, near Temple-bar, Strand

ROOK SHOOTING.—AIR GUNS and AIR CANES.—An entirely new and further improved assortment of these portable and silently destructive weapons, on sale, or lent on hire, as required by REILLY Jun., for killing Pheasants, Rooks, Sea Fowl, &c., with ball, small birds with shot, Fish with harpoons, &c. &c. Prices commencing at 35s.; with piping and apparatus complete.—Gun Treatise, price 6d.; by post, 1s.—REILLY, Gun-maker, 178, Oxford-street.—REMOVED FROM 315, HOLBORN

"OH! HOW VERY COMFORTABLE," exclaim all who sit in the NEW MEDICAL EASY CHAIR; quite an essential to Invalids. Prices, cushioned complete, from forty shillings, according to size or quality. JOHN INGRAM and SONS, Manufacturing Upholsterers, 26, CITY-ROAD, Finsbury.

CHILDREN'S and INVALIDS' CARRIAGES.—Invalid Wheel Chairs, from 45s to 42l., with hoods, second-hand as well as new: spinal and Self-acting Chairs, Children's Chaises, Vis-à-Vis Wagons, Phaetons, Barouches, &c. from Six Shillings to Twenty Guineas. Immense and varied collection on SALE or HIRE, at INGRAM'S Manufactory, 26, City-road, Finsbury-square. N.B. Illustrated Catalogues.

EDMUND SPILLER'S PATENT SELF-ACTING BACHELOR'S KETTLES.—Price, three-pint size, 6s. 6d., six ditto, 8s.—BOILING WATER IN ONE MINUTE! They require no tongs, no poker, no shovel, no bellows, no coals, no fire. They may be lighted in one second, and no attention required afterwards.—EDMUND SPILLER, Inventor and Sole Proprietor, 98 Holborn-hill, London.

WINDOW BLINDS.—TYLOR and PACE, general window blind manufacturers, 3, Queen-street, three doors from Cheapside. Venetian blinds, 8d. per square foot; Holland blinds, 6d.; Reform Holland spring ditto, 8d.; Dutch ditto, 4d.; perforated zinc blinds, in mahogany frames, 1s 6d; gauze wire ditto, 1s. 10d.; outside blinds of every description, 1s. 4d.; transparent blinds, 4s., 5s., 6s., 7s., 8s., 9s., 10s., 42s.; and upwards. Detailed lists of prices forwarded on application; post free

THE TIMES WE LIVE IN require the greatest domestic economy and in order to enable families to effect this, W. J. MARTIN, TEA MERCHANT, 370, Oxford-street, London, guarantees to any families with Tea in 5, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, and 18s. per lb., fully equal to that which is sold as the best Black Tea, at prices varying from 4s. to 6s. per lb.; Green from 4s. to 8s. per lb.; 6lb. of the finest Mocha or Jamaica Coffee for 10s. All orders delivered carriage-free, upon being accompanied with a Post-office Order or a reference in London. W. J. MARTIN, Golden Tea Pot, 370, Oxford-street.

COOPER'S PATENT PRESERVED FRUITS, hermetically closed, which secures them for years. They are in quarts, pints, and half-pints, plain, in jam, and in syrup. They are adapted for invalids, the nursery, and the dessert; they consist of fruits gathered expressly, such as oranges and mulberries. Sample hampers will be delivered at any part of London for 10s.; extra size, 15s., including a plain pudding of the best quality, subscribed to the above purpose, with directions for the use of these fruits by steam, which has been much approved of for general family use in preference to pastry. On sale by JAMES COOPER, at the Manufactory, Stanley-crescent, No. 8, St. John's-street, Cornhill, London. Particulars and testimonials will be forwarded by post when requested.

BED FEATHERS, PURIFIED by STEAM with PATENT MACHINERY, whereby they are rendered perfectly sweet and free from dust

Mixed	.. ..	1s. 6d. per lb.	Best Dredge Grey Goose .. 2s. 6d. per lb.
Grey Goose ..	.. ..	1s. 8d.	Best Irish Web ditto .. 2s. 6d.
Foreign ..	.. ..	1s. 10d.	Best Dantzic ditto .. 3s. 0d.

HEAL & SON'S List of Bedding containing particulars of weights, sizes, and prices, sent free by post on application to their Factory, 196 Tottenham-court-road, or their Warerooms, 19 & 20 Charles-street, Middlesex Hospital.

THE attention of LADIES is particularly requested to the NORWICH COTTON COMPANY'S 3 and 6 Cord Sewing Cotton, as being of the most beautiful and uniform texture yet produced. It is wound on reels, in lengths of 100, 200, and 300 yards. The Cord is not glazed, but the Cotton of Sewing, and is especially adapted for Knitting, Netting, and Crochet. To be had at all the most respectable Mercers, Drapers, Haberdashers, and Hosiers, and wholesale of the proprietors, Messrs. J. & J. BARBER and CO., Norwich; and of their Agent in London, Mr. W. W. THIPP, 35, Friday-street, Cheapside

INVALUABLE IN EVERY LAUNDRY.—ROBINSON'S DRYING MACHINE entirely abolishes the destructive system of wringing, and so greatly facilitates the drying of Flannel, Blankets, Counterpanes, &c., as to effect an important saving in time and fuel. It has been adopted in her Majesty's Laundry, Windsor, and in numerous Families and Public Institutions throughout the Kingdom. The Machine is of the utmost value to Washerwomen, as it will not injure the most delicate fabric. Copies of testimonials, and all further particulars, may be obtained on application to the Patentee, 3, Poppin's-court, Fleet-street, and Sole Manufacturer, 27, Charles-street, Berners-street, London.—A size is now constructed especially for small Families, at a very low price.

CAUTION.—A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton-garden, London, beg to caution the Nobility and Gentry against being misled by the attempts of some Shopkeepers, to sell to compounds of their own manufacture give the titles of "MACASSAR OIL," "MACASSAR," "MACASSARINE," and "ANTIMACASSAR," in order to trade upon the reputation and popularity of the genuine article. They have never imputed the imputed sanction of Royalty, and the Government Departments, with similar attempts at Deception, while they only the Labels, Bottles, and Wrappers of the genuine article, without the Name and Address of Rowland (for the real), of the Original Preparation. The only genuine "MACASSAR OIL," "MACASSAR," "MACASSARINE," and "ANTIMACASSAR," are those of each bears the Name of "ROWLANDS" preceding that of the Article, with their signature at the foot in RED INK, thus—"ROWLAND and SON." Sold by them, at 20, Hatton-garden, London; and by all Chem. sts and Perfumers.

BERDOE'S LIGHT OVER-COAT, for the SUMMER is intended also, in warm weather, in lieu of an under-coat). The WATERPROOF PALLIDIUM, a most valuable protection for the Coats of the respectable classes: its superior quality, gentlemanly appearance, well-known efficiency and moderate cost continue, unabated by any competition, to render it the favourite Over-coat of the season. It is the most convenient, economical, and permanently popular Garment ever invented. An extensive assortment kept ready made, and made to order at a day's notice.—W. BERDOE, Tailor and Over-Coat Maker, 96, New Bond street (near Oxford-street), and 69, Cornhill (north side)

THE REGISTERED PALETOT of LLAMA CLOTH, the most fashionable coat for both the present and approaching seasons, still retains the same moderate charge, 31s. 6d., and is made in the most gentlemanly appearance, has secured such general popu arity. It has been made, by especial command, for their Royal Highnesses Prince Albert, Prince Alfred, and Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar, his Grace the Duke of Wellington, and the several Royal Visitors to the British Court. In London it can only be procured at the Manufactory, 69, Cornhill (north side); 96, New Bond-street; and 22, Cornhill. Agents for Liverpool, Dawborn and Son, Bold-street, for Dublin, George Hamilton, Nelson-street; for Manchester, Mr. Hyde, 60, Market-street; for Birmingham, Warning and Son, New-street; Carlisle and Son, George street, Edinburgh; and the principal tailors in other large towns

SELLING OFF.—WATCHES, JEWELLERY, and PLATE, at 56, Cheapside, adjoining Bow Church.—The whole of the tasteful and superior STOCK of Mr. A. BARBER, Goldsmith, is now SELLING OFF, at really reduced rates. The public are solicited to the above as a genuine sale of superior goods, and no chea pery or mis-representation will be resorted to; neither will any articles, assorted to. Every article will be sold at the marked prices. The Jewellery is all first-rate in quality; the Watches, English and Swiss, of very superior make, and warranted for accuracy of performance: the Plate an Plated Goods, the best manufactured, will be sold considerably lower than advertised prices. As early access is given, as this notice will not be prolonged, the premises about being closed, for extensive alterations.

THERE is not probably any existing art which confers a more genuine and more intense pleasure, than that which perpetuates the features of those endeared to us by the ties of blood, or by the still closer bonds, and we must be impressed with the gratification derived from possessing a faithful likeness of a parent or valued friend, when the hand, death or distance shall separate us, we may, through the medium of the painter's art recall to our mind and sight the features and expression of those whom more or less we have loved and esteemed. MR. HENRY HALL, PORTRAIT PAINTER, Student of the Royal Academy, begs to inform the Nobility and Gentry that he has removed to a more eligible and convenient residence, No. 7, Percy-street, Rathbone-place, where he will receive Sitters on ten till Five. Mr. Hall has had the honour to paint the works of the most exalted, also who have devoted their talents to the art of Portraiture, including the late Sir Thomas Lawrence, R. A. Mr. Hall is also desirous to those who may favour him with their patronage a well painted print or, in addition to a perfect resemb lance. Specimens may be seen, and terms made known at the Gallery of Mr. HAVIS, 29, Great Russell-street, Bedford-square.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.

In addition to Assurances on Healthy Lives this society continues to grant Policies on the Lives of Persons subject to Gout, Asthma, Rupture, and OTHER DISEASES, on the payment of a Premium proportioned to the increased risk. The plan of granting Assurances on UNHEALTHY LIVES originated with the Founding of this Institution in 1824.

Every description of Assurance may be effected with this society, and Policies are granted on the Lives of persons in any station, at the most MODERATE RATES.

BONUS.

The two first Divisions averaged £22 per cent. on the premiums paid; the third, £26 per cent. The FOURTH bonus declared Jan. 1847, averaged rather more than £30 PER CENT.; and FIVE YEARS LARGER AMOUNT reserved for FUTURE APPROPRIATION and other causes, the Bonuses hereafter are expected considerably to EXCEED that amount.

Tables of Rates, with a full REPORT (recently printed) can be obtained of the Society's Agents, or by addressing a letter to

GEO. H. PINCKARD, ACTUARY,
No. 78, Chancery-lane, Middlesex Hospital, London.

MUTUAL INSURANCE BENEFIT INSTITUTION, 31, Threadneedle-street, London.
Established 1836.—Capital Invested, £16,000 Sterling.

Patrons—The Duke of Cambridge, Lords Denman, Brougham, &c.

The object of this Institution is the advantage of Life Insurance and Annuity Offices, in small Sums, suitable for the Industrious Classes, within the reach of a EXAMPLE.—A person in the 25th year of his or her age, may by the Monthly payment of 5s. 6d. for 36 years of age, secure an Annuity of £20 per annum, to commence at that age, and continue for life. Other sums and ages in like proportion

By the moderate payment of 2s. 6d. per month, by a person in the 25th year of his or her age, an Immediate Annuity of £10 6s. per annum for life may be secured. Other sums and ages in like proportion.

A person now in the 24th year of his or her age, may, by paying 2s 6d. per month, secure £20 to be paid to surviving Children or Relatives, on the Death of the Insurer. Other sums and ages in like proportion.

Proper Forms of Filling up, to effect an Insurance, together with Tables of Payment, may be obtained at the Office, 1, Threadneedle-street, London; or of any of the Agents

MAUGHAM'S PATENT CARRARA WATER.—A REDUCTION OF PRICE.—The Licensees avail themselves of a fortunate combination of circumstances to offer this new Cosmetic to the Public at 2s 6d. per dozen, which a price it is believed within the reach of numbers who have been unable hitherto, though anxious to indulge in. In the Carrara Water and Prince Tetimonials have been received, a number of which are enclosed in a small book, which may be had gratis on application. The Water is now manufactured under the special superintendence of the Inventor himself, to insure its perfection. In peculiar registered

CURRALL and SON, Importers of COGNAC BRANDY, of the highest quality: choice Old Pale at 60s., and Brown at 48s. per Dozen. Bottles, 2s per Dozen; Hampers, 1s. Brandies at 24s. and 24s. per Gallon. Pale High-flavoured Sherry at 36s. per Dozen.—35, Bishopsgate-street Within, London.

PURE ST. JULIEN CLARET, 28s. per Dozen; Pints, 18s.; imported direct by HEDGES and BUTLER, Wine Merchants, &c., 155, Regent-street can be confidently recommended. Also, some superior Gordon's Golden Sherry, 36s. per Dozen. On the receipt of a Post-office Order, or reference, will be immediately forwarded

PARTIES of PLEASURE, Buy the Deal-partitioned CHEST, containing 6 BOTTLES. Make your selection of either Champagne, Port, Sherry Hock Claret, or Lisbon, or one of each, or two of three. Sample Case, 21s.; Box 1s., sent 100 miles for 1s. Stores under 17 and 18 Charles-street, Haymarket.—SANDELL, Agent.

ABBOTT and SON, Late HODGSON and ABBOTT's.—PALE ALE.—The original and highly-celebrated Beer, so universally recommended by the Faculty, may be had, on application at the Brewery, No. 5, Middle-row, or 96, Grace church street, either in Bottles, or Casks of 18 gallons. N.B. The TONIC ALE.—This splendid description of Bottled Beer is now in perfection. It is strongly recommended by the Faculty as possessing peculiar stomachic qualities, promoting appetite, &c. Sold by good and just bottlers, secured by Seal's Patent Capsule JOSEPH STOCKTON, Sole Agent, Stores, No. 1, Jewin-crescent.

PIANOFORTES.—The cheapest house in London to purchase these first-rate instruments is at H. TOLKIEN'S, manufacturer, 38, King William-street London Bridge. H. T., having completed several alterations, begs his friends to view his splendid stock of PIANOS, which is not to be equalled by any maker, and at much the price charged by them. H. T.'s much admired Piccolos, cash price £25. Old Instruments taken in exchange.—TOLKIEN, 38, King William-street, London Bridge

PIANOFORTE HAND HARP, by BROADWOOD AND SEARD.—For IMMEDIATE SALE, a very fine-toned SEMI-GRAND, by Broadwood, in a fashionable case, metallic slats, &c. Price only 80 guineas. Also, a MODEL of CRAMER'S HARP, by Seard, satin wood, embellished in white and gold. Price 45 guineas. Being less than one-third its original cost. They are warranted perfect and genuine, and will be fully authenticated by sold together or separately. Can be seen (by permission) at Mr. Holderness's, No. 1, Newman-street, one door from Oxford-street.

SHIRTS.—Youths' and Gentlemen's Shirts made to fit superior to any house in London, in the neatest style, at the lowest prices, for ready money. A large assortment kept ready made. At R. I. NORTON'S Ready-made Linen and Outfitting Warehouse, 3, Strand, Adelphi. An extensive variety of Canada and Search, with every description of Hosiery and Under-Clothing.

LESSONS in MILLINERY and DRESS-MAKING.—MRS. CRISWELL, of 264, Regent street, two doors from Margaret-street. Sole Inventress of Teaching the Art of Dress-making by means of Lessons, embracing the whole in perfect Style, in the Space of Six Lessons exactly as given by Professors of Dress-making, and fully authenticated by reference to Pupils.—Apprentices and Improvers Wanted.—Millinery Rooms. Paper Models.

FRENCH CLEANING.—SAMUEL OSMOND and Co. Dyers, &c., by Steam, Newington-street, Elephant and Castle. Ladies that they clean Silk, Satin Pelisses, and Mousselins de Laine Dresses, Shawls, Scarfs, Handkerchiefs, Bonnets, Feathers, Kid Gloves, and Satin Shoes, every week. They likewise continue to Dye Black every Wednesday. 2nd Furniture Curtains Cleaned, Dyed, and Finished.

LADIES' RIDING HABITS, New Style, Registered 6 and 7 Victoria, chap. 65.—W FORD begs to inform those Ladies not visiting London, that he will be happy to send directions for taking their measure for Riding Habits, which are contained by an engraving of his improved Registered Riding Habit made only by the Patentee W. FORD, Habit Maker, 16, Helles-street, Cavendish-square, London

PARIS STAYS, at LA REINE DES FLEURS, 27, Ludgate-street. Mesdames M'RAE and EVANS invite the attention of Ladies to their extensive assortment of wove and stitched Paris Stays of the most elegant shape, and at very reduced prices. Also a large stock of English Stays of the best description. Depôt for the above Mrs FLANAGAN'S, 35, Bishop-street Londonderry.

LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN and INFANTS UNDER-CLOTHING. MRS. NORMAN'S Show Room, 72, Strand, is now replete with an unrivalled Assortment of Infants' Hoods and Cloaks, finished off in superior style, which are now offered to the public at very lowest prices for Ready Money. Baby Linen of every description: Baskets, Bassinettes, &c. Outfits and Wedding orders executed with punctuality and despatch 72, Strand, Adelphi

MUSLIN BORDERED DAISY FRINGES, for Bed Curtains.—All the New Spotted Muslins done in dainty Daisy Fringe, from 9s 6d. dress yards; Toilet Fringes, 6d. dozen yards An assortment of Washing Coloured Fringes, Gimps and Buttons, for children's Dresses, &c. Everything for the Work Table. Orders by pos attended to. E. D. ROGERS, Berlin House 131, Borough.

NOVELTIES and BARGAINS.—Owing to the great pressure for Money in the Manufacturing Districts, J. BROWN has just purchased for Cash, the following Goods, at Half-price.—1200 pieces of Striped Muslins, at 3d, 3½d, 4d, 4½d, 5d, 5½d, 6d, 6½d, 7d, 8d, 9d, 10d, 11d, 12d, 13d, 14d, 15d, 16d, 17d, 18d, 19d, 20d, 21d, 22d, 23d, 24d, 25d, 26d, 27d, 28d, 29d, 30d, 31d, 32d, 33d, 34d, 35d, 36d, 37d, 38d, 39d, 40d, 41d, 42d, 43d, 44d, 45d, 46d, entitled "The Wood Demon:" all the fairy subjects being at last fairly done to rags. The plot of the original piece has been followed pretty closely—such alterations, however, being made throughout, in the situations and dialogue, to suit the extravaganza spirit of the age; and a number of allusions introduced to topics of the day—comprising, of course, Jenny Lind, the rival Operas, the Prussian Diet, the refractory clocks of London, the Ethiopian Serenaders, the Gibus hat, Jolnville ties, Smithfield, M. Soyer, the animals at Drury-Lane, Lola Montes, and other temporal matters; with such music in the shape of Polkas, ballads, and melodies, finding most favour at present in our drawing-rooms. The principal characters were thus distributed.—Hardancastle, Mr. Keeley; Pickwick (the "Gualpho" of the old drama), Mr. Frank Mathews; Folderol ("Cowy"), Mr. Bellingham; Wilkins, Mr. A. Wigan; Leelyn, Mrs. Keeley; Una, Miss Dickenson; Clotilda, Miss Daly; and two Black Serenaders were assumed by Mr. Kinloch and Mr. Carnold.

SCENE FROM THE SPECTACLE OF THE "DESERT," AT DRURY-LANE THEATRE.

The piece was not altogether so successful as other productions of the same authors; at least the audience did not enter so keenly into the humour, their powers of laughter being in a great measure exhausted by the screaming farce of "Jenny Lind," which preceded the burlesque. The business, too, was somewhat rambling, and requires a few representations to bring it into quick working order. This done, it will run very well to the end of the season, which terminates in five or six weeks

It was excellently played. Mrs. Keeley's saucy acting, and appearance as the young Savoyard, drew forth a long round of applause; as did that of her doughty husband in his war costume; and Miss Dickenson and Miss Daley gave every point with care and intelligence. Mr. F. Mathews was an important old chamberlain, acting in his best manner; and Mr. Wigan was encored in a "patter" song upon the inventions of the day. The nigger performances of Messrs. Bellingham and Kinloch were also encored; the former gentleman singing a good medley song, and the latter handling the bones with great tact.

The house was crowded literally to the ceiling, and the applause was general when the curtain fell.

BRETT'S SUBTERRANEAN AND OCEANIC ELECTRIC PRINTING TELEGRAPH.

We have attended at a private view of this successful Invention, at the office of the Patentee, in Parliament-street, and have there witnessed some specimens of its printing power.

The Originator and Patentee of the present Telegraph is Mr. Jacob Brett, of No 2, Hanover-square, London; and we were surprised to find, from a telegraphic printed copy of a letter, that, so long ago as July, 1846, Mr. Brett, in conjunction with his brother, proposed to the Government to put the metropolis, by means of his Oceanic Telegraphic Line, in immediate connexion with the various Colonial and Channel Islands. This line being combined with Mr. Brett's Patent Printing Telegraph, any communication could be instantly transmitted and delivered, in an unerring printed form, almost at the same instant of time, at the most distant part either of the United Kingdom or of the Colonies.

The indisputable advantages of Brett's Electric Printing Telegraph, for making rapid communications between distant places, either for Government, railway, or commercial purposes, are its great simplicity, certainty of action, and economy. As an evidence of its facility, we may state that the Machines for general purposes will compose and print, in a given time, as much matter as three or four first-rate compositors could set up in form ready (only) for printing, viz from 100 to 300 letters per minute; and by those Machines, adapted for special purposes by Mr. Brett's recent improvements, he can print from 300 to 3000 letters per minute! The following is a brief

DESCRIPTION OF THE TELEGRAPH.

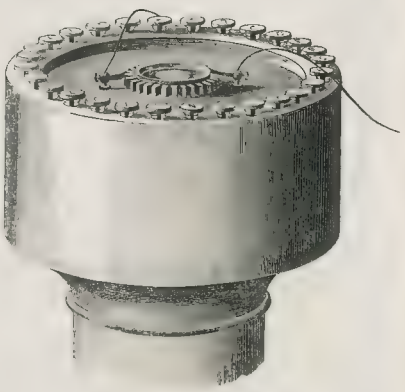
Suppose at one extremity of a single line of Telegraphic wire, a small Key-board, containing a row of ivory keys, marked with the letters of the alphabet, and other characters, or words; and that it be connected by the said wire to the printing machine at the other extremity. This machine contains a Type Wheel, having on its circumference corresponding letters, words, or signs; a slight electric power is sufficient to regulate the motion of the whole, so that the instant a key representing any particular word, letter, or sign, is pressed down by the person at the Key-board at one end of the line, the corresponding word, letter, or sign of the Type Wheel prints, and the signal bells ring at the other end of the line of Telegraph, without limit as to distance. The communications are printed on paper supplied from a scroll of unlimited length, from which any portion of the correspondence may be cut off at pleasure.

The motive power is simple; it being that of a weight, which sets in motion the Key-shaft and Governor of the Key-board; and the Circuit Wheel in connection with the shaft being put in contact with the wire of the Galvanic Battery, or other generator of electricity; according to the velocity of motion and manipulation of the Key-board, so will the motion be fast or slow at the printing end of the Telegraph; the Type Wheel of the Telegraph is set at liberty by means of an escapement, and weights in connection with it, so as to print with a like velocity, in combination with an hydraulic or pneumatic regulator, which admits of the desired letter only being printed, by checking and releasing an eccentric arrangement; a rod from thence unites with the Cylinder on which the paper is printed, in various modes, as may be desired, either in paragraphs on a sheet of paper upon a long strip of ribbon or paper—or, if for Government despatches, and the like, it can be printed line by line, like the column of a newspaper, of an unlimited length.

The second Engraving represents a separate Key-board, of a circular form, from which communications can be forwarded to any or every station in connection with it, the letters, words, or characters being arranged around it on the Keys, and these, if depressed by the fingers, will check the motion of a pin, or shaft, and also of the Circuit Wheel fixed to the same axis, at such given point or Key, by which means the operator may make or break the circuit of conductors at such letter or point.

The distance actually proved to act by this Telegraph in one continuous line has been 230 miles, and 340 miles apart, at the rate of 100 letters per minute.

BRETT'S ELECTRIC PRINTING TELEGRAPH.



BRETT'S TELEGRAPH.—THE COMMUNICATOR.

Mr Brett has had his patent secured throughout the Continent, as well as also for America, and, should his original project (entertained some years since) of uniting America with England by an oceanic line be carried out, it is not improbable that, in the course of a few years, the news of the extreme North will, by this extraordinary invention, be printed instantaneously at the extreme points of South America, and the news traverse England, crossing from Calais to Dover, where, by the arrangements now in progress, it will extend to the South and East realising, in fact, the words of Pope

To speed the intercourse from soul to soul,
And waft a thought from Indus to the Pole.

This Telegraph has been shown at Buckingham Palace, by command of his Royal Highness Prince Albert; as well as at one of the soirées at the Marquis of Northampton's; the London Institution, &c. Among its exploits is the following:—"The Message of the Governor to the Legislature of New York, delivered, at Albany on the 7th Jan., and consisting of two columns and a half of solid nonpariel, was published in the city of New York two hours after its delivery, having been transmitted, sentence by sentence, by the Printing Telegraph."

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, May 8, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 263.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, MAY 15, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE LONDON SEASON.

There are four seasons everywhere but in London, which recognises only one; we say "the Season" to denote its eminence, as all the world says "the Duke," to distinguish him from ordinary Peers. "The Season" is the only section of the year worth a phrase apart; all other periods are mere portions of time; through them London only exists; in "the Season" it lives and moves, and shines and dances, and has flower-shows and fêtes, and banquets and exhibitions, and sees the shops full of wares, the streets full of carriages, and the shopkeepers full of bows and smiles to those who so lightly step out of them. All the rest of the year London is a great city; but from the beginning of May till the end of July, from the first strawberry to the first grouse, it is a metropolis, a centre, to which all the possessors of all the wealth of the land come, as to the mart where splendour and pleasure in every shape are waiting their purchasers. Nor is pleasure the only thing pursued; "the Season" is the time of business; if the projector does not carry his plan within the allotted period, he must wait till the next year; out of "the Season" nothing is done but mere buying and selling; the tide of life ebbs eastward, and active existence seems confined to the "City," the Bank, the Exchange, and those mysterious men who work on steadily from year to year, laying the foundations of fortunes that will add brilliancy to "Seasons" hereafter. Every pursuit, occupation, art, and profession are in the fullest activity. "The Season" is the "now or never" of all who appeal to the taste of the few, or depend on the verdict of the many. The artist labours, for years perhaps, in confidence if he has a name, in hope if he has not, that the brief "Season" will bring him his reward in gold or reputation. It is for the "Season" that every country of Europe is drained of its "sweet singers" and its most gifted musicians, till Italy is tuneless, and must be content with the third and fourth-rate talents rich and fastidious London rejects.

We are commercial even in our admiration o. Art; what we cannot produce, we import: Germany sends us a Staudigl, Italy a Grisi and Lablache, and Sweden a Jenny Lind. They come like the spirits to the summons of Prospero. What is the power they obey? That of Wealth!—of which the "London Season" is a most astounding manifestation. It is seen everywhere—in the shops, the thronged streets, where rich equipages impede each other's progress; the Parks, the Clubs, the Opera, which alone requires almost the revenue of a State to support, and of which we have two; the Theatres, the Fêtes of Chiswick, the déjeuners, the réunions, the soirées, the Thés dansantes—all the assemblies to which we have needlessly given French names; the Balls at Almack's, the Ministerial parties; take even our anniversary and charity dinners, that rival the banquets of Princes in sumptuousness; reckon the cost of the feast, and the enormous sums often raised at them for special purposes; in no other country is there anything resembling them. Nay, the religious meetings that crowd Exeter Hall throughout the month of May, are evidences of the great wealth of the middle classes; the hundreds of thousands of pounds annually raised at these gatherings can be spared. Whether the "pressure" on the money market, or any of the many difficulties of the day, will lessen these amounts, remains to be seen; perhaps they will. With railway calls coming thick and fast, money tight, and no "accommodation" to be got under rates of interest that make one think the tribe of Levi have got possession of the Bank Parlour, and wonder why the Usury Laws were abolished, men are not likely to give so largely as usual to foreign missions. But the diminished subscriptions will not strike the eye; outwardly, the "Season" shows no abatement of activity, splendour, and excitement. The carriages dash along as proudly as ever, plumes wave at the Drawing Room, and diamonds gleam at Almack's, with as much grace and brilliance, as if there were no Currency deputations in Downing-street, or Famine articles in the papers. Regent-street is scarcely passable; and not a carriage that stops the way represents less than a leash of thousands a year.

The sun of May never shone on such a season: everything rich is doubled or intensified, as if to increase the contrast with the misery London hears of, but does not see. The Peers discuss an Irish Poor-Law, and talk of workhouses, fever, hunger, and deaths by the thousand of absolute want, in a chamber of more than regal magnificence, rich with purple and gold, where all is ease and luxury—the light of the lamps touching the walls as softly as the foot presses the carpeted floor. there is neither noise nor glare. The Marquis of Lansdowne almost apologised for introducing such a subject in such a place. Instead of one Exhibition of Paintings as of old, there are five or six; for one Opera we have two—both first-rate, and both full. Everywhere there is superabundance and superfluity; and London at this moment, in the full rush and whirl of the season, looks as careless and unconcerned as if the Bank were filled with bullion, and every hog in Ireland waving with corn.

THE LONDON SEASON.—THE ARRIVAL.—(SEE PAGE 312.)

The contrast between the extremes of life has been worn threadbare as a theme for the moralists. It is easy to deceive ourselves by looking only at the surface; under all the grandeur of the scene the metropolis presents, we may be assured there lies as distinct a knowledge of what we have to provide for, ay, and as strong a determination to meet the evils of the time, as if all Mayfair were sackcloth and ashes, and neither dressed nor dined, nor went to balls. It is easy to place things in strong contrast, but the inference from it often misleads. Thus, Lord John Russell at the entertainment given to the Ministers at the Mansion-House, spoke of the distress of the country and the scarcity of food, as a table that glittered with plate, and (as appears by the bill of fare) spread with "all the delicacies of the season." But he described also the efforts that have been made to relieve it; the munificence of private charity; the foresight of the Legislature; the sinking of party differences in the face of peril that makes party attacks so fatal; the aid extended by a rival State; these are the influences that work beneath the surface, and show that energy and exertion are not wanting to the time. Sumptuary laws are no longer possible: the expenditure of individuals and classes must be left to their own discretion: the community may be exhorted to economy, but it cannot be compelled to be frugal. More effectual than all compulsory measures, will be the example set by "the head of the highest household in the kingdom," who has specially ordered "that the utmost economy in the consumption of commodities of which there is a dearth should be used." While the Sovereign, and her Ministers, and all classes of society, prove by their exertions they are fully aware of the difficulty, we must not be misjudged, and pronounced careless and heartless on the evidence of the outward splendour which characterises "the London Season."

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE

FRANCE.

Paris has this week been frightened from its propriety by a change, which the Débats mildly terms a modification, of the Cabinet, but which in reality may be considered as a complete overthrow of the Guizot Ministry.

This Ministerial revolution is chronicled by the Moniteur of Monday, in the form of the following appointments:—

M. Dumon, Secretary of State in the Department of Public Works, to be Minister of Finance, in the place of M. Lacave-Laplagne.

M. Trezel, Peer of France, Lieutenant-General commanding the 12th military division, to be Minister of War, in the place of Lieutenant-General Moline de Saint Yon, whose resignation is accepted.

The Duke de Montebello, Peer of France, Ambassador at the Court of the King of the Two Sicilies, to be Minister of Marine and Colonies, in the place of Admiral Baron de Mackau, whose resignation is accepted.

M. Jayr, Peer of France, Prefect of the Department of the Rhone, to be Minister of Public Works, in the place of M. Dumon, nominated Minister of Finance.

The fifth ordinance charges M. Guizot, Minister of Foreign Affairs, with the interim of the Ministry of Marine and Colonies, during the absence of the Duke de Montebello.

It will be seen that the ordinance relative to the replacing of M. Lacave Laplagne does not contain the words "whose resignation is accepted," which are applied to Admiral Mackau and General Moline de Saint Yon, he having, in fact, refused to send in his resignation, and on such refusal was dismissed. The Débats says that M. Jayr and M. Trezel have ratified by telegraph their acceptance of the offices to which they have been appointed.

The Paris papers contain a good deal of gossip respecting M. Lacave Laplagne, who, it appears, argued that the disorders in the finances were not the result of negligence on his part, but arose from causes for which the whole Cabinet were responsible. He, therefore, refused to resign, to please M. Guizot, but insisted upon being dismissed, so that blame might rest upon those to whom it was properly due

A fearful accident took place, last Saturday, in a manufactory of carriage springs, situate in the Rue St. Denis, Paris. The boiler which fed one of the steam-engines burst, throwing the stoker a distance of 180 yards from the place of the explosion; Mr. Hartmann, one of the engineers of the Great Northern Railway, had his skull fractured; two workmen who were on the spot were instantly killed, and eight others were much wounded. These last were immediately brought to an hospital, where one is in a dying state. The fragments of the boiler were thrown up more than fifteen yards, they broke the fly-wheel, and knocked down the walls of the engine-house, which now remains a mass of ruins

SEAT OF THE WAR IN MEXICO.

The Semaphore of Marseilles of the 6th instant announces the departure of Mr. O'Connell on the preceding day for Civita Vecchia. Mr. O'Connell proposes to proceed from Civita Vecchia to Rome, and, after a short stay in that capital, to fix his residence at Florence.

SPAIN.

The Madrid papers mention the sudden death of Senor Castro y Orozco, Marquis of Gerona, and President of the Council of State, in the thirty-seventh year of his age. His death took place suddenly, on the 4th inst., as he had presided over the Congress at its last sitting, and was present at the Duke of Ohn berg's dinner on the 1st. He had been for some time affected with a disease of the stomach, but was able to attend to business. On the 3rd, he was out as usual; but, on the morning of his death (the next day), he complained of coldness in the stomach, and expired.

On the evening of the 4th, the Queen visited the theatre, accompanied as usual by her uncle and cousin not by the King. On her return, some alarm was created by a belief that two pistols had been fired as her carriage was passing. It appears that loud reports as of fire-arms were really heard close to the carriages; but the Heraldo says they were caused by some heavy substance having passed over two petards thrown by boys in the streets.

The Cortes have been prorogued by Royal ordinance, without any day being fixed for their re-assembling. Her Majesty left on the 5th, for Aranjuez The King remains at Madrid during her absence.

The Countess de Torrejon has been appointed "Camerara Mayor, instead of the Marchioness de Santa Cruz.

PORTUGAL

Lisbon letters of the 30th of April, give an account of a silly but rather serious movement which took place on the previous day, the object of which seems to have been, first, to liberate the prisoners in the Limoeiro, where political offenders, as well as convicts, are confined, and then to make an attack upon the Castle. A sergeant of the guard at the Limoeiro, as well as the turnkeys, had previously been tampered with for the release of the political prisoners, among ing to some eight hundred or a thousand. At about half-past four some hundred and twenty of these rushed out of the prison, some of them armed, and proceeded to the Castle, which they intended to take by surprise. Two soldiers of the Algave division, however, saw them in time, and ran back to the Castle to give notice of the approach of the conspirators. The gates of the Castle were then closed, and a volley of musketry opened upon the assailants as they approached. Finding themselves foiled in this attempt, the escaped prisoners then made their way to the barracks at the Graca, where they were joined by others from the prison, who seized the arms and had a skirmish with the soldiers, chiefly recruits. They afterwards took themselves off in bodies in various directions, chiefly out of town, and a good number crossed the water, into the Alemtejo.

Meantime the general prisoners in the gaol, felons of various grades, assisted by the galley slaves, or out-door convicts, effected their escape also, and, miserable unhappy wretches! for the most part carrying their beds and baggage on their backs, under the weight of which they actually staggered. Others rushed in bands down the streets, headed by men of noted ill repute, crying "Viva Ilbedade!" and so forth.

The King, upon hearing of the outbreak, was quickly upon the spot, with a small piece of artillery in his rear. He remained with the soldiery about an hour, when the affair was pretty well over.

GERMANY.—FOOD RIOTS AND DISTRESS.

Letters from Stuttgardt of the 4th inst., state that serious troubles occurred in that city on the previous evening. The people assembled before the shop of a rich baker, named Maier, who was designated as a forestaller. They broke the lamps in several streets, and constructed a barricade to the cries of "Liberty and bread!" The King mounted his horse, and, accompanied by the Prince Royal, Prince Frederick, and his staff, went into the principal street, in which 2000 cl diers were collected. It was night, and there being no lamps the obscurity was complete. Stones were thrown at the group in which the King was, and insulting cries were, it is said, uttered against his Majesty. The troops, assailed by stones, fired, and carried the barricade by force. Three men of the lower classes were killed, and several were wounded. Some soldiers were injured by stones, and Count Lippe, Governor of the town, was struck in the breast. More than fifty persons were arrested. About midnight the mob was dispersed, and tranquillity was re-established, but some of the troops remained in the streets all night.

The riots at Stuttgard have since been put down, but Wurtemburg is not yet free from outbursts of this kind. The university town (Tubingen) has also to deplore acts of violence. On the 5th of May an attack was projected on the mill of the brothers Schweichardt. Precautionary measures had been taken by the authorities, and the students of the university were called upon to co-operate in the maintenance of order At ten at night, a considerable mob had assembled before the mill in question, and one of the doors was smashed in and the pillaging commenced. A body of students, with rapiers, interfered and compelled the pillagers to restore all they had taken; the place was then occupied by the military till four in the morning. The students formed their head-quarters in a neighbouring tavern. The lamps in Tubingen were maltreated by the mob, and had it not been for timely interference it would have fared ill with them. Some of the professors appeared at the head of the students.

Distress is becoming universal in all parts of Germany. It has already led to many excesses, and is, unfortunately, likely to lead to more. Riots have taken place in several parts of Bohemia, at Ezer and at Leitmeritz. At the latter place the mob cut off both the ears of a baker, whose loaves were also feared in Aussig. In the district of Trautenau horseflesh was selling openly at a penny per pound. Several cases are mentioned of children being forsaken by their parents. There was again a great break out at Ulm on the 3rd of May but it was soon put down, the rioters having been instantly arrested. Food riots have taken place at Gelsshingen and Blaubeuren; on the 3rd inst. a number of citizens assembled tumultuously in the market-place of the latter place crying out for corn. Further disturbance was, however, prevented by the best magistrate promising that a distribution of corn should be made. In several towns of the duchy of Hesse the prevailing distress has driven many to excesses; amongst the rest, at Gnesen and Rogasen. Bodies of military have been sent to restore and preserve order.

THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO.

The Zurich, American packet-ship, has brought to New York papers to the 21st ult. They do not contain any positive information about the further progress of the war in Mexico, but they throw some light upon the distribution of General Scott's army. On the 2nd of April, the main body was still encamped at Vera Cruz. General Quitman had marched upon Alvarado (on the shore twelve leagues S.E. of Vera Cruz) on the 30th of March; reports had reached Vera Cruz that he had met with opposition on his route, but they were not credited. On the 2nd of April, Colonel Harney was detached with the 2nd Dragoons to the possession of Antigua, eight miles north of Vera Cruz, at the mouth of the river of the same name. General Twiggs, with the advance guard, had marched in the direction of the strong pass of Puente Nacional, on the river Antigua, fourteen leagues W.N.W. of Vera Cruz, and the main body was to follow on or about the 5th of April.

Accounts from General Taylor were received at New Orleans on the 11th of April by the steamer Telegraph. The communications between Monterey and Camargo having been re-established, the General had returned to Saltillo. Urrea, it was understood, had retired behind the mountains, after the battle of Buena Vista, with 500 or 600 men. Canales had been heard of at Cerralvo, and a party of rangers under Captain Grey had been thrown out in that direction It does not appear that the accommodations whether General Taylor was in a condition to advance in the direction of San Luis Potosi, in order to make a diversion in favour of General Scott.

Colonel Domphan is reported to have continued his advance after occupying Chihuahua, and to have taken three other towns. The names are not mentioned.

A letter from Philadelphia, dated April 21, says:—

"Advices from the Brazos, to the 2nd inst., have been received by an arrival at New Orleans. It is reported that the advance of General Taylor had overtaken that portion of the Mexican army under General Urrea, and Canales, near Linares. A fight took place which lasted seven hours, at the expiration of which time General Taylor came up, and a general engagement ensued. The Mexicans were defeated with great loss. Report states that both the Generals, Urrea and Canales, were taken prisoners."

The Tay steamer, which brought the West India mails, on Monday, contains some news from Mexico.

About 2000 American troops were in possession of Tampico, but the city in other respects was perfectly tranquil.

It appears that during the bombardment of Vera Cruz, on the 28th and 29th of March, about 200 lives were lost; but these were principally women and children, who perished in the ruins consequent upon the destruction of houses by the shells. About 4000 shells were thrown into the city, and it is calculated that about two-thirds of the place are destroyed.

IRELAND.

DANGEROUS STATE OF LORD BESBOROUGH.

We regret to find that the condition of the Lord Lieutenant is almost hopeless. He is said to be gradually dying. The following bulletin was issued on Wednesday:—

"The Lord-Lieutenant has had a quiet night, but his strength has not improved."

" PHILIP CRAMPTON,
" WILLIAM STOKES,
" JOHN F. PURCELL."

At four o'clock the answer at the Castle was, that his Excellency continues the same way

FOOD RIOTING.

It appears, from the Irish papers, that the peasantry in some of the counties are in a very excited state. There have been riots in the counties of Limerick Clare, and Galway.

On Thursday morning (last week) about 1000 persons collected at Knockfierna Hill, from whence they proceeded, in a body, through the county, compelling all the labourers employed in drainage to strike work, and join them. Ballingarry was appointed as the rallying point, and by the time this formidable multitude reached the village there could not be less than 2000 assembled, well armed with guns and blunderbusses, evidently prepared to resist any force, either military or police, that might be called out to aid the civil authorities. The military and police were stationed at the entrance of the village, the magistrates in charge being J. Cox, Esq., and Hamo De Massy, Esq., who exhorted the peasantry to peace, promising that in a few days measures would be in progress to give them employment, which the multitude proclaimed was all they required, as they would not submit to outdoor relief, or accept either porridge or meal from the Relief Committee. They then divided themselves into parties, and having departed for awhile, again came into Ballingarry, driving before them about fifty head of cattle, which had been taken from farmers in the district. The Rev. Mr. O'Donnell, R.C.C., went among the assemblage, and prevailed upon them to give up the stock, which they did with much reluctance, observing that they had "demonstrated what they could do, and unless they could all get employment in a few days, they would carry out their determination." During the day several shots were fired by the peasantry in Ballingarry, and the discharge of fire-arms all about the neighbourhood was kept up until a late hour of the night. Many of the countrywomen were seen carrying guns and pistols under their aprons.

About 200 persons from the surrounding district entered the town of Ennis, on the same day, and paraded the streets, shouting and yelling, to the fear and terror of the inhabitants, many of whom closed their shops, apprehensive of a general attack. The majority of the peasantry were armed with spades and bludgeons, while the disorderly demeanour of the entire multitude, who vowed vengeance if they did not get employment, created general alarm. The authorities were compelled to call in the military before tranquillity was restored.

The Galway Mercury states that on Friday and Saturday large bodies of "half famishing creatures" marched about the streets, carrying flags, on which were inscribed, "We are starving Bread or employment." Several bread and provision carts were attacked outside the town. A troop of the 7th Hussars and a company of the 49th Regiment patrolled the streets, and saved the property of the townspeople.

On Monday morning one troop of Artillery, with two guns, two companies of the 99th, and a body of the 8th Hussars, under the command of Colonel Cater, proceeded to Rathkeale (county of Limerick) in consequence of an apprehended rising in that district. At Nantenant, the residence of Mr. Royse, an attack was made—twelve stand of arms were taken, and property chiefly consisting of provisions, such as bacon.

A letter from Ardnacrusha (county Clare), dated Monday evening, says—

"This moment two policemen, who escaped by the back window of their barrack at Ardnacrusha, came into town for a reinforcement to relieve their comrades, who were hemmed in by some two or three thousand of the peasantry. No time was lost in dispatching a troop of the 8th Hussars, in two detachments. The cause of this attack on the police, was their intervention in preserving the soup-kitchens, which were attacked and destroyed by the people. The police barrack windows were broken into atoms, and the inmates were obliged to fire on the populace in self-defence

" Half-past eight o'clock.

"No lives were lost—one of the people was shot in the neck, and one taken prisoner. Mr. Delmege's (Castlepark) cattle were driven off the land. The Pilot (war-steamer) has been dispatched to Kildysart, with 60 troops."

INFAMOUS OUTRAGE UPON A PAY-CLERK.—On Thursday morning (last week) a most audacious attack was made on Mr. Slack, of Annadale, as he was passing through the plantations near Drimey House, county of Leitrim, the residence of Mr. Petrie. It appears that Mr. Slack was going his accustomed rounds, accompanied by police, on Monday afternoon, when a violent pain and sickness compelled him to halt within a short distance of his own residence. He remained for the night in the house where he had alighted, and, unfortunately, dismissed the policeman. At an early hour on Tuesday morning he started again for his own house, and had proceeded as far as Anna Plantation, when, as he relates, six men with blackened faces jumped out on the road, and seized his horse's head, firing a pistol at the same time without effect; they then dragged him down from his seat, and, after seizing the bag, containing money to the amount of £250, they made about to depart, when one of them called out, "You shan't follow us;" and deliberately shot him through the leg, having previously secured him by tying his driving whip in his mouth, twisting the lash round his head.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

THE IRISH RELIEF (IRELAND) BILL.

The House disposed of the remaining clauses of this bill in Committee, and made some amendments, but they were of an unimportant nature.

Lord STANLEY then proposed the addition of what are generally known as the "Bentinck clauses" to the bill, limiting the burden of the rates upon the occupying tenants. He urged their Lordships to dismiss from their minds the misrepresentations which had been industriously circulated out of doors in reference to the amendments which he was about to submit to them. He denied that the proposition was a landlord's invention. The object which he had in view in making it was to adopt the best possible mode for carrying out this perilous experiment. The amendment was necessary to the safe working of the Mill; and he felt convinced that unless they adopted it they could not reasonably expect to see the experiment conducted to its legitimate issue, without the most disastrous results. What he asked their Lordships to do was, to deal with Irish property as they would deem it safe to deal with English property. His object was to relieve the pressure of the poor-rates—to supersede the necessity for pauperism by furnishing the means of employment which was about to submit to them. He denied that the additional clause he should move would be to the effect that it should not be lawful for any occupier of rateable property, holding under any lease or agreement to be made or entered into after the passing of the act, nor for any tenant at will from year to year, after the 1st of January, 1849, to deduct from the rent to which he may be liable in respect of such property any amount whatever in respect of any rate which may be imposed at any period subsequent to the date of such lease or agreement, or subsequent to the 1st of January, 1849, as the case may be. The noble Lord then referred to the state of the law as regarded the collection of rates, and denied that they were equally distributed between landlord and tenant, or that an equal distribution would be the effect of the proposed bill. It was notorious that the rated value of the land was infinitely lower in the market than the rateable value of the land. He did not, he said, ask their Lordships to make the occupiers responsible for the rates at once, but he asked them to make them so prospectively or after due time should be afforded for the making of such arrangements between landlord and tenant, thus giving them a direct interest in the employment of the labourers. If the clause were right and sound in its principle, he hoped their Lordships would not have to undergo the mortification of being told they should not adopt it, lest, perchance, they might be met by an organised system of passive resistance out of doors, and that thereby the working of the bill might be defeated. Should they reject the clause, their Lordships might rest assured that they would render the condition of Ireland worse than it is, and make its future social improvement an impossibility.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE opposed the clause, and several other Peers expressed their hostility to it.

Lord STANLEY, in reply, said he was gratified at finding that the principle embodied in his clause was so generally approved of, but he could not conceal his surprise at finding that their Lordships appeared resolved, notwithstanding, to reject it. He would not, under such circumstances, give them the trouble of dividing, but he must say he deeply regretted that the ground of opposition to his clause should have been that their Lordships were to be guided in their legislation, not by reason or justice, but by the prejudices of the Irish people.

The noble Lord then withdrew his motion, the House resumed, and the report was ordered to be brought up on Friday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

SUSPENSION OF THE CORN DUTIES.—In answer to a question from Mr BAILLIE, Lord JOHN RUSSELL gave notice that he would on an early day move the further continuance of the suspension of the Corn Duties for a period of three months.

THE MONETARY CRISIS AND THE GOVERNMENT LOAN.

The House resolved itself into Committee on the Loan (Discount or Instalments) Resolution.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER moved a resolution to the effect that a discount of five per cent should be allowed to all persons who might make advances on account of the £8,000,000 loan on or before the 18th of June, and of four per cent on all instalments on or before the 16th of September. The object of the proposition, as well as that of the increase of the interest on Exchequer Bills, was to relieve the pressure in the money market, and he believed both measures were necessary to aid the credit of the country, and to give relief to the monetary transactions, which they would accomplish not so much by the quantity of capital they would set at liberty as by their effect in diminishing alarm and restoring confidence. The Chancellor of the Exchequer then described his views of the monetary condition of the country:—"I believe that it will be good policy and good economy to ease the money market in any way we can. I shall also be glad to afford any reasonable facilities to the gentlemen who contracted the last loan. In consequence of circumstances which neither they nor the Government could foresee, it has not been a very good bargain for them. (Hear.) I believe it is no advantage to a Government, in any of its departments, to drive a hard bargain, for, if they attempt to do so, they are sure to pay for it in the end, and I believe it is equally opposed to the interest of both parties. Neither do I agree that this need necessarily entail any considerable loss upon the public. It is quite certain that if trade comes to a stand-still, the revenue must inevitably suffer. When the foreboding during which the panic prevailed, the receipts in the Customs and other branches of the revenue fell off; but matters have since resumed their usual course, and I am glad to hear to-day that they are in a much better condition. I am sanguine that the power which many persons felt they had of obtaining loans on Exchequer Bills has to a great extent obviated the necessity of making those loans; and that the demand upon the Bank for loans, even at the rate of five per cent, has been to a very much less amount than was anticipated at the time the announcement was made. I stated on Friday, the amount which had been advanced by the Bank on that day; on Saturday and to-day no very great amount has been asked for, and, in all respects, the money market is easier. The price of stocks has, to a small extent, declined, but that has been partly owing to the rise of price of Exchequer Bills, compared with which they are rather lower than they otherwise would have been. The report I have to-day received from the Governor of the Bank of England is, that upon the whole things have been easier to-day: that there has been a very moderate demand for loans on Exchequer Bills; that there has been a further influx of Dutch gold, to the amount of £230,000; and that late news from America brings such advices with regard to the exchanges as to render the further export of gold from this country exceedingly improbable. I should be much more confident as to our future prospects but for the obstruction of the rise in the price of corn. (Hear, hear.) So far as the mere monetary pressure goes in London, I hope it is to a certain extent passing away; and I trust that, with renewed confidence in the City, confidence may be restored in the provinces, and that the check to trade which has been anticipated may not take place. It is, however, impossible to deny that the price of corn does constitute a most material cause of anxiety. It is right the House should know that the price of corn goes on to an extent, I should have thought, perfectly sufficient to check any rise of price."

Mr. HUME said, that unless Sir R. Peel could give a better explanation of the working of the Bank Act of 1844 than the Chancellor of the Exchequer, it was full time to reconsider that measure.

A general debate arose, which turned for the most part on the currency question

Lord G. BENTINCK suggested the repeal of the Bank Restriction Act as the only certain mode of remedying the evils complained of. He said, "The Bank of England had £9,900,000 worth of bullion in its coffers, but yet the Bank Charter Act, which was passed in 1844, forbade them to touch one shilling of that vast sum. Looking, then, at all those facts, he could not help saking the House, was it not the common-sense plan for getting out of those difficulties to remove the restrictions upon credit which were now crippling and starving the trade of the country, and which, if it were allowed much longer to continue starving the trade, would starve the people of this country? If the present state of things were much longer protracted in this country the prices of grain and foreign provisions would soon place them beyond our reach; and he conceived himself to be only speaking literally when he said that before three months passed away they great country might find itself without sufficient food for the support of its people. But we could at once obtain food enough if credit were set at liberty. If the Government persevered in their present course of policy it would amount to starving the bodies of the people for the purpose of feeding with gold their idol—the Bank Charter Act." (Hear, hear.) The noble Lord quoted scripture in behalf of his views:—"They had tried the Bank Charter Bill for three years; they had found it fail—it was a tree that had not borne good fruit, and they should follow the example of "A certain man had a fig tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none. Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, Behold, these three years I come seeking fruit on this fig tree, and find none: cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground?"

After several other members had spoken,

Sir R. Peel answered the various objections made to the Bank Restriction Act; and, in reference to the present position of affairs, said—"On the whole, I approve of the course that the Government have taken; at the same time, I cannot help feeling some apprehension—the rise in the price of corn which has this day been announced is, in every point of view, most painful. Do not suppose that I mean to shrink from the pressure, which, I regret to say, is not confined to this country. I greatly fear the effect of the increased pressure, though I am glad to hear from the right hon. gentleman, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, that there is a prospect of improvement; at the same time, I regret to learn from other quarters that some money transactions have occasioned considerable embarrassment. I admit it to be a subject for deep and serious reflection. I further admit that no peculiar and rigid adherence to any principle ought to prevent us from considering the subject fully in all its bearings. If I, myself, thought that any relaxation of this bill would be a cure for the evils which press upon us, I repeat that I would not oppose its relaxation on account of the part which I took in introducing that measure to Parliament; but it is my firm belief founded upon the information at present in my possession that a temporary loan of some 2,000,000 of money would not increase the capital which, in point of fact, is the source from which you can command the produce of other countries. (Hear, hear.) My great apprehension is, that by any such relaxation of this bill, by lending notes on Exchequer Bills, by permitting the Bank to issue notes on paper security, we should purchase temporary relief from pressure at the risk of aggravating the very evils from which we are endeavouring to escape."

The resolution of the Chancellor of the Exchequer was agreed to.

The Health of Towns Bill.—Lord Morpeth announced that, in consequence of the urgency of public business, he should only propose this session to apply the provisions of the Health of Towns Bill to the corporate towns, leaving the metropolitan corporation untouched.

The House adjourned at one o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

Royal Assent.—The Royal assent was given by commission to the Customs Duties Bill, the Portland Harbour Bill, the Commons Enclosure (No. 3) Bill, the Prisons (Ireland) Bill, the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Bill, the Ipswich Gas Bill, the Cheltenham Water-works Bill, and the Pile Piers Extension Bill.

SUPPLY OF CORN IN ENGLAND.

The Earl of Hardwicke put several questions to the Government respecting the quantity of corn at present in the country, and stated that it was strongly impressed on his mind that the supply of wheat which we possessed was not sufficient to support our population until the next harvest came in. He was, he said, led to this conclusion by the rapid decrease of wheat in his own county, and by all the inquiries which he made as to the general supply throughout the country.

The Marquis of Lansdowne said he could only give an opinion upon the subject, for there were no sources of information open to the Government which were not equally open to every individual in the country. He would, however, state his belief that very large quantities of corn had been imported into this country. "With regard to the importation to be expected from America, he could not give the noble Earl satisfactory and accurate information, as he had not the means of acquiring it, but he would state what he was sure would give the noble Earl great satisfaction, namely, that there was an enormous and increasing amount of corn imported up to this moment (cheers) into the country. Up to the present period the increased importation would appear from the following return. In January there were imported 661,000 quarters; in February 707,000 quarters; in March 925,000 quarters; and in April 1,043,000 quarters (hear, hear); thus clearly indicating that in proportion as there was an increasing demand, and an appearance of deficiency, which, at an early period of the year, was perceived, there had been a corresponding effort made by trade to supply the demand, and if that importation of corn continued in the same ratio, the whole supply received before the next harvest would be 3,376,000 quarters (hear). The statement he was about now to allude to was particularly satisfactory, since it showed the complete command of the markets of the world which this country enjoyed. From the moment it became known that other countries were unfortunately labouring under the same deficiency that affected us, an unceasing and increasing action was kept up by those large and populous countries of Europe where the deficiency and the necessity for an increased supply were daily becoming more apparent. Yet, under these circumstances, the whole of the exports of corn from the United States to the world at large amounted to 2,170,000 quarters, and of that amount not more than 500,000 quarters had found their way to any other part of the world than this country, leaving this country in possession of four times the amount exported from America to all the rest of the world. (Hear, hear.) And, whilst he made this statement, he might add that he had no reason to apprehend that that supply from America was likely to diminish; but, on the contrary, it was the opinion of those most likely to be well informed, that not only should we ensure the receipt of all the corn in the pipeline which had been destined for this country, but we might also ensure a portion of the corn which had originally been intended for other countries."

Lord Ashburton expressed his serious apprehension that the hope entertained by the Marquis of Lansdowne of increased supplies from America, would not be realised.

The report on the Landed Property (Ireland) Bill was received, and, some other formal business having been disposed of, the House, at eight o'clock, adjourned till Friday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. TUESDAY

The Whitsun Holidays.—Lord J. Russell gave notice that on Friday, the 21st inst., he should move the adjournment of the House for the Whitsun holidays, to Friday, the 28th inst. The noble Lord also gave notice that he would at the same time move that after the Whitsun holidays orders of the day shall take precedence of notices of motion on Thursdays

The Poor Removal Bill.—Mr. G. Bankes moved for leave to bring in a bill to repeal the first clause of the Poor Removal Bill. Sir G. Grey assented to the introduction of the bill, on the distinct understanding that hon. members were not in any way pledged to its principle, and that the objections against it should remain in force. Leave was given to bring in the bill.

The Loan. Several hon. members postponed their motions to give way to the anticipated discussion on the report of the Loan Discount resolutions. Lord J. Russell moved the bringing up of the report of the Committee on the Loan Discount. The report was brought up, the resolutions read a first and second time, and leave was given to bring in a bill founded thereon, without a single remark. The rapidity with which these several motions passed excited much laughter, a long discussion having been expected.

The Health of Towns Bill was read a second time.

The Poor Removal (Ireland) Supervision Bill, and the County Buildings Bill, were severally read a third time and passed.

The Incumbered Estates (Ireland) Bill was read a second time.

The House of Commons Costs Taxation Bill passed through Committee.

The Turnpike Roads (Ireland) Bill, and the Lunatic Asylums (Ireland) Bill, were read a second time.

The other orders of the day were disposed of, and the House adjourned at six o'clock, many members testifying their joy at the unexpected release by bursting and yawning ha ha. There was only a two hours' sitting, instead of a protracted and wearisome one, as was anticipated.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. WEDNESDAY.

The House met at twelve o'clock.

The Pious and Charitable Purposes Bill.—Lord John Manners moved the second reading of the Pious and Charitable Purposes Bill, the objects and provisions of w ich he explained. The intention of the measure was to allow lands to be bequeathed for charitable purposes, provided that they should be sold within two years after the death of the testator.—Sir George Grey opposed the bill, and moved as an amendment that it be read a second time that day six months.—Lord Clive and Sir W. Heathcote supported the bill—Sir Robert Inglis and Mr. Newdegate opposed it. On the division there were—for the second reading, 90; against it, 166: majority against the bill, 146.

THE POOR RATES (IRELAND) BILL.

On the motion of Mr. Sharman Crawford, the Poor Rates (Ireland) Bill was committed pro formâ, in order to have the 6th clause expunged, and other amendments made in it.

On the motion that the report be received for the purpose of having the bill recommitte. on a future day, Mr. Stafford O'Brien proposed the motion, and called on the Government to declare how far they were prepared to go in altering the law of rating for the poor in Ireland.

Sir G. Grey said he did not think the state of the law of rating for the poor in Ireland satisfactory, but he reserved his opinion upon the bill until it should come regularly before him in Committee, with the amendments made in it by Mr. Crawford.

Some further discussion ensued, and on a division, the motion was rejected by 81 to 55.

The motion for the second reading of Sir C. Napier's Seamen's Enlistmen. Bill, was negative d without a division.

The Health of Towns Bill.—Lord Morpeth moved that the Health of Towns Bill be committed pro formâ, to receive amendme ts; and gave notice that he would not proceed further with it until after the Whitsun ho idays.—Colonel Sibthorp objected to the formal commitment of bills, and moved that the House be counted. There not being 40 members present, an adjournment took place at a quarter to six.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

Railway Calls.—Mr. Mackinnon gave notice that, on Thursday next, he should move for leave to bring in a bill relating to calls made by railway companies.

DUTY ON FOREIGN WINES

Dr. Bowring moved, "That this House will immediately resolve itself into a committee for the purpose of reducing the duty on foreign wines." The hon member referred to a number of documents, to show the extent and importance of the foreign wine trade, and the amount of revenue it brought into the exchequer of this country. He was convinced that a reduction of the duty would prove most beneficial to the public, and not injurious to the revenue.

Mr. Ewart seconded the motion. A reduction of the duty on foreign wine must generally increase the amount of commercial transactions between this country and France.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer said, in the present state of the revenue, he should not feel himself justified in agreeing to the motion.

The motion, after some discussion, was negatived.

Mr. S. Worsley then moved for a commission to enquire into the state and operation of the Law of Marriage, as relating to the prohibited degrees of affinity. The hon. member supported his motion in a lengthened speech; and the Government assenting, the motion was agreed to.

Sir W. J. Barron then moved for a Committee to enquire into the means of improving the Fisheries of Ireland. An animated debate ensued: but the motion was negatived, on a division, by a large majority.

The remaining business was unimportant, and the House rose at twelve o'clock.

Railway Committees.—There was a decision of some importance on Monday in Group 15, affirmatively for the Great Northern, but negatively for the Eastern Counties and Enfield and Edmonton, as regards their proposal for completing the net-work of rail for the north-eastern districts. The committee were of opinion that the preamble of the Great Northern (Hertford, Hatfield, and St. Alban's Branch) had been "proved;" and that the preambles of the Eastern Counties (Hertford to Hitchin, &c.), and Enfield and Edmonton Extension had "not been proved." The London and North-Western (St. Albans, Luton, and Dunstable) cannot be proceeded with until the Railway Commissioners have made their report.——On Wednesday, in group 18, the committee decided that the preamble of the bill of the North Staffordshire (Churnet Valley and Trent Valley Junction) was not proved.——In Group 25, the Committee on the Manchester and Birmingham and North Staffordshire Junction, decided that the preamble was proved.——On Thursday, in Group 4, a novelty was under discussion, in the shape of an Indian Railway, the Great India Peninsular (from Bombay to Alleh, with Extensions, &c.) Mr. Austen, who appeared for the promoters, stated that, in deference to the East India House, and to the Board of Control, the promoters considered it advisable not to proceed with the Bill during the present session, and therefore he begged to withdraw it. Sir R. Peel (the Chairman) intimated that he would make a report to that effect to the House of Commons.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

THE ARCH-DUKE CHARLES OF AUSTRIA.

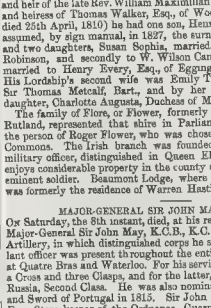
The Archduke Charles was born the 5th September, 1771. Carried away by a decided vocation for the profession of arms, the Archduke Charles, in 1793, at the early age of twenty-two years, was entrusted with the command of the vanguard of the Prince of Coburg. In this campaign and that of the following year he distinguished himself by services so brilliant, that in 1795 he was appointed to the command of the Austrian army then operating on the Rhine. As Commander-in-Chief he had the honour of vanquishing Jourdan, and compelling General Moreau to make that famous retreat which forms perhaps the most brilliant episode in his military career. At the same time, whilst the Archduke was obtaining such signal triumphs on the banks of the Rhine, the Imperial armies were destroyed in Italy by General Bonaparte, who was then carrying on his first campaign in the capacity of Commander-in-Chief. Summoned to Italy in order to repair the disasters of the Austrian Generals, the Archduke found nothing but disorganised remains. He struggled, however, with firmness and fortitude; and if he was compelled to retrograde as far as the plains of Campo-Formio, he nevertheless gave evidence, in the course of this campaign, of talents that gained him the esteem of Napoleon.

After the rupture of the peace of Campo Formio, the Archduke Charles was once more called to take the command of the Austrian army on the banks of the Rhine. He then took part in the operations of the Russian armies of Spanish were devoured in Switzerland by Massena. The Russians afterwards accused him as the cause of their reverse; and the Cabinet of St Petersburg, seconded in Vienna by a party which already dreaded his glory and popularity, obtained his recal. Events, however, were not long in avenging him. After the battle of Hohenlinden, when the victorious armies of France no longer saw any obstacles before them, and were preparing to invade the territories of Austria, the Court of Vienna was too happy to recal the disgraced Archduke to active service. On the conclusion of the peace of Luneville, in 1801, the Archduke Charles became Minister of War, and displayed, in that capacity, an activity and talents which restored to Austria a finer army, perhaps, than any she had ever before possessed. In 1805, she thought herself in a position to resume hostilities against France; the third coalition was formed, and the Archduke, at first despatched to Italy, was soon recalled thence after the fatal battle of Austerlitz.

After the peace of Presburg, being charged once more with the reorganization of the armies of Austria, he opposed, to the utmost of his power, but unfortunately without success, the resumption of arms which drew down upon Austria the dreadful disaster of Wagram. In 1809 he again commanded the Imperial army in that memorable campaign, and it was the last act of his military career. The Archduke Charles quitted active service in 1809, and after that period always lived in a retirement which was incessantly embellished and animated by glory, popularity, and study. The Archduke Charles is the author of several works on the art of war, which are highly esteemed by all competent judges. Married to a Princess of Nassau, the Archduke Charles has left four sons, of whom one, the Archduke Frederick, is a Captain in the Austrian navy, and two daughters, the elder of whom is now Queen of the two Sicilies. The Archduke died at Vienna, on the 30th ultimo.

HENRY-JEFFREY, VISCOUNT ASHBROOK.

This noble Peer, who had been for some time past in a delicate state of health, died suddenly on Tuesday afternoon, the 4th instant, at his seat, Beaumont Lodge, Old Windsor. His Lordship, the only surviving son of William, second Viscount Ashbrook, was born 16th November, 1776, and succeeded to the family honours at the decease of his elder brother, in 1802.



In the reign of William IV. he held office as one of the Lords of the Bedchamber, and had the honour of being appointed to sit at the head of the coffin, while the remains of the Monarch were lying in state at Windsor Castle.

He married, first, 26th May, 1802, Deborah Susannah, only daughter and heir of the late Rev. William Macmillan Preind, and grand-daughter and heiress of Thomas Walker, Esq., of Woodstock. By his lady (who died 25th April, 1810) he had one son, Henry, now Lord Ashbrook, who assumed, by sign manual, in 1827, the surname and arms of Walker; and two daughters, Susan Sophia, married, first, to the Rev. William Robinson, and secondly to W. Wilson Campbell, Esq.; and Caroline, married to Henry Every, Esq., of Eggington House, county Derby. His Lordship's second wife was Emily Theophila, eldest daughter of Sir Thomas Metcalf, Bart., and by her he has left one surviving daughter, Charlotte Augusta, Duchess of Marlborough.

The family of Flowr, or Flower, formerly seated at Oakham, county Rutland, represented that shire in Parliament, temp. Richard II., in the person of Roger Flower, who was chosen Speaker of the House of Commons. The Irish branch was founded by Sir George Flower, a military officer, distinguished in Queen Elizabeth's wars; and it still enjoys considerable property in the county of Kilkenny, granted to that eminent soldier. Beaumont Lodge, where the deceased Peer expired, was formerly the residence of Warren Hastings.

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR JOHN MAY, K.C.B., K.C.H.

On Saturday, the 8th instant, died, at his residence in Hyde Park-street, Major-General Sir John May, K.C.B., K.C.H., &c., Colonel of the Royal Artillery, in which distinguished corps he served since 1793. This gallant officer was present throughout the entire Peninsular campaign, and at Quatre Bras and Waterloo. For his services in the former he received a Cross and three Clasps, and for the latter, the Order of St. Anne of Russia, Second Class. He was also nominated a Knight of the Tower and Sword of Portugal in 1815. Sir John May was son of John May, Esq. Store-keeper of the Ordnance, Guernsey, and descended lineally from John May, the historian and poet. He married in 1819 the only child of Robert Broff, Esq., formerly governor of Bencoolen, Sumatra, and at his decease was in his 67th year.

EPITOME OF NEWS.—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

At the latter end of April the cold at Stockholm was extremely rigorous, and the numerous lakes in the neighbourhood of that city, as well as the port and roadstead, to the extent of about four leagues, were so solidly frozen that carts heavily laden could pass over. Peasants attending the Stockholm market had still traversed in their carts about fifteen leagues on the ice. Such an excessive cold at such a season is unexampled

A declaration or protest was lately signed by a portion of the Prussian Diet against accepting the decree of the King for the convocation of the Diet as a full realisation of the laws made and revised by the late Monarch. We learn that this declaration, signed by 160 deputies, has been received by the Marshal of the Diet, and that it will probably be brought under discussion.

The Augsburg Gazette publishes the following lines from Lola Montez, dated Munich, April 29:—"Worn out with being made the mark of so many secret and public malicious reports, I denounce as infamous calumniators all who speak, write, or print evil against me without being able to prove it."

The Hamburg papers contain accounts from Pomerania to the effect that a famine is approaching at Lauenberg; and accounts from Kolberg say that since the opening of the navigation the exportation of corn, not only to the provinces, but also to foreign countries, continues without ceasing, and that provisions of all kinds are daily becoming dearer and more scarce; the prices keep up, and the bakers are partly in want of money; several have ceased working, and bread is still very dear.

A claimant for the Preston and Esk Peerage has made his appearance in the person of Sir R. Graham, Bart. The claim has been referred to the Committee of Privileges

The arrivals of foreign grain at Leith have been upwards of 36,000 quarters weekly for some time back, principally from the lower Baltic ports. On the opening of the Russian rivers there will probably be a great increase in the imports of corn from that quarter.

The Second Chamber of Darmstadt has decided that children under nine years of age shall not be allowed to work in the manufactories; children of from nine to twelve may be authorised by the police to work for a period not exceeding eight hours each day, and those between twelve and sixteen may work ten hours. There are more than 40,000 children employed in the manufactories in the Grand Duchy of Hesse Darmstadt.

The Sheffield Athenæum was opened last week, and an inaugural discourse was delivered on the occasion by Mr. Charles Knight, of London

The President of Haiti has issued a decree, permitting steamers in the packet service, touching at Jacmel, to import foreign merchandise thither, and to re-export it duty free immediately, without being liable to any detention beyond the time necessary for the landing of the goods and the return of letters such merchandise being consigned to one commercial house alone, which shall be responsible to the State for the duty.

A return showing the sums deposited in, and withdrawn from military savings-banks during the year ending the 31st of March, 1846, announces the former to have been £36,334, and the latter £24,363.

The Irish Poor Relief Commissioners state, in their first report, that between the 27th of February and the 10th of April, in the shape of circulars, instructions, reports, and correspondence, they have consumed fourteen tons of paper. At this rate, and reckoning paper at the moderate price of 7d. per pound, the "Relief" Commissioners fulfil their mission at a cost of about £6800 per annum for paper alone.

We learn from the Grand Duchy of Brunswick that the distress in that country have ceased; but the buildings of the Royal domain of Walkenried have been destroyed by fire, with large stores of corn and potatoes. This is supposed to have been done by incendiaries

From a Parliamentary return just published, it appears that the total number of persons incarcerated in the various debtors' prisons of Ireland amounted on New Year's-day last to 7865, of whom 154 were confined for debts not exceeding £2; 168 for debts of £2 and under £3; 1237 for debts of £10; 789 for debts of £20; and 5142 for debts above £20

Baron Stanislas Klucki, a Polish Lieutenant General, who served with great distinction under Napoleon, died at Rome last month, aged 68

From the 1st September last to the 10th ultimo there were exported from the United States to Great Britain and Ireland 1,420,857 barrels of flour, 325,127 barrels of corn meal, 1,409,942 bushels of wheat, and 5,898,175 bushels of corn. The total export from the States was 2,200,412 barrels of flour, 1,916,467 bushels of wheat, and 9,084,161 bushels of corn.

The Commerce states that there has been so great a quantity of potatoes planted in Holland this year, that if the crop prove a moderate average, one-fourth will be sufficient for the consumption of the country, and the remainder may be exported.

It appears, by a letter from Odessa, that there are in the Russian ports of the Black Sea stores of grain, for exportation from this time till the month of August, to the amount of 7,380,000 hectolitres, which will require about 1900 vessels to transport. Between the 16th and the 19th of April, 42 vessels took their departure for France with cargoes of corn, making together 6 000 tons, forming a total of 144,000 hectos.; 27 other vessels sailed also for Leghorn, Genoa, and Marseilles

On Wednesday a Court of Directors was held at the East India House, when Major-General Sir John Hunter Littler, K.C.B., was appointed a Provincial Member of the Council of India.

Mr. Barry, the architect of the New Palace, has received orders to provide, without a moment's unnecessary delay, 14 additional Committee rooms, in order that the Committees may get their business out of hand as rapidly as possible.

M. Coletti has been compelled to dissolve the Greek Chambers, having on one occasion had a majority of one only (his own vote.) Letters from Athens, of the 30th ult., announce that the Greek Chambers were dissolved on the 26th, and a new Legislature convoked for the 22nd of July.

Constantinople correspondence of the 27th ult., mentions the simultaneous arrival in the Archipelago of the fleets of Mehemet Ali and the Prince de Joinville; the odd part of the affair being that old Mahomet, whom France has been coaxing and petting, like the Bey of Tunis, has offered his cooperation against Greece, whom France declares she will protect.

We find from the Dutch papers that the health of the King of Holland is so much improved, that his Majesty was able to go out on the 9th inst. No more bulletins are to be issued.

By means of experiments, to test the relative strength of gun cotton with that of the best ordnance gunpowder, has just taken place at the Holyhead Mountain, Anglesea; the Holland Slate Quarries, in Merionethshire; and at the Dee, near Colonel Peyronnet Sisted Champion, and the results show that the saving by the use of gun cotton is at least thirty per cent.; added to which the great advantage, that the miners, by its means, are enabled to obtain the most enormous blocks, and with little waste.

Thirty-seven vessels arrived in the River Thames on Monday, from ports in Europe, which, with the exception of one or two that had other kinds of provisions on board, were entirely laden with grain. Most of them were from Denmark and the Hanoverian dominions.

A Parliamentary return gives the following estimate of the expense of the new Railway Board. The total amount of salaries is £9836, including Chief Commissioners, £2000, and each of the other two, £1500 per annum, and the Secretary, £1000. The estimated contingent expenses are £2160—making a total of £11,996.

The Algiers journals of the 5th inst. are filled with accounts of promotions in the army on the occasion of the King's fête. Abd-el-Kader was still at the Deira, which had made a slight change of position nearer to the Riff. The utmost tranquillity continued to exist in every part of the colony.

In the parish registry of St. Peter's Parish, Dublin, the registry of the birth of the Duke of Wellington was thus:—"Arthur, son of the Right Honourable Garret Wellesley, Earl of Mornington, born April 30, 1769."

Early and good news of the Greenland seal fishery has arrived by an Aberdeen vessel, which has 9000 seals for her own share. Five vessels are reported as having caught 31,000 seals. This will go far to make up for the loss of whales, which appear to have left the Greenland coast altogether, and retreated to the upper parts of Davis' Straits, whither they cannot be pursued, except at the expense of a long voyage.

A numerous meeting of rate-payers was held on Wednesday at Liverpool, at which a series of resolutions were adopted, and also a petition to both Houses of Parliament, praying for the immediate passing of the Irish Poor Law and Irish Pauper Removal Bills.

The Dorchester and Southampton Railway will be opened in about a fortnight.

The Portsmouth theatre has been sold to Government, to make way for a contemplated extension of the infantry barracks

In some parts of Belgium, say the latest Belgian papers, the growing crops of rapeseed presented a most beautiful appearance, and for many days there had not been so strong and lasting a wind with flowers. The flowering, however, was rather late, but would, it was conceived, inflict no injury. The rye was next in the order of importance, and gave the most promising prospect of a good harvest. Wheat was in a less favourable state, and somewhat attacked with rust, which, however, began to disappear.

The Moniteur announces that the importation of grain and flour into France during the second fortnight of April amounted to 790,448 hectolitres, or 59,280 tons.

A mine of rock salt has just been discovered in the environs of Lemberg (Gallicia), which is even richer than that of Wielicska, in the same province, hitherto considered the richest in Europe.

RIGA, FROM AN ORIGINAL PAINTING.

FOREIGN CORN PORTS.—RIGA.

RIGA and CRONSTADT, have, of late, attracted very considerable attention. Their condition, at this period, is annually a point of interest; but, at the present season of scarcity, it acquires additional importance; for, the opening of the navigation of the great rivers upon which these ports are situated, promises, this year, to be attended with unusual results. Advices from St. Petersburg to the 21st of April state :—

"We just hear that the ice has commenced to break up at within five versts of the source of the Neva, and we may consequently expect the same event here in about a week. In a fortnight from that time the shipping generally commences at Cronstadt." Regarding the exchange it is observed:—"Although our present rates of exchange, on account of the little business doing, may go somewhat lower, still we are of opinion that, as soon as the shipping commences, they will rise again."

"From Riga we learn that the last accounts from Biela state, that on the 13th of April the ice had broken up, and that more than 800 barques were in readiness to sail for Riga as soon as the river should be sufficiently clear.

"Advices from St. Petersburg, to the 26th of April, state a recurrence of winter weather. The grain market was, nevertheless, firm, rye in particular being in good demand. From Riga, under date the 29th of April, the exchange is quoted 39 5-16. Both flax and grain were firm, and the hemp barks were daily expected. The mass of floating ice in the bay still prevented the entrance of ships."

RIGA, owing to its advantageous situation, near the mouth of the Duna, about seven miles above its entrance into the Gulf of Riga, has a very extensive trade; being, of the Russian towns on the Baltic, in this respect second only to St. Petersburg. The exports consist of the great staple articles of Russian produce, corn, timber, flax, hemp, linseed, tallow, Russia leather, and sail-cloth. Riga wheat is inferior to that of Danzig. Two descriptions are shipped—one the growth of RUSSIA, the other of Courland; the last is the best, being larger bodied, and of a brighter colour, than the Russian; still, it makes but indifferent flour. Oats are of good quality, and are largely exported. The mast trade is extensive; and wainscot logs are much exported to England, and are very superior. The trade is chiefly carried on by foreign merchants, particularly by the English.

The river is wide, the port very spacious and secure; and the merchantmen come up to the quays. In summer, a bridge of pontoons, loosely attached to piles, and rising and falling with the tide, is laid across the river; this bridge is 40 feet wide, and 2600 feet long, and is a pleasant and fashionable promenade.

The town is surrounded with ramparts and bastions: it has a strong citadel, and is otherwise well fortified, so that it is considered one of the most important bulwarks of the Russian empire. It has about 4000 houses, 1000 of which are of stone; there are 14 churches, and an Imperal palace, arsenal, and several other public buildings. It has suffered several times by fires and inundations; to the latter it is much exposed, by the banks of the river being very low. Thus, at the breaking up of the ice in 1814, 400 houses were swept away with their inhabitants, together with immense quantities of timber, and 80 vessels laden with hemp.

The numerous ships in the river, the bustle in the streets, and the well-stocked warehouses and shops, are indications of the extensive trade of which Riga is the centre. Our view of the Port, is from a painting in the possession of a City merchant, obligingly proffered for engraving in our series of "Foreign Corn Ports."

CRONSTADT ("The Town of the Crown,") the companion subject, is a town, fortress, and port, in the Russian Government of St. Petersburg, from which city it is about thirty-one miles distant. It is built at the south-eastern extremity of Cotlin-Ostrof, an island in that part of the Gulf of Finland, called the Bay of Cronstadt, about sixteen miles from the mouth of the Neva. At the entrance of the harbour, on an island opposite the citadel, lies the fortress of Cronschlott, built by Peter the Great, who termed it his window of Europe.

CRONSTADT.—AT THE FIRST STOP AFTER THE BREAKING UP OF THE NEVA ICE.

Besides its importance as the great naval station of the Russian fleet, Cronstadt is the harbour of St. Petersburg. All vessels proceeding to that port are searched there, and their cargoes sealed; and such as are too large for the shallow waters of the Neva unload their cargoes at Cronstadt, and transport them in smaller craft.

There are three harbours; but vessels are detained a great part of the year by ice in the Bay of Cronstadt, which usually prevents them from entering after the end of November, or leaving before the end of April, or sometimes even later. Peter the Great decreed an annual prize of 1000 roubles to the first vessel that should arrive at Cronstadt on the breaking-up of the ice. The passage is a dangerous one; and in making it, some years since, an English steam-boat is stated to have been lost.

The population of the town in summer exceeds 40,000 individuals, of various nations, of these, next to the Russians, the English are the most numerous.

The breaking-up of the ice of the Neva, and the white winter of St. Petersburg, are thus picturesquely described in the "Life of a Travelling Physician:"—

The river takes its rise from the Ladoga, thirty miles distant from the town; and, as the stream is very rapid as it rises from the lake, so it is at this point that disintegration of the ice first commences. This event is telegraphed from the fortress of Schlüsselberg, situated at the mouth of the river. The dissolution of the body is gradual; an isolated mass of ice loosened from its holds is carried down the stream, and, pressing against a resisting mass, forces it also to yield; as the floating particles increase from above, the pressure becomes greater and the resistance less, and a channel is formed in the centre of the stream, for there the current is strongest, and this becomes freed long before the sides of the river. An impediment to the speedy dissolution of the whole mass is frequently afforded by the roads which cross the river, and which, being covered by a mixture of sand and snow trodden down, do not feel the sun's influence like the rest of the surface. Hence, a piece of ice half a verst long will not force its way through them, so firm is the resistance which they offer, and it becomes necessary to saw the roads through. It is not uncommon to see people walking along these roads when all above and below them is a mass of floating ice. The whole of this process is often the source of great amusement. If the weather be warm and fine, the quays are crowded with people amusing themselves with the sight of this disintegration of the mass; all eyes are directed towards the bridge, where the people and carriages throng; many get out of their vehicles and walk over, hurry through their business on the opposite side, anxious to retrace their steps before the bridge has swung away. A trifling circumstance may hasten or retard this event. When least expected, away it swings, and gain and loss are counted.

It is beautiful to witness the breaking up of a field of solid ice, which is in a semi-state of decay. A large wedge comes down upon it, perhaps part of a road insinuates itself into it, and, breaking it through, throws up its fluted spicula on each side in a thousand spangling forms. It is curious, also, to see the various things which float down with the large pieces of ice. Boats stranded in the ice as they attempted to cross in the autumn; enclosures of rails made for the washerwomen; stacks of hay, suddenly carried away from the river's side; an unfortunate cow, plenty of dogs, all travelling gratis down the stream. I have seen a flock of geese, standing upon a floating island, pass through the centre of the town before they took wing.

A few hours suffice for the transit of the river ice into the gulph, for this takes place previous to the breaking up of the Ladoga. As soon as the river is clear, so that boats may cross, a cannon announces that the governor of the fortress has crossed: an ancient custom. Previous to this cannon shot no private boat can ply. As soon as the signal is given, the stream is covered over with boats of all sizes.

This is the moment to see the Neva in all its glory—cleared of ice, and no bridges in the way to detract from its magnitude. It has the appearance of a large lake divided by an insular jet of land into two great branches. It flows slowly but majestically along, and its pure crystal stream reflects the dazzling sunbeam which plays upon its surface.

The view of Petersburg from a balcony of the English quay, which takes in many of the public buildings, and the splendid stream flowing through the centre of one of the finest cities in Europe, must be seen at this time to be duly appreciated. It is magnificent!

The next financial operation consists in laying wagers upon the arrival of ships in Cronstadt. This is another very uncertain speculation, and seldom takes place for some days, or even weeks after the departure of the Neva ice. There is no tide, no current in the gulf, so that the ice remains quiescent, till it is partly dissolved by heat and rain, or completely shivered to atoms by waves and wind. Large masses are often drifted on the shores.

Till this be accomplished, no ships can arrive; and the average term of their entering Cronstadt is about the fifth of May. Then the season, to use the factory term, commences. The navigation of the Baltic at this season is by no means safe nor comfortable. Ships leave England at various periods, and, if the winds are favourable, may arrive at the edge of the ice in the gulf, and remain starving there with cold for a fortnight before they can come into port. When the ice does begin to move, they are often in great danger, for they must drift at the good pleasure of the floating ice. The rudder is of no avail, and the sharp ice sometimes cuts them through, and they founder.

This may occur even more frequently in the autumn, when the ice is more hard and solid. Ships arrive within various distances of the port, when their progress is impeded by the discovery of a field of ice. Here they must remain till the following spring, unless some hurricane shall again break up the ice and allow them to proceed. It does occasionally happen that the first winter dissolves, and a second commences. When fairly fixed at the edge of the ice, there they must remain, if no such extraordinary circumstance chance to free them. If ships are thus arrested within a mile of Cronstadt, a contract is formed with workmen to cut canals and tow them into port. The ship Archangel was caught and fixed in the ice seven versts below Cronstadt. A canal was sawed through at the expense of 2150 sterling. She had a valuable cargo. A ship which had accompanied her on her voyage was cut through by the ice and foundered. Such are the inconveniences of navigating the Baltic early and late in the season.

Our Illustration is from a Drawing by M. Manuel, the Russian artist.

THE NEW HOUSE OF LORDS.

(Concluded from page 294.)

WARMING AND VENTILATING, AND LIGHTING.

ORNAMENT FROM BACK OF THE QUEEN'S STATE CHAIR.

I trust that the following description of the plans adopted in Warming and Ventilating the House are more full than any hitherto published: and the illustrative diagrams will be found especially interesting. To insure accuracy, we have submitted our sectional drawings and descriptions to Mr. T. Quarm, the chief clerk of the works, who most kindly pointed out and corrected errors, and for which attention our best thanks are due.

Our Engravings show sections, longitudinal and transverse, of the House of Lords and adjoining Lobbies, to elucidate the actions of the air in its va rious currents.

In the Longitudinal Section, A is the House of Lords; D, the Victoria Lobby or Hall; and E, the Peers' Lobby. a a a, the chambers under the House, &c., divided from it by a perforated iron floor, rendered air-tight from the House by a covering of lead. These chambers are for either hot or cold air, as may be required. b, the fresh air chambers in the roof; c, the vitiated ditto; and this part of the building we have shown in double section, one half to represent the fresh chamber, the other the foul, or vitiated. The dotted line d d indicates an iron tube for conveying the foul air from the Victoria Hall to the discharge shaft, wherein, as will be hereafter described, is a steam-jet, f, for moving the air; e is the foul air tube from the Peers' Lobby to the same shaft; g, the discharge shaft and chimney to the engines: h is one of Lord Dundonald's steam boilers; i, the cokels; k, the bulls'-eyes through which the air passes, after leaving the cokels, to enter the diffusing chambers, a a; l, the steam-pipe to supply the cokels. m, the room where the temperature is regulated; n, the flues in the south wall of the Victoria Hall, up which the air passes with great velocity to the supply chambers over the ceiling, two flues being appropriated to the Victoria Lobby, and four to the House of Lords; o, continuation of flue for air from basement. Each flue has an area of six feet, thereby allowing the passage, with the ordinary velocity, as indicated by the anemometer, of upwards of 7000 cubic feet of air per minute; p p p, air-passages to supply the cokels with fresh air; r, doors at the bulls'-eyes, to shut off the hot air from the cokels when required.

In the Transverse Section, A is the House of Lords; B B, the lower corridors; C C, the upper ditto; a a a, the air chambers under the House, b b, the fresh air chambers over the ceiling; c, the vitiated chamber; d, the tube for conveying the foul air from the Victoria Hall. Flues are constructed in each pier, between the windows, to convey air, if required, to the under side of the cove of the galleries, the quatrefoil enrichments of which are ingeniously perforated, and covered by wire gauze inside. This wire-gauze is quite invisible to the general visitor, and appears to be only a deep shadow in the quatrefoils; its real character we should never have discovered, had it not been pointed out.

We give a section of the arrangement of the cokels, that our readers may completely understand the means employed in ventilation:—i i are steam cokels, which are iron boxes, having pipes running quite through them, the spaces between the pipes being hollow, so as to allow of a circulation of steam or water amongst them. As the cokels rest upon iron girders, there are passages underneath, and these are supplied with fresh air from the perforated zinc plate z. The air, having no other means of exit, passes through the tubes in the cokels; and, as they are kept hot by steam playing round them, constantly supplied by the engine, gets heated there, and goes into the bulls'-eyes k, and onwards, as before described. That as little waste of water as possible may occur, the cokels are elevated just a little above the level of the steam boilers, so that, whatever condensation takes place, its proceeds return to the boilers. Iron doors are inserted at the passage, so as to cut off the supply from the lower part of the cokels, if cooler air is wanted, and a door at the top passage to admit the air to circulate about and above the cokels, but not through it.

Having described the leading features, we will now endeavour fully to explain to our readers the currents and effects produced.

The air gains admission through an iron perforated door direct from the river, through a ventilation passage, into a small chamber, on the floor of which there are five or six inches of water, and passes through a finely perforated zinc screen, over which water is constantly trickling, and it is thus freed from all impurities. It then passes through the pipes of the cokels, which are heated by the steam, and, thoroughly warmed, from thence it proceeds, through the bulls' eyes, to the chamber under the House of Lords, and thus nearly 40,000 cubic feet of air, freed from all impurities, are always ready for admission into the House. The air next passes up the flues in the wall of the Victoria Lobby, into the supply-chambers over the ceilings.

The vitiated air being drawn off from the chamber by the action of the steam-jet, a constant stream of similar air is rising from the House, through the perforated enrichments of the beams in the central division; and, to keep up the supply thus incessantly, yet imperceptibly, passing off, a current of fresh air is, equally imperceptibly, always pouring down, from the open work in the beams at the side divisions of the ceiling, to the floor of the House, where the two currents meet in the centre, and ascend to the foul air chamber, whence, being then under the influence of the steam-jets, they are rapidly drawn away. The foregoing is a description of the mode of obtaining fresh heated air into the House, first using it as a means of warming the floor, in summer, from below, and afterwards allowing it to supply the apartments

Should the temperature in the House be too high, it can be diminished by closing the doors of the flues in the air chamber under the House, and, by opening other doors in them, currents of cold air can be drawn from the basements, through finely perforated screens, at a very low temperature, not exceeding 45° or 50° in the midst of summer. A provision has also been made to keep the cokels supplied with a constant stream of cold water, in summer, to cool the air which will be passed through them.

By an ingenious adaptation, the chimney or shaft, that conveys the smoke from the steam boiler is made the shaft for the carrying off the vitiated air, and this is invaluable, as the velocity of the air in the shaft caused by the heat of the boiler, independent of the heat evolved by the steam-jets, must be very great, and thus the tower in which is the shaft is as useful for two purposes as well as highly ornamental.

The upper part of this shaft has been so ingeniously contrived that the influence of the jets is entirely separated from the smoke issuing from the steam-boiler fires, by means of a separation, in the flue, of sheet-iron, three feet in height above the top of the jets. Three sides of the shaft are separated off in this manner; the other side is for the foul air admission to the shaft

The diffusion of the air in the House without draughts being perceptible to any of the Peers, must be a convincing proof of the success of the plan; but, if further evidence were required, it is furnished by the fact that nearly one hundred very large wax candles are burning in the evenings unprotected by any glass, as under ordinary circumstances, and the flames are as steady as would be the case with candles in a small sitting-room. If the air in the supply chamber is fumigated with a perfume, in four or five minutes after, any one sitting at the north end of the House may detect the aromatised air, and thus be convinced of the supply of air, even to the extreme parts of the House, being perfect, the apartment being entirely scented from the supply chambers; and, in fifteen or sixteen minutes all trace of perfume has passed off. Indeed, so completely has the plan adopted answered the expectations of its gifted inventor, and so perfect is the onward action of the currents of air in their prescribed courses, that in some experiments carried on in the presence of Mr. Faraday, a perfumed atmosphere was only to be detected at one side and to about the centre of the House, some pastilles having been burnt in the air-chamber below the side of the House where Mr. Faraday observed the scent to be diffused; so that the air, laden with the fragrant odour, as a tell-tale, had passed through the flues, and onwards, into the House, and had afterwards passed through the vitiated air-chamber exactly in the direction intended; and which the small arrows in our diagrams correctly point out.

The gas lights are upon Faraday's system, so as to prevent the carbonic acid gas, and other deleterious products of combustion from entering the apartment illuminated. The action of the principle is simple, and it is this:—The air rushes through a perforated plate to supply the gas flame, and having parted with its oxygen, rises over the chimney, and, being prevented from escaping at the top, passes between the inner and outer glasses, through the small tubes into the larger one, and thence makes its exit; and thus, though the gas is burning brightly, there is no absorption of fresh air from the apartment to supply the flame. These fittings were executed, under Mr. Barry's direction, by Mr. James Faraday, of Wardour-street.

CANDELABRUM IN THE NEW HOUSE OF LORDS

In one of our former numbers, we alluded to the Lighting being on Faraday's principle, and mentioned the Ventilation as being entrusted to him also; but we cannot pass over this subject without correcting that statement, as the whole of the Ventilating arrangements are entirely due to the master mind of the great architect, Mr. Barry, to whom the country is indebted for that which has been so long desired and so often aimed at for many years, that is, a perfect system of Ventilation. Although we have given but a slight sketch of the Warming and Ventilating principles, we hope our readers will thoroughly understand our description, and acknowledge the plans are very simple, but ingenious in the extreme; and, therefore, more worthy of admiration.

CANDELABRUM IN THE NEW HOUSE OF LORDS.

THIS exquisite specimen of modern skill in the art of brass-working, is one o two, which are placed on either side, but a little in advance of the Throne, in the House of Lords.

It is of octangular form, and may be divided, for greater clearness in description, into three parts, the pedestal, shaft, and branches. From a plinth of Seagliola in imitation of Sienna marble, moulded and embattled, rises the pedestal, which has, at its corners, pillars, unornamented, but having deep bases and capitals, elegantly moulded. The sides of the pedestal are filled with the richest pierced tracery, consisting of hexagons, with quatrefoil mouldings, and quatrefoils alternately, all of the most delicate workmanship. On the tops of the pillars are winged lions, couchant, which support the shaft; and this, like the pedestal, is filled with open-worked hexagons and quatrefoils, and has slender twisted fillets running up the angles.

From an enriched coronal at the top of the shaft, eight flying buttresses, richly pierced and crowned with crocketed pinnacles, take their spring; and from them a double row of branches for lights sweep in graceful convolutions. The lower row of branches have oak leaves twined round them, and divide into two, at a little distance from their springing, so as to hold sixteen coronals of elaborate workmanship, within which are sockets for wax lights. The upper tier are of the same pattern as the lower, but do not divide, so that there are but eight lights therein. A coronal for a single light terminates the whole. It is absolutely impossible to describe the beauty of these elaborate specimens of art: so minute and so perfect are their decorations, that they are truly magnificent, and, from their great height, most imposing. To the topmost coronal they are about seventeen feet high, of which the pedestal is nearly five feet, so that some idea of their proportions may be inferred from this statement; and of their general CHARACTER and design, our illustration, which has been most carefully drawn and engraved, affords a correct representation.

We are happy to hear that the Commissioners of Fine Arts for the Decoration of the New Palace at Westminster, have appointed Mr. John Thomas, of Lambeth, to execute two figures of the series of Magna Charta Barons, to be placed in the niches between the windows of the New House of Peers. Mr. Thomas is the artist who has displayed so much talent in the sculptural decorations of the House, and with which he has been entrusted by Mr. Barry since its commencement.

SUPERB GOLD WATCH PRESENTED TO LORD DUDLEY COUTTS STUART, BY THE POLES.

On Wednesday, a deputation composed of Captain Jablonski, President; Chevalier Wierciński, Mr. Jackowski, Mr. Kuczyński, Mr. Tericchi, members of the Committee of the Polish Emigrants in Great Britain and Ireland, accompanied by several of their countrymen, waited upon Lord Dudley Stuart, in St. James's street, to present to his Lordship a Gold Watch, as a token of gratitude on the part of the whole Polish emigration, for the services rendered by his Lordship to the cause of their country.

WATCH PRESENTED TO LORD DUDLEY COUTTS STUART, BY THE POLES

As we give below a detailed description of the Watch, we shall only observe, that besides most perfect machinery, it possesses a certain new invention, which has gained for its originator, (Mr. Patek) high reputation on the Continent; and that it took more than eighteen months to finish it completely. But, the great merit of this tasteful gift lies in the knowledge of its being offered to his Lordship by the Polish emigrants dispersed all over Europe, Asia, Africa, and America, many of whom were unable to subscribe more than one penny towards it.

It required about two years to raise a sufficient sum for the purpose, and the choice of a Watch for a present of this kind was fixed upon, as an emblem of that union and harmony which prevail among the Poles of every political opinion with regard to this well-deserved tribute of their grateful feelings, and also as indicative of the time of retributive justice which must ultimately restore to Poland her sacred rights of freedom and independence, in the defence of which his Lordship has exhibited to the world so transcendent and so abiding an example.

Several distinguished persons, among whom were Lady Frances Sandon, the Hon. Miss Ryder, Mrs. John Abel Smith, the Marquis of Northampton, Lord Beaumont, &c., were present on the occasion of the presentation.

DESCRIPTION OF THE WATCH.

This Watch, manufactured by Messrs. Patek and Co., Poles established at Geneva, is truly a master-piece of art. It has a chronometer escapement, with compensation balance and isochronal spiral spring; its principal parts are garnished with rubies. It is wound up and the hands can be set without any key, according to a very ingenious contrivance, as simple as it is convenient, invented by the above-named manufacturers. It is a Repeater: it marks the seconds, and on its pendant is constructed a small mariner's compass.

The Dial represents, in basso-relievo, the last seal of Independent Poland, exquisitely engraved. In the centre is the White Eagle, of which the red escutcheon is supported by two upright figures, the emblems of Justice and of Peace: around, instead of ciphers indicating the hours, are the arms of the principal eleven provinces of Ancient Poland, on palm branches—twelve o'clock at noon being marked by the Cross which surmounts the Royal crown. All this allegory is well adapted to the occasion. At each hour, one separate and distinct province, surrounded with a martyr's palm, will recal itself to the remembrance of the noble defender of the Polish cause. Justice and Peace appear as it pleading in its behalf; and the Cross which crowns the whole seems to remind Sovereigns and Nations alike of their relative duties.

CLARKE AND VARLEY'S ATMOSPHERIC RAILWAY TUBE.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

The Compass is intended to direct the attention of the noble Lord constantly to the North; and the striking of each hour is an imitation of the alarm-bell of Poland.

On the back of the Watch is carved, in allo-relievo, the coat of arms of the Stuart family, projecting from a rich damasked ground, which covers the whole Watch.

In the middle of the inside case is this inscription:—"NOBILI DOMINO DUDLEY COUTTS STUART, QUI ASSIDUO LABORE PATRIÆ POLONIÆ DEFENSORI, EJUSQUE FILIORUM PATRIA ORBORUM ADJUTORI. DIE 3 MAII, 1847."

According to the opinion of all connoisseurs, it is a true master-piece of watch-making: for the execution of which it has been necessary to employ the rare Messrs. Patek and Co., with a number of equally distinguished artists brought together in their manufactory

CLARKE AND VARLEY'S ATMOSPHERIC RAILWAY.

MESSRS. Clarke and Varley, the patentees of the "Resilient Atmospheric Railway Tube," have, for some days, been experimenting with their invention, upon a piece of ground adjoining the engine-house, at the Railway Terminus, Blackwall. Here a line of 250 yards of the tube, (15 inches diameter,) sufficient to test its practical worth, has been laid down; and, the experiments prove all that the patentees could desire.

The most uncertain portion of the Atmospheric Railway hitherto tested, is the complexity of the longitudinal valve in the tube, for which Messrs. Clarke and Varley have substituted a flexible tube which closes by its own spring. Their principal object was to get rid of the rope, chains, or leather valve, and power which, under the most favourable circumstances, are partially leaky. They have, to remedy this, made the tube one quarter of an inch thick (it had previously been only one-eighth); and, by placing the edges perfectly parallel, allow them to close, and make of themselves a perfect joint, without lubrication of any kind. The tubes are laid to rise, with one end abutting against the next; a strip of Vulcanized Indian rubber, or Kamptulicon, is then cemented round the ends in the rebated part, and over that a band of iron is laid, keyed up, when a perfectly air-tight and elastic joint is formed. Along each side of the tube are upright bars of iron fastened to the sleepers, and to which is riveted on each side a horizontal bar of iron, a small degree higher than the tube; these uprights and bars are, at regular intervals, fastened to the tube, in such a manner that a force applied to the bars internally, will open the tube, which, on such force being removed, will again close.

The following is the mode adapted for opening the tube for the passage of the piston. Affixed to the coulter of the piston and the first carriage is an iron frame, on which revolve four wheels of small diameters that, on forcing them between the bars, they open the tube about three-quarters of an inch; and as they proceed, the tube closes behind them. (See the annexed longitudinal section.) The friction, from this arrangement, is small: the piston-rod passes free, and the pressing open of the bars being effected by a compound rolling motion, is accompanied with but little friction, which is still further lessened by the tendency of the tube to close behind counteracting the force necessary to open it in front.

We have not room to notice the great economy of the invention, but, we cannot pass over the indestructibility of the tube as regards the air-tightness of its longitudinal edges: again, the longer any portion of it is in fair use, the more perfect will it become. Should by any oversight a tube in the first instance be laid down, the edges of which might be a trifle out of parallelism, the continuous opening and shutting with a tremendous outward pressure, on a malleable metal, will, in a very short period, naturally become perfectly close

On an 18-inch tube, supposing the general exhaustion to amount to 10 lbs. per inch (or say 26 inches of the barometer), the pressure will be equal to about 90lb. per linear inch, or very nearly 6480lbs. on a six-feet length of tube, a force sufficient to make air-tight a more refractory substance than—wrought iron!

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, May 16 Sunday after Ascension Day.—Jupiter and the Moon are near together

MONDAY, 17 Venus and the Moon are near together

TUESDAY, 18 The Sun rises at 4h. 7m; is due E. at 7h. 29m.; and sets at 7h. 47m.

WEDNESDAY, 19 St. Dunstan. Day break at 0h. 47m.

THURSDAY, 20 Sun in Taurus; he enters Gemini on the 21st day.

FRIDAY, 21. Mars and Saturn near together

SATURDAY, 22.—The Moon enters her First Quarter at 1h. 59m. a.m.—Oxford Term ends. Trinity Term begins

During the evening of the 16th, Venus is about 8° E. of the Moon; and during that of the 17th, she is about 8° W of the Moon. Mars and Saturn are very near together during the morning of the 21st day; they may be seen near the E. horizon before sunrise during the week.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAY 22

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
m. h. m.	m. h. m.	m. h. m.	m. h. m.	m. h. m.	m. h. m.	m. h. m.
2 35	3 16	3 49	4 19	4 50	5 20	5 52

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"H., Stanley The belly of 1849 was worn by Pyrrhus the First, the property of Mr. Gibson.

"I. B. T." The two first quotations are from Pope's "Essay on Man:" the line,

"Like angel-visits, few and far between,"

is from Campbell's "Pleasures of Hope."

"Annie." Jenny Lind's name is pronounced Leend.

"Dupree." We do not know the price of this artist's work on Singing. Apply to Wessel and Co.

"A Subscriber at Holstaz, U.S." It is impossible for us to know the private concerns of Insurance Companies. The office named is one of high respectability

"A Subscriber." —The price quoted is for Cocoa, payable half-yearly, until 1860 This, consequently, multiplied by fifty, will be the amount of capital required.

"Violetta." —As the passage stands, perhaps the only translation would be—"Let him have and what had been related to me—or not,' that is, "Let him at once acknowledge whether my information be true or false." The context must furnish a clue.

"A Constant Reader." The Irish expression of endearment cannot be equivalently rendered into English. It generally is understood as "My little darling—my beloved one." &c.

"Inzaini," &c. The Epigram (Epitaph?) as a close imitation of Bon's style. We do not know who was the author—perhaps, Bon himself.

"A Subscriber." As regards the Scholarship in question, we do not exactly remember. The authorities at the University would feel happy to supply the information required. To the second question, we should say—Oxford. The range of studies at Cambridge has been most congenial with the poetic temperament exceptions, like Byron, only prove the rule Mille. Jenny Lind returns, it is said, to Vienna, when our opera season is over.

"T." Stanley—"Your Crowns of George II. are not worth more than their weight in silver, as their condition is apparently very bad. The one sold the other day, at Cabinet Portrait Sale, for £15, had this inscription, on the edge—

"THOMAS SIMON MOST HUMBLY PRAYS YOUR MAJESTY TO COMPARE THIS HIS TRYALL PIECE WITH THE DUTCH AND IF MORE TRULY DRAWN AND EMBOSS'D MORE GRACEFULLY ORDER'D AND MORE ACCURATELY TO RESEMBLE NATURE HIM."

This may prevent some fruitless inquiries from expectant Correspondents

"T. R." Arabia—(Colza) Nos. 1, 3, and 6, if as fine as from the die, will bear a trifling premium

"R. S. T." A five-shilling piece of Charles II. is not worth more than its nominal value, unless it be very fine.

"A Subscriber." Rudolf, Mrs. Nisbett's maiden name was Macnamara; her father was a native of Ireland; an officer, and subsequently an actor, under the name of Mordaunt; hence, Mrs. Nisbett made her début as Miss Mordaunt.

"R. J." No: Mrs. Sloman's maiden name was Clifton.

"P. P." Glasgow.—Miss Helen Faucit made her début at Cheltenham in 1834, and first appeared on the London stage during the Gobdidston management of Covent Garden Theatre, in 1836 or 183—.

"A. F." If grammar is "common sense," but, one of Cobbett's interpolations.

"H. M." Yes.

"Constant Reader, Dublin." There are three parish churches in Waterford. What is the name of the town where our Correspondent writes from?

"R. L. V."—See the reply to "P." Scarboro'

"G. K." Sauvagism.—Dan Odiva may be fired without any regret. Its most vicious application, hitherto, has been to blasting mines

"An Old Subscriber," Swansea—"The party can only sue for the £15 balance due

"A Subscriber." —Dr. Tipperary, may find the List of Derby Winners in Moore's "Sporting Sheet Almanack."

"An Old Subscriber."—The usual board-wages for Servants is from 11s. to 13s. per week.

"R. P. J." Balop—"Rienzi," and "Night and Morning," are by Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton, Bart.

"H. G." Lurgan, is thanked for the hint. The Season is just commencing.

"P. C." Cumberland. Armorial bearings on Seals are subject to duty.

"Iota."—The case is duly reported, though we have not room to quote it. Our Correspondent would most likely be defeated in his attempt to stop the profanation.

"T. H." The charge is regular

"A Constant Subscriber." Berrington.—We do not remember any work.

"An Old Subscriber."—The Food Riots in Scotland have been frequently noticed in our Journal; so that, with our present information, we cannot aid our Subscriber, who may, perhaps, remember one of the Illustrations in the Number.

"S." Savage's "Dictionary of Practical Printing" is a sound work.

"Balm of Gilead."—Keep your bread on your right hand- etiquette dictated by economy.

"H. D." Brussels, is thanked; but the lines, though excellent in feeling, do not possess sufficient poetic merit.

"J. T. J."—The power of commuting sentences on Convicts rests with the Secretary of State. We cannot speak precisely as to the other points, there being recent alterations in the Convict System, with which we are not sufficiently acquainted.

"A Subscriber." Manchester, should copy the Publisher's address

"G. E." Neve road.—Try Aird's "Self Instructing French Grammar."

"T. P. O."—We cannot undertake to specify the colour of theatrical costumes.

"An Old Subscriber" is thanked for the letter, but the hint is useless.

"L. L. D. B." is thanked for the sketch, though we have not room to engrave it.

"Albany."—We do not understand the question.

"Try" is thanked: the next City will be Edinburgh.

"A Traveller" is thanked; but we have not room

"W. N." Lynn. The solid contents of the Oak Tree is 2292 cubic feet, nearly: to give it beyond an approximation would involve more labour than we can devote to such matters, the solutions of which are to be found in our Mensuration Books, and in Bonnycastle.

"Ignoramus."—The office of the Mayor of London dates from Richard II.

"Hortensus," Matlock, is thanked; but the oddity is too old to be reprinted.

"H. T." Blackheath.—Lindley's "School Botany."

"A Constant Subscriber." London-bridge.—The ingenious originator of the Model Soup Kitchen at Dublin, is M. Alexandre Soyer.

"T. G. P." Dudley, in all probability, refers to "Zoe," a novel, by Miss Jewsbury, published in 3 vols. by Messrs. Chapman and Hall.

"D. W."—We have not room for the View of Port Madoc.

"Kaggup," Chester. — Lemon, in his "Dictionary," of the word Story, says Dr. Skinner would have ransacked every quarter of the globe, except Greece, for a derivation of this word; which as easily and naturally comes from Στρώννυμι, στρωσ, and by transposition story—to raise or rear a superior building on an inferior; and so to mount to a first, second, or third story. Other etymologists, as Bailey and Ash, refer the word to the Saxon storm, a place. The word signifies a floor above the ground-floor.

"M. S." Wenchester.—Take a trip to one of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's splendid Steam-Vessels, for particulars of which apply at their Office.

"A. T." —We do not know the "Who's who" of the Magazine in question.

"H. G."—"P. D." -Frame your pencil drawings in oak or black, with a broad margin. Rosewood is from Brazil, the country Islands, Siam, &c., and is named from its irregular knotty grain, as if studded over with small roses, and from its fragrant smell. Don calls the tree "Polygocalymna floribunda."

"W. T."—Apply to the Solicitor of Stamps and Taxes, Somerset House, and state the Collector's "refusal."

"J. M.'s" question as to the profitable employment of "well-educated women" is, unfortunately, a perplexing one.

"S. W." is thanked for shewing how we lately fell into the popular error of applying the word "Serenade" to a morning performance of music, which is properly termed Aubade, from Aube, the dawn of day; whereas, "Serenade," from Sera, Italian for the evening, is only strictly applicable to that period. Yet, strangely enough, in Fleming and Tebbins's "Grand Dictionnaire," the word Aubade is Englished "Serenade."

"A. Y. Z."—The Member must, in common courtesy, abide by the rules for the year: legally is an open question.

"M" —The father is liable for the medical expenses of his son, a minor.

"Jamie." There was an Annular Eclipse of the Sun in the year 1836, on Sunday, May 15.

"S. S. S."—The matter in question can only be decided in the Ecclesiastical Court.

"A True Lover of Music." We cannot insert really written notices of Concerts.

"A Constant Subscriber" may obtain the No. of the "Foreign Quarterly Review," of Messrs. Chapman and Hall, Publishers, Strand

"Eu," co. Clare.—Professor Wilson wrote the "Noctes Ambronianæ" of "Blackwood's Magazine;" unfortunately, they have called up a host of contemptible imitations. We do not remember the several identities in the "Noctes." Rossini is the composer of "Stabat Mater."

"An Old Subscriber," Jersey.—It is not intended to detach from our Journal, the splendid Illustrations of the New House of Lords

"C. H. H." Manchester The Portraits of the Amateurs who performed Ben Jonson's "Every Man in his Humour," at the St. James's Theatre, in November, 1845, appeared in Nos. 156 and 157 of our Journal.

"T. S." Whitehaven. To give the information sought would subject us to advertisement duty.

"A Lover of Art." —We do not intend to engrave the Sculpture in question.

"An Old Subscriber." Newberry, will, perhaps, send his name.

"Fox Empire." —The Elastic Bands may be purchased of any Stationer.

"An Old Subscriber."—Mr. David Booth says "Quay," or "Key," is from the Dutch Kai, a pebble; quays being built in Holland, for the convenience of loading and unloading, in place of the pebbly beach, or gravel, on which goods were formerly landed. (Analytical Dictionary)

"A Constant Reader" is calculating the place of the Earth, the perturbations of the Moon are taken into account. The Eclipse may be considered to be a circle of a sphere. In calculating the places of the Planets, in the "Nautical Almanack," all known perturbations are calculated.

"C." Stevenage.—The residence of the Poet Laureate is Rydal Mount, Cumberland.

"Jane."—The chance of employment will be very problematical

"X. Y. Z."—Mr. Bland's entitlement to £2100 per night required by Mrs Butler, for her performance at Drury Lane Theatre, has been unpaused: this is all we know, with certainty, of the matter.

"A Lover of Truth."—We cannot do more than refer to the paper on the New Planet, in the Athenæum.

"Enquirer." The present Earl of Mornington is only son of the late William, Lord Marlborough, who succeeded to the Earldom at the decease, without legitimate issue, of his elder brother, the Marquis Wellesley. The Countess of Mornington's maiden name was Patterson. Her first husband was Edward Singh, Esq. She married Lord Mornington (then the Hon. William Pole-Tylney-Long-Wellesley) in 1825. The daughter and heiress of Sir James Tilney Long, Bart., was Mr. Long Wellesley's first wife. She inherited the magnificent seat of Wanstead (long since demolished), together with vast estates in Wiltshire, Essex, and Middlesex, and died in 1825, leaving two sons and one daughter.

"P. S." Belfast. The expense of having a coat of arms granted and registered in the Heralds' College is seventy-five guineas. No fee attaches to the unauthorized usage of arms.

"Z. Z."—It would be impossible to answer our Correspondent's genealogical enquiry, without being put in possession of the name of the family, and the particulars of the descent.

"Delta." The hoax are from Cowley.

"P. H. R."—Don Carlos has three sons: Carlos, born in 1818, the Count of Montemolin; John; and Ferdinand. The grandson of the King of Hanover is named Ernus Augustus.

"Perplexed." Are Englishmen.

"Noah."—The Earl of Harrowby is, we believe, more advanced in years than any other member of the Peerage. his Lordship was born in 1762. Of the other aged Peers, the most venerable are the Duke of Portland, the Marquis of Anglesey, the Duke of Wellington, Lord Talbot de Malahide, and Lord Stafford.

"G. W. C." —The children of Prince George of Cambridge would be entitled to the designation of Prince.

"X. S. A."—If the arms in question be properly recorded, a copy may be had at a very trifling expense, less than £1, by applying to "the Officers in Waiting, Heralds' College, Doctors' Commons." A person, unentitled to coat armour, may obtain a grant of armorial ensigns from the Earl Marshal, by memorialising that functionary through one of the Heralds, and by paying fees to the amount of £5 guineas.

"T. J. B." Mynams.—The Duchess of Kent once resided at Ingestre House, Belgrave-square: we never heard of Inverness House. Lord Mornington's names are William Pole Wellesley.

"G. M. H."—No occasion has yet been come to with respect to the Annandale Peerage

"P. T." A complete Course of Lectures on Natural Philosophy, by Muller, is now publishing in the Pharmaceutical Times, illustrated by accurate Engravings.

ERRATUM.—In the reply to "C. J. L.," last week, for "distinguished Astronomer," read "name of Planet."

BOOKS RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Annals of England. By E. D. Baynes, Esq.——Mind and Matter. By Dr. Mullingen.——Copyright of Designs. By W. Spence.——Brownlow's Memoranda t. the Foundling Hospital.——Scotland Delineated. Part 3.——Erasmus Wilson on Healthy Skin.—— Orphanhood.—— The Unseen World.——Modern Life, and other Poems.——Imperial Dictionary. Parts 1 to 4.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, MAY 15, 1847.

THE Irish Poor-Law Bill has passed the House of Lords with less damage than was expected, the attack of Lord Stanley having proved a singular failure. He proposed to throw the rate hereafter on the tenant, instead of the landlord, which would have made the collection of any rate impossible. It was the same proposition made in the House of Commons by Lord George Bentinck. As a party leader, Lord Stanley must have strangely miscalculated his strength among the Peers, or underrated the influence of public opinion upon them, for he did not venture even to divide the House upon his amendment; it was opposed by those who, in other points, were ready enough to diminish the efficiency of the measure, and Lord Stanley found himself supported only by a very chosen few indeed; so he succumbed, and the bill passed. Never did a long-threatened and rather-dreaded opposition end so innocently: it was a most lame and impotent conclusion.

The time has been when a Whig Ministry would have been crushed by such a demonstration; but there are circumstances in which it is dangerous to follow up an attack even against an enemy numerically weak. The difficulties of the Government are their defence; it is not enough to out-vote them; the question what is to be done by those who succeed them inevitably occurs; and the answer is neither clear nor satisfactory. When the ship is among the breakers, it is dangerous to quarrel about who shall have the helm; to help the hand that is upon it is the wisest course, as it is pretty certain there is but one course to be taken to get out of the danger. Such is the feeling among all parties now; a common peril has silenced the voice of political strife; and the Liberals hold their position less from the support they get, than from the suspension of party attacks. Where would they be if Peel, and Stanley, and Graham were nightly bringing forward hostile motions in hostile speeches? But it may be said, to the credit of English statesmen, that, when the occasion demands it, mere party differences are merged in the discharge of a great public duty, as to which little difference of opinion can exist.

The effects of the famine in Ireland are rapidly extending to England; hordes of paupers, bringing want and disease with them, are cast on the English shore: as if the plague were raging on the other side of the channel, it has become necessary to establish a quarantine, and a steamer with deck passengers arriving in the Mersey hoists the "yellow flag," as if it brought a tainted cargo from Egypt or Constantinople. And still the flood of human beings, stricken with a double curse, pours in, and "knows no retiring ebb;" the need that drives them forth is stronger even than the fear that places an obstacle in their way, but cannot erect a barrier against them. They fly from a land where they may die unheeded, with no claim on society even for the cost of a grave, to one where, at the worst, an existence may be demanded by law. As long as a difference between the systems of the two countries remains so great, the same influx will take place in every period of distress: there is a natural tendency in society to equalize its conditions: labour flies to where employment is to be found, and want drives its perishing thousands, as if by instinct, to where that want will be relieved. The better state of the more favoured land is lowered and brought more near to the level of the less happily circumstanced: carry the process on for any length of time and both will become alike miserable and helpless. It is a sense of this danger, as yet remote, indeed, but at least within the bounds of possibility, that renders it imperative on the Government to assimilate, in principle, the institutions of the two countries. In details they cannot be made exactly alike, but they cannot with safety be left wholly different. Good and evil, wealth and want, cannot stand together without laws, to guard the community against a social shock. Those who possess much must sacrifice a little, that those who have nothing may not be maddened by their need. It is in this principle that all Poor-Laws have their root: they are not dictated by charity so much as by the sense of insecurity that intrudes itself amid the enjoyment of wealth when want is prowling around it. Dives sat careless at the feast with one Lazarus at his gate, and met no punishment on earth; but, with millions begging for the crumbs that fall from the table, the richest of nations cannot securely eat on and refuse the alms.

For the national charity the duty there is a worldly punishment. In Ireland that duty has been neglected for ages, and the consequence is falling on us. There is an anxious terror, a sense of fear and insecurity throughout the land: words like "confiscation" and "ruin" are uttered; principles and rights are discussed in a tone ominous to the stability of society. These things are not without a cause. The wisest thing a wealthy nation can do is to tax its means so far for the relief of destitution that it may not become desperate: something should be sacrificed to propitiate the dark spirit of want. The ancients dreaded a too prosperous lot: good fortune, unbroken by sorrow or disaster, they held ominous of some sudden convulsion that would rectify the balance, and mete out the portion of ill that belongs to all. The fable of the Monarch who threw a costly gem into the sea when his success seemed too great in everything, that he might appease the Fates with at least the semblance of a loss, shadows forth a truth. A Poor-Law is the portion that modern wealth casts to the thousands whose want would otherwise threaten it too sternly; a Poor-Law is the police of prosperity, by which it keeps desperation from its threshold. No State has been able to exist without it in some shape or other. Where serfdom and slavery exist, the serf and the slave must be fed—by law. In free States, equal laws, justice, and fair dealing have enabled the masses to live by their labour without the degradation of dependence. Ireland has been the sad exception; the people have lived even worse than the serfs of Russia or the Negroes of the American States, without the compensating security of an existence; while bad laws, injustice, and oppression have blighted the energies that freemen everywhere else display. No Poor-Law has given men a right to live; charity has not been able to supply the want of such a law; and the consequence of all is the very now see—England and Ireland stand side by side like the fat and lean kine of Pharaoh's dream; and the similitude is completed by the fact that the wealth of one is being devoured by the other. The enactment of the Poor-Law is a late attempt to put a stop to the process.

THERE was a treatise written some years ago "On the Use of the Dead to the Living;" but it broached no speculation at all approaching in originality and boldness a plan just hit upon by Mehemet Ali, the Pacha of Egypt. His insatiable avarice has seemingly exhausted all possible modes of stripping the living, so he has turned his attention to a new source of wealth, as yet very partially and imperfectly wrought, and is about to make money by the dead. It is stated by the Egyptian Spectator, a journal published at Cairo, that the catacombs are to be worked like mines for the sake of the linen in which the mummies are wrapped; they can be converted into rags, and from rags into paper, with immense gain to the Pacha's treasury! We owe the invention of the material to the Egyptians; but the old papyrus makers little thought they should give such an impulse to the manufacture some three thousand years after they had been quietly inurned. Yet so it is; and the whole operation is marked out and calculated with a minuteness highly creditable to the financial talent of the Pacha. It is is estimated that, from the year 2097 B. C. to the year 1 of our era, four hundred millions of Egyptians have died in course of nature in the "Valley of the Nile." All these millions were embalmed, and all wrapped more or less fully in linen; and there they he at this hour, stored up "in the crypts excavated in the Arabian and Egyptian chains." Think of the mass!

Only estimating it at the rate of 2 kilogrammes per mummy, there would be found, of the cloths employed to envelop them, a total quantity of 840,000,000 kilogrammes, or 8,400,000 metrical quintals of cloth, which may be used for the manufacture of paper

Ethiopia, though anciently a land of embalmers, is left out of the calculation; so are the three centuries that elapsed before Egypt was Christianised, and began to bury its dead without spices, papyri, and painted cases. The speculator did not wish to "overstate the quantity," as they say in the House of Commons; so he takes only half the above amount as his basis, and fixes it at "4,200,000 metrical quintals." Then comes the great question, what will be the value of these resuscitated wrappings? —It is thus answered:

The cloth which encloses the mummies is all of the finest linen; and everybody knows how superior the manufacture derived from flax is to that from other substances. The rags that serve for the preparation of paper are now sold in France at the rate of 200 piasters (50*l.*) per metrical quintal. Subtracting from this sum 100 piasters for stowage, or rather interest, to keep an article below an impossible minimum, there will nevertheless remain a total of 420,000,000 piasters, or 105,000,000*l.*, or 21,000,000 dollars (about £4,000,000 sterling). Only admitting the half of this result, viz., 10,500,000 dollars, every one will agree that this industrial resource, reduced to its very lowest proportions, would, nevertheless, yield an immense profit to the Government of his Highness the Pacha of Egypt.

His Highness has only to dig and be rich. The Pharoahs will enter their palaces again in the shape of piasters; and the forty centuries that look down from the top of the Pyramids will see a stranger transformation than any they have beheld during their period of observation. It is not the first time that mummies have been traded in; but of old they furnished a popular medicine, bought with more than its weight in gold: from thence to the price of the rag dealer is a "heavy declension." Sir Thomas Browne thought even this former use of the dead a profanation, and thus deplores it:—"The Egyptian mummies, which Cambyses or time hath spared, avarice now consumeth. Mummy is become merchandise, Mizriam cures wounds, and Pharoah is sold for balsams." He denounces this "turning old heroes into unworthy potions. Shall Egypt lend out her ancients unto chirurgeons and apothecaries, and Cheops and Psammiticus be weighed unto us for drugs? Shall we eat of Chamnes and Amosis in electuaries and pills, and be cured by cannibal mixtures? Surely such diet is dismal vampirism!"

Luckily science can disguise the nature of the raw material of its fabric; and no one, in the crisp bank-note or the perfumed billet doux, will suspect the presence of the shroud of some dusky Egyptian, who

> Was dead and buried and embalmed
> Ere Romulus and Remus had been suckled.

ON THE WEATHER, DURING THE QUARTER ENDING MARCH 31, 1847.

The Report of the Registrar-General for the past quarter contains the results of Meteorological Observations made in many different places in England. These have been all similarly reduced by Mr. Glaisher, who has also deduced the hygrometrical states of the air for all places where the necessary observations have been made, by the use of his hygrometrical tables. The results of each subject of investigation are thus rendered strictly comparable with each other. The mean temperatures for each month, for all places not situated in the counties of Cornwall and Devonshire, were found to be nearly identical with that at Greenwich; but those few places situated in these counties were found to be very much higher, and it also appears that the degree of humidity in these counties was less than in any other part of England.

The following are Remarks on the Weather of the Quarter, by James Glaisher, Esq., of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, abbreviated from the Registrar-General's Report:—

The mean temperature of Greenwich was 37° 4′, which is 6° 3′ below that of the corresponding quarter of 1846; 2° above that of 1845; 1° 6′ below that of 1844; and 1° 6′ below that of the quarter upon the average of twenty-five years. A remarkable belt or zone of cold is shown to have taken place between Feb. 8th and 14th, whose southern and northern limits appear to have passed near the parallels of latitude of 50° 45′ and 52° respectively; and from observations established in Egypt, the cold appears to have extended across the country between the above-mentioned parallels, and to have been very uniform within the zone. It was most severely felt at Uckfield, in Sussex, whose latitude is 50° 59′.

The hygrometrical state of the air has been remarkable during the whole quarter, on account of its extreme dryness, and this appears to have been general over the whole country. The air appears to have been generally in a calm state for the most part, subjected to the horizontal movement having been about 200 miles a week less than usual.

Vegetation has been subjected to frequent low temperatures. The reading of a thermometer placed on grass, read less than 32° on 70 nights during the quarter; and during the days, in consequence of the dry state of the atmosphere, the evaporation of moisture from vegetation has been great, and thus it has been subjected to the influence of cold in the shade, both night and day; consequently, the sap has scarcely risen in trees, and vegetation is very backward.

Upon the whole the weather in this quarter has been more severe and unfruitful to the senses than either of the corresponding quarters in the three preceding years, and much more so than has been indicated by the thermometers, in consequence of the dryness of the air causing the moisture from the skin to evaporate quickly, thus subjecting it to the temperature of evaporation, which has been throughout this quarter, has been much below that of the air.

The winter of 1846-7 may be considered to have commenced on November 27th, 1846, and to have continued fully to the end of this quarter.

THE WEATHER.

The weather during the past week has been much finer and warmer than it has been for a long time past, and since Sunday vegetation has progressed rapidly. Friday was a fine day generally, with occasional thin rain falling, and wind blowing from the S.; its average temperature was 53½°, this day was followed by a warm and cloudy night, during which the thermometer reading did not descend below 50°. Saturday, a thin rain was falling early in the morning; the afternoon was stormy, with frequent squalls of rain and wind; the direction of the latter was from the S.; the average temperature of the day was 52°. Sunday was a very fine day, with the wind principally from the W.; its average temperature was 54° 5′, being about that of the season. Monday was a very fine warm day, with the wind from the W.; its average temperature was 55½°, being about 5° above that of the season. Tuesday was also a fine day; a thin rain was falling early in the morning, the wind was from the S.; the evening a temperature of the day was 58°. Wednesday was a fine growing day, the sky was principally cloudy, a gentle rain was falling during a part of the morning; the average temperature of the day was 54°. Thursday was a fine day, the wind from S.W.; large white cumuli were scattered about the sky, which was generally of a deep blue colour; the average temperature of the day was 55°, and that of the week was 54½°, being about that of the season.

The extreme thermometrical readings each day were—

Friday	May 7, the highest during the day was 65½ deg., and the lowest was 41 deg.
Saturday,	May 8	.....	50	.....	45
Sunday,	May 9	.....	65½	.....	46
Monday,	May 10	.....	72½	.....	47
Tuesday,	May 11	.....	68	.....	50
Wednesday,	May 12	.....	65½	.....	43½
Thursday,	May 13	.....	66½	.....	45½

Blackheath, Friday, May 14, 1847. J. G.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

MOVEMENTS OF THE COURT.

Her Majesty and Prince Albert, with the Royal Children, left Buckingham Palace at ten minutes to six o'clock on Tuesday afternoon. The journey was performed by road to Nine Elms, in three carriages and four, escorted by a party of Lancers.

The Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal, and the Prince of Leiningen, returned to Buckingham Palace at ten minutes to six o'clock on Thursday afternoon. The journey by road to Nine Elms, at two o'clock in the afternoon, crossed in the Fairy to Gosport, travelled to town by a special train on the South Western Railway, and proceeded from the terminus at Nine Elms, in three carriages and four, escorted by a party of Lancers.

The Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal, honoured the floral exhibition of the Royal Botanic Society with a visit on Saturday morning. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent visited her Majesty at Buckingham Palace. The Queen took an airing in a carriage in the afternoon, attended by the Hon. Misses Stanley and Dawson. His Royal Highness Prince Albert rode out on horseback at the same time.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER AND THE DUCHESS OF KENT. Her Majesty the Queen Dowager and her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent attended Divine Service last Sunday, in the Chapel Royal, St. James's. The prayers were read by the Rev. T. Jones, and the sermon by the Rev. J. V. Povah. The anthem was preached by the Rev. T. Mills. The anthem was, "Wherewithal shall a young man." Mr. Knyvett presided at the organ.

ENTERTAINMENT BY SIR GEORGE GREY.—The Right Hon. Sir Robert and Lady Peel entertained his Excellency Count Kielmansegge, his Excellency Senor Isturitz, the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch, the Earl and Countess of St. Germans, and Lady Louisa Elliot, the Earl Bathurst, the Earl and Countess of Morton, and Lady Eilen Douglas, Viscount Somerton, Lord Forester, Lady Harriet Baring, Mr. Labouchere, and a distinguished circle to dinner on Wednesday evening, in Whitehall-gardens.

RETURN OF LORD AND LADY HOWARD DE WALDEN.—Lord and Lady Howard de Walden have arrived in town from Southampton, where they disembarked after visiting his Lordship's large landed property in the West Indies. His Lordship does not proceed to Brussels to enter on his diplomatic duties before the end of the ensuing month.

THE DUCHESS OF ARGYLL.—The Duchess Dowager of Argyll has been suffering from severe indisposition.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.—The Right Hon. Sir George Grey, her Majesty's principal Secretary of State for the Home Department, has issued invitations for a grand dinner, in honour of the Queen's Birthday, on Thursday, the 27th of May, at the Clarendon Hotel. The company will consist of the Queen's Judges, the Lord Mayor, and the principal civic functionaries. The guests will appear in full dress. The Chancellor of the Exchequer will give a full dress dinner to a numerous party on the same day, in celebration of her Majesty's Birthday, at his official residence in Downing-street. The Duke of Norfolk, Viscount Palmerston, and other members of the Ministry, have also arranged to give entertainments in celebration of the same event.

APPROACHING MARRIAGES AMONG THE ARISTOCRACY.—The marriage of the Earl of Portarlington and Lady Alexandrina Vane, second daughter of the Marquis and Marchioness of Londonderry, is expected to be solemnised at the close o' this month, but the precise day is not determined on. The preliminaries are arranged for the marriage of Lord Charles Fitzroy, second son of the Duke and Duchess of Grafton, and Miss Balfour, daughter of Lady Eleanor Balfour, and sister of Mr. James M. Balfour, M.P. The 8th of the ensuing month has been appointed for the nuptials.

LADY BROUGHAM'S ASSEMBLY.—Lord and Lady Brougham entertained at dinner, on Monday evening, at their mansion in Grafton-street, the Earl and Countess of Tankerville, the Countess of Clarendon, Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston, Viscount and Viscountess Jocelyn, Lord Glenelg, Sir Alexander and Lady Malet, Mr and Lady Caroline Maxse, and Mrs. Howard. Her Ladyship subsequently had an evening party, which was numerously and fashionably attended.

COUNTRY NEWS.

RIOTS IN STAFFORDSHIRE.

For some days past great dissatisfaction has been evinced by the labourers employed upon the South Staffordshire Railway, and the whole of them, numbering several hundreds, have struck work. In consequence of this step the contractors called in the aid of a number of Irishmen, who, it is alleged, worked under the prices paid to those who had "turned out."

On Monday night, the men who had left work in the neighbourhood of Walsall, visited the pits, and collecting together a formidable body of miners armed themselves with bludgeons, many of which were torn up from hedges and trees on the road-sides, and proceeded to Walsall, where the Irish labourers are located. They commenced a ferocious attack upon the windows and doors of the Irishmen's houses, and before the inmates became aware of the object of their assailants some of them were most unmercifully beaten. The Irish party gathered a strong force, and were about to retaliate upon the "turn-outs," and had it not been for the interference of the magistrates, backed by the police, serious, if not fatal, consequences must have followed. The police sallied out upon the rioters, and succeeded in apprehending four of the ringleaders. The rioters were brought up before the magistrates, on Tuesday, and committed for trial at the sessions. It is feared that the rioting may be renewed.

The outrage in Walsall has been followed by similar outbreaks of popular violence in the mining district.

Near Wolverhampton about 1000 miners and others met on Tuesday, and drove every Irishman from his employment. It they hesitated for a moment they were attacked with sticks and assailed with volleys of stones. Some of the men have been severely hurt; one poor fellow was so stunned by a blow he received that it was feared death would ensue, but he is now recovering. The police, in the number of about fifty-two, under the direction of Colonel Hogg, deputy chief-constable, endeavoured to persuade the mob to disperse, and in some cases succeeded; but the assaults on the poor Irishmen were continued by the majority of the rioters; and many of them had difficulty in escaping with their lives. Many women were conspicuous amongst the crowds, urging on the mob, and encouraging them in their violence.

On Wednesday, immense crowds of miners and others, to the number of between 1000 and 2000, again met on the Bilston and Willenhall-road. They attacked numerous of the Irish labourers, but the presence of the police awed them from further violence.

On Wednesday, another body of miners, numbering about 1500, perpetrated similar outrages. One man had his eye knocked out, several had their skulls nearly fractured, many were beaten till scarcely able to stand, and it was with difficulty some of them escaped with their lives. Two of the ringleaders have been apprehended by the police.

The whole of this populous district is in the most unsettled and excited state, and the contagion seems spreading, for accounts have been received of similar proceedings at Stafford and in the Potteries.

The causes of this outbreak are more decided cesspar than at first appeared. The miners work only about three days a week, refusing to do more; and the coal and iron-masters, being thereby subjected to great loss and annoyance, have employed many Irishmen, who do not ask for holidays, and for the same work receive higher wages than the others.

At Tring, we hasten to the real cause. The result of these tumults will, if persisted in, have a most disastrous effect on the iron trade, which is at the present moment in a very favourable condition.

REPRESENTATION OF THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD.—There will be a contest for the representation of this University at the approaching general election, Mr Estcourt having intimated his intention of retiring from Parliament. The nameof the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone and Sir W. Heathcote are spoken of as cans of dates

OPENING OF THE LOWESTOFT AND REDDHAM RAILWAY. On Monday week this railway was opened for goods traffic. A train passed through on the morning of that day, and another came from Lowestoft in the evening; goods trains will run, in the same manner, for about a fortnight, till this railway is opened for passengers. Packets of first-rate steamers, now building and repairing, will be ready in August, and with them it is intended to keep up a constant communication between Rotterdam, Hamburg, and other Continental ports, and Lowestoft. These packets, at vessels from all parts of the north of Europe, will deliver their cargoes at Lowestoft, where they will be readily placed on the railway and conveyed to all parts of England, by means of the Norfolk, the Ely and Peterborough, and other lines. From the north of England to the north of Europe, goods will be sent by the same means of transit

THE PRICE OF CORN AT COLCHESTER.—The advance of the price of wheat in Colchester market within the past week is 18*s.* per quarter, and the price has become truly alarming. The Home Secretary has issued orders to the inspectors of corn returns throughout the kingdom, to ascertain as nearly as possible the quantity of wheat now in the hands of the farmers generally; and the result of the inspectors' inquiry at Colchester market on Saturday was, that a very little more than one-third of the quantity is now in hand, compared with the quantity at this period of last year.

STATE OF TRADE IN BIRMINGHAM. It is feared that, in a few days, short time, in some of the manufactories in Birmingham, will commence. The money pressure is being severely felt, and the universal opinion is that something must be done, and done immediately, or else great discontents, or another week or two will bring matters to a serious crisis. As for the share market, it is all but suspended.

DISTURBANCES IN NOTTINGHAM.—The stagnation in trade and the high price of provisions have produced a disturbed state of public feeling which has not been equalled for many years past. At half-past four in the afternoon of Monday a large concourse, called together by the Chartists, assembled in the market-place, to listen to addresses commenting upon the great distress the working classes are suffering under. On the meeting separating, a number of individuals attached themselves to a waggon which had served as a platform, and which was then deposited in the waggon, till it was more than half filled. This visitation very much terrified the shopkeepers and the inhabitants generally. The men did not enforce, but asked for bread; consequently the police did not interfere, but the magistrates assembled at the police-office, and took precautionary steps in case of any violation of the public peace. Some fears were entertained of an outbreak late in the evening, but happily none occurred.

POISONING AT SUFFOLK.—The family of Mr. Rouse, of Bury, consisting of the man, his wife, and four children, were nearly poisoned on Saturday last, after eating some yeast dumplings. Mr. Image, surgeon, having been called in, administered the necessary antidotes, and took possession of the dumplings, the bread from which they were taken, and the flour remaining in the house, for the purpose of analysis. On Monday evening, the eldest daughter, about twenty-one years of age, was taken into custody, in consequence of some letters having been found, indicating a wretched state of mind at an act of dishonesty; and on Tuesday morning she underwent a private examination before Dr. Pollard and H. Le Grice, Esq., at which was received the evidence in Mr. Image's and bread was ascertained by Mr. Image, but none was found in the flour. It appeared that the unhappy girl had taken a larger quantity than any other of the family, but all are now recovering from its effect.

THE COMMAND IN THE TAGUS.—Lord Palmerston has appointed Admiral Sir Charles Napier to the naval command on this station.

DEATH OF MAJOR-GENERAL TROS. FYERS, ROYAL ENGINEERS.—On Tuesday, Major General Fyers, of the Royal Engineers, expired at his residence in Woolwich. The deceased officer had just completed forty-seven years of active service, having entered the corps as second lieutenant, on the 2nd of May, 1800.

THE MURDER OF THREE CHILDREN BY THEIR MOTHER.—The last week gave an account of the murder of three children by their mother, near Carmarthen. An inquest has since been held on the bodies, and the mother has been taken into custody. On her way to Llanybyther, she related the manner in which she hanged the children. She said she hanged the two eldest first, and the infant afterwards. It was better for them to suffer at once, than suffer from starvation. Several witnesses spoke of the state of mind of the unfortunate woman, which for a length of time was that of a person insane. The jury returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder" against Mary Hughes, who was committed for trial at the Summer Assizes.

STATE OF THE CROPS IN IRELAND.—The reports of the state of the crops in Ireland are exceedingly cheerful. From all quarters—wretched Mayo and other districts in the west and south excepted—the crops appear in a flourishing condition, and a far greater quantity of land is under cultivation than ever was seen before in Ireland. Even in the most afflicted districts alluded to, great exertions are made by the local gentry and the better classes; but the peasantry are so completely stricken down in body and mind by their sufferings that little hope is entertained of their being able to raise food enough for their own consumption during the next winter.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

POOR RELIEF (IRELAND) BILL.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE, in moving that the report on this bill be received, said it was his intention to propose to their Lordships to strike out of the bill all those amendments which had been agreed to, the object of which was to fix a limit to the bill.

The question was then put that the House do disagree with the amendment providing that the bill should be of a temporary character. Upon this amendment a discussion took place, and, on a division, the proposal of the Government was carried by 34 to 42, so that Lord Montcagle's amendment, limiting the duration of the bill, was abrogated.

An amendment of Earl CLANCARTY, limiting the relief of able-bodied labourers to out-door relief, was negatived without a division.

The report on the bill was then received, and the House adjourned, at half-past ten o'clock, till Monday

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

THIRD READINGS OF RAILWAY BILLS.—The following bills were read a third time and passed:—The Boston, Stamford, and Birmingham Railway (Peterborough and Thorney Line) Bill; the Chard Canal and Railway (Extension and Amalgamation) Bill; the Glasgow, Paisley, Kilmarnock, and Ayr Railway (No 4) Bill; the Herne Bay and Canterbury Junction Railway Bill; the Liskeard and Caradon Railway Bill, the Southampton and Dorchester Railway (New Forest Deviation and Branches) Bill; the South Wales Railway Bill; the Vale of Neath Railway Bill; the Wexford and Valencia Railway (Killarney to Valencia) Bill; the Wilts, Somerset, and Weymouth Railway (No. 1) (Bruton, Pilcombe, and Selden and Bradford Deviations) Bill

CAPITAL FOR RAILWAYS.—Mr. HUME moved resolutions to the effect that no railway company which, by any Act of Parliament is now authorised to construct, purchase, or take on lease any line of railway, shall by any future act receive power to raise additional capital, by shares, loan, or mortgage, for the completion or extension of such line, or for taking on lease, or amalgamation with any other railway or canal, unless a clause be introduced into such an Act, specifying the company shall not raise such capital until it has realised so much capital as is sufficient for the completion of the works already sanctioned by Parliament. That no railway company shall be allowed to lease or sell any other line of railway until the whole capital shall have been subscribed, and one-half paid up.—Mr. J. A. SMITH seconded the resolutions.—In the course of the discussion that followed, Lord J. RUSSELL gave his opinion that it would not be prudent if Mr. Hume to press his resolutions to a division.—Mr. HUME complied with the suggestion, and withdrew his resolutions.

THE LOAN DISCOVERY BILL.—THE CURRENCY.—On the question for going into Committee on this Bill, a general discussion arose respecting the Currency, which lasted the remainder of the night.

FRIGHTFUL MURDERS IN YORKSHIRE.

Three very shocking murders were committed at the village of Mirfield, near Dewsbury, Yorkshire, last Wednesday, at mid-day. The victims are Mr James Wraith, his wife, and servant. It appears that, about twelve o'clock, Mr. Wraith was seen near his own house. About one o'clock, a boy, who was employed to work for the deceased gentleman, went to the house and found all the doors fastened. Blood was issuing from under the doors. The boy gave an alarm, and an entrance was effected. The most horrible scene was presented. In the kitchen, the servant, a young woman, between 19 and 20 years, lay with her throat cut, her brains beaten out, and her face in a dreadfully mangled condition. On leaving the kitchen, the body of Mrs. Wraith was found in the passage leading to the sitting-room. Her throat was also cut. On going into the sitting-room, the mutilated body of Mr. Wraith was discovered. His throat was cut, his jawbone broken, and his head severely fractured. A razor was laid across his throat. On a chair near him, were his keys and a pocket-knife. His pockets were partly turned out, but half a sovereign was left in one of them. Search was made in the drawer where it was supposed he kept his money, and which was found to have been opened, but at present it cannot be ascertained whether anything has been stolen. It was first conjectured that Mr. Wraith was the murderer, but this has soon discovered to have been impossible, as his head was bruised as if by a heavy bludgeon. Inquiry was then made as to who was likely to have been the perpetrator of the deed, and it was found that a man who had been hawking earthenware had been seen near the house about the time of the murder. He was followed and apprehended. There are strong reasons for believing this man to be the murderer. Mr and Mrs. Wraith were both upwards of 70 years of age.

BANQUET TO MR. CONDEN AT FLORENCE.—A banquet was given on the 8th of April to Mr Cobden, in the magnificent gallery of the Borghesi Palace, in Florence. Signor Vincenzi Perruzzi, the Gonfaloniere of the city, presided. Upon Mr. Cobden's health having been drunk with enthusiasm, he rose, and, after some eloquent compliments to Tuscany, as having been in advance of other countries in behalf of Free-Trade, said:—"Upon this my first visit to Italy, I have felt naturally desirous to witness the effects of Free-Trade, particularly in corn, upon the moral and material condition of a people. I must confess that I entered Tuscany with feelings of enthusiasm, such as a devotee experiences in visiting the shrine of his faith. But I have endeavoured to cast an impartial eye upon all that I have seen, and if what I state as the result of my observation be erroneous, it will be open to correction by others. During the last eight months, I have been travelling in nearly all the countries of Southern Europe, and I am bound to state, without wishing to disparage other nations, that I find the condition of the population of Tuscany superior to that of any people I have visited. The surface of the country resembles that of a well-cultivated garden; the people are everywhere well dressed; I have seen no beggars, except a few lame or blind; and in this season of general scarcity there is less of suffering from want of food here, with a perfect freedom in the imports and exports of corn than is probably any other country in Europe. I find such industries as are natural to Tuscany carried on with success; and that in particular of its indigenous straw manufacture has attained a development which has surprised me. But I do not confine my observations to the material condition of the people. Where a country had enjoyed for fifty years the advantages of commercial liberty, I expected to find the spirit of Free-Trade entering into the character of its people, abating their natural prejudices, destroying the spirit of egotism, and imparting to them a sentiment of brotherhood towards other nations. And in this respect I have not been disappointed in the inhabitants of Tuscany. I can only regarding the opinion of every traveller when I say that they are eminently courteous and mild towards strangers. Foreigners make this country their favourite abode, not merely because here there is no impediment to a cheap and abundant supply of luxuries and comforts from every part of the globe, but because they find a charm in the amiable cordiality of the Tuscan people. Such is a description of the only country in Southern Europe which enjoys the advantages of Free-Trade, and I will not add a word of comment, but leave the facts I have stated for the instruction of other nations. Gentlemen, I thank you heartily for this compliment, and feel a fellow labourer in our good cause. The remembrance of this happy evening will always be a source of the highest gratification to me. I console by drinking to the rapid extension of Free-Trade principles all over the world."

ATTEMPT ON THE LIFE OF THE EARL OF FIFE.—On Sunday, the town of Banff was put into a state of excitement in consequence of an attempt upon the life of the Earl of Fife, by a servant of the name of Hammond, who was on the eve of being discharged. The villain was ultimately overpowered and removed under the charge of the police. His Lordship has happily sustained little or no personal injury.

DEATH OF ADMIRAL MAPLES.—We regret to announce the death of Admiral John Fordyce Maples, R.N., C.B., which took place at his residence at Kilburn Priory, in the 70th year of his age. He was in the battle of Trafalgar, and other actions with Lord Nelson, and had been in more than one hundred engagements.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS

FRANCE.

Some of the Paris papers of Wednesday, hint that the Duke de Broglie has advised M. Guizot to resign, and that the latter, out of statesman's delicacy, urges the propriety of such a course upon him. M. Duchatel's illness, it is said, is not so serious as has been given out, but attacks him conveniently when disagreeable explanations are to be made to the Chamber, a duty, the disadvantages of which are left to M. Guizot.

The Marquis d'Jigre, Peer of France, has just died, leaving a fortune the income of which is estimated at 3,000,000 francs.

PORTUGAL

The Ace of Trumps has arrived at Liverpool, after a remarkably quick passage of six days from Lisbon. She brings intelligence to the 8th inst. There had been some skirmishing between the Queen's troops and the insurgents, at St. Ubes; but on receipt of despatches from the Queen, the warfare ceased, and it was understood in Lisbon, that the contents of the despatches were such, that hostilities would not be resumed.

BELGIUM.

There were some rather serious food riots at Brussels on Monday and Tuesday last. A mob of 4000 persons attacked the shops of several bakers and corn merchants. The troops were called out, and several skirmishes took place between the soldiers and the mob. Six houses were attacked and partly plundered during the outbreak on Monday night and early on Tuesday morning. It was feared that the riots would be renewed. The Queen of the Belgians had a very narrow escape from being killed on Tuesday last. Her Majesty was returning from Verviers on the Belgian National Railway, when the Royal train came into collision with the Brussels down train. Happily, her Majesty was unhurt, but some of her suite were seriously injured, viz., General Chazal, who had one of his ribs broken, and Gen. d'Hane, who received a violent blow on the head; the former was unable to continue the journey further than Liege. One of the servants had his arm broken. The Queen displayed great presence of mind, and expressed deep concern for the injuries received by the above-named gallant Generals. One of the carriages of the Royal train was almost smashed to pieces.

ARRIVAL FROM THE UNITED STATES.

The Cambria arrived at Liverpool yesterday, with New York papers of the 1st instant. They do not contain any new fact respecting Mexico, but deal principally in rumours and surmises as to the progress of the war. It was said that Santa Anna was determined to prosecute the war to the uttermost. There was a good deal of excitement in commercial matters, and exchange on Europe was in great demand when the Cambria sailed. The New York Herald estimates the quantity of wheat likely to be available for the European market at 10,000,000 bushels, and of Indian corn at 20,000,000 bushels; that is, there was about as much to come as had already been shipped.

THE LONDON SEASON.

[The annexed Illustrations are so many ... Yableaux from High Life during the present Carnival ... w of Fashion, in every-day parlance "the London Sea... n." As the most graceful accompaniment to these scene... s of artistic vraisemblance, we present our readers with a ... charming Nouvellette, for which we are indebted to the ... accom- plished pen of a lady, highly distinguished in a ... species of writing characteristic of our own times—the ... veal of fashionable life.—Ed.]

THE ORPHAN HEIRESS.

BY THE BARONESS DE CALABRELLA.

The Lady Constance Neville had to mourn the death of both her parents at an early age. Her father, the Earl of Glendower, was an attached husband, a tender and devoted father; but, in selecting his uncle, Lord Glenlyn, for his sole executor and his daughter's guardian, in the event of Lady Glendower's death—the near approach of which event her delicate health at the time of his own decease hardly left doubtful—his Lordship did not prove himself a wise one. It may be asked, who can fill a parent's place?—who, but a parent, can ever enter into the feelings of a parent? Alas! those who have had cause to examine into these deputyships of parental affection will readily answer. They never really are fulfilled as the bequeathers of them hoped and contemplated.

Lord Glenlyn went down to Llantrisset Castle, to attend Lady Glendower's funeral, as he had, a few months before, done Lord Glendower's. On this, his second journey thither, he even meditated on the immense sacrifice of his own personal comforts which would arise by carrying Lady Constance and her governess back with him to London; but the sight of the child's overwhelming grief so terrified—perhaps, so astonished—him, when he hinted his kind intention, that he quickly persuaded himself that there would be no real kindness to her in removing her from a spot which seemed to her the only hallowed one on earth; and that, by leaving her there, under the care of her governess, a lady who had been selected by her mother, and reducing the present overgrown establishment, taking care that every requisite of luxury should still surround the young heiress, he should be really acting more judiciously by his ward, and far more agreeably to himself.

After carefully going through all the necessary details, in his capacity of executor, he again sought an interview with Lady Constance, who repaired to his presence with the feeling of a martyr whose last sacrifice is about to be required. Her face was void of colour; her rich chesnut curls were no longer playing round a throat of dazzling whiteness, but bound tightly round her small Grecian head, in accordance with the severity of her mourning habiliments; her faltering steps proved too plainly her excessive emotion for Lord Glenlyn, who really possessed a kind heart, and could assume a kind manner, when self was not endangered by its exercise, not to feel sorrow at her distress. Moving forward to meet her, he took her hand, which was cold as marble, and, drawing it within his arm, half supported her to an arm-chair at the library-table.

"Dear Lady Constance," he said, "pray, don't look as if I were afraid of me. It is my hope and my wish to promote your happiness." A convulsive shudder which passed over her frame showed him how inappropriate had been the word; but he quickly added: "Will you not believe this? Try, poor child, to have confidence in me, and tell me what you wish to do."

It was in a voice choking with emotion that Lady Constance faltered out—"To stay here."

Lord Glenlyn pressed her hand, and assured her, that having perceived, in their last interview, how much the idea of leaving her home had distressed her, he had from that moment abandoned the project, and only waited an avowal from her lips to conclude the arrangements incident to her residence at Llantrisset.

He could not, while thus speaking, refrain from congratulating himself on the first expressed wish of his ward having been so much in accordance with his own—while Constance, with tears of thankfulness rolling down her pale cheeks, ventured to lift her eyes to his, as she thought that her guardian was a being less to be feared than she had imagined.

Thus a favourable impression was made on both their minds.

Mrs. Tudor, the governess selected by Lady Glendower, was all that mother could have desired, had she but lived herself to form and strengthen her child's mind, habituating it to thought and reflection on more essential subjects than the vocation of a governess usually embraces. Mrs. Tudor was a well mannered, highly educated, and, in many respects, a very superior woman, and she loved her orphan charge with affectionate—it might be said enthusiastic—devotion; for, unhappily, Mrs. Tudor's besetting sin was enthusiasm and a love of romance. The melancholy circumstances which had followed each other in quick succession since she entered the Glendower family had rather served to increase than diminish this weakness. A young and orphan heiress—an ancient castle, with its high turrets, and its embattlements—offered daily food to her love of the wonderful; and as month after month, and year after year, rolled on, without any event worthy of the romantic position in which they lived, her amazement was strongly awakened. Her dreams were filled with romantic visions of what ought to be the necessary consequence of such an abode, but the every-day circumstances of their life seemed cruelly to oppose themselves to her desired romance.

At a moment when any hope of her dreams being realised seemed to have become extinct, and just as Lady Constance had entered her seventeenth year, Mrs. Tudor was thrown into an ecstacy of delight by discovering in her early walk to the village school, of which she had consented, at Constance's request, to take the superintendence, a young man seated on a stile with a sketch-book and pencil in hand; he was evidently intent on his occupation, and did not perceive her. The incident could not be said to be an uncommon one, for the beauties of Llantrisset and its vicinity had induced many an artist to visit it. There was nothing in the dress or appearance of the person before her as he sat assiduously pursuing his sketch, that would have induced any lady less romantically disposed than Mrs. Tudor, to see in him a hero—a disguised lover—an interesting object—for whom she immediately persuaded herself she felt a warm sympathy. His destination was no longer to the village school; but, turning adroitly to the left, she came exactly in front of the stranger, as if she were intent on crossing the field, to which the gate offered an entrance. Immediately vaulting from his elevated seat, the gentleman raised his hat, hoped he had not detained her, and proceeded to unlatch the heavy gate. The air with which all this was done, was perfectly easy, perfectly gentlemanlike. George the Fourth himself could not have been more courteous; but it was too stately, too reserved; in fact, Mrs. Tudor could not find anything in it like romance; and, feeling somewhat overawed, she passed through the gate with a silent curtsey. She had not, however, proceeded far before she repented having made so little use of what might have turned out a golden opportunity. He was evidently a gentleman; no artist could have looked so proud; he was wonderfully handsome, too, and she turned back, and found the stranger still in possession of the gate. This time it was her turn to apologise for the disturbance she occasioned him.

"Not in the least," he said; "I am glad to have been still here to save you the pain of opening this heavy gate. A moment more, and I should have been gone, for my sketch is finished."

"Will you gratify a woman's curiosity by showing it me?"

He immediately held the sketch-book open before her, she saw at once it owned a master's touch, and

THE LONDON SEASON.

rather in the tone of an interrogatory, said, "Surely it can only be an artist's work."

I am flattered at your praise, Madam. I suppose I shall at last fancy myself an artist; at all events, I certainly am an amateur. The views about here are charming, and well repay a journey taken to visit them.

"Will you allow me," she rejoined, "to be your guide, and conduct you to what is supposed to be the most picturesque spot in this beautiful country."

"Assuredly, and with many thanks; but"—he paused for an instant and then added "excuse me, but I have heard the most beautiful view is within the gates of Llantrisset Park, and I have already sought admission at the lodge in vain."

"It is nevertheless there that I am about to conduct you," replied Mrs. Tudor, and, seeing his look of astonishment, she added, with a triumphant air, "the gates will fly open for me."

Accordingly they entered the park together, and were proceeding to the far famed site, when Constance, driving her favourite pony phaeton, came suddenly upon them. What an opportunity for Mrs. Tudor to secure the first mesh in her net of romance.

"Who shall I name to Lady Constance Neville," she enquired. The stranger, with his eyes fixed on the beautiuous vision before him, said hastily, "Mr. Charles Spencer."

The introduction over, Mrs. Tudor besought a place by Constance's side, and, accompanied by Mr. Spencer, they gained the summit from whence this magnificent view unfolded itself, aided by the glories of a setting sun. The artist, or amateur as he called himself, poured forth his sense of delight and enchantment in glowing language, but Mrs. Tudor thought that she remarked his eyes as often turned to her companion's face as to the surrounding landscape. It was too late in the day to begin a sketch, but Constance, with winning grace and modesty, begged that he would return as early as he liked on the following day, and Mrs. Tudor added, "come to the Castle at two o'clock and we shall be glad to give you luncheon after your fatigues."

That night Mrs. Tudor's visions were more than ever exalted—Mr. Charles Spencer had become suddenly changed into some foreign potentate; her dear Constance was a reigning sovereign; and she herself appointed first lady of honour. There was nothing in Mr. Charles Spencer's demeanour to warrant these flights of fancy—on the following, or during the many succeeding days he spent either at Llantrisset Park, sketching for its fair mistress her favourite views, or in Llantrisset Castle, blending his rich and powerful tones with her sweet and gentle ones, in one pure stream of melody. But one thing was very visible to any common intelligence—namely, that Mr. Charles Spencer and Lady Constance Neville were all in all to each other And where was Mrs. Tudor's forethought and oft-repeated promise to Lord Glenlyn that no one should approach his ward on terms of intimacy without his sanction? Here was a man, a stranger in the country, lodging at a village inn, with a portmanteau and his drawing implements his sole apparent possessions. Once, when startled at an avowal of Constance's, she had ventured to remonstrate with her on the necessity of inquiring into his family and connections, she was answered in a tone which forbad reply. "Dear Mrs. Tudor, all inquiry would now be useless. It is too late to retreat, nor would I wrong him by appearing to harbour a doubt. He has won my whole heart: I feel, oh blessed conviction! that I possess his; and our hands are as firmly pledged as though my cousin, the Bishop of D——, had given us his benediction."

This conversation passed at night, and the following morning a letter arrived from Lord Glenlyn, saying that it was only his ocant courier by a few hours, as he was coming to the Castle to communicate to Lady Constance, that he had hired a house for her in Berkeley-square, and had induced his sister (a widow) to come to town for the purpose of presenting her to the fashionable world "We must be prompt in our movements," he added, "for I have set my heart on my ward's first appearance taking place at the Duke of Bridlington's, who opens his mansion in Piccadilly with a ball this day fortnight. It will be a splendid affair; the invitations have been out these three weeks, and I have secured Lady Constance's."

Constance sat the picture of despair—her dreams of bliss seemed at an end. When Charles Spencer appeared at the usual hour, the breakfast one (for now he might be said to live at the Castle), she rushed to him with the letter, burst into tears, and besought him, as he loved her, to save her from such heartless tyranny.

"Calm yourself, my own dear Constance," he replied, "let us talk over this matter. What is there so terrible in this visit to London? in the perspective of this gay ball, to which every one will be dying to go?"

"But you, Charles, you will not be there. Oh! do contrive some means to prevent this; I feel that my fate hangs on this horrid ball. I know but one way to avert it," she said, while a crimson blush mantled on her fine features, "but one way; and that will be the best after all, for it will end all such future arrangements of my Lord Glenlyn's; I will avow our attachment and our engagement."

"My beloved Constance," replied her lover, "you would not be so cruel; you would not rob me of the rich delight of claiming this lovely hand as my own as soon as the only obstacle (into the nature of which you have generously forborne to inquire) is set at rest, which it will be, dearest, sooner than, perhaps, either of us have anticipated. Continue to trust me, my beloved one, and never shall you repent your noble confidence."

She looked in his eyes—they were beaming with love and truth; and, placing her hands in his, she said, "Now and ever, Charles, will I trust you."

He pressed her for a moment to his heart, exclaiming "Noble, peerless Constance; may I through life prove worthy of thee. And now, dearest, I will leave the neighbourhood, before the arrival of Lord Glenlyn; for, having met him in society, I would rather he did not find me here without having asked his introduction to the fair chatelaine of this domain. I may write to you, may I not, Constance? I am going to London, and shall watch over you, though I will not present myself, wherever you may be, till the night of this anticipated ball, to which I too hope to obtain an invitation."

Mrs. Tudor's entrance put an end to this conversation; indeed, Constance was unable to have pursued it. He was going to leave her; they were no longer to see each other for one whole fortnight, and ages of despair seemed to stand between them. Mrs. Tudor all but raved when informed of his determination to depart; and all the folly of her conduct rose in fearful array before her. She wept, she entreated, she even commanded Mr. Spencer to explain himself to Lord Glenlyn, and not leave to her to tell of his having won the Lady Constance's affection, and then refused to ask her hand of her guardian. Constance sat in silence, listening to this exordium, secretly wishing it might, by lessening his pride, change her lover's intentions; but he was firmly bent on leaving them; and, taking Lady Constance's hand to his lips, he bade her farewell. He then offered his hand to Mrs. Tudor, but her's was not put forth till, as he reached the door, he whispered, "Watch over the Lady Constance, and trust to my honour to bear you harmless," blameless, he could not say, for his reason had from the first told him how careless she had been of the peace, nay even of the reputation of her charge.

Mrs. Tudor's exalted imagination tortured this into something bordering on chivalry, and her dreams were, on that and many successive nights, of Knights arming in her defence, Mr. Spencer himself entering the lists to do battle for her against Lord Glenlyn. Lady Constance made no objection to an immediate removal to London had he not said he was going thither? but from the hour of her taking possession of her new abode in Berkeley-square till the day fixed for the ball, nothing seemed to interest or amuse her. Once or twice, while looking out from her balcony on the other side of the square, she thought she saw the graceful figure of Charles Spencer, but he was among a group of horsemen, and it was rather by the quickened pulsation of her heart than by her actual vision that she believed it to be him. Lord Glenlyn's sister, Mrs. Vereker, had been for some years a widow, much against her own inclination. To her it was the most difficult lesson to learn that she was growing old—her forty-five years were dreadful proofs on her imagination, and the sight of any one so vessel of youth and beauty a heavy tax on her nerves. Constance had remained so quiet at home, quite unmindful of her dress, which, though from its very simplicity, highly becoming to her extreme youth and freshness, said Mrs. Vereker was ill prepared for the blaze of beauty which she beheld reflected in a mirror as she entered Lady Constance's dressing-room on the eventful night of the ball, just as the anxious and excited girl was arranging the last flower in her glossy tandeau, and remained standing by, with her left hand raised, as if to catch any leaf which might fall, while even her little dog, lying on a rich cushion at her feet, seemed to contemplate her with admiration.

THE DEBUTANTE.—THE BALCON.

THE DEPARTURE.

Mrs. Vereker, covered with jewels, could not comprehend how Lady Constance could think of appearing at such a fête without a single ornament. But those camellias, all fresh and brilliant, said Mrs. Vereker was ill prepared for the blaze of beauty which she beheld reflected in a mirror as she entered Lady Constance's dressing-room on the eventful night of the ball, just as the anxious and excited girl was arranging the last flower in her glossy tandeau, and remained standing by, with her left hand raised, as if to catch any leaf which might fall, while even her little dog, lying on a rich cushion at her feet, seemed to contemplate her with admiration.

Mrs. Vereker, covered with jewels, could not comprehend how Lady Constance could think of appearing at such a fête without a single ornament. But those camellias, all fresh and brilliant, said Mrs. Vereker was ill prepared for the blaze of beauty which she beheld reflected in a mirror as she entered Lady Constance's dressing-room on the eventful night of the ball, just as the anxious and excited girl was arranging the last flower in her glossy tandeau, and remained standing by, with her left hand raised, as if to catch any leaf which might fall, while even her little dog, lying on a rich cushion at her feet, seemed to contemplate her with admiration.

They were late; Lord Glenlyn had wished it should be so; never had Constance imagined to herself the scene of bustle and noise she was to pass through. From the moment they turned into Piccadilly it was one unbroken line of carriages, waiting to set down, or returning from the mansion; the windows of the houses were filled with gazers, as though it had been mid-day instead of eleven o'clock at night; while well-dressed men and women were rushing nearly under the horses' feet to obtain a sight of those who were proceeding to this long-talked-of fête.

Mrs. Vereker, in an exceedingly ill humour, and inclined to quarrel with everything and everybody, kept exclaiming, "How like my brother! how certain are all his arrangements to be too late. Why, there are the Royal carriages returning. Who but he would have found such an hour for our arrival?"

"How long shall we be ere we arrive?" inquired Constance, whose heart was already there.

"It is impossible to guess," replied Mrs. Vereker, "but you may thank Lord Glenlyn for all this escort and work, and the chance of your new carriage having a pole through its panel. We ought to have started an hour sooner."

Constance leant back and resigned herself to her fate. It is an easy matter to do so when the mind has a bright and happy prospect to feed upon; and in due time they found themselves at the door of the mansion, and Lord Glenlyn waiting to receive them. His first look at Constance satisfied him of the effect she must produce—for even his fastidious taste acknowledged her to be supremely beautiful. He gave her his arm to traverse the hall, lined with servants in their gorgeous state liveries; conducted her through the richly carpeted vestibule, its elaborately-carved dome, and handsome columns of red antique marble; and ascended with her the broad sculptured staircase, lighted by a splendid candelabra; turned with her to the left, where the staircase separated into two corridors; and then transferred her arm to his sister's, and passed quickly himself by the corridor to the right, that he might perceive their entrance into the first salon. There he had the pleasure of seeing Royalty bestow a glance on his ward; and then, believing that his sister would be a less entertaining companion to her than himself, he joined them in the second salon, and, seating himself by Constance, began pointing out to her the different groups who were visible to them through a portière in the hall-room. A moment before, Lady Constance would not have heard him; but now, having caught sight of, and exchanged a look of love with, the object of all her thoughts—her sole temptation to that brilliant scene—she turned herself smilingly round, and listened to the accounts furnished her by this old, still son-disant, beau. One young girl, with the most lovely ringlets of light and glossy hair, attracted her attention, and she ventured to inquire her name.

"That young lady, my fair Cox" ("Cox" is an appellation much used by self-supposed young uncles when addressing their grown up nieces), "that young lady, my fair Cox, is one of our acknowledged belles. With all her beauty, and the false position her mother's vanity places her in, she is beloved by all who really know her. She is on the arm of a foreign minister, who, having been chosen by her ambitious parent to negotiate a marriage for her in which her heart took no part, had many opportunities of discovering her simple tastes and truthful feelings, and he has ever since been a faithful friend to her. Her mother, who is seated near them, has lately assumed an additional haughtiness of demeanour, from the disappointed feeling of seeing her rival in the world of fashion, marry her second daughter to her satisfaction. Nearer to us, you may observe a man with a very finely-shaped head, conducting two ladies through the crowd; that is the nobleman whose refined taste, whose wonderful talent as a sculptor and painter, and whose varied accomplishments have obtained him the name of the modern Cellini. His being a son of France, joined to his noble courtesies, serve to neutralise the jealousy his succès would call forth were he quite one of ourselves. Remark that young man to whom so many eyes are directed. It is Lord B——, possessed of immense wealth, with the most splendid position to boot. He is a powerful rival to many a handsome man, and the willing object of many a heart's desire, but there lurking in ambush about him: and unless some fancied attachment (and here the cynic smiled) should preserve him, he will find himself, from very weariness, forced to marry at duration. Observe that lady with her anxious gaze—looking for what she dreads to behold—her husband whispering soft nothings in another's ear. En revanche, behold that other's husband, pale with concentrated rage, at finding the same scene where she will distinctly promised him she would not go. Look at that girl bending down to catch the whispered words of admiration of the gentleman whose arm she has just taken, while he, to whom she has by all but words pledged her faith, is gazing on her in surprise and anguish."

But dear Lord Glenlyn," said Lady Constance—he had delicately hinted to her not to call him uncle—"let your account in future be confined to what you had come here to vex and tease each other instead of to enjoy a brilliant fête; surely there must be another and a brighter side to this moving panorama of fashion."

"Brighter," exclaimed Lord Glenlyn almost with fierceness, "what is there bright that is not false? But you are right Constance, your question seems to have invoked something brighter, for here comes the noble Baron of the revels." The brightest suffusion might be seen at this moment mantling on the face and neck of Lady Constance, not on account of the Duke's approach, but because coming direct towards her she beheld the object of her heart's worship—seeing him, what else could attract her attention? He came up, and bowing gracefully, said to her, "Will the Lady Constance Neville honour me with her hand for the Mazurka Quadrille now forming?" Constance looked to Lord Glenlyn, and he and they had moved off, before Lord Glenlyn could recover from his astonishment.

"Constance my own, my beloved Constance now and for ever do I claim this dear hand as my own," murmured her lover, as he led her to the ball-room, where, after presenting her to his sister, the lovely Countess of L——, they took their places, and immediately commenced the figure, a crowd standing round to admire their graceful movements.

The dance was scarcely finished, when it became bruited about that the lovely débutante of fashion's hemisphere had left the ball-room, despite of a lady's entreaties that he would have her carriage called, endeavoured to force his way to wherever Constance might be, but she seemed to have vanished from every one's view; till, in the vestibule, the confusion of tongues were rapidly descending from the grand staircase, he saw her and Mrs. Vereker on either arm of the Duke. His Grace had snatched up a hat, and been himself a considerable distance to look for Lady Constance's carriage, which he had been ordered to come up till two o'clock, and the clock in the hall only then marked half-past one. His Grace had apparently just returned, and was in the act of assuring Constance that he would convey her safely to her home; as a preliminary to which, he ordered his hall-porter to send a policeman to prevent a stoppage of the line from moving till he returned: even the Royal carriage, which stood waiting under the marquee, was ordered to remain stationary.

The soirée was over—the guests seemed aware that something more than usual had occurred at its close. It furnished matter for the next day's gossip at the Clubs, and by the Sergeants-at-Almack's, during the following evening, it was again revived, and much wonder expressed that Lady Constance Neville, whose vouchers had been sent for, did not appear; but, within a week, her absence from that and every succeeding party was explained by an announcement in the Morning Post, that the nuptials of the Duke of Bridlington and Lady Constance Neville would be solemnised early in the ensuing month.

Did Mrs. Tudor plume herself on this solution to her romantic dreams? Lord Glenlyn's caustic remark that, though Mr. Charles Spencer was really the Duke of Bridlington, and the connection all he could desire for his ward, Mr. Charles Spencer might have been a strolling player for aught she knew, and have brought disgrace on her charge, prevented any further violent display of her exultation. Lord Glenlyn was right essentially right; but, also, Mrs. Tudor was a woman: and, for some reason best known to himself, and carefully concealed from the world, his Lordship never spared one of her sex whom he had the power to censure.

SCARCITY OF FOOD.—ROYAL EXAMPLE. The following order was on Wednesday issued by the Lord Steward of the Queen's Household:—"Her Majesty, taking into consideration the present high and increasing price of provisions, and especial y of all kinds of bread and flour, has been graciously pleased to command that, from the date of this order, no description of flour except seconds shall be used for any purpose in her Majesty's household, and that the daily allowance of bread shall be reduced to the quantity now allowed and issued in the Palace. By her Majesty's command, FORTESCUE. Board of Green Cloth, May 12, 1847."

THE LATE LORD COWLEY.—The mortal remains of the late Lord Cowley were interred on Monday in the vault of Grosvenor Chapel, South Audley-street. The ceremony was a strictly private one. The attendants comprised the Duke of Wellington, the Marquis of Salisbury (brother-in-law to the deceased), Karl Cadogan, Lord Robert Grosvenor (son-in-law to the deceased), the Hon. and Rev. Gerard Wellesley, &c. The funeral service was read in a most impressive manner by the Rev. Evan Nepean, the minister of the chapel, and at the conclusion the body was lowered into the vault.

MUSIC.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA

Donizetti's three act lyrical drama, "Maria di Rohan," was produced on Saturday night, and was a signal triumph for the composer, Alboni, Salvi, and Ronconi; but, at the same time, the complete failure of the prima donna, Mme Roncoui, was a terrible check to what would be otherwise a most successful representation. It is one of Donizetti's most powerful operas, having been written for Vienna, in 1843, expressly to display Signor Ronconi's vocal and histrionic powers, which, in it at critical points, and, subsequently, in Paris, created an unprecedented sensation, as, indeed, did his last act here. To afford a notion of the drama, thus eliciting such diabolic genius, and electrifying an audience beyond example, we will briefly state that, at the third act of "Maria di Rohan," Chevreuse, her husband, has fought a duel, and killed Gondi, who had slandered her fair fame; the latter had been chaleng d by Chalais, Chevreuse's devoted friend, but had been prevented from attending the meeting through the affection of Maria. It should be explained that Chalais and Maria were early lovers, but the latter was forced by her mother into a secret marriage with Chevreuse, only disclosed when the mortal enemy of the latter, Cardinal Richelieu, the Minister of LOUIS XIII, was in temporary disgrace. Chalais, in the third act, Chevreuse has rendered important services to Chalais, has fought a duel for his honour, and has saved him from Cardinal's persecution. Let it be imagined, then, that the confiding husband learns, through Rochefort a return to power, that Chalais is devotedly attached to his wife; that, by a series of circumstances, Chevreuse presumes that the guilty of infidelity, which, however, is not the case; and that this fearful intelligence comes upon him at the moment he has just procured the escape of Chalais. And then comes the denouement. After the first impulse to slay Maria, he ascertains, by her emotion at the striking of a clock, that she is expecting Chalais: he then drags her to the secret door through which the latter will enter, and, after a short delay, when the lover comes in the room, he thrusts a pistol into his hand, and a fatal duel takes place; Chevreuse returning on the stage, after shooting Chalais, to fall into the hands of Rochefort's guards.

Ronconi's singing and acting throughout the whole of this exciting scene, from the moment he peruses the letter of Chalais to Maria, avowing his love, to the final accomplishment of his revenge, was simply replete with fearful force, and with a nature that even the members of the orchestra were irresistibly drawn into the excited feelings of the audience, and hailed the artist with prolonged cheering. He was encored in both movements of his great aria, and, with Salvi (who was the Chalais), called before the curtain amidst a perfect furore.

The opera has been splendidly mounted; the costume of the Louis Treize period having been faithfully adhered to. Salvi's handsome face and figure looked quite a picture. He has an elegant air in the first act, and a prayer of surpassing beauty in the second, the latter being rapturously encored, owing to the taste, feeling, and refinement displayed by this great tenor. Alboni, in Gondi, has the part of a young vain coxcomb, and has two charming cavatinas to sing, in both of which she gained the most fervent demands for repetition. At the second act, Gondi ceases to appear. One astonishing cadenza, in which Alboni ascended to B flat, was warmly applauded. It was in the cavatina, "Son leggero nell' amore," in six-eight time, which shows off her rich volume of voice to the greatest advantage.

Donizetti's music is admirable, rising as it does with the dramatic situations in intensity; the two last acts are full of beauties. The orchestration is well contrived to show off the great attributes of Costa's magnificent band. It is a pity that the mistake was committed of assigning Maria di Rohan to an inefficient prima donna. Madame Roncoui has abilities, undoubtedly, and she is handsome, and dresses exquisitely, but where there are a Grisi and a Persiani, she ought not to appear. It appears that Grisi has played the part with great success in Paris with Roncoui.

Since the above was penned, a letter from Madame Roncoui has appeared in the morning papers, stating that the character of Maria di Rohan was offered to her by Madame Grisi in Paris, and only accepted with the firm conviction that Madame Grisi would not undertake it; and, at the urgent request of Madame Roncoui, Grisi will perform Maria on the repetition of the opera.

On Tuesday evening, her Majesty and the Prince Consort, accompanied by Prince Leiningen, and her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge, honoured the new theatre with their presence. The opera was Bellini's "Sonnambula," Madame Persiani being the Amina, Mdlle. Corbari Lisa, Mario Elvino, Tamburini the Count, and Polonini Alesio. At the early part of the performance, Madame Persiani and Mario were both out of voice, and, indeed, printed apologies had been distributed on behalf of the former, but, as they warmed in their parts, their organs recovered, and their genius shone, and the enthusiasm was immense for the air of Mario in the second act, and the bravura finale of Madame Persiani. The unparalleled tours de force of the latter were characterised by their novelty and temerity, and never did she succeed more brilliantly. She was called before the curtain with the other artists, amidst a hurricane of applause and a shower of bouquets, one of which, from the Royal box, must have been a great source of gratification on the highly prized perfume.

On Thursday, was an extra night, not included in the subscription, when Donizetti's "Elisir d'Amore," with Madame Persiani as Adina, Salvi as Nemorino, Rovere as Dulcamara, and Tamburini as Belcore was performed for the first time. The success was complete. Salvi was encored rapturously in "Una furtiva," delicously accompanied by Baumann on the Bassoon. Madame Persiani alternately charmed and astonished the house by her execution and wondrous exaction. The Quack Doctor of Rovere was full of humour. It was quite an original conception, but was carried out with irresistible drollery, consulting the audience with laughter. Tamburini is also an excellent singer, and in the duos with Salvi and Madame Persiani was much applauded. Tamburini's Serenata Belcore is one of his best parts. It is full of vivacity, and the music suits his flexible baritone completely. Rovere is also a most

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

THE LORD MAYOR'S ENTERTAINMENT TO HER MAJESTY'S MINISTERS.

On Wednesday the Lord Mayor gave a splendid banquet to the Cabinet Ministers, at the Mansion-House. In addition to the Ministers there were several eminent individuals, including some members of the House of Commons. After the usual toasts to the Queen and Royal family, the Lord Mayor proposed, "The Army and Major-General Sir Harry Smith, and the Navy and Admiral Sir Charles Adam." (Cheering.)

Sir Harry Smith said, in the name of the gallant army to which I am proud to belong, I have to thank you for the honour you have just now conferred upon me. The present Commander-in-Chief needs no compliment from me. The Duke of Wellington stands alone, pre-eminent in his profession. I may say, for little was I aware when, forty-two years ago, I joined the army, I should ever ascend to the present elevated position which I occupy before the Chief Magistrate of the first city in the world, and before her Majesty's Ministers. (Cheers.) By the power of circumstances, and under the blessings of the free and glorious constitution of this country, I have, however, progressively risen. I have received every honour which her Majesty thought it right to bestow. I have received the thanks of both Houses of Parliament, as well as those of the Directors of the East India Company. I have been awarded the freedom of this great city, and, yesterday, I was elected a member of the Goldsmiths' Company. These are honours which I can assure the assembly are duly appreciated by me. (Loud cheers.) But I must remind this company that fortunately for myself I had long served under the Duke of Wellington, and any man of moderate merit, from

EXHIBITION OF THE NEW SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

CONCLUDING NOTICE.

In Parliament, Ireland and the Currency are the points of contention and dispute; and, in polite circles, in the drawing-room, Art and Music the engrossing subjects of conversation. Have you been to the Royal Academy? And have you heard Jenny Lind? Have you seen Mr. Etty's large picture of "Joan of Arc"—Mr. Landseer's "Van Amburgh and the Lions"—and Mr. Mulready's "Scene from the Vicar of Wakefield?" Have you been to the Italian Opera in Covent Garden, and to the Old Society of Painters in Water Colours? Have you heard Persiani; and have you seen the De Wints and the Copley Fieldings? Have you been to the Philharmonic this season? and, of course, you have seen Winterhalter's pictures at the Palace. There is a good deal to see at Christie's this year; and the Exhibition of the New Society of Painters in Water Colours is really a capital Exhibition. How fine is Haghe! Then the British Institution is still open; and to see Pyne's large "View of Heidelberg," in the Gallery in Suffolk-street, is fairly worth a shilling and the cost of a catalogue. Then at Mc Lean's, in the Haymarket, you may see (and for nothing too), Nash's admirable Views of the Exterior and Interior of Windsor Castle; and at the Cosmorama, in Regent-street (but this for half-a-crown), eight so-called Murillos, hitherto unknown. Above all, have you been to the Academy? and have you heard Jenny Lind?

Questions like these are common enough in company, nor is it easy to answer them all without provoking further conversation. We shall say nothing of the two rival operas in this place, or of Jenny Lind (a tempting subject), but shall confine our observations to the Art Exhibitions in the Metropolis. We have seen them all—and more than once—and are glad to fall in with the general opinion that this is an admirable Exhibition at the Royal Academy; that the large Etty is very fine, but hardly worth 2500 guineas; that Landseer was never greater, or Mulready more successful; that this is a hopeful exhibition in Suffolk-street; that the British Institution deserves a second visit; and that the Old and New Water-Colour Exhibitions are both admirable of their kinds, and both in a different way.

We paid our third visit to the New Water-Colour Exhibition on Thursday last. We were there as soon as the doors were open, and had the gallery to ourselves. There was the light, and we enjoyed the full pleasure of contemplating our favourite pictures without the trouble of a catalogue. That fine interior by Haghe is still unsold. Money must be scarce, for it is unquestionably the best picture in the Exhibition; the price, we believe, is only £150. After Haghe, Jenkins and Topham lead the way—Jenkins with his "Love Scene in Brittany," and Topham with his "Cavan's Well," already engraved in our Paper of the 24th of April. Jutsum's landscape ("The Streamlet." No. 251) is still to our tastes one of the sweetest landscapes in the Exhibition. Nor would it be easy to surpass the "Grapes" and "Still Life," by Mrs. Margetts: or Warren's view of "The Nile during an Inundation;" or Absolon's "Prince Charles Edward in the Isle of Skye;" or Mole's small picture of "Gleaners Resting;" or Jenkins's "Muscle Gatherers on the French Coast," a circular picture, engraved in the same number of our Paper with Mr. Topham's "Cavan's Well."

"JOHN THE BAPTIST PREACHING."—PAINTED BY H. WARREN.

Mr. Dodgson contributes a couple of landscapes, almost companion pictures in size, and not dissimilar in style and treatment. One is called "Going to the Chase," an exterior, with an old Hampton Court-like hall, and Nash-like figures in the foreground. This is still unsold. His second contribution is called "Sweet Summer Time," and has been painted to illustrate a charming stanza by a pleasing American poet, of the name of Longfellow:—

Pleasant it was, when woods were green,
And winds were soft and low,
To lie amid some sylvan scene,
Where the long drooping boughs between
Shadows dark and sunlight sheen,
Alternate come and go.

In illustration of this, Mr. Dodgson has given us an exquisite garden scene, with terraced walks, and fountains, and fine lawns—peopled with Watteau-like groups, picturesquely disposed—in short, a kind of pic-n- from Boccaccio's "Decamerons." The execution is careful, and the picture, we are glad to observe, marked "sold." We have engraved it in our present number.

Another artist of promise in the present Exhibition is Mr. E. H. Wehnert, who exhibits an Exterior, coloured with exquisite reality, called "Buildings on the Bridge at Vernon, on the Seine, Normandy." His other picture, a more ambitious effort, is "The Death of Jean Goujon, the celebrated French Sculptor." Jean Goujon was shot, 25th August, 1572, during the massacre of St. Barthélemy, while at work on his scaffolding, finishing some basreliefs in one of the courts of the Louvre. Mr. Wehnert never fails to tell his story clearly and unmistakeably. His colouring, too, is always good.

We cannot conclude an account of this year's New Water-Colour Exhibition without referring to the works of Mr. Fahey, the Secretary of the Society. Mr. Fahey contributes four in all. One is entitled "At Maidstone;" a second, "A Distant View of Sittingbourne;" a third, "View on the Medway;" and a fourth, "The Return." The "View on the Medway" is a truthful transcript of nature, and the "Distant View of Sittingbourne" careful and characteristic. The distance is extremely good. "The Return," a scene at the porch of an Elizabethan house, we have engraved in our present Number. We must leave Mr. Fahey to tell his own story, nor will our readers easily mistake it.

We have also engraved for the present number Mr. Henry Warren's large Water-Colour Drawing, "John the Baptist Preaching." Mr Warren, as an artist, is advancing in his art; but he must not be too ambitious; and, while trying the extent of his own resources, should bear in mind that Water-Colour drawing is a limited line of art, and that he is contending with difficulties found almost insurmountable in the richer qualities of oil. The subject he has chosen is one of the noblest in a book rich in materials for the painter of high art incidents. "In those days came John the Baptist preaching in the Wilderness of Judæa, and saying, repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

"SWEET SUMMER TIME."—PAINTED BY G. DODGSON.

EXHIBITION OF THE NEW SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

"THE DEATH OF JEAN GOUJON."—PAINTED BY E. H. WEHNERT.

It is easy to understand the particular fascination of the subject, and the varied excellences it admits of for the purposes of art. But it is stripping for a great effort, and where failure is all but certain. Not that Mr. Warren has altogether failed—far from it; he has put thought and character into his drawing more than enough to compose half a dozen good pictures; but he is not up to the height of the occasion he embodies. One of our contemporaries has thought otherwise—a critic of great authority in art: "The figure of St. John," says the Athenæum, "is near upon grandeur in conception; had it been draped more in conformity with the conventional practices of the early Italian schools, it would have come out a more striking personification, and enhanced by its more abstract treatment, the importance of the scene. The composition of this work is rich in the picturesque, and the introduction of the listening figure sitting on the camel, is just, both in thought and action."

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

The great excitement produced by Mdlle. Jenny Lind's splendid and unequalled performance as Alice, in "Roberto Il Diavolo," has not in the least abated. On Thursday night, every seat in every part of the house was occupied, to witness her exquisite personation of the gentle Amina, in Bellini's "Somnambula." Of all the modern operas, "La Sonnambula" has been the greatest favourite, not only in London, but on the Continent. We may say that it was performed on Thursday to perfection; and the charming duet, "Son geloso del Zefiro," which we believe, has not been sung in the opera at Her Majesty's Theatre, was restored to its place, rendering the opera complete in every respect—exquisitely sung by Jenny Lind and Gardoni. Every person we have spoken to is unanimous in saying that Mdlle. Jenny Lind's superb singing, on Thursday, was the most exquisite vocal treat ever heard within the walls of Her Majesty's Theatre. One of the greatest beauties in her vocalisation is, that, in her cadences, she preserves the character of the style of music she is singing, for which the ancient singers were so famous. These impromptus of her refined taste are invariably executed and finished off in a style that delights the most fastidious dilettante. This was most remarkable on Thursday, when she poured forth her exquisite embellishments with a charm and grace that won every heart. Her impersonation of this rôle is one of unbounded interest from beginning to end, never flagging for a moment; it is a true picture of the most engaging simplicity, and the affection of a pure and artless mind.

In the early part of the last scene, so powerfully was the interest of the audience riveted to the performance, that unbroken silence prevailed throughout the house, succeeded by such a hurricane of applause and excitement as baffles all verbal description: Mdlle Lind was encored with intensity twice in "Ah! non giunge." Gardoni, as Elvino, was encored twice during the evening. After the fall of the curtain, Mdlle. Lind was called for, and appeared three times; and never was greater enthusiasm exhibited in any theatre in the world.

But, were we to exhaust every laudatory term in the English language, we could not render justice to her truly artistic and enchanting performance. We shall, therefore, conclude by saying it was perfection.

Our readers are aware that her Majesty and her Royal Consort Prince Albert honoured the theatre two nights de suite last week, to witness Mdlle. Jenny Lind's unrivalled performances; when, on one occasion, her Majesty was so delighted with La Diva's exquisite singing, that she threw her a magnificent bouquet. On this occasion, her Majesty and the Prince seemed equally pleased with Mdlle. Jenny Lind's beauteous impersonation of the gentle Amina.

The allusion made by Mr. Bunn, in his farewell address, to the unprosperous career of the season calls for a few remarks—in the absence of any novelties to notice in the past week—upon the present state of theatrical affairs generally, which is not, upon the whole, a flourishing one. DRURY LANE is closed, and by its shutting up several hundred persons—comprising, of course, the families of those actually engaged and paid in the establishment—are obliged to contract their already humble expenditure. COVENT GARDEN is at the outset only of trying a startling and dangerous experiment—just beginning to feel its way in one of the most mammoth speculations ever entered upon in the dramatic world. The HAYMARKET is filled on the evenings of Mrs. Nisbett's performances, and filled well; but the audiences on the "off nights" can scarcely be deemed remunerative, looking to the heavy salaries paid by the management to its first rate troops of performers. The excitement caused by the re-appearance of the favourite actress will of course decrease, as soon as all her admirers and they are many, it is true—have seen her once again. Mr. Webster, however, announces the new comedy, which is called "Temper," for production forthwith. At the PRINCESS', even Mrs. Butler has failed to attract to the extent anticipated: and the want of an established prima donna has cramped the production of those agreeable versions of the most popular Italian operas, which formed so peculiar a feature in the entertainments of this house at the time Madame Eugenia Garcia was in the company. The even tenor of the PRINCESS' management was first disturbed by the appearance of Madame Thillon. Great as was the success, yet it had the ill-effect of making the house a "star" theatre; and after hat the people appeared disinclined to go there, unless they saw large letters in he bills.

"THE RETURN."—PAINTED BY J. FAHEY.

The Lyceum, which the exertions of the Keeleys, and the happy knack of their authors in hitting the public taste, raised from a position so uniformly unfortunate that it had become a joke, will close in a week or two; what the Vestris dynasty will do for it remains to be seen. Their management of Covent Garden a few years ago was the only really money-making one at the time; and, but f r a mistaken profuseness which accompanied it, might have remained prosperous until this day. Should they succeed in establishing a company of intelligent and tractable actors, with a certainty of their remaining in the theatre for two or three years; and be able to give liberal encouragement to authors to write for that company—such a system, perseveringly carried on, must to a certainty finally prosper. Novelty will be found the only true source of profit; and, to obtain a supply of this, temptations must be held out to authors, who, if they found a company collected, such as could be written for with certainty, might bring fresh inspirations into the field; and an improvement both in dramatic writing and acting would speedily follow. The way pointed out involves two rather scarce items—undaunted perseverance and a large amount of capital—both of the judgment that no management can do without; but no one pursuing another course can do anything either for itself or for the stage.

The Sr. James's is, in a measure, a "class" theatre, and can scarcely be said to derive its support from play-goers. It is the resort of an elegant and refined audience, for an entertainment, which, even in these days of advanced education, addresses itself, comparatively, to a few, and would keep on its even way uninfluenced by any general theatrical depression of excitement.

The Adelphi is doing well. It has always been a favourite theatre, and is a practical proof of an opinion we have long held, that, in the long run, good melodrama is the species of entertainment likely to prove most remunerative. To all appearances, too, it is in the audiences of the minor houses alone that a strong appetite for the stage exists. If we examine the productions expressly written for these theatres, we shall find that they form a distinct and marked a class as those of any particular period of dramatic history, and offer a strong contrast to the jumble of styles—the medley of imitations—which, for the most part, the writers of the higher classes of dramas bring forth.

Sadler's Wells is still prosperous, and deservedly so; at the same time, it is, fortunately, situated out and away from opposition, for the musical taverns in the neighbourhood lost most of their charms when the smoking and drinking in the salles was abolished.

The Olympic is still closed; and none of the rumours respecting its future occupancy appear to be on a foundation; whilst the press orders alone would almost fill the boxes of the Strand.

Over the water, the theatres have little to complain of; but there are such frequent changes in the bills, that we do not think any very great hit has been made of late. It is some time since we have noticed any success like that achieved by "Mazeppa," at Astley's; by "Jonathan Bradford," or "Blackeyed Susan," at the Surrey; or "Used Up," at the Victoria, which pieces kept in the bills for months. Without doubt, dramas of equal merit could still be obtained, but they must be paid well for. No recognised author would care to write for the minors, unless paid by most minor theatres, when a drama may be bought outright for a pound or two, and ten shillings per night is considered ample remuneration, if paid in that manner.

Looking to the advertisement columns of a weekly contemporary, we see seventeen places pen nightly for theatrical and musical entertainments entirely exclusive of evening exhibitions generally. It is no matter of surprise that many of these should be far from flourishing: the only wonder is, that they can keep open at all.

Mr Paul, the "low comedian," died on Thursday morning: he commenced his career under Ellision, at the Olympic theatre, in 1825.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

There is an anecdote of Sheridan that, walking with a friend down Bond-street, and being asked alms by a beggar, he threw the applicant a guinea. His companion, knowing that the wit by no means abounded in the precious metals, hinted that a shilling, at all events, would have been a handsome offering. "Perhaps it might," said poor Richard, "but it's worth a price that privilege of making the human heart leap for joy." In this mind, we can look back on the season from which we are at length emancipated. The long winter of our discontent. We have stepped from it into a time that stirs the heart, however sluggish. To say nothing of nature and her golden glories—the fields, the woods, the streams, all revelling in luxurious life, contemporaneous with that new birth of the world, was the change that came o'er the spirit of our dream—even here, in the city of cities. To end the plague of both our houses to give discord coup de grace, glorious Apollo sent Polyphymnia again among us in the form of a Swedish nadden. Genius and art have thrown wide their doors, and all that taste and refinement can bring to embelish existence, may now be had by the paying for. Imagine the carnival on whose threshold we stand; the marvellous merry-making of Wednesday next on the hills of Surrey! To be sure it will cost some of the company rather dear, but pain and pleasure are so near akin.

Looking back at a most pleasant passage of social pastime, which the current week put before us, we look their worst foe in our noble steeple—"below bri.ge"—at high noon on occasion that could not have left a solitary sight behind. We allude to the opening Regatta of the sailing year. It fell upon a morning, indeed—that of Tuesday last—not exactly calculated to intoxicate the spirits; but the afternoon was delicious: and, with such music as that made by the noble orchestras of the "Blues," and the more quiet but still very pleasing accompaniment of the band of the Club, it must have been a heavy heart that did not occasionally "out a caper." The Meteor, one of the fastest of the Thames steamers, was chartered for the noble Commodore's yacht, and by seven o'clock a party of the members and their friends. Soon after ten, A.M., she had st pped a goodly freight—when Lord Alfred Paget, accompanied by his fair bride, and Lady Adelaide Paget, came on board. The vessel then dropped down to Blackwall, and having there received a large accession of company, took its course for the picturesque little bay of Erith, where the wager fleet lay at anchor, with sl ips on their moorings. Five of the crack 25-tons were entered, but the Prince Albert, on the day of appearance, so the trial fiat consisted of the following quartet—the prize for this class being a most beautifully chased silver kettle (of course, for brewing grog):—

THE ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB MATCH,

Owner.	Tons.	Owner.
The Secret	25	J. W Smith, Esq.	.. 1
The Ino	25	Henry Gibson, Esq.	.. 2
The Prima Donna	25	Thomas Harvey, Esq.	.. 3
The Belvidere ..	25	Lord Alfred Paget	ran ag-ainst

There was a handsome silver punch-bowl or a silver tea-service for the choice of the second vessel in the first class—and a second class match the winner of which had sent one of the above, as t , second boat might not select. For the second class, two sailed:—

Owner.	Tons.	Owner.
Ranger	13	E. W. Roberts, Esq.	.. 1
Whisper	13	Thos. Sewell, Esq.	.. 2

The start took place a few minutes before one, with hardly a breath of air—the tide already some time on the ebb. As the turning-point was the Chapman Head Buoy—some miles below Gravesend—it augured badly for the return. The Ranger led till the Secret began to gather way, when, admirably handled, she overhauled the leaders, went to the van, and there remained—arriving by nearly five minutes—rounding the quiet shreak of Greenwich Hospital at five minutes past nine—a late hour for finishing a race. Soon after they began to turn over the tide, or beat home, the Belvidere got aground, and we bowed her up astern of the Meteor. A little squadron of yachts—among them the Pearl, with the veteran Marquis of Anglesey on board—accompanied the match, and, as they passed Gravesend on the return, a more perfect spectacle of river yachting could not be conceived. Nothing could exceed the arrangements for these matches; and those who, by experience or report, understand the ordinary character of water parties, must learn the perfection to which they can be brought by a sample of the style in which they are got up for the R.T.Y.C. galas.

TATTERSALL'S.

Monday.—Although within a few days of the race, the Derby betting this afternoon was anything but brisk, only the three favourites, Oxonian, Montpensier, and War Eagle, having been backed with the least approach to spirit; in each of these cases the closing prices were 2 to 1 against. Glenitt, Flandi, and Mr. Martin were not in favour, and Ulysses was sent to the rear. The Oaks betting was limited, except on the Farmer's Daughter, who was backed for a large amount. Lady Lift and Ellerdale were also in request, at improving prices.

DERBY
7 to 4 agst J. Day's lot	20 to 1 agst Wanota	40 to 1 agst Spirate
5 to 1 — Oxonian	25 to 1 — Montpensier (t)	50 to 1 — Good Cut
8 to 1 — Conyngham	25 to 1 — War Eagle	60 to 1 — Bingham
13 to 2 — Van Tromp	25 to 1 — Caroline	60 to 1 — Buskella
11 to 2 — Forth's lot	30 to 1 — Mathematician	50 to 1 — Halo
15 to 1 — Planet	30 to 1 — Red Hart	100 to 1 — Ulysses
16 to 1 — Mr Martin	30 to 1 — Glenitt	100 to 1 — Bowstring
20 to 1 — Mr Gully's lot (t)	40 to 1 — Nottingham

OAKS.
4 to 1 agst Clementina	9 to 1 agst Slander (t)	15 to 1 agst Ellerdale (t)
5 to 1 — Farmer's Daughter	13 to 1 — Lady Lift (t)	25 to 1 — Maid of Motherwell (t)

Thursday.—Agreeably to custom, the room was opened on Tuesday and Wednesday, but to very little purpose, the betting having been on too small a scale to call for a separate notice. Comparing was the order of the day this afternoon, and it necessarily took up a very considerable portion of it; business, however, was not altogether neglected, and it was so far important, that it gave Conyngham a marked preference over Cossack, and once more placed the Dutchman in a formidable position, 9 to 1 having been laid on Wednesday, and 13 to 2 taken this afternoon! Several other horses were backed, but at previous quotations or nearly so; and, in the Oaks betting, the only alteration was in The Farmer's Daughter, against whom 10 to 1 was laid in three or four quarters, a decline of four points.

DERBY.
7 to 4 agst J. Day's lot	20 to 1 agst Cranbia	60 to 1 agst Rotor colt (t)
13 to 2 — Forth a lot	25 to 1 — Wanota	66 to 1 — Mirmille (t)
9 to 2 — Conyngham	25 to 1 — Montpensier	66 to 1 — Ellenor (t)
11 to 2 — Cossack	30 to 1 — Mr Martin	100 to 1 — Limestone (t)
13 to 2 — Van Tromp	30 to 1 — Bowstring	100 to 1 — The Admiral (t)
13 to 1 — Planet (t)	30 to 1 — Red Hart	100 to 1 — Chanbearer (t)
20 to 1 — War Eagle	50 to 1 — Liberator (t)

OAKS
4 to 1 agst Clementina	15 to 1 agst Ellerdale (t)	50 to 1 agst Maid of Motherwell (t)
9 to 1 — Slander	15 to 1 — Lady Lift
10 to 1 — Farmer's Daughter	25 to 1 — P. out of Quilt	25 to 1 — Vanity (t)
	Arnold's dam	25 to 1 — The Queen (t)

ARTIFICIAL PRODUCTION OF ICE.

On Monday evening, an interesting Lecture was delivered at the Western Literary and Scientific Institution, Leicester-square, on the Artificial Production of Ice, by means of the machinery and preparations of Messrs. Lings and Keith, ice-machinists, of No. 11, Princes-street, Leicester-square.

The Lecture commenced with an exposition of those principles which relate to the production of cold; and the practical application of them, by means of the machinery and freezing-mixtures, was shown by numerous material wa demonstrated, by the Lecturer surrounding his hand with a thin coating of it, and exposing it for several minutes to the intense flame produced by the combustion of camphine. The application of this material to the preservation of bodies in a cool state was then alluded to, and the construction of the "Ice-Safe" pointed out.

Several specimens of fruit and vegetables were shown, including strawberries, asparagus, and cucumbers, &c., which had been preserved upwards of a fortnight, in a state quite fit for the table; and not the least important, was some butter, which had been in but two hours, and was taken out in an almost frozen state.

The advantages of this Ice-Safe were explained by the Lecturer as being not only due to the cold and the same time dry atmosphere created by it, but also, in its interior, in consequence of the patented principle of the Ice being contained in a separate chamber, but also to its great economy in the consumption of Ice.

At the close of the Lecture, a vote of thanks to Messrs. Lings and Keith was proposed and seconded by members of the Committee of the Institution, and carried unanimously.

The Protestant Association.—The anniversary meeting of this Society took place, at Exeter Hall, on Wednesday J. P. Plumptre, Esq., M.P., took the chair at twelve o'clock. The secretary (Mr. Lord) then read the report of the Association, which gave an account of the present state and prospects of the Society. The income during the past year amounted to between £15,000 and £16,000; and, the expenses having been paid, a balance of £106 3s. 4d. remained in the hands of the treasurer to be employed in part liquidation of the debt, which was now reduced to about £500. The adoption of the report was moved by the Rev. Mr. Bickersteth, seconded by the Earl of Winchilsea, and carried unanimously. Resolutions were passed in favour of the sentiments of the meeting, and of the necessity for exertion at the approaching election, in support of which the meeting was addressed by the Rev. Mr. Pruit, Admiral Duff, the Rev. Hugh M'Neile, and other gentlemen, and a vote of thanks having been passed to the Chairman, the meeting separated after singing a hymn.

American Symathy.—The American ship Morea, Captain Rand, arrived at Glasgow on Monday, with a cargo of meal, beans, pork, bread, &c., amounting in value to nearly £2,000, given as contributions from the citizens of New England to the relief of the destitute in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland. On Saturday the Express, a small barque, arrived at Dublin from New York, with a cargo of 9,370 sacks and barrels of Indian corn meal, 119 barrels and two sacks of Indian corn, 10 boxes of clothing, a half barrel of fish, one barrel of buck wheat, one bag of peas, and 13 bags of bread, consigned to the Central Association of Society of Friends, for gratuitous distribution among the most destitute of the poor of Ireland.

The Polish Ball at Willis's Rooms on Friday next, 21st. Instant.—This annual entertainment promises to be a brilliant reunion of the elite of aristocracy and fashion with which London at present abounds. Several fancy quadrilles have been formed, and the incessant application for tickets leaves no doubt that the will be fully attended.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Her Majesty's Theatre.—The Nobility, Subscribers to the Opera, and the Public, are respectfully informed that there will be a GRAND EXTRA NIGHT on THURSDAY next, MAY 20, 1847, on which occasion will appear in one of her Favourite Characters To be followed by various Novelties in the BALLET DEPARTMENT, combining the Talents of Mdlle. Cerito, Mdlle Rosati, and Mdlle C. Grahn. M. Perrot, and M. St. Leon.

Astley's Royal Amphitheatre.—Under the Patronage of Her Majesty the Queen, Prince Albert, and the Royal Family.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. M. HATT.—MONDAY MAY 17th, and following Evenings, Last Nights of the present grand Equestrian and Dramatic Spectacle, Brilliant Feats of Horsemanship, Wonderful Trained Horses, and Performing Dogs. The Pirate and the Mountebanks Pet, which will rank the first in their peculiar branches, embodying the extensive range of the universal Establishment, when an Entertainment will be presented replete with the grandeur and effect calculated to please. Pl. Broadfoot, Stalls, 3s.; Boxes, 4s.; Upper Boxes, 3s.; Pit, 2s.; Gallery, 1s.; Upper Gallery, 6d.

Colosseum—Notice.
The whole of the Water-Exhibition
IS THROWN OPEN
DAY OF ENTERING
FOR TWO SHILLINGS.
Children, Half-price
Open from Ten till Half-past Seven till Half-past Ten.

Mrs. Anderson, Pianiste to her Majesty the Queen, the Queen Dowager, and Musical Instructress to the Pri ss Royal, has the honour to announce that her ANNUAL MORNING CONCERT will take pl ce on TUESDAY, MAY 25th, at the Concert Room, her Majesty's Theatre, on FRIDAY, MAY 28, to commence at Half-past One o'Clock precisely, on which occasion she will be assisted by the celebrated vocal and instrumental artistes in town. The Orchestra will be complete in every department Conductor, Signor Costa. Full particulars will be duly announced in future bills. Tickets may be had at all the principal Music Warehouses, and of Mrs. ANDERSON, 31, Manchester-street

The Queen's Concert Rooms, Hanover-square.—Mr. Frederick Chatterton, Harpist to Her Majesty, the Queen of the French and H.R.H. the Duchess of Gloucester, has the honour to announce his MORNING CONCERT on TUESDAY, MAY 25th.—Vocal Music, Miss Rainforth, Mrs. A. W. Hunt, M. Williams, Sabilla Novello, W. H. Seguin, Bassano, and P. Lab che. Signors Marras, Bricci and F. Labinette. Messrs. Henry Phillips, F. Stephens, Lindley, Sapio, N. Spencer, and John Parry. Instrumental: Miss Rita Lodor, Miss Day, Mr. Carte, and Mr. Frederick Chatterton, who will also introduce Tares of his Pupils. Conductor, Mr Kiallmark. Tickets, 7s., Reserved Seats, 10s. 6d.

Ethiopian Serenaders.—St. James's Theatre.—Close of the Entertainment.—The Nobility, Gentry and the Public are respectfully informed that the Popular Entertainment given by the Ethiopian Serenaders, Full Harmonyon, White, Germon, and Pell, will be positively terminated at the End of the Ensuing Month of June, previous to the final departure of the Company for the Continent, on the 5th of July. Since the commencement of the Entertainment, more than Four Hundred Performances, public and private, have been given in London; and notwithstanding the numerous engagements which have been recently attempted in the Metropolis, the unapproachable superiority of the above party is established by their undiminished popularity and success. During the few remaining weeks of their Engagement, the Performances will be continued every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday Evenings, and a Morning Performance will take place every Wednesday. The Entertainments of the Thursdays during the Month of June, will be appropriated for the separate Benefits of each Member of the Company. And, in order to give an agreeable Surprise to the Visitors on the 10th, in the finest style, by H. Maguire, Esq., and are already nearly completed. The Benefits will be arranged in the following order:—

Thursday, June 3rd, for the Benefit of Germon, Tambourine
Thursday, June 10th, for the Benefit of Stanwood (Accordion)
Thursday, June 17th, ditto White (Banjo)
Thursday, June 24th, ditto Harrington (Banjo).
Thursday July 1st, ditto Pell. (Bones).

previously to the Last Farewell Performance on the Evening of Thursday, July 3. BOXES and STALLS at Mitchell's Royal Library, 33, Old Bond-street, and at the Box Office of the Theatre.

Onéromancie artistique of Mademoiselle Isaure.—The celebrated Somnambule, who has already excited general admiration everywhere; or the Performance of Historical Mythological, Dramatic, and Character-like Imaginary Attitudes, produced under the direction of Mademoiselle Hermini Laurent, by transmission of ideas through the mere agency of the will. The representations will take place at Two o'Clock every Wednesday, at the Hanover-square Concert Rooms; and every Friday at Wilks's Rooms, King street, St. James's

The New Society of Painters in Water Colours.—The Thirteenth Annual Exhibition is now Open at their Gallery, 53, Pall-Mall, near St. James's Palace.—Admission, 1s.—Catalogue, 6d. James Farey, Secretary

Royal Adelaide Institute.—The Exhibition of Painting in Oil and Crayon is now Open at the Gallery, 100 Pall-mall, Daily, from Eight o'Clock till Dusk. Admission 1s. Artists will be admitted to retouch their works on Friday, the 21st Instant, from Eight till Ten o'Clock in the Evening. John Harrington Wilson. Secretary. Royal Adelaide Gallery, May 15, 1847.

£1000 Prize Pictures.—Subject, "Baptism of Christ in the Jordan." These Competition Works of Art have been two years in preparing. The area was is 150, by 120. Open from 10 till 5 o'clock. Admission, 1s. Catalogue, 6d. Prince Albert, and is now open to the Public, daily from Nine till Six Admittance, 1s. Families of five, at Fifty-five Gallery, late Princess Exhibition, Hyde Park Corner.

Walhalla, late Miss Linwood's Gallery, Leicester-square.—Brilliant Success of Madame Warton's Unequalled Tableaux Vivans. Open every Morning and Evening Owing to the enthusiastic reception of the inimitable White Marble Statue Group, "Ino and the Infant Bacchus," produced by the New Process of Light, by Mr. G. Southby, of the royal Surrey Zoological Gardens, they will be repeated Three Times a Week, the Evening's Performance commencing with the Whole Marble Group, and the Second Part in Colours, following successively the works of the Sculptor and Painter. The splendid Tableaux of "The Dance, Neptune and Amphitrite," "Ino," and the universally admired Venus rising from the sea.—A Grand Morning Performance of Whole Marble Groups, Fancy Gallery, and Chinese Exhibition, Hyde Park Corner. Performance at Three; Evening at Half-past Eight o'Clock Stalls, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 5s.; Promenade, 1s.

Royal Polytechnic Institution.—Lectures on a popular chemistry, on the Evenings of Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, at Noon Clock, by Dr. Bachhoffner. On the Evenings of Tuesday and Thursday, on Artificial Light, and the Agents employed in its production. EXPERIMENTS with Armstrong's Hydro-Electric Machine. The Working Models and Machinery exhibited. The varied Optical Effects Inside, New Dissolving Views, the Oxy-Hydrogen Microscope, &c. Experiments with the Diving-Bell and Diving. Lecture Music, under the Direction of Dr. Wallis, commences at Seven o'Clock.—Admission, to Schools, Half-price.

Mr. John Parry's Annual Concert will take place at Willis's Rooms, on Friday Evening, May 21, at the Hanover-square Rooms. Mr. John Parry will, on the occasion, be assisted by Mr. Liblasi, Mr. Hobbs, Lalla Rookh and the Rival Houses Eminent Artistes, both vocal and instrumental engaged. Conductors, Messrs. Benedict and Regondi To commence at Eight o'clock. Lucas, 7s.; Reserved Seats, 10s. 6d. each; and Programmes to be had of Mr. John Parry, 17, Tavistock-street, Bedford-square; and at the Musicsellers and Libraries.

Benedict's Annual Concert.—Under Royal and the most distinguished patronage, Benedict begs respectfully to announce that his ANNUAL MORNING CONCERT will take pl ce on MONDAY, JUNE 14, in the Great Concert Room of her Majesty's Theatre. The entire Establishment of Her Majesty's Theatre in conjunction with all the available vocal and instrumental talent s own, wil l be engaged to render it worthy of the general approbation it has hitherto en. Immediate application for Boxes or Stalls is solicited at all the Musicsellers, principal agencies, and of Mr. Benedict, 7, Manchester-square.

Under the Patronage of the Duke of Cambridge

C. E. Horn's new Oratorio, Daniel's Prediction, will be performed on WEDNESDAY Evening next, MAY 19, at MUSIC HALL, STORE-STREET Principal Singers—Miss Dolby, Miss Thornton, Mrs. C. E. Horn, Miss Wells; Mr Wetherbee, Mr. F. Smith, Mr Purday, and Mr Rafter. With Full Orchestra and Chorus of 120 Performers. Leader, Mr Willey; Harp, Mr. Trust; Organ, Mr. Stargen; Conductor, Mr. C. E. Horn.—Tickets, 3s., 5s., and 7s., at the Hall, and of all Music Sellers.

Number One, St. Paul's Churchyard.—The Finest-flavoured TEAS are at Number One, St. Paul's Churchyard

Pure St. Julien Claret, 28s. per Dozen; Pints, 18s.; imported direct by Hedges and Butler, Wine Merchants, &c., 155, Regent-street, can be confidently recommended. Also, another Gordon's Golden Sherry, 36s per Dozen. On the receipt of a Post-office Order, or reference, will be immediately forwarded.

Curnall and Son, Importers of Cognac Brandy, of the highest quality, are now delivering from the Bonded Stores, 16 Hanover-square, Bottles 7s per dozen, Pints 4s per dozen, Quarts 2s per dozen. Pale Sherry at 30s per dozen.

Parties of Pleasure, Buy the Deal-partitioned Chest, containing 3 BOTTLES Making a Selection of either Champagne, Port, Sherry Hock, Claret, or Liebon—one of each, or two of three. Samples Order, 30s.; Box, 1s.; sent 100 miles for 2s.; and under 12 at 1s. 6d. each. Hedges and Butler, 155, Regent-street.

Abbott and Son, Late Hodgson and Abbott's, Pale Ale. The finest and highest celebrated Beer, is at present supplied by the Barrel by them only, in conjunction at the Brewery, Row, Maidstone, or 29, Grace-church-street, either Bottled, or Casks of 4½ gallons and upwards. Merchants' Trade Supplied.

Tonic Ale.—This splendid description of Bottled Beer is now in perfection. It is strongly recommended by the Faculty as possessing peculiar stomachic qualities, and is sold in bottles at 2s. per dozen, and pint bottles, secured by Bates's Patent Capsule. JOSEPH STOCKTON, Sole Agent, Stores, No. 1, John's mews Bedford row

Green-Ginger Wine.—Stivens' Original Green-Ginger Wine has now obtained for itself a character for genuineness, superior to all other British Wines however, and it is daily increasing in favour.—Observe the name, "J. HN STIVENS and Co.," over the neck of each bottle.—May be had, wholesale, at the Manufactory, 117, Aldersgate-street, and 1, Duke-street, and Henry-street, Liverpool, of respects to shopkeepers in town and country

Elegant and Economy in Paper-Hangings.—Patterns at the 2d per piece from 4d per yard. Rooms papered in Plain Panel Decoration, with Gilt Cornice and Centre complete, 12s. Term Cash Established 20 years. W. CROSBY, 22, Lowther Arcade N.B.—Three doors from the Strand entrance.

Shirts.—Youths' and Gentlemen's Shirts made to fit superior to any house in London, at the lowest style, at the lowest prices, for ready money. A large assortment kept ready made. At R. I NORTON'S Ready-made Linen and Outfitting Warehouse, 73, Strand, Adelphi. An extensive variety of Cravats and Scarfs, with every description of Hosiery and Under Clothing.

Elegant Picture Frames, Looking Glasses, Cornices, &c.—The acknowledged really economic Establishment for every description of GILDING and GILDING in all its various ornamental and workmanship, is FOLLIT'S Plate Glass and Moulding Warehouse, 63, Fleet-street. Priced sheets of chaste designs for every description of Artists, Picture dealers and the Public, at the Art-Union Engravings framed, glazed, &c., from 8s.—WM. FOLLIT, 63, Fleet-street. Observe! Corner of Bride's-passage.

Rook Shooting.—AIR GUNS and AIR CANES.—An entirely new and further improved assortment of these portable and silently destructive weapons, now on sale, adapted by REILLY, Gun, & Rifle Maker, to kill Rabbits, Rooks, Hares, &c., at a great distance, and without noise. Also, a most interesting assortment of Pistols, and Rifles, for Target Practice. Price from one to five guineas each; and, for sporting purposes, from five to ten guineas. Reilly, 315, High-st.

Window Blinds.—TYLOR and PACE, general window blind manufacturers, 3, Queen-street, three doors from Cheapside Venetian blinds, 1s. per square foot; Holland roller blinds, 6d.; Holland, spring ditto, 8d.; Union roller blinds, 1s.; patent roller blinds, in imitation of the finest grass wove cloth, 1s. 10d.; rosewood blinds of striped cloth, 1s. 9d.; transparent bands, each, 12s., 18s., 24s., 30s., 42s., and upwards. Detailed lists of prices forwarded free of charge. Warehouse 316, H.-st.

Bed Feathers, Purified by Steam with Patent Machinery, whereby they are rendered perfectly sweet and free from dust

Mixed	.. 6d. per lb.	Best Foreign Grey Goose ..	2s. 6d. per lb.
Grey Goose ..	.. 1s. ditto	Best Irish White ditto ..	3s. ditto
Foreign ditto ..	.. 8d. ditto	Best Dantzic ditto	3s. 6d.

Hea.l and Son's List of Bedding, containing particulars of weights, sizes, and prices, sen free by post on application to their Factory, 196 (opposite the Chapel), Tottenham-court-road.

Chocolat-Menier, Prepared at the Hydraulic Manufactory, at Noisiel, near Paris. Established in 1816.—The great superiority of the Chocolat-Menier has long since been acknowledged in France as one of the most valuable daily aliments. Its consumption in that country alone exceeds one million pounds annually. It is to general debility among all classes of society, and to that numerous class who need to be best nourished at evening parties, and for flavouring creams, custards, and various other sweet dishes. It is found the most distinguished members of the Faculty to delicate persons and children for its nutritive and digestive properties. Chocolat-Menier, in packets and sweetened and vanilla flavoured, at 2s. per lb. Sold by the principal confectioners, tea dealers, grocers, and at the Manufactory, 3, Crane-court, Fleet-street, and of Messrs. Hedges and Butler, 155, Regent street.

There is not probably any existing art which confers a more genuine and more intense pleasure, than that which perpetuates the features of those endeared to us by the ties of nature, or the closer bonds, and we all must be impressed with the gratification derived from possessing a faithful likeness of a parent or valued friend, in order that the fond recollection of their features may be ever with us, through the medium of the painter's art, recall to our mind and sight the features and expression of those whose memory is dear to us. Such a work is now issuing from the establishment of Messrs. Studios of the Royal Academy, begs to inform the Nobility and Gent y that he has removed to a no re commodious and more eligible residence, No. 76, Percy-street, Rathbone-place, where he will receive visitors from ten till Five. Having studied the works of the best masters, more particularly those who have devoted their talents to the art of Portraiture, including the late Sir Thomas Lawrence and M. Ar. Shee, &c., he has guaranteed to those who may favour him with their patronage a well-painted portrait, in addition to a perfect resemblance. Specimens may be seen, and every information as to terms, &c., obtained at Mr. DAVIS, 76, Percy-street, Rathbone-place.

London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway.—Express Trains with Post-office Carriages attached will leave London-bridge Station every Week-day as follows:—At 10 A.M. and 4 P.M. to Brighton, and at 10 A.M. and 4 P.M. to Hastings. On Sundays at 12.15 P.M. and 4.15, and 1.15, in the afternoon. Passengers are requested to proceed by the Early Trains, and to take Return Day Tickets before they leave London.

Fares by ordinary Trains to Epsom ..	1st Class. 3s. 0d.	2nd Class. 2s. 0d.	3rd Class. 1s. 6d.
Ditto to Return the Same Day ..	5s. 0d.	4s. 0d.	3s. 0d.

Return Trains from Epsom will commence running on the above days at 5. 0., in the afternoon, and start from the Epsom-road Station, at 6 P.M.

London Terminus, 13th May 1847 T. J BUCKTON, Secretary.

London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway.—Epsom Races.—Express Trains, with first and second-class carriages, in addition to the usual Trains, will leave the London-bridge Station, on the Derby Day, WITHOUT STOPPING, on Tuesday Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, in 1841, 1842, 1843, and 1844, at 10 A.M., and 4 P.M. and in 1845, 1846, and 1847, in the morning. Also, previous to the Races, Trains will leave the London-bridge Station with first and second-class carriages, on Friday, Saturday, Monday, and Tuesday, at 10 A.M. and 4 P.M. and on the Derby Day only at the hours of 8, 9, and 10 o'clock. Passengers are recommended to proceed by the early trains, and to take Return Day Tickets before they leave London.

Fares by Express Train to Epsom	1st Class.	2nd Class
Return Day Tickets, to Epsom by Express, and back by ordinary Trains the same day ..	7s. 6d.	5s. 0d.

London Terminus as 13th May, 1847. T. J BUCKTON, Secretary.

Clerical, Medical, and General Life Assurance Society.—In addition to Assurances on Healthy Lives this Society continues to grant Policies on the Lives of Persons subject to Gout, Asthma, Rupture, and Other Diseases, on the payment of Premium proportionate to the increased risk. The plan of granting Assurances on Unhealthy lives originated with this office in the beginning of 1824.

Every description of Assurance may be effected with this society, and Policies are granted on the Lives of persons in any station, and of every age

Bonuses

The two first Divisions averaged £91 per cent. on the premiums paid; the third, £86 per cent. The fourth bonus, declared Jan. 1847, averaged rather more than £95 per cent.; and, from the large amount of Interest reserved for Future Appropriation and other causes, the Bonuses hereafter are expected considerably to exceed that amount.

Tables of Rates, with a full Report (recently printed) can be obtained of the Society's Agents, or by addressing a letter to

GEO. H. PINCKARD, Actuary.

No. 78, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London

Under the especial Patronage of her most Gracious Majesty the

The Royal Naval, Military, East India, and General Life Assurance Society,

No. 10, Regent-place, London

Directors.

Chairman.—Colonel Sir Frederic Smith, K.H., R.E

Deputy Chairman.—Major-Gen. Sir William Casset, C.B., K.C.H., R.E

Admiral the Right Hon. Sir G. Cockburn, G.C.B., M.P.	Lieut.-Gen Cleiand, K.C.H.
Major-Gen Sir J. Cockburn, Bt., G.C.H.	Major-Gen. Sir Henry Hammer, K.H., late R.H.G.
Major-Gen Sir Alexander Dickson, K.C.H.	Lieut.-Col. Purchase, R.C.S
Major-Gen Sir Hew D. Ross, K.C.B., R.A.	Lieut.-Col. Mateon, R.E
Captain Sir George Back, R.N.	Major Chadwell Gleadow, K.H., F.R.S.
Major-Gen. Taylor, C.B., R.C.S.	Archibald Hair, Esq., M.D late R.H.G.
Major-Gen Edward Wayyard, C.B.	Captain William Lancey, R.E
Major-Gen. Arnold K.H., K.C.H.E.	William Chard, Esq., Navy Agent.
	James Nugent Daniell Esq
	Wilbraham Taylor, Esq

Actuary John Pelaiaux, Esq., the Government Calculator.

Assurances are granted upon the lives of persons in every station of life, and for every part of the world, upon particularly favourable terms.

Persons assured in this office may change from one country to another without forfeiting their policies.

A bonus, amounting to 30 per cent. on the actual value of the policies, was apportioned to the assured at the first Septennial meeting, held in the year 1844.

Joseph C. Brettell, Secretary

PUBLICATIONS, &c.

MODERN LIFE AND OTHER POEMS.—By HENRY LAWES LONGHURST. Fcap. 8vo, cloth, price 5s.

WEBSTER'S ROYAL RED BOOK AND COURT LIST.—Now Ready, Price Three Shillings COMPRISING a CORRECT LIST of the NOBILITY and GENTRY, Alphabetically Arranged, the Ambassadors, Consuls, Law and Crown Officers a Comprehensive Street Guide, and other useful Memoranda.
Pubished by WEBSTER and Co., 60, Piccadilly

COINS of ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS: History of the Succession of the Ancient Roman Emperors, with the Prices of their Coins, bearing Portraits, their Dates and Mottoes, is just published by P WHELAN, Dealer in Ancient Coins 46, Strand, London, price 1s 6d by post, 1s 8d. Coins sent by post, Bought, Catalogued, &c

NEW SONG, "COUNTRY LIFE."—A Song by the Author, also by Miss Thornton, &c. &c., with unanimous encores. It will be found one of the most exquisite songs ever written. Sent postage free, on receipt of 24 postage stamps.—Address: Published by B. WILLIAMS, 60, Paternoster-row, London, Publisher.

On the First of June, 1847, Part I., price 1s, to be completed in Six Monthly Parts, with Illustrations by Kenny Meadows and Phiz,
THE DISGRACE TO THE FAMILY. A Story of Social Distinctions. By W BLANCHARD JERROLD
London: Published for the Proprietors by Messrs DARTON and Co., Holborn-hill
Bu Advertisements can be received after the First Part after May 31st.

MR. LEIGH HUNT'S NEW WORK.
Just Published, in two volumes, post 8vo., with a Portrait of the Author, by Severn,
Price One Guinea,
MEN, WOMEN, AND BOOKS; a Selection of Sketches
Essays, and Critical Memoirs from his uncollected Prose Writings. By LEIGH HUNT
London: SMITH ELDER and Co. Cornhill.

MISS PILLEY'S CROCHET COLLAR BOOK.—Just published, price 6d., Second Edition, THE ILLUSTRATED CROCHET COLLAR BOOK.
Patronised by the Countess Brownlow. Arranged by Miss PILLEY
London: Groombridge and Sons, Paternoster-row. Grantham: Cox, Pilley and Cox, German Repository. May be had of all Booksellers, and at the principal Wholesale and Retail Berlin Wool and Fancy Depots in the United Kingdom.

Just Published, with Six Illustrations, price 6d., or postage free, 6d.,
MISS WATTS' BERTHE AND COLLAR BOOK.—Also, by the same Authoress. New and Improved Editions of the ILLUSTRATED KNITTING, NETTING, AND CROCHET BOOK, price 1s.—SELECTIONS IN KNITTING, NETTING, AND CROCHET, price 1s.—And, THE LADY'S KNITTING AND NETTING BOOK, Second and Tuted Series, price 1s each.
JOHN MILLER, 35, Chancel-street, Belgrave-square.

PINNOCK'S "MADE EASY" SERIES 18mo., cloth.
PINNOCK'S SCRIPTURE HISTORY MADE EASY. Revised and Enlarged By Rev. INGRAM COBBIN, M.A. With Illustrations by G F. SARGENT, 1s 6d
2 PINNOCK'S GREEK HISTORY MADE EASY 1s 6d
3 PINNOCK'S ROMAN HISTORY MADE EASY 1s 6d
4 PINNOCK'S HISTORY OF ENGLAND MADE EASY 2s 6d.
G. F. SARGENT, 34, Paternoster-row.

NEW WORK ON NURSING.
Small 8vo., cloth, price 7s. 6d.,
THE HAND-BOOK OF NURSING. Containing Instructions in Concentric, Elliptic, and Eccentric Turnery, also, various Plates of checks, lines, and instruments, and directions for working the Concentric cutter, drill, vertical cutter, and circular rest, with patterns and instructions for working them.
SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Publishers, Conduit-street

WISDOM AND CHEERFULNESS.—THE FAMILY HERALD has just commenced a New Volume with an Interesting Tale, tending to awaken pure affections, and directing to right principles, entitled GRACE AND ISABEL; or, To Scorn and To Be. This is the most entertaining, the most useful, the most popular, and consequentiously, the best of the cheap periodicals Everybody reads it, and all Booksellers supply the FAMILY HERALD, One of the most extensive circulation in the world. Weekly Numbers, One Penny; Monthly Parts, Sixpence

JENNY LIND.—The best and only authentic Likeness of JENNY LIND, is given in the PIANISTA, No. 80, drawn by KENNY MEADOWS, and engraved by LINTON, and three songs sung by her, Meyerbeer's beautiful songs, "The Standard Bearer," "The Rhine," and "Home," a set with the German and English words The whole for 2s. Pianista Office First Floor 67, Paternoster-row; where is now for sale 4th edition of No. 77 Pianista, containing "Mary Blane," "Lucy Neal," "Rufle o Gals" and Eight other of the Serenaders' Songs (genuine editions) Price for the whole Eleven Songs, with the "Mary Blane Quadrille, 2s. Either No. p.p., 36 stamps. Never out of print

FOR AUTHORS PUBLISHING.
Now Ready, Fifth Edition, price 2s. 6d., cloth gilt, or 3s., post free,
THE AUTHOR'S PRINTING AND PUBLISHING ASSISTANT.
A Guide to the Printing, Correcting, and Publishing of New Works, comprising Explanations of the Process of Printing; Preparation and Calculation of Manuscripts, Punctuation, Choice of Paper, Printing, Binding, Lists for Publishing, Advertising, Estimates of Cost for Large or Small Editions, &c., with an Exemplification and Description of the Typographica. Marks used in the Correction of the Press
"Every one who has written, or who may write, for the press, should possess this work."—Metropolitan. SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Publishers, Conduit-street

MR. COLBURN WILL PUBLISH IMMEDIATELY THE FOLLOWING NEW WORKS.
I.
ZENON THE MARTYR. By the REV. R. COBBOLD, M.A. 3 vols.
II.
MEMOIRS OF VISCOUNTESS SUNDON. MISTRESS OF THE ROBES TO QUEEN CAROLINE, CONSORT OF GEORGE II.; including the Correspondence of the Celebrated Persons of her Times, now First Pub lished from the Original MSS. in the Possession of Mrs. THOMSON, Author of "The Life of the Duchess of Marlborough," &c. 2 vols 8vo., with Portraits.
III.
ZOOLOGICAL RECREATIONS. By W. J. BRODERIP, Esq. 1 vol. small 8vo.
IV.
EVELYN HARCOURT. A NOVEL. By MRS GASCOIGNE, Author of "Temptation, or, a Wife's Perils." &c. 3 vols.
V.
THE HEART OF MIDLOTHIAN. By SIR GEORGE STEPHEN. 3 vols
VI.
A NEW EDITION OF LORD LINDSAY'S LETTERS ON THE HOLY LAND. Complete in One Vol., 10s. 6d. bound.
VII.
THE THREE COUSINS. A NOVEL. By MRS. TROLLOPE. Author of "Father Eustace," &c. 3 vols
HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13 Great Marlborough-street.

Proposed to Publish by Subscription, in 25 vols., post 8vo., 16s. on an entirely new plan, an ILLUSTRATED GEOGRAPHY AND HYDROGRAPHY, by JAMES MANGLES, Commander R N A Complete Dictionary, in Three Parts.
1—The Tabular Dictionary of 30,000 Places . . £2.
2—The Delineative Dictionary of Maps and Charts, or Atlas of 3000 Sections; £2
3—The Descriptive Dictionary, or Gazetteer of about 60,000 places; £3.
Making the total expense of the complete work £7.
Describing and Identifying in one minute the position of each and all of 30,000 places by sea and land, by means of about 3000 Sectional Maps and Charts, with a Letter and Letter Key to the contents of every section, which will denote in four seconds any one of the 200 or 300 adjacent places any one place of that neighbourhood.
N B. The first delivery of 2000 copies will be restricted to the first 2000 Subscribers, whose names, alphabetically arranged, will be appended to the last vol. of the First edition of the Work.
Excepting to the first 2000 Subscribers, the price of £8 for this complete Work cannot be guaranteed.
JUST PUBLISHED,
Price 3d., or by post 5d for postage stamps,
THE SIXTEENTH and LAST PAPER, completing the Original Prospectus of this work, being a resume of all the explanatory matter which has hitherto appeared
"Now, all the books of geography which I have met with seem to me the most abstruse and difficult, PROPOSE the London Geographical Journal, the science, "Progress in Geography," 4th Edit., 1847, by John Wilson Croker
Lond n: JOHN WILLIAM, late Librarian to the Royal Geographical Society, 4, Newman street, Oxford-street, by whom Subscribers' names for the complete work will be received.

Just Published Second Edition. Price 10s 6d.,
HEALTHY SKIN: or the Management of the Skin as a means of Promoting and Preserving Health. By ERASMUS WILSON, F.R.S., Consulting Surgeon to the St Pancras Infirmary, &c.
London: JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

CASES of Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Chronic Cough, and various Diseases of the Lungs, Air Passages, Throat, and Heart, successfully treated by Medicated Inhalations By ALFRED BEAUMONT MADDOCK, M.D. Cantab and MARSHALL, Paternoster-row, and may be ordered of any bookseller in town or country

The Art of Health, Happiness, and Long Life, in Two Volumes, 1s. each; by post, in stamp, 1s 6d each
WHAT TO EAT, DRINK, and AVOID; (with Diet Tables for all Complaints) By DR. HOPE, M.D. F.R.S. &c. on Regimen, Exercises, and Mental Government. By ROBT. JAS. CULVERWELL, M.D. M.R.C.S. L.S.A., &c. Sent warm 28, Paternoster-row; the Author 10, Argyll-place, Regent-street, and all Booksellers

HEALTH and HAPPINESS depend upon the proper Digestion of our Food. Mental and Bodily Diseases arise from Indigestion. Every one suffers from Indigestion should read Dr. SPURZHEIM'S TREATISON INDIGESTION and its Effects on the Human System. Sent free on receipt of one postage stamp addressed Dr. Spurzheim, M D., 4, Upper Southampton-street, Pentonville, London.

MEMBERS of READING SOCIETIES and BOOK CLUBS are informed that a Catalogue of Second-hand Books, recently made from a very large collection in every branch of literature, but by the NEW AND IMPROVED PLAN secure to them relief from the perusal of every New Work of interest as soon as it appears This subscription is ONE GUINEA per annum, and entitles the Member to the use of Books to the amount of his subscription, where choice and other assistants are employed, are earnestly recommended to all in the formation of Book Clubs on this plan, as it has been found very beneficial; it promotes the profitable employment of leisure hours The Plan, Terms, and Particles are sent gratis, to orders enclosing two stamps, addressed to SAUNDERS and OTLEY, Publishers, Conduit-street, Hanover-square

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH, and NEW SPRINGED TOOTH-BRUSH, for the improved durability, power of cleaning, and true economy, ask all who have used Metcalfe's Brushes The Tooth Brush performs the highly-important office of searching thoroughly into the divisions, and cleaning in the most effectual manner every tooth in the mouth; it is particularly recommended for its brushes, with the durable unbleached Russia bristles, which will not soften like common bristles, improved, Cricket-ground, Oxford-street, and 130, Fenchurch-street, London. The new Velvet-brush, and immense Stock of genuine unbleached Smyrna Sponges, at METCALFE and CO.'s only Establishment, 130b, Oxford street, one door from Hollies-street

ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, a White Powder for the Teeth, compounded of the choicest and most recherché ingredients of the Orients. Herbal, of unstainable value for preserving and beautifying the Teeth and strengthening the Gums Its truly efficient and fragrant aromatic properties have obtained its selection by the Queen, the Court and Royal Family of Great Britain, and the Sovereigns and Nobility throughout Europe. Price 2s. 9d. per box.—CAUTION—To protect the Public from fraud, the Government Stamp, with the words "A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton-garden," engraved thereon, is affixed on each box. Sold by them, and by all Chemists and Perfumers.

LADIES' RIDING HABITS, New Style, Registered 6 and 7 Victoria, chap. 65.—W FORD begs to inform those Ladies not visiting London, that will be happy to send directions for taking their own measure (with exactness), accompanied by an engraving of his improved Registered Riding Habit made only by the Patentee, W FORD, Habit Maker, 10, Holles-street, Cavendish-square, London

FRENCH CLEANING.—SAMUEL OSMOND and Co., Dyers, 8, Ivy-lane, Newgate-street, inform the Ladies that they clean Silk Satin, Cashmere, and Muslin de Laine Dresses, Shawls, Scarfs, Barèges, Grenadines, Parasols, Kid Gloves, and Satin Shoes, every week. They likewise continue to Dye Black every Wednesday, Red Crimson and Winder Curtains Cleaned, Dyed, and Finished.

IF A LADY SEND NINE POSTAGE STAMPS, by return she will receive one length of the IMPROVED DRESS FASTENER, a novelty from the most enlightened nations, elegance and economy, a great saving of time, and making the friction of the dress impossible. Every article for Fancy Needlework. E. D. ROGERS Strutt House, 10, Borough

LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN and INFANTS' UNDER-CLOTHING, Mrs WESTONS Show-room, 72, Strand, is now replete with an unrivaled Assortment of Infants Hoods and Cloaks, finished off in superior style which are now offered to the public at the very lowest prices for Ready Money. Baby Linen of every description; Bassinets, Bassinettes, &c. Outfits and Wedding orders executed with punctuality and despatch. 72, Strand, Adelphi

LESSONS in MILLINERY and DRESS-MAKING.—MRS. HOWELL, of 308, Regent-street, late from Marshall-street, Soho Square, begs leave to acquaint the Nobility and Gentry that she has commenced giving a Series of Lessons, undertakes to convey to persons of the meanest capacity a correct knowledge of Cutting, Fitting, and Dressing in the Newest Fashions, in Six Lessons, for One Guinea. The correctness of this card can be fully substantiated by reference to Pupils. Apprentices and Improvers Wanted Millinery Rooms Paper Models.

THE attention of LADIES is particularly requested to the NORWICH COTTON COMPANY'S 3 and 6 Cord Sewing Cotton, as being of the most beautiful and uniform texture yet produced. It is wound on reels, in lengths of 100, 200, and 300 yards. The Cord is smooth, free from fluff, and the twist is especially adapted for Knitting, Netting, and Crochet. To be had at all the most respectable Mercers, Drapers, Haberdashers, and Berlin Repositories; and wholesale only of the proprietors, Messrs. J. & J. BARBER and CO., Norwich; and of their Agents in London, Mr. W. W. TRIPP, 35, Friday-street, Cheapside.

THE EXPOSITION of HALF-MOURNING FABRICS for DRESSES, at the LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE, 247, 249, and 251, Regent-street, comprises Mousseline de Soie, Grenadine, Aerienne Imprimee, Barège à Volants, Barège Imprimee, Barège Tout Un, Barège Guipure, Organdie Mousseline Imprimee, Mousseline Imprimee, Embroidered Tarlatan and Crape Arrophane Robes, and an endless variety of Fancy Fabrics, adapted for every Season of the year, and Every Purse. The LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE, 247, 249, and 251, Regent-street

LADIES MAY BE ASSURED that a real LACE HOUSE is the only place to procure good as well as cheap LACE, inferior goods being rejected, from superior judgment. The depressed state of the Belgian trade has given BIRON the advantage of purchasing some extraordinary cheap Valenciennes, from 4½d to 3s. per yard, also some superb Brussels Lappets, Veils, Shawls, Dresses, Flounces, Trimmings, and Infants' Robes. All the novelties of the season are at Biron's No. 237, Regent-street

THE ROYAL MECHLIN SHAWL, full Two Yards square, made of the Finest Berlin Wool, at less than Half-price! KING and SHEATH will send one of the above Elegant Shawls (carriage free) to any part of the Kingdom for 9s. 11d. each. Colours, shaded lilacs, blues, greens, maize, lavenders, and blacks; a few plain white remaining.—Address KING and SHEATH, 164, Regent-street.

REAL VALENCIENNES LACE
GREAT REDUCTION IN THE PRICE.

Edgings	.. .. 4½d. to ..	9½d.
Narrow Lace	.. .. 1s. 9d. to ..	2s. 0d.
Wide Ditto	.. .. 2s. 3d. to ..	12s. 6d.
Insert ons	.. .. 2½d. to ..	4½d.
Real Mechlin Lace	.. 3d. to ..	18s. 6d.

Patterns sent to any part of the Kingdom, for inspection.
Address KING and SHEATH, 264, Regent-street.

PARASOLS.—The Patentees of the SYLPHIDE PARASOL, the merits of which have been already sold by them to all the Ladies of rank Registered Improvement, THE INDIAN. This invention consists of an invisible band of elastic tissue, which, by connecting wire the Parasol is closed, keeps it so at the will of the wearer. Every Lady will know that the silk of a Parasol is cut, when it is closed, out, by the friction of the ring, which has h therto been indispensable, on account of the inconvenience attending Bands put Canopy descriptions.
W and J. SANGSTER, 140, Regent-street; 10, Royal Exchange; 94, Fleet-street.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP OF MESSRS. GEORGE and ROBERT LAMBERT.
GREAT BARGAINS in SILKS, BAREGE, and CACHEMERE DRESSES, &c.—In consequence of the dissolution of partnership of Messrs. LAMBERT and LAMBERT, 194, Regent-street, it has become necessary to SELL OFF the whole of the STOCK without reserve, and in order to effect an immediate clearance, they have determined to mark every article in plain figures (including their recent purchases of 10 webbs for the present season) at such a reduction as must be unlike to Ladies purchasing from what is usual, and it is hoped that the ong standing and respectability of the house will be a sufficient guarantee for the quality of all goods offered upon the occasion.—194, Regent-street, nearly opposite Conduit-street

CHILDREN'S FROCKS, COATS, and PELISSES; Infants' Cloaks, Hoods, Hats, and Bonnets; Long and Short Robes, French Cambric Caps, Day and Night Gowns, Robe Blankets, Long and Short Evening Opera Cloaks, Other requisite in a Baby Linen, at SHEARMAN'S, 5, PINSBURY PAVEMENT. Several hundreds at Children's dresses constantly on view, from the nashe Indoor at 1s. 11½d. to the Richest at 42s. 6d. Linen, and Swiss Curtains The prices are marked in plain figures.—37, Ludgate-hill next door to St. Paul's

NOVELTIES and BARGAINS.—Owing to the great pressure of business at this season of the year, the Proprietors of the LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE, 247, 249, and 251, Regent-street, have found it impossible to complete the Stock-taking in time for the usual period, and in order to effect the same with the least possible delay, they have determined to SELL OFF the whole of their present Stock of Goods, at a great reduction in the prices. JOHN SHEARMAN and Co.

HALF-MOURNING DRESSES a FOREIGN MANUFACTURE, for GENTLEMEN WEAR, both Light and Transparent.—NO SOILS of the most elegant and fashionable Fabrics are now submitted to the notice of the Nobility, Gentry, and Public, at the LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE, 247, 249, and 251, Regent-street. The most extensive Manufacturers of this description have been employed for several months in their exclusively for W. C. JAY, patterns which are pre-eminent in variety, novelty, beauty, and delicacy of design; and manufacturers of sentiments have been engaged in making the fabrics in the most elaborate perfection of their art. These designs, rare in their separate beauties of texture, are rendered yet more valuable by their combination in the Robes of Mourning Dresses now tasteful, notwithstanding their entire superiority to anything hitherto executed, will be offered at the most moderate prices. Patrons of this Establishment will find the assortment that to where else can be found an assortment of Mourning Dresses so varied, so select, so excellent, or so cheap.

SHIRTS.—WHITELOCK and SON, 186, Strand, beg to inform gentlemen that in consequence of the great increase in their business they have appropriated a room exclusively for that article, where will be found the best assortment in London. The most reasonable prices in the scheme:—Fine Linen, 3s., 3s. 6d., and 4s. fine linen fronts, 3s., 4s. 6d each; and all Fine Linen, with Extra fine fronts, 10s. 6d. They are made in the best manner, and sitting, and every one warranted. Also a large stock of ready made ups for 5s., and are 10 per cent. below the usual prices. One seat as sample post free, on receipt of the amount, and is added, as part payment of postage. The measure a requisite is the neck, chest, and wrist tight. Their new Short Cravats are approved of by all who try them. Price, to Richest Satin, 5s. 6d.; Silk, 3s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. Patterns sent to a box from. The New Patent Shirt Buttons, 8s. 6d. per dozen

PATRONIZED by HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY and ROYAL FAMILY.—STAFFORD PENLEY'S HAT DE CARMES, universally allowed to be On duy infinitely superior to the Gossamer or any other invention. Gentlemen's Agents for the City—Professor Browne, 47, Fenchurch-street; C Snelling, 26, Gracechurch-street

GIBBINS' CREAM of ROSES and ROSEMARY.—This esteemed and elegant article is most respectfully offered to the Public by GIBBINS, Court Hairdresser and Perfumer (from Paris), 7, King-street, St. James's-square, as the most delicate and effectual Preservative of the Hair, Strengthener, and Beautifier. Its peculiar appeal is promoting its growth and luxuriance.
GIBBINS' EXTRACT of CREAM and ROSEMARY is a Liquid made from the above-named plants, and when applied to Washing the Hair, renders it soft and glossy; or, after Illness, its astringent properties prevent the Hair from falling off
No. 7, King-street, St. James's-square

CAUTION.—A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton-garden, London, beg to caution the Nobility and Gentry against being misled by the attempts of some Shops or Perfumers, who to compromise their own manufactures give the titles of "MACASSAR OIL," "KALYDOR," and "ODONTO,"—some under the implied sanction of Royalty, and the Government Departments with similar attempts at Deception, while they copy the Labels, Bills, Advertisements, and Testimonials, substituting fictitious Names and Addresses for the genuine. The Words "A. ROWLAND and SON" only purchase "MACASSAR OIL," "KALYDOR," and "ODONTO," and the Wrapper of each bears the Name of "ROWLANDS," engraved on it. Ask for "ROWLANDS," and take no other. Sold by them, at "A. ROWLAND and SON," Hatton-garden, London; and by all Chemists and Perfumers

PERSIAN SHERBET; a Tea-spoonful of which, stirred into a Tumbler of Spring Water, and taken while effervescing, makes a delicious, cooling, summer drink. In Round Packets, 2s. each, sufficient for 50 glasses Orange-flavoured Sherbet, or Lemonade Powders, 2s. per dozen; Soda-water Powders, 2s. per dozen; Seidlitz Powders, 6d. per dozen. Each Dozen makes Six glasses.—At GRIFFITHS, 61, Cornhill, and 4, Vere-street, Oxford-street. Wholesale and for Exportation at the Manufactory, 61, Cornhill

DROTOBOLIC HATS.—JOHNSON and Co., 113, Regent-street, corner of Vigo-street, Hatters to her Majesty and the Royal Family, Patentees for the application of Vaveasor and Air Condensers to Hats—This invention consists of a Valve when in placed in the Crown of the Hat, giving free exit to heat and perspiration, and of a grooved apparatus, forming a series of small channels in the back part of the leather lining by which air is admitted. The Indrobolic Hat possesses the following advantages—the regulation of the amount of air admitted into the crown of the hat, by the opening and closing of the valve at the pleasure of the wearer—the impossibility of an accumulation of heated air and perspiration—impermeability to grease around the head—extreme lightness, coolness, cleanliness, and durability—and, lastly, their acknowledged comfort by all who suffer from headache, or who are in the habit of taking violent exercise.—Johnson and Co., 113, Regent-street, corner of Vigo-street; and Griffiths and Johnson, 8, Old Bond-street, Piccadilly.

EXTRAORDINARY IMPROVEMENTS in PIANOS, most desirable in every respect, at prices very moderate, notwithstanding their novel and beautiful effects and qualities of tone To be seen on y at MOTT'S, 76, Strand. N.B. Good Pianos (which have been taken in exchange) at low prices

DOUBLE ACTION HARP, nearly New, only 28 Guineas, Elegantly decorated with white enamelled sounding board, by one of the first makers in Dublin One third its cost. The property of a lady wishing to dispose of it.—Apply at 5, London-road, Southwark, near the Elephant and Castle

PIANOFORTES.—The cheapest house in London to purchase these first-rate instruments is at H TOLKIEN'S, manufacturer, 39, King William-street London Bridge H T., having completed his extensive alterations, beg his friends to view his splendid stock of PIANOS, which is not to be equalled by any maker and at about half the price charged by them. H. T.'s much admired Pianinos, cash price £25. Old instruments taken in exchange.—TOLKIEN, 39, King William-street, London Bridge.

DANCING TAUGHT, in the most fashionable style, by MR WILLIS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden-square Private Lessons in the Polka, Cellarius Valse, and Valse à Deux Temps, at all hours, to Ladies and Gentlemen of any age, wishing privacy and expedition. An Evening Class on Monday and Friday. Terms may be had, on application as above

DESIRABLE FREEHOLD INVESTMENT in the CITY.—TO BE SOLD, by PRIVATE CONTRACT, excellent Modern-built FREEHOLD PREMISES, situate No. 1, Crane-court, Fleet-street. The Building has a 42 feet frontage, and is 80 feet in depth. It consists of basements and warehouse floor, with cellars ground, first, second and attic floors, well lighted, in capital condition, and adapted for a Dwelling House, Printing or other Offices, and now let to the Westleyan Newspaper Association. For particulars, apply to Mr B. BROUGH, House and Estate Agent, No. 5, Falsgrave-place, near Temple-bar, Strand

JONES' £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. They comprise every modern improvement, and are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reduction of price at once sets aside all the trashy watches that are manufactured, and any other house. On receipt of a Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 4s., one will be sent Free by Return. Read Jones' Statute of Watchers, sent free for a Twopenny Stamp.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—A Pamphlet, explaining the various constructions, and the advantages of each, with a List of Prices, will be forwarded, GRATIS, if applied for by a post-paid letter.—M. COX SAVORY and SONS, Goldsmiths, Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London

ORNAMENTAL CLOCKS.—Recently received from Paris, an unusually large variety of FOURTEEN-DAY CLOCKS, to strike the hours and half-hours, in Porcelain, Marble, and Glass. The designs are Fanciful and Historical, and include a few of great merit in the style of Louis XIV. The price is, four, five, and seven guineas each upwards
A. B. SAVORY and SONS, watchmakers, 9, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank.

MUSICAL BOXES.—A large stock of the first quality, playing upwards of 600 airs overtures &c., including selections from the following favourite operas:—"Norma," "Martana," "Don Giovanni," "Der Freischutz," "Il Barbiere," "Il Matrimonio," &c. A catalogue of the music is now published, and may be had gratis, on application to M. COX SAVORY and Co., Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London

SILVER PLATE, New and Second-hand.—T. COX SAVORY and Co's Pamphlet of Prices, with outlines, may be had gratis or will be sent post free if applied for by a paid letter The contents are the prices of tea-pots, and patterns of new and second-hand Silver Spoons and Forks, new and second-hand Tea and Coffee Services, Waiters, Salvers, Candlesticks, Second-hand Goods, the new plated on white metal Spoons and Forks, Watches, Clocks, Cutlery, Ladies' Gold Neck Chains, and Jewellery.
T. COX SAVORY and CO., No. 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

SILVER TEA SERVICES of New Patterns.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Working Silversmiths, 14, Cornhill., London, opposite the Bank, respectfully inform their customers that they have recently finished a few new designs, in accordance with the present taste, and that they are sold at reduced prices from those customary in the trade

Uxbridge Pattern.		Thalis Pattern
Strong Silver Tea-pot	£10 15 0	Strong Silver Tea-pot	£12 0 0
Ditto Sugar Dish	6 14 0	Ditto Sugar Basin	7 11 0
Ditto Cream Jug	4 10 0	Ditto Cream Ewer	5 2 0
Ditto Coffee-pot	14 10 0	Ditto Coffee-pot	16 17 0
Complete	£36 13 0	Complete	£42 10 0

A variety of upwards of 50 Silver Tea and Coffee Services may be seen in the Show Rooms, and on application the Illustrated price current, containing drawings, with the weights and prices of every article. Parties forwarding Old Plate from any part of Great Britain, Ireland, India, or the Colonies. Drawback on silver plate exported is 6d. per ounce

SELLING OFF.—WATCHES, JEWELLERY, and PLATE, at the Shop of A. BARBER, adjoining Row Gallery, which of the tasteful and superior Goods are offered to the above as a genuine sale of superior goods, and no chicanery or misrepresentation, so common in similar announcements, will be practised. Every article will be sold at very much reduced prices. The Jewellery is all first-rate in quality; the Watches, English and Foreign, of very superior make, and guaranteed for accurate performance The Plated and Plated Goods, the best manufactured, will be sold considerably lower than advertised prices in many instances. As the notice will not be prolonged, the premises about being closed, for extensive alterations.

DEANE'S IMPROVED PORTABLE GARDEN PUMP.—This most useful and simple and inexpensive invention is admirably adapted for gardens containing a pond. The pump has a very neat brass barrel, is painted green, and will work with one hand, and is extensively patronised by eminent practical gardeners To be had at DEANE'S Horticultural Establishment, 46, King William-street, London-bridge. Deane's Illustrated Horticultural Implement Catalogue forwarded free to all parts of the United Kingdom.

POOR SHOOTING.—AIR-CANES and AIR-GUNS Invested of all complications, and brought to perfection, now in general request for Rook, Rabbit, Wood-pigeon, and Vermin shooting; they are loaded with rapidity, discharge without noise or recoil, and are very portable. With safety as effective as gunpowder. Air-canes, name, warrants, &c. with harpoons, for killing fish, and, by recent great improvements, will throw small shot—for strength, distance, and accuracy, are to surpass anything ever before done with air. Letters, stating what sports they are for, will receive immediate attention, and a Prospectus, with Drawings and Descriptions forwarded, by return of post. Pamphlet and Apparatus included Trial on the premises. RUSSERIT, Gun-maker (formerly with Mr. Egg), 338, High Holborn, near Chancery-lane.

TROUSERS!—A good fit in this garment can be seldom obtained.—R. GHAVES, fashionable Trousers-maker and Tailor, 313, High Holborn, after many years' experience and study, is enabled to assert, without fear of contradiction, that he can fit gentlemen with this garment better than any other person in London. The characteristic of his cutting is pre-eminently style, with perfect ease for stooping, sitting, walking, or riding. A well-assorted Stock of the newest designs to select from.—R. GRAVES, 313, High Holborn.

BEDDE'S LIGHT OVER-COAT, for the SUMMER [illegible] also in warm weather in the form of an under-coat. The HAIR-PROOF PALETOT [illegible] the adoption of the respectable classes [illegible] and [illegible] to [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

BREAD RIOTS AT STETTIN.

FOOD RIOTS AT STETTIN.

The Illustration (from a Sketch by a German artist) shows a scene rom the Food Riot which took place at Stettin on the 24th ult., and was briefly noticed in our Journal of last week. Stettin, it will be remembered, is one of the most important towns in the Prussian monarchy; and is engraved at page 84 of the present volume, in our series of "Foreign Corn Ports."

The details of the Riot on the 24th ult. are,—In the morning, a mob of the lower classes made an attack on the supplies of potatoes brought to market, and then, accompanied by a countless multitude of women and boys, proceeded to almost all the bakers' shops, seized the bread, and destroyed the furniture and other articles. It happening to be the day of the fair, the stalls were not spared; those with provisions were plundered, and many excesses committed. It was not till the drums beat to arms, and till the troops assembled at the places that were threatened and patrolled the streets, and several desperate rioters were arrested, that tranquillity was in some measure restored. A proclamation was everywhere posted in the streets, stating that the citizens, distinguished by a white ribbon on their arms, would act as a guard; that the military were provided with ball-cartridge; and expressing a hope that the public tranquillity would not be further interrupted. The military, not being able to quell the riot, and the soldiers, officers, and general being pelted with mud and stones, it was at length necessary to fire, by which several persons were wounded and two killed.

By subsequent intelligence (dated April 27), we learn that public tranquillity had not been further disturbed in the city, and by the judicious measures of the authorities, confidence and security were restored. The streets being again quiet, the military patroles were withdrawn, and only sentinels placed at the bakers' shops. Many persons have been arrested as ringleaders in the tumult, or for having excited the rioters. April 29. Intelligence has been received here, that this morning a magazine of forage at Garz, in which there were 140 bushels of oats, and all the barns before the gate of Schwedt have been destroyed by fire, the origin of which has not yet been ascertained.

We regret to add that distress is becoming universal throughout Germany; and at Stuttgardt and Wurtemberg, the rioting has been very formidable.

MOUNT ST. BERNARD DOG.

This fine animal has just been presented by her Majesty to the Zoological Society of London, and is now at their Gardens, in the Regent's Park. He is a cross between the French Mastiff and the Mount St. Bernard Dog, and is remarkable both for his handsome proportions and immense size. He has an extra share of fierceness, to which he is indebted for his change of location.

Lord Dundonald.—The Government have, upon a further investigation of Lord Dundonald's case, recommended that he be reinstated in the Order of the Bath.

An Irish Luxury.—The Carlisle Telegraph says:—"During the last week several dead bodies were carried through the town for interment without the luxury of coffins."

Proposed Monument to Caxton, the Printer.—The Rev. H. H. Milman, in a letter to Lord Morpeth, suggests the propriety of erecting a monument to Caxton, at the end of the new Victoria-street, in front of the Abbey. Mr. Milman states that the house in the Almonry, which tradition pointed out as the residence of Caxton, and the scene of his labours, has fallen down of its own accord. The tradition is of somewhat doubtful authority; it is certain, however, that the printing press in England commenced its operations within the precincts or sanctuary of the Abbey. The character of the monument (adds Mr. Milman) might be this:—A fountain (of living water) by day, out of which should arise a tall pillar, obelisk, or cluster of Gothic pinnacles, for light by night; the diffusion of light being the fit and intelligible symbol for the invention of printing. Lord Morpeth approves of the suggestion, which is likewise sanctioned by the Dean of Westminster.

GREAT ST. BERNARD DOG, PRESENTED BY THE QUEEN TO THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 196, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 196, Strand, aforesaid.—Saturday, May 15, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 264.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, MAY 22, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE ELECTIONS.

URING the next few weeks the interest taken in the pending General Election will deepen; at least, it may be expected to do so, for it is exceedingly slight at present. Of late years—a rather indefinite period, but which may be taken to date from the death of George the Fourth and the commencement of the Reform struggle—there is scarcely one instance of a Parliament sitting for nearly the whole of its constitutional and legal term of existence. The battles of Party were then fierce and obstinate; there were divisions where Ministers escaped destruction by four or five votes, or even less; there were sudden dissolutions, hard contests on the hustings, close runs for counties, and narrow escapes in cities and boroughs. There were certain rules, by which a Ministry was bound to consider itself beaten, and go out; and the greatest crime the Whigs ever committed, in the eyes of their opponents, was their continuing to hold office with small and dwindling majorities, as obstinately as Wellington stood his ground at Waterloo with his thinned and broken squares, beaten according to all the rules, but somehow refusing to see it. Those were stirring times; there was great bustle, much noise, more excitement. It was the era of Parliamentary dexterity; when a clever move was applauded, and a division forced on at an unusual time, or when hon. members were at a Royal ball, placing the Ministry in a minority for twenty-four hours, till the next night rescinded it, was thought a clever thing; "whippers in" were necessary on both sides, like picquets thrown out between two armies in the field, to give warning of unexpected attacks; it was the reign of the Clubs, the palmy days of the Tadpoles and Tapers, who believed the highest policy, the greatest triumph of the statesman's ability, consisted in "going to the country with a cry." It did not matter much what "the cry" was; anything that separated the constituencies, and hounded on one section against the other, according to the traditions of the old "buff and blue" faith, or that of the opposite colours, would serve. A happy antithesis was then a source of power, and a pithy alliteration had often more influence than sense or principle. Merit of all kinds deserves acknowledgment, and it must be confessed there was often great cleverness in these "cries;" they hit the temper or delusion of the hour with admirable dexterity, and threw the master passion of the day into a few words, that thrilled the hearts of thousands. If Englishmen are ever enthusiastic, it is during political excitement, and then they may be worked on something as the French can be influenced by a master-mind in war. The bulletins and addresses of Napoleon to his troops abound in phrases that fell on the national ardour like fire on flax—and Empires were consumed by the blaze. Had he had to deal with the enthusiasm of party, Napoleon would have struck the chords of human passion quite as successfully; the genius that dictated some burning line in a bulletin would have struck out the exact "cry" required for the emergency; and how the Tadpoles and Tapers would have worshipped him!

But a change has gradually come over the face of affairs; politics have become more real and earnest—less swayed by names than attentive to things. We question if mere party distinctions will ever regain their old ascendancy; even differences of principle are becoming less broad—in some things they are disappearing; and the minds of men dwell on actualities and facts.

The change dates from the period England entered on those gigantic plans of internal improvement that will convert the whole island into something like a great city, London and York being merely at different ends of a street. Year after year the people became more absorbed in the occupation, which opened a new field for energy, and new sphere for the employment of intellect and wealth, and the effect was not dissimilar in kind to that produced when Bacon drew the mind of Europe from the barren dogmas of the schoolmen, and bid it go to Nature, and "consider her ways and be wise." The result was, that development of Physical Science, which has forced from Nature herself the weapons which subdue her to the service of man.

So in politics, we have begun to grow weary of the contests and quarrels about party distinctions, and recognise the necessity of legislating from the actual circumstances and necessities of the age—which are alike to all parties. It is the "inductive method," applied to statesmanship as it had been before to science. The theory of Government had been to lay down certain principles, which one section of the Aristocracy accepted, while they were rejected by the other: on these political dogmas, translated and popularised into "cries," the two parties were accustomed to "go to the country"—the Liberal section generally getting beaten. And for a long, a very long time indeed, the conflict of these principles was one for realities also; but, gradually, one old position was yielded after another; the Test and Corporation Acts went—the Catholic Disabilities disappeared—and at last came Schedule A, and swept the old system of representation away altogether.

It is obvious there was much less left to fight about on the score of opinion now than before—facts and events had disposed matters anew; yet men went on in the old track, wearing the old party badges, raising the old party cries, though quite another era had opened on them. But a sense of the state of the case was under it all: little by little those who could see anything saw this—that opinions long disputed having become facts and laws, the old traditional policy was impossible. Two great religious and political controversies were settled by Catholic Emancipation and the Reform Bill. What was to be encountered next? It soon began to show itself in a declining revenue and other symptoms that showed the old system of commercial policy wanted renovating. The instinct of the community was for freedom in this direction also, and two parties arose with a theory of commerce as their battle flag. How the conservatives came to suppose that they were bound to maintain the restrictions of trade, and defend the traditions of the Custom House, is unaccountable; but they did so, and it was on the conflicting principles of Commerce that the Parliament of 1841 was elected.

H. M. S. THE ST. VINCENT, 120.—SIR CHARLES NAPIER.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

That Parliament has sat for six years, and is now approaching its dissolution; and, as if it were destined to furnish a proof of how impossible it is to adhere to old, prescribed principles, when once we begin to deal with facts, that very Parliament first modified the Corn Laws and revised the Tariff; then, the experiment having succeeded, reformed the Tariff more widely; and at last abolished the Corn Laws altogether. It was done with regret; we do not like to give up an old conviction. The schoolman of the seventeenth century clung to his Aristotle fondly, though some daring experimentalist gave him similar proof that the Greek philosopher knew but little, and that little not very correctly. But the new light was unwelcome to the disciple of the elder faith; he would rather have erred with Aristotle to the end of his days: he was not sure experiments, these questionings of Nature and facts, were not impious. And there are many who believe that the repeal of the Corn Laws was not only impolitic but a crime.

Thus, one by one, the vaschwork of the past are taken from us; the old spells are deprived of their power. Having entered on the path of commercial and social improvement, and having to advance upon it, under circumstances of actual danger, all parties are reduced to act nearly the same.

At the present moment it would require a subtle casuist to define what is the difference between the Ministry and the Opposition—if that can be called so which never opposes. Lord John Russell and Sir Robert Peel are substantially agreed on almost all the questions of the day—Irish policy, Commercial affairs, National Education, Currency—on all things they agree; the only difference is that the Conservative leader is rather the bolder, the stronger, and the more liberal of the two! And this unwonted fusion of parties accounts for the apathy with which the coming election is regarded; no great or stirring question agitates men's minds; there are no "mighty opposites" and mere shades of opinion; slight differences of more or less will not do to fight about. "If the trumpet giveth an uncertain sound, who shall prepare him for the battle?" We are perhaps in a transition period, marked by unusual quiet, though contests fierce as those of old may yet await us. But in the interim the mere party man is puzzled and at a loss which way to turn. Tadpole is sighing for "something to go to the country on;" and Taper prays for "a good cry," and there are no signs of either of them finding what they want.

H.M.S. THE "ST. VINCENT," 120.

THIS noble ship, at Portsmouth, has, within the past week, been an object of very considerable interest, from two causes—a change in her command, and a "narrow escape" of the vessel herself.

It is now understood that Rear-Admiral Sir Charles Napier is to hoist his flag on board the St. Vincent, Captain Milne, at Portsmouth; and, in company with other three-deckers and some steamers, will proceed to Lisbon, and relieve Admiral Sir William Parker, Bart., G.C.B., in command of the Channel squadron: the latter gallant officer's presence being urgently required at this juncture at the Mediterranean.

An Admiralty order arrived on Saturday, at Portsmouth, for the St. Vincent to proceed immediately to Spithead; but the ebb-tide having made when the order arrived, it was impossible to move the ship on that day: the crew, therefore, were set to work to bend sails, and make other necessary preparations for moving her on Sunday.

In the morning, the Centaur steam-frigate, of 540 horse power, Master Commander H. Darcy, got her steam up to take in tow and take her in tow as a quarter before twelve. Unfortunately, before the steamer could get under way on her to give her a proper command over the St. Vincent's motions, the latter took a sheer to starb'd, in trying to get which, the steamer was unavoidably thrown broad on her port, which was also her lee bow, at the same time the starboard hawser snapped, and, after a vain attempt to recover her proper position, the steamer was compelled to cast off, on account of her drifting so near the shore, being only about thirty feet from the Custom House wharf-house. In the meantime, the three-decker, with only her jib set, was rapidly "sagging" to leeward towards the boats and the Quebec Hotel. Every exertion was made to get the ship under canvas, but before the topsails could be got on her it was evident the wind was not suitable to enable her to weather Point. The starboard anchor was therefore let go, but the scope was too small for the anchor to bring her up, and she drifted, broadside on, to the beach, but whether she touched the ground or not is uncertain. By the most skilful exertions of the officers on board, she was immediately extricated from her dangerous position. Warps were immediately run out to the nearest buoys, and she was got thereby further into the harbour channel, whence, at a quarter to two, she was hauled, with the assistance of her jib and foretopmast staysail, back to her moorings off Stony Bay, having slipped her cable opposite the Quebec Hotel, the occupants of which were much frightened in consequence of being hailed to get out of the house, at a time when it appeared very possible the ship would strike and crush it. The hotel was deserted, accordingly, until the danger was past. A very experienced harbour pilot, Mr. Davis, as well as Mr. Brown, the master attendant; Mr. Bellamy his assistant; and the experienced master of the St. Vincent, Mr. Biddlecombe, were on board, and exerted themselves to the utmost. The excitement was very great: and the shore was peopled with anxious crowds. Nor was the bustle confined here; the boats of the ship on the first alarm were lowered and manned, and others from the other ships quickly joined to carry out hawsers, and render assistance. Great credit is due to the officers, who, by their skilful and judicious directions, extricated the ship from her dangerous position.

The accident occurred when the people of Portsmouth were just coming out of church from morning service; consequently, the Point, the Platform, and all vacant places along the beach, were lined with spectators, who were all rejoiced to see this fine ship got off without damage.

In consequence of the wind continuing in the same direction, but much stronger, the St. Vincent did not attempt to move from her moorings on Monday, the wind being scant to sail out. On Tuesday the wind had become more moderate, and had shifted to the south east, and, as the tides had taken off a little, some water was started in the morning to bring the ship to a proper draught; and at eight o'clock top gallant and royal yards were crossed; but, about eleven, the wind driving more into the harbour, it was found necessary to tow out, and those yards were again, consequently, struck on deck. At half-past one the Centaur, with her steam up, having been got into position for towing, the St. Vincent slipped her bridles, and the steamer proceeded to tow her out of harbour, the ship setting her jib, flying jib, and staysails. When the harbour's mouth these sails, no longer required, were taken in. At two, the steamer and St. Vincent rounded the Spit Buoy, when the tow ropes were cast off, and the St. Vincent ran down to her berth with a fair wind, and at twenty minutes past two dropped her anchor, and the Centaur returned into harbour. Rear-Admiral Sir Charles Napier was at Portsmouth on Thursday, when it was supposed his flag, (blue at the mizen) would be hoisted; the Port Admiral's flag being shifted, at the same time, to the Excellent.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD. May 15.

The new students of Christchurch, elected from Westminster School, are Messrs. Rich, Cotton, and Scratton

M. Gilbert C. F. Harrison, commoner of Jesus College, has been elected a scholar of that College.

The Rev. George He [illegible] scholar of Corpus College, has been elected a Fellow of that society, on the found [illegible] of Exeter School.

Mr. John Buttenshaw, from T [illegible] School, has been elected a scholar of Corpus College, on the Kent Founda [illegible]

CAMBRIDGE. May 19.

At a Congregation held th [illegible] the following degrees were conferred:

D.D.—Hon. and Rev. J. R. Eden, Magdalen College, Bishop of Montreal Metropolitan; Rev. C. Perry, Trinity College, Bishop of M [illegible] ourne, Australia; Rev. T. Tyrrell, St. John's College, Bishop of Newcastle, Australia.

B.D.—J. Burdakin, Emmanuel; F. Sheppard, Clare Hall; W. Bates, Christ's College.

B.C.L.—J. T. Abdy, [illegible]nity Hall

M.A.—H. J. Hotham, T [illegible]nity College; W. N [illegible] Trinity College; T. F. Buxton, Trinity College; A [illegible] [illegible], St. John's College; H. R. Woodhouse, Caius College; C. R. E. Wilmot, Trinity Hall; J. Sanders, Catharine Hall; C. F. Walker, Catharine Hall.

B.A.—H. B. St. J. Fell, Trinity College; O. C. Fell, Trinity College; S. Eardley, St. John's College; J. C. Thring, St. John's College; J. Slater, Queen's College; C. H. Forbes, Downing College; W. F. Lucy, Magdalen College; C. A. Holmes, Catharine Hall; C. C. Wilson, Corpus Christi College.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

Considerable curiosity was excited yesterday week at the Chamber of Deputies, it being known that M. Odillon Barrot intended to elicit, if possible, some explanation respecting the recent modification in the Cabinet. More than 400 Deputies were present, and many ladies and privileged strangers. The new Ministers, General Trezel and M. Jayr, were on the Ministerial bench. Various questions having been put by M. Odillon Barrot, M. Guizot rose and said, he did not deny the right of the House to demand explanations, but it was the privilege of the Crown to select Ministers, and though their conduct and policy were legitimate objects of inquiry and discussion, their persons were out of the pale of debate. The only question was the political character of the late change. He decided that there was no change in the policy of the Government, and far less that the object was to fling the weaker members of the Cabinet overboard as expiatory victims for the errors of the Cabinet. M. Guizot then went on to state the reason why the late Ministers were called on to vacate their seats in the Cabinet was, because they did not, by their language and by their persons, give that support to the policy of the Cabinet which they were expected to give. He believed that M. Lacave Laplagne did not think that this was the case, but he had no right to be dissatisfied at his having been dismissed against his will, for on the 16th of April, 1837, both he (M. Guizot) and M. Duchatel were dismissed without notice, and without reason given, and from the Moniteur of that date it appeared that M. Lacave Laplagne was the very Minister appointed to take M. Duchatel's place. With regard to the future, he declared his intention to carry out vigorously the policy of Conservatism.

M. Lacave Laplagne, late Minister of Finances, assured the Chamber that he was not aware that his presence in the Cabinet had been a source of weakness to it. He admitted that he had refused to resign, because his doing so might be misinterpreted. The real truth of the matter was that he had refused to resign, and had been forced from his post. He concluded by advising the Conservatives to change their conduct, as the recent changes were really to be attributed to them.

M. Odillon Barrot said he expected nothing more or less from the explanations than he had got. When embarrassing events occurred it was necessary to have a victim, as M. Guizot knew, for he had himself been made the victim on a former memorable occasion.

M. Emile Girardin then rose to say that the circumstances in 1837 were very different from the present, and that at the period of the change in the Cabinet alluded to by M. Guizot there had been also a change in the policy of the Government.

On Saturday last the price of bread at Paris, for the next fortnight, was fixed as follows:—1st quality, 60 centimes per kilogramme; 2nd quality, 52 centimes per kilogramme. Compared with the previous fortnight this is a rise of two centimes per kilogramme was also to be observed.

The state of the crops in France is satisfactory: a letter from Marseilles, of the 10th inst., says, that in the Upper Languedoc, the harvest promises to be an unusually good one. The crops have also a favourable appearance in Lower Languedoc and in Provence.

We are sorry to see that there have been serious riots at Lille and Cambrai, the pretext being the high price of bread.

On Wednesday and Thursday (last week) at Lille, a mob, uttering seditious cries, attacked the bakers' shops, breaking the doors and windows, stealing the bread, or compelling the terrified bakers to sell it at a low price in payment. The National Guard, troops of the line, and cavalry, turned out, but it was not until late at night, and after the arrest of thirty of the rioters, that tranquility was restored.

The Echo du Nord states that disorders had also taken place at Wazemmes, a populous suburb of Lille, and that the shops of several bakers had been plundered.

The Prince de Joinville has given up the command of the Mediterranean fleet, and it is said that Admiral Mackau, the late Minister of the Marine, or Admiral Parceval Deschenes, is to be appointed in his stead.

Queen Maria Christina, who travels incognito, arrived at Lyons last week, and alighted at the Hotel de l'Europe, accompanied by the Duke de Blanzares, and attended by a numerous suite. Her Majesty remained till Friday morning, when she embarked in the steamer, the Cygne, for Toulon, whence she will proceed to Naples. It is reported that the object of Queen Christina's visit is to effect a reconciliation between the King of Naples and the Prince of Capua.

General Narvaez, and his wife, the Duchess de Valentia, arrived in Paris on Monday.

There is some excitement in Paris, in consequence of the discovery of alleged conspiracies and treasonable societies. The Droit asserts that eleven persons have been arrested, near one of the barriers of Paris, on a charge of being engaged in the manufacture of incendiary projectiles. On one of the men, who was entering Paris, was found an incendiary ball of a very large size. In the house which they carried on this manufactory there were materials for operations to a vast extent.

An unhappy occurrence has taken place at Chantilly, in the room of the Jockey Club, and caused some sensation in certain circles at Paris. Captain G——, holding a high command in the King's person, and belonging to one of the most honourable families in France, being the son of Count G——, entered into cheating at cards. On the day after this affair the officer in question appeared at the stag hunt, but he was ordered off the ground by the Duke de Nemours. On the same evening the Duke of Aumale sent him his sword, which was given him on his name being struck out of the list of the army. At the same time the Jockey Club met and expelled him. The unfortunate young officer is said already to have left France.

M. Giroux Mollot, notary at Versailles, has absconded, leaving a deficit which is estimated at about [illegible] francs. A note, written in pencil, was found among his papers, in which he put down the names of his creditors, and the sums due to each; the amount was 1,300,000f., and yet the list was not then completed. M. Giroux Mollot was considered to be perfectly solvent. His house and landed property being valued at about 1,000,000f. His failure will cause the ruin of several families of Versailles.

SPAIN.

The Queen of Spain has been amusing herself at Aranjuez with country sports, particularly coursing, and is in good health

The King Consort left Madrid on the 11th for the Pardo, where he was to remain a few days.

In the afternoon of the 11th all the Ministers then in Madrid left for Aranjuez, and this circumstance gave rise to rumours of a Ministerial crisis. The Queen allowed the people to visit the gardens of Aranjuez, and she mixed freely with them. Among the distinguished visitors to Aranjuez was Mr. Bulwer. The Heraldo of Madrid is called on the Government to take measures to reduce the excessively high price of provisions, which is said to be perfectly unjustifiable

The food riots, it appears, continue in Spain. Some disturbances have taken place at Leon and at Grenada, owing to the high prices of provisions; at the latter place they were attended with bloodshed. A disturbance, arising from the high prices of provisions, has taken place at Seville; but, tranquility has been restored. Fresh disturbances took place at Leon, on the 8th, in consequence of the dearness of food; but they were appeased on a reduction of price being promised.

The Queen held a brilliant levee on the 13th, at Aranjuez, on the occasion of the anniversary of the birth of the King. The authorities of the capital, the Ministers, the Duke de Glucksberg, Count Thomar, and several other members of the corps diplomatique, had repaired to Aranjuez to be present at the ceremony. In the evening, the Ministers returned to Madrid. Rumours of a modification of the Cabinet were still rife, and it was the general opinion that M. Pacheco would vacate the Presidency, and be appointed Ambassador at Rome.

FOOD-RIOTING IN BELGIUM.

In our latest impression last week, we stated that there were some rather serious food riots at Brussels on the previous Monday and Tuesday. A mob of eight thousand persons attacked the bakers, several bakers and corn merchants. The troops were called out, and several skirmishes took place between the soldiers and the mob. Six houses were attacked and partly plundered during the outbreak on Monday night and early on Tuesday morning.

At Tournay similar disturbances have taken place. The mob, of 400 or 500 persons attacked the baker's shops, several of which they broke open and ransacked, and afterwards attempted to force their way into the Jesuits' College. The troops were called out, and several of the rioters were taken, but the disturbances lasted nearly two days, before they were effectually put down.

Riots of an alarming nature occurred on Monday last at Ghent. About six P.M an immense number of persons collected in various parts of the city, and commenced a regular pillage of the baker's shops. The military were immediately called out, but the rioters were not dispersed before midnight. It was remarked that a great number of them were twelve to eighteen years of age, but that they were excited to acts of violence by persons much older.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION AT WORCESTER. At Worcester, on Tuesday, a daring attempt to assassinate Dr. Turley was made by some villain. Dr. Turley was sitting in the library at the back part of his house, in St. John's, when he heard the report of a pistol, and immediately went out, but could see no person. He called the police, and search was made. No stranger was to be found, but it was discovered that a small hole had been made in one of the panes of glass, that a corresponding perforation appeared on the window-blinds, and that the shot had struck the carved wainscot on the opposite side of the room. The bullet (which was found on the floor) had apparently been shot from a rifle, and must have passed within a very few inches of the Doctor's head, as he sat writing at his table. The report awoke the servants of the house. About a quarter of an hour before the discharge of the pistol, Dr. Turley [illegible] on the gravel-walk outside the library, and [illegible] violently [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] assured [illegible]

THE LATE ROBBERY AT THE CAMDEN TOWN STATION.—J. Freer, W. Martin, and H. East, have been convicted at the Central Criminal Court of the late robbery at the Camden Town Station, and S. Freer, J. Cherry, Joseph Taylor, and Joel Taylor, were found guilty of receiving the property, knowing it to have been stolen. The particulars were given recently in our Police Report. The Recorder sentenced John Freer, Martin, East, Cherry, Joseph Taylor, and Austin, to be transported for seven years. The other prisoner, Samuel Freer, had a milder sentence—that of one year's imprisonment, with hard labour.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS. MONDAY.

PUBLIC GRANARIES.—The Earl of WINCHILSEA urged upon the Government the propriety of establishing public granaries, as it seemed probable that if they had a bad harvest, there would not be sufficient corn to maintain the people. In 1835 he said wheat was as low as 35s. a-quarter, and to his own certain knowledge there was a large quantity destroyed. If they had had public granaries then established, they could have purchased corn upon very low terms; but now, even if they could procure the desired quantity, the expense of it would be enormous. If they had such granaries established, placed under the control of the Government, so long as the great body of the people could be supplied with wheat at a reasonable and fair price, the doors should not be open; but if the time should arrive when, by a serious failure of the crops at home, or by any unfair speculations, corn should rise to so high a price as to render it difficult for the labouring classes to purchase it, then the doors of the granaries should be thrown open, and the corn stored would thus be kept as level and as low as possible to meet the wants of the people.—Earl GREY, without denying that there was cause for some alarm, and without expressing any opinion upon the question of public granaries, refused to discuss so large a subject, unless brought regularly before the House by notice and motion.

THE FACTORIES BILL.

Lord ELLESMERE, in moving the second reading of the Factories Bill, spoke with great diffidence of himself, and apologised for having ventured, unknown as his voice was in that House, to take charge of so important a measure. He urged the House to remit some portion of the labour of the working classes, believing that nature never intended that the great bulk of the working population should be incessantly occupied in severe, unremitting, and protracted toil, and he believed that no Christian Legislature would witness the suffering of that vast mass of the population without endeavouring to interfere, if it could possibly be done without injury to the public interest. It had been urged that there was great danger in interfering with the labour employed in the factories, but he believed that its result would be to bring contentment and comfort to the labouring population. The effect of the present system had been to inflict severe and oppressive toil upon that portion of the community whom it was his wish to relieve.

Lord FEVERSHAM seconded the motion, and forcibly impressed on their Lordships the admirable conduct of the operatives during the ten years that they were endeavouring to obtain this bill, as an additional claim which they had on Parliament for protection and justice. The noble Lord entreated the Government and noble Lords on this occasion to agree in support of this measure, so that it might pass the second reading with a unanimous vote.

Lord BROUGHAM opposed the bill on the ground that it was for the best interest of the working classes not to place any restriction upon their labour, which was their capital. It was his conscientious belief—founded on all the experience of his public life, and enforced by the most mature reflection—that the present limits are not only of the great body of the working classes of the community, but all other interests which required the consideration of the lawgiver, were best consulted by establishing liberty of contract subject by no means to volunteer his interference with. He maintained that this was a thing which required the greatest possible slowness and circumspection in dealing with, because they were surrounded with interests of such enormous magnitude and number that the least false step might do an injury which they could neither calculate nor remedy. Believing that if they attempted to find a substitute for parental feeling, by the application of law to regulate the hours of labour, that parental feeling would resent the substitute, and their interference would only have the effect of rendering that feeling much less pure than it now was, he moved as an amendment that the bill be read a second time that day six months.

The Bishop of LONDON and the Duke of RICHMOND supported the bill.

The Earl of CLARENDON supported the amendment.

The bill was further supported by the Bishop of OXFORD and Lord WHARNCLIFFE, but was opposed by Lord ASHBURTON

Upon a division, the second reading was carried by 53 to 11.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

DISTURBANCES IN THE WEST OF ENGLAND.—In reply to a question from Mr. B. ESCOTT, Sir G. GREY said he had received official information of disturbances in Cornwall, in Exeter, and its neighbourhood, but he was happy to add that they had been put an end to without any other interference than that of the local authorities

POOR LAWS ADMINISTRATION BILL.

On the motion that the POOR-LAWS ADMINISTRATION Bill be read a second time, Mr. PERRAS moved as an amendment that the bill be read a second time that day six months. The hon. gentleman contended that the operation of the bill would be the very reverse of what its advocates professed was its intention—that instead of raising the character of the people, and would increase instead of decrease the amount of crime. He also charged the Poor-Law Commissioners with intolerable tyranny, and the present and late Ministers, and the House of Commons generally, with indifference to the feelings of the people. The proposed new Commission he described as liable to all the objections urged against the present Commissioners.

Mr ROMILLY defended the principles of the act, and commented on what he termed the gross ignorance of Mr Ferrand of the meaning of the bill which he attempted to criticise.

Mr. BANKES said the bill would give greater powers to the new Commissioners than were ever exercised by the old, while the checks upon them would be considerably diminished, and the existing Commissioners might be re-appointed, and invested with a higher degree of power. Such a bill he could not assent, and amongst other objections he had to it was the constitutional one that two new placemen would be introduced into that House, in addition to those already enjoyed to sit there by other measures.

Sir G. GREY defended the measure, insisting that the new Commission would be directly responsible to Parliament, which would be a great improvement on the present system.

After some observations from Col. SIBTHORP in opposition to the measure, the debate was adjourned till Tuesday.

The House sat till two o'clock in the morning, but the business generally was unimportant.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

Lord BROUGHAM AND Lord CAMPBELL.—Lord Brougham having presented a petition from the printers and publishers in favour of the Health of Towns Bill, Lord CAMPBELL remarked that the atmosphere of that House and the atmosphere inside Temple-bar affected his noble and learned friend very differently. The atmosphere in Westminster, for the corporation; in London, he was eloquent in their praise. He brought in a bill one year adverse to the wishes and interests of the Corporation of London, and denounced that body in no measured terms, and the following year they came into the city, and made an eloquent speech in praise of them.—Lord BROUGHAM said that, of all the misrepresentations, of all the misstatements of a notorious fact, that ever had been uttered by any one, or by any Lord—which was going as far as any one could—none had ever exceeded the assertion which the House had just heard. (Loud laughter.) His bill was brought in, but stopped, because he was told that the Corporation had not the intention of opposing it in the other House. Upon that occasion, it was said that they would in time yield to the efforts that were made to reform their Corporation; but it would appear that they would yield neither in time nor in eternity. (Laughter.)

THE ARMY SERVICE BILL

On the order of the day for going into Committee on the Army Service Bill,

The Marquis of LONDONDERRY moved as an amendment that it be committed that day six months, and said that nine-tenths of the army were wholly opposed to the bill.

The Earl of CARDIGAN protested against the bill, although he admitted the addition to the pensions would be a great boon to the soldier, and would render the service more popular in the country.

Earl GREY said he would not again enter into an argument after the discussion that had taken place, but he cited an assertion in support of the bill. An officer who was now serving in her Majesty's army, who had himself risen from the ranks; and, in consequence of the high character he had borne as a private and non-commissioned officer, had been promoted with his commission without payment, was asked his opinion of this bill, and his reply was—"All I can say is, that I have been in the army all my life; I never would have enlisted for life; I want that or seven years' man."

The House now went into Committee, and a general discussion arose.

On the first clause,

The Earl of LUCAN moved an amendment, to the effect that twelve years should be substituted for ten years in the infantry, and fourteen years for twelve in cavalry, artillery, and other ordnance troops. His object was that, a the principle of limited enlistment had been recognised, its operation should be made as little mischievous as possible.

Earl GREY could see no advantage in the amendment of the noble Earl, and would rather support their Lordships' clause first to last and altogether than adopt it.

Lord COMBERMERE supported the amendment.

The Duke of WELLINGTON opposed the amendment. He restated the views he had formerly expressed in favour of the bill, and proceeded to say, "He did not think the proposal of altering the period of enlistment from ten to twelve years, and from eleven to nine, was one which they ought to accede to. He thought their Lordships should always keep this in view, to retain the old soldiers in the service during the whole time their services could be of advantage to the country—till they arrived at 40 or 41 years of age, and that object he believed the proposed bill would secure. (Hear, hear.) Reference had been made to the inconvenience attending the carrying on the service as the law now stood. He begged their Lordships to observe this circumstance throughout the whole consideration of the question, that the law of the country was in favour of limited as well as unlimited service. The law enabled her Majesty's Government to raise men for six, seven, fourteen, and twenty-one years, and also for unlimited service; and if they at any time had given an order to carry out that state of the law, he, in the office which he held, must of course have obeyed that order. (Hear, hear.) He believed, however, that the arrangement proposed under this bill was better than the periods of service allowed at present by law. (Hear, hear.) With respect to the inconveniences arising from the relief of the troops in foreign parts, he believed her Majesty's Government were perfectly aware of the liability that must always exist to such inconveniences; but that was a matter which it would be the duty of the Government to prepare for,—they would provide for the removal of the troops and their relief at the proper time." (Hear.)

Lord STANLEY supported the amendment.

On a division, the numbers were—

For the amendment	30
Against it	38
Majority for the Government	—8

The original clause was agreed to.

Earl GREY, on the part of the Government, subsequently agreed to some verbal amendments proposed by Lord DE ROS and the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH, and the bill then recorded passed through Committee.

THE POOR RELIEF (IRELAND) BILL.—The proposal for the third reading of this bill led to a long discussion. Various suggestions and amendments were made, some of which were agreed to, and others withdrawn. They were of an unimportant character. The third reading of the Bill was carried; and, at midnight, the House adjourned till Thursday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS—TUESDAY.

THE BIRMINGHAM AND OXFORD JUNCTION.—On the motion to consider the report of the Committee on the Birmingham and Oxford Junction and Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Dudley Railways Amalgamation Bill, Sir F. THESIGER moved, as an amendment, that the bill be referred back to the said Committee. An animated discussion arose, but on a division the original motion was carried by 214 to 62. The report of the Committee was therefore adopted.

THE LORD-LIEUTENANCY OF IRELAND.

Mr. HUME asked if the Government had made arrangements for filling up the vacant office of Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland?

Lord J. RUSSELL, who evidently spoke under deep emotion, said:—"Perhaps the House will permit me, in answering that question, to express my grief which we, and the Sovereign whom we have the honour to serve, have felt at the melancholy loss the country has sustained (hear, hear), in the death of a nobleman, whose intimate knowledge of Ireland, whose clear judgment, whose conciliatory qualities (hear, hear), were so well adapted to soften animosities which have long been the bane of that country, and to point the way to her future improvement. (Hear.) Sir, having said these few words with respect to the calamity that has occurred, I will tell the hon. member who has asked this question, that her Majesty's Ministers have thought it their duty to advise her Majesty immediately to fill up the office of Lord-Lieutenant, which has thus become vacant. Whatever may be the opinion of her Majesty's Government with respect to the general nature of that office, with respect to the policy of maintaining it for any length of time as part of the Government in the United Kingdom, we are clearly and unanimously of opinion that the present circumstances of Ireland do not admit of such a change of authority as would be necessarily effected by the legislative measures which would have to be introduced on a change in the mode in which the Government of Ireland is administered. We have, therefore, thought it absolutely necessary to advise her Majesty to fill up the office of Lord-Lieutenant. (Hear, hear.) I do not intend during the present session of Parliament to introduce any measure by which an alteration may be made in the constitution of that authority. We have felt, in coming to this determination upon our own responsibility, that it was absolutely necessary for the present Government of Ireland." (Hear.)

RAILWAY BILLS.—On the motion of the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, a Select Committee was appointed "to consider whether it is expedient that any measures should be adopted for suspending further proceedings in all or any of the railroad bills in the present session, and for enabling the parties, under certain conditions, to proceed with the same in a future session of Parliament; and also, whether it is advisable that any future provisions should be made in the Standing Orders of this House relative to bills for the construction of railroads; and to report their opinion thereupon to the House from time to time."

THE POOR-LAW ADMINISTRATION BILL.—The adjourned debate upon this bill next occupied the House. The discussion did not present anything worthy of notice, and it was further adjourned till Thursday.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER intimated that he should not go on with the LOAN DISCOUNT BILL until after the Whitsun ...oldays.

The POOR RELIEF (IRELAND) BILL, with amendments, was brought down from the Lords and, on the motion of Lord JOHN RUSSELL, it was ordered to be printed, and the amendments to be taken into consideration on Monday, the 31st instant.

The House, at half-past twelve o'clock, adjourned till Thursday; thus consenting, at the suggestion of Lord George Bentinck, to allow Wednesday for the enjoyment of the "Derby."

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

On the motion of the Duke of WELLINGTON, the Mid Kent Railway Bill was referred to the Railway Board

THE CLERGY OFFENCES BILL.—The Bishop of LONDON moved the second reading of the Clergy Offences Bill.—Lord BROUGHAM said, he was not prepared to deny that some legislation upon the subject was required, but, at the same time, he thought the bill moved by the rev. prelate contained provisions which were carried rather too far; and in committee he would suggest some alterations, which, if agreed to, would remove the objections he then entertained to the bill. After some discussion, the second reading of the bill was agreed to.

The Navy Prisons' Bill was also read a second time, and the House adjourned till Friday next, the 28th inst.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

THIRD READINGS.—The following bills were read a third time and passed:—The Belfast Port and Harbour Bill; the Birkenhead Commissioners' Dock Acts Amendment Construction of New Docks and Alteration of Culvert) Bill; the Driffryn, Neath, and Perth Cowl and Railway Amalgamation and Extension Bill; the Glasgow, Dumfries, and Carlisle Railway, and Glasgow, Paisley, Kilmarnock, and A.r Railway (No. 4) Bill.

WAREHOUSING OF SPIRITS.—Mr. HOFFATT moved for leave to bring in a bill for assimilating the warehousing privileges on colonial and British spirits; and another bill to permit British spirits to be rectified in bond for exportation, and to permit rectified spirits and compounds to be warehoused for exportation.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER opposed the introduction of these bills, which elicited some debate. Divisions took place on both of the bills, and the proposal for their introduction was negatived.

The adjourned debate on the POOR LAW COMMISSION BILL was resumed, and, after a long discussion, in which Lord J. RUSSELL took part, and which was closed by Mr. DISRAELI. The debate was again adjourned; and the House rose at a quarter to two o'clock.

RAILWAY COMMITTEES.—On Monday the Committee in Group 19 decided that the preamble of the Coventry and Southam branch of the Oxford, Banbury, and Coventry bill was proved.——The South-Western gained an accession to their system, the preambles of two of their bills being proved in No. 7, namely, their branch from Andover to the Bishopstoke and Salisbury line, and their Weymouth, Melcombe Regis Harbour, and Bridge Trust ——The preamble of the new Hereford, Hereford, and Abergavenny Extension to the Taff Vale was proved in Group 22 ——The Committee in Group 27 announced that the preamble of the Eastern Counties (Wisbeach to Spalding) was proved.—— In Group 29 the preamble of the Great Northern (purchase of East Lincolnshire and Boston, Stamford and Birmingham, Stamford and Wisbeach line) was proved.—— On Tuesday, in Group 17, the Chairman announced that the preamble of the deviation bill of the Great Northern, from Careby to Grantham, was proved, but Mr. Ostler's land must not be entered upon without his consent.——On Wednesday, in No. 21, the Committee (Sir James Graham chairman) met at twelve, and, without proceeding further evidence, passed the preambles of the following bills:—The Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Stour Valley (No. 1). The Shropshire Union Railways and Canal (Branch to the London and North-Western). The Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Stour Valley (No. 2.) The London and North-Western (Portobello and Wolverhampton Branch).——In Group 33, on Thursday, the Committee decided that the preamble of the Leeds Central Station Bill was proved, and that the preambles of the remaining bills referred to the Committee were not proved, viz., the Leeds, Dewsbury, and Manchester (Extension to Waterford, &c.) Leeds, Wakefield, and Holmfirth Railway. Great Northern (Extension to Leeds and Wakefield, &c., and Deviation.)——Yesterday, in Group 26, the Committee decided that the preambles of the London and North-Western, Birmingham and Lichfield—Derbyshire, Staffordshire, and Worcestershire Junction and Branches Bills were proved.

SALE OF MR. BECKFORD'S TOWER.—The Bath Gazette says, "This unique specimen of the late owner's taste, together with an acre of the surrounding land, was 'knocked down' by the auctioneer's hammer on Monday, for the almost nominal price of £1,000. The purchaser is Mr. Wm. Knott, landlord of the Freemason's Tavern, Abbey-green, Bath."

LAMENTABLE COLLIERY EXPLOSION NEAR LEEDS. On Monday morning, a terrific explosion of fire-damp occurred at a colliery belonging to Messrs. Harding and Co., New-hall, Beeston, about two miles from Leeds, by which seven individuals lost their lives. The explosion took place about nine o'clock. The colliers, in the course of their labours, broke into an old pit, from which the confined and inflammable gas issued, and this communicating with the lights, caused the most instantaneous explosion. Six of the unfortunate persons who were at work in the pit were killed on the spot, and altogether nine persons lost their lives by the explosion. The inquest on eight of the sufferers was held on Tuesday, at the Unicorn Inn, Beeston, when after hearing several witnesses the inquiry was adjourned.

THE POISONING OF A FAMILY IN SUFFOLK.—On Monday, at the Police office, Bury, Suffolk, the young woman, Hannah Rouse, who had been apprehended on suspicion of being concerned in the poisoning of the entire family to which she belonged, consisting of six persons, was brought before Mr. Serjeant Adams and Le Grice, borough magistrates, for examination on the serious charge. The many mysterious cases of poisoning that have occurred of late, more especially the Acton murder, for which Catherine Foster unjustly suffered, gave to the proceedings considerable interest. The circumstances which led to her being taken into custody were the production of some letters written by her, wherein she expressed her regret at some act of pilfering she had committed, and rather obscurely hinted at self-destruction. At the close of the evidence, the bench intimated that there could be no doubt that a wicked attempt has been made on behalves of the family, but there were no facts elicited that would warrant them undertaking the accused, and therefore she would be liberated on entering into her own recognizances to answer any charge that might be hereafter made against her. This was done, and she was discharged.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"L. and S. J." Horsham.—A player can have two or more Queens on the board at once.

"J. S."—The work you mention, by "Charles Check, Esq.," is no authority whatever upon the game.

"S. B." Hull.—Very acceptable. Many thanks for them.

"H. J. C. A." They shall appear shortly.

"One of the Class 'Gow."—You can have two or more Bishops of the same colour on the board at the same time. Your solution of Enigma 154 is wrong: upon advancing the Q Kt Pawn two squares, Black could take it in passing

"D. C.," *Glasgow.—You have omitted to observe that Black can evade the mate in Problem No. 169, by Castling The solution to "A. D." (lower Enigma No. 168 is as follows:—*1. B to Q B 8th; 2. Kt to Q 7th; 3. Kt to K 5th (ch); 4. Kt to K 4th Mate. The following is the way to effect mate in 3:—1. K R P one; 2. B to R 2nd; 3. K Kt P one; 4. K Kt P one, dc. ch., and mate. Your own Problem shall have an early place.

"Bunbrokie." Your solution of Enigma 153 is incorrect. Try once more.

"G. versus C."—The King cannot take the Kt in the situation given

"Czar."—The author's solution of Enigma 167 is—1. B checks, 2. P checks; 3. R to Q Kt 7th, ma ing next move.

"S. S. W."—It shall be examined.

"R. H. C."—We have not got the back Number at hand to refer to. Have the goodness to write out the position

"Rook."—Take the Bishop by all means.

"J. N."—They shall be reported on shortly.

"S. S. H."—It shall have an early place

"Phil."—Gut Volumes 5 and 7 of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle"

"P. Q." Knowle.—The Brighton Chess Club having found the Rooms which it has occupied, at the Literary and Scientific Institution, too small for the accommodation of its increasing members, has just removed to a spacious apartment belonging to the Chain Pier Company, and situated on the Pier Esplanade.

Solutions by "Sopracitta," "G. A. H.," "W. S. S.," "A. C. B.," "N. V. F.," "A. D. A." "Rijk," and "E. D. S." are correct. Those by "F. P." "G. M. W." "E. G. D.," "W. S. L.," "Coulthard," "Berney," and "W. F. G. H.," are wrong.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, NO. 173.

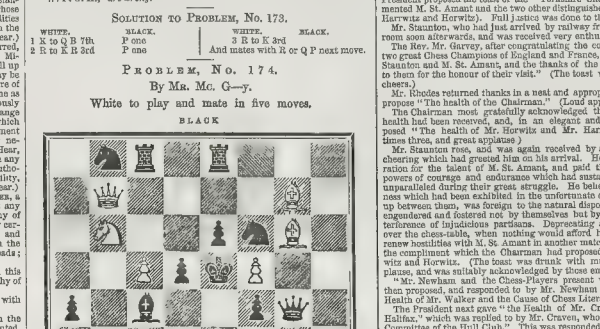
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1 K to Q B 7th	P one	3 R to K 3rd
2 R to K B 3rd	P one	And mates with R or Q P next move.

PROBLEM, NO. 174.

By MR. MC. G—y.

White to play and mate in five moves.

BLACK



WHITE.

GAMES PLAYED AT THE LATE CHESS MEETING IN YORKSHIRE.

The Chess Playing at meetings of this description is rarely of a very high character, but the three following games, if not remarkable for their profundity or brilliancy, are not devoid of interesting features, and will well repay examination. The first was played between M. St. Amant and Mr. Newham, and the other two were conducted simultaneously by Mr. Harwitz, without the sight of the Chess-board, against two of the best players in the Hull Chess Club.

WHITE. (Mr N.)	BLACK. (M St A.)	WHITE. (Mr. N.)	BLACK (M.ST.A.)
1. K P two	K P two	13. K Kt to Q 5th	Q B P takes Kt
2 K Kt to B 3rd	K B P two (a)	14. Q takes P (ch)	K to B sq
3. Kt takes K P (b)	Q to K B 3rd	15. Q B takes K Kt	Kt to Q 2nd
4. Q P two	Q P one	16. Q B to K 3rd	Q to K R 5th
5. K P takes Q B 4th	K P takes P	17. Q Kt takes P	Q takes K Kt P (f)
6. Q Kt to B 3rd	Q B P one	18. K R P one	Q to K R 5th
7. Q P one (c)	Q B to K B 4th	19. Kt to K Kt 3rd	Q R to Q B sq
8. K Kt to B 3rd	K Kt to R 3rd	20. Q B P one	Kt to K 4th
9 K Kt P two (d)	Q B to K Kt 3rd	21. Q R to Q sq	Q B to K sq
10. K B to K Kt 2nd	K B to K 2nd	22. Q R to Q 4th	Q B to Q B 3rd
11. Q P takes P	Castles	23. Q to K 6th	Q B to Q 2nd
12. Castles (e)	Q Kt P takes P	24. Q to Q 8th	Q B to Q B 3rd

Drawn game.

(a) This counter gambit is found as far back as Damiano, but appears to have been brought into vogue by Greco, the Calabrese after whom it is generally named. It is an extremely hazardous opening, and one we assume M. St. Amant would hesitate to venture against an antagonist of equal force with himself. For his own exemplons to it see "Le Palamede," of 1841, at the period when M. Des Chapelles proposed to adopt it in the match by correspondence with Paih.

(b) There is, however, although K B to Q B 4th may s.so be played advantageously If, however, instead of either of these moves, White take the Pawn with P, his opponent would reply with K P one, and have an embarrassing attack.

(c) The proper play is Q Kt takes K P, and the variations which then arise are of singular interest and beauty.

(d) This move will be found in the article on this opening in "Le Palamede," for 1842, and in Bilguer's" Handbuch," page 36

(e) We should have preferred Q to her 5th ch), with the object of presently taking the Q Kt P with Pawn.

(f) Black has played the latter few moves extremely well; for the position previously was much in favour of White.

GAME THE SECOND.—BETWEEN MR. HARWITZ AND MR. BODEN.

WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK. (Mr. B.)	WHITE (Mr H.)	BLACK (Mr. B.)
1. K P two	K P two	11. Q B to Kt 2nd	K Kt to R 3rd
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	12. P takes Q P	Q takes P
3. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q B 4th	13. B takes K Kt P	K R to Kt sq
4. Q Kt P two	K B to Kt 2nd	14. B to Q Kt 2nd	Castles
5. Q B P one	Q P one	15. Q Kt to B 3rd	Q B to K R 6th (b)
6. Castles	Q Kt to B 3rd	16. K Kt to K sq	K Kt to his 5th
7. Q B P one	K R P two	17. K Kt to B 3rd	K Kt takes K R P
8. P takes K P	K B to Q Kt 3rd	18. K Kt to K sq	R takes P (ch)
9. Q P one	Q Kt to K 2nd	19. Kt takes R	Q to K Kt 6th
10. K P one (a)	Q B to K Kt 5th	And Black wins.

(a) The advance of this Pawn is a most seductive move, but experience has long shown that it is not sound. If, indeed, it could be made with safety, the Evans' opening would be almost irresistible.

(b) This is the winning move.

GAME THE THIRD.—BETWEEN MR. HARWITZ AND MR. LUCAS.

WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. L.)	WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. L.)
1. K P two	K P two	18. Kt to R 7th	R to K B 2nd
2. P to K 4th	P to K 4th	19. Q B to K Kt 6th	Q to Q 2nd
3. K Kt to B 3rd	K Kt P two	20. Q P one	Q Kt to K 4th
4. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Kt 2nd	21. B takes P	Q takes Q
5. Castles	Q P one	22. R takes Q	R takes B
6. Castles	Q Kt to B 3rd	23. Kt takes R (ch)	B takes Kt
7. Q B P one	K R P two	24. R takes B	K Kt to Kt 3rd
8. K B P two	K B P one	25. Q R to B sq	R to K 2nd
9. Q Kt to R 3rd	K Kt P one	26. Kt to Q Kt 6th	Q B P one
10. K Kt to K sq	P to K B 6th	27. Kt to Q 4th	R to K B sq
11. P takes P	P takes P	28. Kt takes R	Kt takes R
12. Kt takes P	Q B to K Kt 5th	29. Kt to K B 5th (ch)	K takes P
13. Q to her Kt 3rd	K Kt to K 2nd	30. Kt to Kt 7th (ch)	K to K 2nd
14. K Kt to his 5th (a)	K P to B sq	31 Kt takes P P	K to his 3rd
15. K B (ch)	K to Q 2nd	32 Kt to Kt 7th	Kt takes P
16. B to K 6th ch (b)	B takes B	33. Kt checks	Kt takes Kt
17. Q takes B (ch)	K to his sq	34. R takes Kt

The game was prolonged for many moves, but finally terminated in White's favour.

(a) Very justly conceived. If Black take the Kt, Mate follows in three moves.

(b) With the board before him, Mr. Harwitz would, doubtless, have preferred playing Kt to K sixth.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

(HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.)

NO. 168. BY MR. NORRIS.

WHITE.	BLACK.
K at K Kt sq	K at K B 6th
Q at Q Kt sq	P at K 3rd
B at K Kt 5th
Ps at K 5th, & Q Kt 4th

White to move, and mate in three moves.

No. 169.—BY A DISTINGUISHED MEMBER OF THE ST. GEORGE'S CLUB.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE	BLACK
K at Q 8th	K at Q R 6th	Kt at Q 8 6th	Kts at K Kt 2nd,
R at K R 3rd	Rs at K R sq, and		and Q B sq
B at K B sq	K Kt sq		Ps at K Kt 4th, Q
			Kt 3d, & Q R 2d

White to play, and mate in three moves.

No. 160.—BY MR. CLABE.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at K Kt 3rd	K at his 5th	Ps at K R 2nd, and	Ps at K R 2nd,
Q at Q R 3rd	R at K Kt 2nd.	4th, and K B 2nd	and 4th, K B
B at Q B 8th	B at K Kt 3rd		2nd, and Q 6th

White compels Black to checkmate him in two moves.

THE YORKSHIRE CHESS ASSOCIATION.

THE Seventh Anniversary of this delightful Institution took place at Hull, on the 12th inst., and was very fully and respectably attended. The chair was taken by C. Frost, Esq., and many eminent chess players were present. After the accustomed toasts to the Queen and Royal Family, the Chairman read an interesting account of an interview which M. St. Amant had with Louis Philippe, in the course of which his Majesty expressed his love of the game of chess, and his desire to cultivate kindly and brotherly feelings between England and France. The President proposed the toast of the "Yorkshire Chess Association," and complimented M. St. Amant and the two other distinguished foreigners present (Messrs. Harwitz and Horwitz). Full justice was done to the toast.

Mr. Staunton, who had just arrived by railway from London, came into the room soon afterwards, and was received very enthusiastically.

The Rev. Harvey, after congratulating the company at the presence of the two great Chess Champions of England and France, proposed "The health of Mr. Staunton and M. St. Amant, and the thanks of the Yorkshire Chess Association to them for the honour of their visit." (The toast was received with reiterated cheers.)

Mr. Rhodes returned thanks in a neat and appropriate speech, and begged to propose "The health of the Chairman." (Loud applause.)

The Chairman most gratefully acknowledged the kindness with which his health had been received, and, in an elegant and complimentary speech, proposed "The health of Mr. Horwitz and Mr. Harrwitz." (Drank, with three times three, and great applause.)

Mr. Staunton rose, and was again received by a renewal of the enthusiastic cheering which had greeted him on his arrival. He expressed the highest admiration for the talent of M. St. Amant, and paid the sincerest tribute to those powers of courage and endurance which had sustained him in a manner almost unparalleled during their great struggle. He believed that much of the bitterness which had been exhibited in the unfortunate differences which had sprung up between them, was foreign to the natural disposition of both, and had been engendered and fostered not by themselves but by the interested, or unwise interference of injudicious partisans. Deprecating any further animosity except over the chess-table, when nothing would afford him greater pleasure than to renew hostilities with M. St. Amant in another match, he concluded by seconding the compliment which the Chairman had proposed in honour of Messrs. Harrwitz and Horwitz. (The toast was drunk with musical honours and loud applause, and was suitably acknowledged by those eminent players.)

"Mr. Newham and the Chess-Players present who are non-members," was then proposed, and responded to by Mr. Newham; who, in return, gave "the Health of Mr. Walker and the Cause of Chess Literature."

The President next gave "the Health of Mr. Craven and the Chess Club of Halifax," which was replied to by Mr. Craven, who proposed "the Secretary and Committee of the Hull Club." This was responded to by Mr. Clarke and the ex-President, Mr. Levett; the latter of whom proposed "the President and the Secretary of the London Chess Club," which was appropriately acknowledged by Mr Worrell. "The Rev. R. Garvey," "the Vice-President, B. Jacobs, Esq.," and "the Ladies" were severally toasted, and properly replied to.

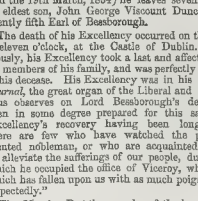
After the termination of the regular toasts, Mr. Staunton addressed the company, and in the course of his speech announced the gratifying fact, that, stimulated by the success which had attended those provincial re-unions, the London players were awakening from their lethargy, and the result was the prospect of an annual assemblage in the metropolis of all the leading players in the kingdom. As a preliminary step, the London Chess Club would hold their Anniversary Dinner on the 25th inst., and he had been deputed to give a special invitation to the company then present, and a promise that every thing would be done to render the meeting the most attractive which had ever been called together in the cause of Chess. This announcement was received with enthusiastic demonstrations of pleasure.

A discussion then ensued between Mr. Staunton, Mr. Craven (of Halifax), and Mr. Robinson (of Wakefield), on the subject of the most convenient day for holding the annual meetings of the Yorkshire Chess Association in future; and, upon the suggestion of Mr. Staunton, Monday, May 3rd, 1848, was appointed for the next Anniversary, which is to be held at Halifax.

The proceedings terminated shortly after. On the following day several interesting games were played, in which Mr. Staunton, Mr. Horwitz, M. St. Amant, and Mr. Harrwitz, took a part; and in the evening many of the most distinguished visitors were invited to a splendid entertainment at the house of the hospitable President, whose indefatigable kindness and urbanity were the theme of general eulogy to all who had the gratification of being present at, certainly, the most splendid assemblage of the Association which has yet been held.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

THE EARL OF BESSBOROUGH, LORD LIEUTENANT OF IRELAND.



JOHN WILLIAM PONSONBY, Earl of Bessborough, Viscount Duncannon, and Baron Bessborough in the Irish Peerage, Baron Ponsonby of Sysonsby in that of Great Britain, LORD LIEUTENANT OF IRELAND, and Vice Admiral of Munster, was the eldest son of Frederick, third Earl of Bessborough, by his wife, Henrietta, second daughter of John, first Earl Spencer: he was born on the 31st August, 1781.

The scion of an ancient and eminent Whig family, this son of the house of Bessborough soon made himself known as a forward supporter of his order. He was first elected to Parliament in 1805, and took a leading part in the Whig politics of the Lower House, until his elevation to an English Peerage, as Baron Duncannon, by creation in 1834. In that year also, his Lordship was Secretary of State for the Home Department. He has since been Lord Privy Seal, and Chief Commissioner of the Woods and Forests, and, on the recent accession of his party to office, his Lordship was appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and enjoyed in that high office universal and deserved popularity. He had previously succeeded as fourth Earl of Bessborough, on the demise of his father, in February, 1844. His Excellency was married on the 16th Nov., 1805, to Maria, third daughter of John, tenth Earl of Westmoreland, by whom (who died the 19th March, 1834) he leaves seven sons and five daughters; his eldest son, John George Viscount Duncannon, M.P., is now consequently fifth Earl of Bessborough.

The death of his Excellency occurred on the night of the 16th inst., at eleven o'clock, at the Castle of Dublin. About half-an-hour previously, his Excellency took a last and affectionate farewell of the several members of his family, and was perfectly conscious up to the moment of his decease. His Excellency was in his 66th year. The Freeman's Journal, the great organ of the Liberal and Catholic party in Ireland, thus observes on Lord Bessborough's death:—"The public have been in some degree prepared for this sad event, all hope of his Excellency's recovery having been long since abandoned; yet there are few who have watched the political career of the lamented nobleman, or who are acquainted with his untiring efforts to alleviate the sufferings of our people, during the critical period for which he occupied the office of Viceroy, who will not feel the blow which has fallen upon us with as much poignancy as if it had come unexpectedly."

The Morning Post thus speaks of the lamented nobleman—"Though his Excellency was in politics a decided Reformer, if not something more, his policy as Viceroy of Ireland generally met with the approbation of the Conservative party. He was a temperate politician, a warm friend, a kind and affectionate father, and, in every respect, an excellent man—a philanthropist in the true sense of the term."

ESCAPE OF THE PRISONERS FROM THE LIMOEIRO, AT LISBON.

THE LIMOEIRO, AT LISBON.

OUR Illustration shows the locality of the riot at Lisbon, on the 29th ult., described in our Journal of last week.

The scene of this adventure was the Limoeiro, the principal prison of Lisbon. The following are some additional details of the movement.

All the prisoners in the gaol were let loose upon the metropolis to the number (as appears from an official report of the Marquis de Fronteira, Civil Governor) of 1026! Of these, 150 were confined for political offences; the rest were, for the most part, criminals of the blackest die—assassins and robbers of revolting squalor, appalling looks, and hideous appearance. Some 50 were killed upon coming into collision with the troops, and two or three of the latter likewise suffered; 16 of the political prisoners remained in the gaol, declaring that they would not join in so outrageous an attempt. During the conflict with the military, which ensued shortly after the attempt to escape, 42 of the prisoners were retaken, and up to the evening of the 30th, 583 were retaken, besides 11 others.

The prison guard was partly corrupted, and partly overcome by force. The conspiracy broke forth at five o'clock in the evening, when about 40 armed men presented themselves at the principal entrance, and, experiencing but a slight resistance from the guard, broke in the outer iron door, and forced the gaoler to give up his keys. The prisoners within appear to have acted by previous concert with them, for all the inner doors were found open.

A portion of the inner guard resisted for a time, and then gave way, when the mob rushed in and released all the prisoners, as well the thieves and murderers from the enxovias, or dungeons, as those who were confined merely for political offences.

PARLIAMENTARY PORTRAITS.

MR. ROEBUCK, M.P.

MR. ROEBUCK is almost the only active representative of that class of opinions once stigmatized as "Radical" in Parliament. But he has made his reputation more by his personal abilities than as the representative of any class or school. Indeed, in the present state of abeyance into which abstract political questions have fallen in the House of Commons, they do not give any opportunity for action. The Ballot is never heard of, it well once to be an annual question. Extension of the suffrage is at times alluded to, but even Mr. Thomas Duncombe has dropped it, and does not venture beyond a motion for repealing the rate-paying clauses of the Reform Bill.

But men like Mr. Roebuck are never in want of a field for exertion; if we were asked to define his character, we should say he acts as a political censor, and in that capacity is exceedingly impartial in distributing admonition and warning to all parties. He will never consent to sacrifice a truth or a principle to the convenience, we may add, the feelings, of any man or Ministry. He constantly warned the Whig Ministry of the peril they ran by inaction and doing so little, as to make an impression in the country of their weakness and incapacity. He tried to spur them into something like boldness and decision, but they seemed chilled by office into perfect torpidity, and were only partially thawed in 1840 by the rather warmly expressed dissatisfaction of the more energetic liberals, while they were driven to do something by a failing Exchequer, so the Budget of 1841 came out, too late to save them, and the election of that year broke up the Government. To their successors, Mr. Roebuck gave equally good advice on various occasions. He dealt some severe blows at the system of bribery at elections, in a style that no man less bold than himself could have attempted, he put some half dozen men publicly to the question in a manner more edifying to the country than agreeable to themselves. The proceeding is embalmed in Hansard, and lives in the recollection of those who saw it as the richest piece of Parliamentary comedy ever witnessed; its object, the correction of vice, was perfectly "legitimate."

MR. ROEBUCK, M.P.

John Arthur Roebuck is the grandson of Dr. John Roebuck, a physician of considerable reputation in the last century, for his scientific attainments, particularly in chemistry. He discovered some improved methods of refining gold and silver, of manufacturing sulphuric acid, and other products. Being of a bold speculative temper, he established several extensive factories in England and Scotland, among them the celebrated Carron Iron Works, which still exist and flourish. He died at the age of 76. Mr. Roebuck's father was the third son of the Doctor: by the mother's side he is said to be descended from Tickell, the poet, the friend of Addison, and his Under Secretary of State.

His name first became known by the able papers he contributed to the Westminster Review, while he was studying the law; he also wrote a life of Mahomet, for the society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge. He was called to the bar in 1832, and in the same year was elected for Bath, on the principles to which he has always remained steadfast; every measure of improvement and progress has had his vote; and by his voice he has frequently urged the holders of power to move further and more freely: his sympathies are with vigorous action rather than cold and timid enunciation of principles. Sir R. Peel commands more of his commendation than Lord John Russell.

Mr. Roebuck went out to Canada when a mere boy, with his father-in-law, and only left that province in 1824, for the purpose of studying law in this country. One of his earliest contributions to the Westminster Review was an article on Canada, in which he showed that nearly all the evils connected with the civil government there are attributable to the constitution of the Council (the second branch of the Legislature), and that the remedy is to abolish the said Council. The Canadians, however, are in the habit of looking to the United States for models of all matters of Government, and therefore it is, that they demand an Elective Council, in order to render the second Chamber a Senate. In 1834, Mr. Roebuck brought the question before the House of Commons, and made an admirable exposition of the grievances of the Canadians, as explained in the "ninety-two resolutions" of the Assembly. At that time the Assembly had an agent here; a respected member of the Montreal bar, the Honourable Denis B. Viger. But he was invariably treated with neglect by the Colonial Office, so that the Assembly had become disgusted with the conduct of the Imperial Government, and a opposite in very generally prevailed to have no agent in England, in short, to cut with the Colonial Office. This was the feeling when the Conve... met at Montreal, in 1841. At this time, however, it was suggested that Parliament and the press had not been tried, that these two instruments had still some hope, and that through them one more effort should be made to impress upon Government and the people of England a due sense of the grievances to which the Canadians were subjected.

It was in consequence of this suggestion that Mr Roebuck was appointed Agent for Canada, a post which has exposed him to considerable and very unmerited obloquy.

Mr Roebuck is a most useful member of Parliament, if it were only for his ability of putting questions in a new and striking light during debate, and his indomitable courage in launching forth truths that more timid men would suppress. No matter in what quarter appears assumption of philanthropy, pretence, or anything that approaches (the word is now admitted) "humbug," Mr Roebuck assails and exposes it. No speech of the debate is better listened to, none more widely read than his; he is, as we have said, very impartial, the Conservatives have scarcely done cheering a clever hit at the Whigs, ere he pays them it with something quite as caustic. He labours under some physical disadvantages in person he is small and slight, and his voice is occasionally weak, so that his speeches are sometimes injured by the unavoidable imperfectness of the reports. He has recently, on more than one occasion, checked the forwardness of Lord George Bentinck, and his last speech was that of Monday night, in the debate on the change in the Poor Law Commission. It was leveled at Mr Ferrand, and those who, with more patience than knowledge, had dug up the Poor Law as all that is bad, and the "43rd of Elizabeth" as a law of peculiar indulgence. He described the evils of the old system, and defended the workhouse test as necessary to distinguish the impostor from the real object of distress. His view of society is one of stern reality; an incidental allusion to the practice of crushing bones drew from him a short sketch of some other horrid occupations, for which men even compete with each other—

"The 43rd of Elizabeth justly says, that those receiving relief shall be set to work. (An hon. Member—'Crushing bones.') There are many occupations of the poor which are painful to go through, and against which, if directed by the Poor Law Commissioners, there would be a great outcry. There is the occupation of the nightman; there is the occupation of the type-maker. He does not live above a very small number of years; but type-founders are to be had—they are got for money. No man is obliged to be in want of books, and yet every book that he gets, in the present state of the art, goes to seal the doom of some working man. It is true that philosophy may invent a mask for him who files iron, to prevent its affecting his lungs; but does the honourable member for Knaresborough get up and say, 'The poor of this country are filing iron, by which their lungs are destroyed?' He does get up and talk about 'devil's dust;' I never knew him talk about this dust. (Laughter.) The type-founder has no such protection, and to this hour he is the subject of disease. Take a painter; he is daily subjected to the destruction of the power of his limbs. Or what say you to the colliery? You will tell me you have relieved the women and children from working there; but you have not relieved the men. The men work many fathoms under ground, groping their way for miles along in an infected atmosphere; and you sit in your homes round your cheerful Christmas fire, and no parish talks about that. (Hear.) The fact is, this is all misplaced humanity, to give it the mildest name. The hon. member opposite [Mr. Wakley, we believe] may shake his head; has he never dissected a body? Society is unfortunately so constituted that this is the inevitable lot of humanity, though it may be that some are more fortunate than others, and labour at a happier vocation."

FOOD RIOTING IN JERSEY.—A food riot took place in Jersey on Monday morning. The disorder originated with the workmen of La Hasle Road, for whose advantage that extensive improvement was undertaken a few months ago. These incited others to outrage, and, as usual in such scenes, the culpable and the innocent were mingled together in the unruly mob. A few of the ringleaders having shouted out "To Le Quesne's mills," the whole body, now at least one thousand strong, proceeded in that direction, followed by Mr. Centenier Le Sully, and a few of the police. On their arrival at the town mills, Mr. Le Sully addressed the multitude, but no regard was paid to him, and the cry "forward" was given. They then proceeded to attack the mills of Mr. L. Quesne, with crowbars, pickaxes, and hammers. The door of the upper story at the back of the building resisted their attempts for a short time, until a long spar, used as a battering-ram, forced it open, and then began one of those shameful scenes, witnessed only on similar occasions among savages. Men, women, and children entered the mill, and commenced strewing wheat, barley, flour, and everything they could lay their hands on, about in all directions, ripping open the wheat sacks, and scattering the principal entrance to the mill, where a quantity of flour was ready for sending out, and this they proceeded to load in an empty waggon lying close by. Eight sacks of wheat were loaded in one cart, and nine sacks of flour in the above waggon. One of the ringleaders was observed cramming his mouth with wheat, crying out that he had not eaten for two days. News of this tumultuous meeting was promptly conveyed to the Lieutenant-Governor, and he immediately gave orders for the depôt of the 81st regiment to turn out in aid of the civil power and issued orders to warn the pensioners to hold themselves in readiness at a moment's notice. During this time a large number of the mob still remained in the Royal Square, the most part of them being very disorderly. Sir F. Le Breton, the Attorney General, having in vain addressed the multitude, was compelled to read the Riot Act. The 81st Depôt was under arms in a moment, and a detachment under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Creagh, proceeded in the direction of the Town Mills. On their arrival they blocked the road near the Robin Hood, and went and secured the Mills, leaving a picket there. The flour and wheat which had been removed about 500 yards were immediately brought back under an escort of military, and put back in the Mills. The police seized seven of the ringleaders, and placing them under the escort of 80 men, lodged them in gaol, followed by an immense mob. Many other prisoners were afterwards secured. Upwards of a hundred persons volunteered as special constables, and order was restored. A number of Irish labourers were among the malcontents.

EPSOM RACES—1847.

Time was: time is: time will be.—FRIAR BACON'S HEAD.

TIME WAS

With spirits gay I mount the box,
My fits up to their traces,
With elbows squared, and wrists turned down,
Dash off—for Epsom Races.
With BUXTON bit, bridoon so trim, three chesnuts and a grey,
Well coupled up my leaders now—yah, hip! we bowl away
Some push along with four in hand, while others drive at random,
In whiskey, buggy, gig, and dog-cart, curricle, and tandem
AS SUNG BY THE LATE CHARLES MATHEWS.

TIME IS.

Harness me down with your iron bands,
Be sure of your curb and rein,
For I scorn the power of your puny hands,
As the tempest scorns a chain.
I laugh at the panting courser's speed,
At the sweat of the toiling team,
No labour I reck, no distance heed—
I'm Space's spirit—Steam
AS CHANTED BY OURSELF.

TIME WILL BE.

?"

THE best social emblem, perhaps of the present—an imaginary point of time—was furnished by the condition of horse-racing from its institution as a National Sport, up to the first quarter of this century. As it was from the commencement, so it remained: no attempt was made to improve its details. You went to Newmarket, where it was a gracious dispensation of Providence if you got a dinner; where the existence of the animal you staked your money on could no more be known to you, till he came to the starting-post (and not then, unless you had a good telescope), than the state of the Emperor of Morocco's bile. You went to Epsom, and found the jockeys starting themselves; or to Doncaster, and saw them deciding how they came in; you went anywhere, and discovered, in all that related to the course, "confusion worse confounded." All change in our Olympics was eschewed—as heterodoxy—till reform became the fashion, and then it was perceived that racing, like "representation" of another kind, was susceptible of improvement. Forthwith a change came o'er our dream; that is to say, we awoke—and the machinery of the turf became anon as complete as that of stocking weaving. From chaos it grew to a science; from a science, it has become a mystery; perhaps a little more—what it is destined to be—who shall tell? A few days ago, the great Metropolitan meeting was celebrated on Epsom Downs; how altered in present economy—how pregnant with future revolution! It was the last occasion on which the Derby should appear on the scene immortalized by the mighty artists of the—boot and breeches—where many a flying courser has rivalled the feats of Pegasus—of Lemprière, not of Bell's Life. It was the first occasion wherein all the elements were pressed into the service of the pageant—earth—air—fire—water—steamers to London Bridge—locomotives to Croydon and Epsom—for the atmospheric had given itself airs, and left the line—of rail. And by these appliances and means did tens of thousands seek the scene of action; for, not only has the facility of access multiplied exceedingly, but also the popular desire to take advantage of it. The almost general prevalence of speculating on the great racing events of the season by lotteries and sweeps (without one of which there is not a village ale-house from the Land's End to John o' Groats), draws those to a race-course who take no delight in the sport, as well as the holiday guests. A miscellaneous mass it is, whereof the composition, perhaps, contains too scanty a portion of legitimate pleasure. . . . . .

THE RAILWAY.—STRUGGLE FOR TICKETS.

By Epsom Races, the million understand the Derby day; the general public make the meeting consist of but two—the anniversaries of the Derby and Oaks. Thus, Tuesday last did not draw a dozen equipages to the Surrey Downs, albeit the Craven is an event of account to those who are interested in the state of the odds on the leading Derby horses, being a sort of stable trial. It brought a field of eight to the post, and was won cleverly by Mr. Mostyn's Crosier; Spider, that ran second, having stopped when collared.

The Woodcote Stakes—the first south country two-year race of importance—brought out a large lot of young ones, and was won in a style very far from common, by Mr. B. Green's Flatcatcher; an animal that it must not be remembered forms one of his master's Derby lot for next year. He was bred by the late Lord Westminster, is by Touchstone out of Van Amburgh's dam, and passed into the hands of Mr. Green from Mr. Ford, who bought him when the Eaton stud was disposed of.

The Manor Stakes and the Horton call for no observation. The wind is at East—the rain falls coldly—and at six p.m., once more the hill is deserted—all sorts of rumours rife among the gossips who wend their ways home. Foremost among these was the fact that a felonious attempt to "nobble" one of the leading favourites, in a great training, had been discovered; that the perpetrators were in actual custody; that the promoters, or instigators, were well known; and that the matter would be presently in a criminal court. It is a consummation devoutly to be wished! They hung a poor wretch, called Dawson, for poisoning some race-horses at Newmarket. It will be a good hour for the Turf when a few of its rich rogues are transported for the system by which their wealth was obtained.

Wednesday—the holiday of holidays—the anniversary of pleasurable and painful excitement—dawned, as behoved an occasion fraught with so many fortunes. While yet it was early morning, by all approaches a crowd was streaming to the railway. Epsom was to be made in an hour for a few shillings, according to the class. Oh! that "premier pas qui coute!" How much did it cost full many a belle and beau that struggled and strove and fought and fainted to pay for their tickets?..... You cannot conceive the scene—no imagination could. Lo! the pencil has made the essay, for your learning this year, and in seasons to come. As morning wore on, the road filled fast and furious. We found no change in that. Whatever the rival lines of rail might be drawing, Kennington-gate was itself still—and the dust rose as the incense of an Olympic sacrifice. Then there was no falling off, but rather in-

(Continued on page 328.)

THE ARRIVAL AT EPSOM.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, May 23 Whit Sunday.—Pentecost.
MONDAY, 24 Whit Monday.—Birth of Queen Victoria, 1819.
TUESDAY, 25 Whit Tuesday.—Princess Helena Augusta Victoria born, 1846.
WEDNESDAY, 26. Oxford Term begins, at noon.
THURSDAY, 27.—Cambridge Term divides.—Ven. Bede.
FRIDAY, 28.—Ember Week.
SATURDAY, 29.—Restoration of King Charles II., 1660.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAY 29.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M h m 23 9 0	A h m 9 32	M h m 10 3	A h m 10 33	M h m 11 0	A h m 11 34	M h m * A h m 0 29
A h m 0 44	M h m 1 9	A h m 1 38	M h m * A h m 2 8	A h m 2 38	M h m 3 8	A h m 3 43

* At Midnight. * Thursday, May 27, There is no high tide during the morning.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"J. S. H."—The authorship of "Robin Adair" is a vexed question.
"A Subscriber."—The times of the Sun rising or setting at different places depend on the latitude of the place and the position of the Sun with respect to the Equator. On the days of the Equinox, the times will be very nearly the same at every place in the British Isles. Between March 21 and Sept. 21, he will rise earlier and set later at all places N. of London; and he will rise earlier and set later at all places S. of London. During the other months of the year, he rises later and sets earlier at all places N. of London; and he rises earlier and sets later at all places S. of London than the times at London. The amount of these differences from the times at London are stated, for places on different parallels of latitudes, in the "Illustrated London Almanack" of the present year. If "A Subscriber" applies a correction on account of his longitude, he will do wrong; for, by so doing, he would deduce the times at London, that the several phenomena occurred at his place The time to be noted is that of the centre of the Sun appearing in the horizon.
"B. B." is thanked for the hint; though the pressure of other claims prevents our entertaining it.
"L. M." —Mdlle. Lind's engagement will extend through the present Opera Season.
"Omax," Downpatrick.—Hemingway's "Panorama of Wales."
"An Irish Ignoramus." Grease may be removed from paper by spirit of turpentine; or by blotting paper, and the heated blade of a knife.
"J. B. M." Maidenhead, is thanked for his Sketch of a Propeller; but we have not room for it.
"G. H. S" had better use Spirit of Wine.
"W. S." Portsmouth.—Roberts's Hotel
"Old Caudle" is thanked for his good wishes.
"H." —The lmprompts will not suit.
"Y. Z." Liverpool.—The Daguerreotype Apparatus is engraved in No. 68 of our Journal.
"E. L. C." Weston.—No.
"J. W. A." Matlock. London, considerably.
"E. E." Sidestone.—We do not know. A note to the Secretary to the Company would, doubtless, be replied to.
"F. W." Exeter—Ireland.
"Felix Resme," Gibraltar, is thanked for the Sketches; but, we have not room.
"One of the Unlearned." Germanicus was the son of the Emperor Nero Claudius Drusus Germanicus: his victories in Germany procured him the surname of Germanicus, which had been first bestowed upon his father.
"A Constant Reader" had better apply to an East India Agent; or, on board the Steamer.
"Bron-yr-Avon," Cwm-Llynfi, will, perhaps, forward the Sketch, and description.
"Sea-dance" —A sloop and a cutter are rigged alike. The name of a sloop is popularly applied to any small ship; and the small boat attached to a ship of war is called a cutter.
"J. W." Wadsworth.—Not at present.
"J. B. M." Newport, should apply to the Lord Steward of the Household.
"A Subscriber." The belief that it is illegal to carry an Air Gun is a popular error. "Knowle's Guide to Trade: The Bookbinder."
"Engineer," Blandford.—Under consideration.
"Q. E. X.", Datchet, has no legal remedy.
"A Constant Subscriber," Abergavenny, is thanked for the Map, though we cannot spare room for it.
"Pittacus."—See the Explanation of the Old and New Style, in Reply to "Sigma," Perth, in our Journal of May 1
"T. B"—We have not time to inquire into the matter.
"L. M. L."—The questionable existence of the Muse of "Row thy boat Norman" is a fit subject for the Society devoted to Musical Antiquities.
"A Constant Reader," Glaster Creavon.—Yes.
"Hyram's" letter has been forwarded to the Agent. The complaint should also be addressed to the Post Office.
"Z. B. N." "The Barrel Bore-hive," by Shell, Lamb-street, Spitalfields.
"J. B. W." Weymouth.—The chance of the Illustrators must rest, solely, upon the merit of the work.
"H. H. H." —The wood-cut impression is discouragingly ineffective.
"Pietro," Newport. —The "Encyclopædia of Domestic Economy," published by Longman and Co., is a complete but somewhat costly work.
"P. G. M." —Our latest Edition is printed on Saturday night.
"T." Scarborough.—See Reply in our Journal of last week.
"W. H. M." Salfast.—We cannot advise.
ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.—"A Member" is thanked; but his report did not reach us in time
"W. W." Sherborne.—The cost of the Drawing will be from two to three guineas.
"C. H. S."—We believe not.
"A. P. Z."—We cannot furnish the numbers correctly.
"J. W." Bristol, is thanked: a Sketch of the Plant would be acceptable.
"H. S." Cheltenham.—Mr. C. Cochrane, Candidate for Westminster, at the next Election.
"X. Y. Z."—It will not be possible to engrave in our Journal, either of the Pictures suggested.
"A Correspondent" must be in error about the difference between our Country and Town Editions: it must be fanciful or accidental
"J. W. M." Swansea.—We cannot reasonably be expected to furnish the names of the authors of works published anonymously, and but little known.
"Beta," Manchester, should write to Mr. Lumley, bookseller, Chancery-lane.
"J. P." Dover.—The price of admission to the Gallery of Her Majesty's Theatre is 3s. In every other part of the house, evening dress is indispensable.
"An Inquirer," Fenthill Gifford, will find our estimate of "Phonography," in No. 234 of our Journal
"S. S. W." is correct: the lines are the opening of "The Last Man," by Campbell.
"Pietro" and "Allegmane." —Lebahn's "German in One Volume;" containing Grammar, Exercise, Vocabulary, &c.
"F. P."—Mr. Macready first appeared in London, at Covent Garden Theatre, Sept. 16, 1818, as Orestes, in "The Distressed Mother."
"Reta."—Robin Adair was an Irishman, and was not related to Robin Grey. He was a native of Wicklow; and his harp may still be seen in the noble hall of his local descendant, Sir George Holden, Bart., at Hollybrooke House, near Bray.
"Σαμιδοτηρ," Liverpool.—Lists of Governors who have presentations for the year to Christ's Hospital, may be obtained at the Counting-house, early in the year.
"R. H."—St. Sophia.
"H. C."—The Lines are by Canning:—

> "Give me the crest, the avowed, the manly foe—
> Bold I can meet, perhaps return, the blow
> But of all plagues, good Heaven! thy wrath can send,
> Save me, oh save me, from the candid friend!"

"T. G. W." Charles II. crown may be worth 7s. or 8s.; but will depends on condition.
"Anne Hope."—Your Coin is a Sixpence of Elizabeth, of no value to melt.
"P. Quye."—Your silver seal is about the Commonwealth period. Apply to Heralds' College, to learn the family it belonged to.
"L. M. Sargent, Boston," should prepay his letters Back Numbers cannot be sent abroad per post.
"Heraldicus."—In naming those who are entitled to use supporters, we limited the number within legal bounds. Our Correspondent is quite right in his statement that there are several ancient families who carry those heraldic additions on the ground of prescriptive right—a right we should be very sorry to deny. Among them is the distinguished house of Fulford of Fulford, on Devon, whose respected representative, Colonel Baldwin Fulford, died a few weeks since, when we gave an engraving of the shield of arms and supporters.
"M. R. C. S."—The names of all places within the jurisdiction of the Small Debts Courts may be ascertained in "The Complete Book of the County Courts," by Peter Barker, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.
"Sovitator."—The College of Arms does not, we apprehend, take cognizance of "Cockades."
"A Student" In "Gil Blas," the s is pronounced.
"Ingus-shire." Wood Engravers' Tools are sold by Messrs. Fenn, Newgate-street.
"Ecclesiast."—A full correction of the Error in the House of Lords' Cat-hght, last week, shall appear in our next
"A Correspondent."—A Daguerreotype Apparatus may be purchased at from ten guineas to £50, of Knight, of Foster-lane, or Watkins and Hill, Charing-cross.
"W. M."—Your Sketch is from an early Norman abbey counter, or abbey piece, coined about the 15th century. It is so extremely common, as to be of no value
"A Musical Reader." —There is but one Festival this year—the Triennial Gathering of the Choirs of Hereford, Worcester, and Gloucester . which will be held, this year, at the last-mentioned town
"A. G." Winchfield. Morse and Louise Taglioni are cousins, and are nieces of the Taglioni
"An Old Subscriber." —Your many-headed daisy is an example of several flower-stalks being agglom rated together: we have often observed the same occurrence in other plants.
"Balfour." Fly-fishing commences at a different period in every stream. The best criterion is to watch and observe when the fish rise to the natural fly. Fly-fishing is generally practised between April and October; but, occasionally, as early as February. The May fly (Ephemera Vulgata), according to Gilbert White's Calendar, appears between the 3rd and 14th of June
"C. H."—To kill the Gooseberry Caterpillar, try infusion of tobacco, or a mixture formed by boiling flowers of sulphur with quick-lime and water, and apply a little to the parts affected. It is very difficult to destroy these pests on a large scale
"Amicus," Bath, should obtain an introduction to a house, through some friend who is a customer; that being the only method of ensuring attention.

 PORTRAITS of the WINNERS of the DERBY and the OAKS will appear in our Next Week's Number.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, MAY 22, 1847.

THE week has been a very active one in Parliament and out of it. The Irish Poor Law was passed by the House of Lords on Tuesday evening, after a steady and persevering opposition, which, successful at first, has resulted in nothing, since a subsequent vote reversed the decision come to on Lord Monteagle's amendment; Lord Stanley's opposition broke down in most signal failure, and all the other attempts to change the provisions of the bill have merely produced a few small amendments, some of which will, it is supposed, be expunged by the Commons before the bill receives the Royal Assent. From this time forth the basis of society in England and Ireland is the same, or as nearly the same as a mere law can make it; the law itself will not do all that is wanted; but the absence of legal rights, and legal liabilities, will no longer present that void in which the social elements were struggling in a total chaos; there is now a law, a system at least begun; and if there is any capability of improvement left, its development will be assisted by a law that, by something like gravitation, will make some at least of the property of the country descend to the classes beneath, in the shape of legal relief. A Poor Law has been the salvation of England; it will be strange indeed if it should prove the ruin of Ireland. Ruin, however, is confidently prophesied; confiscation and destruction it is said await all Irish landed properties; such lamentable stories as the tenants of the scarlet cushions and golden roofs of the House of Peers, have to tell about themselves and their position, were never heard before; there they sit in their splendour with black and hideous ruin before them; and, if they could be believed, one would think they were the class to be pitied, not the famine-stricken peasantry. At this present period, there cannot well be a greater affliction than the possession of a few thousands or tens of thousands a-year of Irish property. Estates in Ireland are mere myths, fictions; rentals are fabulous; and returns from the land in shape of money are matter of legend and tradition only: there were such things once, but at present they are doubtful, and henceforth they will cease to exist: an Irish landlord will possess an estate much as the man feasted who was invited by the Barmecide to the imaginary dinner. Yet, with all this, there is a calmness and quietude in the manner in which ruin is contemplated, that looks as if there were still a chance of escape; and, though the Peers speak as if the best thing that could be done with an Irish estate would be to get rid of it as soon as possible on any terms, to any one who would take it off their hands, yet there are symptoms of holding on a while longer. Some remaining thousands will still flow in, even after the rates are paid; and, on the whole, the affliction of an estate, even an Irish estate, may continue to be endured. So, with dreadful forebodings of what is about to happen, the Poor Law is passed—and the Empire is ruined for the fiftieth time.

It is strange enough that not one change of any importance is ever made without the same sinister forebodings; England is perpetually being destroyed by its Ministers; we have ourselves seen five or six crises of utter and irretrievable ruin, and heard on at least as many occasions, that the "Sun of England" was about "to set for ever;" yet the changes came, and the orb still keeps its place, as high as ever in the zodiac of nations, a little clouded now and then, but no nearer its decline. The truth is, every party and section affected by a change thinks itself the Empire, and imagines that all the immense mass will feel the change as it does itself. The mass, on the contrary, feels in no such manner, but frequently breathes and works more freely, as if it had by an effort thrown off a weight of difficulty and oppression, and known nothing of the ruin which has fallen upon it, except what it sees in the debates. The Repeal of the Test and Corporation Acts, Catholic Emancipation, and Parliamentary Reform, were all so many leaps into the abyss of national perdition; and yet, here we are still, living and working as no other nation on the face of the earth can do; the only difference being that classes hate and oppress each other a little less than of yore.

We must, therefore, make a large abatement from the prophecies of ruin that are so freely made; we have seen two measures pass this week in the midst of such predictions—the Irish Poor-Law and the Factory Bill. In the debate on the latter measure, Lord Brougham was the vates of woe; he proved conclusively that from this hour the manufacturing greatness of England is gone! Grant only half his premises, and his conclusions must be accepted as correct; and yet the bill has passed, the ruin risked, and the process of destruction begun. Why is this? Because there is an instinctive, rather than a reasoning, persuasion, that the business of life never goes quite according to mathematical calculations; there is always some cause disturbing and falsifying them; and, above all, there seems to be a power that delights to bring the predictions of statesmen and the plans of Governments to naught, as if to show them both how slight, after all, is the fancied influence of men, compared with the real influence of Nature and circumstances. Could half the Generals who have studied the art of massacring by rule and calculation tell exactly how or why they gained a battle? Was a Chancellor of the Exchequer ever known to be precisely correct in his Budget? Have they not often been egregiously wrong? Sir Robert Peel, the best financier, perhaps, of Europe, under-rated the success of a great experiment by more than one half!

As to general policy, it is almost safe to conclude that nothing will happen just as it is expected to do. We have always great hopes of a measure, when we hear that it will ruin everybody, for the chances are it will do exactly the reverse.

The repeal of the Corn Laws is a signal instance of the fallacy of positive predictions on any side. We remember the elaborate calculations, the carefully drawn up tables of figures, quoted by landed gentlemen in the House of Commons, to prove that England would be totally ruined by the abundance of grain that would pour in upon her; she would be fed to death—destroyed by fat and repletion—the most cruel death in the calendar. Horrid harvests were waving in indefinite regions—the south of Russia, and the Valley of the Missisippi, were the favourite localities—which would cross the oceans, to compass the annihilation of Britain with wheat at 39s. a quarter, with profit to the shippers. For years and years was this said by many, and believed by more; yet the Corn Laws were abolished, and lo! all the predictions end in wheat 120s. a quarter—farmers making fortunes, and rents anything but on the decline. Suppose this fact had been predicted, as what would follow on the total suspension of the corn duty; would it not have been scouted and ridiculed at 17, Bond-street, where the Agricultural Interest met, and, resolving to be ruined, "defied the world to save them?" To talk to them of there being a chance of things not being so bad after all, was to insult the "practical men," who knew better than everybody else; yet here they are now, with prices—for which they fought—higher than at any period since the last war! The same infirmity marks all the efforts of man to "take a bond of fate." It cannot be done even by the greatest and most sagacious intellects. When Louis the Fourteenth revoked the Edict of Nantes he firmly believed it would be a heavy blow at Protestantism; but, in its result, it immeasurably strengthened the great Protestant Power of Europe, and did an injury to France that has never been recovered to this day. Napoleon was ruined, not by the policy, diplomacy, or military skill of his enemies, but by a Russian winter beginning a month sooner than he had reckoned on! In the same way we may go through history and find perpetually recurring instances of human wisdom, calculation, and policy baffled and turned to naught! So, as none of the great changes of the past have brought the destruction predicted from them, we have hopes that England will survive the Irish Poor Law and the Factory Bill, though the Irish Proprietors and Lord Brougham see in them the end of all things.

THE "Derby Day" was, at the instance of Lord George Bentinck, made a holiday by the House of Commons. We do not think anything was lost thereby, for generally Wednesday is set apart for the members who legislate, to use an American phrase, "on their own hook," and on that day produce the abortions that are doomed to be strangled, or see that operation performed on them "on a farther stage of the bill." It is a matter of Parliamentary courtesy to allow a member to throw his crotchet into the form of a bill, and propose it; the Government always allow that to be done, with clear warning, however, that it will crush it out of existence as soon as possible. The uniformity with which this is done is very amusing; and the discussions which precede the coup de grace generally take place on Wednesdays, when, towards the end of the session especially, there is something like a massacre of the innocents, and bills that have lingered on in their predestined existence from the beginning of the Session are withdrawn, negatived, or talked down out, with great vigour and promptitude. So far, then, a blank Wednesday is no great loss. But Lord George Bentinck claims for the "Derby Day" an immunity from work, on the ground that it has been kept as a holiday "for half a century." His Lordship is in error here; we believe this is the first instance for some years of the House not meeting on this particular Wednesday; in the Session of the Income Tax, one of the severest debates took place on the "Derby Day," and on other occasions the usual average of business was transacted. Perhaps his Lordship has generally made it a holiday as far as he was himself concerned, and thinks everybody else did the same. It is, in fact, almost a national jubilee, and certainly a metropolitan one. The Session is advanced, the Whitsuntide recess at hand, most of the great measures of the Session are disposed of, and, moreover, the Parliamentary mind is growing feverish and uneasy at the approach of the dissolution, and anxiety as to what may be the verdict of the Hustings; unless real business is before the House, it is difficult to command a sufficient attendance of Members, who have a perfect knowledge of what measures are moonshine and what are not; so to make a holiday of the "Derby Day" was about as wise a use as they could make of it.

THE WEATHER.

The weather during the past week has been a continuation of that of the preceding week, it having been uninterruptedly fine all the time, with occasional gentle rains, and vegetation has progressed very much; so much so, that the whole aspect of the country has changed within the last fortnight.

On Friday was a fine day, the wind was S.S.W.; the sky was cloudy during the morning, the evening was clear; the average temperature of the day was 57½°; and the lowest reading on Grass was 38°. Saturday was a fine day, about three-fourths of the sky was covered by cloud, consisting of cumuli and cumulostrati; some rain fell in the evening; the wind was S.W.; the average temperature of the day was 57½°; the lowest reading on grass was 41°. Sunday was a cloudy day throughout, with a fine rain falling during the morning; the wind was from the S.W.; the average temperature of the day was 56½°; and the lowest reading on grass was 46°. Monday was a bright fine day, the wind from S.W.; its average temperature was 60½°; and the lowest reading of the thermometer on grass was 44°. Tuesday was a fine but cloudy day, the wind was from S.W.; a fine rain was falling during the greater part of the evening; the average temperature of the day was 60½°, and the lowest reading on grass was 38½°. Wednesday was a fine day; it was dull and cloudy early in the morning, but bright and warm afterwards; the wind was from the W.; the average temperature of the day was 57°; the lowest reading on grass was 37½°. Thursday was a cloudy day principally, with occasional light showers of rain; the direction of the wind was W.S.W. and W., and the air was rather cold, the average temperature of the day was 58½°; the lowest reading on grass was 43½°. The average temperatures of the week was 58½°, being between 3° and 4° above that of the season.

The extreme thermometrical readings each day were—

Friday,	May 14 the highest during the day was	67½ deg. and the lowest was	48 deg
Saturday,	May 15	68	47
Sunday,	May 16	67½	52½
Monday,	May 17	70½	50½
Tuesday,	May 18	72½	48
Wednesday,	May 19	67½	46½
Thursday,	May 20	66½	50

Blackheath, Friday, May 21, 1847. J. G.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

Her Majesty and Prince Albert, the Duchess of Kent, the Ladies and Gentlemen of the Court, and the Domestic Household, attended divine service on Sunday last in the private chapel, Buckingham Palace. The Hon. and Rev. C. Leslie Courtenay officiated.

The Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, and the Princess Alice, took an airing on Monday in an open carriage and four. His Royal Highness Prince Albert rode out on horseback, attended by Capt. the Hon. A. H. Gordon

The Queen and Prince Albert rode out on horseback on Tuesday, attended by the Hon. Miss Stanley, Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. C. B. Phipps, and Capt. the Hon. A. H. Gordon.

Her Majesty, accompanied by the Princess Alice, and attended by the Viscountess Canning, took an airing on Wednesday, in an open carriage-and four. His Royal Highness Prince Albert rode out on horseback at the same time. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Princess Sophia, at Kensington. The Royal dinner party at Buckingham Palace on Wednesday, included his Serene Highness the Prince of Leiningen, Prince Lichtenstein, the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch, the Duke and Duchess of Bedford, the Marquis and Marchioness of Abercorn, and Captain Francis Seymour.

Her Majesty will give a grand vocal and instrumental concert, at Buckingham Palace, on the 28th instant, at which Mdlle. Jenny Lind and the principal artistes of her Majesty's Theatre will assist. The invitations were issued from the Lord Chamberlain's office on Saturday last.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER.—Her Majesty the Queen Dowager had an evening party at Marlborough House, on Monday, at which the Queen and Prince Albert were present. Her Majesty and his Royal Highness were accompanied by his Serene Highness the Prince of Leiningen. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent and his Royal Highness Prince George were also among the company.

VISCOUNTESS PALMERSTON'S ASSEMBLY.—Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston received at dinner, last Saturday evening, his Excellency the American Minister, the Earl of Clare and Lady Isabella Fitzgibbon, Viscount Melbourne, Viscount and Viscountess Mahon, Lord Howard de Walden, Lord and Lady Ashley, Sir R. Shafto Adair, and Sir Augustus, Lady, and Miss C. Clifford. Her Ladyship subsequently had an evening party.

DINNER AT LANSDOWNE HOUSE. The Marquis and Marchioness of Lansdowne received a select party at dinner on Sunday, at Lansdowne House. The noble Marquis, as Lord President of the Council, will give a full dress banquet on the 27th instant, to a large circle of Peers, in honour of the Queen's Birthday.

SIR ROBERT AND LADY PEEL.—The Right Hon. Sir R. Peel gives a parliamentary ball on the 27th instant, to a very numerous circle. The right hon. Baronet and Lady Peel and family left Whitehall-gardens on Monday for Drayton Manor, Staffordshire, from whence they return to town on the 26th instant.

THE DISSOLUTION OF PARLIAMENT.—The latest rumour is, that Parliament will be dissolved on the 19th or 26th of next month, if public business admits; if not, the dissolution will not be later than the first week in July.

DEATH OF SIR CHARLES CHICHESTER.—The Canada papers announce the death of Col. Sir Charles Chichester, commanding the 81st Regiment at the city of Toronto, after only four days' illness. The Montreal Courier says, "he was preparing to proceed to England, and expected to have been able to start on the 1st of next month (June)."

POSTSCRIPT.

OVERLAND CALCUTTA MAIL.

TELEGRAPHIC DISPATCH.

We have received the Moniteur Parisien of Thursday night, with the following Telegraphic Dispatch:

"The news brought by the Indian Mail comes to the 14th April.

"Lord Hardinge arrived at Simlah the 27th March. Sir Frederick Currie arrived at Calcutta on the 1st of April, and took the oath as third member of the Indian Council.

"Sir Willoughby Cotton, Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, had arrived at his post, and immediately taken the command.

"The Governor-General had allocated £600 per annum for establishing schools in India.

"The Punjaub was perfectly tranquil, and nothing new had occurred in Affghanistan. The death of Akbar Khan was still attributed to poison.

"Considerable disturbances had broken out at Undh and the neighbouring districts. The Government of Nizam had given rise to complaints."

ALLEGED DEATH OF MR. O'CONNELL.

The Moniteur Parisien of Thursday evening, on the authority of a letter from Nice, mentions the death of Mr. O'Connell, "on his arrival at Genoa." It is to be remarked that this information is given in rather a vague form, there being no date to the letter; but, as the Moniteur Parisien is an organ of the Government, the news may have been received officially by telegraph, which would account for the brevity of the announcement. We fear, therefore, that the rumour is well-founded, as a letter received direct from Genoa, dated May 13 (see page 331), mentions that Mr. O'Connell was in an alarming condition. On the other hand, it will be perceived by the letter, that the event could not have taken place immediately "on the arrival of Mr. O'Connell at Genoa," as the paragraph in the Moniteur Parisien seems to indicate

HOUSE OF COMMONS: FRIDAY

THIRD READINGS OF RAILWAY BILLS.—The following Railway Bills were read a third time and passed:—The Caledonian and Dumbartonshire Junction Railway (Deviations between Dunteeth and Bowling, &c.) Bill: the Dublin, Drumdrum, and Garbarnham Railway (Extension to Stephen's Green) Bill; the Dublin and Drogheda Railway (Branch from Navan to Kells) Bill; the General Terminus and Glasgow Harbour Railway Branches Bill; the Glasgow, Barrhead, and Nelston Direct, and Glasgow Southern Terminal Bill; Railways Amalgamation Bill; the Great Western Railway (Branch to join the West London Junction Railway and Metropolitan Railway, London Railway, and Branches to Hammersmith, and to join the London and South Western Railway near Lambeth) Bill; the Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland (Newcastle, Ambleknock, and Baltrasna Branches) Bill; the Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland (Extension from Athlone to Galway) Bill; the Newry and Enniskillen Railway Bill; the Norfolk Railway (from Thetford to the Lowestoft Railway near Reedham, with a Branch to Halesworth) Bill; the Swansea Valley Railway Bill; the Waterford, Wexford, Wicklow, and Dublin Railway Bill; the Windsor, Staines, and South Western Railway (Staines to Ascot, and Wokingham with Branches) Bill; and the Windsor, Staines, and South Western Railway (Richmond to Windsor, &c.) Bill; and the Birmingham and Oxford Junction Railway Bill.

ABANDONMENT OF THE HEALTH OF TOWNS BILL.—In answer to a question from Mr. MACKINNON, Lord MORPETH said he was convinced there was no chance of carrying the Health of Towns Bill through Parliament during the present session. He should not, therefore, proceed further with the measure for the present.

THE POOR LAWS ADMINISTRATION BILL.

The order of the day having been read for resuming the adjourned debate on the second reading of the Poor Laws Administration Bill,

Mr. P. BORTHWICK rose and addressed the House in opposition to the measure.

Mr. VILLIERS spoke in support of the bill.

The debate was carried on throughout the night, and, on a division, the second reading was agreed to by 218 to 42

The House, at a late hour, adjourned for the Whitsuntide recess, till Friday, the 28th instant.

DEPARTURE OF THE COURT FOR CLAREMONT.—The Queen left town yesterday afternoon for Claremont, where her Majesty, with his Royal Highness Prince Albert, will remain until Tuesday.

THE LORD LIEUTENANT OF IRELAND.—The Queen held a Privy Council on Thursday, at which the Earl of Clarendon received his appointment as Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland.

BANQUET TO THE EIGHT LIGHT DIVISION TO SIR HARRY SMITH.—On Thursday, a grand banquet was given at Willis's Rooms, by the officers of the Light Division, to Major-General Sir Harry Smith, the hero of Aliwal. The guests comprised the gallant veterans who have seen service among the battles of the Peninsula, and elsewhere. The Duke of Wellington was unable to attend, in consequence of being previously engaged. The banquet went off with great enthusiasm. The Duke of Richmond was in the chair. Various toasts, bearing reference to the military achievements of the British army in the Peninsular wars and in the campaigns succeeding it, were proposed, and received with due honours.

FREEDOM OF THE CITY TO SIR H. SMITH.—At a Court of Common Council held on this day, the freedom of the City was presented, in a gold box value 100 guineas, to Sir H. G. Smith, for his eminent services in India. When the gallant General and his lady and daughter, who expanded him, retired, their egress was accompanied by the most enthusiastic applause.

PARTIAL DESTRUCTION OF THE "SKEW" RAILWAY BRIDGE, NEAR HAWWELL.—The well known "Skew" railway bridge, on the Birmingham and Bristol road, near Hanwell, and the singular construction of which is so well known to the passenger who travels frequently by the Great Western line, was partially destroyed, on Thursday morning, by fire, or it is supposed, from the red hot cinders of the locomotive attached to the short train that left Maidenhead at 15 minutes past eleven o'clock.

SHIPWRECK AND LOSS OF SIXTY LIVES.—On the 9th of April, at eight o'clock in the evening, the French brig La Clarisse, of Granville, having on board sixty-nine passengers, and a crew of fourteen, was lost on the Phibbert rocks, in one of the entrances to the harbour of St. Pierre, Newfoundland. The brig had missed the south-east passage into the harbour, having been driven to windward The violence of the waves was such as to preclude the possibility of any assistance from the colonists. The number of victims amounts to sixty.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

PORTUGAL.

We regret to find, by letters from Lisbon to the 15th instant, that the insurrectionary struggle in Portugal is not over, as was hoped and expected, but is likely to be indefinitely prolonged, as the Junta of Oporto have been foolish enough to reject Colonel Wylde's proposals of adjustment.

It was generally believed at Lisbon that Don Miguel had landed at Villeconde, from an English brig, and that he had proceeded to Oporto.

The Queen's troops had been starved out of the Castle of Viana, after sustaining a siege of 56 days. Most of the officers and men were taken prisoners, but the Queen and five officers escaped on board the Jackal, from which they were transferred to the Polyphemus, and conveyed to Lisbon.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

REPRESENTATION OF MARYLEBONE.—At a meeting of the Borough Reform Association, held on Wednesday, a resolution was unanimously adopted, congratulating Sir E. Napier upon his new appointment, but declaring that appointment to be incompatible with the efficient representation of the borough of Marylebone. It is stated that there will be twelve candidates in the field.

CLERKENWELL RAGGED SCHOOLS.—A meeting of friends and supporters of the Lamb and Flag Ragged Schools, Clerkenwell-green, took place on Wednesday evening in the Parochial School-rooms, Amwell-street, Pentonville, at which Lord Brougham presided; and there were also present the Right Rev. the Bishop of Norwich, the Rev. H. Hughes, B.D., Rector of St. John's, Clerkenwell; E. Kerr, Esq.; C. White, Esq.; D. W. Wire, Esq.; J. Payne, Esq., &c. The number of ladies and gentlemen on the body of the meeting exceeded 1500. The report gave an interesting account of the beneficial effects of ragged schools in preventing crime. It stated also that the number of children on the books attending the day and Sunday schools, had been upwards of 300. A handsome collection was made.

FURTHER RISE IN THE PRICE OF BREAD.—On Tuesday morning the bakers throughout the metropolis made another rise in the price of bread. The first-rate bakers of the west-end now charge 1s. 2d. and 1s. 3d. the best bread; second-rate bakers 11½d. to 1s. 0½d. the 4lbs.

SALE OF THE METROPOLIS ROADS.—On Tuesday the annual sale by auction of the metropolis roads, north of the Thames, took place, before the commissioners of the turnpike roads, at their office, No 2, Whitehall-place, the Earl of Lonsdale in the chair. They were to be let, from the 1st of July next, for the term of one year, subject to such conditions as the commissioners produced at the meeting, one month being paid in advance of the rent of each lot as a deposit. The following are the prices which the several lots fetched. The Tyburn and Uxbridge roads, let at £2910, were sold for £3500; the Kilburn and Edgeware roads, offered at £3963 17s 6d., bought for £3273 17s. 6d.; the Highgate and Hampstead roads were knocked down for £17,340, the price asked was £17,330, and one lot was taken off; the City-road, the price demanded £4030, disposed of for £3060; the Hackney and Lea-bridge roads purchased for £5720, and £5710 was the sum named by the Commissioners. The lots were bought by Mr. Levy, and there was competition but for one of them.

DEATHS IN THE METROPOLIS.—The Registrar-General's return for the week ending May 15, presents a total of 976 deaths registered in the London districts, being an increase of 64 on the average of the season, which is corrected to meet the increase of population. It is shown by a tabular statement, that at present there prevails in London a rate of mortality unexampled throughout the springs of the seven previous years in which the weekly returns have been published. The increase of temperature is marked by the growing prevalence of fever, to which 82 deaths are ascribed.

COUNTRY NEWS.

SERIOUS FOOD RIOTS IN THE WEST OF ENGLAND.

There have been some serious food riots at Taunton, Exeter, and other places.

The riots at Taunton began on Saturday last, in consequence of the high price at which bread and potatoes and most other descriptions of food have been lately selling, and the inability, through poverty, of the people to sustain themselves. It was also suspected that some speculators had been "rigging the market," in order to enhance prices. On Saturday morning, as the farmers and dealers were engaged in the public market-house, in transacting their usual business, a crowd of persons assembled, and began to insult them. The mobbing, which, perhaps, was not at first meant as much mischief, soon led to more active and violent proceedings. The crowd speedily grew larger, and an attack was made upon all in the market-house. The farmers, millers, and factors, were driven from their counters, and the rioters possessed themselves of the corn and flour in the market, which they insisted should be sold by the owner to the people at the old prices, and a quantity was sold out at low rates among those present. Not satisfied with the corn, the rioters possessed themselves of the meat upon the shambles and in the shops of the principal butchers, which they said should be given to the people at proper prices; and the owners of it had to see mutton and beef, for which they had been asking 9d. per pound, distributed amongst the crowd at 5d. per pound. The mob paraded the streets with the joints of meat and loaves of bread, and the terrified inhabitants of the town closed their shops and houses, and business was entirely suspended. Last Monday morning the multitude again collected at the Taunton town-mills, alleging that they had been promised on Saturday night that they should have it 8lbs., instead of 14s., the bushel. Their demand not being complied with, a large party proceeded to Mr. Matthews's, where they commenced breaking the windows. A numerous body of magistrates and special constables were, however, soon on the spot; the Riot Act was read, and two of the most active among the ringleaders were taken into custody, and, after a desperate resistance, and attempt at rescue near the Guildhall, were committed to prison. On Tuesday, similar disturbances took place company, when the mob broke into and plundered the bakers' and butchers' shops, and attacked corn stores, &c.

The rioting at Exeter commenced yesterday week, and arose out of the same causes as the disturbances at Taunton. It began by an attack made in the street by some half-dozen women and boys upon a person who had become obnoxious to them in consequence of its being alleged that he had been forestalling the sale of potatoes, and afterwards demanding very exorbitant prices for them. The clamour of these women, who were in a most exasperated state, saying that they and their children were starving, soon attracted a large concourse of persons, many of whom were men and boys of low character, who were ready to take advantage of any tumult for the purposes of plunder and violence. The person thus attacked took refuge in the shop of a Mr. Buckle, a baker and flour dealer, against whose premises the fire of the crowd was immediately directed. Stones were thrown, the windows dashed in, and Mr. Buckle, who at first attempted to resist the attack, violently beaten, and would probably have been killed, had not some members of his household dragged him into the house. The mob, headed by some women, then proceeded to the corn market, where they commenced an attack upon the farmers and corn dealers present. A fellow in the crowd at once knocked a farmer down with a bludgeon, and some others were struck with violence. The dealers for a time stood to their stalls, but the farmers fled in all directions, and they, finding themselves not in sufficient force to make any effective resistance, retreated. The flying farmers and dealers passed them, and then transferred their violence to the residence of Mr. Mr. Jones, baker, Fore-street, which they attacked in like manner. The shops of Mr. Bedell, baker, in West-street; Mr. Salter, in Bartholow-row; Mr. Stone, &c., were likewise pelted with stones and missiles, until the terrified inmates were obliged to throw out their bread. The Mayor and some other magistrates went among the mob, and apprehended two or three of the ringleaders. Measures were also immediately taken for restoring the peace of the city. About ten o'clock on Saturday night an immense mob of persons assembled in Market-street and Fore-street, near the Lower Market, and some regular battles took place, but no attempt was made to destroy property. Throughout Sunday all was quiet; on Sunday morning the further services of the yeomanry were dispensed with, but the special constables and the enrolled pensioners were still kept on duty. On Monday, about noon, there was a slight disturbance in St. Sidwell, which appears to have originated in this way:—Some brickmakers, employed in the Blackboy-road, were drinking in the George and Dragon public-house, and, after a good deal of loud talking, a red handkerchief was hung out of the window of the room in which they were sitting; Mr. Scott, the maltster, who lives next door, and who has been sworn in as a special constable, came out of his house, upon which two of the men came out of the house, and struck him: Mr. Willey, the painter, who was passing, interfered, and protected him, and he got into his house, but information having been dispatched to the Guildhall, a party of police proceeded with a body of police and special constables to the spot, and the two men were taken into custody.

We find by the country papers that the food riots on Friday and Saturday (last week), extended to Honiton, Ashburton, and Crediton. At Honiton the mob, after previous demonstrations, went to the market house where a small quantity of wheat was pitched, and the price which is 8s. per bushel, was considered by them to be sold at 12s. 6d., which was eventually done. They then proceeded to the Chopping Knife Inn, where about forty bushels of wheat had been lodged, having been sold the week previous for 9s. a bushel, but upon which two of the men came out of the house, and struck him: Mr. Willey, the painter, who was passing, interfered, and protected him, and he got into his house, but information having been dispatched to the Guildhall, a party of police proceeded with a body of police and special constables to the spot, and the two men were taken into custody.

We find by the country papers that the food riots on Friday and Saturday (last week), extended to Honiton, Ashburton, and Crediton. At Honiton the mob, after previous demonstrations, went to the market house where a small quantity of wheat was pitched, and the price which is 8s. per bushel, was considered by them to be sold at 12s. 6d., which was eventually done. They then proceeded to the Chopping Knife Inn, where about forty bushels of wheat had been lodged, having been sold the week previous for 9s. a bushel, but upon which they insisted should be sold at 6s., instead of 14s., the bushel. Their demand not being complied with, a large party proceeded to Mr. Matthews's, where they commenced breaking the windows. A numerous body of magistrates and special constables were, however, soon on the spot; the Riot Act was read, and two of the most active among the ringleaders were taken into custody, and, after a desperate resistance, and attempt at rescue near the Guildhall, were committed to prison. On Tuesday, similar disturbances took place company, when the mob broke into and plundered the bakers' and butchers' shops, and attacked corn stores, &c.

The rioting at Exeter commenced yesterday week, and arose out of the same causes as the disturbances at Taunton. It began by an attack made in the street by some half-dozen women and boys upon a person who had become obnoxious to them in consequence of its being alleged that he had been forestalling the sale of potatoes, and afterwards demanding very exorbitant prices for them. The clamour of these women, who were in a most exasperated state, saying that they and their children were starving, soon attracted a large concourse of persons, many of whom were men and boys of low character, who were ready to take advantage of any tumult for the purposes of plunder and violence. The person thus attacked took refuge in the shop of a Mr. Buckle, a baker and flour dealer, against whose premises the fire of the crowd was immediately directed. Stones were thrown, the windows dashed in, and Mr. Buckle, who at first attempted to resist the attack, violently beaten, and would probably have been killed, had not some members of his household dragged him into the house. The mob, headed by some women, then proceeded to the corn market, where they commenced an attack upon the farmers and corn dealers present. A fellow in the crowd at once knocked a farmer down with a bludgeon, and some others were struck with violence. The dealers for a time stood to their stalls, but the farmers fled in all directions, and they, finding themselves not in sufficient force to make any effective resistance, retreated. The flying farmers and dealers passed them, and then transferred their violence to the residence of Mr. Mr. Jones, baker, Fore-street, which they attacked in like manner. The shops of Mr. Bedell, baker, in West-street; Mr. Salter, in Bartholow-row; Mr. Stone, &c., were likewise pelted with stones and missiles, until the terrified inmates were obliged to throw out their bread. The Mayor and some other magistrates went among the mob, and apprehended two or three of the ringleaders. Measures were also immediately taken for restoring the peace of the city. About ten o'clock on Saturday night an immense mob of persons assembled in Market-street and Fore-street, near the Lower Market, and some regular battles took place, but no attempt was made to destroy property. Throughout Sunday all was quiet; on Sunday morning the further services of the yeomanry were dispensed with, but the special constables and the enrolled pensioners were still kept on duty. On Monday, about noon, there was a slight disturbance in St. Sidwell, which appears to have originated in this way:—Some brickmakers, employed in the Blackboy-road, were drinking in the George and Dragon public-house, and, after a good deal of loud talking, a red handkerchief was hung out of the window of the room in which they were sitting; Mr. Scott, the maltster, who lives next door, and who has been sworn in as a special constable, came out of his house,

E P S O M R A C E S — 1 8 4 7 .

THE RAILWAY—FIRST CLASS.

(Continued from page 325.)

crease, concludes the reader. Alas! for the hosts who could testify far otherwise. At the head-quarters of resort in the town of Epsom—where whilom, during the meeting week, you might as well have sought for a bed for yourself or a stall for your horse, as for that lusus naturæ that Diogenes looked for with his lantern—only one guest slept the night before the Derby, and three horses constituted the cavalry department! But what of that?

"Tempora mutantur nos et mutamur in illis."

SECOND CLASS.

THIRD CLASS.

E P S O M R A C E S—1 8 4 7.

THE RACE—TATTENHAM CORNER.

Boniface must turn engineer, and my landlady fireman—metamorphoses existed before Ovid—and since. The distance between the point from which you started accomplished—by fire, air, land, or water—you are on the Downs—and what a panorama is spread before, behind, and around you. The laughing sunlight gives it welcome and gladness: life it has—it is—such varied and vast existence as the round world cannot show elsewhere. How perfect in keeping: how nationally characteristic are all the details. Equipage: costume: style: the whole mise en scène—could it bate one jot without suffering—and in what point may it count of improvement? Thousands: tens of thousands: hundreds of thousands are there: carriages and coetes of all denominations: aristocratic "drags:" plebeian vans: high folks: low folks—and "gents," which are the dregs of both.

The Grand Stand is a peerless position: full of all that is brightest—best—fair women—feasting—and cavaliers, the pink of courtesy. What philosophy could ever have helped a stranger to the conclusion that such a goodly company have gathered together to strip each other of goods and chattels? Who speaks of want or need in the land? see those hecatombs of pigeon pies and lobster salads—those inland seas of champagne and hock—as we are sinners, there's a fellow without a shirt, or a nose, washing down the wing of a pullet with a goblet of moselle!

THE START FOR THE DERBY.

However, all is not ravel—yet: there is grave business to be done—and hark! the bell gives warning that the issue is at hand. In the lawn sloping from the stand to the course is the betting ring. Here the élite most do congregate. They hold their books open, and pencil down the perils of their coin. Speculation, however, was far from heavy—for many reasons: money was scarce, confidence scarcer—and so forth. Still, as it turned out, all was strictly on the square, and the best won.

Half-past two was the hour named for starting, and it was well kept. The largest field that ever started for a Derby was brought to the post, and, with hardly a baulk, got off with military precision. The running admits of little description. Up the hill the pace was bad, and there the ruck was almost compact. It was at Tattenham Corner that the speed became good, and down the fall very severe: it was too good for Conyngham here, as well as for Van Tromp and all the fancies, save for Cossack and War-Eagle, who made it, down the straight ground, a second edition of the Newmarket Stakes. Stride for stride they came past the distance: opposite the Stand, Templeman called on his horse, set him going, and Cossack went in a gallant winner.

Mr. Padley is said to have won £20,000. The losses are well distributed, so that the settling may be expected to be easy. What followed, may be anticipated—winners and losers betook themselves to refresh with what appetite waits usually on a Derby—and its especial carte. A glorious holiday was it, but not craving particulars. The company were all merry, if not all wise; and, with hardly a glance at troupe; so does Mr. Leigh Murray; and, we believe, Mrs. C. Jones will be added to the company. We have long regretted the absence of this admirable actress, and old favourite of everybody, from the leading theatres. What a treat it would have been to have seen her play Mrs. Harris.

The conventionality of putting forward wearisome novelties on the holidays of "the people" Easter and Whit Mondays, &c. appears to be on the decline. We hear of nothing astonishing to be done anywhere just at present, the bills, as they stand, being considered sufficiently attractive.

Mr. Macready is about to re-appear at the Princess'.

Mons. Regnier and Mdlle Denain are still attractive at the ST. JAMES'S. The comedy of "Un Coup de Sanguenot" was played for the third time on Wednesday evening, and with the same success. Scribe's "Oscar; ou le Mari qui trompe sa femme," was also repeated, Cartigny and Mdlle. Duverger strengthening the caste. The house was excellently well attended, although it was an Almack's evening. Molière's "Les Precieuses Ridicules" will be produced next week, and the audience will have an opportunity of again witnessing "Les Domiseiles de St. Cyr," before the present accomplished artistes take their departure.

SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS.

This very favourite resort of the thousands who appreciate an excellent entertainment at a reasonable rate, and concluding at as reasonable an hour, was opened for the season on Monday. During the recess many improvements have been taken place, first and foremost amongst which is the construction of an entirely new entrance, which has the advantage of bringing the visitor under the galleries, at once in front of the picture model. And after the exhibition, the egress is much more convenient than it was in preceding years by the old walks. It is also better adapted for the carriages to put down and take up; and the new lodges, in the Swiss style of architecture, are in themselves very well worthy of inspection

The Gardens, generally, have been greatly improved. The shrubs and trees have grown, and are losing all the appearance of having been lately planted, which formerly characterised them; and, considering the unfavourable Spring, are wonderfully forward. Some tasteful bridges and pagodas have been erected, here and there, about the grounds, and the illuminations have been extended.

But the View of Gibraltar is the lion, even amongst the finest specimens of that species. The naval lights are in perspective in better manner than has been in any of the former pictures, although the detail may not be altogether so effective as the Views of Old London and Rome. In fact, just as dusk is stealing on, it is impossible to distinguish the real features of the View from the artical, so admirably do they blend. There are ships of war floating, to all appearance, on the lake, with masts fifty feet high; bristling batteries and fortifications, and houses running to the very summit of the rock; and the effect of these, painted and built up with consummate skill, is extraordinary. As soon as the Concert is over, a representation of the Siege commences. Before this, drums and fifes have been heard in the intervals of the music, and a shell sent up to the signal for the attack; which, under Mr. Soubby's pyrotechnical management, was given better idea or the reality than anything we have ever seen. There is great credit due to all the artistes concerned. We have, first, the attack upon the garrison by the combined fleets of France and Spain; then, the resume of the fire from the land batteries; the conflagration of the houses, with some beautiful effects produced by the reflection of the coloured fires in the water; and, lastly, such a general burning of the ships, and uproar of the various noises, that anybody of ordinary nerves may well be excused for feeling uncomfortable at his proximity to the scene of destruction. A droll effect was produced by a squadron of ducks, who, in the hottest part of the siege, gravely ploughed their leader across the lake, perfectly unmoved by the riot around them, to their roosting place. They took the horrors of the siege in a much more matter-of-fact point of view than the carnivora, whose roars and growls from their glazed abode were most imposing

Mr. Godfrey conducted an attractive programme of the Promenade Concerts with great spirit, and the "Siege" was accompanied by very effective and appropriate national music

MUSIC.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Donizetti's "Lucrezia Borgia" was represented for the first time at this lyrical establishment on Saturday night; and all our experience, at home and abroad, of Italian operas, we never heard such an ensemble as in the cast.

Let us enumerate the names of the leading artists: there were Grisi, as the imperious, revengeful Lucrezia, whose matchless dramatic genius relieves the dark shades of the character; Alboni, as the brave, generous, and vivacious Orsini; Mario, as the ill-fated Gennaro, the son of Lucrezia; Tamburini, as the jealous, stern, vindictive Duke of Ferrara, the husband of Lucrezia; Taglafico, as the wily, lantmating Gabetta, the Duchess' agent; Pietro Ley, as his accomplice, Astolpho; Lavia, as Ensighelli, the Duke's tool; and, as the friends of Gennaro, there were Marini, as Gazella; Polonini, as Petrucci; Tuli, as Liverotto; and Pincottini, as Vitellozzo.

In the Prologue, which passes during a fête at Venice by moonlight, there was a military band behind the scenes; and, when it is was heard in conjunction with the orchestra, and Marini, Tuli, Polonini, Lavia, Pincottini, and Alboni, and the Chorus, came in, with one outbreak of joyful expression, the house was taken by storm, and the piece was encored amidst the most hearty applause. The trio in the first act, by Grisi, Tamburini, and Mario, in which the Duke makes Lucrezia poison her own son, was magnificently rendered. Another startling point was the denunciation of Lucrezia at the end of the Prologue, after Orsini, Gazella, &c., had each reproached her for the deaths of their kindred and friends. But her crowning triumph was in the drinking song of Orsini, at the banquet in the last scene, after his quarrel with the Spaniard has been made up. She captivated her hearers to such an extent that she had to sing the air over again three times, before the audience would allow her to come to the second verse: the surprising effort she made in the register of the mezzo-soprano, actually making a clear, articulate, and beautiful shake on A above the lines, during the pause in the ballad; this splendid achievement the shake being strong at first, and gradually dying off in a delicious pianissimo—drew another burst of admiration from all parts of the theatre.

Mario has been heard in better voice, but he had some inspired moments, such as in the air "Di pescatore ignobile," in which he tells his history to Lucrezia; and in the beautiful scena, composed for him by Costa, "Com' e bello," in the second act. It has been usual to introduce an air for Gennaro in this scene, the music of the part being limited both in quantity and quality, but we dislike the system of interpolation. Grisi, Alboni, Mario, Tamburini, Marini, &c., were called for at the end of the prologue and every act, to receive an overwhelming ovation.

On Tuesday night, "Lucrezia" was repeated. Her Majesty, Prince Albert, the Duchess of Kent, Prince Leiningen, the Duchess and Princess Mary of Cambridge were present. The prologue again created a perfect furore, the chorus "Passiam la notte" with the double band being encored, Marini contributing largely to the effect. The opera, in short, was one continued series of ovations for the leading artists, who were called for at the end of every act

The new Ballet of "La Salamandrine," is founded on Charles Mackay's poem. Rouzicaudi supplied the incidents, and Fanny Elssler, and M. Blasis, formed the chorographic combinations. The first tableau exhibited charming effects of sunrise on a Sicilian landscape, with Mount Etna in the distance. Giulio (Petipa), is betrothed to Nina (Mdlle. Fanny Elssler), but they have a quarrel, in consequence of her reproaches for his want of success as a hunter. He enters the crater of Mount Etna, and culls a bouquet of flowers from the sulphurous soil; he presents them to Nina, who is instantly overpowered with sleep, and dreams that she is changed into a Salamandrine, the spirits of fire of the mountain. The dream, as in "Victorine," is represented on the stage, and affords scope for some fine scenic effects, which Grieve and Leblie, the painters, and Hanaire, the decorator, of course make the most of, with the large stage at their command. "La Salamandrine" is one of the prettiest of ballets, and is destined to be very popular, as the redundancies in the action of the story will be cut out. Fanny Elssler's pantomime was worthy of her great fame. The tremor, after the possession of the flowers the terror in the scene of the crater—the opening scene with the lover—the waking up and finding that all the horrors had been but a dream, were finely depicted, and elicited bursts of enthusiasm. She was encored in one of her sparkling pas. The Sicilian dances in the first tableau are full of characteristic spirit, and the pas de quatre of the Salamandrines, by Rouzicaudi, was a complete triumph for that exquisite danseuse. The ballet has been mounted, in all respects, with great splendour. The Pas de Trois between Fanny Elssler, Dumilâtre, and Petipa, was an exhibition of chorographic skill that has never been surpassed

On Thursday, "Lucrezia Borgia" was given for the extra night, with the second act of "L' Italiana in Algeri," and the new ballet of "La Salamandrine." The house was filled in every part. Grisi, Alboni, Mario, and Tamburini were in the finest possible voice. The encores were the same as on Tuesday night. Alboni took double one as usual. Grisi, at the end of the first act, quite electrified the house, and the audience in the stalls and pit rose en masse to cheer one of her most splendid bursts. Alboni was called for after the "Algieri," in which she sang the "Pensa mia Patria," with unpassioned feeling.

On Thursday next will be produced Mozart's masterpiece, "Don Giovanni," with a triple orchestra and powerful chorus, the principal parts being sustained by the following unprecedented cast: Donna Anna, Grisi; Donna Elvira, Mdlle. Corbari; and Zerlina, Madame Persiani; Don Giovanni, Signor Tamburini; Leporello, Signor Rovere; the Commendatori, Signor Tagliafico; Don Ottavio, Signor Mario; and Masetto, Signor Pietro Ley. In addition to the usual orchestra, there will be two bands on the stage, one of stringed instruments, the other a military band.

CONCERTS OF THE WEEK.

THE BEETHOVEN QUARTET SOCIETY.—There was a brilliant meeting at the fifth Concert, on Monday last. Vieuxtemps was the first violin, in the No. 5, in A major, Op. 18, composed in 1791-3, and dedicated to Prince Lichnowsky, and in the No. 13, in B flat major, composed in 1825-26, and dedicated to the Russian Prince Galitzin; and Sainton led No. 3, in E minor, composed in 1808-9, and dedicated to the Prince Rasoumofsky. Vieuxtemps and Sainton alternated in the second violin parts, Hill being the tenor and Rousselot the violoncello. It was altogether a magnificent interpretation of Beethoven's works. Vieuxtemps, by his classical style and powerful execution, creating no greater sensation. The quatuors of the master mind hung now gone through, the sixth meeting will be devoted to the works of Haydn and Mozart, with the repetition of one of Beethoven's set.

MR. ROPHINO LACY'S HANDELIAN OPERATIC CONCERTS.—The first scheme, given on Monday evening, included gleanings from the operas of "Orone" (1732), "Giustino" (1737), "Teseo" (1713), "Sosarme" (1732), "Partenope" (1730), "Deidamia" (1741), "Agrippina" (1709), "Berenice" (1737), "Rinaldo" (1711), "Serse" (1738). Every amateur is, of course, aware that the best airs and duets of Handel's operas, composed partly when two rival Italian Opera Houses were in existence for a period of seven years, a hundred years ago, were turned to account by the composer in his oratorios. Mr. Rophino Lacy is, therefore, scarcely accurate in declaring in his prospectus that "the beauties of Handel's Italian operas have slept in oblivion for 100 years." Those compositions were written in the meridian powers of the singers of that day, and, as curiosities for the antiquarian, are certainly interest ng. We wish Mr. Lacy success in his undertaking, but we fear that the programmes will be found heavy from the lack of variety As exponents, the concert has the talents of Miss Dolby (his daughter), Miss Hawes; Messrs. Manvers and Phillips; and a small select orchestra, including Messrs. T. Cooke, Dando, Lindley, Howell, &c.; Mr. J. L. Hatton presiding at the piano.

M. WILLMERS' MATINEE MUSICALE.—Willmers, the Danish pianist, has come t this country with a prodigious reputation acquired in Germany, Italy, and France. Great curiosity was therefore manifested on Monday, to hear his first performance. Of his enormous executive facility there can be but one opinion; and in certain pieces of his own composition, arranged for his peculiarities and power, he produces great effects as in the Northern Song, imitative of the carol of birds, by shakes sustained with marvellous delicacy and precision, and in the storm of octaves, tenths, &c. It did not, however, strike us that Willmers can be called either a poetical or intellectual player. His reading of the Beethoven sonata, op. 27, was not a classical o e; and in the "Lucia" sextuor, although as force was tremendous, it lacked the charm given to it by a Liszt, a Pleyel, or a Prudent. Willmers is something between Leopold de Meyer, without his amusing quackery, and Dreyschock, without his redeeming touch. The Dane is of the key-splitting school, in fact. His most graceful piece was a scherzo, called the "Syren."

MR. WALLACE'S BENEFIT CONCERT.—Drury Lane Theatre was not so well attended on Monday night as the merits of the composer, pianist, and violinist ought to be commanded. His beautiful opera of "Maritana," announced as Mrs. Romer, Miss Poole, Messrs. Harrison, Stretton, and Horrad, was followed by a miscellaneous concert, in which Jenny Lutzer sang exquisitely. There were also Miss Rainforth, Miss Bassano, Miss Messent, and Herr Heinzel, in divers songs, and two débutants, in Mr. J. S. Reeves and Mr. Whitworth. The former is a tenor of great repute in Italy; and, in the scena from Verdi's "Ernani," his admirable style and feeling brought down great applause. We hope he will be secured for English opera. Mr. Whitworth is a baritone, who displayed some promising points. Jules Schuloff, the Prague pianist, played a fantasia with great brilliancy: he has wonderful execution, and a charming touch. The brothers Hellmesberger distinguished themselves in a violin duo, by Kalliwoda; and Schepanowski performed a violoncello solo. Some Spanish dancers, also, were applauded in their national pas. Mr. Wallace, by the by, was called for after his opera, is about to leave for Italy and Germany. His works will be produced in Vienna.

EASTERN HARMONIC SOCIETY. Haydn's "Creation," conducted by Mr. Davis, Mr. Arber being the leader, was given on Monday, the principal vocalists being Miss A. E. Byers, Miss Maides, Messrs. Lockey and J. Kench.

CONCERT OF ANCIENT MUSIC. The fourth performance, which was under the direction of the Archbishop of York, who was not present, included three novelties: Beethoven's "Song of the Pearl, "nicely sung by Miss Rainforth, with G. Cooke's oboe accompaniment; the overture of "Philomela," by Cahil, the French composer and author of the celebrated "Treatise on Harmony," and a "Chant Français," descriptive of the battle of Marignan, composed in 1515 by Clement Jannequin, more curious than pleasing. The other performances were the finale to the second act of Beethoven's "Fidelio," a selection from Haydn's second Mass, Handel's "Samson" overture, the "Hallstone Chorus," Sir H. R. Bishop's popular glee "Blow Gentle Gales," and pieces by Pacr, Gluck, Mozart, Pergolesi, Hummel, Zingarelli, &c. Staudigl's singing of Himmel's "Battle Prayer" was very impressive. Madame Caradori Allan gave the "Venga a vol" of Zingarelli, very charmingly. Mrs M. Williams, Mr. Lockey, Mr. Machin, and Madame Knispel were the other vocalists. Earl Howe directs the fifth concert, on Wednesday week. Prince Albert and the Duchesses of Kent and Gloucester were present

THE ACADEMIE ROYALE DE MUSIQUE.—Paris still seeks for a prima donna. Mdlle. Mondutangny, another pupil of the Conservatoire, has been tried in the Reine de Chypre, and failed. Bordes, the new tenor, is improving; and Mirard, the basso, is becoming very popular, although he is a dwarf in stature. Madame Stoltz is in the south of France, starring. Dohler has quitted Paris for Vienne, to produce his new opera. In addition to the composer, the Rhine Musical Festival, which will be held at the Palace of Brühl, the scene of the fêtes to Queen Victoria in 1845, illustrated in our columns. Ernst has completed his series of concerts in St. Petersburgh. Berlin laments of the loss of the tenor, described the furore at the benefit of Madame Viardot Garcia as having been beyond precedent She played Valentine in Meyerbeer's "Hugnenots," and the last scene of the "Somnambula" lisbat was called for, one after time, amidst a shower of flowers, bouquets, crowns, wreaths, &c. Madame Rossi Caccia has been very successful at Barcelona in "Anna Bolena."

MR. C. E. HORN'S ORATORIO OF "DANIEL'S PREDICTION."—On Wednesday evening, the new work was performed at the Music Hall, Store-street, the words selected chiefly from Mrs. Hannah More's Sacred Drama, with additions from the Scriptures, compiled by Mr. C Purday, the music by C. E. Horn. The oratorio is divided into two parts: in the former are Daniel, the Jewish Prophet (tenor); the Israelitish Woman (mezzo soprano); the Jewish Woman (contralto); and Jehoiakim Man (bass). In the second part, are Belshazzar (bass); Nitocris, the Queen Mother (contralto), &c. The names of these names suggests at once the object taken from the Book of Daniel We cannot but think that the composer was ill-advised to select matter which has been already treated by Handel and Spohr, and more recently by Costa and Perry. Under such circumstances, compliment Mr. Horn for the possession of musical feeling and energy, in the treatment of incidents that even master-minds have failed to realise altogether. Mr. C. E. Horn conducted the work, which was received with applause by the audiory The vocalists were Miss Dolby, Miss Wells, Mrs. C. E. Horn, Messrs. Ratter, Wetherbee, Purday, Mattocks, F. Smith, &c.

MUSICAL CHIT-CHAT

Mr. John Parry's Annual Concert took place last night, but we must defer a notice until next week. The eleventh performance of the Amateur Musical Society was given yesterday evening. This morning, will be the Philharmonic Rehearsal for the sixth Concert, on Monday night. "Don Giovanni" will play. On Monday morning, Brizzi, the tenor, has his Annual Concert, at which the leading artists of the Royal Italian Opera will sing. On Tuesday afternoon, will be the fifth Meeting of the Musical Union, and the last appearance of Vieuxtemps. In the same morning, Mr. F. Chatterton gives his Morning Concert; and, in the evening, will be the second Handelian Concert. On Wednesday evening, the popular contralto, Miss M. B. Hawes, has her Annual Concert. On Friday morning, will be Mrs. Anderson's Morning Concert: this esteemed artiste is the pianiste to her Majesty, and teacher of the Princess Royal; Mr. Anderson being the Master of the Queen's Band. The Society and Meetings of the Amateur Musical Society will take place on Friday night; and, on the same evening, Jules Schnioff, the pianist, gives his Concert, at the Hanover square Rooms.

MR O'CONNELL IN GENOA.—A letter from Genoa, dated May 12, says:—Mr. O'Connell arrived here on Friday on his way to Rome, but was detained by an illness so serious that he is confined to his bed at the Hotel Feder, and one of his physicians says that it will be some days before he can be moved, if he move at all. On the day he arrived he was much tormented by his asthma, which is his malady, which is cerebral, he suffered from intestinal inflammation; however, after applying leeches and other remedies, the symptoms of immediate danger disappeared, and he is now better physically, but still continues to be confined. Improving, although he himself says that he shall not live three days. He has two physicians, one a Genoese, and the other an Englishman established here, and they concur in saying, that although he may rally, his constitution is so enfeebled that it is scarcely possible for him to survive a long time

BULLION AT THE BANK.—It appears, by a Parliamentary return just printed, that (in the issue department of the Bank of England) the quantity of bullion of that Bank, in the week ending May 15, 1847, was £11,539,519 in gold, and £1,886,595 in silver bullion; while in the week ending April 24, 1847, it was, in gold, £7,130,206, and in silver, £1,429,134. In the week ending Sept. 19, the quantity in gold bullion was £13,044,779, and in silver, £1,731,831. At Feb. 21, 1846, the total liabilities of the Bank amounted to £40,710,000, and the total assets to £44,037,000. On April 17, 1847, the liabilities were £36,788,000, and the assets £36,937,000.

EXTRAORDINARY HIGH PRICE OF WHEAT.—At the Windsor market, on Saturday last, some singularly fine samples of wheat realised the enormous sum of £31 per load. A similar price was also obtained for wheat at Uxbridge market, on the preceding Thursday. At Chertsey May fair, which was held yesterday week, the prices of wheat ranged from £27 10s. to £30 10s. per load. Several buyers from London attended the market and Chertsey, who refused to make any purchases, in consequence of the advanced prices.

STOCK OF CORN IN THE COUNTRY.—A Correspondent of the Morning Chronicle, justly considering that any information respecting the present stock of corn in the country would be interesting at this moment, forwards the following letter:—"I know many farmers in this neighbourhood (Chesterfield) who, in ordinary years, have not a quarter of wheat on hand in the month of May, but may now possibly have holding (for them) large stocks. I can mention one, Mr.——, a large farmer, who has upwards of 1000 loads (Derbyshire loads of three bushels), still on hand. And, although this gentleman usually sells out about this time of year, he is not sufficiently tempted by the present high prices, but intends holding until Midsummer, in the hope that prices will be yet higher. Besides this instance, I know of many others within my own circle of acquaintance, of farmers who have scarcely sold any corn this year. And if this neighbourhood, which is usually considered by your go-a-head farmers to be a very poor one, be any criterion of the stocks on hand in other parts of the country, I think we may console ourselves with the conviction that 'there is yet corn in Egypt.'"

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE RIVER. Last Sunday afternoon, about two o'clock, Mr Leeson and Mr. Bone, wine-merchant, of Pall-mall, were rowing up the river, when, as they passed through Battersea-bridge, the boat filled, and the two gentlemen were thrown into the water. John Styles, captain of one of the Citizen steam-boats, put off in a skiff, but was only able to save Mr. Leeson

FATAL THUNDERSTORM IN LANCASHIRE.—The town and neighbourhood of Preston were on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday (last week), visited with very heavy thunder storms, that on Wednesday being exceedingly awful. Vivid flashes of lightning, instantly followed by heavy peals of thunder, continued for some time. In the Fylde the storm was terrific; and at Layton, near Poulton, a person named Robert Clarkson was struck dead.

EVERYBODY'S COLUMN.

BY ALBERT SMITH.

LONDON GARDENING.

E see that several of our contemporaries in the country the Liverpool Chronicle taking the lead—are in the habit of giving weekly a "Gardener's Column," showing vegetably and flora.ly-disposed people what to do with their bits of ground. And, so we think this week of starting as a Metropolitan "Hortensus," for the benefit of our neighbours, and giving them the results of our experience

Our garden is not extensive. It comprises three window sills, and a ginger-beer bottle—the latter being covered with green baize, as a mustard and cress ground; and, inspired by the products, we thus imitate—

SHELLEY'S FLOWERS.

A sensitive plant on a window blew,
And the man who sold it turn'd out a do;
For it opened its fan-like leaves to the light,
But shut them again—and for ever—at night.

And the first-floor watered the pots with care,
And left them all night outside for the air.
But each flower and plant that was bought "a blowing,"
Instead of "a growing," turned out "a going."

"ALL A BLOWING, AND A GOING."

The domestic mustard and humble cress,
Form'd salad so small that it couldn't be less.
And the staring nasturtions, which when they blow,
Always straggle and turn where they oughn't to go.

And the Naiad-like lily of the vale,
That at twopence a root is offered for sale;
But on which never an ounce of blossom is seen,
And nothing but leaves of a first-spattered green.

And the scarlet-runner, that runs not high,
And jokes at the maxim of "Never say die;"
So never sprouts up to make window-screens,
Not having the power of growing like beans.

And the fourpenny pots of pale mignionette,
That droops in a short time from too much wet;
And others, for whom I've no room in my song,
Grew on that window, but never for long.

A London garden, like most other luxuries, is expensive. The cost of starting one is here given, verbatim, from the bill sent in to us, from Covent Garden:—

1	Pot Saxifraga ..	..	1s.
1	do Camelilia Meager	..	1s.
1	Pergamy Creapr ..	..	1s. 6d.
1	doz. Fly orks ..	..	3s.
1	Knarpens ..	..	6d.
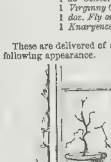
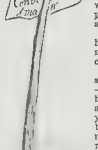
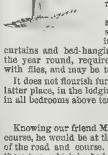
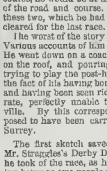
			7s.

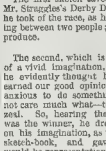
These are delivered of a vivid green, and in two days the garden puts on the following appearance.











CANARIENSIS, Nasturtions, and other metropolitan scramblers, are produced from seeds, which must be exposed to the light, and kept from cats. It does not follow that, if you plant the seeds, they will come up what you expect, or, in fact, anything at all; but the pots themselves, if kept a bright red, will look cheerful and festive, and should, therefore, be encouraged.

Seeds planted should not be dug up every day, to see how they are getting on, although it is a practice which most London gardeners are fond of, as such is apt to cripple the growth of the flower.

Slips from Geraniums may always be bought in the streets, but they never strike

—neither themselves nor you by their development. They are sold—at the same time you are—for perfect flowers; but come under the denomination of Tender Ephemerals

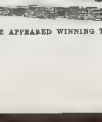
The most durable plant is a parasite about the streets, and which attaches itself readily to window-curtains and bed-hangings. It keeps in leaf all the year round, requires no care, is very popular with flies, and may be termed THE CANARIENSIS LONDONENSIS.

It does not flourish further from London than Gravesend, to perfection. At the latter place, in the lodgings about Windmill Hill and Denesvale, it grows freely in all bedrooms above ten shillings a week. It is a Hardy Perpetual.

THE DERBY.

Knowing our friend Mr. Straggles to be a clever amateur artist, and that, of course, he would be at the Derby, we begged him to bring us home some sketches of the road, and course. None of them have, however, come to hand, except these two, which he had given to another friend to look at, just as the course was cleared for the last race.

The worst of the story is that Mr. Straggles himself has not appeared since. Various accounts of him have reached us, but the darkest fears are entertained. He went down on a coach, and was last seen, by one of his acquaintance, standing on the roof, and pouring some champagne into his cornet-à-piston, and then trying to play the post-horn notes on the empty bottle. Another account gives the fact of his having borrowed a horse from a friend on the course, "for a turn," and having been seen riding through Dorking at a fearful John Gilpin sort of rate, perfectly unable to stop his career a Mazeppa in a paletot and Jonville. By this correspondent he was supposed to have been carried low down into Surrey.



ALL MR. STRAGGLES SAW OF THE RACE.

The first sketch saved from the wreck of Mr. Straggles's Derby Day is the actual one he took of what he witnessed in passing between two people; which we here reproduce.

The second, which is the result of a vivid imagination, shows that he evidently thought it was all over, and turned our good opinion, and was anxious to do something—he did not care much what—to show his zeal. So, hearing that Cossack was the winner, he drew largely on his imagination, as well as his sketch-book, and gave us this would be representation of

COSSACK, AS HE APPEARED WINNING THE DERBY.

RACING PRIZE TANKARDS.

The fine specimen of "Old English Plate" which we have illustrated in the three accompanying Engravings, possesses an historical interest over and above its attraction as a relic of times and customs more convivial than our own.

The original is a large silver Tankard, of somewhat dwarfish height, but capacious bulk; holding one gallon. It was purchased, not long since, at an auction sale of family plate and other valuables, at one of the ancestral homes, or halls, of Cheshire; and it is now in the possession of Mr. Herbert Ingram.

The first Illustration affords a side view of the vessel; and the two outlines, the scenes or subjects represented around it. The lift, or head to the lid, is of somewhat classic design; but the other figures, in great measure, decide the age of the cup, which, from the characteristic evidence it bears, may safely be set down as a Race Prize Tankard. Upon one side is portrayed the "weighing in" of the Jockey; and upon the opposite side, the Race. The heavy figure of the horse points to a period anterior to the reign of James the First, when Arabian blood was first introduced into our breed of horses; the King having liberally encouraged the turf, and given £500 for an Arab horse, though he was easily beaten by every English racer which ran against him. Public races were then established in various parts of the kingdom; and it is stated that the discipline and modes of preparing the horses upon such occasions were much the same as practised in the present day. The races were then called bell courses, because the prize was a bell. The horses on the Tankard remind one of the military equitation, such as the Duke of Newcastle patronised, rather than the modern racer. The Tankard itself (in form) rather points to a later period—the reign of Charles the First, who altered the racing prize from that of a silver or gold bell to that of a silver cup; and, probably, to a Tankard, as one of the oldest forms of our drinking vessels in general use. It is, however, possible that the figures were intended to commemorate olden horse-racing in this country, and do not bespeak the age of the Tankard itself. At all events, it is a very interesting record of past times; and, we trust, may serve as "the loving-cup" of many a future generation; to be, from time to time, replenished in the true warmth o generous affection.

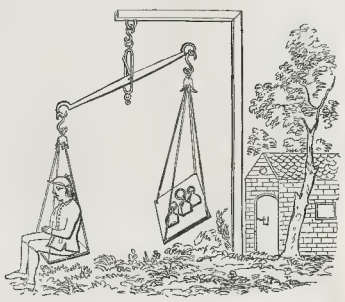
THE ANNIVERSARY OF ROME.—1847.

E viva, viva Roma!
'Tis the deathless city still;
Hope hovers o'er her destinies,
And points to every hill,
Triumphantly, where moral worth
Or mental might were seen,
When Rome in Majesty shone forth
The world's unconquer'd queen.

This day, her Anniversary;
Ten myriad torches blaze
To-night within the people's square,
And myriad voices raise
The song of patriot jubilee,
The anthem of old Rome,
The cradle of the brave and free—
The Cæsars' glorious home.

"Away we to the Quirinal!"
And forth the mighty mass
Proceed in serried ranks, composed
Of every age and class.
The Prince and peasant join the throng,
The bard and artist pale,
And still they raise the choral song
That bids old Rome hail.

An old man from a balcony
Holds forth his trembling hands,
And pours his benediction o'er
The mute and kneeling bands.
Then rose the crowd and as thunder loud
A wild shout shook the air.
Ah! brave the sight that festal night,
In th' Eternal City fair.—L.



THE POLICE OFFICES OF LONDON.

BY ANGUS B. REACH.

CLERKENWELL.

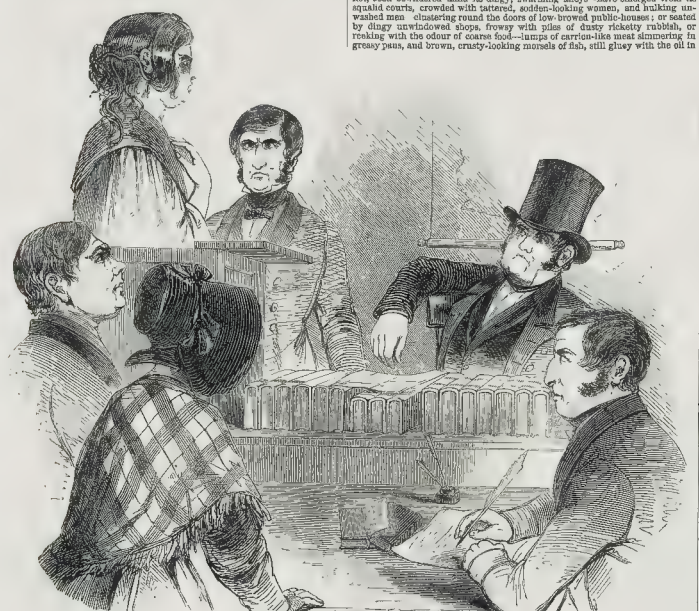
In Bagnigge Wells-road—the bottom of that valley which separates the sloping squares and terraces of Pentonville—a region of very green house doors, and very bright knockers, and intensely red brick facings—from the more ancient and solemn looking streets which abut upon the western side of Gray's Inn-lane—in that glaring and dusty summer thoroughfare stands a large pile of building, generally ornamented by numerous lounging policemen, and further diversified and adorned by crowds of shabby-looking people, a vast proportion whereof may be observed to have their personal appearance improved by such additional attractions as are contributed by blackened eyes, plastered-up foreheads, and noses with broken bridges.

The buildings form the Clerkenwell Police Court and its appurtenances; the lounging constables are the guardians of last night's peace, waiting to prefer charges against its disturbers; the maltreated gentry about are the sufferers—some of them, perhaps, the active, as well as passive, partakers in the constant drunken rows which such districts as Clerkenwell—a favoured abode of those unfortunate helots of the hod, generally complimented as the "low Irish"—naturally furnish, from day to day, for police adjudication.

We enter—we traverse a long, dirty passage: the passages leading to Police Courts are always dirty—the walls are always greasy—glazed, so to speak, by the constant friction of frowsy rags. A turn to the left—a push at a swinging door—and we stand in the midst of a similar crowd to that which we left outside, to that which we passed in the lobby the disreputable public of a Police Court.

The room is a larger one than most of the "Worthy Magistrates" are blessed with—in fact, a handsome, airy, wainscotted apartment. You glance at once towards the judicial arm-chair, and see it faced and flanked by the usual Police Court arrangements—a square, open box in the centre, bounded, so to speak, on one side by the bench, on the others by the particular boxes occupied by Clerks, Police Inspectors, Reporters, Barristers, and last, not least, Culprits. The part of the room not taken up by these pens and boxes, forms the locus standi for that portion of the enlightened public who come to improve their tempers by the contemplation of the placid equanimity of a Greenwood—or to see how perfectly even the balance of justice, as between a private individual and a policeman, can be held by a Combe.

We have mentioned the general character of the district over which the Clerkenwell Court exercises its police control. Many of our readers are no doubt familiar with the densely-peopled, dirty, confused, huddled locality, which stretches around the Middlesex Sessions House. Many of them have, we doubt not, been bewildered amid its dingy, swarming alleys—have emerged from its squalid courts, crowded with tattered, sodden-looking women, and lurking unwashed men—lingering round the doors of low-browed public-houses; or seated by dingy unwindowed shops, frowsy with piles of dusty rickety rubbish, or reeking with the odour of coarse food—lumps of carrion-like meat simmering in greasy pans, and brown, crusty-looking morsels of fish, still gluey with the oil in which they have been fried—many of our readers, we say, have probably congratulated themselves, with a cosy, self-satisfied shrug, as they emerged from these odoriferous haunts into the broad and frequented thoroughfare, where the shop do not look dens, nor the passengers ruffians and sluts.



CLERKENWELL POLICE OFFICE.—MR. GREENWOOD.

MR. COMBE.

In Clerkenwell, there is grovelling starving poverty. In Clerkenwell broods the darkness of utter ignorance. In its lanes and alleys the lowest debauch—the coarsest enjoyment—the most infuriate passions—the most unrestrained vice—roar and riot. The keeper of the "fence" loves to set up in business there—you see the stolen handkerchiefs fluttering in his den. Low public houses abound, where thieves drink and smoke. Jew receivers, with sharp leering eyes and tangled uncombed beards, lurk at corners. Brazen, ragged women, scream and shout ribald repartees from window to window. The burglar has his "crib" in Clerkenwell—the pickpocket has his mart—the half-starved Italian minstrel herds there, crammed with his fellows into foul night cellars—the ragged Irish hodman vegetates in the filth of his three pair back. It is the locality of dirt, and ignorance, and vice—the recesses whereof are but known to the disguised policeman, as he gropes his way up ricketty staircases towards the tracked housebreaker's den—or the poor shabby-genteel City missionary, as he kneels at midnight by the foul straw of some convulsed and dying outcast.

The judicial capital of such a district—the Clerkenwell Police Court—of necessity reveals many a murderous outrage—many a daring robbery many a case of lingering, untended starvation many a death struggle between the sleuth hounds of the police and the housebreaker, tracked step by step, hunted from place to place, and at length trapped like a wild beast in his lair. The Court was situated some years ago in Hatton-garden.

Mr Combe and Mr. Greenwood were, until this week, the presiding Minos and Rhadamanthus of Clerkenwell Court. Mr. Combe is a jolly-faced, homely, country-gentleman-looking personage. He is one of the common-sense, in opposition to the legal technicality-loving magistrates. He is a frank, kind-hearted man, with a lurking penchant for the turf—a good judge of a spanking team, and, if report speak truly, a crack whip. As may be expected, with these qualifications, he looks after the cabmen pretty strictly—understands all their manœuvres—is a capital judge of fares—and down upon an omnibus man in a moment, either for racing or loitering.

Mr Greenwood is a Yorkshireman—a hard, tetchy, irritable, high dried Whig. The Times and the Examiner, in particular, have kept a sharp look out upon him; and his decisions have given rise to many a bitter article.

Two clerks attend the Clerkenwell Magistrates. Mr. Mallet, the Chief Clerk, is a quiet, gentlemanly man; Mr. R. Mould, his subaltern, a lawyer of no inconsiderable knowledge and research.

(Within these few days, Mr. Greenwood has voluntarily resigned his appointment, and Mr. H. P. Tyrwhitt, of Brick Court, Temple, special pleader, has been appointed in his stead.)

EXHIBITION OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

"THE WOOING OF KATHARINA."—(TAMING OF THE SHREW.)—PAINTED BY A. L. EGG.

When so many Exhibitions of Pictures are open at the same time, and the London Season itself rich in subjects for illustration, our task of selecting for the week is always one of extreme difficulty. With the Exhibitions, the fairest way seems to be, to vary the character of our Illustrations, by giving a taste of the Old Water Colour Exhibition in one week; of the New Water Colour Exhibition in another week; and, in the paper immediately following, a page of Illustrations from the Exhibition at the Royal Academy. Our last week's Engravings were taken from the New Water Colour Exhibition; this week, therefore, we devote to the Royal Academy.

Our Illustrations are, Mr. Hart's "John Milton visiting Galileo when a Prisoner to the Inquisition near Florence, in 1638;" and a "Scene from the Taming of the Shrew," by Mr. A. L. Egg. Mr. Hart is a Royal Academician—Mr. Egg only a candidate for the honours of the Academy. The elder of the two has taken his place among the best painters of the English school; and the younger one bids air to occupy (and before very long) a place equally distinguished. Mr. Hart's name is familiar, no doubt, to a very large circle of our readers; but Mr. Egg has yet to make his way with the public.

When Milton was in Italy in 1638, he paid a visit to the famous Galileo, then a prisoner to the Inquisition. He was proud to have seen the great man, and mentions the visit in his celebrated "Speech for the Liberty of Unlicensed Printing." "There it was," says Milton, "that I found and visited the famous Galileo, grown old, a prisoner to the Inquisition, for thinking in astronomy otherwise than the Franciscan and Dominican licensers thought." The subject is one particularly excellent for pictorial purposes, and Mr. Hart has stripped to do his best. Who would not like to know what Galileo thought of his youthful admirer?

Mr Egg's two pictures in the present Exhibition are both from Shakspeare's "Taming of the Shrew." The first (No. 170) is called "The Wooing of Katharina;" the second (No. 392), "Scene from the Taming of the Shrew." The wooing of Katharina is so well known that any description seems quite superfluous. Of the other subject, however, it will be proper to add that the scene is laid in a room in Baptista's house, and the particular passage in the play selected by Mr. Egg as follows:

Bianca. Construe them.

Lucentio. Hac ibat, as I told you before: Simois, I am Lucentio; hic est, son unto Vincentio of Pisa; sapiens tellus, disguised thus to get your love; hic stellerat, and that Lucentio that comes a-wooing; Priami, is my man Tranio; regia, bearing my port; celsa senesi, that we might beguile the old pantaloon.

Hortensio. Madame, my instrument's in tune. [Hortensio plays.

Bianca. Let's hear. O, fie! the treble jars.

Mr Egg has a capital eye for colour, and paints conscientiously. There is no shirking. Whatever he attempts he performs to the best of his ability; aware perhaps (as every great artist must be), that with all his care, and pains and finish, he will too often fall short of what he wishes to perform.

In the Middle Room—(the room we were about to enter at the conclusion of our former notice)—the chief pictures are contributed by Mr. Etty, Mr. Hart, Mr Ward, Mr. Watson Gordon Mr. Creswick, Mr. Elmore, Mr. Frith, Mr. Egg, and

"JOHN MILTON VISITING GALILEO."—PAINTED BY S. A. HART, R.A.

Mr. Frank Stone. The pictures are 192 in number. Mr. Hart's "The Milton and Galileo," is engraved in our present number, and Mr. Ward's "The South Sea Bubble" in our paper of the 8th of May.

233. "England." T. Creswick, A.R.A. This is a composition picture, painted to convey the peculiar characteristics of English scenery. It is large, and certainly fine, though somewhat too blue, a fault we found with Mr. Creswick when criticising his pictures in the last year's "British Institution."

244 Portraits of "Mrs. Allen and Child." R. Rothwell Much was expected from Mr Rothwell at one time, but he has made no advance in his art, and has now sunk into mediocrity and the Egyptian Hall.

2 . "The Morning Walk" J. Linnell. This so called "Morning Walk" is a three quarter portrait of an elderly lady—truthfully painted, and one of the best portraits in the exhibition.

3 . "Portrait of Principal Lee." J. Watson Gordon, A.R.A. A full-length portrait in black, square and angular in treatment, and full of character. Mr. Gordon, always a manly painter, is more than ever to greater advantage than in this very fine, and, in point of composition, original portrait.

292 "Portrait of the Duchess of Roxburgh." H. W. Phillips. An agreeable portrait by the son of the late T. Phillips, R.A.

317. "Beppo." A. Elmore, A.R.A. A well-painted pi ture in illustration of the lines—

> I saw by the side of her adorer,
> When I left the Musulman was there before her

"The Invention of the Stocking Loom," by the same artist, and a better picture, was engraved in our paper of the 8th of May.

331. "The Impending Mate." Frank Stone. One of two pictures, representing a young gentleman and equally young lady, both prettily dressed, playing at chess. The game is game at last. In the composition picture, negligently taking to another room, the game is over, and the lover is seen at the lady's feet. The second picture is described as "Mated." Both are nicely painted.

339. "Charles et Cecelia." W Erp. R.A. Three full-length figures of "young and modest virgins," we borrow Mr. Etty's words, standing undraped. This admirable artist paints flesh like Rubens or Titian: wo wish we could add, with the grace and delicacy of Guido or Mr. Eastlake.

360 "Edinburgh." D. Roberts, R.A. An able view of a noble city, with all the admirable perspective and detail for which Mr. Roberts is so deservedly celebrated. Its colour it is cold and somewhat clayey

361. "The Combat." R. Ansdell. Stags fighting. A large Edwin Landseer-like picture, well grouped and clever; yet wanting in that indescribable something which marks the hand of the original master. An original painter is a birth to a legion of imitators. How many Byrons and Sir Walter Scotts and Charles Dickenses have we had? How many Edwin Landseers have we now?

401. "Drovers Halting on their way over the Mountains." T. S. Cooper, A.R.A. A good example of an artist quite unequalled in his way. Could he but add the warmth and sunshine splendour of Cuyp to his own careful elaboration, his reputation would rest on an unalterable basis.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—The arrivals of English wheat since Monday have been tolerably good, viz., 3850 quarters, and the demand to-day were fairly supplied with samples. The weather being extremely favourable for the growing crops, and the attendance of buyers small, the demand was heavy, and in some instances, the prices gave a downward tendency. Upwards of 12,000 quarters of foreign wheat have come in this week. That article was in heavy request, and offered at from 2s to 2s per quarter less. The trade in barley and beans doing was very small. For sapors no sales took place. The show of barley was small, yet the trade was heavy, at barely late rates. In oats nothing was doing, but prices were scarcely supported. With oats we were scarcely supplied All kinds moved off slowly, at late currencies. Beans, Scotch and Irish, were scarcely inquired for.

ARRIVALS.—English: Wheat, 3550; barley, 290; malt, 2260; oats, 600 Irish: Wheat, 550; barley, —; malt, —; oats, 210. Foreign: Wheat, 23,090; barley, 4790; malt, —; oats, 3540. Flour: 3010 sacks.—barrels

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 92s to 105s; ditto white, 100s to 112s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red, 86s to 100s, ditto white, 98s to 105s; rye, 58s to 62s; grinding barley, 48s to 50s, distilling, 52s to 57s; malting ditto, 58s to 61s; Lincoln and Norfolk malt, 72s to 74s; brown do., 70s to 72s; Kingston and Ware, 72s to 78s; Chevalier, 76s to 80s; Yorkshire ditto, —; grinding oats, 24s to 28s; potato ditto, 26s to 41s; Youghal and Cork, black, 30s to 32s; ditto white, 33s to 38s; tick beans, new, 50s to 52s; ditto old, —s to —s; grey peas, —s to —s; maple, —s to —s; white boilers, 52s to 55s, per quarter. Town-made flour, 52s per sack. Seconds, —s to —s. Stockton and Yorkshire, 45s to 47s per 240 lbs. Essex and Suffolk, —s to —s.

Foreign.—Dantzig red wheat, —s to —s; barley, —s to —s, oats, —s to —s, beans, —s to —s; and peas, —s to —s per quarter Flour, American, 30s to 33s per barrel; Baltic, —s to —s per barrel.

The Seed Market.—There is rather more flax seed doing in canary seed, at fully last week's quotations. In other kinds of seeds, as we advise, next to nothing is doing.

Linseed, Riga-ish, sowing, 52s to 54s; Baltic, crushing, 48s to 50s. Mediterranean and Odessa, 47s to 50s. Hempseed, 36s to 38s per quarter. Cloverseed, English red, —s to —s. Mustard seed, 8s to 10s, white ditto, 8s to 10s. Tares, 2s to 3s per bushel. Canary Rapeseed (new) £21 to £23 per last of ten quarters. Linseed cakes, English, £10 to £10 10s, ditto, foreign, £9 to £10 5s per 1000: Rapeseed cakes, £7 10s to £7 15s per ton. Canary, 50s to 60s per quarter. English clover-seed, red, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; extra, —s to —s; extra, up to —s. Foreign, red, —s to —s; extra, —s; white, —s to —s; extra, —s per cwt.

Bread.—The prices of wheaten bread in the Metropolis are from 10d to 10½d; of household ditto, 10d to 11½d per 4lbs loaf

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 80s 9d; barley, 32s 7d, oats, 21s 11d, rye, 36s 7d, beans, 51s 7d, peas, 50s 7d

The Seed Trade.—Mincing Lane.—Wheat, 72s 6d; barley, 40s 11d; oats, 21s 2d; rye, 56s 1d; beans, 51s 8d; peas, 52s 7d

Malt.—The best qualities are held firmly, at higher rates, while the value of the middling and inferior kinds is well supported.

Provisions.—Very few sales of Irish butter have taken place this week, yet we have no material alteration to notice in the value. Carlow, new, is selling at 82s to 84s per cwt. Cork, 80s to 90s, per cwt. Foreign butter is heavy, and is to 2s cheaper. Prime Friesland, 82s to 84s; and Baltic, 80s to 82s per cwt. The best Dorset is in good request, and is rise in value of is per cwt., while that of all other kinds is steadily supported. Fine new cheese off slowly at 52s to 54s per firkin, and the to 52s per dozen lbs. for fresh. Lard is a free sale, at 3s to 3s per cwt. more money. In other provisions we have little doing, but prices are very prompt of a considerable rise in the currencies. All other kinds of provisions fully support last week's prices.

Hop and Grease.—Meadow hay 42 10s to 53 17s; clover ditto, 53 10s to 54 18s, and straw, 21 10s to 21 18s per load

Potatoes.—All kinds of potatoes—the supplies of which are small—move off slowly; and, in some instances, the currencies are slightly lower.

Hops, Friday.—We have still to report a very dull sale for all kinds of hops—arising from the favourable accounts which continue to reach us from the various districts, and also from the unsatisfactory supported country packets. 23 10s to 24 8s; Weald of Kent ditto, 24 0s to 25 0s; Mid and East Kent ditto, 24 15s to 25 10s per cwt.

Coals.—Friday.—Stephen Taylor, 16s; Holywell Main, 16s 9d; Stewart's Hartley, 17s, Wear, 17s 3d; Haswell, 18s; and Wear Main, 18s 3d.

Smithfield, Friday.—Comparatively speaking, the supply of beasts on sale here to-day was small, and of middling quality. Owing to the partial prohibition of foreign stock, the supplies of sheep were from Prussia, and who purchased about 60 head of stock for themselves. The number of calves in the market was trifling, and the demand for them ruled rather dull. In pigs, the prices of Scots readily produce 5s 6d per 8lb. There were on offer 240 beasts from Scotland; 270 oxen and cows, 1200 sheep and lambs, and 200 calves from Holland. Sheep —the supply of which was moderate—moved off slowly, yet the late improvement in value was fairly supported. There was very little also for lambs 200 of which came to hand from the Isle of Wight—at a further rise in value of 4d per 8lb. Calves sold freely at a full prices: while pigs were quoted at Monday's figures. Mitch cows were steady, at from £17 to £22 each, including the small calf

Per 8lb. to sink the offals:—Coarse and inferior beasts, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; second quality ditto, 4s 10d to 5s 0d; prime large ditto, 5s 2d to 5s 4d; prime Scots, &c., 5s 6d to 5s 8d; coarse and inferior sheep, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; second quality ditto 5s 0d to 5s 4d; prime ditto —s 6d to —s 6d; prime Southdown ditto, 5s 8d to 5s 10d; large coarse calves, 4s 6d to 5s 4d; prime small ditto, 5s 6d to 5s 8d; large hogs, 4s 0d to 4s 4d; neat small porkers, 4s 10d to 5s 0d; inside do. 5s 2d to 5s 4d; suckling calves, 21s to 28s, and quarter old store pigs, 20s to 22s each. Beasts, 870, oxen, 193, sheep and lambs, 7600, calves, 331; pigs, 81.

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday).—We had a very firm trade here to-day at improved quotations

Per 8lb. by the carcase: Inferior beef, 3s 10d to 4s 0d; middling ditto, 4s 0d to 4s 8d; prime large ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 8d, prime small ditto, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; large pork, 4s 4d to 4s 10d; inferior mutton, 4s 4d to 4s 8d; middling ditto, 4s 10d to 5s 0d; prime ditto, 5s 2d to 5s 4d; veal, 4s 8d to 5s 4d; small pork, 5s 0d to 5s 4d; lamb, 6s 0d to 6s 10d.

ROBERT HERBERT

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

Money has been decidedly easier during the week, although no material alteration in rates has occurred. The position of the Bank of England continues to improve, and the food question and railways, are now the great stumbling blocks to a reaction full and complete.

The state of the Exchequer Market continues to excite the attention of that portion of the public who ordinarily chose this security as a temporary investment. Although the advance announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer will increase the rate of interest above 4 per cent., the present price is scarce above par, and has been at a discount. In this position it is urged that not only has the amount, viz., nine millions, requires reduction to make the remainder more valuable, and funding unrecommended. On the other hand, it must be remembered that at present the old rate of interest alone is payable, the increased rate not coming into effect until after the 15th of June next, on which day all the bills issued the 16th day of June, 1846, will be either paid off, or new bills issued in exchange, at the option of the holders. Should subsequent issues be therefore, made in October or until the 4th of June, on which day the lists must be sent to the Exchequer, the Chancellor will find a large portion of the holders' demand money instead of new bills. To meet this requirement, it is suggested that a further increase in the interest should be temporarily resorted to, as funding at the present rate of money would be a great injustice to the tax payers of the country. It is, however, well known that the portion of Exchequer Bills usually devoted to the sales or purchases on the part of the public is confined to a few jobbers, who arbitrarily make their own price, and should they determine to demand money, inconvenience would ensue. Under these circumstances, much attention is attracted to the June payment; but the interest of the public would certainly be better consulted by an increased rate of interest, rather than by a funding, however small.

Influenced by the advance in the corn market, Consols, which opened on Monday at 86¾ to ⅞, declined to 86¾, buyers for Money, and 86¾ buyers for Account. They began on Tuesday at 86¾ to ⅞, but more transferred with buyers apparent on Tuesday, and a large purchase on a private account, towards the close of business, advanced the price to 86⅞. On Wednesday, Consols opened at 86⅞ to ⅞, and did not vary until after the close of the Money and Stock Exchange, which, in some measure account for this unusual circumstance. A slight reaction on Thursday reduced prices about ⅛ per cent.; the amount of business done, however, was very large. On Friday, the market was heavy, and closed at 86⅞ to ⅞, for Money, and 86⅞ to ⅞ for Account.

Bank Stock, 2 per Cents. Reduced, 86¾ to ⅞; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent. Annuities, 87⅛; Long Annuities, expire Jan ., 1860, 8 13-16; Ditto, 30 years, Oct. 10, 1859, 9 1-16; Consols for May 27 86⅞; Exchequer Bills, 1 pm; D . Small, 5 pm

There has been no salient feature in the Foreign Market during the week: all has been inanimate and desultory. Mexican, on Monday, quoted 26½, and closed at that price for Account. Portuguese have fluctuated between 34¾ and 34, closing at the latter place. Spanish Active Bonds, on Monday, were 22¾ for Money, and remain nominally at that price. The Three per Cents. were 33¾ for Money, and close at 33¾ for Account. Brazilian Bonds are 82. Buenos Ayres are 38. Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents. are 57⅞; Four per Cent. Certific ates 88.

The Railway Market continues in the same unvarying position that it has displayed for some time past Sales are avoided; but, wherever pressed, a great reduction is inevitable. The closing prices of the shares last dealt in are subjoined, and will serve to show the state of the Market: Ambergate, Nottingham, Boston, and Eastern Junction, 1¼; Caledonian, 23¾; Eastern Counties, 19½; Do., York Extension, 5¾; East Lancashire, New, 5¾; East Lincolnshire, 7½; Edinburgh and Glasgow, 67; Great Grimsby, 10¾; Ditto, Preference, 10½; Ditto, Half and Quarter Shares, 10¼; Great Northern, 1¾; Great North of England, New, 6½; Great Western, 109; Do., Half Shares, 64¾; Do., Quarter Shares, 15½; Do., Fifths, 24¾; Do., New, 6½; Hull and Selby, 101; Lancaster and Carlisle, 10¾; Leeds and Bradford, 59¾; Leeds and Thirsk, 19½; Ditto, Preference 6 per Cent., 8¾; Liverpool, Manchester, and Newcastle Junction, 1½; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 51½; London and North Western, 101; Ditto Quarters, New Shares, 11¼; Ditto, 5 per Cent Shares M. and B., 65; Ditto, £10 Shares M. and B. (C), 5½; London and South-Western, 60½; Ditto, Scrip, 4¾; Lynn and Ely, 26½; Lynn and Dereham, 20; Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire, 34¾; Ditto, Half Shares, 17; Ditto, Thirds (Reg.), ⅛ dis.; Manchester, Buxton, and Matlock, ⅛ dis; Manchester and Southampton, ⅛ dis.; Midland, 112½; Ditto, New, 38¾; Ditto, New, 7½; Ditto, Birmingham and Derby, 89¾; Newcastle and Berwick, 24¾; Ditto, New, 7½; North British, 20; Ditto, Half Shares, 13¾; Ditto, Thirds, 8¾; Northern and Eastern, Quarter Shares, 1¼; North Staffordshire, 8¾; Ditto Scrip (late Churnet and Hyde), 1¼; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 18; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 4¾; Shropshire Union, 9; South Eastern and Dover, 30¾; Ditto New (dits, £33 6s. 8d.), 11; Ditto New (Ditto, £16 13s. 4d.); West Riding Union, ¼ dis.; York and Newcastle, 34½; Ditto, Preference, 6¾; York and North Midland, 81¾; Ditto, Preference, 9¾; Ditto, East and West Riding Extension, 19¾; Boulogne and Amiens, 16; Central of France (Orleans and Vierzon), 4¼; Namur and Liege, 3¾; Northern of France, 10¾; Orleans and Bordeaux, 6; Paris and Lyons, 42; Sambre and Meuse, 6¾.

SATURDAY MORNING.—Consols opened firmly yesterday, quoting 86⅞ for Money. Exchequer Bills, 1 pm. Bank Stock, 2 per Cents. The heavy and downward tendency of the Corn Market had an influence on this improvement. Consols closed at 86⅞ for Money, and, for Account, 86⅞, buyers. There was nothing of any interest occurred in the Foreign or Share Market

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, MAY 18.

BANKRUPTS

J. BERKLEY, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, merchant. P. HENRY WOOD, Cheshire, tea dealer. J. M. BLASHFIELD, Alston with Garrigill, Cumberland, manufacturer. J. DICKINSON, Manchester, bookbinder. T. PITCH, Duke-street, Tooley street, hop merchant. S. GRAHAM, Glasgow, Lanark, writer. J. HARRIS, Aberystwith, Cardigan, draper. J. Jones, Salford, tailor. J. HITCHINS, Chichester place, Gray's-inn-road, cabinet maker. J. MATHER, Rose-farm, Chadkirk, Cheshire, miller. J. PHIPPS, Cross-street, Finsbury, dealer in horses. J. PICKETT, Everett-street, Russell-square, cowkeeper. G. PURTON, Longwood, Dunsfold-in-Surrey, innkeeper. J. SMITH, and Lewis Flint, Oxford, and Ditton, Buckinghamshire, Fenchurch-street, manufacturing chemist. J. SIMPSON, Cropwell Bishop, Nottinghamshire, carrier W. STANTON, Leaming, Worcestershire, maltster. J. TAYLOR, and W. CLARKE, Nottingham, lace manufacturers. C. WEAL, Lollgate-street, City, straw bonnet maker. R. WADE, Chesterfield, tailor. T. WALLIS, Oxford-street, woollen draper. G. WEBSTER, Stannerod, Yorkshire, coal dealer. W. WILD and R. WILD, Gigg in Bury, Lancashire, bleachers. E. WOOD, King William-street, City, tobacconist

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATIONS.

J. BOYD, Greenock, spirit dealer. J. CALLIDAY, Paisley, manufacturer. J. CAMPBELL, Edinburgh, draper. H. W. GODDHALL, Inverness, tailor. J. LOUDON, Kilwinning, cabinet maker. A. M'GRIGOR, Glasgow, upholsterer. R. RULE, Falkirk, merchant.

TUESDAY, MAY 21.

At the Court at Buckingham Palace, the 20th day of May, 1847, present the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty in Council, her Majesty in Council was this day pleased to declare the Right Hon. George William Frederick Earl of Clarendon, Lieutenant-General and General Governor of that part of the United Kingdom called Ireland.

LORD CHAMBERLAIN'S OFFICE, May 19.

Notice is hereby given, that the State Ball at Windsor Castle, will be closed from Monday, the 24th inst., until Monday, the 7th of June.

WHITEHALL, May 21

MEMBER RETURNED TO SERVE IN THE PRESENT PARLIAMENT

County of Galway.—T. B. Barry, of Marble-hall, in the county of Galway, in the room of Thomas Barrowell Martin, Esq., deceased

WRITS SUPERSEDED

G. JONES, Bilston, Staffordshire, wiredraw. J. ARMITAGE, Huddersfield, woollen cloth merchant.

BANKRUPTS

T. BURRELL, Billiter-sq. Essex, Hornchurch, victualler. E. PALMER, Great Surrey-street, Blackfriars-road, agricultural agent. J. C. WHITESNURY, Blackheath, Greenwich, builder. B. MOODY, Fenchurch-street, civil engineer. W. CROFT, Spring at-end, Paddington, Surveyor. S. ELLIS, Bridge-street, Lambeth, builder. D. PADDON, Milner-place, Islington, tailor. J. MARSH, Lambeth, clothes salesman. H. HIBBINS, Keiton, Buckinghamshire, stone mason. J. JEFFRIES, Bedford-place, Bloomsbury-square, Middlesex, M. D. WEBB, Bristol, porter dealer. D. WOOD, Devonshire-street, Mile-end, Birmingham warehouseman. J. SUDDEN, Bradford, Yorkshire, innkeeper. J. HOLDEN, Manchester, tailor. J. HOLDEN, Manchester, bookseller. J. and G. BILL, Little-silver, Exeter, builders. A. NORVALL, Liverpool, draper. J. HARLAND, Barrow, Durham, farmer. J. and J. HARLAND, Barrow-on-the-Hill, the wife of J. W. Cunningham, Esq., of a son.—In Eccleston-street, the lady of Rear-Admiral M.P. of a daughter.—On the 16th inst., the lady of Ross D. Mangles, Esq., M.P., of a son.

BIRTH.

On the 12th instant, at St. Andrews, Newcastle-on-Tyne, by the Rev. Thomas C Smyth, Thomas Shaw Hellier Airey, Esq., of Kirkham, Lancashire, to Caroline Eliza, daughter of the late Edward Shafto, Esq., of the city of Durham, and granddaughter of the late Sir Cuthbert Shafto, of Benwell Tower, in the county of Northumberland.—In Paris, Flora Frances Rebecca Dunleavy, eldest daughter of Major-General Dunleavy, of the Victoria Cross.—The Hon. John Rowlin n Freshy, Esq., to Jane Napier, widow of the late C. J. Ilbry, and niece of Sir Richard Keats, Bart., and Admiral James, Lord Keats, G.C.B.—On the 19th inst., at Cordova, Sarah Halford, youngest daughter of the late Rev W. E.lis.—May 10th at St. Mary's, Monmouth, by the Rev. Thomas Lewis, Mr. Thomas Amelia, daughter of the late Thomas Dickell, Esq., of Goldcliff, iron works, Staffordshire.—At St. James's, Bury, Mr. Joseph S. Boreham Milner, to Mary Ann, second daughter of Mr. Isaac Cooper, merchant, of Bu.

DEATHS

At Brighton, Isabella, daughter of the Rev. Richard Smith.—At the Club Chambers, Regent-street, John Russell, late Lieutenant-Colonel of the 7th Bengal Cavalry.—At Sedgwick-street, Somerset, Miss Susannah Helena Macdonald, only daughter of the late Comm. Alexander Macdonald, aged 76 —At Harrow-hill, in her 86th year, Mrs. Sergeson, relict of the late Rev. Thomas Sergeson, and mother of the Rev. rector of the late William Mackaig, Esq., M.P.——At Brighton, Miss Jane Simpson Ramsay.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—The Nobility, Subscribers to the Opera and the Public, are respectfully informed that there will be a GRAND EXTRA NIGHT on THURSDAY next, MAY 27, 1847, when will be performed for the first time in this country, an entirely new Grand Opera, LA GITANA, in Three Acts, with New Scenery, Dresses, and Decorations. The Scenery by Mr. Charles Marshall Mares, Mdlle JENNY LIND (La Maestra di Canto), Signor Belletti, Salvi, Tamburini, Sig. P. Labiache, and Tonzo Sig. Gardoni

To be followed by the GRAND DIVERTISEMENTS in the BALLET DEPARTMENT, combining the Talents of Mdlle. Carlotta Grisi, Mdlle Louis Grahn, Mdlle. Carolina Rosati, Mdlle. Petit Stephan, and Mdlle Cerrito. M. Perrot, Director.

The Free List is suspended, the Public Press excepted. ⁂ Pit Tickets may be obtained at noon on the Evening of Performance, price 10s. 6d. each.—Applications for Boxes, Pit Stalls, and Tickets, to be made at the Box-office, Her Majesty's Theatre. Doors open at Seven o'Clock, the Opera to commence at half-past Seven o'Clock.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.—EXTRA NIGHT, THURSDAY, MAY 27th, when Donizetti's DON BUCEFALO will be performed with the most perfect ensemble, comprising a double Orchestra, powerful Chorus, with the leading characters sustained by Mdlle. Grisi, Persiani, Corbari, Marlo, Novere, Tamburini, Tagliafico, Lavy, &c. Under the direction of M. Costa.

Fanny Elsler and Taglioni are still perform in the new and popular Ballet LA SALAMANDRINE, supported by Mdlle. Rosati, Mdlle. Cerrito, and Mdlle. Petipa, and a numerous Corps de Ballet. The Scenery by Messrs Grieve and Telbin, the Music by Signor Sarmi. Tickets, Stalls, and Boxes, to be had of Mr. Jullien, 214, Regent-street; and at the Box-Office, Bow-street

Prices of Admission:—Pit Stalls, 7s; Pit Stalls, 21s; First Amphitheatre Stalls, First Row, 15s.; Second and third Rows, 12s. 6d.; Second Amphitheatre Stalls, 7s.; First Amphitheatre Tiers, 6s.; Second Ditto, 5s.; Gallery Stalls, 3s.; Gallery Pit, 2s.

Tickets will open at Half past Seven, and the performance commence at Eight.

ASTLEY'S NATIONAL AMPHITHEATRE OF ARTS.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. W. BATTY. Under the special patronage of her Majesty the Queen Dowager, and their Royal Highnesses Prince Albert and the Duchess of Gloucester. This Splendid combination of unprecedented novelties; in addition to which, Mr. Batty has formed an engagement with the celebrated Mr. Ducrow, for the first time in the present age. Madame Laurent—WHIT MONDAY, MAY 24, 1847, and following Evening, at Seven o'Clock. And in order to prevent a repetition of the GOLDEN-FOOTED STEED, by the Clerks of the Chancel House of the Black Valley; followed by an unusual and brilliant display of Horsemanship, presenting a variety of Equestrian Performances, by the whole of the Ducrow Troupe, and the Extraordinary Stud of Performing Horses, Ponies, &c. Since the commencement of this Entertainments, more than Four Hundred Performances, public and private, have been given in London; and, notwithstanding the numerous vulgar imitations which are now being produced at the various Metropolis, the unapproachable superiority of the above party is established by their undiminished popularity and attraction. During the few remaining weeks of their Engagement, the Performances will be continued every Monday, Thursday, and Saturday Evenings, and a Morning Performance will be given on Saturday next, May 22nd, at Three o'Clock. Also, every Evening during the Month of June, will be appropriated for the separate Benefits of each Member of the Company. And in order to prevent a repetition of the Overwhelming Demands upon the Box-office, it is intended to present to every visitor of the Private Boxes and Stalls, a Portrait of the Manager and Lessee, which will be given on the Night of Benefit, capacity THURSDAY, JUNE 3rd, for the BENEFIT of GRAMON (Their veteran); THURSDAY, JUNE 10th, for the BENEFIT of STANWOOD (Gentleman); THURSDAY, JUNE 17th for the BENEFIT of WHITE (Sanger); THURSDAY, JUNE 24th for the BENEFIT of HERRINGTON (Sanger); THURSDAY JULY 1st, for the BENEFIT of PEEL. Private BOXES or STALLS at 31 and 21s. Royal Learnington Spa, Stroud, and the Box Office of the Theatre.

MR. ANDERSON has the honour to announce that he will have UAL GRAND MORNING CONCERT will take place at the Great Concert Gallery, Hanover, on FRIDAY, MAY 28, to commence at Half-past One o'clock precisely, on which occasion she will be assisted by the following celebrated artistes:—Mdlle. Lutzer, Mdlle. Lanzano, Rampel, and Dorus Gras; Signori Garcia and R. Costa, Labbette, Bendy, Lucas, and Staudigl. Instrumental Performers—Pianoforte, Mrs. Anderson; Harp, M. Godfroid; Violin, M. Sainton and Herr Joachim; Flute, Signor Ciardi; Violoncello, Signor Piatti; Sax Horns, the Messrs. Distin. The Orchestra will be complete in every department Conductor, Signor Costa.—Boxes, Stalls, and Pit Tickets may be had at all the principal Music Warehouses, and of Mrs. ANDERSON, 31, Manchester-street.

MUSICAL UNION.—TUESDAY MAY 25.—WILLIS'S ROOMS. Half-past Three o'Clock precisely. Quartet in F, No. 68, Haydn Quintet in A Minor, Op. 28, Onslow.—Quartet No. 1, Op. 18 Beethoven.—Executants: VIEUXTEMPS his last performance in England this season), Sainton, Hill, Piller, and Piatti Single admission 5s., 10s. 6d. each, to be had on application at the Director; at CRAMER, BEALE, and Co's, Regent-street; and OLLIVIER'S, Bond-street. A limited number only will be issued

J. ELLA, Director.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—Hanover-square Rooms.—Programme of the SIXTH CONCERT, MONDAY EVENING, MAY 24.—Sposhr's Symphony in F. Power of Sound Concerto Violin, M. Vieuxtemps. Beethoven's Overture to Egmont: Mozart's Symphony in G minor. Beethoven's Overture in C, Op 124. Vocalists, Madame Grua Dorus, Miss Dolby, and Mr. Whitworth Conductor, Mr. Costa. Single Tickets, One Guinea, and Double Tickets, £1 10s., to be had of Messrs. ADDISON and HODSON, 210, Regent-street.

ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS, REGENT'S-PARK.—The Public are informed that Visitors will be admitted to the Gardens of the Zoological Society on and after MONDAY next, and every following Day, on the payment of 1s. for each person. An Exhibition of Domestic Poultry will take place on LILLY'S 25th, 26th, and 31st; the particulars of which and a list of the Prizes, may be had at the Office, No. 11, Hanover-square.

By Order of the Council,

J. W. MITCHELL, Secretary.

SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS.—The FORTY-THIRD ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN, at the Gallery, No. 5, Pall Mall East, each day, from 9 till dusk.—Admission, 1s.; Catalogue, 6d.

W. WRIGHT, Secretary.

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS. THE THIRTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN at their Gallery, 53, Pall-mall, near St. James's Palace, from Nine o'Clock till Dusk.—Admission, 1s.; Catalogue, 6d.

JAMES FAHEY, Secretary.

£1000 PRIZE PICTURES.—Subject, "Baptism of Christ in the Jordan." These Competition Works of Art have been two years in preparing. The easels was lit by 12h. The Exhibition will be honoured by a private visit by H.R.H. the Prince Albert, and is now open to the Public, daily, from Nine till Six Admittance, 1s. Families (for a Season), Gentlemen's Gallery (Subscribers), Fyfe Park Corner

ONEIROMANCIE ARTISTIQUE of MADEMOISELLE ISA PRUDENCE, the celebrated costume Somnambulist, who has already excited general admiration at her establishment; or the Performance of Historical, Mythological, Dramatic, and Characteristic Imaginary Additions to the Dream of Napoleon, under the direction of MADEMOISELLE HERMINI LAURENT, by mere transmission of ideas and sensations through the agency of the will. The representations of which will take place at Egyptian Hall every Wednesday, in Hanover-square Concert Rooms; and every Friday at Willis's Rooms, King street, St. James's; and at Half-past Eight o'Clock every Saturday, at the Queen's Concert Room, 74, Mortimer-street

WIRTSUN HOLIDAYS.—Mr. Disraeli, in his beautiful Work on "Tancred," says, "The view of Jerusalem is the history of the world: it is the history of earth and heaven, where not a rock is visible that is not heroic or sacred, consecrated or memorable—not a valley which is not the wave of prophets—not a valley which is not the valley of heaven-anointed Kings—not a mountain that is not the mountain of God." A panorama of this beautiful city, by DUDLEY'S ROMANCE OF ANCIENT JERUSALEM, 212, Piccadilly: Illustrated by a gentleman every hour. Open from 11 till 5, and 7 till 10. Admission, 1s.; Children and Schools, 6d. Pamphlet and Map, 6d

WALHALLA, late Miss Linwood's Gallery, Leicester-square. Brilliant Success of MADAME WARTON'S Unequalled Tableaux Vivans. Open every Morning and Evening. Owing to the unbounded recognition of the inimitable WHITE MARBLE STATUE GROUPINGS, with the novel effects produced by the new Chemical Light, by Mr. A. Warton, of the Royal Surrey Zoological Gardens, they will be repeated Three times a Week, the Evening's Performance with the WHITE MARBLE GROUPINGS, and the Second Part in Colours, delineating accurately the works of the Sculptor and Painter The splendid Tableaux of the SERPENTINE DANCE, NEPTUNE AND AMPHITRITE, and the universally admired VENUS RISING FROM THE SEA.—A Grand Morning Performance of White Marble Statue Groupings will take place on Tuesday, JUNE 1st.—Morning Performance at Three: Evening at Half-past Eight o'Clock Stalls, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 2s.; Promenade, 1s. Splendid Combination of Novelties for the WHITSUN HOLIDAYS.—An Entire Change

WHITSUN HOLIDAYS.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—LECTURES on CHEMISTRY, on the Evenings of Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, at Nine o'Clock. LECTURES on NATURAL PHILOSOPHY Daily, by Dr. Bachhoffner; and on the Evenings of Tuesday and Thursday, on ARTIFICIAL LIGHT, and the Agents employed in its production. EXPERIMENTS with ARMSTRONG'S HYDRO ELECTRIC MACHINE. The MOVING MODELS and MACHINERY explained. New VOLTAIC EFFECTS introduced. New DISSOLVING VIEWS, the OXY-HYDROGEN MICROSCOPE, &c. EXPERIMENTS with the LIVING-MODEL and DIVING-BELL. The NEW ROTATING MOTIVE, under the Direction of Dr. WALLIS, commences at Seven o'Clock.—Admission, 1s. Schools, Half-price.

HENLEY-ON-THAMES GRAND REGATTA, 1847.—The REGATTA will take place on THURSDAY and FRIDAY, the 17th and 18th days of JUNE, when the following Prizes will be contended for. The Grand Challenge Cup, for a Six-oared Boats, now held by the Thames Club, London, entered as ... The Wyfold Challenge Cup for the winners of the Grand Challenge Cup. Trial heats ... The Leander Challenge Cup, for Four-oared Boats, ... Friday heat Grub, Cambridge; entrance, £2 5s. The Stewards' Challenge Cup, for four-oared boats, now held by the Oriental Club; entrance, £2 2s. The District Challenge Cup, for four-oared boats; entrance, £2 2s. The Maiden Challenge Cup, for four-oared boats, now held by the Dreadnought Club; entrance, £2 2s. The Silver Wherries (Presentation Prize), for amateurs in pair-oared boats, open to all England; entrance, £1 1s. The Silver Wherry (Presentation Prize), for amateur sculls, open to all England; entrance, £1 1s. The Silver Wherry (Presentation Prize), for amateur scullers of Henley; entrance, £1 1s.

Silver Medals will be presented to the Winners of the ... Entrance must be made by the night before the Regatta, at the Crown Inn, Henley, where Inspector Wheeler, Henley, or before the Race at the Stewards' Office, Mr. JAMES NASH, Secretary. Henley, April 20. COOPER, Jun., Treasurer; the Secretary, and Messrs. HICKMAN and KINCH, Post-office, Henley-on-Thames.

SCOTTISH BALLADS.—Mr. LAND respectfully announces his intention of giving INSTRUCTION in Scottish Ballad Singing. Mr. Land's assistance in the Vocal Concerts, at Willis's Rooms, has been highly appreciated, and he will receive Pupils for Singing, the Pianoforte, and the Art of Accompaniment, as for many years past.—Address, 9, Gloucester-terrace, Hyde-park.

THE ROSHERVILLE HOTEL, situate on the Banks of the Thames, at a convenient distance from London, with the Rosherville Pier (at which the Gravesend Steamers touch) in front, and the celebrated Gardens at the back, this delightful and commodious establishment is now open for the reception of any one commencing that they have re-opened the above Hotel for the season, WINCH and CALDER beg to return their most grateful thanks for the very liberal support they have received during their former occupancy, and to inform the public that they have taken the same with as large a share of patronage, and to solicit a continuance of these favours to which they have hitherto given their most strict attention and moderation in charges which have hitherto given such satisfaction. Every department will be conducted on the same plan as heretofore. WHITEBAIT and all other delicacies of the season will be constantly on the table, and every attention will be paid to parties dining there; they will be of the same choice description as those which have always met with such universal approbation

THERE is not probably any existing art which confers a more pleasing and permanent interest upon the home circle than the Portrait of a beloved object. Its value is not confined to the ties of relationship, or by still closer bonds, and we all must be sensible of the gratification derived from possessing a faithful likeness of a parent or valued friend, in order that, when death or distance shall separate us, we may, through the medium of the painter's art, recall to our mind and heart the features and expression of those whose memory we have most dear. Mr. HIMAH DAVIS, PORTRAIT PAINTER, Student of the Royal Academy, begs to inform the Nobility and Gentry that he has removed to a ... in order to meet the increasing demand for his Portraits, Miniatures, Pencil-drawings, &c., which he will execute from the ILI Five. Having studied the works of the best masters, more particularly those who have died in the arts of Portraiture, including the late Sir Thomas Lawrence, Sir M. A. Shee, &c., he can guarantee to those who may favour him with their patronage a perfect likeness and finished picture. Terms and specimens may be seen at his ... and terms ascertained, on application to Mr DAVIS, 20 Percy-street, Rathbone-place

ELEGANCE and ECONOMY in PAPER-HANGINGS.—A French Suites, 7s. 6d. per piece; Flock, 6d. per yard; 22,000 pieces in Stock Panel Decorations, Fresco, Chintz, and other Papers. Terms, Cash. Established 20 years. W. CHOSBY, 29, Lowther Arcade. N.B. Three doors from the Strand entrance.

EDMUND SPILLER'S PATENT SELF-ACTING BACHELOR'S KETTLES.—Five-pint size, 9s. 6d.; six ditto, 9s.—BOILING WATER IN ONE MINUTE! They require no tongs, no poker, no shovel, no coals, no ... they may be lighted in one second, and no attention required afterwards. EDMUND SPILLER, In

PUBLICATIONS, &c.

Just Published, crown 8vo., bound, morocco cloth, price 6s.,

MODERN LIFE, and OTHER POEMS.—"Modern Life" is a domestic tale; the poetry is easy, flowing, and pleasing, and the scenes and images exceedingly natural.—Bell's Weekly Messenger.

ACCOUNT OF THE ASSAMESE

Just Published, in 8vo., with 16 coloured Plates, a Map, and Wood-cuts, price 14s. cloth

A SKETCH of ASSAM; with an Account of the Hill Tribes. By an OFFICER in the Hon. East India Company's Service.
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill.

On the First of June, 1847, Part L, price 1s., to be completed in Six Monthly Parts with an Illustration by Sidney Hodges and Phiz,

THE DISGRACE TO THE FAMILY. A Story of Social Distinctions. By W. RICHARD JERROLD
London: Published for the Proprietors by Messrs BARTON and Co., Holborn-hill.
No Advertisements can be received for the First Part after May 31st.

LADIES' GAZETTE of FASHION for JUNE, price 1s. 6d., contains a Steel Plate of Children's Dresses beautifully so coured, and all Modes, Fashions, &c., described with numerous Engravings on Wood, including all the Paris Fashions, and every Novelty of the season, with Dissertations, Tales, Poetry.
E. DIPPER BOXALL, Bond-street, Saville-row, and all Booksellers.

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS: History of the Succession of the Ancient Roman Emperors, with the Prices of their Coins, bearing Portraits, their Dates and Mottoes, as just published by F. WILLIAM, Dealer in Ancient Coins, 46, Strand, London, price 1s.; by post, 1s. 6d. Coins sent by post, Bought, Catalogued, &c.

THE ORDNANCE SURVEY of ENGLAND, six inch Scale (appearing part of Lancashire), also, the one inch Scale (South of Lancashire), of Ireland and the Irish Counties, as well as all the largest Maps of England, Wales, Ireland, and Scotland, may be seen at LETTS and SON'S, 8, Royal Exchange, sole Agents to her Majesty's Board of Ordnance.

NEW SONG.—JENNY LIND'S DREAM.—This will be found to be one of the most beautiful melodies yet produced, and coupled, with the peculiar circumstances under which it was composed, is sure of attracting more than the usual popularity ensuing composer. J. J. HAITE. Forwarded, postage free, on receipt of 24 postage stamps. London: R. WILLIAMS, 90 (Yorkstone-court), Cheapside.

N. J. SPORLE'S NEW SONG, "COUNTRY LIFE." Sung by the leading singers at the Theatres &c. with unanimous encores. It will be found one of the most exquisite songs ever written. Sent postage free, on receipt of 24 postage stamps. London: Edition de Salon, 9, Williams-street, Cheapside.

Just published, 8vo., price 2s. 6d.,

THE CALENDAR of the COLLEGE of PRECEPTORS. Contents: Most Beside the Marquis of Northampton—Vice-Patrons, Lord Denman, Lord Cottle Count Strutt, W. Hewitt, Esq., M.P., &c. &c. Giving the Rules, Objects, and Proceedings of the College of Preceptors: the Examination Tests for Midsummer, 1847: Programme of the Ladies' Educational Institution: Plan of an Academy and Results thereof: Agency and Registration Office.—London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMANS.

THE ILLUSTRATED EDITION.—COMPLETE.

THE NEW TESTAMENT,
WITH
SIXTY ILLUSTRATIONS BY EMINENT ARTISTS.

A Large Copper Plate View of the Holy Land; and Notes, Historical and Descriptive.
In Monthly Parts, price 1s. each.
The Work may be had complete in Two Volumes, price 30s. cloth, gilt edges.
Much pains and expense have been bestowed upon this publication, and even those which have been, as it were, pictorially used up, are re-tried with a New Process.—Athenæum.
"A publication characterised by the spirit of the well-known proprietors of the 'Illustrated London News,' and destined, we doubt not, to circulate far and wide. The Illustrations are characterised by a daring originality, and finished with a boldness and beauty that fascinate them immensely attractive."—Wesleyan.
London: Published at the Office of The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. Sold by all Book sellers.
PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE ONLY.

LOUDON'S LADIES' GARDENER
Now Ready, 7th Edition, with Woodcuts, Foolscap, 8vo., 6s.
GARDENING for LADIES; or, PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS in GARDENING. With a Calendar of Operations and Directions for Every Month in the Year; and an Alphabetical Index. By Mrs LOUDON, Author of "Modern Botany for Ladies," "The Year-Book of Natural History," &c. &c.
"A perfect vade-mecum."—Literary Gazette.
"This charming volume can be safely recommended."—Spectator.
London: WESTLEY and DAVIS, Stationers'-court.

THIRTY-TWO ILLUSTRATIONS to MR. CHARLES DICKENS'S New Cheap Edition of PICKWICK. London: J. NEWMAN, 48, Walbrook-street. These designs are engraved on Steel, in the best manner, and printed on plate paper of good quality. They are published in Monthly Parts of four in each, price Fourpence; or in Complete Sets, the 32 for 2s. 6d., forming one of the Cheapest Illustrated Works ever offered to the Public. Only 20 Plates were at first announced for the above Work, but, as it is to be completed in eight numbers, ten more have been added, making four subjects to each part. The 4 Parts already published, 1s. 4d., may be had of any Country Bookseller, or by Postmasters, for Twopence each.

ORDER OF THE MAN IN THE MOON."
No. VI. will be ready with the Magazines for June.
Edited by ALBERT SMITH and ANGUS B. REACH.
"This Monthly, so easy in its jokes, in the best comic serial we have. We defy melancholy itself to resist a hearty laugh at the contents of this number."—Sun.
May be had at every Railway Station, Library, and of every Bookseller in the Kingdom. Price 6d., edits.

Just Published. Second Edition. Price 10s 6d
HEALTHY SKIN: or the Management of the Skin as a means of Promoting and Preserving Health. By ERASMUS WILSON, F.R.S., Consulting Surgeon to the St. Peters Infirmary, &c.
The Art of Health. Happiness. and Long Life in Two Volumes. In each; by post in same.

WHAT TO EAT, DRINK, and AVOID; (with Diet Tables for Regulating one's Meals) in Relation to Health, Constitution, Age, Occupation, and Mode of Life. By ALEXANDER WOOD, 23, Peterscourt-row; the Author, 10, Argyll-place, Regent-street; and all booksellers.

NEW BOOKS.—It is not possible that the constant demand for New Books can be met by any other than a large public Establishment. This well ascertained fact is that on which BULL'S NEW LIBRARY SYSTEM is founded. By providing an annual supply for a limited number of Subscribers, accommodation to all is secured, while the cost is such as to reduced. A further feature in Bull's New System is, that at the end of a year the new books are divided, so that every Subscriber may have, during two guineas' worth to keep. Terms, post-free, on application to Mr. Bull, Library, 19, Holles-street, Cavendish-square.

THE SEA.—To PARENTS and FRIENDS of YOUTH. There is now an opportunity of PLACING a YOUTH of respectable connexions in a [illegible] required.—Apply to Mr. W. G. FLYNN, opposite the Custom-House, London, who can at all [illegible] Not elsewhere in London.

THE RACES, LIGHT WEIGHT, ANTI-DUST, RAIN, &c. NICOLL'S PALETOT D'ETE. One Guinea.—114, Regent-street, and 22, Cornhill. Not elsewhere in London.

MESSRS. NICOLL, Court Tailors, of 114, Regent-street, [illegible] and moderate price as exemplified in the REGISTERED PALETOT of LLAMA CLOTH.

If the Summer now approaching should prove as hot as it was last year, doubtless NICOLL'S light PALETOT of LLAMA CLOTH will be again much required. Its most any other cloth under it. The luxurious ease and comfort which it imparts, and the [illegible] some sufficient inducement to accept the same course again.—Price of PALETOT, rich silk linings, Two Guineas and a Half.—114, and 22, Cornhill, Regent-street, and 22, Cornhill

PATRONS of NICOLL'S REGISTERED PALETOT.—His Royal Highness Prince Albert, Royal Highness Prince George of Cambridge, his Serene Highness Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar, his Grace the Duke of Wellington, and the [illegible] Royal visitors to the British Court, with almost every nobleman and gentleman in the [illegible] The best in the satisfactory qualities of this fashionable overcoat is the [illegible] wool of this Establishment's patronage.

AGENTS for NICOLL'S REGISTERED PALETOT of LLAMA CLOTH.—Manchester, Nicoll, 1, Mosley-street. Liverpool, Nicoll, 4, Church-street. Chichester and Sons, Birmingham. Warelow and Son, New street. The Cape, J. Bruce. Calcutta, D. Wilson and Co. Hong Kong, R. Rutherford. Bombay Waghorn and Co. And the principal firms in all large towns throughout the United Kingdom and its dependencies.

TROUSERS!—A good fit in this garment can be seldom obtained.—R. GRAVES, fashionable Trousers-maker and Tailor, 313, High Holborn, after many years' experience and study, has discovered a method for ensuring four of combination that he can fit gentlemen with this garment better than any other person in London. The characteristic of his fitting is a genteel easy fit, with perfect ease for stooping, sitting, walking, or riding. A well-assorted stock of the newest designs to select from. R. GRAVES, 313, High Holborn.

BERDOE'S LIGHT OVER-COAT for the SUMMER [illegible] gentlemen[illegible] from, or made to order at a day's notice.—W. BERDOE, 69, New Bond-street, and 22, Cornhill.

DEANE'S IMPROVED FORTABLE GARDEN TENT, [illegible] to encamp in a [illegible] left at your own house, or [illegible] had at DEANE'S Horticultural Implement Warehouse, open [illegible] William-street, London-bridge.—Deane's Horticultural Horse-hair Implement Catalogue Free [illegible] sted kingdom.

CHUBB'S LOCKS, Fire-proof Safes, and Cash Boxes.—CHUBB'S NEW PATENT DETECTOR LOCKS give perfect security from false keys and pick-locks, and also give immediate notice of any attempt to open them. They are made of every size, and for all purposes to which locks are applied, and are strong, secure, simple, and durable. Chubb's Patent Fire-proof Safes, Hackmatack Chests, &c., Strong Japan Cash Boxes, and Deed Boxes of all sizes, on sale, and made to order, fitted with the Detector Locks.—C. CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard.

A HANDSOME DRESS is often spoiled for want of an [illegible] Patterns forwarded. E. D. ROGERS, 161, Borough.

FRENCH CLEANING.—SAMUEL OSMOND and Co., Dyers, 8, Ivy-lane, Newgate-street, inform the Ladies that they clean Silk, Satin, Cashmere and Muslin de Laine Dresses, Shawls, Scarfs, Ribbons, Bonnets, Parasols, [illegible] to Dye, Re-dye, and Finish, on the shortest notice. Also Damask, Moreen, Rep, and Chintz Bed Furniture and Window Curtains Cleaned, Dyed, and Finished.

LESSONS in MILLINERY and DRESS-MAKING.—MRS. [illegible] Teaching the Art of Dress-making in a Series of Lessons, undertakes to convey [illegible] moment any Lady may know the Principles of Cutting, Fitting, and Executing in the most Fashionable Style, at Six Lessons, for One Guinea. The correctness of this system can be fully substantiated by reference to Pupils.—Apprentices and Improvers Wanted.—Millinery Rooms, Paper Models.

THE attention of LADIES is particularly requested to the NORWICH COTTON COMPANY'S 9 and 6 Cord Sewing Cottons, as being of the most beautiful and uniform texture yet produced. It is wound on reels, in lengths of 100, 200, and 300 yards. The 6 Cord is not only the very best Cotton for Sewing, but is especially adapted for Knitting, Netting, and Crochet. To be had at all the most respectable Mercers, Drapers, Haberdashers, and Berlin Repositories; and wholesale only of the proprietors, Messrs. J. A. BARBER and Co., Norwich; and of their Agent in London, Mr. W. W. TRIPP, 35, Friday-street, Cheapside.

NOW that the summer sun has burst the clouds of spring, [illegible] wishes to draw Ladies' notice to his novel and beautiful stock. White vilonites are now in great favour, and Mr. Read has a large and choice assortment. In addition to his usual stock of novelties in Lace and Embroideries, he has just added the newest shapes in Silk Mantles and Caps from Paris, which he will offer at such moderate prices as shall maintain the cheap reputation of Diaper, her Majesty's Lacemen, No. 337, Regent-street.

PARASOLS.—The Patentees of the SYLPHIDE PARASOL (60,000 of which have been already sold) beg to call the attention of Ladies to their Registered Improvement, THE INDIAN. This invention consists of an invisible band of elastic material, which, by contracting when the Parasol is closed, keeps it so at the will of the wearer. Any Lady will know the superior ease and comfort of a Parasol of this description. To any, on the friction of the ring, which has hitherto been indispensable, on account of the inconvenience attending other Parasols of all descriptions.
W. and J. SANGSTER, 140, Regent-street: 10, Royal Exchange; 94, Fleet-street.

THE NEW BLACK AND FANCY GLACE SILKS, for the present season, are now ready.
Very Rich Quality 3s. 9d. per yard
The Richest French Glacés and Cameleon Silks, at 3s. 6d.
Patterns sent to Ladies residing in the Country free of expense.
Address to KING and HEDGES, 76, Newgate-street.

TWO-AND-HALF YARDS SQUARE.—THE NEW OMBRE MALINES SHAWL, made of the Finest Indian Lisses for Evening and Summer Wear, shaded Pink, Pale Malve, Green, Lavender, and Black. Per Midsummer Post.
KING and SHEATH instead selling the above magnificent Shawls at TEN SHILLIN and SIXPENCE EACH, and for the convenience of the Nobility, Gentry, and Public residing in any part of the United Kingdom will send one or more free of expense.
Payments to be made in Postage Stamps or Post-office Orders, payable to King and Sheath, at the Post-office, London
N.B. The above shawls cost the Manufacturer 21s. each before the two months since.
Please to address KING and SHEATH, 76, Newgate-street.

CHILDREN'S FROCKS, COATS, and PELISSES; Infants' Caps and Night Gowns, Robe Blankets, Lawns and Cambrics Nightcaps, with every other article now required for a young family; these offering the truest economy and best assortment, are now compleated of in going from shop to shop when juvenile clothing is required. An Illustrated Pamphlet, affording additional information will be sent free, on receiving a paid letter.

ATRAMENTAL, and all other LUGUBRIOUS ATTIRE for Funerals, at the shortest notice, and on the most reasonable terms, with every other requisite mourning in the most varied and newest manner. Funerals conducted on the most economical principles of combining the Utility with the Decency of Mourning, at a moderate charge, and at the shortest notice, by post or letter. Estimates forwarded, and Models in miniature or Cuttings, if required.—The Mourning Warehouse, No. 85, Edgware-road.—HUNT and WALLEY.

MOURNING COSTUME FOR LADIES.—Ladies or families requiring any description of MOURNING, whether a complete outfit or a single article, may be suited in the manner most economical, with the best materials and most modern designs, full 30 per cent. below the exorbitant prices usually charged. A note, descriptive of the mourning wanted, will insure a prompt transmission of every requisite, from the warehouse to any part of the metropolis or suburbs, or, if preferred, families may be waited on by a numerous assortment of the most fashionable and recherché patterns always on view.—JAY'S General Mourning Warehouse, 247, Regent-street.

HALF-MOURNING DRESSES of FOREIGN MANUFACTURE, for SUMMER WEAR, both Light and Transparent. DRESSES of the most elegant and Fashionable Fabrics are now submitted to the notice of the Nobility, Gentry, and Public, at the LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE, 247, Regent-street. Patterns and designs embracing, for W. C. JAY, patterns which are pre-eminent in variety, novelty, beauty, and delicacy of design; and manufacturers of eminence have been engaged in making the Dresses in the most elaborate perfect of their art. These designs, rare in their separate beauties of manufacture and pattern, and in their combination peculiar for the Fashion of the season, must be tasteful, notwithstanding their entire superiority to anything hitherto accorded, will be offered at the most moderate prices. Patterns of this Establishment will enable Ladies, even in the most remote places, to have an assortment of Mourning Dresses so varied, so select, so economical, or so fashionable.

RICH SILKS, that were 7s., now 4s. 10d.—GEORGE SMITH, of Ludgate-hill, is the fortunate purchaser of an immense collection of rich BROCHE SILKS for dresses, at a reduction of one-third from the cost price. They are now on sale at 4s. 10d. per yard, instead of 7s.; and, be it remembered, that all the above are the most fashionable patterns to which public attention is invited, but to a suite of new and elegantly-designed Silk Dresses, which, in this case, are made for the Spring of 1847. The purchase was from an eminent manufacturer, established 40s for purity of taste and the valuable qua ity of his goods. The Silks, which bear the name of "Jenny Lind," "Crystal Palace," "Princess Royal," and George Smith, is sold by him only, at whose Warehouse alone can be purchased the "Sea Island Lace," and "Lady of the Lake" Silk, and the "Victoria" Regent Cord, Victoria Lawn, Linen, and Swiss Curtains. The prices are marked in plain figures.—23, Ludgate-hill (late Sand Hand Bridge's.)

TORTOISE-SHELL COMBS.—J. PROUT, Brush and Comb Maker, 229 Strand, London, respectfully invites the attention of purchasers to his unusually extensive of the choicest [illegible] and superior workmanship. Families residing in the country may be waited on by a person from this establishment, who will attend with a choice assortment, at the most moderate prices. Combs exported, or repaired. Ivory articles will be exchanged. PROUT'S Brush and Comb Manufactory, 229, Strand, London, near Temple Bar.

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH BRUSH, and SEVINA SPONGES. Useful Inquiry.—For proof of the extreme durability, power [illegible] and economy of these articles, see Testimonials. Numerous Testimonials with each bottle. Improved Clothes-brush, that cleans thoroughly, in one-third the time. The new Velvet-brush, and numerous Stock of genuine unbleached Sponges, at METCALFE and CO.'s, Only Establishment, 130B, Oxford-street, one door from Holles-street.

IMPORTANT to LADIES.—GRAFFTEY'S DEPILATORY removes superfluous Hair on the Face, Neck, or Arms, in a few minutes, without risk or injury. The directions are simple, and lead to certain success. Sample Packets per post 2s. 8d. or Bottles, 5s. 6d. to be had of GRAFFTEY and Co., 205, Regent-street, and 4, Royal Exchange; or by order of any Druggist or Perfumer in the Kingdom. Also, GRAFFTEY'S INFALLIBLE HAIR DYE, price 3s. 6d., and 5s. 6d. Observe the Address.

A SHILLY'S ANTI-DEPILATORY EXTRACT, the cheapest and most speedily effacious article offered to the public, warranted to stop the hair [illegible] may be had from all respectable Perfumers and Chemists throughout the Kingdom. Wholesale, by Ashley, Brigg-st, Barclay, Farringdon-street; Edwards, 67, St. Paul's Churchyard; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Pront, Strand, near Temple-bar; Keating, 79, St. Paul's Churchyard; and at Howden's, Devonshire-terrace, Portland-road. Numerous Testimonials with each bottle.

GIBBINS' CREAM of ROSES and ROSEMARY.—This esteemed and elegant article is most respectfully offered to the Public, by GIBBINS, Court Hairdresser and Perfumer (late Parfy), 7, King-street, St. James's-square, as the most delicate and efficacious Preservative of the Hair. Being a Pomade, it will be successfully applied to any head of hair, and the most poor order.
GIBBINS' EXTRACT of ROSES and ROSEMARY is a Liquid made from the above-named plants, and, when applied in Washing the Hair, renders it soft and glossy, or, after illness, its astringent properties prevent the Hair from falling off.
No 7, King-street, St. James's-square.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, a Preparation of the Choicest Ingredients of the Oriental Herbal, of inestimable value for preserving and beautifying the Teeth, and rendering the Breath perfectly sweet. This elegant and fragrant Dentifrice has obtained its selection by the Queen, the Court and Royal Family of Great Britain and the Sovereigns and Nobility throughout Europe. Price 5s. 6d. per box.—CAUTION.—To protect the Public from fraud, the Genuine Article bears the name of ROWLAND, MACASSAR, 20, Hatton-garden," engraved thereon, a fac-simile of which box sold by them, and by all Chemists, Perfumers, and Hairdressers.

SEND EIGHT POSTAGE STAMPS, and by return, and Post Free, you will get a handsome Teaspoon or C. WATSON'S SOLID ALBATA PLATE, which is rapidly superseding silver for all domestic uses, as it is of the same colour and handsomeness as at very little. This is the only solid substitute now sold and, unlike plated goods of any kind, there is nothing to wear off, so that the more you rub and clean it, the better it will continue to look, though it should be in daily use for fifty years. Don't be afraid to put it to any test, and then send your order. A full catalogue of prices, with patterns of every other article, will be inclosed with the Sample Spoon.—Address C. WATSON, 41 and 42, Basinghall-street, London.

CHOCOLAT-MENIER. Prepared at the Hydraulic Manufactory, [illegible] and is much used in [illegible] and various other sweet [illegible]

St. Paul's Churchyard; and Messrs HEDGES and BUTLER, 155 Regent-street.

HYDROTOLIC HATS.—JOHNSON and Co., 113, Regent-street, corner of Vigo-street, Hatters to Her Majesty and the Royal Family, respectfully solicit the application of Valves and Air Condensers to Hats. The invention consists of a Valve which is placed in the Crown of the Hat, giving free exit to heat and perspiration, and of a novel apparatus, forming a series of small channels in the back part of the leather lining, by which air is admitted. The Hydrotolic Hat possesses the following advantages.—the regulation of the amount of air admitted into the crown of the hat, by the opening and closing of the valve at the pleasure of the wearer—the impossibility of an accumulation of heated air and perspiration—Impermeability to grease around the head—extreme lightness, coolness, closeness, and durability—and, lastly, their acknowledged comfort to all who suffer from headache, or who are in the habit of taking violent exercise.—Johnson and Co., 113, Regent-street, corner of Vigo-street; and Griffiths and Johnson, 9, Old Bond-street, Piccadilly.

EXTRAORDINARY IMPROVEMENTS in PIANOS, most [illegible] in every respect at prices very moderate notwithstanding their novel and [illegible] Pianos (which have been taken in exchange) at low prices.

PIANOFORTES.—The cheapest House in London to purchase these first-rate Instruments is at H. TOLKIENS, manufacturer, 23, King William-street, London Bridge. H. T. having concluded his extensive purchase of [illegible] Stock, in Private view of the [illegible] at the present time, is enabled to offer them at considerably less than the price charged by them. H. T.'s new and admired Piccolos, each price £25. Old instruments taken in exchange.—TOLKIEN, 23, King William-street, London Bridge.

DANCING TAUGHT, in the most fashionable style, by Mr. WELLS, 4, Brewer-street, golden-square. Private lessons in the Waltz, and Varsa, and Vasa Douze Temps, at 1s. hours, to Ladies and Gentlemen of any age, wishing privacy and expedition. An Evening Class on Monday and Friday. Terms may be had, on application as above.

PURE ST. JULIEN CLARET, 28s. per Dozen; Pints, 18s.; Quarts, 30s. Sent free by HEDGES and BUTLER, Wine Merchants, &c., 155, Regent-street, can be confidently recommended. Also, some superior Gordon's Golden Sherry, 36s. per Dozen. On the receipt of a Post-office Order, or reference, will be immediately forwarded

CURRALL and SON, Importers of COGNAC BRANDY, of the choicest quality. Old Pale 24s. and Brown at 26s. per Dozen. Pints 2s. per Dozen; Hampers, 1s. Bundles at 21s. and 24s. per Gallon. Pale Rich-flavoured Sherry at 36s. per Dozen.—35, Bishopsgate-street Within.

PALE ALE and STOUT, Late HODGSON and ABBOTT'S.—[illegible] The original and highly-celebrated Beer, so universally recommended by the faculty, may be had, on application at this Brewery, Bow, Middlesex, or 98, Grace-church-street, either in Bottles, or Casks of 18 gallons.—N.B. The Trade Supplied TONIC ALE.—This splendid description of Bottled Beer is now [illegible] It is strongly recommended by the faculty as possessing qualities of a stomachic and tonic, promoting appetite, &c. Sold in quart and pint bottles, sourced by Betts's Patent Stopple. JOSEPH STOCKTON, Sole Agent, Storrs, No. 1, Jubilee-mews, Ludgate-hill.

GREEN-GINGER WINE. STIVENS' Original Green-Ginger Wine has now obtained for itself a reputation unrivalled by any British Wines whatsoever, and is daily increasing [illegible] STIVENS begs to observe that each bottle of his Wine bears the mark of each Manufactory, Bristol.; Sarge-yard, Bucklersbury, London; Duke-street and Henry-street, Liverpool and respectfully requests that no other is taken.

SCHWEPPE and Co.'s SODA and other MINERAL WATERS, as well known and appreciated for upwards of 60 years past continue to be manufactured, as heretofore, upon the largest scale, at their several Establishments. Importers direct of the genuine SELTERS SPRINGS of the GERMAN SELTERS WATER. Principal Retail Establishment, 51, Horsen-street, London. Branch Manufactories at Liverpool, Bristol, and Derby; and sold by most of the respectable dealers in Mineral Waters throughout the United Kingdom.

OXFORD-STREET TEA ESTABLISHMENT, corner of [illegible] Shops, and Families, supplied with Tea of the first quality, at the wholesale dealers' prices, by any quantity not less than one pound. Tea and coffee allowed on all original packages. Strong and Congo, 3s. 8d.; the finest Souchong, 4s.; the finest Pekoe of the Season, 4s. 6d.; rich Pekoe Souchong, 5s.; Coffee, 1s. 1d. to 1s. 4d. per lb. CHRISTENSEN and Co., Wholesale and Retail Dealers in Tea and Coffee [illegible] corner of Portman-street, London.

MESSRS. WILKINSON and DOBSON, 32, PICCADILLY, respectfully announce, that the retirement of one of the firm will enable them to offer for a limited period, at greatly reduced prices, a large portion of their choice collection of Fashionable SILVER-LEVER WATCHES, which are warranted. Also a splendid choice SHEFFIELD PLATE.—Messrs W. and D. especially solicit an early call from Patrons and Friends, who are acquainted with the [illegible]

JONES' £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at [illegible] The movements are of the finest quality, jewelled [illegible] and include a few of great merit in the style of Louis XIV. The price is four, five, and seven guineas each, and upwards.
A. B. SAVORY and SONS, watchmakers, 9, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank.

MUSICAL BOXES.—A large stock of the first quality, playing upwards of 600 airs, overtures, &c., including selections from the following favourite Operas:—"The Bohemian Girl," "Maritana," "Daughter of St. Mark," "The Bondman," &c. A catalogue of the music is now ready, and may be had gratis, or will be forwarded to T. COX SAVORY and Co., Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill; seven doors from Gracechurch-street.

SILVER PLATE, New and Second-hand.—T. COX SAVORY and Co.'s Pamphlet of Prices, with outlines, may be had gratis or will be sent post free by paid letter. The contents are the prices, weights, and patterns of new and second-hand Silver Spoons and Forks; new and second-hand Sheffield Plated Goods, and Silver-plated Goods, the new plated on white metal Spoons and Forks, Watches, Clocks, Jewellery, Ladies Gold Neck Chains, and Jewellery.
47, Cornhill, seven doors from Gracechurch-street.

SILVER TEA SERVICES of New Patterns.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Working Silversmiths, 14, Cornhill, London, respectfully inform their customers that they have recently finished a few new designs in Silver Tea Services, which are much improved taste, and that they are sold at reduced prices from those customary in the trade:

	Ivybridge Pattern.			Thistle Pattern
Strong Silver Tea-pot	..	£10 18 0	Strong Silver Tea-pot	..	£ 3 3 0
Ditto Sugar Basin	..	6 14 0	Ditto Sugar Basin	..	7 10 0
Ditto Cream Jug	..	3 18 0	Ditto Cream Ewer	..	4 4 0
Ditto Coffee-pot	..	14 17 0	Ditto Coffee-pot	..	16 16 0
Complete	..	£36 13 6	Complete	..	£42 16 0

A variety of upwards of 30 Silver Tea and Coffee Services may be seen in the Show Rooms, and on application the illustrated price current, containing drawings, with the weights and [illegible] of the articles, will be forwarded by post. [illegible]

SELLING OFF.—WATCHES, JEWELLERY, and PLATE, at 50, Cheapside, adjoining Bow Church.—The whole of the tasteful and superior STOCK of Mr. BARKER, Goldsmith, is now SELLING OFF, at greatly reduced prices. The public are solicited to the above as a genuine sale of superior goods [illegible] Mr. Barker, having declined business, is desirous of realising his property without delay. Every article will be sold at the marked prices. The Jewellery is all first-rate in quality. The Watches Rich and [illegible] Plated Goods, the best manufactured, will be sold considerably Lower than the Plate and Gentlemen's dressing-cases, with or without fittings, in russia leather, mahogany, rosewood, and [illegible] ladies' companions and pocket-books, elegantly fitted; also, mid ng boxes, tea caddies, card-cases, note and cake baskets, beautiful inkstands, and an infinity of [illegible] articles, not to be equalled

SURVEYING, &c. ENGINEER'S COLLEGE, LONDON. Conductors, MESSRS. PRATT and LOWIS. Course I.—Railway Surveying and Levelling [illegible] Course II.—Engineering, Mining, Surveying, Levelling, and Valuing of Land, Timber, Buildings, Townships, &c., will commence on Friday, June 4th [illegible] Prospectuses may be had. Terms, full perfect, per moderate. Pupils, on completing the Course, may be introduced to employment. For Prospectuses, &c., apply at the Offices, Regent-street, Red Lion-square.

ROYAL BANK OF AUSTRALIA, 2, MORGATE-STREET, LONDON.—The Half-Yearly Dividend, at the rate of Six per cent per annum, due the 15th inst., will be payable on, or after the 1st of May next. To Shareholders [illegible] at the office of the Agents and Managers, Messrs. ALLAN, II, St. Andrew's-square, Edinburgh. The Court of Directors grant letters of credit and bills at three or thirty days' sight on the Bank at Sydney, Port Phillip, Launceston, and Adelaide, and are also receiving money on deposit for fixed periods, as a rate of interest to be agreed on, varying according to the term for which it is taken.
By order of the Board,
J. G. WEALY, Manager.
7th April, 1847.

CLERICAL, MEDICAL, and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY.
In addition to Assurances on Healthy Lives, the Society continues to grant Policies on the Lives of Persons subject to Gout, Asthma, Rupture, and OTHER DISEASES, on the payment of a Premium proportioned to the increased risk. The plan of granting Assurances on IMPAIRED lives originated with this office in the beginning of 1824.
Every description of Assurance may be effected with this society, and Policies are granted on the Lives of persons in any station, and of EVERY AGE.
[illegible] Moderate.
The two first Divisions averaged £29 per cent. on the premiums paid: the third, five per cent. The Annuity Bonus, declared June 1845, averaged rather more than £36 PER CENT, and, from the large amount of PROFIT reserved for FUTURE APPORTIONS and other causes, the Bonuses hereafter are expected considerably to EXCEED that amount.
Tables of Rates, with a full REPORT (recently printed) can be obtained of the Society's Agents, or by addressing a letter to the
No., 78, Chancery-lane, Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London

IMPORTANT TO FAMILIES.—THE POPULAR REMEDY
PARR'S LIFE PILLS, a mild, safe, and most effectual cure of Indigestion, Bilious, Liver, and stomach Complaints, Skin Headache, Costiveness, &c. Their composition is truly curious: they are compounded entirely of vegetable products, and from all irritating and deleterious matters, which render their operation mild and [illegible] they do not require the least confinement or alteration of diet, and may be taken on the most delicate person safely, as no confinement is necessary. In all nervous and debilitated disorders (from protracted diseases, &c.) they will be found highly valuable, imparting vigour to the whole system, which renders them a most [illegible]
Their value as a general tonic and restorative of the impaired stomach and biliary system [illegible]

Sold in Boxes at 1s. 1½d. 2s. 9d., and family Packets at 11s. each, by all respectable medicine vendors throughout the World

THE following TESTIMONIAL, given to Mr. THOMPSON, [illegible] of Bedford, by the Rev. W. S. LENGON, of Wymington, Bedfordshire, with permission to publish the same, has been received by Mr. Calsbury:—
"Sir,—I am happy to add my testimony to Mr. Thompson's [illegible]
[illegible] Bedford, May 17, 1847."
Sold in Boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., and 22s., and by Post at 1s. 3d., and 4s. 6d.; may be had of all Patent Medicine Venders, and at Mr. Calsbury's Dispensary, King's-cross, London. A Testimonial and recommendation from an eminent Physician may be seen in the Sunday Times Paper of May 23d.

THE ROYAL STABLES, AT CHANTILLY.

CHANTILLY.

The Royal Huntings of the Bourbons are of olden celebrity; and Chantilly, the residence of the Duke of Bourbon, in the last century, presented the most extraordinary sporting establishment in Europe. Of the grand and extensive buildings connected with it, we are persuaded, the annexed View will be peculiarly acceptable, at the present season.

Chantilly lies twenty-three miles from Paris, on the road to Amiens. The Royal Château was destroyed at the Revolution; but there remains the unrivalled pile of stabling, kenneling, and other sporting appurtenances, constructed from the designs of John Aubert, which was begun in 1719, and finished in 1735. The vast edifice presents a façade, 580 feet in length, and nearly 60 feet in breadth. At the two extremities are two large pavilions, 65 feet square, and 42½ high, from the ground-floor to the entablature. In the middle of the façade is a larger pavilion, containing the principal entrance to the stables; and the whole is ornamented with Ionic columns, trophies of arms and the chase; and the domed roof, sixty-three feet in circumference, and ninety-three feet high, is crowned with "The Horse of France." The vast size of the stables would render them uninhabitable, even for horses, if in winter a fire were not constantly kept. The vault, which is octagonal, is lighted by large oval windows; the whole is ornamented with garlands, and trophies of the chase, heads of stags and boars. Below the dome, and in front of the principal entrance, is a recess, forming a grand arcade, under which is a magnificent cascade. A grotesque head discharges water into a shell, from which it falls in a sheet into a large reservoir, in the middle of which are two leaden horses, life size. At the back of the cascade is the following inscription, supported by two genii:—"Louis Henry de Bourbon, seventh Prince of Condé, erected these stables, and the buildings dependent on them. Begun in 1719, and finished in 1736." The stables are capable of holding 240 horses; and over them are twenty-four apartments, separated by a corridor, 240 feet in length.

The open riding-house, situated between the stables and the pavilion, is a circular edifice, 120 feet in diameter; the carriage court is 320 feet long by 136 feet wide. The great dog-kennel, for stag-hounds, displays heads of stags between the windows; and, at the two extremities, a fountain, ornamented with stags' heads, discharges water into a reservoir, where the dogs drink. There is, also, a winter-kennel for the hounds. The kennel for the boar-hounds is very extensive. the walls are ornamented with paintings of wild boars, and a boar's head throws water into a large cistern. The exterior façade of this building, which faces the village of Chantilly, is 216 feet in length.

In the Duke of Bourbon's time, the number and nature of the occupants of this vast pile were in keeping with the whole. Of horses there were usually more than 200. Of dogs, there were 60 couple of stag-hounds, 80 couple of boar-hounds, and 45 couple of roe-buck hounds. The numbers of piqueurs, gardes de chasse, grooms, coachmen, postilions, helpers, &c., were also very great. Every day had its allotted sport; and such was the quantity of game within the vast enclosures of forest attached to this princely residence, that a blank day never occurred; and scarcely a day throughout the year was suffered to pass without some offering to Diana. To prevent, however, the satiety of confinement to one spot, this modern Nimrod would, after hunting at Chantilly, take a hasty dinner, and then be transported some ten, fifteen, or twenty leagues in his carriage, to be ready to renew the sport in the morning in some other of his domains.

Entertainment to Sir Harry G. Smith. The members of the Senior United Service Club gave a splendid entertainment at their Club House, in Pall-mall, on Tuesday evening, to Major-Gen. Sir H. Smith, to celebrate the return of that gallant officer to his native country, after his arduous services in the East Indies. Lieut.-Gen. Sir A. F. Barnard, G.C.B., and G.C.H., presided, and the Earl Waldegrave occupied the vice-chair. Sir H. Smith sat on the right of the gallant chairman.—After the usual toasts, the health of his Grace the Duke of Wellington was drunk amidst great applause. The gallant chairman then rose, and, having made a complimentary address to the gallant General in whose honour they had assembled, proposed the health of Major-General Sir Harry Smith. The health of the gallant General was welcomed by warm plaudits, and the toast was drunk with all honours by his brave companions in arms. Sir H. Smith, in replying, expressed the gratification he experienced at the cordial reception he had met with since his arrival in England. The healths of the chairman and the vice-chairman were respectively proposed.

THE BROTHERS HELLMESBURGER.

We present this day the portraits of two youthful violinists, who have acquired much fame in Germany, and whose success here has been quite decided. These youths are the sons of the clever leader of the band of the Imperial Opera in Vienna. The elder brother, Joseph, is the solo player of that orchestra, and has greatly distinguished himself in the Quartet performances in the Viennese capital. Joseph has also evinced talents for composition of a high order, and both are skilful pianists. In the Record of the Musical Union, the talents of these artists are thus commented upon:—

"Nurtured in the cradle of modern musical genius, by the traditionary influence of those living contemporaries of Beethoven, under whose auspices these amiable and talented youths have been instructed in their native city, their claims to the suffrages of English amateurs have a double interest. The musical feeling of these violinists is best appreciated in works of a reflective character, for in no other country are instances of deep thought in art so common to the youthful mind as in Germany—a faculty best described in that untranslatable word gemüth as being totally distinct from that artificial sentiment of unbridled passion, which passeth for what it is not—a soul for music. 'Il y a chez les Allemands,' says Madame de Staël, 'plus d'imagination que de vraie passion.' The truth of this opinion is illustrated in the every day examples of the indomitable spirit of the persevering German, unravelling the mysteries of his art, and producing works of deep imagination, oftentimes little calculated to rouse the passions, whilst the French and Italians, of a more vivacious and ardent temperament, maintain their ascendancy, with little knowledge of science, by their vivid and successful portraiture of character, in music less profound, but sufficiently true for its purpose in the lyrical art."

JOSEPH HELLMESBURGER. GEORGE HELLMESBURGER.

THE BROTHERS HELLMESBURGER.

The Hellmesbergers made their début in this country at the third meeting of the Musical Union, and have since played at the Melodists, Drury Lane Theatre, and at various concerts, with the greatest success. Nothing can be more beautiful than their execution of the duos of Spohr, Maurer, Kalliwoda, &c. Joseph has grace, with poetical instinct, with a just perception of the beautiful in art, without any trickery in execution, and reverencing the works of the great masters.

THE NEW HOUSE OF LORDS.

Ay! 'tis a worthy and most glorious pile;
Worthy the land and all its glories past,
Worthy the living wisdom of our Isle,
Is you proud palace, beautiful as vast.
Thereon may gaze pure taste, nor turn aghast
Away from brick abortions—libels foul
Upon the noble Art wherein surpass'd
Our ancestors, albeit they wore a cowl,
And in the ages dark fell superstition's scowl.

The Gothic tow'rs whose shadows span the wave,
The sculptur'd shields of many a noble race,
Statue of sainted sage, or warrior brave,
Whose memories Time's rude wing may not efface
From England's heart—all these the eye may trace—
Drink in their beauties, while the mind recalls
The day when England's barons dared to brace
Boldly their backlers on 'gainst tyrant thralls,
And with their swords hew'd out the foundment of these walls

The men of Runnymede—the deathless band,
Who would not bow them to a foreign throne,
Nor crouch like vassals in their native land,
But live and die for her—for her alone!
These were the men by whom the seed was sown,
Which garnered to institutions great and wise;
E'en as the oak from humblest acorn grown,
"The brave old oak" beloved by British skies,
Tow'rs steady in its strength and the wild rack defies.

E'en so may prove the noble hearts which here
Are met in patriot love and council sage,
The Pillars of the State to Britain dear,
Alike removed from democratic rage,
And court vanity. Well may they wage
The war of man's advancement, beating down
Hydral abuse; prove worthy of our age,
Cheering the out and rampart'ing the crown,
Like Chatham as he stood unawed by Death's dark frown.—L.

The Printing Press.—Looked at merely as a means for the employment of labour, see what printing has done. Doubtless the old transcribers grumbled sadly at the change from hand work to press work; from the pen and illuminating tool to the moveable types and composing stick. A single printer would do the work of 200 writers. No doubt the Bentincks and Sibthorps of those times set this forth with the utmost eloquence of pathetic complaint, and proved to demonstration how ruin must fall on a large and industrious class from this new and accursed invention. But what is the result? For one written book we have 10,000 printed books, and 20,000 people employed for the 200 displaced. The introduction of successive improvements into the machinery of printing, from the rude hand-press of Guttenberg to the last improvement by Mr. Little of the steam double-cylinder machine, has, in every case, been followed by an increase in the power of production, a reduction in the price of the thing produced, and a greater demand for labour and labourers. It has rarely happened that the great benefactors of the world through arts of peace have received due honour from their contemporaries or from posterity. Scarlet, and the glitter of swords, are catching to the eye. The glories of war have seldom wanted their due record. Blenheim speedily attested the victory of Marlborough, but it is not long since the first public monument was erected to James Watt.—Daily News, May 17.

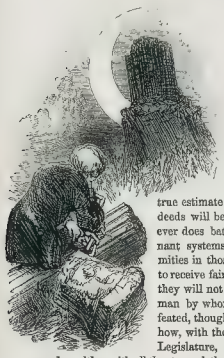
High Price of Food.—The Plymouth Times says, "The necessaries of life are now almost at famine prices, and with every prospect of a further rise. Bread is here selling at 1s. 10d. per quarter for the seconds, and 2s. for best quality. All the poor man's wages are, therefore, expended on bread. Meat is out of the question, and potatoes are equally so."

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 198, Strand aforesaid.—Saturday, May 22, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 265.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, MAY 29, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE LATE MR. O'CONNELL.



CONFIRMATION of the rumour of the death of O'Connell was made public on Monday. There's a great spirit gone! must have been the feeling if not the expression of all, on hearing of it. But it is not by his contemporaries he will be justly judged; the true estimate of his qualities and his deeds will be left to History. Whoever does battle with old and dominant systems excites too many enmities in those arrayed against him, to receive fair measure at their hands; they will not allow greatness to the man by whom they have been defeated, though, if they ask themselves how, with the full command of the Legislature, the Throne, offices, power, and wealth—with all the strength that an empire can bring to maintain an old injustice—they have been driven from their position and compelled to yield, their own answer, that it was effected by a very ordinary, and, in some respects, a worthless man, convicts themselves of singular bad fortune or extreme incapability.

How came they to yield to what they say they despise? But, no! these things are not done by ordinary men; the destinies of the world are not swayed by such natures; this is what is felt by the detractors from genius that has made itself too powerful, though a man's contemporaries never acknowledge that secret conviction, but History, which knows nothing of personal or political humiliations, will be just, and in her pages O'Connell will be inscribed among the great names of the records of the earth.

His death has let loose a flood of writing on his qualities and character; and, in many quarters, there is evinced a singular reluctance to allow him the qualities that he must have possessed to gain and keep his pre-eminence in that proverbially fickle position, a popular leadership. His character is analysed, and, when resolved into its elements, it is found that it was deficient in many points: he was less learned than this man, less dignified than that; he was coarse, violent in his language, varying in his modes of action, frequently regardless in what he said and did: all this and more is told us, and all this and more may be true; and yet, the inference suggested is perfectly false. The soul and intellect of a man, devoted to a great task, works as a whole; we may anatomize and compare portions of his mental nature with portions of the mental nature of others, and say he was not learned, he was not classically eloquent, he was not nice and forbearing, and we have still to ask how was it he did more than the learned, the refined, the nice, and the forbearing politicians of his own time, and that preceding it? What combination of faculties enabled him to succeed where all besides had failed? That is the mystery; the answer to that question would give the true cause of O'Connell's greatness. He did, he worked, he acted, he produced results; and it is the workers of the world of whom history takes note. This comparison of one man with another, "after the manner of Plutarch," is pedantic and unsatisfactory; it leads to no conclusion Single qualities may exist in a man, and very uselessly, for the want of some other. The organisation that unites many and great ones, combined with the power and the will to use them, are the rare exceptions, they constitute greatness, and make Shakspeares Cromwells, and Napoleons. They stand alone and supreme, and all others, however admirable in themselves, are subordinate; but as men do not like to be surpassed, the contemporaries of a great man busy themselves to find out defects in the dominant character; and, human nature being imperfect, they of course succeed; yet the relative position of matters remains just as before. An instance or two may illustrate what we mean.

Did the reader ever dip into the controversial and pamphlet literature of the days of the Cavaliers and Roundheads, and note the "contemporary" opinion of Cromwell in the Standards and Posts of those times? The man was wholly contemptible by their account; he was a brewer, awkwardly made, with a large nose, obscure and involved in speech, vulgar, merely ambitious, and a consummate hypocrite, utterly hollow in all he said and did. Comparisons too are not wanting; Fairfax was an honester man. Hampden nobler and more conscientious—and so on. Yet the whole life and actions, speeches and letters of Cromwell, prove this estimate to be false; his faith was not only sincere but fierce; he did and dared what no hypocrite would attempt, and must have had great and commanding talent, or he could not have dethroned the Stuarts, and governed the kingdom ably for so many years; men submit to a system, though represented by a nullity—as Austria is ruled by an idiot; but where power is merely personal, men only yield to it, from the instinctive obedience that is paid to great superiority.

Again, did the reader ever read the pamphlets and journals, and look at the caricatures of the early part of this century, from which sources alone England formed its opinion of Napoleon? Pen and pencil combined in giving him scarcely an attribute of humanity; a wretched dwarf stained by every vice and weakness, such was the man, by "contemporary" accounts, who, at the head of an adoring people, was scattering the Armies of Europe like dust, and dictating terms to ancient monarchies. Could such things be done by the poor reptile "the Corsican" was believed to be by the general mass of the people? No! it was simply impossible; the instrument is always proportioned to its work; and now we know him from the painting of Delaroche and the sculpture of Canova, from a thousand records that prove his immense genius, and show how egregiously men erred in their estimate; truth is always compelled to appeal for impartiality to the future.

MANCHESTER NEW RACE COURSE.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

Of more concern to the present is the question, what will be the effect of the removal from among us, of him who was "a nation in a man expressed?" From the age he had attained, the death of O'Connell has been long contemplated as a not remote event; and of late the general impression, but too well justified by evident symptoms of physical decay, was that he had done his work; the last three years of his life have not been happy; the closing days of the patriarch were clouded with apprehensions of future evils, which he saw no men fitted to meet. He entered on life when Ireland was emerging from a rebellion, reeking with blood; he chained the wild spirit of revolt, trained it to peaceful energy, taught it political action; and for thirty years his influence has preserved peace and order in a country where the elements of social anarchy abound; he dies amid a generation madly speaking again of war and bloodshed as things not to be avoided, but sought; his last efforts were exerted to restrain this party, and his influence was successful; that check is now gone; and there is no one man of name and power enough to supply it.

We fervently hope the preservation of peace may prove not to be among the things for which the people of England are indebted to O'Connell. All the rest we ought cheerfully to acknowledge; on every question of progress and improvement for the last twenty years, he gave his influence to the popular side. After he entered the House of Commons he by no means confined himself to Irish affairs. His speeches on the Reform Bill were among the best of that memorable period; he assisted in carrying Corporation Reform, and he took part in the discussions of the Anti Corn-Law League, when a small room at Westminster contained it and its audiences, when it was the object of derision and contempt. Reviewing his career, from its beginning to its close, it was, in all the leading principles, consistent; he began with a deliberate denunciation of the Union; and, half a century afterwards, he died in a struggle for its repeal. Compare that tenacity of effort and perseverance in opinion with the vacillations and conversions from one extreme to the other, of Peel, of Wellington, of Lyndhurst, of Stanley, of almost any other public man of his time; O'Connell gains infinitely in the comparison; he had a faith, and kept to it, though not to the exclusion of effort for other changes which were more practicable.

Believing that the social state of a people is dependent upon its political condition, his life was a long battle for political rights, which the legislation of two centuries had extinguished; but, the conflict still undecided, political strife is quelled by a stern necessity, and life itself has in Ireland become a problem and a difficulty. It is quite certain that a new era is opening in that country; with O'Connell dies its old History, and he leaves behind him an advocate for fair dealing, justice, and immediate exertion, that England can no longer be deaf to; it is the necessity of supporting a destitute people, at an expense of some twelve millions sterling a year; such will be the cost of every annual campaign with hunger and disease. That drain on the national resources will do more to awaken England to her danger than O'Connell could effect; he foretold it, but was not listened to; the crisis has come, and must be met. Ireland can be neglected no more, or she will drag England down with her; and Englishmen are beginning to ask why, with land and labour abounding, is the country wretched? It may be that other qualities must now take the lead, where society has to be re-constructed; the policy of Ireland, for the ensuing years, must be more a physical and material Government than anything else; questions of rights, privileges, and creeds, will be merged in the more pressing problem of how all are to exist. For other times come other men; and it is at this crisis O'Connell has died. The event is regarded in Ireland as something long expected—with deep regret, but a sense, too, that, in the state of the country, and at his age, he could not do much more. He was active to the last, and sank outworn and over-wearied at his task:—

> And he is gathered to the Kings of thought
> Who waged contention with their time's decay,
> And of the past are all that cannot pass away.

NEW RACE COURSE, MANCHESTER.

This new Course, allowed to be "one of the finest in England," lies in Broughton, two miles from the Manchester Exchange, on land belonging to Mr. Fitzgerald, of Irwell Castle, immediately below the old course of Kersall Moor. It is almost surrounded by the river Irwell, is nearly on a level, and upwards of a mile in length. It has three approaches—one from Manchester, by the Suspension Bridge; another through Wallness; and the third by Pendleton

The Course is held on lease by 24 proprietors, at a rental of £500 per annum. The cost of the Stands, Stabling, &c., designed by Messrs. Starkie and Cuffley, of Manchester, has been upwards of £8000, and about £2000 has been expended on the course, roads, &c. The first stone of the Grand Stand was laid by N. Slater, Esq., in March last; it is an elegant structure, and has been substantially built by the executors of the late Mr. W. Tess: it will contain 1000 persons; and there are, also, two other Stands, which will accommodate 7200. The races commenced on Wednesday.

ANNUAL DINNER OF THE LONDON CHESS CLUB.—The press of matter already in type prevents our doing more at this moment than allude to the anniversary celebration of this old-established Club, which took place on Wednesday last, at the George and Vulture Hotel, and drew together the most numerous and brilliant assemblage of Chess notabilities which has ever been congregated. The party consisted of about one hundred gentlemen, including nearly every player of distinction in the metropolis; besides M. St. Amant, the leading player of France; Herr Staudigl, the great basso (whose magnificent singing formed the leading feature of attraction during the evening); and Messrs. Horwitz and Harrwitz, the two eminent representatives of the German Chess School.

DEATH FROM DISSECTING.—Mr. Potter, of the University College Hospital, died last week in consequence of having pricked his finger while dissecting. The subject was, it appears, the late Harvey Leach, the well-known Gnome Fly and Man Monkey, who bequeathed his body to Mr. Liston. That gentleman handed the body over to Mr. Potter for dissection, and he, whilst engaged in this labour, pricked his finger with a lancet. This caused little care beyond placing his hand in a sling for a day or two; but on the third day Mr. Potter was attacked with fever—abscesses formed on his hand, which extended up the muscle of his arm and over his chest, causing great agony; death eventually put a period to his sufferings, and on Saturday last his remains were interred in the Kensall-green Cemetery.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE

FRANCE.

The Paris papers this week are du l so far as politics are concerned, but they announce the important and cheering fact, that there has been in France, as well as in England, a general fall in the price of wheat and flour, and a further reduction was expected. The Echo de l'Agriculture states that all its accounts from the departments concur in describing the prospects of the approaching harvest as extremely cheering—a circum tance which had induced the holders to send their grain in greater abundance to the markets, and rendered buyers more circumspect. In Brittany and Normandy, it had been ascertained that there was plenty of grain for the local consumption until the ripening of the next crop. A fall in prices had accordingly taken place, as also in Picardy and Alsace. At Strasburg, the diminution had amounted to 6 per centre.

M. Ganneron, the eminent banker of Paris, and a member of the Chamber of Deputies, died at his residence in that capital last Monday morning. M. Ganneron had been ill for a few days, and his death had been anticipated, so that the shares of his companies had declined in a short time from 1110 to 1055. He had lent large sums of money upon deposits of railway shares, which are not worth near the sums which were borrowed.

The National of Tuesday has an article, in which it states that the retirement of M. Guizot is probable, and even gives the following list of a new Cabinet as having been fully decided upon:—

Count Molé—Minister of Foreign Affairs, and President of the Council.
M. Dufaure—Interior.
M. H. Passy—Finance.
M. Dode de la Brunerie—War.
M. Billault—Marine.
M. Vivien—Justice.
M. Darn—Public Works.
M. Saint Marc Girardin—Public Instruction.
M. Rignon—Commerce.

The Moniteur publishes despatches from Rear-Admiral Brua, dated Papeete, in the island of Moorea, on the 7th of February, 1847, announcing the complete submission of Queen Pomare, and of the entire population of the Society Islands, to the French Protectorate. The Governor had gone to meet the Queen at Moorea, and, at the interview which he had with her in the Protestant temple, he told Pomare that if she had joined him from the beginning, many misfortunes would have been avoided, and recommended her not to listen in future to the foreign influences which had been so fatal to her. The Queen replied that she was determined to join him in future in all things for the good of the Government; and that she was, moreover, resolved to put an end to mendacious words.

There has been a delightful change in the weather in France. It was exceedingly hot last Saturday, and on Sunday the thermometer stood at 85 degrees of Fahrenheit's scale.

The Chamber of Deputies has commenced the discussion of the proposition of M. Glais Bizoin relative to postal reform. M. de Rainneville suggested some unimportant modifications in the original proposition, which were combated by M. Fallous, who advocated the principle of an uniform rate of postage for the whole kingdom. M. Muret de Bord stated that he was a partisan of the initiative of the Chamber in political, but not in financial matters. He was, he said, convinced that, if the assembly adopted to-day postal reform, to-morrow it would be called upon to reduce the duty on salt, and next to suppress the stamp duties. Such a course would ultimately produce the disorganisation of the French finances. M. Muret de Bord moreover observed that it was not at a moment when the committee was desirous to add 5,000,000 to the expenditure of the Post-office that the Chamber could think of effecting a reduction of at least 33,000,000 in the receipts of that branch of revenue.

M. Dumon, the new Minister of Finance, expressed himself as favourable to the principle of postal reform, but stated that, in the present condition of the finances, it is impracticable. He added that he hoped, at a future period, to be able to bring in a bill on the subject, but that, under no circumstances, could he consent to a uniform rate of postage.

SPAIN.

Some of the letters from Madrid give melancholy accounts of the disputes between the King and Queen, which form now the great topic of the day, and which it has been found impossible to arrange. The Queen seems to be determined upon a divorce, and has gone so far as to call together a Council of her Ministers and Prelates to deliberate upon the question. The King refuses to do anything to alleviate matters, and appears to be entirely under the influences and direction of persons around him, whose object it is to perpetuate the differences between the Royal couple.

The differences between the King and Queen have produced misunderstandings in the Ministry, and it is probable that the result will be a change in the Cabinet.

The King remains at the Pardo, where he amuses himself with shooting, while the Queen is at Aranjuez. On the 18th, M. Pachoco, General Mazzarredo, and M. Salmanaca, will join the King to request that he would consent to reside in the same Palace with the Queen, either at Madrid or at Aranjuez. To this request the King gave a positive refusal, excepting on conditions which the members did not consider themselves authorised to grant. A fearful letter of the 19th states that the terms proposed by the King were, an entire reform of the household, the banishment of some persons whom he regards as his enemies, and the free exercise of his rights in the interior of his Palace. Finding that the King was immovable, the Ministers returned to Madrid. A Cabinet Council was then held, at the close of which M. Pachoco and M. Salamanca started for Aranjuez.

The Political Chief of Lerida has sent a dispatch to the Government, announcing that a party of Carlists, headed by the celebrated Canon Tristany, who was appointed by the Count de Montemolin Governor-General of Catalonia, had been defeated at Ardevol. Tristany and three other prisoners had been shot. Ros de Eroles, another Carlist leader, was among them. Immediately after the execution of Tristany, the Captain-General of Catalonia, proclaimed a general amnesty, according full and free pardon to all the rebels who laid down their arms within eight days after the proclamation.

Tristany was nearly seventy years old. He had rendered himself, as chief of a large guerilla band, during the civil war, remarkable for his audacity, and for atrocities he perpetrated on the Christines, and especially the National Militia in Catalonia, where he ended all the efforts of the many detachments sent in his pursuit. Even when the war was over, he continued in all keeping his ground in the mountain fastnesses of the principality, owing to the extraordinary influence he obtained amongst the Montanes; and, until this last affair, was generally successful in his daring incursions into the territory occupied by the Queen's troops. No man ever enjoyed more popularity, or possessed more influence amongst the mountaineers, and to which is to be assigned his many escapes from the ambuscades planned to capture him. He was, in fact, the Mina of Catalonia.

PORTUGAL.

We have Lisbon letters to the 19th instant. They add little further information in regard to the state of affairs in Portugal. The news of the rejection of the proposed terms by the Oporto Junta is confirmed, and hostilities had been suspended until it was known what further course would be taken by this country.

Sa da Bandeira had sent a confidential aide-de-camp to Lisbon, and there were symptoms of his coming over, with the bulk of his division, and acknowledging the Queen's authority.

Colonel Wylde had returned to Lisbon from Oporto. The Salem war-steamer had been sent to St. Ubes, with a French and Spanish officer likewise on board, to prevent, by remonstrance, a renewal of hostilities, should such a step be meditated.

The Oporto letters of the 17th state that no event of importance had occurred since the departure of Colonel Wylde, in the Polyphemus, for Lisbon. Das Antas and Povoas are about to make a combined movement for the purpose of dislodging Casal from Lamego.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

Cape of Good Hope papers to the 28th of March have reached us. They contain very little news in reference to the Kaffir warfare.

The important station of Block-house Chief Fodo, had captured several thousand head of cattle, but the Chief himself had escaped, and a reward of £60 had been offered for his apprehension by the Lieutenant-Governor. One of Fodo's head men is said to have been made prisoner. An extraordinary trial had taken place at the sessions at Natal, which ended in the conviction of two natives (Umwangala and Nonqaqula), charged with murder. It appeared that the murdered man was a reputed Kaffir Wizard, which the Umwangala believed had, by his acts and his enchantments, destroyed a certain number of his (Umwangala's) wives. Umwangala summoned a witch dance, at which the deceased was smelt out by the Kaffir doctor employed on the occasion. After this ordeal, there could remain no doubt of the culprit's malpractices, and Umwangala employed Nonqaqula, at the doctor's sentence, the prisoner Nonqaqula, who headed a party of five that waylaid and murdered the unfortunate victim, Unkomanzi. The convicts were sentenced to death; but, as the matter was connected with the superstitious practices of the natives, the sentence was commuted by the Lieutenant-Governor.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE GREENWICH RAILWAY.—An inquest was held on Wednesday evening, at Guy's Hospital, on the body of James Collins, aged twenty-seven. George Grimstead, station master at the Spa-road Station, on the Greenwich Railway, stated that the deceased was foreman of a gang of labourers employed on the line. On Saturday last, the deceased was standing on the new line, when the train from London came towards the station. Just at that time the deceased, apparently not knowing what he did, stepped on the old line; the engine driver and fireman, seeing the danger, called to him, but the train being then only six yards from him, it was impossible to stop in time, and the whole of the carriages passed overhim. Verdict, "Accidental death."

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL SIR THOMAS PEARSON, K.C.H.

THIS gallant officer, son of the Rev. Thomas Horner Pearson, entered the army in 1796, and served against Flushing, in the Helder Expedition, in Egypt, North America, the West Indies, and Portugal, and throughout the last American War. He received several severe wounds, and was one of the general officers who enjoyed rewards for distinguished services. He wore a medal and one clasp for his conduct as Major of the 22nd Foot at Albuera, and as second in command at Chrystler's Farm. He was born in 1782; and married, in 1810, a daughter of General Coffin. His death took place at Bath on the 21st instant. At the period of his decease, he held the Colonelcy of the 85th regiment.

COUNTRY NEWS.

ELECTION FOR DERBY.—An election for Derby is likely to take place before the general election, owing to the death of the Earl of Scarborough, and the consequent elevation of Lord Duncannon to the House of Peers. The Hon. Frederic Leveson Gower has offered himself as a candidate in the Whig interest.

BUCKINGHAMSHIRE.—Mr. Disraeli will be a candidate at the next general election for the representation of Buckinghamshire.

REPRESENTATION OF BATH.—A meeting of the electors of St. James's Ward, Bath, was held on Monday evening, when it was unanimously resolved to support the present representatives of the city. An address was issued on Tuesday morning signed by Lord Duncan and Mr. Roebuck.

ELECTION FOR NORTH NORTHUMBERLAND.—The following address has been issued by Sir George Grey:—"Gentlemen, The result of the canvass instituted by my friends removes all doubt as to the course which it is my duty to take with reference to the requisition which I had the honour to receive, inviting me to become a candidate for the representation of the northern division of the county. I cheerfully accept that invitation. It is with great regret that I take leave of my present constituents, whose confidence I have enjoyed without interruption from the time of my first entrance into Parliament; but the requisition which has been addressed to me is one which, under present circumstances, I cannot refuse to obey. You are aware that my public duties will prevent the possibility of my undertaking a personal canvass of the electors. I must therefore rely on the continued exertions of my friends to ensure the success which they confidently anticipate. Should I be placed in the honourable position of one of your representatives, I shall endeavour to prove myself worthy of your choice by a consistent adherence to the principles by which my public conduct has been guided, and by a careful attention to your local interests.
G. GREY."

THE CROPS IN SUSSEX.—The Sussex Advertiser says:—"Every department of the vegetable kingdom has, within the last fortnight, made rapid and luxuriant advances, and wheat is making such vigorous pulsations as to be almost 'seen to grow.'"

POVERTY IN MANCHESTER.—The condition of the poor in Manchester is daily becoming worse, and the demands upon the poor rate are fearfully increasing. From 16,000 to 20,000 persons are now relieved weekly, at a cost of nearly £1000. How long this state of things will continue it is difficult to say. The cases of application on behalf of starving Irish paupers have gradually increased during the last few weeks, and in the last and preceding weeks the number advanced from 200 to 300 per week. The weather in the manufacturing districts, however, is exceedingly fine, so that hope is not entirely extinguished. The rapid growth of vegetation has reduced the price of potatoes at least one-third.

REDUCTION IN THE PRICE OF CORN.—We are much gratified to find by the provincial papers and private letters from various parts of the country, that the greedy dealers in corn are likely to make a bad speculation, as prices are gone really on the decline, and holders begin to evince an anxiety to get rid of the stock on hand. The accounts of the state of the crops are cheering and gratifying in the extreme. The game of the famine mougers is nearly up.

SUDDEN DEATH OF CAPTAIN HARCOURT.—Captain Harcourt or D'Harcourt, of St. Leonard's hill, near Windsor, died suddenly on Tuesday morning. It will be remembered that he succeeded to the property of St. Leonard's hill, on the death of his brother the Marquise D'Harcourt, some time in last June, her Ladyship having met her death by having swallowed a quantity of laudanum in mistake for a draught. The deceased Captain D'Harcourt, who was more than forty-four years old, had had two attacks of apoplexy since his residence at St. Leonard's-hill. On Monday, however, he remarked to his lady that he felt much better in health than he had done for many years previously. The same evening, about seven o'clock, he was again seized with apoplexy, and, although attendance was immediately called in, he expired on Tuesday morning.

FIRE AT CHELTENHAM.—A fire broke out on Monday night in the manufactory of Mr. John Alder, upholsterer, Albion-street, Cheltenham. The entire property, to the extent of £2500, was consumed. Besides the very extensive workshops and warehouse, there was a large quantity of mahogany and other valuable timber, which was entirely consumed. Mr. Alder is stated to be insured to the full extent of his loss.

THE LATE MURDERS AT MIRFIELD.—The examination of the two prisoners, Michael M'Cabe and Patrick Reid, apprehended a short time since on suspicion of being the perpetrators of the murders at Mirfield noticed in our paper last week, took place on Saturday last, at the Court-house, Dewsbury. The accused have been carefully watched since their arrest, and have been kept in separate cells. Reid has been placed in the clock in the dog brown overcoat which he wore at the time he was taken into custody, and on the left arm were placed several pins, to mark the places from which had been cut pieces of cloth, for the purpose of identifying whether the pieces found in the garden on his clothes were or were not really those of human blood, and which were submitted to the inspection of Mr. West, of Leeds. Reid, who is a much younger and more powerful man, was also dressed in the dark green coat and buff waistcoat which he was sworn to have had on on the morning of the murder and on his left arm, immediately on the round of the shoulder, and the inner part of the wrist, were similar marks placed, to denote the spots whence the cloth had been cut, for the chemist's inspection. The most important witness was Benjamin Herton, a hawker, and dealer in rags and pots, who lived in Mab-lane, Mirfield, and who said that, as he was passing down the road leading from M'Kinnell's house, by the Baptist Chapel, close to that of Mr. Wraith's, he accidentally turned his head, and he then saw Patrick Reid at the lane end, near Mr Wraith's house, and Michael M'Cabe coming towards him from this dwelling by the back yard. At the same time he saw M'Cabe about ten yards off M'Kinnell's garden corner, walking towards Reid and Wraith's house. The magistrate, after a short consultation, remanded the prisoners for further examination. M'Cabe said he wished to account for blood being on his basket, by stating that he had purchased some hearts and liver at Huddersfield a short time before, and carried them home in it.

IRELAND.

FUNERAL OF LORD BESSBOROUGH.—The funeral of the Earl of Bessborough, late Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, took place with great state [illegible] week. Every demonstration of respect for the deceased was manifested, business being completely suspended for the day. The Carlow gentry, in which county the Ponsonby family have extensive possessions, joined in the procession when the body arrived by rail in Carlow. The burial took place on Monday, at Piltown, county Kilkenny.

THE DEATH OF MR. O'CONNELL.—The news of the death of Mr. O'Connell reached Dublin early on Tuesday morning, and shortly afterwards it was announced by placards, posted at Corn-hill-an Hall, and at some of the public offices, around which were assembled knots of men who silently read their contents, and then noiselessly separated, leaving room for a fresh batch of readers, whose curiosity being satisfied, withdrew in turn as quietly as their fellows. The dead bells of the Roman Catholic chapels throughout the city and suburbs kept tolling from an early hour in the morning, and prayers, according to the prescribed form, were offered up for the repose of the soul of the deceased. It is very generally supposed that Mr. O'Connell's remains will, on their arrival from Genoa, be deposited in the vaults of the Roman Catholic parish church of St. Andrew, in Dublin-road-row, of which he had been a parishioner for a period of nearly 45 years. The Repeal Association met on Monday, pro forma, and adjourned till the next day, when an address to the people of Ireland will be issued, condoling with them upon the national calamity, and stating that the operations of the Association will in future be carried on under the same rules and in the same spirit as the founder of the body had already laid down for their guidance. The Corporation also met on Tuesday, and adjourned for three weeks, as a mark of respect to the memory of Mr. O'Connell.

THE OUTRAGE AT KILLALOE.—Mr. Watson, the object of the murderous outrage at Killaloe, which we noticed last week, died on yesterday week, at seven o'clock in the evening, from the wounds inflicted by his assassins, surrounded on his dying bed by the afflicted widow and her little orphans. The Government has offered a reward of £100 for the apprehension and conviction of the guilty parties.

THE LATE MURDER IN THE COUNTY DOWN.—The inquest closed on Saturday, and the jury returned their verdict to the effect that "James Paxton died from violent injuries inflicted on his head, wickedly and maliciously, with intent to take away his life, by some person or persons unknown." Consequently, the persons who had been arrested on suspicion were immediately discharged.

ON THE DEATH OF THE LATE LORD-LIEUTENANT OF IRELAND—THE EARL OF BESSBOROUGH.

The death-clouds hover heavily o'er yon Isle—
The Isle of Destiny—sad "Inisfai.!"
The moment Erin dares to wear a smile,
Sorrow will fresh her desponding pale.
The PONSONBY is gone! and Ireland's wail
Rings from her heart along the lonely hills.
For him, her true born Son, who could assail
Calmly and fearlessly her hydral ills.
The Ponsonby, whose noble blood has ever
Been prodigal on battle-wave or field,
Is gone, while fostering every good endeavour
To save the Land which 'neath distractions reel'd.
Blissful the sleep of those whose holy cause
Hath ever been man's good, and Heaven's applause.—L.

EPITOME OF NEWS.—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

A coal mine has been discovered near Teramo, the capital of the Abruzzi. The quality is said to be equal to that of Newcastle The mine is 240 feet below the surface of the earth, and promises to be a rich one. It is to be worked by the Government

The accounts from Holland are of the most favourable description, not only with reference to the prosperous appearance of the growing grain crops, but also of the fruits and vegetables. The early potatoes were showing well, and were already selling in the markets. The grass lands presented a splendid aspect.

The Journal des Débats announces the death, on the 18th inst., at Montmorillon, in the department of the Vienne, of Madame Durand de Coupé, at the age of 101 years, three months, and 15 days. She enjoyed the full use of all her faculties to the last moment, and even read without the aid of spectacles. She was born at Poictiers on the 3rd of February, 1746.

The Austrian Observer publishes a decree provisionally prohibiting the exportation of grain and alimentary substances generally.

The Toulonnais of the 20th inst. states, that the number of vessels proceeding to the Black Sea to load with corn is so great that the navigation of the Archipelago and the Sea of Marmora during the night is extremely cancerous. 59 ships laden with grain and bound for the coast of France had passed the Dardanelles.

The marriage of Don Henry of Spain, with Donna Elena de Castella y Skelly Fernandes de Cordova, was celebrated at Rome on the 6th inst., by Mgr Canali, Patriarch of Constantinople, delegated by the Pope. Don Henry and his wife left Marseilles on the 16th for Spain.

The often-repeated proposition made to the Jews, to transfer their Sabbath from the Saturday to the Sunday, but which was as often rejected, has just been agreed to by 700 of the Jewish population of Konigsberg, by far the greater portion of the Israelites residing at that city.

A vessel from Calcutta has brought, in addition to a general cargo of great variety and extent, including, among other articles, 3000 packets of seed, and 4339 of rice (now free of duty as an article of general food), no less than 50,000 buffalo hams.

The States of Bohemia have decided on erecting a monument at Prague in honour of the late Archduke Charles.

On the Derby day upwards of 39,000 passengers were conveyed on the London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway, between London-bridge and Epsom, without accident of any kind.

A letter from Hamburg dated Aug. 22, says that during the present month the growing crops throughout Germany of all descriptions of grain have progressed wonderfully, justifying hopes not only of an abundant, but also of an early harvest.

Discount at Hamburg is barely 3½ per cent., and the abundance of money is proved by the firm rates maintained for railroad shares, the public funds, and all property of a similar description.

A fine bed of large and excellent oysters has been discovered in Lochgoil. The Greenock Advertiser remarks, that other deposits of the kind would probably be found if search were made in the Scotch lochs and estuaries.

It is expected that the Newcastle and Berwick Railway will be opened throughout for general traffic on the 16th of June. The bridge across the river Aln will consist of eighteen arches, seven of which are completed.

On Tuesday, notices of intended application to be admitted attorneys of the Court of Queen's Bench on the first day of Michaelmas Term next, were given by 185 articled clerks, making with 138 admitted this Trinity Term, a total of 324 attorneys to be added to the roll.

The Columbia has arrived at Liverpool, bringing New York papers of the 1st. Their contents are, however, unimportant.

A Berlin letter of the 19th, informs us that the General Diet had just passed a vote, with only three dissentients, in favour of a project for the establishment of differential duties, as an encouragement to the mercantile navy, and has also declared in favour of a new augmentation of the duties on linen and cotton-thread, with a stipulation for the remission of the duty in case of re-exportation

Letters from Rome of the 14th inst. state that the Pope's birthday was celebrated with great enthusiasm on the 13th. A grand religious service was performed at the Church of St. John of Lateran, after which his Holiness bestowed his benediction on the multitude, who conducted him back to his Palace in triumph, strewing the streets through which he passed with flowers, and rending the air with deafening cheers of affection.

The Journal des Débats announces the death, at Helsingfors, in Finland, of M. John Albert Ehrenstroem, a Swede, who performed a remarkable part in the conspiracy framed by Count Maurice Armfelt, in the year 1789, against the Regency established during the minority of Gustavus IV. M. Ehrenstroem was in his 89th year. He had occupied an important position amongst the diplomatic body: and it was he who, on the part of Sweden, signed the treaty of peace of Wereld, with Russia, in the year 1790, and which proved so disastrous.

The Prussian Government, not content with according full and complete publicity to trials, has given directions that the portion of the courts set apart to the public shall be arranged in amphitheatres, so as to allow all visitors to see and hear all that passes. The public part of the new court of the Criminal Tribunal at Berlin is even fitted up with stuffed seats covered with velvet.

Count D'Orsay has presented his statuette of O'Connell to the Committee of the Central Relief Society, with the original model necessary apparatus for taking casts He writes to say that he makes the committee a present of the copyright of the figure, and transmits the models in the hope that the sale of the casts will realise a sum which may assist in relieving the distress of the poor.

It is said that a physician in the south of England has discovered the principle of magnetic force which explains the deviation and dip of the needle.

Letters from Athens announce that a majority of the Greek Cabinet had come to the determination of according the satisfaction demanded by the Porte, for the insult offered to M. Musouras.

The St. Petersburg papers state that the produce of the gold mines in the Ural mountains has been much richer than was at first expected. Last year they rendered 68,880 lb. of gold. The mines contain also a quantity of small particles of gold washed down with the sand from these mountains, from which, together with that of Siberia, the State has, since 1819, derived no less than 717,000,000f.

M. de Stralenheim, Minister of Justice to the King of Hanover, died, at Hanover, on the 19th.

No less than three hundred thousand mackerel were caught in the west bay, Weymouth, last Monday; there would have been 50,000 more, but for the boats having sunk with the great weight.

On Tuesday the foundation stone of a new Catholic Chapel was laid a Wandsworth, by the Right Rev. Dr. Morris, the Bishop of Troy. The site selected for the chapel is in a street leading from the main road, and near to Wandsworth Church.

During the week ending May 15, the total number of persons employed in the Irish Relief Works amounted to 213,450, and the total cost to £81,659.

It may be mentioned as a fact of some importance connected with the movement of the grain market, that the flatness of business in Mark-lane on Wednesday rendered rice nearly unsaleable.

Among the items of intelligence in the papers last received from New York, may be mentioned the construction of two iron steamers, intended for commercial uses in South America. These boats have been ordered by a company quartered in New Grenada, for purposes of general improvement, with a capital of 200,000 dollars, and will navigate the Magdalena river, plying between Santa Marta, on the Carribean Sea, and Honda, the head of navigation on the Magdalena—a distance of about 600 miles.

A letter from the agent to Lloyd's, dated Malaga, May 17, says:—"There is a scarcity of provisions at Gibraltar and Cadiz, as well as about the south coast of Spain. A Spanish revenue steamer came from Cadiz to tow a Sardinian vessel, loaded with grain, through the Straits, for Cadiz, in consequence of the scarcity there, and to avoid similar riots to those of Seville and Grenada, 1100 vessels are wind-bound."

A chemist in New York not long since analysed a bottle of imported champagne, sold as pure, and found in it one quarter of an ounce of sugar of lead.

The number of passengers between England and Boulogne during the week ending the 25th of May, was 1517. This shows an increase in the total number of passengers as compared with the corresponding week of last year of 487, and was an increase over the number of the previous week of 293. The number of passengers between England and Calais was 256.

Our latest advices from the Continent, we are happy to say, announce that the price of grain was everywhere declining materially. In the kingdom of Hungary the fall was very decided, and prices in all the southern markets of Germany had given way. At Nuremberg the decline from one market d.y to the other was 11 fls., and in Belgium, merchants, in order to make sure of sales, had, in many instances, entered into contracts for the delivery of grain between the 20th and 26th of next month, at a reduction of 10 florins upon the prices current on the 21st instant.

There is living at present, in Baronscourt, within seven miles of Omagh (Ireland), a man named James Taggart, who has arrived at the age of 121 years; he is able to walk into Omagh and transact business, and with it is equally astonishing, his son, who resides in Omagh, has been a commercial traveler for 70 years, and is now in the 95th year of his age. He retains all his faculties, and not a grey hair in his head.

The same disease which prevailed many years past amongst the Grouse, has made its appearance this season. Large quantities of these birds are to be found dead on the "margin of the rivers and by the side of th erills" in Scotland.

MUSIC.

CONCERTS OF THE WEEK.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—The scheme of the sixth Concert was rendered heavy by Spohr's Symphony, "The Consecration of Sound," and by a Violin Concerto of inordinate length by Vieuxtemps. Spohr's orchestral writing is marvellous; but his ideas are limited, and these, again, are not original The design of the soufflons is manifestly absurd—the attempt to describe "the deep silence of Nature before the creation of sound" by sound an Irish bull, perpetrated by a German. The most exciting movement is the third, with its military march, and its fine fugue in the thanksgiving: the most touching portion is the dirge. The contrariety of times in the Cradle Song is more curious than pleasing. Costa conducted the work with consummate skill, and coloured the phrases exquisitely, but the cloying and monotonous nature of the themes was fatiguing to listen to. Mozart's delicious sinfonia in E flat, with its lovely andante and piquant minuets, was exquisitely executed, the latter being encored, thanks to the charming clarionet phrasing of Willams. The overtures were Beethoven's aspiring "Egmont," and Weber's "Jubilee," the latter being give in honour of the Queen's birthday, as the national anthem is introduced therein. Vieuxtemps' wonderful execution was entirely marred by the profusions in his concerto—one of the most tiresome things we ever heard. He played too much on the first and fourth strings, but his tone is perfect, and his dexterity unrivalled. The vocal gleanings were assigned to Madame Dorus Gras and Miss Dolby. It was the first appearance this season of the former. She sang Meyerbeer's air, "En vain j'espere," from "Robert le Diable," and Halevy's "Bocage opéra," from "Les Monsquetaires de la Reine." Madame Dorus Gras is one of the most accomplished vocalists of the age. Persant excepted, we know of no artiste who can accomplish such astonishing tours de force with such ease, delicacy, certainty, and finish. She was for some years the prima donna of the Académie Royale in Paris, and Meyerbeer composed the music of Alice expressly for her; but we have always preferred her in the part of the Princess. Miss Dolby sang airs by Mozart and Mendelssohn charmingly. The next concert will be on the 7th of June.

THE MUSICAL UNION.—At the fifth Meeting, Haydn's Quartet, in F, No. 48; Beethoven's, in F, op. 18, and Onslow's Quintet, in A minor, op. 38, were finely performed; the executants being Vieuxtemps (his last appearance in London this season), Deloffre, Hill, Piatti, and Pilet. The President, the Duke of Cambridge, and a long list of distinguished amateurs and artists, were present.

SIGNOR BRIZZI.—This accomplished tenor's Annual Morning Concert, given on Monday, at the residence of S. B. Williams, Esq., Wyndham-place, Bryanstone-square, has been the best of the season, as the scheme was not too long, and the artists were first rate. Alboni created quite a sensation in Donizetti's cavatina from Betly's "Ingenuo Semplicetto," and was encored. Mario sang Mori's air, "Tuscona," and on being called upon to repeat it, gave the cavatina from the "Favorita," with surpassing skill. Grisi, Mdme. Rouconi, Miss Dolby, Mrs. Toulmin, Mdlle. Corbari, Mrs. Maclarren, Mdlle Brizzi, Signori Salvi, Rouconi, Tamburini (father and son), Brizzi, Montelli, Ciabetta, were the other vocalists; and Mr. F. Chatterton, harp, and Emiliani, violin, solo instrumentalists. Tamburini junior has a fine baritone voice, and is worthy of his gifted sire. Costa, Benedict, Pilotti, Orsini, and Mori, were the able accompanyists at this delightful soirée.

MR. F. CHATTERTON.—The Morning Concert of this harpist was well attended on Tuesday. The vocalists were Mdme. Jenny Lutzer, the Misses Williams, Bassano, S. Novello, Mrs. W. and Mrs. W. H. Seguin, Signor and Mdme. R. Lablache, Messrs Phillips and John Parry.

MR. JOHN PARRY.—The annual concert of this admirable artist was brilliantly attended, and he created quite a furore in his new song of "Lalla Rookh," but in the "Double operatic extravaganza," he was overpowered with nervousness, and was compelled to claim the indulgence of the audience, which was extended of course with the utmost kindness to such a popular singer. Mr. Albert Smith has again been highly successful in his words for Parry a scenas—for such they are. The solo players were Godefroid, harp; Lavigne, oboe; the Distin Family, sax horns, and the Brothers Hellmesberger, violins. The vocalists were Mdme. Jenny Lutzer, Mdme. F. Lablache, the Misses Rainforth, Delby, Lorston, M. and A. Williams, Messrs. J. Calken and Kench. Negri and Benedict were the accompanyists.

MISS M. B HAWES.—This much-respected artiste gave her Annual Concert on Wednesday night, at the Hanover-square Rooms. It was fully and fashionably attended. Miss Hawes, Clauser, Sainton, Lucas, Hawes, Lodge, Lockey, Howell, and Phillips, was encored, the counter tenor part, by the fair vocalist, being exquisitely sustained. The other singers were Madame Dorus Gras, Miss E. Birch, Miss Birch, Miss S. Novello, Miss Rainforth, and Mr. Bodda. Sir Julius B Bishop conducted. Herr Kuhe and Herr Schepenowski played piano and violoncello pieces.

MUSICAL CHIT CHAT.

Mrs Anderson's morning Concert, which took place yesterday, will be noticed in our next number. The second Handelian Operatic Concert took place on Tuesday evening, but was unsuccessful. The twelfth and last meeting of the Amateur Musical Society will be given on Monday next, at the Concert Room of her Majesty's Theatre, in aid of a Charity. The Concert of Jules Schuloff, the pianist, given last night, is too late for our publication this week. On Monday next, there is a performance at Exeter Hall, of Handel's "Alexander's Feast," and Mendelssohn's "Walpurgis Night." The seventh meeting of the Beethoven Quartet Society, and Madame Frenstzer's Concert, are on the same evening. The fifth Concert of Ancient Music, directed by Lord Howe, will be given on Wednesday

PARIS. The new comic opera, in one act, called "Le Malheur d'etre Jolie," the libretto by M. Charles Desnoyers, and the music by M. Bazin, has been produced at the Salle Favart, but with no signal success. Letters from Liszt, who was at Lemberg, in Galicia, announce that he proposes to visit London this season. The departure of Madame Stoltz for Italy is announced.

M. FIORANTINO.—Amongst the arrivals in London is that of the witty editor of the Corsaire-Satan, and musical critic of the Constitutionnel.

AN ENGLISH PRIMA DONNA IN GERMANY.—(Extract from a Vienna paper.) —Signora Hayes and Signor Vares (a baritone), made their first appearance this season, the day before yesterday, in the "Lucia di Lammermoor," and were greeted with immense success. Signora Hayes considered this her best part last year, and has now done much to increase her reputation in it. She has been on the stage only two years, and yet Italy possesses few artistes so charming and so highly gifted. In the mad scene she was most touching; though some admired her even more in the duet with Vares, in the second act, which we never heard more exquisitely sung. She met with unbounded approbation, and, after the mad scene, was called out three times. As she suffers no longer from tendiny and embarrassment, Signora Hayes is now enabled to display the full resources of her talents; and a season which has commenced for her so brilliantly will, doubtless, add fresh laurels to her crown.

MUSICAL REVIEW.

LINTER'S COURT POLKA, THE FONTAINEBLEAU QUADRILLES, PROMENADE WALTZES, LES CELEBRITES DU JOUR. D'Almaine and Co.

The "Court Polka" is ornamented and agreeable, well arranged for pianoforte players who take fright at difficulties. The "Quadrilles" are also by Ricardo Linter; the illuminated frontispiece, with the palaces in the background, and groups of cavaliers and ladies in the foreground, is very el gant. The "Promenade Waltzes" are also by Linter, and are pretty, with a spendid title-page in gold and colours, alone calculated to render them attractive for a drawing-room. Linter is quite a star in dance music; his subjects are spirited and well carried out, so as to be within the executive powers of amateur pianists. It is a happy notion to combine decorative art. In the "Celeb rities of the Day," Henri Herz, in his Parisian waltzes, has offered a graceful homage to the choregraphic genius of Taglioni, Fanny Elssler, Carlotta Grisi, Cerito, Lucile Grahn, and Plunkett; but in this galaxy the name of Dumilâtre ought to have been added, and, of the rising danseuses, perhaps those of Rosati, Fucco, Ballerina, and Marie Taglioni. The waltzes are the inspiration of an accomplished musician.

THE SEA NYMPH'S SONG. Written by G. J SMITH; Music by JOHN BARNETT. D'Almaine and Co.

A light, fantastic song for contralto voice. We have been accustomed to better works from the gifted composer of the "Mountain Sylph," "Farinelli," "Fair Rosamond, &c.; not but what this air may take its place among the myriads of songs of the season Mr. Barnett probably bearing in mind the actors' adage, "Those who please to write must write to please." The song is in six-eight time, and is easy to sing.

TWO AMERICAN FOLKAS, Nos. 1 and 2. Composed and Arranged by A. NEVES. D'Almaine and Co.

An unpretending arrangement of some of the Nigger Melodies, having the advantage of the air being preserved, despite of the Folka arrangement.

ANTHEMS AND SERVICES FOR CHURCH CHOIRS. J. BURNS.

Nos. 13 and 14 are the concluding ones of a volume of ecclesiastical music, of a very superior character. The present numbers contain three anthems by Palestrina, two by Bird, and two by Tye and Di Lasso—all of which have been sealed books, to a certain extent. The anthems have the advantage of an organ or pianoforte arrangement, so that those who cannot hear the effects by voices, can judge of the glorious counterpoint and rich harmonies with which all these pieces abound; the names of the composers are alone a guarantee of their excellence. The works of Palestrina and Di Lasso, though written so many ages since, are yet to be known; and to the Editors of the above Edition, too much praise cannot be awarded for the very excellent manner they have presented them to all lovers of Church Music.

HANDEL'S SONGS, DUETS, AND TRIOS, Arranged, with an Accompaniment for the Pianoforte, by Dr. CALLCOTT. Novello, Ewer, and Co.

No. 1, of a selection of Handel's music, contains five songs, printed in a clear and distinct type, with an accompaniment superior to that of many other costly editions, and for the low price of sixpence. This edition for the people must be a most welcome boon.

DIBDIN'S SONGS. Davidson.

This complete and comprehensive edition of the songs of Charles Dibdin, edited by Mr. Hogarth, is superior to the more costly and incomplete editions of John Davy and Dr. Kitchener. The present work is printed chronologically and many interesting notes are appended; and to each part is given the music of some twelve or thirteen songs. It is an edition that will command a large circulation.

COMPREHENSIVE TUNE BOOK; consisting of Hymn and Psalm Tunes, Anthems and Chour Music, Sacred Harmony Pieces for Private Use, and Organ and Piano Themes; together with the Singer's Instructor and Musical Primer. In Monthly Parts, 10d. each. Edited by Dr. GAUNTLETT. Whittemore, Houlston, and Stoneman.

This is, indeed a comprehensive Tune Book, and puts such works as Rippon's Selection quite in the shade. In the Hymn Tunes, Dr. Gauntlett has given in small notes (under the treble line) the harmony beautifully arranged, and adapted for the instrument, showing in one view a master mind. In the anthem and choir portion of the work, which is divided into sections, we have an anthem, by Mendelssohn, "God is our refuge;" and two others, by Arcadelt, and the one ascribed to King Henry the Eighth. Every true lover of sacred music must be gratified with this work. The biographies and critical remarks on the covers are alone worth the price of the whole number, which is unprecedentedly cheap.

HER MAJESTY'S BIRTHDAY, MAY 24th, 1847.

VIVAT REGINA.

Here's a health to the Queen, and the day of her birth!
To the glorious throne She so worthily fills!
To the fairest affection that hallow her hearth,
And the land that reveres Her through blessings and ills!
Revered as the Monarch, the Mother, the Wife,
In all of whose duties her soul is serene:
Ah! well may we drink to her health and long life:
And may happiness ever encircle the Queen!

Her throne in the hearts of her people is based;
Her sceptre is honoured wherever the wind
Wafts onward the bark: from Ontario's waste,
To the pagods of China, and mountains o' Ind.
Not a tribe upon Earth but has heard of Her name,
Which ever with Virtue's enwreathed hath been;
And Time only adds to the light of the fame,
Which 'lumines the path of old Albion's Queen.

Then long may Victoria rejoice in the joy
Of the People, who cherish her joys as their own!
No blessing of life is exempt of alloy,
And the dark cloud of Care often circles the Throne.
But far be the cloud that could darken this day,
Engloaming in sorrow the festival scene.
Then a health to Victoria! Hip! hip! hurra!
And the heart-buds that bloom 'neath the smile of our Queen!

POSTSCRIPTUM.

MAY 25TH, BIRTHDAY OF THE PRINCESS HELENA.

And then, the youngest, bonnie bud!
Blooming around our Royal Rose,
May'st thou prove worthy of the blood
Of Brunswick! Sweetly may Repose
Smile o'er thy cradle! May each hour
Shed lustre o'er thy life's smooth way;
Crown with all virtues thee, sweet Flower,
On Helena's every natal-day!—L.

FINE ARTS.

EQUESTRIAN STATUE OF HER MAJESTY.

We were present, on Thursday afternoon, at a private view of Count D'Orsay's large equestrian picture of the Queen, at present exhibiting at the Gallery, No. 121, Pall Mall. It is one of the best likenesses of her Majesty, if not the very best, that has appeared. She is represented as a review, dressed in a scarlet habit, consonant with the military colour, and riding on a grey charger. The attitude of the horse is admirably conceived, and the action of the fore legs especially well treated, particularly that of the near one. The animal, altogether, appears rushing from the canvass, and nothing can be more spirited than the entire group. We understand that this fine picture is about to be engraved, and published, when, no doubt, it will find ready purchasers. It is in the highest degree creditable to Count D'Orsay's singularly versatile genius, and will, we conceive, do more to raise his reputation as an artist than any of his previous works.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY. Settling small accounts, and checking balances for the settling in chief, on Tuesday, occupied nearly the whole of the afternoon; the following quotations, therefore, must be received as nominal:—

THE EMPEROR'S VASE.

5 to 3 agst Mendicant	6 to 1 agst Sir Tatton Sykes	10 to 1 agst Sting
4 to 1 — The Hero	7 to 1 — Poynton	20 to 1 — Grimston

ST. LEGER.

4 to 1 agst Cossack	9 to 1 agst Van Tromp	20 to 1 agst Mr. Martin

THE AGE.

8 to 1 agst Beverian, Assault, and Flatcatcher.

The settling "came off" on Tuesday, and, contrary to all expectation, was one of the worst ever known. Not only was there a general shortness of the "wherewithal," but two defaulters—a "Prince" and a "Lord"—to the ex ent of at least £20,000! a fearful sum at any time, but, at so critical a period, absolutely ruinous! Betting, for some time, like railway speculation, must be confined within very narrow limits.

THURSDAY.—A thin attendance, and only betting enough just to admit of a list of unmarket prices.

THE ASCOT STAKES.

6 to 1 agst Humdrum	10 to 1 agst Vampyre	15 to 1 agst Sly to the Web
7 to 1 — Clermont	15 to 1 — Faugh	20 to 1 — Wood Pigeon (t)
10 to 1 — Marmalia	15 to 1 — Not to be out

THE EMPEROR'S VASE.

6 to 4 agst Mendicant (t)	6 to 1 agst Jerboa	10 to 1 agst Grimston
4 to 1 — Poynton	6 to 1 — Sir Tatton Sykes

ST. LEGER.

4 to 1 agst Cossack (t)	40 to 1 agst Executor	1000 to 5 agst The Liberator (t)
33 to 1 — Black Dwarf (t)	50 to 1 — Lincstone (t)

DERBY.

25 to 1 agst Flatcatcher (t)	40 to 1 agst Surplice (t)	42 to 1 agst Nil Desperandum

MANCHESTER RACES, WEDNESDAY.

The Wilton Stakes of 10 sovs each, and 50 added; three-yr-olds, 6st 4lb, four, 6st 8lb; five, 8st 1lb; six and aged, 8st 3lb. One mile and a half. (6 Subs.)

Mr. S. L. Fox's Mesaux, 3 yrs	.. ..	(G. Oates) 0
Mr. Ewbank's Loudon Newall, 3 yrs	.. ..	..(Abdale) 0
Mr. Meikham's Lightning, 5 yrs	.. ..	(Templeman) 3
Mr. Eskrett's Exhort, 5 yrs	.. ..	(Bradley) 4

The Pendleton Stakes of 10 sovs each and 40 added, for two-year-old colts, 8st 5lb, and fillies 8st 2lb, the second to save his stake. About three-quarters of a mile. (4 Subs.)

Mr. J. Lillie's The Great Western	.. ..	(Marlow) 1
Mr. Green's Miss Margaret	.. ..	(Wintringham) 3
Mr. Meikland's Otterburn	.. ..	(Templeman) 2

The Manchester Trades' Cup of 200 sovs, added to a Handicap of 20 sovs each, 10 ft. and 5 only if declared. Two miles and a distance. (38 subs.)

Mr. R. Stephenson's Sheraton, 4 yrs, 7st 10lb	.. ..	(Simpson) 1
Mr. R. Phillips ad br m by Tallyrand, 5 yrs, 6st ..	.. ..	(Abdale) 2
Mr. Harland's Cossack Maid, 4 yrs. 6st 7lb	.. ..	(Ryder) 3

Plate of £70, the second to receive £10; 3 yrs old 7st, 4 yrs 8st 4lb, 5 yrs 8st 9lb, 6 yrs and aged 8st 12lb; mares, &c., allowed 3lb. Heats, 2 miles.

Lord Chesterfield's b f by Don John out of Gamesena 3 yrs	(Gates) 1
Mr. Lancaster's Monsieur Perrot, 4 yrs ..	2

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.

The entries for the Grand Challenge Cup, given by the Royal Thames Yacht Club, open to all Royal Yacht Clubs, closed at ten on Wednesday night, at the Piazza Coffee-house, Covent-garden, and were as follows:

Yachts.	Tons.	Owners.	Yachts.	Tons.	Owners.
Secret	25	J W Smith.	Zulnkka	20 ..	Morris King.
Prima Donna ..	25 ..	Captain J. L. Pres.	Challenger ..	28 ..	Fradgeley.
Eno	25 ..	R. Gibson.	Antagonist ..	25 ..	C. F. Belcher.

Of these, all belong to the Royal Thames Yacht Club, except the Challenger, which is of the Harwich Club. The race will take place on Tuesday, June 8th.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

THE DERBY "SETTLING."

Antonia! where's my pocket-handkerchief? BYRON.
You rub the sore,
When you should bring the plaister. SHAKESPEARE.

The leech's office is not always a grateful one, albeit the patient receives ultimate relief at his hands. In like manner, your philosopher and friend may be compelled, on occasion, to be "cruel only to be kind." It is on this principle—while an epidemic is affecting Honour's health—"trim reckoning"—that we seek to turn the relief which last Tuesday furnished to account. The majority of the members of Tattersall's, who attended the Subscription Room on that day, met with a heavy blow on learning that very considerable default would occur in consequence of the announcement of certain parties that it was their intention to be absent. To the public, this fact was thus conveyed in the columns of the daily journals.

"Two parties are missing, whose losses cannot be stated at less than £20,000. One of them, who is connected with the highest families in the kingdom, is a loser of about £12,000, of which there is no immediate prospect of payment. The other is a Mr. P . . . . , of whom there is no hope whatever."

GRAND FIELD DAY AT CALCUTTA.—ARRIVAL OF THE CAPTURED SIKH GUNS.—FROM A SKETCH RECEIVED BY THE LAST OVERLAND MAIL.

This paragraph is remarkable for its emphasis and discretion. The tale of levanting is told without any varnish, which is most proper; no clue is afforded touching the individuality of the party "connected with the highest families in the kingdom," which is discreet; while the denouncement of Mr. P . . . . . will act as a warning to all plebeians in general, and to those whose names consist of six letters, commencing with a P, in particular.

The axiom in logic that "two negatives make an affirmative," has been quoted in explanation of that most startling of all social anomalies—the betting ring. Vile reasoning! unless, indeed, a proposition were to be proved by the number of negatives adduced against it. In all ages of the world, and in all states of society, gambling has occasionally been the vice of high minds and honourable spirits: but we look in vain for any instance of its having been adopted as a profession by a gentleman: that is to say, of any man who professed the trade of a common dicer, and maintained a footing among persons of condition. It is otherwise on the turf—and hence the cases of audacious freebooting with which public decency is outraged, year after year, in connexion with the most popular of our National Sports. Default in betting has long been notoriously acted upon as a system. The statute-law takes no cognizance of it, and the community which it most affects deals with its backsliding more charitably than wisely. Let it not be imagined that we seek to give a higher moral position to this taste than it deserves. It is a most pernicious practice—a vice doubly doomed—destructive alike to those who succeed and to those who fail. But it is not for that reason to be made the ready instrument of wrong. It is an offence, moreover, emphatically un-English, for it is the resource of cowardice—the refuge of the dastard destitute. A friend of our own won four hundred and fifty on the late event, and we met him on his return from Hyde Park-corner, a wiser but a poorer man—being one hundred and twenty pounds out of pocket by the transaction.

Vessels are said to settle preparatory to going to the bottom: is it in this sense the word is to apply to racing? Gentlemen of the Turf! it is time to awake to a sense of your duty to yourselves: leave the wolves to manage their own affairs, if ye will; but banish the black sheep from your own fold. Do this—with a will, and at once: or the day will presently come when some brother of your order will be seen, with a remnant of the Garter on his patrician left leg, breaking stones on the highway—a melancholy example of a Derby "Setting." . . .

Cossack, winner of the Derby, 1847, the property of — Pedley, Esq., is a chesnut colt, fifteen hands two inches high, by Birman Platoff out of Joconina, by Priam. He is a very neat animal, and was brought to the post in the perfection of racing form. He ran third to Miami for the July Stakes at Newmarket last year, and in the present season, at the same place, beat War Eagle and a moderate field for the Newmarket Stakes.

Miami, winner of the Oaks, is a brown roan filly, by Venison; the property of Sir Joseph Hawley. She won the July Stakes at two years old, and her last performance was in a very superior style. Both Derby and Oaks winners were ridden by Templeman.

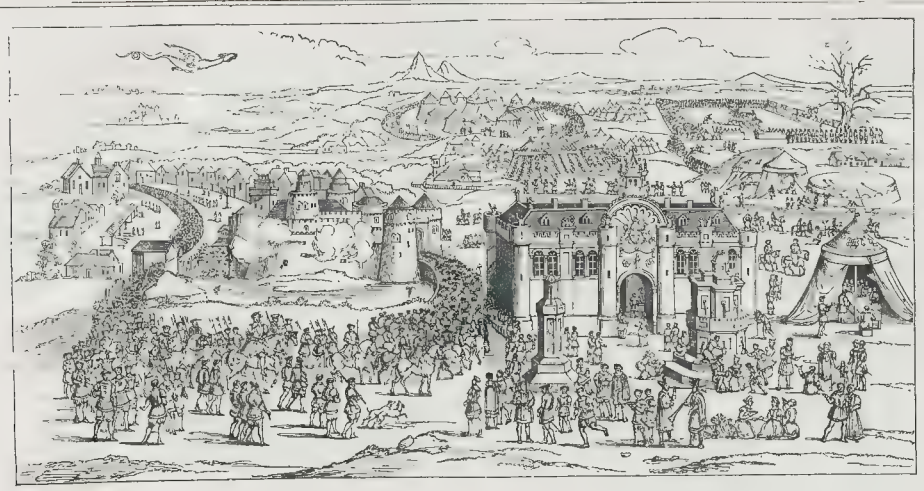
GRAND FIELD-DAY AT CALCUTTA.

We have received, by the last Overland Mail, from a Correspondent at Calcutta, the annexed Sketch, made on the ground, of the Field Day and Grand Ceremony which took place upon the arrival in Calcutta of the Ordnance captured by the Bengal Army from the Sikhs, in battles fought upon the Sutlejo. In the Sketch, the spectator is supposed to be looking northward; the large building to the right being the Government House, at Calcutta. The captured Sikh guns occupy the left or west side of the open space extending the whole way from the arch to the margin of the view. The monster brass gun, "Futteh Jang," may be seen just behind the large flag-staff. In the rear of the guns, the crowd of spectators reach nearly to the river. Beneath the large flag are assembled the Deputy-Governor of Bengal, and his Staff; with Sir Harry Smith, Brigadier Cowley, the Members of the Supreme Council, the Government Secretaries, &c.

The whole forms a very animated picture, for it was throughout a grand affair. Independently of the "pomp and circumstance" of the scene, it presents us with a glimpse of the "City of Palaces" the Esplanade; and the Government House, the finest building in Calcutta; a range of magnificent dwelling-houses; and the busy life of the shipping in the Hoogly.

"Cossack."—WINNER OF THE DERBY "Miami."—WINNER OF THE OAKS.

THE WINNERS OF THE DERBY AND OAKS.—DRAWN BY HARRY HALL, ESQ., NEWMARKET.



HAMPTON COURT PALACE.—THE CELEBRATED PICTURE OF "THE FIELD OF THE CLOTH OF GOLD."

PRESENTATION OF THE FREEDOM OF THE CITY OF LONDON TO SIR HARRY SMITH.

The return of the gallant Sir Harry Smith has already been signalised by hospitable receptions, and other congratulatory ceremonials; and, amongst the latter, the Presentation of the Freedom of the City of London, in a gold box, bearing the following inscription:—

JOHNSON, MAYOR.

A Common Council holden in the Chamber of the Guildhall of the City of London, on Monday, the 5th day of April, 1845,

RESOLVED UNANIMOUSLY,

That the Thanks and Congratulations of this Court, with the Freedom of this City, in a Gold Box, of the value of

ONE HUNDRED GUINEAS,

Be presented to

MAJOR-GENERAL SIR HENRY GEORGE SMITH, K.C.B.,

For the Eminent Services rendered by him in the arduous and successful operations on the 18th, 21st, and 22nd December, 1845,

AT MOODKEE AND FEROZESHAH;

And for the distinguished skill, valour, and judgment, he manifested in the important Battle of Aliwal, on the 28th day of January last, when a greatly superior force of the Sikh Army was totally defeated, and increased lustre shed upon the reputation of the British Arms.

MEREWETHER.

GOLD BOX, CONTAINING THE FREEDOM OF THE CITY OF LONDON, PRESENTED TO SIR HARRY SMITH.

WHITSUNTIDE AT HAMPTON COURT.

Monday was, indeed, a brilliant "Summer's Day," at Hampton Court. London poured forth its thousands of pleasure-seekers, by railway, by steam-boat, and by cox, to enjoy the Palace and its pictures, the garden and its galeties, and the privilege of strolling through its "alleys green," or of straying along its river front—all such a scene of jouissance as it alike gladdens the heart to witness and partake of:—

> "Close by those meads for ever crown'd with flowers,
> Where Thames with pride surveys his rising towers,
> There stands a structure of majestic frame,
> Which from the neighb'ring Hampton takes its name.
> Here Britain's statesmen oft the fall foredoom
> Of foreign tyrants, and of nymphs at home;
> Here thou, great Anna, whom three realms obey,
> Dost sometimes counsel take, and sometimes tea."

Then, too, the fine old pile had a new or rather revived attraction; for, the holiday visitors: Wolsey's Hall, which Evelyn rightly called "a most magnificent roome," has been refitted since last season; various incongruities have been removed, and now the people enjoy not only what pleases their eye, but also what appeals to their understanding, by presenting a piece of historical decoration in this right Royal apartment. And, by the aid of cheap guide books and cheap periodical literature, the people are getting familiar with that which is correct in taste, and are thus the better enabled to appreciate the stores of art which the advancing liberality of the age, year after year, throws open to them.

This noble Hall now well bespeaks the time and taste of our Eighth Henry, the magnificent hangings are supposed to have been one of the gifts interchanged between Henry and Francis at the celebrated Field of the Cloth of Gold. They are, most probably, of that period; for, it is well known that the French Monarch, who patronised the fine arts in so Regal a manner, had not overlooked the works of the loom. The refitting of this room is highly creditable to the authorities; remembering, as we do, that, for many years, it was shut to the public. There is one curious fact, if it can be depended on, in the history of the Hall, that must strike every one—from prince to peasant. Plays were formerly performed in the Banqueting Halls of Palaces: the first play acted in the Hampton Court Hall is stated to have been that of "Henry VIII.; or, The Fall of Wolsey"—on the very spot which had been the scene of the Cardinal's greatest splendour. Shakspeare is said to have been one of the actors in this play.

Although the architecture of Hampton Court Palace is of many periods, the place is most intimately associated with Henry and his minister Wolsey. It is not, therefore, extraordinary to find that amidst its many rooms of pictures, there is none that enjoys a more popular celebrity than that which we have engraved. It represents the Meeting of Henry VIII. and Francis I. of France, in the Field called the Cloth of Gold, near Calais. This, and the companion picture, the Embarkation of Henry VIII. at Dover, is attributed to Holbein; but most judges agree with Mr. Jesse, that "it may be fairly doubted whether Holbein painted these pictures. They are too coarse; besides, he did not arrive in England till six years after the interview depicted, and, therefore, could not have taken the many excellent English portraits which are introduced into the pictures, at that time. It is, however, immaterial, as their intrinsic merit and historical interest will always demand attention." They are, if we mistake not, hung in the Queen's Gallery.

The Royal Meeting, as the reader may recollect, was one of the parting gleams of the setting sun of chivalry in England. The whole affair was a matter of state policy; but this historical importance is popularly overlooked for the curious glance which it gives us of the taste of the period for glitter and show. Hall has left us a most minute picture of this magnificent scene; of the pavilions, castles, and tents, raised for the occasion; the fountains running wine; the long and splendid retinues; and all the festal glory of the event, whose gorgeousness is but typified in the locality to our day, as "the Field of the Cloth of Gold."

The Illustration at the foot of the page shows one of those mishaps that often chequer a scene of holiday enjoyment: an unlucky wight and his family, in metropolitan vernacular, are too late for "the bus!"

The Order of the Bath.—In a supplement to the London Gazette of Tuesday, her Majesty has been pleased to issue letters patent referring to letters patent under the Great Seal, bearing the 14th of April last, and ordaining that the Order shall henceforth be known and described as the "Most Honourable Order of the Bath," that it shall consist of the Sovereign and a Great Master, and of best companions, divided into three classes,—viz., Knights Grand Cross, Knights Commanders, and Companions; that his Royal Highness Prince Albert shall be Great Master, and that each of the three classes shall contain two subdivisions, military and civil. The letters patent then set forth rules for the Government of the order, and ordinances as to the various officers, the costume, &c

Economy of Bread.—Bread might be economised greatly in families by the use of rice plain boiled at dinner, a pound of which, at threepence, would be enough for nine persons; it is not in much estimation, because it is generally not well prepared, but nothing is more simple, viz.:—Have a gallon of water boiling throw in one pound of whole rice—one ounce of salt—let it boil twenty minutes, turn it up into a sieve, let it drain for a few minutes, take a couple of forks, and toss it up to make it light.

A Trance.—At the beginning of the last week the wife of a copper-founder at Lyons fell into a lethargy, and, being believed to be dead, was about to be buried. On Thursday the husband, wishing to take a last look at her, had the coffin re-opened, and on this being done it was discovered that the poor woman had revived, had torn off the winding-sheet, and, after having made vain efforts to extricate herself, had, in the delirium of despair, terribly gnawed her own hands. It is supposed that the person employed to watch the body had fallen into a deep sleep, or she must have otherwise heard the efforts of the poor woman to obtain her emancipation.

Dundee and Perth Railway.—This railway was opened last Saturday from Dundee to Barnhill Station, about a mile from Perth.

The Edinburgh and Granton Tunnel.—That remarkable work the Edinburgh and Granton Tunnel was opened to the public on Monday, when crowds were carried up and down—traversing through the bowels of the earth the whole breadth of the New Town with a speed, safety, and ease that imparted pleasure and confidence to all. The whole distance from Canal-street to Granton-pier was easily accomplished within the quarter of an hour, including three stoppages, viz., at Scotland-street, the point of junction with the Leith Branch, and Trinity. The number of passengers on Monday, though the weather was far from favourable, presented a remarkable increase over the usual number, and before the tunnel and steam-power were brought into play; but still it was only a faint earnest of what this line will accomplish when it is properly linked to Granton-pier and the Edinburgh and Northern, of which it forms the metropolitan inlet, in busy operation.

Fire at Manchester.—On Monday evening the extensive premises of Messrs. Birley and Co., cotton-spinners, Manchester, who, though now working short time, employ between 1400 and 1600 hands, caught fire, and a great deal of damage was done before the progress of the flames could be arrested. A heap of waste cotton, which was partly saturated with oil, caught fire spontaneously, owing to the heat of the weather.

THE LAST OMNIBUS.

The "Great Britain" Steamer.—The springs having gone off seem to have made no difference in the position of this noble and unquestionably strong ship. She stands now very nearly upright, and to the eye she appears nearly on an even keel, instead of being buried as it were eight or nine feet by the head, as she has been through the winter. Her stern is but a few inches below the level of the sand, and her keel is quite visible at low water, or thereabouts. The poles and spurs are not yet disturbed, nor the foundation of the breakwater—which, however, must be removed, unless it be intended to lift the ship over it. Up to the last of the springs, many persons visited the ship and breakwater.

Loss of a French Sloop.—The National de l'Ouest of Nantes gives the following letter from the Island of Bourbon, dated Feb. 14:—"We have this morning received afflicting accounts from Madagascar, which lead us to fear that the sloop of war, the Berceau, Captain Gout, has been totally lost. In December, the frigate Belle Poule and this sloop, in going to Sainte Marie, Madagascar, were caught in a violent hurricane. The frigate reached Sainte Marie, after having sustained severe damage; but the Berceau has never made her appearance, after being two months at sea, and having come within fifty leagues of Sainte Marie. Another ship had been sent round Madagascar in search of her, but without being able to gain the least tidings. She had a crew of 250 men and several passengers for Sainte Marie."

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, May 30.—Trinity Sunday.—Full Moon at 2h. 26m. a.m.
MONDAY, 31. No real night, but constant twilight.
TUESDAY, June 1. St. Nicomede.—Venus sets at 11h. 10m. p.m. between the N.W by N and the N.W. points of the horizon.
WEDNESDAY, 2. The Sun rises at 3h. 50m. a.m.; is due E. at 7h. 13m.; and sets at 8h. 5m.
THURSDAY, 3.—Corpus Christi.
FRIDAY, 4.—The Length of the Day is 16h. 18m.; the Day has increased 8h. 34m. since the Shortest Day.
SATURDAY, 5.—St. Boniface.—King of Hanover born, 1771.

On May 31, the planet Venus will be situated at the distance of about 8° from Castor and 4° from Pollux; these three objects will form a pretty little triangle, of which Venus will occupy the lower angle; after this time, the planet will appear to move to the left of these two stars. From January 1 to June 1, the planet Venus has set later and later every night; and, from this day, she will begin to set earlier.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 5.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M | A	M | A	M | A	M | A	M | A	M | A	M | A
h mh	m h	m h	m h	m h	m h	m h
2 6	2 25	2 41	3 2	3 20	3 39	4 0
4 10	4 31	4 45	5 0	5 16	5 30	5 45
6 12	6 40

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Mαβηρίτ."—In Subaltern, the accent is on the first syllable.
"Captain Spike," Stockton.—" Bentley's Miscellany" was originally edited by Mr. Dickens, then by Mr. Ainsworth; we cannot tell "to whom that office is now vested."
"A Subscriber."—"Dr. Syntax's Tour" was written by William Coombe, in 1812; in 1813, it reached the fourth edition. The "Tour" was originally contributed to the "Poetical Magazine," published by Ackermann.
"A Subscriber," Dublin.—"Hints on Etiquette." (Longmans.)
"A Young Aspirant."—Order Cobbett's "English Grammar" of any bookseller. Two volumes of the "London Journal" appeared; the contributions named are not in continuation. The educational works named may answer the purposes. An Act of Parliament will be necessary for the change of name.
"A Reader"—New York.
"J. P." Manchester.—The Pictures suggested have already been engraved.
"Betsey Jane."—Ineligible.
"H. S. W." Bus-ford.—Apply to Davidson, Water-street, Blackfriars, for the Cornet-a-piston instruction book.
"E. J." St. Helier's.—Mdlle. Lind's engagement will extend through the present Opera Season.
"Clericus, P." We fear not.
"X. Y. Z."—Say One Guinea per month.
"S. D. C."—Stratton-street, Piccadilly.
"L. F." Islington, is thanked; but, we have not room for the Lines.
"Nemo."—We do not know
"L'Inominata" will find a Portrait of Mr. Dickens in No. 49 of our Journal.
"An Artist" must excuse us. To describe the colours of pictures engraved in our Journal would occupy more space than we can spare
"A Constant Reader," Stockport.—The expense of having the Will copied depends on its length.
"A Two Years' Subscriber at Buston."—The publication of the Panoramic Views will be duly announced. We have not room for the second illustration.
"The Merry Monarch."—We cannot give the details: our space is too precious.
"Darius."—In "Arras," the accent is on the first syllable.
"R." We are not aware of the name and address our Correspondent seeks
"Clericus."—There would be no impropriety in having the whole arms, crest, and motto painted in the way proposed.
"A Constant Reader." - An he ress, in heraldry, is a lady who has no brother, or whose brothers have died without issue. The children of heiresses bear their mother's arms as a quartering, which is inherited by their descendants. An heiress does not convey the right of her family crest to her descendants. If a person be the representative of an ancient family in the female line, he may obtain a Royal licence to assume its name. No one has a right to assume his mother's name, unless that lady was an heiress, and Royal permission has been obtained. In marshalling quarterings, the first is the shield of the earliest heiress
"A. E. L."—There is no West India Company. The West India regiments are the same as any other of the Queen's army
"A Constant Reader."—Cocks, or Game Battles, are not by any means the disgusting creatures you assume. By their keen powers of perception, they discover any nuisance the moment it is dropped, and, having repaired to the spot, they bury it for nourishment to their young. In this way, they become invaluable scavengers, deserving our warmest protection, instead of the destruction you desire
"J. H." Seale Newington Declined.
"J. P." We do not know Mr. Wickersham's address.
"J. K." Limerick—Appy to Knight, Fourer-lane; or, Watkins and Hill, Charing Cross.
"C. H. W." Birmingham. Masculine.
"A Country Subscriber,"—Erasmus Wilson on Skin Diseases
"A Subscriber."—Where money is found hidden in the earth, or any private place, and the owner or person who deposited it is unknown, the property becomes vested in the Sovereign, by virtue of his prerogative.
"T. T. H."—Apply at the Secretary of Academy, 1, Banner-street, St. Luke's.
"A Su scriber."—Minlove, is th.nked.

THE ASSASSINATION OF DON MANUEL RODRIGUEZ.—A Correspondent, who gives his name and address, makes some exciting upon a brief account in last week's paper of the assassination of Don Manuel Rodriguez. Our Correspondent states that the assassination took place at Monte Video, not at Buenos Ayres, and argues that, therefore, it was not known at the instigation of Rosas, as was stated. We can only repeat that the paper from whence we took that statement mentioned that such a report prevailed, and we do not see that the explanation of our Correspondent entirely annihilates the rumour: but, as our Correspondent seems to speak with some knowledge of the country, we are happy to accept his explanation of Rosas. We gave no opinion upon the subject, and therefore could not have intended any "misrepresentation," but merely noticed the statement as we found it

"J. W." Ryde.—A Correspondent is thanked for his sensible letter on Etymology. In our discussion of the word "story," storm is a misprint for stow.
"X. Y. Z." Burton.—Yes.
"Charlotte."—The Institution does not grant annuities
"R. D." Canterbury.—Write to Mr. Wilson, Royal Exchange.
"Paton."—In the present Exhibition of the Royal Academy.
"T. J. P." Birmingham, should address his inquiry to Sir John Richardson.

 Our Illustrations from Pictures in the Royal Academy and Water-Colour Society Exhibitions will be resumed next week.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, MAY 29, 1847.

In the temporary suspension of public business during the holidays, the subject of interest, and, we are rejoiced to say, of congratulation, has been the weather. From all parts of the country the accounts are most favourable; vegetation of all kinds is luxuriant, and the cold, ungenial weather in the early part of the month has been rather beneficial than otherwise. After her chilly frown, Nature has put on her brightest smile, and everything is reviving under its influence. The Funds are firmer, business better, and corn falling; unexpected hoards of grain have been tempted out by the high prices—some, it is said, of fifteen years' accumulation! And, as extreme avarice generally overreaches itself, the "samples," in this case, appear to have been almost worthless. But, taken altogether, the change in the aspect of affairs is cheering. Similar statements arrive from the Continent, and, at present, there is every prospect of a year of abundance. Heaven send it! A short harvest would bring consequences that scarcely bear contemplation.

Political intelligence is limited to election rumours; members are seeking constituencies, or constituencies are seeking them; Mr. Disraeli has forsaken Shrewsbury, and addresses the electors of Bucks, "ambitioning" us the Americans say, a county. Sir G. Grey, the Home Secretary, quits Devonport, and comes in for Northumberland; and other changes there are flying abroad. Lord Ashley is making an attempt to get in for Bath, though the ground is held by Mr. Roebuck and Lord Duncan; how a constituency who have for so long had "ginger hot in the mouth," in the radicalism and piquant audacities of Mr. Roebuck, will be satisfied to fall back on the "progressive conservatism," and amiable philanthropy of Lord Ashley, remains to be seen; but, in truth, parties are in strange confusion, and the grievous want of "a cry" still continues. No party seems able to anticipate what the election will produce; will the next Parliament have a Whig majority? Will it be one of moderate men, who on the "good deal to be said on both sides" principle, would support a mixed Ministry, with Graham and Lord Lincoln, and Sydney Herbert, by the side of Lord John Russell? What does Sir Robert Peel think of the state of things? It is said he is not anxious to return to power; yet we have an inward conviction that he will be again in office. These are questions waiting "on the forehead of the time to come" for solution, and, for all practical purposes, the Conservatives appear to be in advance of the Whigs. They have at present the forbearance of all parties in consideration of their difficulties; they govern in a political armistice, with the white flag hung out over Downing-street; but parties will be wonderfully emboldened by a good harvest and an election, and next year it may be expected that hostilities will recommence.

Our comedy writers should go to Spain; the Court scandals and intrigues that furnished such matter to our Congreves and Wycherlies, are there flourishing in full bloom. A young Queen freed from control, and delighting in bull-fighting, hunting, and balls; a husband, who sulks, and is devout, and is too stupid for anything but contradiction to all that is proposed to him; a military favourite, who carves true-love knots on the trees in the gardens of Aranjuez; a Ministry, compelled to get a divorce for the Sovereign their predecessors married, and called the affair an "auspicious event," or be dismissed: here is "matter for a May morning," indeed! There is much that is mournful, too, amid the Royal and Ministerial perplexities. It is evident that Isabella was kept under duresse till that step was taken it is all but impossible to retrace; and now, perhaps, the more deeply she commits herself in the sudden liberty she knows not how to use, the better it will be for the purpose of the heartless old plotter by whom she was sacrificed. It is degrading to Frenchmen and Spaniards to see this nations played with for the mere advancement of Louis Philippe's family. There is some risk of Royalty being endangered by it both in France and Spain; but at present, if the object of the King of the French is to allow Isabella to run herself into discredit, that he may have the opportunity of an "intervention," his wish seems likely to be satisfied; the absence of Christina, who alone could control her, seems but a part of the scheme; in ordinary life, the whole affair would have subjected the actors to prosecution and infamy; but there is another code of morals for Kings and Ministers; and, lax as this is, Louis Philippe has stretched it to the utmost.

THE WEATHER.

The weather which has been experienced during the past week has been very fine indeed; the extraordinary fine weather of this and the two preceding weeks has caused a very great improvement in the appearance of the growing crops, and in vegetation generally. The following are some particulars of every day:—Friday was a fine day, the sky was principally cloudless, the wind was from the W.S.W.; the lowest thermometer reading on grass was 36°, and the average temperature of the day was 60°. Saturday was a fine day, the sky was principally covered by cloud till 5 P.M., after which time it was cloudless; the direction of the wind was S.W.; the lowest reading of the thermometer on grass was 41°; and the average temperature of the day was 63°. Sunday was an extraordinarily fine day; there were a few small portions of cirri scattered about the sky; the wind was from the W.S.W.; the lowest reading on grass was 44°, the temperature of the air at 7h. A.M., was 61°—this increased to 86° by 2h. P.M., a point higher than has occurred in May for many years, the reading exceeded 85° for three hours, as shown by four different thermometers, whose readings have been compared with standard instruments, and known to be correct. This great heat for May did not decline rapidly; at 7h. P.M., the reading was 74°, and the lowest reading during the following night, was 62°; so that both the day and night were remarkably warm. Monday was a very fine, warm day; the wind was from the S. and S.W.; the sun was frequently hidden by large clouds of the cumulo-stratus character; the temperature in the morning was low, being, on grass, as low as 39°; on flax, 24°; and the temperature of the air was 40°; this increased to 77½° during the day, being an increase of 37½° within a few hours. The average temperature of the day was 58½°. The average temperature of the week was 63°.

The extreme thermometrical readings each day were—

Friday,	May 21, the highest during the day was	76 deg.,	and the lowest was 45½ deg.
Saturday,	May 22	77½	49
Sunday,	May 23	86½	53
Monday,	May 24	70	55
Tuesday,	May 25	69	46½
Wednesday,	May 26	74	41
Thursday,	May 27	77½	40

Blackheath, Friday, May 28, 1847. J. G.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT CLAREMONT.

Last Saturday, her Majesty and Prince Albert went to Claremont.

The Queen and Prince Albert, and the ladies and gentlemen of the Court, attended Divine service on Sunday, at Claremont. The Hon. and Rev. Charles Leslie Courtenay officiated

Monday being her Majesty's birthday, a serenade was performed at seven o'clock in the morning, at Claremont, by the band of the Scots Fusilier Guards, under the direction of M. C. Boosé. The Royal circle at breakfast consisted of her Majesty the Queen, his Royal Highness the Prince Albert, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, and his Serene Highness the Prince of Leiningen. Her Majesty and her Royal Consort took their usual early walk. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, Prince Alfred, the Princess Royal, and the Princess Alice walked and rode out in the Park.

RETURN OF THE COURT TO BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

Her Majesty and Prince Albert and the Royal Family returned to Buckingham Palace on Tuesday. His Royal Highness Prince Albert honoured the officers of the Scots Fusilier Guards, of which regiment his Royal Highness is Colonel, with his company at dinner at their Barrack Rooms. The Queen, accompanied by the Prince of Leiningen, honoured her Majesty's Theatre with her presence on Tuesday evening. Her Majesty the Queen Dowager, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, and their Royal Highnesses the Hereditary Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Saxe Weimar, also honoured the performance with their presence. Prince Albert came to the theatre in the course of the evening.

The Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Prince of Leiningen, honoured the fancy bazaar in the Regent's Park Barracks with a visit on Wednesday. Her Majesty, accompanied by the Prince of Wales, the Princess Royal, and the Princess Alice, and attended by the Hon. Miss Dawson, afterwards took an airing in an open carriage and four. The Queen had a dinner party in the evening.

CELEBRATION OF HER MAJESTY'S BIRTHDAY.

Thursday being fixed for the celebration of her Majesty's Birthday, there were the usual rejoicings in the metropolis. The bells of the churches were rung, and the Park and Tower guns were fired

In the evening her Majesty's theatre dined together, and their houses were illuminated.

The Queen held a Drawing Room at St. James's Palace.

The morning being beautifully fine, an immense crowd of respectably-dressed persons assembled in the Park, and when the Royal procession passed, the Sovereign and her illustrious Consort were long and loudly cheered.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, the Queen Dowager, and other members of the Royal Family, the Foreign Ambassadors and Ministers, the great officers of State and the household, and those having the privilege of the entrée, arrived at the Palace shortly after one o'clock.

The "flank" companies of the Household Troops, were inspected in the morning in St. James's Park, on the parade at the back of the Horse Guards.

HER MAJESTY'S BIRTHDAY.—The Queen's actual birthday, on Monday, was observed in the metropolis with the usual outward demonstrations of rejoicing. Her Majesty on Monday completed her twenty-eighth year. A levee of the nobility and gentry called and left their names at Buckingham Palace

FORTHCOMING VISIT OF THE QUEEN AND PRINCE ALBERT TO CAMBRIDGE.—It is expected that her Majesty and Prince Albert will arrive at Cambridge at an early hour on Monday, the 5th of July, and will remain till Wednesday afternoon. It is believed that the Duke of Wellington will likewise honour with his presence the august ceremony of the Installation.

FIRE AT STEPNEY.—On Wednesday afternoon, the rope-grounds and premises at Stepney, belonging to Mr. Marnes and Mr. Gray, were totally destroyed by fire. The buildings adjoining the fair, the confusion was dreadful, and two drinking booths were pulled down and demolished. Mr. Marquard, superintendent of the K division, was severely scorched. The loss is estimated at several thousand pounds. The rope warehouses, sheds, and machinery in both places were consumed, and the dwelling-house of Mr. Marnes was destroyed

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES, &c.

OXFORD. May 22.

This being the last day of term, a Congregation was holden, when the following degrees were conferred:—

D.C.L.—The Hon. and Rev. H. W. Bertie, Fellow of All Souls' College.

M.A.—W. Scholey, St John's College; D. B. Barthelot, Corpus College.

Grand Compounders.—Rev. M. Bland, Corpus College; G. A. Alston, Wadham College; J. G. Andrews (Fellow), Lincoln College; A. E. Dryden, Trinity College; T. P. Maitland, Christ Church; H. W. Haslam, Balliol College; E. M. F. Heaton, Scholar, Jesus College.

B.A.—J. Orr, Oriel College, Grand Compounder; F. Walker, Worcester College; H. H. Wellerly and F. Thomas, Exeter College; W. H. Thackwell, G. S. Whitbeck (Scholar), and J. W. Hall, Brasenose College; C. D. Ross (Scholar), W. W. Walter, J. W. Hartshorne, J. Pinder, A. Grieber, and A. Porah, Wadham College; J. Maynard, Pembroke College; W. Scholey (Scholar), Balliol College; W. H. Milman, M. Hogarth, J. J. Seagrove (Scholars), J. L. Phillips, Christ Church; W. U. Heygate, B. D. Compton, W. C. Stapylton, and R. H. King (Postmasters), Merton College; F. Meyrick (Scholar), G. Watson, Trinity College; W. H. Davey, E. M. Chapman, Lincoln College; F. Chaloner, Corpus College; J. A. Cros (Scholar), C. Shebbeare, J. Baker, P. Bland, J. Waldy, University College; W. Hitchens, G. F. Tamplin, St. John's College; H. Morgan, Jesus College; J. A. L. Campbell, Oriel College.

Yesterday Mr. C. W. Boase, Commoner of Exeter College, was elected a Scholar of the same College.

May 26.

In a Convocation holden this day, the Rev. S. W. Wayte, M.A., Fellow of Trinity; the Rev. H. Binney, M.A., Scholar of Worcester; and the Rev. G. G. Perry, M.A., and Fellow of Lincoln College, were nominated by the Vice-Chancellor and Proctors to be Masters of the Schools for the year 1847-48.

In a Congregation holden at the same time, the following degrees were conferred:—

M.A.—F. A. Weekes, Wadham, Grand Compounder; C. Goring, Christ Church, Grand Compounder; Lord R. G. Lennox, Christ Church; Rev. E. P Eddrup, Rev. W. W. How, and Rev. C. Harris, Wadham; and Rev. G. W. Langmead, and F. Ralkes, Exeter; F. W. Peel, and R. O. Burton, Worcester; Rev. J. Hardie, St. Mary Hall; Rev. G. Trevor, Magdalen Hall; Rev. G. Levy, and Rev. H. H. Vaux, Queen's; W. H. Gunner, New College; Rev. H. Macdougall, W. S. Hoole, and T. B. Banner, Brasenose; Rev. E. Walford, Scholar of Balliol; H. J. Rhodes, Corpus; Rev. O. B. Tyler, and W. A. Glyn, Trinity; Rev. W. S. Burd, Rev. P. Walters, and Rev. F. L. Lambert, Christ Church.

B.A.—J. Goring, Christ Church, grand compounder; J. Bower, Magdalen Hall, grand compounder; N. G. Smart, University, grand compounder; Lord Ogilvy, Christ Church; F. Hale, A. Lightfoot, Magdalen Hall; E. Boothby, Hon. C. Wrottesley, University; W. S. Finch, Edmund Hall; H. W. Sargent, Merton, G. S. Robertson, G. H. Palmer, M. Williams, S. Fellows, Exeter; J. L. Roberts, Michel Hutchinson of Queen's; T. Bowles, Queen's; J. B. Wathen, A. W. Thorold, A. Eden, H. A. Dance, Queen's; A. Akers, W. W. Godden, T. B. Sykes, G. Heath, F. Silver, Worcester; H. M. Fletcher, Balliol; J. McCarogher, Demy of Magdalen; G. Fetch, Scholar of Lincoln; A. N. Delafosse, Oriel; F. H. Holman, F. M. Wilson, T. Gwynn, W. Spurway, W. W. Barston, Christ Church.

CAMBRIDGE. May 26.

At a Congregation held this day, the following degrees were conferred:—

H. M. A.—The Hon. Charles Frederick Spencer, Clare Hall, son of Earl Spencer.

M. A.—Thomas Watson, Caius College.

B.A.—H. F. Radford, T. C. Bewsshorne, and W. T. Blathwayt, Trinity College; W. W. Williams, J. Gordon, and W. H. Smithers, St. John's; G. Dance, St. Peter's; R. S. Daniel and S. B. Sellars, Corpus Christi; A. C. Hotchkys, Caius; H. Cooper, J. Watson, and T. W. Morley, Magdalene; R. T. Richards, Emmanuel; C. Bailey, Catherine Hall; G. T. Gordon and R. Pollard, Jesus; S. Crackanll and S. R. Davies, Queen's.

Grand Sandon.—B. S. Watson, St. John's, Oxford; W. Smyth, M.A., Brasenose, Oxford

THE BISHOP OF SODOR AND MAN.—The ceremony of the consecration of the Honourable and Rev. Robert Eden to the Bishopric of Sodor and Man took place last Sunday in W. itehall Chapel. The ceremony was performed by the Bishop of Carlisle (officiating for the Archbishop of York), assisted by the Bishop of Ripon and the Bishop of Oxford. The sermon was preached by the Bishop of Oxford.

PARISH CHURCH OF ST. GILES'S, CRIPPLEGATE.—The Bishop of London and the assessors have decided that the Rev. Mr. Gordon of St. Chad's has not proved his right, under the ordinance of 1656, to the vicarage of St Giles's, Cripplegate, presented by the Dean and Chapter to the Venerable Archdeacon Hale.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

ELECTION FOR MARYLEBONE.—Among the many candidates for Marylebone are Lord Dudley Coutts Stuart and Mr. David Salomans.

THE WESTMINSTER HOLIDAY.—On the day of distress, the holiday people, this Whitsuntide, appear to have enjoyed themselves more than ever, and to have spent more money. On Monday, the river and railways—especially between London and Greenwich—were crowded with passengers. It is calculated that 34,800 persons landed and embarked at the Charing-cross-bridge steam-boat pier alone.—Greenwich, Wandsworth, and Stepney fairs were visited by large crowds of pleasure-seekers in consequence of the holidays. The various boats on the river were completely filled, indeed, in some instances, to a dangerous extent, both in going down and up; however, no accident occurred. At Stepney fair there were expected no less than 100,000 persons. There was also a dense crowd at a fair held at Wandsworth. The more rationally inclined betook themselves to the intellectual pastime of examining Museums and Galleries. An official announcement of the visitors to the British Museum shows this class to have been very large. No fewer than 17,780 individuals visited that national establishment during Monday; whilst 14,570 examined the pictures in the National Gallery. Greenwich Hospital was paid by 1000 persons to go over the Tower of London; and the Polytechnic Institution was honoured with the presence of the Grand Duke Constantine. The East India and United Service Museums were fully attended.

GENERAL FALL IN THE PRICE OF PROVISIONS.—On Monday morning, the price of bread was reduced in several parts of the metropolis a halfpenny in the 4lb. loaf; many of the under-priced bakers announced the gratifying fact by large placards, having the words "Glorious news! down again to 10½d." inscribed. The general price of second bread is from 10½d. to 11½d., and the League Company are selling at 10d. the 4lb. loaf; inferior can be obtained a penny less, and the best bread sells at 1s. 1d.; flour has been reduced in proportion. A reduction of a penny in the pound has taken place in the prices of butcher's meat of all descriptions, and, in consequence, bacon and other cured provisions have been reduced. The fine weather has caused a large supply of fish, which is sold remarkably cheap; small soles can be had from 8d. to 3d. per pair, and mackerel five for a shilling. Vegetables, particularly greens and cabbages, are very plentiful; the former, which about a week ago sold at 7d. a bunch, can now be had at 2d., and early York cabbages at 1½d. each; early foreign potatoes sell at 3d. per pound.

UNHEALTHY STATE OF PART OF THE CITY.—On Tuesday, Dr. Lynch, accompanied by several respectable inhabitants of the Ward of Farringdon Without, went to the Lord Mayor, and Dr Lynch enforced the necessity for the adoption of some measures to prevent the spread of disease engendered by want of ventilation and drainage arising from the narrowness, the warrenlike construction of the dwellings of the poor, represent that, of all the thirty-six metropolitan districts, the ward of Farringdon Without was the worst. Dr. Lynch went on to describe the fatal and dangerous effects arising from the want of proper ventilation, drainage, and proper draining. He mentioned that the inquest of St. Sepulchre stated that, in some cellars, eight people lodged in a place twelve feet square, and that two-children, daughter houses, and bedridden parents, are suffered to exist in the midst of a crowded population The gentlemen of the Inquest, after enumerating other horrors, showing that the wretched habitations are full of plagues vapours, represent that, for the future, proper supervision, fever will make awful ravages among the poor.—Some statements were then made as to the desire of the Commissioners of Sewers to render every assistance in their power.—The Lord Mayor said he certainly thought the public were greatly indebted to the gentlemen who had brought so important a subject before him, and he assured them that, so far as he could render any service to the cause, he should be completely at their command. He was glad to find that justice was so willingly yielded to the Commissioners of Sewers. He knew how warm they were in the last cause of sanatory regulations, but they could not, he believed, do what was necessary, by compelling landowners to pull down their houses to the common sewers. For the purpose of giving to the deputation an opportunity of accomplishing their object, he should appoint Monday next for holding a Court, for the discussion of the matter brought forward.

BIRTHS AND DEATHS IN THE METROPOLIS.—The number of births in the metropolis, during the week ending May 22, was—Males, 653; females, 614; total, 1267. The deaths were—Males, 467; females, 424; total, 891.

FIRE AT HUNGERFORD MARKET Early on Wednesday morning a fire broke out in the warehouse of Mr. Milligan, corn and hay merchant, Hungerford Wharf. The engines shortly arrived, and there being a plentiful supply of water, and a number of men present (who were waiting for the market to open), the flames were soon subdued. By the exertions of the men the fire was confined to Mr. Milligan's warehouse. Not long ago, after some heavy losses on the turf, he found his affairs in an embarrassed state, and, in a manner that indicated he had a wish to die, he desired his wife to get some charcoal, that they might, children and all, suffocate themselves. He was a loser to a considerable amount on the last Derby. On Monday morning he left home in a cheerful state, and, returning at eleven o'clock, went to his bed room. Not long afterwards his wife entered the room, and found him lying on the floor insensible. Mr. Webb, a surgeon opposite, was called in immediately, and found that he had taken a large quantity of prussic acid. The unfortunate man died in ten minutes. After his death a TAROT was found in his pocket.

EFFECTS OF GAMBLING.—On Monday morning Mr. Frederick Cruse, landlord of the Crown and Sceptre, Great Titchfield-street, Marylebone, poisoned himself with prussic acid. He had latterly attended much more to sporting matters, races in particular, than to his business. Not long ago, after some heavy losses on the turf, he found his affairs in an embarrassed state, and, in a manner that indicated he had a wish to die, he desired his wife to get some charcoal, that they might, children and all, suffocate themselves. He was a loser to a considerable amount on the last Derby. On Monday morning he left home in a cheerful state, and, returning at eleven o'clock, went to his bed room. Not long afterwards his wife entered the room, and found him lying on the floor insensible. Mr. Webb, a surgeon opposite, was called in immediately, and found that he had taken a large quantity of prussic acid. The unfortunate man died in ten minutes. After his death a TAROT was found in his pocket.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

The House resumed its sittings to-day.

THE BIRMINGHAM AND OXFORD RAILWAY. A long discussion took place relative to the mode of appointing the committee to inquire into the proceedings which have taken place with respect to the Birmingham and Oxford Railway; and it was eventually understood that the committee should be nominated on Monday next.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

The House of Commons met again to-day at four o'clock.

NEW MEMBER. Capt. Burke took the oaths and his seat for Galway, in the room of Mr. T. B. Martin, deceased.

THIRD READINGS OF RAILWAY BILLS.—The following bills were read a third time and passed: the Caledonian and Glasgow, Paisley, and Greenock Railways Amalgamation Bill; the Great Northern Railway (Hertford, Hatfield, and St. Alban's Branch) Bill; and the Lynn and Ely Railway Extension Bill.

THE WELLINGTON STATUE.—Mr. C. BERKELEY gave notice that on Monday he should ask a question relating to the removal of the Wellington Statue. (A laugh.)

ARRANGEMENT OF BUSINESS.—Lord J. RUSSELL stated that on Monday next, he should move that the Lords' amendments on the Poor Relief (Ireland) Bill have precedence before other business. If they were disposed of early, he should then move the consideration of the Lords' amendments to the same other Irish bills On Thursday he should proceed with the Prisons Bill, and on Friday with the Loan Discount Bill.

REDUCTION OF LABOURERS IN IRELAND.—In answer to a question by Lord G. BENTINCK, the CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER said, from the accounts he had received from Ireland, dated the 20th inst., he was able to inform the House that a great reduction had been made in the number of labourers employed on public works in that country.

DIRECT TAXATION.—On the order of the day being read for going into a Committee of Supply, Mr. EWART moved that it was expedient that a more direct system of taxation on property should (as far as possible) be substituted for the indirect system (by Customs and Excise Duties) now in use. That such a change would, by removing restrictions imposed by the Excise, encourage trade and the free application of science to trade. The honourable gentleman proceeded at great length to show the advantages which would result by the change which he proposed, and entered into a great many details in support of his argument.

ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE OF IRELAND ON THE DEATH OF O'CONNELL

The Repeal Association met on Wednesday, and agreed to the following address:

"Fellow-countrymen,—O'Connell is no more! The exhausting spirit of Ireland has passed away. The light of the nations is extinguished.

"Weep, and wail, and let your grief be without limit, O children of Ireland; for the cup of your affliction is full, and the extent of your sufferings is without measure. The pride of your hearts has been stricken down—the bright one of Erin is removed—the Liberator of our country has departed.

"With a weapon of sorrow it has pleased the Almighty to afflict us to the uttermost—pestilence and famine blight our people. In a foreign country, far away from his own loved native land, low lies the champion of Ireland's liberties.

"Oh, well may we mourn him, for his whole human race deplores his loss, and the gloom of our bereavement ...illeth the world.

"Fellow countrymen, now shall we best prove that we loved him whilst living, or mourn for him when dead? By reverencing his principles—by obeying his dictates by pursuing the same noble objects in the peaceful step...he trod

"In one sense, in the true sense, O'Connell is not dead! Men like unto him can never die—all that was mortal has passed away, but the immortal part remains. His spirit, fellow countrymen, abides with you. His m...ral teachings are spread for ever through you, and through the universe. No time can extinguish the lessons of his wisdom.

"For ourselves, associated as we were here by him, our purpose is determined to stand by his principles, and to abide by his doctrines and by them alone. This is our first and unalterable resolve.

"Throughout the wide world a mighty void is felt—who shall fill it up? What nation, what people, has not lo-t a benefactor? Our country has lost its guide and leader. On, let that country still be directed by his wisdom, and be marshalled beneath his standard.

"His paths were the paths of peace. He walked in the ways of the law and of order. Remember, then, the counsels of the departed, and imitate the moral of his wisdom and experience—" The man who commits a crime gives strength to the enemy.

"By the long and faithful services—by the noble example of his life—by the glory of his immortal name, we beseech, we implore you, fellow-countrymen, swerve not from the principles, desert not the objects, nor abandon the doctrines of O'Connell." (Signed, by order) "CORNELIUS M'LOUGHLIN, "'T. M. RAY, Secretary." "Chairman of the Meeting."

MANCHESTER RACES.—THURSDAY.

The St. Leger Stakes of 10 sovs each. Mile and three quarters
Mr. S. L. Fox's Executor	.. .. ..	(Templeman)	1
Mr. Brooke's Luminous	.. .. ..	..	2
Bastus, Comme-il-faut, and Wildboy also ran.
Her Majesty's Plate of 100 Guineas. Three miles and a distance.
Mr. Disney's Burgundy, 4 yrs	.. ..	(Holmes)	1
Lord Chesterfield's Game Lass filly, 3 yrs	.. ..		2
Betting: 2 to 1 on Burgundy. Won easy by three lengths.

ARRIVAL OF THE NEW LORD-LIEUTENANT IN DUBLIN.—The Earl of Clarendon arrived in Dublin on Wednesday, and was sworn into office in the accustomed form. The Earl of Clarendon then produced to the Lords Justices her Majesty's letter, authorising and commanding them to declare to the Lords State in Council the appointment of the Earl of Clarendon to the Government of State, the Lords Justices delivered the Sword of State to the Earl of Clarendon accordingly; and invested him with the Collar and Insignia of the Most Illustrious Order of St. Patrick, as Lord Lieutenant. His Excellency then took his seat, elevated, at the Council Board, as Lieutenant-General and General Governor of Ireland.

THE DISSOLUTION OF PARLIAMENT.—It is now believed that the dissolution of Parliament will take place at the end of June or beginning of July, and that the next Parliament will sit in the autumn.

CURIOUS SUICIDE.—On Thursday evening, a man named Thomas Smith, a watchman in the employ of Messrs. Goding and Co., the brewers, in Belvidere-road, near the Charing Cross Suspension Bridge, jumped from the lion of another colossal stone, on the top of the brewery, into a large, and died before he could be conveyed to a surgeon. The unfortunate man was about thirty years of age, and has left a wife and three children. Just before he dropped from the pedestal, he exclaimed, "The Lord has mercy upon my soul." He had latterly displayed great eccentricity and absence of mind.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

HOLLAND.

On Sunday last, a trial opening of the railway from the Hague to Rotterdam was made, and was entirely satisfactory. The great iron bridge near Scheidam and Delfshaven was crossed for the first time, and led to the conviction that the soil dry and safety were what could be wished. It was understood that the line would be opened to general traffic in a few days, probably in the beginning of next week.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

Trinity Term commenced on Monday

THE DUKE OF BRUNSWICK.—An action was recently brought, Munden v. the Duke of Brunswick, on an annuity bond. The point in dispute was whether foreign Princes could be sued in this country. The defendant pleaded that he was a Sovereign Prince, and that the contract had been made by him whilst under the influence of the Duke, one of which he was Sovereign. To this the plaintiff replied that the contract did not relate to the government or policy of the Dukedom of which the defendant alleged himself to be the Sovereign, and that at the time the suit commenced, and still, the defendant was residing in this country as a private individual. To this replication there was a demurrer, and on the argument the question mainly discussed was the validity of the plea. The Court took time to consider its judgment. In the Court of Queen's Bench, on Tuesday, Lord Denman gave judgment that the plea was bad. It did not allege that the defendant was a Sovereign Prince at the time when the plea was pleaded, and the allegation that he was a Sovereign Prince at the time when the contract was made was immaterial. If, indeed, the contract had been made by a de facto Sovereign as a matter of state, that perhaps would furnish a good plea to the jurisdiction of the Court assuming to be obeyed. The judgment, therefore, was for the plaintiff

LETTERS OF ALLOTMENT.—In the Court of EXCHEQUER, on Wednesday, a decision was given of some importance relative to letters of allotment. The case was that of Vollans v. Fletcher. The action was originally brought by the allottee of ten shares in the "Birmingham, West Bromwich, and Walsall Junction Railway Company," to recover from the chairman of the managing committee the sum paid by way of deposit. The case was tried before the Lord Chief Baron at the sittings after Michaelmas Term, and the letter of application and letter of allotment by the secretary having been produced in evidence on the part of the plaintiff, it was objected on the part of the defendant that these documents were evidence of a contract, and required to be stamped. The learned Chief Baron, at the trial, gave the objection its full weight, and directed a nonsuit to be entered, reserving leave, however, to the plaintiff to move to enter a verdict, if the Court should be of opinion that the documents tendered at the trial on the part of the plaintiff did not require a stamp. A rule having been obtained accordingly, argument was heard upon it on Wednesday, after which the Court decided that the payment of the deposit was an act; and if the letter of allotment was not a contract by subscribing letter addressed to a body corporate, the letter of allotment was not an agreement in writing requiring a stamp. Upon this ground the Court was of opinion that the objection made at the trial to the admissibility of the letter of allotment ought not to have prevailed, and directed the nonsuit to be set aside, and a verdict entered for the plaintiff for £19, the amount claimed

POWERS OF RAILWAY COMPANIES.—In the same Court on Wednesday, a decision was given of some importance relative to the Croydon Railway Company. The plaintiff, Mr. Chilton, who is a member of the bar, coming from Sydenham to London by the Croydon Railway, accidentally lost his ticket, and upon his arrival at the London-bridge terminus, in 3d., the fare of a first-class passenger from Croydon was demanded of him. Mr. Chilton offered to pay 1s., the first-class fare from Sydenham, the station at which he joined the train, but declined to pay the fare from Croydon, upon which he was taken into custody by the company's servants, and conveyed to the station-house, and upon finding bail was liberated. The present action was thereupon brought, and the company pleaded not guilty, and a special plea of justification, founded on a by-law of the company. The special plea was demurred to, and the Bill Court, on demurrer, held that the by-law was not a reasonable one, upholding the action. The parties then went to the assizes, and the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff, damages £5 10s. Mr. Matthew Hill, on Wednesday, moved for a rule for a new trial, on the ground that the damages were excessive. There was no pretence for saying that any offence or violation was intended to Mr. Chilton personally. The practice of the company acted under a by-law supposed to have been valid until this action was brought; and unless that by-law could be enforced by arrest it was a dead letter. The Chief Baron reminded the Learned Counsel that there was no evidence at the trial of any by-law. Baron Alderson suggested an apology, but Sir F. Thesiger respectfully declined. The trial was the proper time for an apology. After a verdict he did not think that such a course ought to have been suggested by the jury, nor that it could be acquiesced in by the plaintiff. The Court granted a rule nisi to show cause why there should not be a new trial, on the ground of excessive damages. Mr. Baron Platt, however, dissented, and gave his opinion that there was no ground for a rule.

POLICE.

JOSEPH ADY'S FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE

Sir Peter Laurie stated to the Lord Mayor at the MANSION-HOUSE, on Monday, that he had just received from Hamburgh, and the following letter, relating to that indefatigable nuisance to society, Joseph Ady, the Quaker. The correspondence of Ady now extended to all parts of the world, and, as the British law could not touch him (a fact certainly disgraceful to the statute book), his impositions were altogether without bounds:—

To Sir Peter Laurie, Deputy Lord Mayor of London.—My Lord,—I have received a letter from Sir Joseph Ady, of London, which I do myself the honour to enclose to you, and beseeching, because your name is found at the head of it. I hope you will not take it ill that I am so bold as to address you, and ask you to be so kind as to inform me, as agent of my mother, the widow of my late father, Gerard Cornelius Vladerackun, first, whether it is requisite or necessary that a power of attorney, somebody authorised by me, should go to London in order to fetch personally the sum of £1000 and upwards, awarded by my late father, or whether I can trust the proceeds of it, without any considerable or large sums, to Sir Joseph Ady, the author of the enclosed note, who is unknown to me.

Second. What documents are demanded, in the last-mentioned case; and Third. Whether you, Sir, the Deputy Lord Mayor, will be so kind as to tell me when it was possible, for what reason, and by what person, the sum of £1000 was given or bequeathed to my late father.

I feel great interest in making these inquiries in order that I may return my thanks, if possible, where they are so justly due.

I request you will excuse me my Lord Mayor, for the liberty which I, who am unknown to England, and ignorant of the British customs, take in addressing myself to you, and in recommending my interests in the affair in question to your Lordship's powerful protection hoping you to honour me with an answer. I am, with the most profound respect,

Your obedient,
C. G. VAN VLADERACKEN

Alkmaar, May 16.
My address—G. C. Van Vladeracken, Ardegracht, Alkmaar, Province Nord, Holland.

To Joseph Ady's communication—

"As you would that men should do to you do you even so to them,"

Sir Peter Laurie, Deputy Lord Mayor of London.

The undersigned is able to inform you of something considerable to your advantage (value £190 and upwards), on receipt of twenty shillings, by order on White-chapel post-office, as an equivalent for his trouble and expenses generally, which he may put to your request with the greatest immediate attention is paid thereto, and should you find any difficulty, the great abovenamed will frank you from all expense, except postage, which you must pay both ways.

Respectfully,
JOSEPH ADY Accountant.
No. 5, York-street, Charlotte-street, quarter-of-a-mile from Whitechapel Church, London.
May 8.

The reading of these documents caused some laughter in the justice-room.

The Lord Mayor: I have been just considering the propriety of summoning Mr. Ady to the Court of Requests for twopence, which I have been called upon for a communication of his to me, and I think I shall try the case with him. I apprehend that his success must be considerable, or he could not so pertinaciously adhere to his old plan.

Sir Peter Laurie: I cannot help repeating that it is a disgrace to the laws of this country that there exists no remedy for such an abuse as this Ady and now sends round his letters to all countries, with the head of "Prince" lithographed at the top, as a security for the genuineness of the article.

The Lord Mayor: The decisions of the courts of law show us that the only remedy appears to be in the newspapers, to which I am constantly obliged to appeal, when urgently pressed.

THE MARKETS.

CORN EXCHANGE (Friday).—During the present week the arrivals of English wheat for our market have been on a moderate scale and the show of samples at this market for today was small nevertheless owing to the prevailing fine weather for the growing crops, and in the absence of the principal dealers, the trade was excessively dull, and to have effected sales a decline of fully 2s per quarter must have been submitted to on the quotations. In foreign wheat scarcely a transaction was reported, and large parcels were offering at an abatement in value of from 2s to 3s per quarter on the respective spring rates; we may state, generally, that the supplies were very moderate, yet the trade was very depressed, and, in the few transactions reported, the rates declined 1s to 2s per quarter. Flour and Indian corn were off. We on easier terms.

English.—English: Wheat, 3960; barley, 1110; malt, 4740; oats, 400; Irish Wheat, —; barley, —; malt, —; oats, 610. Foreign. Wheat, 9280; barley, 5030; malt, —; oats, 1,320. Flour, 5280 sacks, —barrels

English.—Wheat, Essex and Kent, red, 60s to 100s. ditto white, 62s to 107s; Norfolk and Suffolk, red 58s to 98s, ditto white, 60s to 105s; rye, 45s to 47s; grinding barley, 24s to 26s; distilling do to 30s, malting ditto, 30s to 33s; Lincoln and Yorkshire malt, 70s to 78s; brown do, 56s to 72s; Kingston and Ware, 77s to 79s, Chevalier, 80s to 84s; Yorkshire and Lincolnshire oats, 20s to 23s; Scotch do, 20s to 23s; Irish do, 19s to 22s; beans, 30s to 34s; Essex & Kent ditto white, 37s to 39s; tick beans, new, 30s to 34s, ditto old, 4s to —s; grey peas, 37s to 40s, maple do, 36s to 42s, white, —s to —s; boilers, 45s to 50s, per quarter. Town-made flour 35s to 38s; Suffolk, 28s to 31s; Stockton and Yorkshire, 25s to 30s per 280lbs. Foreign. Dantzig and wheat, —s to —s; Marianopoli, —s to —s; Polish Odessa, —s to —s; Taganrog, —s to —s, and peas, —s to —s per quarter. Flour, American, 25s to 31s per barrel; Baltic, —s to — per barrel.

The Seed Market.—In all articles, so little business is doing that prices remain nominally unaltered.

Linseed, English, sowing, 52s to 54s; Baltic, crushing, 48s to 50s; Mediterranean and Odessa, 47s to 50s Hempseed 32s to 33s per quarter Coriander, 18s to 21s per cwt. Brown Mustard seed, 8s to 10s., white ditto, 8s to 10s. Tares, 7s 6d to 8s 6d per bushel. Canary, 60s to 64s per quarter. English Clover-seed, red, —s to —s; extra, —s to —s; white, —s to —s; ditto, 30s to 36s per cwt., new, —s to —s; Dutch, —s to —s; Baltic, —s to —s.

Bread. The prices of wheaten bread in the Metropolis are from 10d to 12½d; of household duto, 10½ to 11½d per 4lbs loaf

Imperial Weekly Average.—Wheat, 94s 10d; barley, 34s 10d; oats, 24s 3d; rye, 60s 4d; beans, 35s 10d.

The Six Weeks' Average Wheat, 61s 10d; barley, 36s 11d; oats, 21s 6d; rye, 56s 7d; beans 33s 11d: peas, 34s 9d

Flour—In articles sometimes heavy, yet, in most instances, last week's prices are supported.

Sugar—The supply of both raw and refined sugar is good, and only a moderate business is doing on somewhat easier terms

Coffee—There is a full average business doing in this market, at very full prices.

Rice—All kinds are in moderate request, at fully the late currency.

Provisions—Irish butter is a very dull inquiry and for 1 is to 2s per cwt. lower than last quotations. Foreign butter has declined quite 2s per cwt., with a heavy demand. The English butter is dull, at 82s to 84s per firkin for Dorset, and 8s 6d to 12s 6d per dozen lbs. for fresh. The prices quoted in Ireland are a very wide range, and the chief supplies, Belfast and Cork, are not disposed to give way in price. In all other kinds of provisions, we have no alteration to report

Tallow.—This market is very steady, and the quotations are a trifle higher. The price, on the spot, is 47s 6d to 48s per cwt.

Monday, Friday.—Although a few reports have come to hand this week complaining of the dry, cold, ungenial season from the provinces generally speaking, and very favourable. Such has been the progress of the time, that the crops in all parts of the kingdom have already reached the tops of the poles. As might therefore, be expected, the demand here for all kinds of hops is a matter, at present, of but a very stationary prices

Sussex pockets, £3 18s to £4 8s; Weald of Kent ditto, £4 5s to £5 0s: Mid and East Kent ditto, £5 5s to £6 16s per cwt.

Coals, Friday.—Adair's, 15s 3d; Wylam, 15s; Stewart's, 17s; Lambton, 16s 9d; Heston, 16s; Wallsend, 16s 3d per ton.

Smithfield, Friday.—Although the supply of beasts on sale here to-day was but moderate, we have to report a very limited inquiry for all breeds of stock, in consequence of the weather—at barely, but at nothing quotable beneath, Monday's prices There were in the market 984 oxen and cows 800 sheep and lambs, and 86 calves from Holland and Germany

Newgate and Leadenhall (Friday).—The supplies of each kind of meat on sale were tolerably good, while the trade was dragging, at the following rates.—

For Sib. by the carcase.—Inferior beef, 4s 0d to 4s 2d; middling ditto, 4s 4d to 4s 6d; prime large ditto, 4s 8d to 4s 10d; prime small ditto, 4s 10d to 5s; large veal, 4s 6d to 4s 8d; middling ditto, 4s 10d to 5s 0d; prime ditto, 5s 2d to 5s 4d; veal, 4s 4d to 5s 6d; small pork, 5s 0d to 5s 6d; ditto, 5s 2d to 5s 4d.	ROBERT BERRENT

MONETARY TRANSACTIONS OF THE WEEK.

(From our City Correspondent.)

Although money continues to command the same rate as for some weeks past, still, paper of a longer date is taken, and the pressure is unexceptionable. Exchequer Bills continue to be a topic of conversation, and there is no doubt that the Bank of England is purchasing, for the purpose of keeping them above par until after the 4th of June, on which day the late minute will expire. To those unacquainted with the circumstances under which a large proportion of these securities are held, it is necessarily a matter of surprise that money should not be demanded for them, when six per cent can be readily obtained for capital not only paying four and a half. But a large proportion of Exchequer Bills is deposited in the hands of the bankers, in some cases as security, and more frequently as a loan by private individuals, who purchase them as a temporary investment until some more permanent object can be attained. In either case, the money is rarely or ever demanded, new bills being almost invariably received. These circumstances, added by the Bank purchases, leave little doubt that the Chancellor of the Exchequer will not be called on for any large amount in money but, should the new bills decline much below par, another advance in the interest must be resorted to With the favourable weather and continuous fall in the Corn Market, this even may not be needed. The belief expressed some weeks since in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, that our difficulties were gradually diminishing, will then be further verified, and at no distant date a reaction in legitimate branches of enterprise will attest the soundness of our present financial system.

The opening of the Market was firm on Monday, Consols quoting 87½ to ¾ for Money, and 88 to ⅞ for the July account. A large jobber, however, who had bought extensively, was declared in the course of the morning; and the Stock being thus thrown on the Market, prices declined to 87¼ to ½ for Money, and 87½ to ¾ for Time. As the Settlement, however, occupied the chief attention of the dealers, the fluctuations that occurred on Tuesday and Wednesday were mainly attributable to the state of the Account, it appearing, as the Settlement progressed, that the bears were overacid, and on Wednesday a purchase of 350,000 Consols gave an impetus to prices, 87⅞ to ⅞ being the closing quotations. Thursday's market opened firmly, and the Settlement proceeded satisfactorily, money fetching rather more than 5 percent. Prices, however, became very buoyant as the day advanced, and a rise of nearly one per cent was the result of the day's true sections. The fineness of the weather, and the fall in corn at all the country markets, had great influence in giving this improved tone to business. Exchequer Bills alone did not participate in the improvement, leaving off about par. Prices at the close of the week were firm, Bank Stock quoting 190½; Reduced, 87; Consols, 88⅛; New Three-and-a-Quarter per Cent, 88⅛; Long Annuities, 9; Ditto, 30 years, 9½; India Bonds, 2 pm.; Consols for Opening, July 16, 88⅛; Three per Cent Consols, Scrip, 1¼ dis.; Exchequer Bills, 2 p. par

The Foreign Market continues nearly deserted. Prices during the week have ranged as follows:—Brazilian is about 80; Chilian, nominally 92; Danish, 85¾; Portuguese opened at 34, and closes at 33; Spanish Five per Cents. at 22¾, and remain nominally at that quotation. The Three per Cents. have been, and remain about 33¾; Dutch Two-and-a-Half per Cents, on Monday, were 58¾, and close at 58¾; the Four per Cent. Certificates are 89¾

The Share Market continues depressed, and a general feeling prevails that any rise would be immediately checked by the orders held for sale by the leading brokers. A little improvement at the close of the Market was evident in Eastern Counties, North Staffordshire, and some of the French lines. The following are the last quotations: Ambergate, Nottingham, Boston, and Eastern Junction, 1¼; Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Dudley, 10; Bristol and Exeter, New, 8; Caledonian, 24; Chester and Holyhead, 20¾; Eastern Counties, 19¼; Do, Perpetual Five per Cents, No. 1, ¾ pm; Do do, No. 2, ¼ pm; Do, York Extension, 6; East Lancashire, New, 6¾; East Lincolnshire, 8¾; Edinburgh and Glasgow, 69; Ely and Huntingdon, 18; Great North, 24; Great South, and West. (Ireland), 23; Great North of England, 230; Ditto, New, 87½; Great Western, 110; Ditto, Half Shares, 64½; Ditto, Fifths, 25½; Ditto, New, 7¾; Leeds and Thirsk 19½; Ditto, Preference 6 per Cent, 3¾; London, Brighton, and South Coast, 52½; Ditto, Canterbury, 11¼; Ditto Extension Five per Cent, 9½; London and North-Western, 173¾; Ditto, Fifths, 16½; Ditto, £40 Shares M and B., 65; Ditto, £40 Shares M. and B. (B), 10; London and South Western, 44; Ditto, New, 27½; Ditto, Tenths (Consolidated), 2¼; Ditto, Scrip, 4¾; Lynn and Ely, 26½; Lynn and Dereham, 20½; Manchester and Leeds, 98½; Ditto, Half Shares, 49½; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 14¾. Ditto, Fifths, 9½; Ditto, Thirds (Scrip), 4 dis.; Manchester and Southampton, 8; Midland, 11½; Newcastle, Ditto, Birmingham and Derby, 90; Ditto Consol. Bristol and Birmingham, Six per Cent., 124; Newcastle and Berwick, 25¾; Ditto, New, 6¾; Newmarket and Chesterford, 3¾; North Staffordshire, 8¾; Ditto, New, 2½; Oxford, 10¾; Ditto, Quarter Shares, 4½; Ditto, Extension, 5; Ditto, Thirds, 2¾; North Staffordshire, 9; Ditto Scrip (late Churnet and Blythe), 1¾; Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton, 12¾; Ditto, New, 6; Ditto, Half Shares (A), 12½; Reading, Guildford, and Reigate, 5; Royston and Hitchin, 18; Scottish Midland, New, 6½; Shrewsbury and Birmingham, 3¾; Ditto (C) ex 3¾; South Eastern, 8½; South Eastern and Dover, 3¾; Ditto, New (Ditto £10), No. 4, 4¾; South Wales, 7¾; West Riding Union, ¾ dis.; York and Newcastle, 30¾; Do. Preference, 6¾; York and North Midland, 40¾; Ditto, Extension, 40¾; Ditto, Preference, 6; Ditto, East and West Riding Extension, 20; Central of France (Orleans and Vierzon), 14¾; Dutch Rhenish, 3¾; Lyons and Avignon (Consolidated), 22½; Northern of France, 19¾; Orleans and Bordeaux, 6¾; Paris and Strasbourg, 11¾; Rouen and Havre, 20¾; Sambre and Meuse, 7¾. Union of Australia, 24. Real del Monte, Unregistered, 2¾.

SATURDAY NOON.—The English market was again very buoyant; and, although the jobbers and brokers were principally occupied with paying the small balances, Consols advanced to 88¾ to ⅞ for Money, and 88¾ for the Opening, at which price they closed. Exchequer Bills also improved to 4s to 3s. premium. In the Foreign and Share Market, no alteration of importance occurred.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

TUESDAY, MAY 25.

BUCKINGHAM PALACE, MAY 22.

This day had audience of her Majesty, on his arrival in this country, his Royal Highness the Hereditary Prince of Lucca, attended by the Count de Revel, the Sardinian Charge d'Affaires. His Royal Highness was introduced by Viscount Palmerston, G.C.B., her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and conducted by Colonel the Honourable Sir Edward Cust, K.C.H., her Majesty's Master of the Ceremonies

DOWNING-STREET, MAY 25

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Vice-Admiral the Earl of Dundonald to be a Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath

Her Majesty has further been pleased to appoint Lieutenant-Colonel Charles W Morley Barnes, of the 3d Regiment of Light Dragoons, Lieutenant-Colonel Gerard George Congreve, of the 29th Regiment of Foot, to be Companions of the said Most Honourable Order.

CROWN-OFFICE, MAY 25.

MEMBER RETURNED TO SERVE IN THIS PRESENT PARLIAMENT:

County of the city: Thomas J. Burke, of Marble hill, in the county of Galway, Esq., in the room of Thomas Barrow Martin, Esq., deceased.

BANKRUPT Y ANNULLED.

R. RAY and T. WYNNE, Leeds, Yorkshire, manufacturers of china.

BANKRUPTS

C. HALL, Uxbridge, grocer W. JUDD, Arundel Newcastle, builder. J. DARBY, Dorsetmews, Dorset-square, Regent's park, J. ANDREWS, Kilburn, Hampshire, coal-merchant. J. WHITBY, Lynn, grocer. J. BUTLER, Saffron Walden, upholsterer. W. HANDS, Whitechapel, grocer. T. BAKER, jun. Bakers, Hackney, Middlesex, Stockbroker, and now of Marylebone street, Kingsland-road, wine-merchant C. C. KNIGHT, Landport, draper E. WINSOM, Portsea, Hampshire, tailor. J. Light Hall, Sheffield, Commission-Cabinet Grocer Congreve, of the 29th Regiment of Foot, to be Companions of the said Most Honourable Order.

CROWN-OFFICE, MAY 25.

MEMBER RETURNED TO SERVE IN THIS PRESENT PARLIAMENT:

County of the city: Thomas J. Burke, of Marble hill, in the county of Galway, Esq., in the room of Thomas Barrow Martin, Esq., deceased.

BANKRUPT Y ANNULLED.

R. RAY and T. WYNNE, Leeds, Yorkshire, manufacturers of china.

BANKRUPTS

C. HALL, Uxbridge, grocer W. JUDD, Arundel Newcastle, builder. J. DARBY, Dorsetmews, Dorset-square, Regent's park, J. ANDREWS, Kilburn, Hampshire, coal-merchant. J. WHITBY, Lynn, grocer. J. BUTLER, Saffron Walden, upholsterer. W. HANDS, Whitechapel, grocer. T. BAKER, jun. Bakers, Hackney, Middlesex, Stockbroker, and now of Marylebone street, Kingsland-road, wine-merchant C. C. KNIGHT, Landport, draper E. WINSOM, Portsea, Hampshire, tailor. J. Light Hall, Sheffield, Commission-Cabinet Grocer. T. CARTER, Reading, jeweller "S. SERGEANT, Maidstone, oilman J. WILLIAMS, Whitechapel-road, importer of grass. S. P. ADLINGTON and E. JONES, Liverpool, tailors. S. STILL, Liverpool. B. BURNE, liverpool, stater J. WILKINSON Birkenhead, builder J. GOGGARTY, Stockport, Chester common brewer. G. G. BARROW, Dunkirk-upon-Medlock brewer. W. ASHMORE, Birmingham, carrier S. B. SLATER, Nottingham, wine merchant. J. SEARS and W. DAVAN, Bristol, Bristol Exeter railway engineers. R. HOWLCLIFFE, Wakefield, Yorkshire, carrier. H. BAILD, Gloucester, grocer. C. HARDING, Wotton-under-Edge, builder. T. AVANT, Dewlish, Dorsetshire

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATION

A. M'KEAN, Glasgow, muslin manufacturer. J. KING, Aberdeen, timber merchant. T. M'DONALD, Glasgow, grocer. J. M'LAREN, Glasgow, manufacturer. R. HARVIE, Troon, innkeeper. J. MURRAY and G. MURRAY, Glasgow, manufacturers.

FRIDAY, MAY 28.

WHITEHALL, MAY 27

The Queen has been pleased to present Lieut.-Gen. Sir George Walkett to the charge and office of First Minister of the church and parish of Stenchin, in the presbytery of Brechin and Shire of Angus, vacant by the death of the late Rev. Alexander Bruce, late First Minister thereof.

WAR-OFFICE MAY 28.

16th Light Dragoons. Quartermaster G. Rosier to be Paymaster, vice Williams.

8th Foot: Lieut. W. J. Harris to be Lieutenant, vice Wing 30th: Lieut. R. W. Smith to be Captain, vice Shum; Ensign T. W. E. Coventry to be Lieutenant, vice Smith, J. D. B. Lewis to be Ensign, vice Harris; Ensign T. Morris to be Quartermaster, vice Ward. 39th: Lieut. J. King to be Lieutenant, vice Hoare, without purchase. 46th: Lieut. [illegible] to be Captain, vice Bramble, who exchanges. 49th: Lieut. [illegible] to be Lieutenant, vice Bramble, who exchanges. 54th: Ensign and Adjutant H. Brett to have the rank of Lieutenant. Ensign S. Slater to be Lieutenant, vice Brett. Colour Sergeant T. Smith to be Ensign, vice Slater. 57th: Brevet Major J. Campbell to be Major, vice F. H. Hicks, who retires. Lieut. J. Jamieson to be Captain, vice Campbell; Second Lieut. E. F. King to be First Lieutenant, vice Jamieson; James Tovey to be Second Lieutenant, vice King.

1st West India Regiment: Sergeant H. R. Searle to be Ensign, vice Harford

STAFF: Major T. H. Robe, of the 87th Regiment of Foot, to be Deputy Quartermaster General, of the troops serving at the Mauritius, with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in the Army, vice Major General Wemyss, deceased.

MEMORANDA H.—The Christian names of Ensign Gardiner, of the 60th Foot, are Thomas George, not Thomas Wemyss Wilson, as stated.

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY LORDS LIEUTENANT

Wiltshire Royal Regular Militia: T. Ostaford, jun., Esq.; to be Captain, vice T. S. Mills

Bedfordshire Militia: Lieut. J. Hall, to be Captain, vice Richard Ford. 2d: J. G. Gowers, to be Ensign, vice A. Wilk

The Buckingham Troop of Yorkshire Yeomanry Cavalry: A. H. Popham, to be Second Lieut.

E. Morris, to be Cornet, vice J. Matthews.

Royal Wiltshire Yeomanry Cavalry; Sir G. Musgrave Bart., to be Major, vice Wilson; G. E. Wilson, Esq., to be Captain, vice Sir G. Musgrave Bart.; H. Lawes, Esq., to be Captain, vice Parkin; A. Lowther to be Lieutenant, vice Waring; J. T. Hopkins to be Lieutenant, vice Wilson, B. E. Rees to be Cornet, vice Lowther; W. Harrison to be Cornet, vice J. Wilson; W. Wilkins, Esq., to be Surgeon, vice Rees.

Montgomeryshire Yeomanry Cavalry: Major-Gen. H. A. Proctor to be Lieutenant-Colonel (Supernumerary, without pay); Capt. F. B. Williames to be Major, vice Major-Gen Proctor; Lieut. C. W. Wynn to be Captain, vice Williames; J. Hanmer to be Cornet, vice E. Wil liams; N. D. Jones to be Cornet, vice C. W. W. Wynn.

BANKRUPTS

L. LOGSDON, Barnet, Hertfordshire, coach-builder. J. PROSSER, Piccadilly, jeweller. G. HOBBS, Newport, Isle of Wight, draper. W. DAVIS, Bungay, Suffolk, ironmonger. J. PULLEN, Bromley, Middlesex, baker. The LONDON and BIRMINGHAM EXTENSION, and NORTHAMPTON, DAVENTRY, LEAMINGTON, and WARWICK RAILWAY COMPANY, Old Jewry Chambers. THOMAS W. BRIDGE, Rochester, Kent, upholsterer T. HANDWICK, Uxeterable, Bedfordshire, grocer. E. LIZABETH THWAITE, Oldham, woollen manker. G. F. HOLLASOUP, Birmingham, steam engine. H. B. COX, Coventry, victualler. J. JEFFERIES, Kingswood hill, Bristol, draper. C. C. RAY, Wakefield, Yorkshire, manufacturer. J. WINN, Evesham, Yorkshire, joiner. J. WELSH, Carlisle, cabinet. S. WILKES, Liverpool, ship broker.

SCOTCH SEQUESTRATION.

W. SMITH, Glasgow, card maker

BIRTHS

At Melville Castle, North Britain, the lady of the Hon. and Rev. Charles Dundas, of twins, a son and daughter.—In Cadogan-place Mrs Charles Mcgregor of a son.—At Antigua the lady of Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Lionel Smith, K.C.B., of a daughter.—At Edinburgh, the wife of James Stewart, Esq., of Lincoln's Inn, of a daughter.—At 15, Eatonplace, Belg grave-square, the lady of John Farquhar Fraser, Esq., of a daughter.—In Belgrave-square, the lady of Robert Boyle, of a daughter.—At Bath, the wife of Joseph Cockfield Dundale, Esq., of a daughter.—On the 8th inst., Lady Rivers, of a daughter.—At Brighton, Mrs. Thomas Fraser Sanderson, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES

At St John s, Oxford-square, the Rev Adolphus Hamilton, to Henrietta Charlotte, youngest daughter of the late Admiral Sir Benjamin Rodewell Carew, G.C.B.—At Exeter, Frederick Hayley Esq., to Katherine, daughter of Lieut.-Colonel Thomas Herbert.—At Wellington Church, Salop, the Rev. W. Ben Carter, B.A., to Frances fourth daughter of the late Richard Stillingfleet Esq., of Leigh Church, Worcestershire.—At Bath Newman, Esq., to Charlotte Anne, second daughter of Henry Brown, Esq.—At Manchester, Henry Colbeck, Esq., Captain 87th Regiment, to Katherine, youngest daughter of the late Thomas Sharp, Esq.—At St George's, Hanover-square, Sir Frederick W. F. Rhodes, Bart., Captain R.N., to Mary Dismotton Maitland, only daughter of James Loch, Esq., M.P.

DEATHS

At Brighton, Major Theophilus Brisley Bust r, late of the 4th Dragoon Guards, aged fifty-four —At Islington the Rev Sydney Hamilton Beresford —On the 30th inst., Samuel Weybright in his 93d year of the Nowich, Whitehall, Salop, aged eighty-six —At the Privates' Asylum, Dublin, Sarah Saunders aged one hundred and nine —Lieut.-Gen. Sir Thomas Pearson, K.C.B., Col of the 85th Regiment of Foot.—At Lavington-square, Grace Emy Sites, aged seventy-seven, widow of William Smythies, Esq.—At No. 10, Albert-road, Regent's-park, John William Inman, Esq.—At Highgate, Mr. John Harper, aged eighty-six —At Charles-street, Portman-square, Elizabeth Maria, the widow of Percy Fitzhardert, Esq., aged 81.

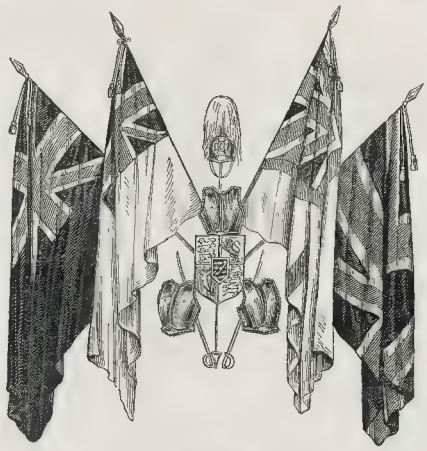
GRAND MILITARY BAZAAR AT THE REGENT'S PARK BARRACKS FOR THE DISTRESSED IRISH.

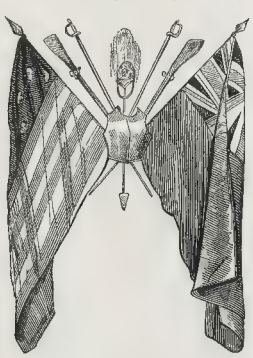
THIS benevolent aid to the funds for the relief of the Distressed Irish originated with the leaders of the haut ton; and the results are characterised by the tasteful elegance of the contributions, probably, beyond that displayed on any similar occasion within our recollection.

The site of the Bazaar, the Regent's Park Barracks, in Albany-street, was excellently chosen, presenting, as it does, the most spacious facilities for a display on a grand scale. When thrown open, on Wednesday morning, the Riding School presented a very beautiful appearance. The walls were covered with military trophies, including banners, shields bearing coats of arms, helmets, swords, pistols, &c. The front of each stall was tastefully festooned with red and white drapery, the names of the ladies presiding being emblazoned in silver letters. Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester's stall faced the entrance, and occupied nearly twenty feet in length. It was richly furnished with the choicest articles, and presided over by the Ladies in Waiting to her Royal Highness. The Marchioness of Londonderry, as the wife of the Colonel of the 2nd Life Guards, held a stall which extended completely across the northern end of the school. At the opposite end of the building was the Viscountess Combermere's stall, no less remarkable for its rich display of articles of taste and vertù. The other noble Ladies holding stalls were the Marchioness of Clanricarde, who sold in conjunction with the Countess Granville and Lady Beauvale; the Marchioness of Ailesbury, who was assisted with the Countess of Wilton and the Countess of Jersey; the Countess of Mount Edgcumbe and Lady Marian Alford; the Countess of Brownlow and Mrs. Mountjoy Martin; the Countess of St. Germans and the Countess of Longford; the Countess of Shannon and the Countess of Desart; and the Countess of Limerick and Lady Guernsey. In addition to the above, there was a "fairy stall," devoted to the sale of the smaller class of articles. This was presided over by a fair bevy of young scions of the aristocracy. Among them were one of the lovely daughters of the Duchess of Sutherland, two daughters of the Countess of Kinnoul, and the Baroness Brunnow's youngest child.

THE ROYAL STALL.

It being understood that her Majesty would visit the Bazaar on Wednesday morning, the several ladies were at their posts at a very early hour. At half-past ten o'clock a captain's guard, consisting of fifty men, formed on the parade opposite to the entrance to the barracks. The bands of the three regiments of household cavalry took up their station at the same time opposite the entrance to the school.





At a few minutes before eleven o'clock, their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester, and his Royal Highness Prince George, attended by their respective suites, drove into the barrack-yard, under a salute from the guard of honour; and alighted at the entrance of the Riding School, where they were received by the ladies and gentlemen of the Committee, and conducted within the building.

Her Majesty and the Prince Consort, accompanied by his Serene Highness the Prince of Leiningen, arrived precisely at ten minutes past eleven. The Royal party were saluted by the guard on entering the barrack-yard: and, as the carriages passed to the Riding School entrance, the three bands before alluded to simultaneously played the National Anthem.

On alighting from her carriage, the Queen was received by the Marquis of Londonderry and the ladies and gentlemen of the Committee. Her Majesty, on entering the Bazaar, appeared very much struck with the taste displayed in its arrangement.

The first stall visited by the Queen was that held by the Marchioness of Ailesbury, jointly with the Countess of Wilton and the Countess of Jersey. The Royal party, after making several purchases here, passed to the colossal stand held by the Marchioness of Londonderry, who was assisted in her arduous duties by the Duchess of Sutherland, the Viscountess Dungannon, the Hon. Mrs. Anson, Viscountess Seaham, and the Lady Alexandrina Vane. Her Majesty purchased very largely of the noble Marchioness, and complimented her Ladyship on the magnificent stock over which she presided. Two of the most interesting stands in the Bazaar were those of the Viscountess Combermere and Mrs. Mountjoy Martyn, the former of which was rich in works of art, many of them being productions of the noble Viscountess herself; and the latter abounding in articles of taste and vertù of the richest character. The Queen paid a lengthened visit to each of these ladies, and purchased largely of both. From Mrs. Martyn, her Majesty bought a statuette of the Duke of Wellington, executed and presented by Count D'Orsay; and the Viscountess Combermere sold to the Queen various articles, including a collection of her Ladyship's articles at every stand; not forgetting the Juvenile Stall, which, indeed, came in for a more than full share of Royal patronage.

THE MARCHIONESS OF LONDONDERRY'S STALL.

The Royal party left at a few minutes before twelve o'clock, saluted, as on their arrival, by the guard of honour.

The Duke and Duchess of Cambridge and the Duchess of Gloucester very shortly followed her Majesty, each loaded with purchases.

The Bazaar was now opened to the general public, and the whole area was speedily filled with fashionable company, including the chief of the Foreign Ministers and all the leading members of the aristocracy. From this period up to five o'clock, the Bazaar continued crowded.

The Duchess of Sutherland was the fortunate winner of a magnificent bijou box, presented by Mr. Hesketh, and priced at forty guineas, which was raffled for during the afternoon—the Lady Augusta Hay, the beautiful daughter of the Countess of Kinnoul, presiding at the wheel. Her Grace, it should be stated, was a very large purchaser at the various stalls during the morning.

The receipts for admission at the doors, during the day, considerably exceeded £1000.

The Duke of Devonshire sent a superb collection of fruit and flowers from Chatsworth and Chiswick, all of which were eagerly purchased very early in the day. There were many less aristocratic, but not less liberal contributors to the Bazaar. In the floral department, Mrs. Lucas, of the Grand-row, Covent-garden, forwarded a collection of baskets of flowers, which were much admired

Messrs. Hodgson, the tobacconists, contributed 100lbs. of cigars: Madame Metayer, of Conduit-street, gave some rich fancy material for ladies' dresses; and others, which our space does not allow us to particularise, were equally generous in their contributions.

The Bazaar closed at five o'clock, and was reopened yesterday, and throughout to-day, at ten, the price of admission being fixed at 2s. 6d.

At the Countess of Mount Edgcumbe's stall, were some clever sketches in water-colour, by Mr. Condy, and his son, Mr. N. M. Condy, of Plymouth.

Among the contributions we must not omit to notice a collection of "Irish Knitting Patterns," by Miss Lambert, whose books on Needlework enjoy such extensive popularity. Of these "Irish Patterns" 500 copies have been received: which, if sold, will realise to the Bazaar Fund the sum of £50.

THE GRAND DUKE AND DUCHESS OF SAXE-WEIMAR.—Their Royal Highnesses the Hereditary Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Saxe-Weimar, arrived in London on Monday from the Hague, and went direct to Marlborough House.

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON.—The Duke of Wellington returned to Apsley House on Tuesday afternoon from Strathfieldsaye, Hants, where the noble and gallant Duke had been surrounded by a select party. The Marquis and Marchioness of Douro, and Lord and Lady Charles Wellesley came to town the same day.

DINNER TO SIR ROBERT PEEL.—Sir Frederick and Lady Theciger entertained Sir Robert and Lady Peel and a large party at dinner on Wednesday evening, at their residence in Bryanstone-square.

THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE.—In our latest impression last week, we announced the arrival of the Grand Duke Constantine, the second son of the Emperor of Russia. His Highness on Wednesday, accompanied by his Excellency Baron Brunnow, and Admiral Lutke, proceeded to Gloucester House, to visit her Royal Highness the Duchess of Gloucester. His Imperial Highness afterwards visited the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, at Cambridge House, and the Princess Sophia at Kensington Palace. The Grand Duke subsequently paid a visit to the Duke of Wellington, at Apsley House. His Imperial Highness was received by the noble and gallant Duke, in the entrance hall of the mansion, and conducted through the various apartments, including the Waterloo gallery, &c. The Duke of Wellington was attired in full military costume to receive his illustrious visitor. On Thursday morning his Imperial Highness witnessed the inspection of troops in St. James's Park.

RETURN OF THE MARQUIS OF NORMANBY.—The Marquis and Marchioness of Normanby have returned from Paris. We understand that his Excellency purposes to resume his duties at Paris by the 20th of the ensuing month.

MR. AND MRS HUDSON'S DINNER PARTY.—Mr. and Mrs. Hudson gave a grand dinner on Saturday last at their town residence, Albert-gate, to the Earl of Lonsdale, the Earl and Countess of Rosse, Sir John and Lady Shelley, Dowager Lady Feversham, Sir Charles and Lady Cecilia Des Voeux, Sir John Yarde Buller, the Hon. W. E. Gladstone, the Hon. Mr. and Mrs. E. Phipps, the Hon Mr. and Mrs. Yorke, &c., &c.

NEWYORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

TO THE MEMORY OF O'CONNELL.—A DESIGN BY WILLIAM HARVEY

THE LATE MR. O'CONNELL.

"ABOUT an hour and a half after sunset on Saturday, the 15th of May, 1847," says a letter which gives a vivid and affecting account of the closing scene of a life unexampled for its activity and achievements, "O'Connell expired, at the Hôte. Feder, in the city of Genoa, on his way to Rome," it being the last wish of the great Champion and Emancipator of the Catholics from their civil disabilities, to meet the spiritual head of his Church, in the person of Pius IX., a man little less remarkable than O'Connell himself; but the pilgrimage was interrupted by death, and another is added to the list of illustrious men who, with failing health and broken spirits, have sought the skies of Italy in quest of health, to find only—a grave. We have elsewhere endeavoured to express our views of his acts, and his qualities; a brief memoir is all we can attempt here, as a record of the facts and events of his life; the history of O'Connell is the history of an age—of two generations—of a struggle of nearly half a century in duration: it will yet have its volumes and its chroniclers, advocate and otherwise; we must confine ourselves to the salient points of his career.

No more authentic account of the birth and education of O'Connell can be given than that contained in the Memoirs recently published by his son, John O'Connell, from which we shall make a few extracts. According to this biography:—

"Daniel O'Connell was born in 1774, at Carhen, situate about a mile from the present post-town of Cahirciveen, at the head of the harbour of Valentia. His childhood and boyhood passed at this birth-place, with the exception of visits, sometimes of considerable length, to Darrynane, then the seat of his fathers' elder brother, Maurice O'Connell, who, being childless, adopted his nephews, Daniel and Maurice, and took, in a great measure, the charge of their education upon himself."

The sketch proceeds to say:—"A poor old hedge schoolmaster, by name David Mahony, may be given to fame as the first who taught Daniel O'Connell his letters. At the age of thirteen Mr. O'Connell and his brother Maurice, a year younger than himself, were sent to the school of the Rev. Mr. Harrington, a Catholic clergyman, at a place called Redington, in the Long Island, two miles from Cove: the first school publicly opened and held by a Catholic priest since the penal laws.

"At the expiration of a year the two brothers were removed from this school by their uncle Maurice, in order to be sent to the Continent, to pursue their studies at greater advantage; for this purpose they were embarked in a brig bound to London, the captain of which was to land them at Dover, whence they were to take the packet to Ostend. The tide being out at Dover when the vessel arrived, these passengers were in haste to land had to do so through the surf on the open beach; and Mr O'Connell's first acquaintance with England was marked by a ducking in the surf, the boat having capsized, through some mismanagement in beaching it.

"An opportu ity offering in a few days, the party proceeded to Ostend, and thence, by trey kschuit and diligence, to Liege, where, however, a disappointment awaited them. Mr. O'Connell was found to have passed the age when boys could be admitted as students, and they had to retrace their steps as far as Louvain, there to await new instructions from home. The difference of disposition between the two boys was here strikingly shown; Maurice, the younger, naturally enough, availed himself of his weeks unexpected holidays (the interchange of communication between their then abiding place and the remote shores of Kerry requiring that interval) to indulge in all a boy's vacation amusements; while, on the other hand, his brother, feeling no relish for idlene s, attended class in one of the halls of Louvain as a volunteer, and with such assiduity, that, on the arrival of letters from home, for which they were waiting, he had risen to a high place in a class of one hundred and twenty boys. That uncle's new orders were, that they should go to St. Omer, whither, accordingly, they proceeded, and remained a year—viz., from early in the year 1791 till a similar period of 1792—when they were removed to the English College of Douay for a few months. Mr. O'Connell soon rose to the first place in all the classes at St. Omer."

The following is an extract from a letter dated 1792, written by the Reverend Dr. Stapylton, President of the College of St. Omer, to Mr. Maurice O'Connell, giving his estimate of the characters and capacity of his two pupils respectively:

"You desire to have my candid opinion respecting your nephews, and you very properly remark that no habit can be worse than that of the instructors of youth who seek to gratify the parents of those under their care by ascribing to them talents and qualities they do not really possess. You add, that you, being only the uncle of these young men, you can afford to hear the real truth respecting their abilities or deficiencies. It is not my habit to disguise the precise truth, in reply to such inquiries as you make, and, therefore, have my opinion with perfect candour. I begin with the younger—Maurice. His manner and demeanour are quite satisfactory. He is gentlemanly in his conduct, and much loved by his fellow-students. He is not deficient in abilities, but is idle and fond of amusement. I do not think he will answer for any laborious profession, but I will answer for it that he never will be guilty of anything discreditable. At least, such is my firm belief. With regard to Daniel, I have but one sentence to write about him, and that is, that I never was so much mistaken in my life as I shall be unless he be destined to make a remarkable figure in society."

At the time O'Connell was receiving his education at St. Omer and Douay, the French Revolution was at its height: England having formally condemned the excesses of that sanguinary time, Englishmen in France came under the ban of being "aristocrats," and were insulted and maltreated. It became prudent on their part to leave the country, blessed with principles of "fraternity," that sent to the guillotine all who were guilty of wealth and birth; O'Connell and his brother were, therefore, directed to return to England; and, after some delay and, to some extent, dangerous delay, they set out for Calais on the 21st of January, 1793, the very day the King was beheaded at Paris. They reached Calais on the 23rd, and sailed immediately for England, in the packet that brought over the intelligence of the King's death. The two youths had been compelled, for the safety of their lives, to wear the tri-coloured cockade; but the deeds done by those ensigns of liberty, at Nantes, they regarded with horror and, as the packet-boat passed out of the harbour, "Mr. O'Connell and his brother eagerly tore out of their caps the tri-colour cockade, which the commonest regard for personal safety rendered advisable to be worn by every one in France; and, after trampling them under foot, flung them into the sea. This boyish outburst of natural execration of the horrors which had been committed under that emblem, procured them a few of those sonorous curses which only a Frenchman can give, from some fishermen rowing past at the moment, by whom the cockades were rescued from the waves, and placed in their hats with all becoming reverence."

The same vessel brought to England the two Sharesees, who a few years afterwards (1798) engaged in one of the wild insurrectionary movements of the period of the rebellion, and were executed. Their principles, the events of the time, and the fate of these misguided men, made a powerful impression on O'Connell; and from this time may be dated his aversion to all violence and bloodshed for any purpose whatever. The frightful excesses of the French Revolution and the Irish Rebellion filled him with horror, and reflection confirmed him in the belief that if there are great things to be struggled for, it is not by brute force and mutual destruction they can be accomplished. It was true he had to teach the Irish people, before his time wholly without a political organisation; the laws did not recognise the existence of a Catholic in Ireland; truth, justice, and common sense, all the first principles of the science of Government, were sacrificed to a "Protestant ascendancy" then only beginning to relax its oppressive grasp by mod.fications of the old Penal Laws. Before 1793 no Catholic could become a Barrister; a strange fact when we reflect that all the first principles of the English common law, and most of its forms and practice were founded and perfected by Catholics; the man who was destined to give the death blow to this system was one of the first of the proscribed creed ever called to the bar.

On the 30th of January, 1794, he entered Lincoln's Inn as a student. In Easter Term, 1796, he was admitted of the King's Inns, Dublin, as Daniel O'Connell; and, two years afterwards, namely, in Easter Term, 1798, he was called in due course to the Irish bar. From this time till he began to be publicly known a few years elapsed, during which he continued his reading and research with the same unsparing industry that distinguished him throughout his life. His powers of working, and capability of undergoing fatigue that would have killed any other man, were extraordinary. Bodily strength and a good constitution are two of the elements of greatness no less important than mental power. It has been remarked how often judges and great lawyers live to extreme old age; but, in fact, they owe their rise in their profession, and are great lawyers and judges, precisely because the vigour of their minds is seconded by their physical stamina. The world sees only the winners in the race: it takes no note of the hundreds who die in the training, or break down ere half the course is run. Woe to the weakling who essays to lift the strong man's burden!

In England, a barrister generally devotes himself to one branch of the law, and a man who practises in equity may be worth nothing in a common law or criminal court. In Ireland, in O'Connell's day, this was not the case, and he became, by dint of hard work and practice, a good lawyer in every branch of the profession, and in more than one he was without an equal. He had all the qualities of a lawyer—quick apprehension, clearness, high power of analysis and arrangement, and that knowledge of men and things which to some minds seems to come intuitively, and enables them to penetrate motives by a glance. To these powers, and the learning which was their instrument, he possessed eloquence, humour, and inimitable tact. He was a great "verdict winner," and a first-rate cross-examiner; those only who know the peculiar powers an Irish witness will sometimes display can appreciate what is required to baffle them; but low, ignorant cunning is no match for sauteness armed and practised in the use of legal weapons. The class of men on which the Government relied for its evidence in criminal prosecutions was frequently the very worst; and O'Connell delighted in breaking down their testimony by making them convict themselves of all kinds of villanies; even Orange juries could not convict in the face of such exposures in civil causes, particularly where intricate questions of property were concerned, he was equally successful. In the Memoir we have before quoted, reference is thus made to O'Connell's "way of life" at this period.

"In one of those rare tabbing sketches of the Irish bar, which, some two and twenty years ago, Mr. Shiel and Mr. William Henry Curran supplied to a London periodical, Mr. O'Connell's manner of life, in the time referred to by himself in the foregoing extract, is, if we may use the word, outlined with considerable vigour and effect. The silent and absorbed vigil for hours before the dawn; the dimly-lighted study; the sign of our salvation hanging pictured against the wall; the unpleasing form beneath it, with head bent over the voluminous law papers, scattered in profuse disorder around; the same hermit-like figure, a few hours later, transformed into the bustling barrister, keeping contending attorneys at a run, to match his mountaineer rate of going, as he hurried to the courts; the third transformation, late in the afternoon, when the man of legal points, precedents, and abstruse arguments, would be found the merry, rollicking agitator, declaiming in a popular meeting, and now playing on the laughing faculties, and anon on the deepest and most powerful feelings and passions of his auditory, with a master-hand—he sarcastic with ridicule the petty despots of the day, or depicted with terrible vividness the wrongs, the miseries, the oppressions, of Ireland and her people. Such were the leading features of Mr. Shiel's sketch, and they were true to nature."

[illegible] all mere memoirs must be compilations of facts from the authorities by whom they appear to be best stated, we shall take a brief notice of the legal life of O'Connell, from a certainly not partial witness, who on this point has done him justice, on the principle that "praise from a foe to no enemy should grudge." We quote the following from the Morning Herald.

"From the outset of his career at the Irish bar, he took a popular part—for it is first political act as a barrister was to append his name to the bar petition against the legislative union. About the year 1806, Mr. O'Connell first came into notice on his circuit, and in 1807, 8, 9, and 10, rose slowly, but surely, into business in the Four Courts of Dublin. In the year 1809 he was a leading, if not the most influential member of the Catholic Board, a society organised and disciplined by him into a species of minor Irish Parliament. In the conflicts of the delegates and the board with the Executive Government, he was one of the counsel engaged for the traversers, and his effort on this occasion procured him augmented professional renown, and increased political consideration and popularity. From this period till Easter Term in 1813, he steadily and daily rose in public favour as a professional barrister man, and in the July of that year, in the sittings after Trinity Term, obtained and merited the renown of a great advocate, for his defence of Magee, then proprietor of the Dublin Evening Post, for the publication of a libel on the Administration of the Duke of Richmond. In his trial, Mr. O'Connell vigorously grappled with the Attorney General Saurin, one of the soundest and ablest lawyers ever produced in any country, and if he did not procure the acquittal of his client, he at least established his own professional fame on the most solid foundation. From 1813 to 1823 Mr O'Connell was employed either as leader or as junior, in almost every important case before the common law courts of his country, whether in Banc or at Nisi Prius; but, though no record of these efforts appear in a professional shape—for no common law reports were published at the time—still the fact is traditionally known to every well-read lawyer, both in England and Ireland. It is true there are the Reports of Schoales and Lefroy, from Easter, 1802, to Easter, 1806, and of Ball and Beatie, from Trinity, 1807, to Trinity, 1814; but these are purely equity reports, and during the Chancellorship of Lord Redesdale Mr. O'Connell had not risen into eminence; and during the period the Seals were held by his successors, Mr. Ponsonby and Lord Manners, he was not often employed in equity causes, for a variety of reasons to which it is not necessary here to allude. In truth, like two of the most eminent Irish barristers, Messrs. Holmes and Perrin, he did not covet Chancery business; and without any imputation on his forensic fame, it may be averred Mr. O'Connell's popular talents and great powers as an advocate and dexterous manager of causes more eminently fitted him for common law labour. In this field, from the period we have any trust record—such as Fox and Smith, Smith and Batty's and Hudson and Brooke's King's Bench Reports, and Hayes's Exchequer Cases—his name will be found in nearly every important case, and we need but cite the cases of 'Hughes v. Hoskin,' 'Commissioners of Education v. M'Loughlin,' 'Healy v. Dee,' 'The King v. the Commissioners of the Insolvent Debtors' Court,' in proof of our statement. It is impossible to read and understand any argument of Mr. O'Connell's in the books, involving a matter of pleading, without perceiving that he was as thorough a master of the science of law generally, and of pleading as a branch thereof, we will not say as any pleader now practising, for he was superior to them all—but as complete and perfect in the science as the Holroyds, the Abbots, the Richardsons, the Joseph Chitty's, and the Stephens of the ending of the past and the beginning of the present generation

"At this time, his political life was yet subordinate to his profession; he had married, against the wishes of his uncle, his cousin, Miss O'Connell, the daughter of a physician, who brought him no fortune; and there was some prospect of his continuing to be the successful lawyer, and little more; but a wider and greater field was yet to open before him. Those who imagine that O'Connell, the framer of the Repeal of the Union was a late adopted principle—a second agitation begun, when the Catholic question was settled, as a mere means [illegible] his influence—do the man wrong; it was [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[

England, with the intention of going to Rome; but it was too late for a more genial climate to be of any avail. By various stages he reached Paris, Marseilles, and Avignon, refusing to receive the numerous visitors and deputations that waited on him, with one or two special exceptions. He reached Genoa only to die, and now

"The pulse
Of all that mighty heart is lying still."

In our late impression last week we announced the receipt of the Moniteur Parisien, stating the decease of this extraordinary man. From the vagueness of the account, some doubts were entertained at first upon the subject, but it is now known positively that his death took place at Genoa, on Saturday, the 15th inst. Our readers will no doubt be anxious to learn every incident connected with the close of the career of such an individual. We therefore supply all the existing particulars given by the French and English journals. First in order, however, is the letter of Dr Duff, one of the English physicians, who attended Mr. O'Connell in his last moments.

"On Monday, May 10 (says Dr. Duff), I saw Mr. O'Connell for the first time, and he was then suffering from profuse and involuntary diarrhœa, with great pain of the abdomen under pressure, strong pulse, and flushed face, &c. Mr. O'Connell had also chronic bronchitis of some years standing. From the remedies employed, these symptoms were much ameliorated, and on the morrow he seemed convalescent. But, from Mr O'Connell's great repugnance to swallow even the most simple medicine, this state of improvement could not be followed up. On the evening of Tuesday (11th) the new symptom of congestion of the brain presented itself. Active measures were immediately had recourse to, and from them there was a decided improvement. Again, the aid of internal remedies was denied, Mr. O'Connell refusing to take any medicine. Towards the evening of Wednesday (12th) the symptoms increased. Mr. O'Connell was restless, and sometimes slightly incoherent. Our former measures were again employed, but with slight success. During Thursday all the symptoms increased, with great tendency to sleep, from which, however, he could easily be roused; the breathing was much embarrassed; circulation became difficult and in some degree indistinct, and the mind wavered. Thursday night was passed in a state of profound heavy sleep, with increased difficulty of breathing, and, in addressing those about him, he imagined himself in London, and spoke to them as if there. On Friday he was much worse, the breathing laborious, the voice scarcely articulate, and the words half formed; all the symptoms had increased. In this state he lingered on till Saturday night, seemingly conscious of the presence of those about him, but neither attempting to move nor speak. My treatment of Mr O'Connell was always in conjunction with Dr. Beretta, of this place, and a young French physician, who had accompanied him from Lyons, and, on the day preceding his demise, we had the advantage of consulting Dr. Vivian, the eldest practitioner of Genoa, and of high repute. By his advice, and as a last resource, a farther application of leeches to the temples was adopted, but all was in vain; he expired last night (the 15th inst.) at half-past one o'clock p.m., apparently suffering little pain. During the whole period of our attendance upon Mr. O'Connell it was with the greatest difficulty he could be induced to take medicine, or even necessary food, and he perseveringly abstained from drink for fully forty hours. Had this been otherwise, the period of death might have been procrastinated, but his failing health and spirits, with constant tendency to cerebral congestion, rendered certain his death at no very distant period."

The Journal des Débats, on the authority of a letter from Genoa, dated May 16, says that the only words Mr. O'Connell addressed to his physicians were a request that they would not suffer the grave to be closed too promptly over his remains, as he was sure he should present the appearance of death before he breathed his last. His most ardent desire was to expire at Rome, with the blessing of Pope Pius IX., and in the course of his journey he had expressed the wish that, should he die on the road, his heart might at least be sent to the capital of the Catholic world. This thought had been suggested, as is said, by the recollection of Robert Bruce, who, just before he died, wished his heart to be conveyed to the Holy Land, and deposited in the Holy Sepulchre.

The Union Monarchique says, "Vainly, during the two days that separated Mr. O'Connell from death, did his physicians and friends strive, by tender and warm exhortations, to revive a little confidence in his soul, and entreat him to suffer, at least, such attempts to be made by science as might combat the progress of a disease which was presented so many chances of being cured. To all these prayers Mr. O'Connell replied but by a mournful silence and melancholy looks, whilst his hand rejected the refreshing beverages tendered him to quench the fevorish thirst which devoured him. During the forty-eight hours this lamentable scene lasted, the patient ceased not to retain possession of his whole faculties, though seemingly in a half lethargic sleep. A few minutes before he expired he appeared to revive, under the sudden influence of some aura as thought; he raised himself, called for his physicians, and, with the calmness recommended their making quite sure of his being dead before they suffered him to be buried. This recommendation he renewed twice or thrice. Soon after he expired, and it was remarked that his pulse from life to death had been so imperceptible that it might easily have been fancied that he was but asleep. O'Connell has left a will, one of the clauses of which states that his heart shall be conveyed to Rome, and, at his body to Ireland. The chiefs of the Irish Franciscans Irishman, and, above all, the circumstances that have attended it, have created an immense sensation at Genoa."

A correspondent of the Times, in a letter dated Genoa, May 18, says:—

"Towards three, P.M., on Saturday, Mr. O'Connell called his own man, and, with a warmth by both hands to acknowledge the rare fidelity with which he had served him, he said, 'As yet, I am not dying; but, two hours hence, he called for the Rev. Dr. Miley (his chaplain), to whom he said, when he had bent down over him, the better to hear his fast sinking voice,—'I am dying, my dear friend!'

"The physicians were still in attendance; but, from that moment, the prayers and other offices of religion, which had not been interrupted from the preceding night, were resumed with redoubled earnestness by his friends and by the chief members of the clergy. At first his voice was united in the prayers and responses; but, as it became less and less distinct, his hands clasped in fervour—his eyes, his countenance, revealed how his soul, even before the last breath, for the dying, which they were mingling with their tears around his bed.

"Occasionally, during this last illness, as the brain became more and more invaded, there was a momentary wandering of the mind, from which, however, the slightest word recalled him. He never murmured, though his internal suffering, at times at least, must have been great. Every one was struck with his serenity, his resignation and fervour in reciting the last rites of the Church. The adorable name of Jesus, and the prayer of St. Bernard to our Blessed Lady, mingled from time to time with verses from the Psalms, and the most earnest and contrite supplications were almost perpetually upon his lips. Up to a few moments before he expired he continued to recognize his confessor, and to respond to his suggestions.

"Not even surprising him, he had been long, long familiarised with the contemplation of his last end, prepared for it perfectly, and almost eager for its advent. When that spirit, so mighty, which seemed to glory in and to sway the tempests which agitate our feeble being, took its flight, there was no more trace or sign of pain or struggle than when the babe in smiling sinks to slumber upon the mother's breast.

"It will be a lasting, though still a sorrowful, consolation for his friends and family, that no resource of skill or climate calculated to prolong the existence of this extraordinary man has been left untried. The professional advice obtained for him was always the best that could be procured.

"His body is to be embalmed and conveyed to Ireland. His heart he bequeathed to Rome. The autopsy demonstrated singularly the correctness of the view taken in his case, and how wonderfully successful had been the remedies recommended in postponing the fatal event.

"His obsequies commenced from the moment of his decease, and are still continued with princely pomp in the church of our Blessed Lady delle Vigne. They are to close to-morrow with a grand requiem mass, at which his Excellency the Governor-General, the foreign Consuls, and Mr. R. Cobden are invited to be present."

We have received the following report of the post mortem examination:—"The body was opened in the presence of Drs. Duff, Beretta, and Lacour by Dr. Ballert, Surgeon-Chief of the Hospital for Incurables, in Genoa, who had been charged with the process of embalming the body of this great man.' Lesions were observed in several organs. The right lung presented traces of chronic catarrh. The intestinal canal showed vestiges of former inflammation. More serious alterations were, however, observed in the brain. It was found gorged with blood throughout its entire extent, and partially softened. Its membranes were inflamed and thickened."

ANCESTRY OF MR. O'CONNELL.

THE surname of O'Connell, according to the authority of Irish writers, emanated from Conal Gabhra, an ancient Prince of the Royal line of Heber, son of Milesius, from whom, likewise, the districts of Upper and Lower Connelloe, county Limerick, acquired their denomination. From this district the O'Connells removed to Iverach, in the western extremity of Kerry, and remained there for a considerable period, until the rebellion of 1641 transplanted them, with many other victims of that disastrous event, to the county of Clare.

DANIEL O'CONNELL, Esq., of Aggaree, in the barony of Iveragh, second son of Jeffrey O'Connell, Lord of Bally-Carbery, who, by letters mandatory of James I., was constituted High Sheriff of the county of Kerry, and died, April 29, 1635, having taken no part in the insurrection of 1641, preserved his estate. He married Alice, daughter of Christopher Segrave, Esq., of Cabragh, county Dublin, and, by her, had two sons,

JOHN, his heir, and Maurice, who died in 17.5. his grand-on, Richard, was Captain in the Legion of Mallebois, in the service of Holland. The elder son and heir,

JOHN O'CONNELL, Esq., Aghgore and Darrynane, raised a Company of Foot, for the service of James the Second, and embodied it in the Regiment of his cousin, Colonel Maurice O'Connell. He signalised himself at the Siege of Derry, in 1689, as well as at the battles of the Boyne and Aughrim; and, returning to Limerick, with his shattered Regiment, was included in the Capitulation of that city. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Christopher Conway, Esq., of Clohane, county Kerry, and died in 1741, having had three sons:

I. MAURICE, who had a son, Jeffrey, and a grandson, Maurice O'Connell, Captain in the Regiment of Berwick, in the service of France.

II. DANIEL, of whom presently.

III. Jeffrey

The second son, DANIEL O'CONNELL, Esq., of Darrynane, married Mary, daughter of Duffe O'Donoghue, Esq., of Aowyn, county Kerry, and had twenty-two children, of whom the following arrived at maturity.

I. JOHN, who married Miss O'Falvey, of Faha, co. Kerry, and predeceased his father. Maurice, successor to his father. Morgan, of Carhen, in the barony of Iveragh, married Catherine, daughter of John O'Mullane, Esq., of Whitechurch, county Cork, and, dying in 1809, had (with six daughters, Mary, married to Jeremiah M'Carthy, Esq., of Woodview, county Kerry; Honora, married to Daniel O'Sullivan, Esq., of Rundoowgan, co. Cork; Catherine, married to Humphrey Moynahan, Esq., of Rathbee, co. Kerry; Ellen, married to Daniel O'Connell, Esq., of Tralee; Bridget, married to Miles M'Sweeny, Esq., of Kenmare; and Alicia, married to William Flinn, Esq., late M.P. Kilkenny) three sons—

1. DANIEL, successor to his uncle.

2. John, of Grena, co. Kerry, who married, in February, 1806, Elizabeth, daughter of William Coppinger, Esq., of Ballyrahane, and Barrys Court; and has issue two sons and two daughters, viz, Morgan John, M.P., co. Kerry, and John, Jane, married first to Charles O'Donoghue, of the Glyns, co. Kerry, and chief of the name, and secondly to M'Carthy O'Leary, Esq.; and Catherine.

3. James, of Lisselan, co. Kerry, married, in 1818, Jane, daughter of Charles O'Donoghue, of the Glyns; and has five sons, Maurice, Daniel, Charles, James, and Morgan.

II. Daniel, Count O'Connell, born in August, 1743, who entered the French service, in Lord Clare's Regiment of the Irish Brigade, in 1757, and became highly distinguished. He was present at the capture of Port Mahon in 1779; and 1782, at the grand attack on Gibraltar, where he was severely wounded. On the downfall of Louis XVI., he emigrated to England, and was appointed, in 1793, Colonel of the 6th Irish Brigade, which command he retained until that corps was disbanded. In 1814, on the resumption of the French Crown by the Bourbons, Colonel O'Connell was restored to his military rank of General, and Colonel-Commandant of the Regiment of Saint Sulm, and named Grand Cross of the Order of St. Louis. He died in July, 1833, aged ninety, at his château, near Blois, on the Loire, holding the rank of General in the French, and the eldest Colonel in the English service.

I. Elizabeth, married to Timothy M'Carthy, Esq., of Liss, county Kerry, and was mother of Colonel M'Carthy, who served under Paul Jones, as a Lieutenant of Marines, when the Bon Homme Richard took the Serapis.

II. Honora, married to Charles Sughrue, Esq., of Fermoyle Castle, county Kerry, and was mother of the Right Rev. Dr. Sughrue, late Catholic Bishop of Ardfert and Aghadoe.

III. Abigail, married to Major O'Sullivan, of the Austrian Service, for many years Town Major of Prague.

IV. Mary, married to James Baldwin, Esq., of Clohina, co. Cork, and was mother of Dr. Herbert Baldwin, late M.P. for Cork.

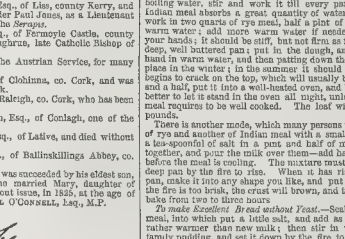
V. Ellen, married to Arthur O'Leary, Esq., of Raleigh, co. Cork, who has been an officer in the Hungarian service.

VI. Catherine, married to Mortagh O'Sullivan, Esq., of Conlagh, one of the heads of the O'Sullivans, Princes of Beare.

VII. Anne, married to Maurice O'Connell, Esq., of Lative, and died without issue.

VIII. Alice, married to Thomas Segerson, Esq., of Ballinskillings Abbey, co. Kerry.

M'O'Connell, of Darrynane, died in 1770, and was succeeded by his eldest son, MAURICE O'CONNELL, Esq., of Darrynane, who married Mary, daughter of Robert Castillon, of Ballybigine; but, dying without issue, in 1825, at the age of 91, was succeeded by his nephew, the late DANIEL O'CONNELL, Esq., M.P.



AUTOGRAPH

THE DEATH OF O'CONNELL.

And has that mighty spirit left the clay,
That shrined its fires through many a stormy year?
Pulseless the heart 'neath Death's triumphant sway?
Voiceless the tongue? the eye sans smile or tear?

That eye, where wit and pathos loved to dwell;
The voice, which thundered like the Tribune's old;
The chainless spirit goaded to repel
The waves of obloquy that round it roll'd!

And nought is left, save yon poor mortal cell!
Alas! how wilder grows the hour of doom!
Far from his mountain home, care, grief, and toil,
Soon open'd the dark portals of the tomb.

Yet this the man who sway'd from Tara's hill
The surging myriads, spell-bound by his word;
Who blindly follow'd him through good or ill,
Blindly believing in his dreams absurd.

Oh! better thousand-fold it would have been
For him, his country, and the empire wide,
To crown with industry the Island green;
Flinging with scorn fierce politics aside—

Calling the vast resources of the land
Forth from their fatal lethargy, and giving
To Albion's sympathy the heart and hand,
All mutual wrongs forgetting or forgiving!

We all were equal in the Law's calm eye.
The last link of Coercion's penal chain
Was burst; and men spoke not of days gone by,
But yearn'd to crown with joy fair Erin's plain.

Peace with the dead! Death's curtain has descended
Over the insidious snare. The farce is o'er—
Life's comédie larmoyante is now ended,
For him. Alas! not for his native shore.

Proud Genoa * received his latest breath,
The dying pilgrim's earth'd his heart to Rome.
His dust will sleep beneath his mountain heath,
Genius'd by the tear-drops of th' Atlantic's foam.

His Isle is bow'd by woes; but strongly yet
Hope wo the curse shall soon have been withdrawn.
Hushed are the waves when Storm's red star is set:
The darkest hour is that before the dawn.—L.

NEW HOUSE OF LORDS.—GAS LIGHTING.

IN a former Number, a portion of the following details was inadvertently omitted.

In figure 1, a is the branch for gas-light; b is the gas-pipe, running up outside the branch, and passing through the perforated ornamental work of the coronal, c; d is a tall glass chimney, within which is a smaller, and shorter one, e, over the gas-light f, and round it is a globe-formed glass. The dotted lines enclosing g g, show the tube for carrying off the consumed or vitiated air: the triple arms at its upper part, being sectional representations of three out of four small tubes, which convey the foul air from the chimney d, into the large tube g g; their positions relatively to the gas-light being indicated by figure 2, in which the dotted circle shows the perforated plate through which the fresh air enters to feed the flame, and the outer circle a plate of tale or mica, with the four apertures for the small tubes before-mentioned; h is a double plate of mica to close the top of the large chimney d, having a brass ring on its outer surface for convenience in lifting off.

In our previous notice of the gas-lighting, we inadvertently mentioned that air was not absorbed from the apartment. This was incorrect; as the fresh air is taken from the apartment, and, passing through the perforated coronal, feeds the flame through the pierced metal plate, as shown in our diagram; but no vitiated air can enter the House, as it all passes away through the tube g g.

* "Genova la Superba."

OUR DOMESTIC COLUMN.

INSTRUCTIONS AND RECIPES FOR THE USE OF INDIAN CORN.

The following are extracts from a pamphlet published for the Government at Dublin; and show the various modes of using Indian Corn in America, with a view to its adoption during the present scarcity of wheat.

BREAD

Wheaten bread, with one-third Indian corn meal, is decidedly improved by it, and is preferred at all the tables of the first American families. It acquires by this addition a sweetness in flavour, and a freshness that we in vain look for in bread made entirely of wheat

Indian Corn and Wheat Flour Bread.—Take one quart of corn meal and a little salt, and one quart of boiling water. Wet the meal, let it stand until it be blood-warm, then add two quarts of wheat flour and half a pint of yeast, and let it rise. This quantity will make two loaves. Bake it one hour and a half.

Brown Bread.—Take one quart and a pint of Indian meal, one quart and a pint of rye flour, and a little salt. Mix well together; then take half a pint of yeast, a quart and half a pint of blood-warm water, and let it rise; bake it in an iron stand in the oven all night

Rye and Indian Bread.—There are many different proportions in the making of this bread. Some put one-third Indian meal to two-thirds of rye; others like one-third rye and two of Indian, others prefer it half and half.

If you use the largest proportion of rye meal, make your dough stiff, so that it will mould between your hands; when it is made with Indian, it should be softer and baked in deep earthen or tin pans after the following rules:—

Take four quarts of sifted Indian meal; put it into a glazed earthen pan, sprinkle over it a table-spoonful of fine salt; pour over it about two quarts of boiling water, stir and work it till every part of the meal is thoroughly wet; Indian meal absorbs a great quantity of water. When it is about milk-warm, work in two quarts of rye meal, half a pint of lively yeast, mixed with a pint of warm water; add more warm water if needed. Work the mixture well with your hands; it should be stiff, but not firm as flour dough. Have ready a large, deep, well buttered pan; put in the dough, and smooth the top by putting your hand in warm water, and then patting down the loaf. Set this to rise in a warm place in the winter; in the summer it should not be put by the fire. When it begins to crack on the top, which will usually be in about an hour or an hour and a half, put it into a well-heated oven, and bake it three or four hours. It is better to let it stand in the oven all night, unless the weather is warm. Indian meal requires to be well cooked. The loaf will weigh between seven and eight pounds.

There is another mode, which many persons think preferable. Scald a quart of rye and another of Indian meal with a small quantity of boiling water. Boil a tea-spoonful of salt in a pint and half of milk, mix the rye and Indian meal together, and pour the milk over them—add half a pint of fresh yeast, but not before the meal is cooling. The mixture must be well kneaded, and placed in a deep pan by the fire to rise. When it has risen sufficiently, take it out of the pan, make it into any shape you like, and put it into an oven well heated. If you like a crack on the top, which will usually be in about an hour or an hour and a half, put it into a well-heated oven, and bake it three or four hours. It is better to let it stand in the oven all night, unless the weather is warm. Indian meal requires to be well cooked. The loaf will weigh between seven and eight pounds.

There is another mode, which many persons think preferable. Scald a quart of rye and another of Indian meal with a small quantity of boiling water. Boil a tea-spoonful of salt in a pint and half of milk, mix the rye and Indian meal together, and pour the milk over them—add half a pint of fresh yeast, but not before the meal is cooling. The mixture must be well kneaded, and placed in a deep pan by the fire to rise. When it has risen sufficiently, take it out of the pan, make it into any shape you like, and put it into an oven well heated. If you like a crack on the top, which will usually be in about an hour or an hour and a half, put it into a well-heated oven, and bake it three or four hours. It is better to let it stand in the oven all night, unless the weather is warm. Indian meal requires to be well cooked. The loaf will weigh between seven and eight pounds.

To make Excellent Bread without Yeast.—Scald about two handfuls of Indian meal, then when put a little salt, and as much cold water as will make it rather warmer than new milk; then stir in wheat flour till it is as thick as a family pudding, and set it down by the fire to rise. In about half an hour it generally grows thin; you may sprinkle a little fresh flour on the top, and round to turn the pot round, that it may not bake to the side of it. In three or four hours, if you mind the above directions, it will rise and ferment as if you had set it with hop yeast; when it does, make it up in soft dough, &c., as pan, put in your bread, and set it before the fire, covered up, turn it round to make it equally warm, and in about an hour it will be light enough to bake. It must be set to bake in a Dutch oven, as it should be put into the oven as soon as it is light. Be careful to observe that Indian corn in all its preparations requires thorough cooking. If not sufficiently boiled or baked it loses its flavour and becomes indigestible.

CAKES AND PUDDINGS

The following recipes are extracted from Dr. Bartlett's admirable pamphlet:—

Griddle Cakes.—Use milk altogether and not water. Two eggs, yellow and white, to be allowed for a pint of corn meal, the milk to be a little warmed, and the whole to be well beaten up with a spoon. There must be milk enough used to make the batter so liquid that it will pour out of the saucepan on the griddle, one spoonful of wheat flour and lard (pure butter is better) the size of a walnut. The griddle is a flat round iron, standing on three legs, and of any size; it must be made very hot, as it were, when it receives the cakes; and it must be well cleaned and greased while warm, that it may be perfectly smooth, so that the cakes may be easily turned, that they may be done brown (not burnt) on both sides. Experience alone can teach how easy it is to spoil or make the wheaten flour. The dough, or rather the batter, must be well beat up, and prepared directly before being cooked, though it might set an hour, but it would not bear to be made up over night. The cakes are to be eaten hot, until they spread on the griddle to the size of the bottom of a breakfast plate.

Indian Muffins.—Pour boiling water into a quart of corn meal, stir it well, let it be a little more than wet; when it is cooled a bit, add to it a tablespoonful of yeast, two eggs well beaten, and a teaspoonful of salt; set in a warm place to rise for two hours; then batter square tin pans, two-thirds fill them, and bake in a quick oven; when done, serve hot, or cut in squares and bake as wheat muffins.

Indian Gruel.—To one quart of boiling water, stir in two tablespoonfuls of Indian meal, mixed with a little cold water, boil fifteen or twenty minutes, add a little salt.

In conclusion, it will be found on trial that everything which can be made with wheaten flour may be made with Indian corn meal, and that the latter is more wholesome and more nutritious.

HOMINY, OR SHELLED INDIAN CORN.

HOMINY is made of the broken grain, broken by the steel mills. It is soaked over night in warm water, changed in the morning to clean cold water, and boiled gently an hour and a half. Warm it over when cold; eat it with milk, or molasses, or salt, or bacon, or alone.

The following are recipes and instructions which are at the present time extensively used, and with great advantage and economy, in the town and neighbourhood of Carlisle, and were furnished by Mr. Jonathan D. Carr, of that town:—

Plain-boiled Hominy.—The one pound of crushed hominy in a cloth, allowing plenty of room to swell, and boil three hours. The pudding may be eaten with sugar and molasses, butter, or treacle sauce. One pound of hominy will make a pudding sufficient, as a meal, for five or six persons, at a cost of not more than 2d., when Indian corn is selling at from 5*s.* to 6*s.* per quarter.

Rich Hominy Pudding. Mix the hominy, which has been previously boiled, either in milk or water, with eggs, a little sugar and nutmeg, a little suet, and with or without currants and raisins, as preferred. Tie up in a basin, and boil two hours. It is excellent, either boiled or baked.

To prepare hominy as a vegetable, boil whole hominy, in plenty of water, four hours, and strain it through a colander for the table. This is a beautiful looking dish, and forms an excellent substitute for potatoes.

Equal parts of Indian and English flour make excellent household bread and cakes.

Saginaw Corn Porridge—that is to say, boiling milk, broth, or water, thickened with Indian corn meal, in the same way that people in the south of England thicken them with wheat flour, and that people in the north thicken with oatmeal. This makes a breakfast, supper, or dinner for little children, put into milk or broth, it is the same for grown people. It is excellent in all disorders arising from bad digestion. In milk or broth it is a good strong meal, sufficient for a man to work upon.

It takes about three pounds and a half of Indian corn flour to make porridge for ten persons, less than half a pound of corn flour for a meal for one man, and a wife or female meal that fills and strengthens the stomach. Three pounds and a half of wheaten flour would make four pounds and a half of bread, but it would be dry bread, and bread alone, and not affording half the sustenance or content of the porridge.

THE CHEAPEST BREAD YET.

Mr. S. Brown, of Finedon, near Higham Ferrers, has in constant use on his farm bread made of flour and mangel wurzel, in equal quantities, by weight. The mangel wurzel is pared, cut into slices, and boiled so as to mash well. The usual quantity of yeast must be used, and little or no water is required. It must stand some time after mixing, and then be baked as other bread.

COOKERY FOR THE POOR

M. Soyer has published, in a very cheap form, for extensive distribution, his Recipes now adapted to the present season of scarcity. They include receipts for various soups, as well as for simple dishes, which may be made at a trifling expense; and, says M. Soyer, "by copying which, every labouring family may reduce their expences, and live much better than they have hitherto done." The instructions are sensible, and adapted for the purpose, and their circulation must effect much good. A portion of the proceeds of the sale of the pamphlet is to be given to the poor.

BREAD FROM WHEAT MEAL.

It is stated by a correspondent of the Salisbury Journal that bread is made and sold at Mere, containing the whole of the produce of the wheat without any flour being used, and the price is only 5½*d.* the four-pound loaf, while the other bakers' bread is 6*d.* and 11*d.* It is a matter of surprise that the former description of bread is not made and sold in this city; but, instead of such being the case, there is difficulty in obtaining it, even if ordered, and the same price is charged as for other bread. Bread from wheat meal is recommended as both wholesome and nutritious; it is, in fact, highly conducive to health.—Western Luminary.

GARDENING THINGS NEVER TO BE DONE IN JUNE.

Never put the free-growing species of Cereus and Epiphyllum in old mortar rubbish, as is frequently done, but for what purpose we cannot tell, if thriving, good flowering, specimens are required

Never make a practice of watering flower-beds every evening during hot weather: give a good soaking about once a week, and just sprinkle over the leaves every evening.

Never allow plants in pots to root into the soil on which they stand.

Never water plants in flower over their heads.

Never allow the earth of the flower-beds to become crusted over in hot weather.—From Mrs. Loudon's Amateur Gardener's Calendar, an excellent work, just published.

STRAWBERRIES IN JUNE.

Strawberry-beds should be frequently watered in June, while the fruits are swelling; and many persons put tiles, pieces of slate, or even straw, under the fruit, to prevent it from being soiled. It is from a custom of this kind having been formerly very prevalent, that the name of strawberry is derived. Young plantations of strawberries are generally made in this month.—Mrs. Loudon's Amateur Gardener's Calendar.

WRECK OF "THE EXMOUTH."

WRECK OF "THE EXMOUTH."—RECOVERY OF BODIES.

WRECK OF "THE EXMOUTH" EMIGRANT-SHIP.

The details of this deeply lamentable catastrophe were given in our Journal of the 8th instant. We are now enabled, by the aid of an obliging Correspondent, to furnish some additional account of the recovery of a number of bodies from the wreck, together with the two annexed views.

By the exertions of Mr. Campbell, of Ballinabey, and Mr. Henry Campbell, of Rockside; aided by three men, whose names are Turner, M'Nevin, and Macdonald (the latter one of the gamekeepers of Campbell, of Islay), no fewer than 108 bodies have been recovered and interred. These persons, slung over the rocks by turns, succeeded in hooking the bodies in the surf; and the two gentlemen named above wrapped the women, all of whom were naked, in sheets, and had them thus hoisted up to the summit of the cliff.

The bodies were dreadfully mutilated; some without faces, others without heads or limbs, and all in a far advanced state of putrefaction. The country people would not touch the bodies, and this threw this heavy and most painful duty entirely upon these five fine fellows, who had, up to May 14, decently buried no less than 108.

The conduct of the Messrs. Campbell, who are small proprietors in Islay, is very warmly spoken of; and, if they had not the strength and nerve of two ordinary men each, they could not have borne the fatigue and horrors which they have endured. The three fine fellows, also named, are very little behind the gentlemen in their most meritorious exertions; and they deserve a higher reward than mere praise.

Very few men have been found; the bodies are almost all those of women and children. The body of the Captain has been found, the only one with a stitch of clothes on; all the others were quite naked.

The last report adds the names of John McCaffer, Donald McLaughlin, and Dugald Fergusson (workmen of Campbell, of Ballinabey), as having added their exertions in preparing graves, and hooking the bodies; although still averse to handling them. They are all buried in a beautiful spot—soft green turf, surrounded by wild rocks.

These sketches have been made by Mr. J. F. Campbell (of Islay), the son of the noble-spirited Lord of that domain; who, with his cousin, Mr. W. Campbell, have had some share in the good work.

We understand that her Majesty's Government has been pleased to notify to these gentlemen their sense of such meritorious example and exertion, and to add a gratuity to the men engaged in assisting them.

One of the Illustrations shows the spot where most of the wreck came on shore; the other, a deep chasm, from which the greater number of the bodies were recovered.

FRIGHTFUL ACCIDENT ON THE SHREWSBURY AND CHESTER RAILWAY.

A very alarming and fatal accident took place on Monday on this railway, by which several persons were killed and many received serious injuries.

The train which leaves the Chester Station at half-past six o'clock had just arrived at the new iron bridge which crosses the river Dee, at the extremity of the race-course, when the furthest portion of the three iron arches or spans composing the bridge gave way with a tremendous crash, carrying the whole of the train (with the exception of the engine and tender, which reached the other side in safety) into the river below. Nine persons were taken out in a dead or dying state, and several others mutilated and injured in various ways. The stoker of the engine was thrown from his place upon the tender, and killed upon the spot.

The iron bridge consisted of three spans, each span 100 feet in width. Each span is composed of massive iron girders, supported by stone of the most firm and durable construction. There are four of these girders in each span, one on each side of the up and down line of rails. Strong wooden beams were fixed across the girders, and along these the lines were laid. The girders themselves were formed of two pieces of iron, firmly riveted in the centre, and seemed well adapted to sustain an immense weight.

The train consisted of one first-class carriage, two second class carriages, and a luggage-van; but it is stated that there were not more than two dozen passengers. The train was proceeding as usual along the line, had already crossed two of the arches, and was in the act of crossing the third, when, without one moment's warning, all the carriages were precipitated into the river, a depth of about 30 feet; the engine and tender, which had crossed the bridge, pursuing the r course along the line. The sudden shock and concussion rendered almost all the persons in the carriages totally insensible of their situation. One man, indeed, named Froud, recovered himself almost immediately; he found himself in a carriage turned upside down in the river, and, being fully sensible of the horrors of his situation, he exerted himself to the utmost, and succeeded in getting through the carriage window, whence he precipitated himself into the river, and swam ashore. The crash was heard at a great distance, and assistance was promptly on the spot, Mr. Jones, the house surgeon of the Infirmary, being very active in rendering every aid to the unfortunate sufferers. In a brief space of time four dead bodies were taken out of the river, and twelve or thirteen of the passengers, who were more or less wounded, were extricated from their perilous situation, and conveyed to the Infirmary.

SCENE OF THE RAILWAY ACCIDENT, AT CHESTER.—THE DEE VIADUCT.—SKETCHED BY MR. A. W. HUNT, LIVERPOOL.

The account of Clayton, the engine-driver, is as follows:—When passing over the third span from Chester, he felt the rails sinking beneath him, and he instantly put on the steam; and then felt the carriages severed, while the engine and tender cleared the bridge, and reached the abutments on the Wrexham or south bank of the river in safety; but the jerk or wrench arising from this severance threw the tender off the rails, inclining it sideways towards the stone parapet. The tender was finally thrown somewhat on its side, and about three feet off the rails, on the east side, this shock severing it from the engine, the iron bar or hook connecting them being snapped in two. The stoker, whose name is Anderson, was by this shock thrown off the tender upon the rails, and he screw-jack from the tender falling on him, killed him on the spot. The engine continued its course along the line, and, fortunately, Clayton, the engine-driver, escaped without hurt.

As soon as the agitation consequent upon such a dreadful occurrence had subsided, attention was directed to the fallen arch; but, strange to say, only one of the girders, that on the outside, had given way, while the other remained perfectly firm and entire. Of course, the weight of the carriages bore down the rails and the horizontal beams, which, with the girder, now broken into several pieces, fell into the river. It also tore with it a portion of the stone-work in which it was fixed on the Welsh side of the river. Very fortunately, however, nothing seemed to have fallen upon the carriages, and though they were crushed one against the other, they did not appear so completely smashed as would have been the case had the arch been built of stone.

Among the persons killed are:

John Matthews, a coachman on one of the Welsh mail coaches between Chester and some part of Wales. He was a passenger to Ruabon or Wrexham, in the second-class carriage.

Roywell, also a coach driver, and a passenger to Wrexham.

George Roberts, guard of the train, who met an instantaneous death, having been precipitated from the top of the carriage on to the bank of the river, amid the falling ruins.

The stoker, a young man.

Thirteen persons are known to have been injured.

Mr. and Miss Town, of Wrexham (brother and sister). The injuries which Mr. Town has received are of a very serious character. He has sustained a severe concussion of the brain.

Mrs. Evison a middle-aged lady, from the neighbourhood of Ruabon and Wrexham. Her injuries are very severe, consisting of a fracture of the hip-bone, the nature or extent of which has not been accurately ascertained.

Mr. Isaac Jones, of Wrexham, said to be a tailor and draper, has had his skull severely fractured, and lies now in an exceedingly critical state.

Mr. John Jones, from the neighbourhood of Wrexham, a severe contusion abou the head, which is not, however, reckoned imminently dangerous.

Mrs. Elizabeth Jones (wife of the above) has had her thigh fractured.

Ann Evans, servant to Captain Hoskins, who resides near Ruabon. This young woman has suffered to a greater degree than, perhaps, any other of the unfortunate individuals who were injured. Her thigh is fractured, and she has likewise sustained a serious fracture of the collar-bone, and a number of internal injuries.

Mr David Evans, of Wrexham, or the immediate neighbourhood, had his thigh fractured.

Mrs. Evans, his wife, received a number of bruises, none of which are of a serious character.

A boy named Stevens, the son of one of the station-keepers on the line, and himself employed on the line, was dreadfully injured.

Mr. John Bruce Ford, of Manchester, received a cut on the head, and other injuries, none of which are considered at all serious.

A married female, name unknown, severe concussion of the brain.

A boy or man, connected with some of the offices, named M'Gregor; had his skull fractured, but was, nevertheless, quite sensible, and conversed with the house surgeons.

Happily, several persons escaped without the least injury.

The engineer was so horrified at the occurrence, that he went on his engine in an almost insensible state for a distance of about two miles.

One of the coachmen who was killed had £180 in his pocket.

The inquest on three of the bodies lying at the workhouse was commenced on Tuesday. The only witnesses examined were those who could identify the bodies.

Clayton, the engine-driver, who had so narrow an escape himself, identified the body of the stoker; and the bodies of the two coach-drivers having been identified by their friends, the inquest was then adjourned to the Chester Infirmary, where the body of Roberts, the guard, is lying, having been conveyed thither, though it seems the house-surgeon, who saw the men carrying it on the Roodee, examined the head, and found it so frightfully fractured, that life was then extinct.

Clayton having identified the body as that of Roberts, the Coroner intimated to the Jury that he should not examine any further witnesses that day, and declared the inquest adjourned to Friday (yesterday) morning.

We have annexed a sketch of the scene of the catastrophe, taken from the great Bridge over the Dee, by Mr. A. W. Hunt of Liverpool, who was a passenger in the next train after that to which the accident occurred.

CHESS

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Sopranitta" and "Cow."—There appears to be some flaw in the Enigma 157, by "Putting;" and we shall be obliged to decline the insertion of any more from the same source, unless greater care is shown in their construction.

"J. C. K."—We can see but one way to solve 173, viz., that published in the last week's Paper. Your methods would appear to be both defeated if Black for his first move played Q R P one.

"Sphynx" is thanked, and his "trifles" shall be examined.

"S. B."—Always acceptable.

"D. C." If we remember rightly, the solution is—1. Kt to K 7th (ch), and 2. B to K B 7th. Black at his best plays K R P one, and you then move R to K R 8th, mating next move.

"J. A." Stoke Newington.—Too easy by far.

"F. W. D."—Chessmen may be obtained at any price, from five shillings to fifty guineas a set.

"R. W." We will refer to the Game mentioned, and let you know the result next week.

"T. W."—The subscription to the London Chess Club is only three guineas per annum. Write at once to the Honorary Secretary.

"J. A. K."—They shall be duly examined.

"Jacuna," Shrewsbury.—"T. V." Rochester. A Post-office Order for 4*s.* 4*d., addressed to the Publisher of the* "Chess-Player's Chronicle," will ensure your obtaining the Number, post free, every week.

"Philo-Chess."—Diagrams for Chess Problems may be got at Hastings', in Carey-street; but you should ask for the large ones. Those you send are much too small.

Solutions by "G. A. H." "P. B." "Y. Z." "Constantine," "Andrew," "B. B." "F. W." "G. P." "H. A. S.," and "T. W. V.," are correct.

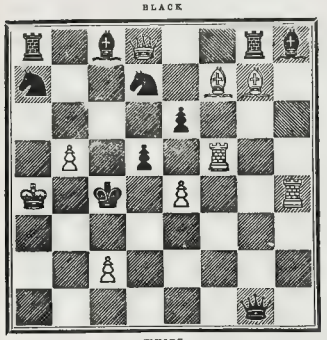
PROBLEM, No. 175.

By Mr. Mc. G—y.

White mates in six moves.

BLACK



WHITE.

GAME BETWEEN MR. STAUNTON AND A MEMBER OF THE LONDON CHESS CLUB.

(Mr. S. giving the odds of his Q R.—Remove Black's Q R from the board.)

BLACK (Mr. S.)	WHITE (Mr. W.)	BLACK (Mr. S.)	WHITE (Mr. W.)
1. K P two	Q B P two	12. B to Q 3rd	K Kt to B 3rd
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	13. Q to K 2nd	Q Kt to Q B 3rd
3. Q B P one	K P two	14. B to Q B 4th (ch)	K to Q 3rd
4. B to Q B 4th	K Kt to B 3rd	15. K B P two	K P one
5. K Kt to his 5th	Q P two	16. P takes Q P	Q B to K Kt 5th
6. P takes P	Kt takes P (a)	17. Q to K 3rd	Q to Q Kt 3rd
7. Kt takes K B P (b)	K takes Kt	18. Q Kt to B 3rd	Q R P one (c)
8. Q to K B 3rd (ch)	K to his 3rd	19. K R P one	Q B to Q 2nd (d)
9. Q P two	Q B P takes P	20. Q to K Kt 3rd (e)	K Kt to K 4th
10. Castles	K B to K 2nd	And Black announced Mate in four moves (f).
11. Q to K 4th	Q Kt to Q R 4th

(a) With such odds, White's best play was not to take this Pawn, but to move the Q Kt to Q R 4th, as advised by Cozio.

(b) This savours of rashness, to give up another piece so early; but a lively attack is ensured by thus reducing the opening to the well-known "Two Knight Game."

(c) This was indispensable before he could safely take the Q P.

(d) Had he moved this B to K 3rd, Black would have gained, at least, a piece.

(e) The position is very remarkable; by this strange move Black appears to surrender voluntarily his Q P and K Bishop, and yet, on examination, we find if White win them, he must give up directly their value in return, and be still subjected to an embarrassing attack.

(f) This termination forms an extremely pretty little problem, as the coup de grace is not at all obvious.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

(HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.)

No. 161.—By Mr. G. Medley.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at K 2d	K at K 5th	Kt at Q 7th
K at Q B 6th	K at K B 4th	Ps at K 3d and K Kt 2d
B at Q R 4th	P at K B 2d

White to play and mate in four moves.

No. 162.—By Herr Kling.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q 3d	K at Q Kt 7th	B at Q sq
R at Q B sq	P at Q R 6th	Kt at Q Kt 4th

White to play and mate in three moves.

No. 163.—By Mr. A. L—, of Holkham.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at R 6th	K at K B 4th	Kt at K Kt 4th
Rs at K Kt 5th and Q R 4th	R at K 4th	Ps at K R 3rd, K Kt 3rd and Q 3rd
	P at K 6th

White playing first mates in four moves.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR JUNE.

PARIS FASHIONS FOR JUNE.

The flush of fine weather has brought out a variety of novelties for the summer. The Chantilly meeting has been a brilliant one, and has been honoured by the presence of the Duchesses of Nemours, Aumale, and Montpensier; and, to the old chateau have the aristocracy of the capital betaken themselves in the blaze of high summer fashion, to participate in the delights of the Royal domain.

The new costumes have, for the most part, a profusion of trimming. Among the most remarkable are grey robes en toile du Chili, trimmed with passementerie in front, diminishing in width as it approaches the waist; corsage, flat, high, and trimmed like the jupe; the sleeves trimmed with three rows of lace.

Robe of mousseline, full trimmed; corsage, high; long sleeves; corsage reaching to the shoulders, whence they are puckered to the edge; or, sleeves demi-longues, highly trimmed with lace; capote of rose-coloured crape, with a bunch of feathers of the same colour placed on one side of the crown; or, a capote of white crape, trimmed inside with rose-coloured taffety ribbon, and with a long feather placed upon one side of the crown.

The fichus Louise, the Sultanes, and Montalets Pompadour, will be much worn this summer; as will, also, robes of barèges de soie. The ombrelles Victoria will, likewise, be in high favour.

The Paris toilette for balls and spectacles will present us with natural flowers in the coiffure; and garlands, in which the narcissus and geranium figure with diamond leaves. The lace of England and Alençon and the Brussels point will be indispensable.

Among the most recherché costumes may be mentioned that of Lady L——: a robe of satin bleu-du-ciel, trimmed with three volants of silver lace; lace berthe, and diadem of brilliants. A rose-coloured satin robe, with three volants of point d'Alençon, and berthe to correspond, is another superb costume.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

If we consider the extraordinary excitement that has taken place in London since the arrival of Mdlle. Jenny Lind, the crowds that are nightly unable to obtain admission, the anxiety of persons flocking from all parts of the British dominions, and even the continent, to witness her unrivalled performances, the number of times her Majesty and all the members of the Royal family, accompanied by several foreign Princes, have been to hear her, the unprecedented honour of Her Most Gracious Majesty, who, on two occasions, threw splendid bouquets to the charming songstress—if we wonder at all these circumstances, coupled with the number of times she is called out every night she performs, the house rising en masse to cheer and applaud her, accompanied by every species of the most genuine and heartfelt applause—then we say the triumph of Jenny Lind has been the greatest on record. Who that has heard her will ever forget her new and wonderfully executed fioriture and that messa voce shake, so close, so firm, so distinct, and so dying away, that you are at a loss to know when it is concluded; which might be compared to a person looking upon the sea, the boundary of which is unattainable in the distance.

One circumstance we must not omit—the number of artists who go every night to Her Majesty's Theatre when La Lind performs. We commend them: for every trait she gives is a chef-d'œuvre—every gesture she makes is a model that should be studied: in fact, if there exist the combination of histrionic and lyric talents, dans ce bas monde, it is the incomparable Jenny Lind.

On Thursday night, Donizetti's opera "La Figlia del Reggimento," was performed for the purpose of introducing Mdlle. Jenny Lind in a new rôle. She was completely successful, and achieved another triumph. Her Majesty, the Prince Consort, her Majesty Queen Adelaide, and the Grand Duke Constantine, honoured the theatre with their presence.

"La Figlia del Reggimento" is the first opera Donizetti wrote for the French stage, and was performed at the Opéra Comique, during the seasons of 1839 and 1840. It has been subsequently performed in almost every operatic theatre upon the Continent.

This was the first opportunity Jenny Lind had of displaying her comic powers, and the striking contrast she exhibited in the two acts of this charming opera, was indeed as remarkable as it was judicious and enchanting.

In conclusion, we shall merely add that the manner of novel and exquisite bonheurs with which she finished her grand aria in the second act, was a wonder in the vocal art that perfectly amazed a house crowded to suffocation.

MDLLE JENNY LIND, AS MARIA, IN LA FIGLIA DEL REGGIMENTO.

We subjoin the plot of the opera, which has been performed all over France, Belgium, Italy, and at last in Germany, where, thanks to the Swedish Nightingale, it has acquired the greatest vogue.

The scene of the action is in the Tyrol during the occupation of that country by the French. The heroine is Marie, a vivandière, a smiller girl, the daughter of the 21st Regiment of the Grand Army of Napoleon; she has become the colonel child of the Regiment, which may be said to be composed of that gallant corps, and of which the sergeant Sulpice is the father, captain. The latter was addressed to a Marchioness of Birkenfeld. The old sergeant kept the letter carefully, and the gallant regiment adopted the child, who, from a little girl, he grown up into a very sightly young woman, full of spirit and resolution, prime who marches and rides with the regiment.

In the Tyrol she meets with a young peasant, who saves her life when she is on the point of falling down a precipice, and then becomes in love with the vivandière—love which she repays from a similar motive, and considers herself engaged to the young peasant. Her three last they will hang him as a spy does not deter him. On the contrary, he ventures even to make bold to ask of the father the hand of his daughter. The regiment, true to its noble character, assembles and holds a council on this important subject, of which the result is Marie. But in the peasant see supervises a new obstacle, in the person of the Marchioness de Birkenfeld. On hearing her name, Sulpice (the sergeant) remembers the letter addressed to her by friend at the same name as Marie, he gives it to the Marchioness, and she recognises the writer girl as her niece, the offspring of the secret marriage of her sister with a Corsican officer. Her sister is dead, and the Marchioness, who is childless, takes care to prevent it from being known. In the last act she arrives at the castle of Birkenfeld; she has renounced the costume, and with it the manners of a soldier girl. She is obliged to learn the language and accomplishments of a young lady of fashion, she is taught to dance and to sing, but it is no longer the joyous songs and accompanied dance of the camp, on the contrary, she is now engaged by her aristocratic relations, she regrets her former freedom and habits, and even occasionally has recourse to the bottle, which she had learned to love in the camp.

In the meantime, at the Castle of Birkenfeld, she has renounced the costume, and with it the manners of a soldier girl. She is obliged to learn the language and accomplishments of a young lady of fashion, she is taught to dance and to sing, but it is no longer the joyous songs and accompanied dance of the camp, on the contrary, she is now engaged by her aristocratic relations, she regrets her former freedom and habits, and even occasionally has recourse to the bottle, which she had learned to love in the camp.

Her reception takes place between Marie and her lover, who, now promoted to military rank, asks of the attendants to call their lord in marriage which he obtained before the arrival of the Marchioness, and the Duchess of Berkenfeld, having promised the hand of her niece to the son of a Duchess her neighbour. Tonio then determines on carrying her off, to which Marie presents, indignant at her aunt's cruelty. To prevent this, by establishing a new claim on her heritage, the Marchioness presents at Madame herself as Marie's mother, but has withheld, to conceal the marriage, the first tableau, where she is so ably supported by Perrot, that often render her quite bewitching. She nowhere appears to greater advantage than in the ballet, which affords her the opportunity of her pantomime powers, and which is in itself one of the prettiest and most effective ever produced.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Bellini's "Puritani," on Saturday night, afforded the great basso profondo, Marini, the opportunity of displaying his vocal and histrionic powers and to best advantage, in the character of Giorgio; Tamburini renewing his original part of Riccardo. In the estimate that we have taken, on former occasions, of Marini's genius, there was complete confirmation, by his triumph on this occasion. It was quite an original conception of the puritan chief, combining exquisite pathos with astounding pulssance in the organ. Not only was he called forward after the great trumpet duo ending the second act, but the audience insisted upon the curtain being raised for the repetition of the last movements. Marini, with his immense volume of voice, has also musical quality, and great flexibility. It is scarcely requisite to add that Tamburini, Mario, Marini, Tamburini and Persiani, the cast of this popular opera was perfect, and that it went off with the utmost enthusiasm.

At the fourth representation of "Lucrezia Borgia," on Tuesday night, the house was brilliantly attended with Royalty, rank, and fashion. The chorus in the Prologue ("Passam la notte"), the trio between Grisi, Tamb rini, and Mario, in the first act, and the second act were encored, as was, of course, as usual, a double encore. We take this opportunity of correcting a passage in our last week's notice of this opera, which, by a misconception of the words, appeared to appear as if Grisi had made a fault in the drinking scene, instead of the contralto. "Lucrezia" passed off with rapturous demonstrations; Grisi and Alboni having showers of bouquets.

On Thursday night Mercadante's "Don Giovanni" was produced, with great splendour. It was originally brought out at the King's Theatre in 1837, by Mr Ayton. It was supposed that there was great room for improvement. Mr Wagner, in Paris, by a new version of Mozart's great opera, refusing not to withdraw it, as, despite of the outlay incurred in the mise en scène, he would prefer to lose it rather than it should be condemned, as he, Mr Wagner, felt convinced it would be. Paris is a fashionable city, and, as such, the opera was produced, and with great success. Perhaps it was over-produced, been a stock piece, which always brought great houses during the season, although not relished by the fashionable world. On the 23rd November, 1787, it was produced in Prague, first, at Prague, by Mozart, he having the music. It expressly for his friends in that town, after the success of his "Nozze di Figaro." Whether we prefer the music of Mozart or that of Mercadante, the mixture of passion in its concerted music, the profound expression of melancholy, the variety of the situations, the beauty of its accompaniment, or the grandeur of its lachrymose and pastoral scene and terror, in the finale of the second act, 'D n Giovanni' stands alone in dramatic eminence. Of all musical romances it is certainly the first." Mr Ayton, in his preface to the book of the opera, remarks, "It possesses every attribute of good musical composition; it is entitled to the high rank of fine poetry, and for once or a year to be found in it exquisite melodies and pro ound harmonies, but the playful, the tender, the pastoral, the mysterious, the sublime, and the terrible, are distinctly to be traced in its various parts." These citations of the opinions of two competent critics have been confirmed by every Continental writer of note who has written on the opera, and there is but one remarkable circumstance connected with its popularity in this country speaks volumes. This is, that "Don Giovanni" is never announced for representation but what amateurs from all part- of the country come up expressly to hear it.

The present cast is, perhaps, unprecedented in its excellence, Grisi being the Donna Anna, Persiani the Zerlina, and Corbari, Donna Elvira; Mario, Ottavio; Tamburini, Giovanni; Ronconi, Leporello; and Marini, Il Commendatore. In addition to this powerful phalanx of leading singers, Costa has taken especial pains with the score; restoring the triple orchestra in the finale of the first act, and the military band in the last scene.

The house was filled at the pit, and the opera was received with [illegible] Mario, Grisi, and Corbari, were equally honoured in the lovely trio, "Protegga il giusto Cielo;" Mario was rapturously called upon to give "Il mio tesoro" twice, and Grisi was encored in the [illegible] Mario, Grisi, and Madame Persiani in "Vedrai carino." The finale of the first act was superbly executed, and all the artists were called before the curtain.

To add to the effect of this glorious ensemble, Fanny Elsler and Dumilâtre dances in the Minuet in the Ball scene, besides calling forward the artists after every display of lyric excellence. The cast and mise en scène of "Don Giovanni," with its triple orchestra, and double chorus, must be reckoned like the "Lucrezia Borgia" as one of the most splendid and effective that has been produced for many years. The audience were enthusiastic in their applause throughout the evening, and would have encored the whole opera, but that would be impossible. The "Non piu andrai" Corbari also gave us back the noble "Ti trudi," which she sang finely. We hope that Mario will also restore the air in the same [illegible] Duke's song, "Il mio tesoro," which is so much in character with the part, and which was formerly a favourite with the tenor. In the ball scene the [illegible] movements going on at the time, were [illegible] dances in Mozart and Mercadante, and the music has been [illegible] Mozart's music, and the [illegible] Mercadante's. We [illegible] To the individual triumphs in "Don Giovanni" we must refer more specially in next week's number.

The lively weather, which has continued so agreeably after the commencement of the season, has in no manner affected the prosperity of the theatres; and the al fresco pieces of amusement—the Surrey Zoological and Cremorne Gardens, and the Eagle Tavern, to which who extend their pleasure excursions beyond the limits of the fourpenny boats—have been densely crowded. Next week, Vauxhall opens, and this will be the [illegible] theatres the warm weather will permit. The novelties produced last week, no very remarkable novelties were produced, as of old, on Whit Monday. We will, however, review the performances of the week at the various houses. And first, perhaps, in importance, we should make mention of the

PRINCESS.

Whatever else there may be to find fault with in Mr Maddox's management, he certainly has tried to give [illegible] to the [illegible] keeping some good name before the public in his hills: It is only to be regretted that he cannot collect a general company of higher excellence, to give effect to these engagements. Mrs. Butler's engagement, having proved but moderately profitable —if, indeed, it could be called so at all—was not renewed; but, on Monday, Mr. Macready came back to these boards, and was received with the warmest enthusiasm. [illegible] character of Hamlet [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] We need only characterise his [illegible] as one of [illegible] and [illegible] performances; but so frequently fallen to our lot to notice, and with which the greater portion of our play-going readers must be so well acquainted. Suffice it to say that Mr. Macready layed with all his wonted power, and every point was recognised with thunders of applause. Mrs. Warner has been engaged; and is a great addition to the company. Her Gertrude was, as may be conceived, a very clever and impressive performance; and we can award much praise to Miss Emma Stanley's conception of Ophelia. The house was very well filled.

HAYMARKET.

Mr. Webster gave no novelty to his patrons; Mr. Bell's comedy, however, of "Retired" may almost be considered one, being as yet only at the outset of what we expect will be a tolerable existence. He revived "The Invisible Prince," which was so supremely pr duced last Christmas; and he, we believe, next to the company. Her Gertrude was, as may be conceived, a very clever and impressive performance; and we can award much praise to Miss Emma Stanley's conception of Ophelia. The house was very well filled.

HAYMARKET.

Mr. Webster gave no novelty to his patrons; Mr. Bell's comedy, however, of "Retired" may almost be considered one, being as yet only at the outset of what we expect will be a tolerable existence. He revived "The Invisible Prince," which was so supremely produced last Christmas; and he, we believe, next to "Perinole" is the most amusing of all Mr Planché's burlesques. The Hungarian instrumental vocalists we should like to see anywhere but on the boards of the Haymarket Theatre; and the quantity of puff he is requiring would, in the gallery, of—" How about that pocket-comb and bit of paper?" was evidence of the absurd association called up by the Herr's imitation of the cornet-à-piston.

ADELPHI.

"The Flowers of the Forest," "Jenny Lind," and "The Double-Bedded Room" —all pieces known to the public, and all capable of still keeping the public in a roar—drew a good audience (for the weather) to this house on Monday, who cried with Mrs Fitzwilliam, and Mrs Stirling, and laughed with Mr Yates, Lyford and Mr Wright, and went through a many alternations of pathetic and comical feeling, that the laughter at the last piece completed their perfect exhaustion.

On Wednesday, on the occasion of Madame Celeste's benefit, a new petite comedy was performed, called "Flying Colours"—evidently an adaptation from the French—the scene being laid in London, about the time of Louis XV. It is in fact [illegible] interesting to call it very much attention to its progress in fact. It was [illegible] enough. Mr Webster, Madame Celeste, Miss Wemyss, and Mr Lyford, made the most of their parts, we conclude it has audiences did not feel a certain relief when it was over. It was, however, perfectly successful; indeed, there was not a dissentient voice to speak of in the very crowded house, and this speaks well in its favour; for, if anything would make a person discontented, it would be being in the centre of a crowded Adelphi audience during the present weather.

ST. JAMES'S.

The performances at the French Plays, on Monday, consisted of pieces that we have already noticed. The house was quite full, and the entertainments gave the greatest satisfaction to the distinguished and intellectual audience assembled, amongst whom was his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Constantine, and the Duchess of Cambridge.

LYCEUM.

This theatre was not crowded on Monday evening; but this may be attributed to the lack of any startling novelty in the bills. No more new pieces will, we suppose, now be produced. The theatre has acquired sufficient impetus to run on its wheels to the close of the season without fresh exertion, and the next fortnight will be occupied by benefits and [illegible] Lyceum Company" the first ever so designated—will be scattered here and there. We expect the public regard this unlucky break-up of the corps, and the unpleasant litigation with the proprietors with [illegible] Tuesday, Mr. Emery played the Monster, in "Frankenstein," with much ability, on the occasion of his benefit, and narrowly escaped a severe accident, from one of the [illegible] falling away from him, and coming down from a scene. Mr. Frank Mathews, a deservedly popular member of the troop, takes his benefit on Monday. The bill is a good one, and safe to bring a full house. He has put forward "Love in a Village," with a strong cast, and "The Invincibles." The clever Misses Williams also give their assistance.

SADLER'S WELLS.

The season of this theatre was announced to close on Wednesday, and, in consequence, no new production was set forward for the holiday-tide. Maturin's tragedy of "Bertram" was played, and with very great effect. Mr. Phelps, Mr. H. Marston, and Miss Laura Addison played the principal parts; and "Bertram" is, however, a tragedy never likely to become very popular with a general public: indeed, if we mistake not, it has never been performed with any great effect since the days of poor Kean. It is a literary panic and is was first brought out, and ran ten twenty two nights—a longer career than was anticipated for it, as both its construction and moral are far from unexceptionable. It was capitally acted the other night, and the house was highly delighted with the performance of the entire performance. "Charles the Second" was the afterpiece, and was [illegible] well done; a duet, "I Know a Bank," between Miss Wallack and Miss St. George, was loudly encored. The [illegible] Mr Hoskins. Las Inchester was a very lively and agreeable piece of acting.

ASTLEY'S.

We fear the fine afternoon, and out-of door attractions offered more especially [illegible] to the [illegible] Theatre, [illegible] against the attractions of the [illegible] Astley's, on Monday afternoon, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

PUBLICATIONS, &c.

On the First of June, 1847, Part I., price 1s., to be completed in Six Monthly Parts, with an Illustration by Kenny Meadows and Phiz,

THE DISGRACE TO THE FAMILY. A Story of Social Distinction. By W. SCANDIAND JERROLD.
London: Published for the Proprietors by Messrs DARTON and Co., Ho born-hill.
No Advertisements can be received for the First Part after May 31.

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS. History of the Succession of the Ancient Roman Emperors, with the Prices of their Coins, Scarce Portraits, their Dates and Mottoes, is just published by F. WILLIAM, Jeweller, in Ancient Coins, 46, Strand, London, price 1s. by post, 1s. 2d. Coins sent by post, Bought, Catalogued, &c.

HERR SCHLUHOFF'S latest PIANOFORTE MUSIC.—The Gallop Steeple-chase (this lively gem is always a-head), price 4s.; Two Symphonies and a Mazurka, each 2s.; Nocturne, 3s.; Sans Souci, 3s.; Valse, Op. 6, 2s.; the same as a Duet, 3s., 4 Mazurkas, each 2s. Every Pianist should possess the above elegant Drawing-room Pieces.—London: Published by Messrs. R. COCKS and Co., 6, New Burlington street, Music Pub shers to the Queen.—N.B. Farm and Harps, for Sale or Hire.

NEW SONG.—JENNY LIND'S DREAM.—This will be found to be one of the most beautiful melodies ever produced, and coupled, with the peculiar circumstances under which it is written, cannot fail of attracting notice: the music by that justly-rising composer, C. M. HAITE. Forwarded, postage free, on receipt of 24 postage stamps. London: B. WILLIAMS, 30 (Fountain-court), Cheapside

N. J. SPORLE'S NEW SONG, "COUNTRY LIFE," is Sung by the Author, also by Miss Thornton, &c. &c., with unanimous success. It will be found one of the most popular songs ever written. Sent post free for 18 postage stamps, or 3s. Published by J. WILLIAMS, 11, Cornhill, and 123, Regent-street.

LADIES' GAZETTE of FASHION for JUNE, price 1s. post-free, 1s 6d., contains a Superb Extra Plate of Children's Dresses, beautifully coloured, and SUMMER FASHIONS, in extraordinary unprecedented variety, including all the Paris Fashions, and every Novelty of the season, with Descriptions, Tales, Poetry, Enigmas, Recipes, Needlework, Strand, and all Booksellers.

THE FAMILY HERALD, Part 49, price Sixpence, comprising 80 large quarto pages, is the first of a NEW VOLUME. This is the most entertaining, the most useful, the most popular, and unquestionably the best of the Cheap Periodicals. It is a universal favourite, and is read in every household in Great Britain. Everybody reads it, and all Booksellers supply the FAMILY HERALD

THE MAN IN THE MOON.—No family can possibly be without it. Several railway companies have made it compulsory on all their passengers to be provided with at least one copy. Abroad, it is considered by the Continental and army officers as a passport, and in Britain, the res. Pearl's Secret, or how to make Home Happy. Be first and enjoy the pleasure. The NUMBER for JUNE is NOW ready, and contains the STAR and ANGUS B REACH. The Number for June is Now Ready, Price 6d. Also, Vol. 1, handsomely bound, cloth gilt, 8s. 6d. Office, 17, York-buildings, and sold by all Booksellers.

JENNY LIND.—THE PIANISTA, No. 81, for June, Price 2s., contains the Vocal Music in Meyerbeer's Grand Opera of "Robert le Diable," in which Jenny Lind made her first appearance), with the French, Italian, and English Words. No 80 contains Jenny Lind's Ballads, 3 of her Songs, and 3 of Parish's. Also, all with the German and English Words. The whole for 2s. No. 77, (4th edition) contains "Mary Blane," "Lucy Neal," "Old Dog Tray," and 3 other favourite Songs by Mary Anne Gaulfield, for 2s. Either No. post free, 36 stamps. Pianista Office, 67, Paternoster-row.

JENNY LIND'S SONGS at THREEPENCE EACH, in THE MUSICAL TREASURY with the Original Words and English Translations. Price 3d. each. A B. The seven leading Vocal Pieces of "Robert le Diable," now only being Part 79 and 80, for June 1, in each; or, in eight separate sheets, 3d. each. The five fine long Vocal Pieces of "La Sonnambula," with English Words, Part 34; 1s.; or, separately, in four 3d sheets. All correctly printed in Music Folio, with Pianoforte Accompaniments. All the Pops or Songs in "La Sonnambula," or June 1. Now ready (Part 76, for June), the vocal gems of Mozart's "Don Juan," in one 1s. Part, or four 3d sheets.
DAVID SON, Wate -court, leading from Strand into Adelaide-place.

TO BE HAD OF ALL THE LIBRARIES.
NEW NOVELS BY POPULAR AUTHORS.
PUBLISHED BY MR. COLBURN.
1 THE THREE FOSTERS. By Mrs. TROLLOPE.
2 THE DESTINY; OR, THE SKYE LEGEND. By Miss G. M. CRAIK.
3 THE ARISTOCRACY. By Mrs. GORE.
4 LILLY DAWSON. By Mrs. GORE.
HENRY COLBURN Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

PARIS.—Just Published, in Limp Cloth, enlarged, and corrected to the Present Time, Price 5s., a gratis five 81 extra, with Portrait and Maps, 5s. 6d.
THE HANDBOOK TO PARIS; or, Traveller's Guide to the French Capital: "The present edition of this popular and useful work contains every information for the Parisian Tourist."—Morning Post. "Admirably Arranged, Extremely Useful for Sea-Sickness, Advice to Visitors, the Best and Cheapest Mode of Travelling, and of combining Amusement and Instruction with Economy, in the Journey from London to Paris
W. STRANGE 21, Paternoster row, and all Booksellers.

The Sixth Edition, with considerable additions, post 8vo. cloth, 8s.,
VESTIGES of the NATURAL HISTORY of CREATION
And Other Evolutionary Works.
London: JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

Second Edition, post 8vo. cloth, 8s.,
EXPLANATIONS
By the Author of "Vestiges of the Natural History of Creation."
London: JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

Just Published, in 8vo. cloth, 12s.,
THE CONSTRUCTION and GOVERNMENT of LUNATIC ASYLUMS and HOSPITALS for the INSANE.
By JOHN CONOLLY, M.D., Physician to the Middlesex Lunatic Asylum at Hanwell
London: JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

Just Published, in 8vo. cloth, 8s.,
THE PATHOLOGY and TREATMENT of CERTAIN DISEASES of the Skin. Being the Second Edition, illustrated by upwards of Forty Cases. By THOMAS HUNT, M.D.
F. arth Edition, revised, post 8vo. 10s 6d.,
ON THE SANATIVE INFLUENCE OF CLIMATE
With an Account of the Best Places of Resort for Invalids in England, the South of Europe, &c. By JAMES CLARK, M.D., F.R.S., Physician to the Queen.
JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street; and JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

8vo., with 10s.,
ON DISEASES of the SKIN, illustrated with Coloured Plates and Engravings on Wood. By GEORGE DAUB, M.D., F.R.S., Professor of Medicine in King's College, London. London: JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

Just Published. Second Edition. Price 5s. 6d.
HEALTHY SKIN; or, the Management of the Skin as a means of Promoting and Preserving Health. By ERASMUS WILSON, F.R.S., Consulting Surgeon to the St. Pancras Infirmary, &c.
London: JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

Post 8vo., cloth, 2s.,
FRUITS and FARINACEA the PROPER FOOD of MAN; being an Attempt to prove from History, Anatomy, Physiology, and Chymistry, that the only true, natural, and best diet of man is derived from the Vegetable Kingdom. By JOHN SMITH. "Few persons will read from end to end, as we have done, without receiving impressions that must tend to frequent reflection. We recommend the volume before us as equally curious and useful."—Athenæum. London: JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

The Tenth Edition, 8vo., cloth, 5s.,
ON the DISEASES of CHILDREN; with Directions for the Management of Infants from the Birth. By the late Dr. UNDERWOOD Now edited with the additions, now matter, by JERMY EVANS, M.D., Physician to the Queen, and to the British Lying-in-Hospital. London: JOHN CHURCHILL; Longman and Co.; Simpkin and Co.; S. Highley, 7, Hill, and Hodges and Co., Dublin

With Plates, 8vo., cloth, 9s. 6d.,
THE PATHOLOGY and TREATMENT of SCROFULA. Being the Fifth Volume of the Library of Practical Medicine. By various Members of the Medical School —"In conclusion, we may strongly recommend a perusal of this work to such as are interested in the pathology and treatment of this cancerous disease, in the way we find a complete exposition of the present state of knowledge of the malady, together with many valuable results of the author's experience in the use of remedies which are but little known or used, and more interesting even than the chemical pathology of the disease."—Chemical Gazette. London: JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho

8vo., cloth 3s. 6d.,
ON INDIGESTION and certain BILIOUS DISORDERS often confounded with it. To which are add d, Short Notes on Diet.
By G. C. REID, M.D., Physician to Westminster General Dispensary.
"Dr Child has written a very sensible book. We have read it through with considerable interest, and not without instruction. He author thinks clearly, and expresses himself with perspicuity and energy. He has brought to bear on the topics of which he treats much personal knowledge of experience, reading, and reflection."—Monthly Journal of Medical Science.
London: JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho

Post 8vo., cloth, 7s.,
ON NEAR SIGHT, AGED SIGHT, and IMPAIRED VISION with Observations on the Use of Glasses. By W. WHITE COOPER F.R.C.S., Senior Surgeon to the North London Opthalmic Infirmary. "Truly practical, and consequent y truly valuable, we recommend this volume to all eye Those suffering from or threatened with the Sight upon which it relies is not misplaced, well-timed and valuable. Founded on the most thorough scientific know edge of his subject, Mr Cooper g es into details of forms to improve the vision, by glasses and other means, with a minuteness which can strengthen or preserve the most precious of our senses."—Literary Gazette
London: JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

For Clergymen, Travellers, and Families residing at a distance from Professional Assistance.
Third Edition, 12mo., cloth, 5s.,
A COMPENDIUM of DOMESTIC MEDICINE, and Companion to the Medicine Chest: Comprising Plain Directions for the Employment of Medicines, Properties and Doses—Brief Descriptions of the Symptoms and Treatment of Diseases—Important Hints for advice in most sudden and dangerous Accidents—Instructive Information—Counteracting the Effects of Poisons—A Selection of the most Efficacious Prescriptions, and various Recipes and Auxiliaries to Modern Practice.
By JOHN SAVORY, Member of the Society of Apothecaries
London: JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

The Art of Health, Happiness, and Long Life, in Two Volumes, 1s. each; by post, in stamp, 1s. 6d. each.
WHAT TO EAT, DRINK, and AVOID; (with Diet Tables for all Complaints.) 2. HOW TO BE HAPPY; on Regimen, Expediency, and Mental Government. By ROBT JAS CULVERWELL, M.D., M.R.C.S., L.S.A., &c. Sherwood, 23, Paternoster-row, the Author, 36, Argyll-place, Regent-street, and all Booksellers.

Just Ready, Price 2s.,
CASES of Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Chronic Cough, and various Diseases of the Lungs, successfully treated by Medicated Inhalations. By ALFRED BEAUMONT MADDOCK, M.D. "Impossible not to believe the Author's treatment to be particularly applicable in their cases."—Literary Gazette. SIMPKIN and MARSHALL, Paternoster-row; and HALLEWS, 219, Regent-street.

ILLUSTRATED EDITION.—COMPLETE.
THE NEW TESTAMENT,
WITH ONE HUNDRED AND
SIXTY ILLUSTRATIONS BY EMINENT ARTISTS
A Large Copper-plate View of the Holy Land, and Notes, Historical and Descriptive
The ILLUSTRATED NEW TESTAMENT contains some fine bold and imaginative sketches Much care has been shown in the selection of subjects; and even those which have been, as it were, familiarly used up, are treated with originality of conception."—Daily News.
"A publication characterized by the spirit of the well-known engravers of the 'Illustrated London News,' and deserved, we doubt not, to circulate far and wide The illustrations are characterized by a daring originality, and finished with a boldness and beauty that make them immediately attractive."—Weekly Chronicle
London: Published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED NEWS OF THE WORLD. Sold by all Book sellers
PRICE TWO SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE ONLY

JAENISCH AND WALKER ON CHESS OPENINGS
Just Published in one closely-printed volume, 8vo., price 15s.,
JAENISCH'S CHESS PRECEPTOR: a New Analysis of the Openings of the Game of CHESS. By C. F. JAENISCH, of St. Petersburgh. Translated, with Copious Notes, by GEORGE WALKER, Author of various works on Chess.
Henry Published, at 8vo., price 15s. 6d.,
CHESS SECRETS, Comprising 1000 Games by the First Players selected and arranged by PHILIDOR, DARSE FANCHON, and DE LA BOURDONNAIS. Edited by the late LONSDALE. London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMANS.

WANTED, A SITUATION by a respectable Female, aged 24 years, as COMPANION to an ELDERLY LADY. Superintendent of Children, or Lady's Maid. Is an expert dressmaker and understands millinery. Unexceptionable reference Address Miss Williams, care of Mr. Mills, 69, St. Martin's-lane, Charing-cross.

DANCING TAUGHT, in the most fashionable style, by MR. WILLIS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden-square Private Lessons in the Polka, Cellarius Waltz, and Valse à Deux Temps, at all hours, to Ladies and Gentlemen of any age, visiting or not at their residence. An Evening Class on Monday and Friday. Terms may be had, on application as above.

PIANOFORTES.—The cheapest house in London to purchase these first-rate instruments is at H. ECKLER'S, manufacturer, 29, King William-street, London Bridge. H. T., having completed his extensive alterations, begs his friends to view his splendid stock of PIANOS, which is not to be equalled by any maker and are about half the prices charged by them H. E.'s much admired Piccolos, each price £2. Old instruments taken in exchange. TOLKIEN, 88, King William street, London Bridge

THE HOUSE FOR LADIES IS 101, BOROUGH.—The most extensive assortment of Fashionable Dress Trimmings for the Season. The NEW HIGH SATIN, the GERMAN EMBROIDERY, and other Novel Gimps and Fringes in the HEPWORTH DARKE PANZIENE, sent on receipt of 9 postage stamps.—N. B. BOOKS in Berlin Wools, 101, Borough

LADIES' RIDING HABITS, New Style, Registered 6 and 7 of Victoria, chap. 65.—W FORD begs to inform those Ladies not visiting London, that he will be happy to receive Commissions for Riding Habits, which will be executed equalled by an engraving of his improved Registered Riding Habit made only by the Patentee. 26, Sackville-street, Piccadilly, SEVEN doors from Regent-street.

LESSONS in MILLINERY and DRESS-MAKING.—MRS. HOWELL, of 504, Regent street, two doors from Margaret-street, Sole Inventress of Teaching the Art of Dress-making in a Series of Lessons, undertakes to convey to persons of the most ungenteel capacity a correct knowledge of Cutting and Fitting, and Executing in the most fashionable Lessons, for One Guinea. The correctness of this mode can be fully substantiated by Persons in Private Apprenticed to Dress-makers Wanted. Millinery—Young Ladies Boarded.

FRENCH CLEANING.—SAMUEL OSMOND and Co., Dyers, 8, Ivy-lane, Newgate-street, inform the Ladies that they clean Silk Satin, Cachemire, and Mousseline de Laine Dresses, Shawls, Scarfs, Handkerchiefs, Bonnets, Parasols, Gloves, and Ribbons, every week, without ripping, and return them in the most elegant manner. Gentlemen's Wearing Apparel cleaned, Dyed, and Finished.

SEWELL and CO.'s Grand Exposition of FOREIGN and BRITISH MANUFACTURED GOODS.—The London Season having commenced for Ladies to make Summer purchases, SEWELL and CO. beg to submit to their notice the most desirable stock of SILKS, Bareges, Muslins, Shawls, and Mantles, in the Nobility and Gentry, and, to doing so, would say and that their extensive purchases in France, as well as at home manufacturers, enables them to offer the best and most fashionable goods from 15s to 20 per cent under any house this year.—Compton House, 44 to 47, Cornhill-street; and 46 and 47, Finch at eet, Soho square.

PARASOLS.—The Patentees of the SYLPHIDE PARASOL (40,000 of which have been already sold) beg to call the attention of Ladies to the Improvement, THE INVISIBLE, which never can be equalled as an elegant and fashionable article, which, by contracting within the Parasol in a second, keeps it as in the wind of the wearer. Every Lady will find them the very thing, as the price is fixed at 21s., by the fabrics of the ring, which has hitherto been indispensable, on account of the inconvenience of stealing Bands at, Compton House, 44 to 47, Cornhill.
44 and 47, Cornhill, 140, Regent-street; 16, Royal Exchange and 94, Fleet-street

THE attention of LADIES is particularly requested to the NORWICH CRAPE COMPANY'S Real Crape Collars, as being of the most beautiful and exclusive pattern ever produced. It is wound on reels, in lengths of 100, 200, and 300 yards. The Crape is not only the very best Cotton for Sewing, but is required for Knitting, Netting, and Crochet To be had at all the most respectable Mercers, Drapers, Lace-dealers, and Berlin Repositories; and wholesale of the Manufacturers, Messrs. Re. HARDER and Co., Norwich; and of their Agent in London, Mr. W. W. TRIPP, 35, Friday-street, Cheapside.

DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP OF MESSRS. GEORGE AND LAMBERT

GREAT BARGAINS in SILKS, BAREGE, and CACHEMERE DRESSES, &c.—In consequence of the dissolution of partnership of Messrs. GEORGE and LAMBERT, 194, Regent-street, it has become necessary to effect a CLOSE of the whole of the STOCK without reserve, and in order to effect an immediate clearance they have determined to submit the same to public competition. The present purchasers will realize for the present season, at least a reduction as must be valuable. Ladies house, ing them with a visit, will be convinced of the leading and respectability of the house will be a sufficient guarantee for the quality of all goods offered upon this occasion.—194, Regent-street, nearly opposite Vigo-street.

CHILDREN'S FROCKS, COATS, and PELISSES; Infants' Robes, Caps, Hats, and Bonnets, Long and Short Robes, Patch and Square Caps, Night Gowns, Robe Blankets Lawn ats, Cambric Muslin, with every other requisite on Baby Linen, at MESSENGER'S, 5, FINSBURY PAVEMENT. Every article of Ladies' and Dresses constant y on view from the useful and moderate to the rich. 6d to 10s 6d. Every article each embroidered with Velvet Stitch, which is the newest and most effective style required for Young Children. Ladies are respectfully requested to examine the Stock, previous to giving commissions to any other establishment. An Illustrated Pamphlet, affording every information, forwarded on application.

HALF-MOURNING DRESSES of FOREIGN MANUFACTURE, for SUMMER WEAR, both Light and Transparent.—DRESSES of the most elegant and fashionable Patterns, in Organdie, Jaconet, Muslin, Barege, Gauze, and Poult, at the LONDON GENERAL MOURNING WAREHOUSE, 247, and 251, Regent-street. The most eminent pattern artists of Jay dress and mantle warehouses in London have arranged for W. C. JAY, patterns which will be in readiness for imminent in variety, novelty, beauty, and delicacy of design, and unique textures of materials have been engaged in making the Goods, so that elaborate purchases of time are. These designs, made in their respective beauties of combination and pattern, and in their combination of excellence for Mourning Dresses, most tasteful, notwithstanding their entire superiority to anything hitherto manufactured, will be offered at the most moderate prices Patrons of this Establishment will confirm the assertion that no where can be found an assortment of Mourning Dresses so varied, so select, so extensive, and so extensive

ROOK SHOOTING.—AIR-CANES and AIR-GUNS, of great variety of construction, and brought to perfection, now in general request for Rook, Rabbit, Waterfowl Shooting, and numerous other sporting purposes, combining entire safety, discharge without noise or recoil, and are very portable. Air-canes, 30s., 40s., 50s., 60s., 70s., 80s., 90s., 100s., 150 yards, for killing deer, game, hares, rabbits, and harpoons, for killing fish, by means great improvements, will throw small shot—for strength, distance, and accuracy—far surpassing anything hitherto produced, and obtain universal approbation from the public, will ensure similar sales Prices of these high y useful and amusing weapons commencing 5l., Guns and apparatus included Trial in the premises. BLISSETT, Gun-maker (formerly Soldy's), 3.6, High Holborn near Chancery-lane

MEDICATED SOAP.—NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH, and MANY NAPKINS.—Dashi inquiry.—For proof of the extreme durability, power and efficacy of this soap, see all who have used the Medicated Soap. The Tooth-brush performs the highly-important office of searching thoroughly into the divisions, and cleansing in the most extraordinary manner; and there never was a Tooth-brush to be compared to it. Shaving Soap, without which none is genuine.—Price, 3s. 6d.; Quarto, 6s. 6d. Sold by all Perfumers and Chemists

ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, a Preparation of the Fragrant Oriental Herbs, for rendering the Teeth pearly whiteness, preserving the Gums, and strengthening the Gums. Its truly efficient and fragrant aromatic properties have obtained its exercise by the Queen, the Court and Royal Family of Great Britain, and the Aristocracy and Nobility throughout Europe. Price 2s. 9d. per box. CAUTION—To protect the Public from fraud, the Government Stamp, with the words "A. ROWLAND & SONS, 20, Hatton-garden," engraved thereon, is affixed on each box. Sold by them, and by all Chemists and Perfumers

EACH PACKET of HOPE'S PROTECTIVE LABEL for Passenger Luggage being different from all the rest, this invention affords a ready means of identifying the property of travellers, and every individual, on his arrival at the respective mark, and effects a saving of trouble in identification, and of time at every point of journey. Price 2d. per dozen. Of your Porters or Inns, or by post, on remitting in that amount in postage stamps, addressed. Stationers preferred London, who can and rest 1, J. ARNOLD, 2, King William street, City. A packet for three stamps, of G. C. HOPE, Queen street, Cheapside.

COOPER'S PATENT PRESERVED FRUITS, hermetically closed, which secures them for years They are in pears, plums, and ha f-plums, plain, in syrup, and in spice. They are adapted for home use, for exportation, and for the use of fruits generally preserved, and include cream, which can be delivered at any part of London for 10s.; extra size, 12s., packed up & plum pudding, 10s. 6d. Especially subscribed to the same process, with directions for the use of these fruits by steam which has been made approved of for general family use, in preference to all others. I desire to declare that this process for preservation should be generally known, as it is as quick as effective for the preservation of animal substances and vegetables as it is for fruit. On sale by JAMES COOPER, with the permission for preserving, No. 6, St. John's-street, Clerkenwell. London. Particulars and testimonials will be forwarded by post when requested.

PURE ST. JULIEN CLARET, 28s. per Dozen; Pints, 18s.; Imported direct by REDDEN and BUTLER, Wine Merchants, &c., 168, Regent-street, on the confidently recommended. Also, some superior Gordon's Golden Sherry, 36s. per Dozen On the receipt of a Post-office Order, or reference, will be immediately forwarded

CURRALL and SON, Importers of COGNAC BRANDY, of the highest quality obtain Oil. Fine old Pale, and Brown as 48s. per Dozen. Fine Old Pale Cognac, 42s. per Dozen Brandies at 24s. and 30s. per gallon Pale High-flavoured Sherry at 30s. per Dozen Bishopsgate-street Within

PARTIES of PLEASURE, Buy the Deal-partitioned CHEST, containing 6 BOTTLES. Make your selection of either Champagne, Port, Sherry, Hock, Claret, or Lisbon—of each one dozen for £3. Box 1s. sent 100 miles for 1s.—Stores under 17 and 18, Charles-street, Haymarket. SANDELL, Importer.

ABBOTT and SON, Late HODGSON and ABBOTT'S.—The ROYAL ALE—this original and highly-esteemed Beverage, so universally recommended by the Faculty, may be had, on application at the Brewery, Bow, Middlesex, or 98, Gracechurch street, either in Bottles, or Casks of 18 gallons.—N.B. The Trade Supplied

SCHWEPPE and Co.'s SODA and other MINERAL WATERS, so well known and appreciated for upwards of 50 years past, continue to be manufactured, as heretofore, upon the largest scale, at their several Establishments. Importers direct from the Springs of the GERMAN SELTERS WATER. Principal Establishment, 51, Berners-street, London. Branch Manufactories at Liverpool, Bristol, and Derby; and sold by Agents in every Town in every town in the United Kingdom.

ELEGANCE and ECONOMY in PAPER-HANGINGS.—French Satins, 2s. 6d. per piece, Flock, 6d. per yard; 20,000 pieces in Stock. Panel Decorations, Flowers or Oak, as cheap as other Papers. Terms, Cash. Established 20 years. W. CROSBY, Leveller Arcade N.B.—Three doors from the Strand entrance.

JONES' £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. They comprise every modern improvement, and are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reduction in the price has not been made at the sacrifice of the quality, either of the movement or any other house. On receipt of a Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 4s., one will be sent Free. Hand-some Gold Watches, Chronometers, Repeaters, Chronographs, &c.

MESSRS. WILKINSON and DOBSON, 32, PICCADILLY, respectfully announce, that the retirement of one of the firm will enable them to offer for a limited period, a newly-selected portion of their choice sterling and fashionable JEWELLERY, SILVER PLATE, ENGLISH and GENEVA WATCHES, and first-class SHEFFIELD PLATE. Orders by post carefully executed. Names and Addresses engraved on their Patterns and Friends, who are acquainted with the superior character of their Stock.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—A Pamphlet, explaining the various constructions, and the advantages of each, with a List of Prices, will be forwarded, free by post, if applied for by a person residing at a distance. T. COX SAVORY and Co., Goldsmiths, Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill, (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

ORNAMENTAL CLOCKS.—Recently received from Paris, an unusually large variety of FOURTEEN DAY CLOCKS, to strike the hours and half-hours, in Porcelain, Marble, and Ormolu. The designs are Pastoral and Historical, and unrivalled a few of great merit in the style of Louis XIV The price is four, five, and seven guineas each, and upwards.
A. B SAVORY and SONS, watchmakers, 9, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank

MUSICAL BOXES.—A large stock of the first quality, playing upwards of 600 airs, overtures, &c., including selections from the following Operas:—"La Sonnambula," "La Norma," "Puritani," "Lucia," "Barbiere," "Don Giovanni," "Il Matrimonio Segreto," "Semiramide," "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," "Gazza Ladra," "Il Turco in Italia," "Il Matrimonio," "Don Juan," "Il Flauto Magico," "Il Ratto di Proserpina," "Il Don Giovanni," "Il Barbiere di Siviglia," "Gazza Ladra," "Il Turco in Italia," "Il Matrimonio," "Don Juan," "Il Flauto Magico," "Il Ratto di Proserpina," "Il Don Giovanni," &c. A catalogue of the music is now published and may be had gratis, on application at T. COX SAVORY and Co., Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London

SILVER PLATE, New and Second-hand.—T. COX SAVORY and Co.'s Pamphlet of Prices, with outlines, may be had gratis or will be sent post free if applied for by a paid letter The contents are the prices, weights, and patterns of new and second-hand Silver Spoons and Forks; new and second-hand Tea and Coffee services, Waiters, Silver-mounted Cake Baskets, Cruet Frames, Candlesticks, Candelabra, &c. Forks, Warranted, Cocoa, Chantry, Ladies Gold Neck Chains, and Jewellery
T. COX SAVORY and Co., No. 47 Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch street), London

SILVER TEA SERVICES of New Patterns.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Working Silversmiths, 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank, respectfully inform their customers that they have recently finished a few new designs, in accordance with the present improved taste, and that they are sold at reduced prices from those customarily in the trade:

Unardigs Pattern.		Thala Pattern
Strong Silver Tea-pot	£10 10 0	Strong Silver Tea-pot	£13 0 0
Ditto Large Ditto	6 16 0	Ditto Large Ditto	8 11 0
Ditto Cream Jug	1 10 6	Ditto Cream Ewer	2 2 0
Ditto Coffee-pot	4 10 0	Ditto Coffee-pot	5 10 0
Complete	£25 10 6	Complete	£40 10 0

A variation, if approved of 50 Silver Tea and Coffee services will never be seen in the Show Rooms, and on application the Illustrated Price current, containing drawings, with the weights and prices of twenty-four patterns, will be forwarded to any part of Great Britain, Ireland, India, or the Colonies Drawback on all articles exported to 5l. per ounce

SELLING OFF.—WATCHES, JEWELLERY, and PLATE, at 56, Cheapside, adjoining Bow Church.—The wreck of the tasteful and superior Stock of Messrs. BENSON, late of 33, Old Bond-street, is still rapidly reduced from their palatial scale to the level of a genuine sale of superior goods, at no ordinary or misrepresented rate, but at one unquestionably reasonable Every article will be sold at the marked prices The Jewellery is all first-rate in quality; the Watches, English and Swiss, of superior make, and guaranteed for accuracy of performance; the Plate is Sheffield Plate. Goods, the best manufactured, will be sold considerably lower than advertised prices. Early visit is solicited, as the sale will not be prolonged, the premises about being closed for extensive alterations.

WINDOW BLINDS.—TYLOR and PACE, general window blind manufacturers, 8, Queen-street, three doors from Cheapside. Venetians, 6d. per square foot; Patent Enamelled Linen Blinds, 3s.; Holland ditto, 2s.; Silk ditto, 10s. 6d.; Chintz ditto, 7s.; Painted silk blinds, in mahogany frames, 18s.; gauze wire ditto, 18s.; ristrile blinds of striped silk, 14s.; Transparent ditto, 16s.; Imperial ditto, 18s., 24s., 30s., 42s., and upwards. Detailed lists of prices forwarded on application, post free

SHIRTS.—Youths' and Gentlemen's shirts made to fit superior in every manner in London, in the neatest style, at the lowest prices, for ready money. A single gentleman's kept ready made. At 41 NORTON FOLGATE, Bishopsgate-street and Co. Dublin Warehouse, 72, Strand, Aetcliff. An extensive variety of Cravats and Scarfs, with every description of Hosiery and Under Clothing.

SHIRTS.—WHITELOCK and SON, 166, Strand, solicit the attention of gentlemen to the Shirts they supply for 6s. 6d each They are made in the Cheapside and other new style, from Marlborough patent long cloth with fine linen fronts, and are superior to those usually sold at 8s. 6d.; also all fine linen, 10s. 6d., usual price 14s. 6d. Every one is sample-fitted, and sent carriage paid, on the remittance and is an part payment of postage. The measure required is the neck, chest, and wrist, tight. Their new Dress Cravats are already approved of by all who try them. Patterns sent to a friend from Price in Bonnet satin, 1s. 6d.; 4s. 6d. The New Patent Shirt Gloves, 3s. 6d. per dozen.

CHILDREN'S AND INVALIDS' CARRIAGES.—Invalids' and Wheel Chairs, from £3 to £25, with hoods, second-hand as well as new, may be seen among Cadby Hall's Chairs, View-in Regents Parade, Regent's-park, a few doors from Albany-street. Invalids are obliged to Twenty Guineas Immense and varied collection on SALE or HIRE, at ENGLAND'S Manufactory, 69, City-road, Finsbury-square. N.B. Instructions Gratis.

GRAND BAZAAR.—BENJAMIN EDGINGTON, who had the honour to supersede all the whole of the arrangements and decorations for the Grand Bazaar at the last year's park Barracks, for the Distressed Irish, when that Majesty was graciously pleased to attend, respectfully informs the Nobility and Gentry that temporary rooms to any extent of accommodation are furnished at a moment's notice Address—Benjamin Edgington, 3, Duke-street, Portland-road, Westbourne. A Warehouse, 395, Piccadilly. Rich Cloths, with or without pockets, and linen, complete STATIONS PROCURABLE.—THREE PLACES of £250, £280, and £ 90 per annum, and one for a FEMALE of £150 per annum, all with vacancies, Guarantee, &c. Requisites, good plain education, intimate acquaintance with family and an unpeachable conduct and character, and good address Husband and wife for two latter appointments. Address, by letter only, to Mr. HARRIS, 59, Lincoln's-inn-fields, stating conveyance by which personal attendance can be given, and forwarded free to all parts of the United Kingdom.

OXFORD-STREET TEA ESTABLISHMENT, corner of Portman-street.—Hotel-keepers, Shops, and Families, supplied with Three or more Pounds of Tea or Coffee in presently the same terms as any House or merchant will charge for the same and the trade have such draft allowed on all original packages. Strong and Congo, superior Congou, 3s. 8d.; the finest Souak of the season, 4s.; rich Pekoe Souchong, 4s. 8d.; superior Gunpowder, 5s. 6d. STRUDWICK and CO., Wholesale and Retail Dealers in Tea and Coffee, 231, Oxford-street, corner of Portman-street, Portman-square.

CAUTION.—A ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton-garden, London, beg to caution the Nobility and Gentry against being misled by the attempts of some Shopkeepers, who to compounds of their own manufacture give the titles of "MACASSAR OIL," "KALYDOR," "ODONTO," "ROWLAND'S" OIL, and "ROWLAND'S" POWDER, and thereby endeavour to induce the public to purchase their compounds for the genuine articles. The words "ROWLAND'S" preceding that of the Article, with their signature at the foot in RED INK, thus—"A. ROWLAND & SON." Sole by them, at 20, Hatton-garden, London; and by all Chemists and Perfumers.

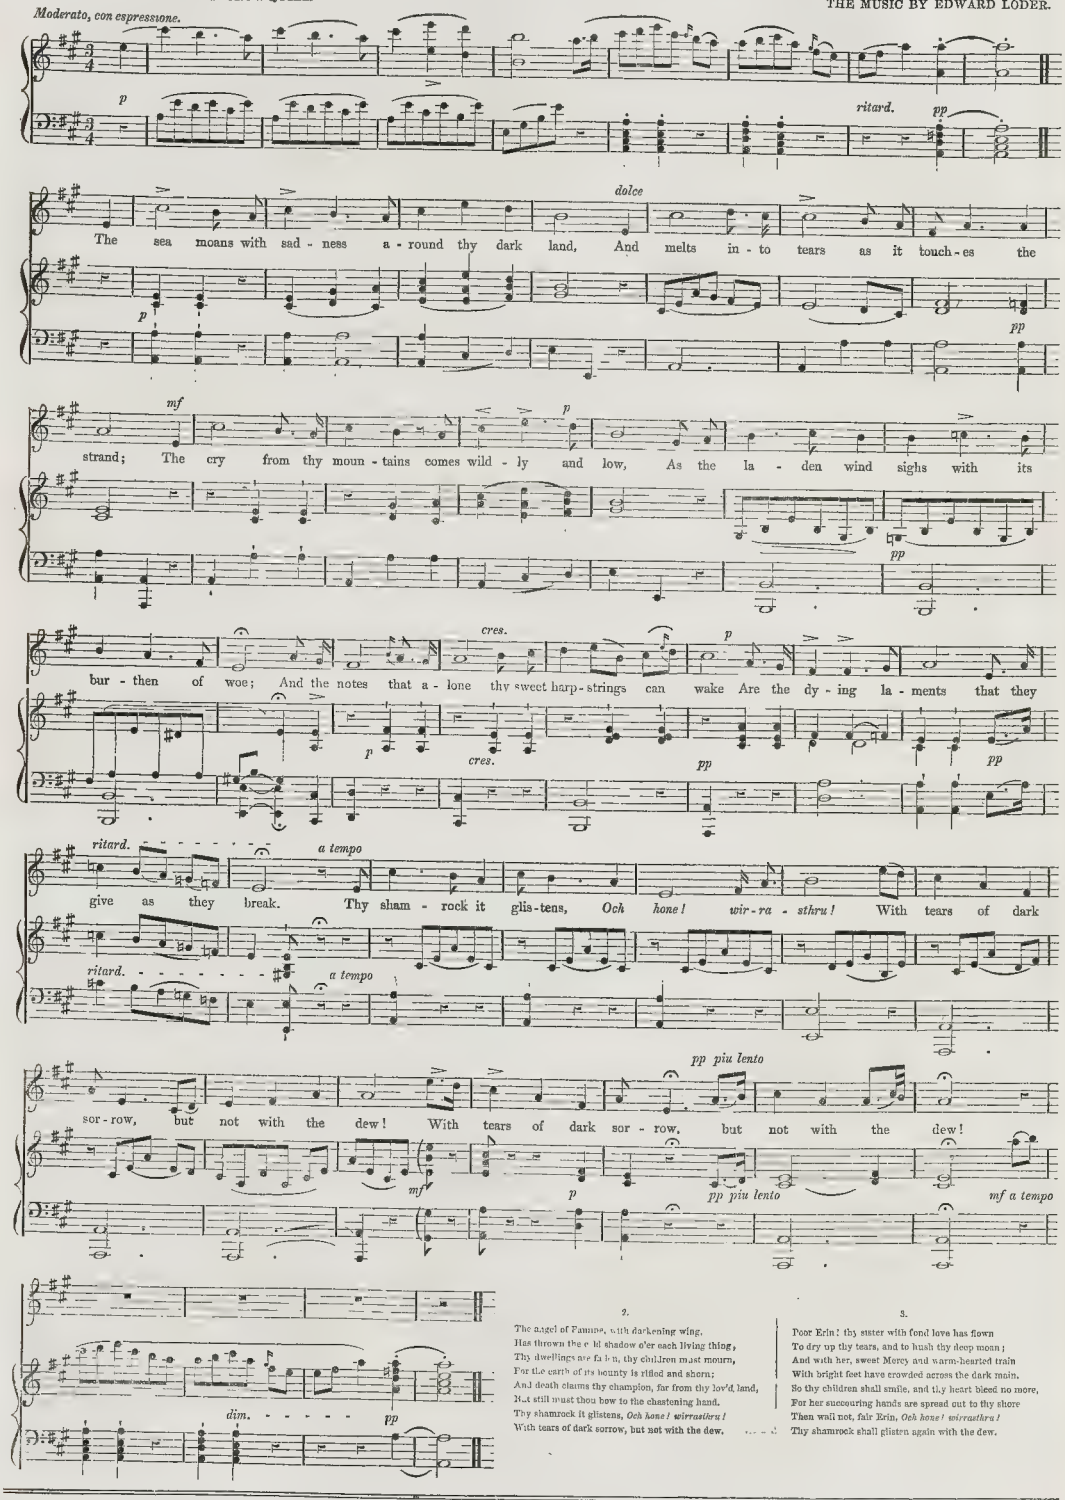
IMPORTANT TO FAMILIES. THE POPULAR RELISH.
PARR'S LIFE PILLS, a mild, safe, and most effectual cure for Bilious, Liver, and Stomach Complaints, Sick Headache, Dizziness, &c. Their composition is truly excellent; they are compounded entirely of vegetable products, free from all irritating and acid-acting matters which render their operation mild and agreeable; they do not require the least confinement or alteration of diet, and may be taken by the healthy as a preventive of disease. The beneficial effects of these pills are soon perceived by persons from previous diseases, &c.; they will be found highly valuable, imparting vigour and tone to the system, when exhausted by disease. Sold in boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and Family Packets at 11s. each, by all respectable medicine venders throughout the kingdom.

Sold in Boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and Family Packets at 11s. each, by all respectable medicine venders throughout the kingdom.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH, New-road, London.—Triumphant success of the Hygeian System of Medicine throughout the Country Read the reports of the New A. Hewlett, Astley Parsonage, near Manchester; Lady Sophia Grey, of Sandwray, near Rotherham, Cheshire, Richard Pollitt, Esq., of Hazelbeck, near Hexham, and Miss Way, of Long Ashton, near Bristol, of the cases of cure effected by Morison's Pills, the Vegetable Universal Medicine. The Reports may be had of all the Hygeian Agents throughout the country. N.B. No chemists or druggists are authorized to sell the above medicine.

THE TEARS ON THE SHAMROCK.

THE POETRY BY ALFRED CROWQUILL. THE MUSIC BY EDWARD LODER.



Moderato, con espressione.
p ritard.
pp
dolce
The sea moans with sad - ness a - round thy dark land, And melts in - to tears as it touch - es the strand; The cry from thy moun - tains comes wild - ly and low, As the la - den wind sighs with its mf
cres.
bur - then of woe; And the notes that a - lone thy sweet harp-strings can wake Are the dy - ing la - ments that they ritard.
a tempo
give as they break. Thy sham - rock it glis-tens, Och hone! wir-ra - sthru! With tears of dark pp piu lento
sor - row, but not with the dew! With tears of dark sor - row, but not with the dew!
mf a tempo dim.

2.

The angel of Famine, with darkening wing,
Has thrown the cold shadow o'er each living thing,
Thy dwellings are fallen, thy children must mourn,
For the earth of its bounty is rifled and shorn;
And death claims thy champion, far from thy lov'd land,
But still must thou bow to the chastening hand.
Thy shamrock it glistens, Och hone! wirrasthru!
With tears of dark sorrow, but not with the dew.

3.

Poor Erin! thy sister with fond love has flown
To dry up thy tears, and to hush thy deep moan;
And with her, sweet Mercy and warm-hearted train
With bright feet have crowded across the dark main.
So thy children shall smile, and thy heart bleed no more,
For her succouring hands are spread out to thy shore
Then wail not, fair Erin, Och hone! wirrasthru!
Thy shamrock shall glisten again with the dew.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by William Little, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—Saturday, May 29, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 266.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JUNE 5, 1847. [Sixpence.

COLONISATION.

It is becoming quite certain that, on most of the principal questions of the day, the Conservatives are prepared to do more than the Whigs; Mr. Roebuck's illustration of "Robert chalking higher than John," is daily becoming more applicable. It is not exactly as it should be; it induces two painful doubts: the first, as to the perfect sincerity of one party; the second, of the political courage and capacity of the other. Why is it that, as doctrinaires, as men of theory, the Whigs are in the right course so much sooner than their opponents, and yet so seldom work out their own views into practice? Is it fate, or a metaphysical defect? They seem to suffer more from official torpor and apathy than any other men; and, as soon as they get into a position to do more than oppose, they fail in making the most of the opportunity. Lord John Russell is too rigid a theorist to adapt himself to action; after the flush of his Reform popularity, out he came with "finality," and frittered away the greatest Parliamentary power a Minister ever possessed. His fixed duty crochet deprived him of the honour of repealing the Corn Laws; he always had something to say in favour of the abstract principle of Mr. Villiers's annual motions for repeal, made long before the League was a "great fact," or any fact at all; but something held him back from doing that which could alone settle the question. He did not make up his mind till the calamitous year 1846 was darkening the horizon; then came his Letter to the Electors of London; but the same necessity had spurred Peel to action, and the full, bold step was taken, from which the Whigs, as a party, had shrunk for years with distrust. All the measures connected with the Whig party have been mostly the work of the men of extreme opinions, that is to say, the bold and decided, who were not content to "dwell in theories for ever;" but the heads and leaders of the body rarely adopt them till too late. That was the error of the Free Trade Budget of 1841; to act too tardily, and do too little for effect, is the great fault of an otherwise great and consistent party, who have been the earliest enunciators of just principles, in carrying out which they have been generally excelled by those who learned from them. This is a pity; for it is impossible not to feel that there is something unjust in the growing credit the Conservatives are getting for Liberalism: we feel that new principles, like new lands, belong, of right, to the first discoverer. But then, if the finder leaves them barren and unused, what is to be done? The world does not care much for intellect that produces nothing;

THE ASCOT PRIZE PLATE.—1847.

THE EMPEROR'S VASE.

THE QUEEN'S VASE.

so it welcomes and applauds the explorer and follower, who seizes on the soil, cultivates it, and makes it bring forth fruit "for the service of man." The Whigs originate opinions, and the moment the public mind is ripe, the Tories coolly step in and apply them.

The list of questions on which this process has been carried on is increasing. On National Education, unmistakeable signs of the intention to "chalk beyond" have been given. Colonisation is another subject in which the Whigs have unwisely suffered themselves to be placed in a position in which they appear to be driven into action by their opponents. No obstacle of principle stands in the way here; and success will attend which ever takes the largest grasp, and acts the boldest with it. With Ireland in such a state, and with Mr. Charles Buller a member of the Government, it is inconceivable how, save by infatuation, the Ministry could have allowed the question to be forced on it, as it was on Monday night, when Lord Lincoln made a "Peel party" demonstration out of it. Yielding to an opposition motion, the Whigs consent to grant "an Enquiry" into the subject; but we feel convinced the plan of Colonisation which will hereafter be adopted will not come from a Whig Ministry. They already shrink from it; dread expence, and see the "Lion in the path;" and this when they are paying at the rate of eight millions a year in Ireland for soup and rations! Either at home or abroad work and food must be found for those who are thrown dependent on us. Where can it be done best? That is the problem to be solved. At home, extensive settlement on the waste land that is unfortunately abundant in Ireland involves purchase from its owners; in the colonies we have millions of acres without proprietors; can we transfer our social state along with our population, to the wilderness? Or shall we merely help our thousands to quit the country and settle down where and how they can? But the mere going forth of people without bond or social purpose is not Colonisation. In the true sense of the word, England has never Colonised; her people have emigrated, and settled, and grown up into communities. A Colony would be the reproduction of the parent state, in all its institutions and policy. But to North America we sent no Church, no Aristocracy, only fugitives, and when it would pay, a Military Governor. The early settlers of the greatest Continent peopled by the Saxon race, were Non-Conformists, who detested a Church Government, and they fled from persecution to seek life as they could, with hardship enough at first. And from the moment they began to exhibit any internal prosperity, England not only did not foster them, but the reverse; everything that law could do destroy the rising importance of the North American settlements was done. They had no share in making their own laws, no voice in our Parliament that did; they were not admitted within the pale of our social and political life; they were foreigners speaking the same language, mere "plantations," the inhabitants of which might be squeezed of taxes, oppressed and despised with impunity. That is almost the total of what England did for her American Colonies; and the consequence was, that they rebelled, and became a State; and the Tory Monarch, George the Third, who resisted every change till resistance was impossible, was obliged one day to receive at St. James's Palace, and give audience to "his Excellency the Minister of the United States of America."

Our colonial policy has not been so flagrantly absurd of late years, and it is the continued improvement of it, till the colonies are made to all intents and purposes integral portions of the United Kingdom, that we must trust for the more rapid development of Colonisation. To give every facility to those who go forth, and to provide that they shall lose no more in status in the community than if they went from Middlesex to Yorkshire, is nearly all a Government can do. To suppose it can turn man exporter, and pay wages to millions during the years that are needed to turn the forest to the field, is to expect an impossibility. A Government can give organisation and order: existence first and wealth afterwards the people must create for themselves, in the only way they can possibly be secured by energy and toil.

THE ASCOT PRIZE PLATE.—1847.

THE three Prize "Cups," the adjudication of which will be found in another part of our Journal, are superb productions; and, in design, exhibit a great advance upon the unmeaning "Cups" of old.

THE EMPEROR'S VASE has, this year, been manufactured by Messrs. Hunt and Roskill, under the direction of Mr. Bayly, the Royal Academician, from a design said to be suggested by the Earl of Granville, Master of the Buckhounds. It is a magnificent Vase, in the gorgeous style of Louis XIV.; of burnished silver, the handles and festoons, in relief, being frosted, and richly gilt. On two faces of the bowl of the cup are alti relievi, elaborately modelled, and rendered in silver. One represents a passage in the battle of Pultowa, in which Charles XII. of Sweden, was defeated by Peter the Great, and the establishment of the empire and power of Russia secured. The companion relievo represents Peter the Great rescuing shipwrecked soldiers from the Neva. Both subjects are well chosen, in compliment to the Imperial donor of the prize. The Vase is about three feet and a half in height, including the base, which is also of silver; and on it are represented in basso relievo, the Palace of Gatchino, and that of Peterhoff. The inscription is similar to that on the Prize of last year, stating by whom it is presented; and a blank space is left, to be inscribed with the name of the fortunate winner.

THE QUEEN'S VASE (the Gold Cup) has been manufactured by the Messrs. Garrard, of the Haymarket, from the design of Mr. Cotterill. It is of the Elizabethan or Tudor style, admirably modelled, and finished, in bright silver inlaid with gold. The form of the Vase and its ornament is cleverly characteristic of the period of the story grouped, very successfully, upon the lid. It is thus narrated by Grose, the antiquary:—"In the reign of Queen Elizabeth, John Selwyn, under-keeper of the park at Oatlands, in Surrey, was extremely famous for his strength, agility, and skill in horsemanship, specimens of which he exhibited before the Queen, at the grand stag hunt at that park, where, attending, as was the duty of his office, he, in the heat of the chase, suddenly leaped from his horse upon the back of the stag, both running at the time at their utmost speed, and not only kept his seat gracefully, in spite of every effort of the affrighted beast, but, drawing his sword, guided him towards the Queen, and coming near her presence, plunged it in his throat, so that the animal fell dead at her feet. This was thought sufficiently wonderful to be chronicled on his monument, which is still to be seen in the chancel of the church of Walton-upon-Thames, in the county of Surrey. He is there represented on an engraved brass plate, sitting on the back of a deer at full gallop, and, at the same time stabbing him in the neck with his sword."

THE ROYAL HUNT CUP, manufactured by Messrs. Hunt and Roskill, is a cleverly modelled group, of the Landseer school, and stated to have been suggested by the late Master of the Buckhounds, the Earl of Rosslyn. The group consists of four figures, viz:—A Highlander, who has slain, with the assistance of two deer dogs, a buck of the finest growth, which he is preparing to cut up. The animals are very spirited; and the entire composition is highly creditable to the artist; as is the high finish of the metal to the manufacturer.

THE ASCOT PLATE.

IRELAND.

THE POTATO DISEASE.

We regret to find that some of the Irish provincial papers assert the positive reappearance of the potato disease in Waterford, Galway, and other counties.

It is stated that up to Tuesday morning (last week) the crop was free from disease, at least nothing was then discernible which would lead to the opinion that it existed; but the simultaneous discovery of the fatal signs which preceded the destruction of last year's crop, on Wednesday and subsequent days, has excited appr hension.

On the other hand, the Limerick Examiner has the following:—"On Saturday a basset of new potatoes, of the kidney species, was offered for sale in the market at the price of two shillings per dozen—twopence a piece. It is right to say they were large and of excellent quality, without any appearance of disease."

The symptoms of disease are certainly not general, but there is no doubt of its existence—or rather the marks which indicated the disease last year—in the plants in the midland counties, in Armagh, and Carlow. There are no complaints of any consequence from the counties in the immediate vicinity of Dublin, viz.—the metropolitan county itself, Wicklow, Kildare, and Meath.

The Cork Reporter, on Saturday says:—"Something like a panic was created in this city yesterday, in consequence of a rumour that a potato fair in the vicinity exhibited unmistakeable tokens of last year's disease. Some symptoms of apparently an unfavourable character had manifested themselves in the field in question. As usual in such cases, fear exaggerated the reality. We are happy to have it in our power to allay all, or nearly all, apprehensions. A reporter from this office went personally to examine the field. He brought back samples of its produce, and returned to us bearing a couple of the stalks on which the 'alarming symptoms' appeared in the most palpable manner. The stalks were the very worst he could select. They were not spotted; they were not black; nor did the fibres show the least indications of decay. They were healthy and succulent, so were the upper leaves. A few of the larger and lower leaves were in a degree discoloured; the tips or rims of one or two were shrivelled. But we have often seen the same appearances produced by a high wind, and the consequent friction that it creates."

THE CAUSE OF REPEAL.—There was a meeting of the Committee on Monday, at which Mr. John O'Connell attended as Chairman. From what transpired, it seems pretty certain that Mr. John O'Connell will be the Repeal leader, in the room of his late father. His first step in that capacity has been to frame some resolutions, in which it is laid down that the only remedy for the evils of Ireland, is the Repeal of the Union, and, as a consequence, calling upon Irishmen of all creeds to support Repeal. These resolutions were adopted by the Association on Monday.

THE CORN SPECULATORS IN A FIX.—The decline of corn in Mark-lane, on Monday, was nearly to the extent of 20s. per quarter, from the highest point which had been attained. Among the significant facts which transpired on that day there was one which ought not to pass unnoticed. On the stands there was a sample of a large quantity of wheat which was imported into this country from America some weeks since. The speculator, fancying that he could procure better prices in France than in England, declined to accept of 110 shillings per quarter, and ordered the vessel off to Havre. She arrived there just in time to be too late. The market was found to be abundantly supplied, and prices were giving way. The "good ship," with the speculator's prayer for a prosperous voyage, was ordered to start forthwith for London. She arrived in the Thames a few days ago. The wheat with which she was laden was, on Monday, tendered for sale. No offer was made for it. There were no buyers in the market; and, if the owner should find it necessary to press a sale, he will not get more than seventy-five shillings for his wheat, being a reduction of thirty-five shillings on what he could easily have obtained four weeks ago, had his avarice been satisfied with that price.—A farmer in the neighbourhood of Exeter, who is a large grower, has sold all his wheat in the ground at ten shillings per bushel, to be delivered between harvest and Christmas.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

M. Bugeaud's recent attack upon the Kabyles (detailed in another column) has created a good deal of excitement in Paris. M. Guizot, when questioned in the Chamber, said it had his entire approbation.

The Committee to whom was intrusted the care of considering the policy that ought to be pursued towards Algeria, have made a report by no means favourable to Marshal Bugeaud. They state that they heard with surprise and regret that an expedition into the country of the Kabyles was in preparation, and entertained a strong opinion that such a proceeding was inexpedient, and should be abandoned. The Committee called before it the Minister of War, who read to them a despatch of Mar-hal Bugeaud declaring that the expedition contemplated was altogether pacific, but regretting that he was not at liberty to make the natives "smell powder." After this explanation, the Committee was still opposed to the expedition, passed a resolution to that effect, and communicated this to the Government. The Government expressed its astonishment that the Committee should think of adopting such a resolution on a point so vitally connected with the prerogatives of the Crown, and refused to receive it; and, finally, the expedition, or "pacific promenade," as the Ministerial journal calls it, took place in spite of the Chamber.

M. Remilly, in the Chamber of Deputies, recently proposed a heavy tax upon dogs; but the numbers being equal (199) for and against the tax, the President declared that the proposition was rejected.

The Chamber of Deputies has rejected, by 187 to 162, the proposition of M. Glais Bizoin for one uniform postage of four sous on single letters throughout France.

The Duke de Montebello, the newly-appointed Minister of Marine, has arrived in Paris. The National, in a sneering and satirical tone, calls the Minister, "our new Neptune."

The Secret Service Money Bill, which usually excites angry speeches and searching inquiries from the Opposition, has passed the Chamber of Peers with very little difficulty, by a majority of 112 to 52.

The French papers contain the most gratifying accounts of the growing crops—of the vineyards, the orchards, and "the mulberries, so important for the propagation of the silkworm." Nevertheless, the price of bread was increased by one centime per kilogramme (one-tenth of a halfpenny per lb.), on the 1st of June.

Mr. Charles Kinnaird Sheridan, the youngest grandson of the celebrated Richard Brinsley Sheridan, died at the British Embassy in Paris, on Monday morning, after a long illness. Mr. Sheridan was an attaché to the Embassy. He was in the thirty-first year of his age.

Notwithstanding the defence of Marshal Bugeaud, by M. Guizot, it appears that the Marshal has been recalled, but the pretext is that his presence was necessary in the Chamber of Deputies during the discussion of the supplies demanded for the service of that colony.

SPAIN.

Our latest advices from Spain allude to the indisposition of M. Salamanca and General Mazarredo. The indisposition, real or supposed, of these two members of the Cabinet, had given rise to several reports of another Ministerial change.

The Queen of Spain returned to Madrid from Aranjuez on the 24th ult. Her Majesty, who was considered improved in looks, was expected shortly to review all the regiments quartered at Madrid, and to leave for La Granja about the middle of June, should the weather continue so intensely hot. The "King" continued at the Prado, and, despite many a rumour of a contrary nature, still seemed likely to keep away from his amiable consort, and leave his father and sister to enjoy her august presence.

On the 25th, the Queen appeared on the Prado and the other public promenades, accompanied by the Infanta Don Francisco, and the Infanta Josefa, the father and the sister of the King Consort. The affability of her Majesty towards the public, who saluted her in her walks and rides, excited much enthusiasm. The Infanta Don Francisco and his family have fixed their residence with her Majesty in the palace, an arrangement which is mentioned as having given much satisfaction to the public. The King Consort was still at the Prado. His father, Don Francisco, had visited him there, for the purpose, it was said, of inducing him to remove from about his person certain individuals who were regarded as displeasing to the Queen, and hostile to the Government. The conference of the father and son was protracted to considerable length.

An extraordinary courier had arrived at Madrid with the protocol, signed the 21st May, at London, proclaiming the combined intervention of England, France, and Spain, in the affairs of Portugal. The President of the Council had had a long conference with the French Chargé d'Affaires and the Count de Thomar (Cabral).

Orders had been sent to General Concha, who commands the army on the frontier, to pass it at once.

The Carlist cause appears to meet with nothing but reverses. General Alzas a Carlist of great note and influence, was arrested at Bayonne, on the 27th ult. at the house of a merchant named Tulliers, by the Prefect in person, and a detachment of gendarmes.

General Alzas intended entering Spain by the Navarress frontier, where his presence would have been the signal for the commencement of a Carlist movement in Navarre and the Basque provinces. On the arrival of the police at his hiding-place, he was shut up in a clothes press, where, according to his own words, after being arrested, he would have been infallibly suffocated for want of air had he not been quickly discovered.

He was betrayed into the hands of the French Government by a Carlist agent, who was much trusted by him and other Carlists.

Almost at the same instant that General Alzas was arrested, the police at Bayonne succeeded in making a prisoner of Don Luis Paris, late Commissary-General in the army of Don Carlos.

PORTUGAL.

The news from Portugal is important. A convention was recently agreed to between England, France, Spain, and Portugal, in pursuance of which the conditions offered to the Junta of Oporto in the name of Her Most Faithful Majesty, were:—First, A full and general amnesty for all political offences committed since the beginning of the month of October last, and the immediate recall of all persons who, since that period, had been constrained to leave Portugal from political motives. Secondly—The immediate revocation of all decrees promulgated since the beginning of October last, which are in conflict with, or in opposition to the established laws and constitution of the kingdom. Thirdly—A convocation of the Cortes, as soon as the elections about to take place immediately shall be terminated. Fourthly The immediate nomination of a Ministry composed of personages who do not belong to the party of the Cabrals and are not members of the Junta of Oporto.

We have already stated that the Junta of Oporto refused these conditions. The consequence has been, that the three powers have agreed to afford aid to the Queen of Portugal, and, according to this determination, the plenipotentiaries of Spain, France, and Great Britain, engage that the naval forces of their respective Governments actually stationed on the coast of Portugal shall take part conjointly and immediately with the naval forces of Her Most Faithful Majesty in any operation deemed necessary or opportune by the commanders of these combined forces, in order to accomplish the object of this common act.

We now learn from Lisbon that the three war-steamers of the Junta having sailed from St Ube's, pursuing a northerly course, evidently with the intention of taking up troops at Oporto for St. Ube's or Cascaes Bay, near Lisbon. Captain Sir Thomas Maitland, in her Majesty's ship America, and Capta n M'Cleverty, in her Majesty's steamer Polyphemus, with the Spanish frigate Villa de Bilbao, had sailed from Lisbon to intercept them. During the late negotiations, desertions to a very great extent have been going on from the volunteer corps at Lisbon to St. Ube's. It is fully anticipated that the interference of the allies will give a Miguelite turn to the insurrection.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

Cape papers to the 6th of April have reached us. The latest accounts given by them of the operations against the Kaffirs are to the 28th of March.

His Excellency the new Governor-General had reached Port Peddie, as also several of the Burgher contingents, and amongst them the levy from Lower Albany. It was understood that the troops would make a forward movement from Fort Peddie towards King William's Town, whence a simultaneous movement would be made by the troops there, including the Dragoon Guards, towards the mouth of the Buffalo, where a military station was about to be formed of 300 men. Both divisions, it seems, after forming a junction on the Buffalo, are then to move back to Fort Peddie, sweeping the country of cattle and crops in their progress—the former to be brought to Peddie, or destroyed, should there be any difficulty in bringing them forward. The grand aim in this movement appears to be to confine the Kaffirs to the destination to subsist on; that it is not their property we covet, but that our Government is actuated by a fixed resolve to put down and punish robbery and violence, as also to place matters upon such a footing as shall prevent the recurrence of future wars.

MEXICO AND THE UNITED STATES.

By the Caledonia, which reached Liverpool last Saturday night, we have received New York papers to the 15th ult. They contain an account of an important and sanguinary battle between the troops of the United States, under General Scott, and those of the Mexicans, under Santa Anna, in which the latter were defeated with great loss, both in killed, wounded, and prisoners. This event took place in the heights of Cerro Gordo, on the road from Vera Cruz to the city of Mexico, on the 17th of April. The troops engaged on the side of the Mexicans was from 12,000 to 15,000; that of the Americans, 12,000 men. Cerro Gordo is a place of great strength, and had been carefully fortified. nevertheless, it was carried by storm by the Americans, with a loss of 43 men and 21 officers killed, and 224 wounded. The Mexicans surrendered 3000 men prisoners, with five Generals and a large number of inferior officers. Santa Anna himself escaped, but so narrowly that, amongst the trophies of the victory, were his dinner and his wooden leg. He is stated to have fled to the South of the Orizaba Mountain, where he was posted with a body of men, variously stated from 1000 to 5000 in number. The route taken by Santa Anna has left the way to the capital open to the Americans from it, and it was expected that General Scott would advance upon it immediately. General Taylor was preparing to advance upon San Luis di Potosi, and the general opinion seemed to be that this blow had brought the war almost to an end; never.eless, the Senate at Mexico had erected a Dictatorship, and declared it treason to treat with America. It was rumoured, on the other hand, that Mr. Bankhead, the British Minister, had proffered his mediation to Mexico.

General Scott, in his official despatches describing the battle at Cerro Gordo, says—"We are quite embarrassed with the result of the victory—prisoners of war, heavy ordnance, field batteries, small arms, and accoutrements. About 3000 men laid down their arms, with the usual proportion of field and company officers, besides five generals, several of them of great distinction. Pinson, Jarero, La Vega, Noriega, and Obando. A sixth general, Vasquez, was killed in defending the battery (tower) in the rear of the whole Mexican army, the nature of which gave us those glorious results. Our loss, though comparatively small in numbers, has been serious. Brigadier General Shields, a commander of activity, zeal, and talent, is, I fear, if not dead, mortally wounded. He is some five miles from me at the moment. The field of operations covered many miles broken by mountains and deep chasms, and I have quitted Puebla myself, at the head of my division or brigade. Twigg's division, followed by Shields' (now Colonel Baker's) brigade, are now at or near Xalapa, and Worth's division is on route thither, or pursuing, with good results, I learn, that part of the Mexican army—perhaps 6000 or 7000 men—who fled before our right had carried the tower, and gained the Xalapa road. Pillow's brigade, alone, is near me at this depôt of wounded, sick, and prisoners; and I have only to give from him the names of First Lieutenant C. F. Smith, and Second Lieutenant G. G. Gois, both of the 2nd Regiment of Infantry, among the killed, and, in the brigade, 106, of all ranks, killed or wounded. Among the latter, the gallant Brigadier General himself has a smart wound in the arm, but not disabled; and Major R. Farquesen, (2nd Tennessee), Captain H. F. Murray, Second Lieutenant G. T. Sutherland, First Lieutenant W. P. Hale (Alabama), all of the same regiment, severely, and First Lieutenant W. Yearwood, mortally wounded. I estimate our total loss, in killed and wounded, may be about 250, and that of the enemy 350. In the pursuit to Amozoc, nine miles hence, I learn we have added much to the enemy's loss in prisoners, killed, and wounded. In fact, I suppose his retreating army to be nearly disorganised, and hence my haste to follow in an hour or two to profit by events."

The papers also notice the capture of the town and forts of Tuspan, but without any particulars.

The commercial news from the United States is satisfactory. Money in New York was abundant, and Stocks were improving in value. The accounts from Liverpool taken out by the Caledonia, on being first published, had the effect to send up the prices of both corn and cotton; but the advance was not sustained on either. The condition of the foreign exchanges had undergone a further improvement, and a large amount of business was done for the steamer at the advanced rates. The quotations for sterling bills on London were from 7 to 7½ per cent. premium. The prices of grain and flour kept up higher than was generally expected.

THE OVERLAND INDIA MAIL.

The Bombay Mail has arrived, with accounts from that Presidency to the 1st May, from Calcutta, April 22, and Madras of the same date. As to political matters, very little is given in the papers worth noticing. According to the summary of the Bombay Times, Lord Hardinge intended to leave India in October next.

The Punjaub is perfectly quiet. There has been an earthquake at Lahore, but it does not seem to have done any mischief. Ghulab Sing has established a monopoly of opium, tobacco, and spirits, in Cashmere, and intimated that property of which the title is defective, will be resumed by Government.

There has been some confusion in Oude, the Prime Minister of which country, who, as well as his master, is far from being popular, was seized by half-a-dozen Affghans, and kept prisoner under their daggers until liberated by the British Resident, who, as well as the Wuzareen, promised to assist him, and who have paid them their arrears as soldiers. They were conveyed for protection to the British Residency, but have since been given up to the Wuzzeer.

The burning of widows and destruction of female children has been put a stop to throughout the Rajpoot states by the exertions of the British Residents.

Sir Charles Napier continues on the sea coast in the enjoyment of excellent health. Colonel Outram has been appointed Resident at Baroda, in room of Sir R. K. Arbuthnot, resigned. The salary is £4000 a year: the appointment is the highest in the gift of Government

The most remarkable occurrence is a violent hurricane, which ravaged the coast of India from Ceylon to Karrachee. Its beginning is described as moderate on the 7th of April, at Ceylon; it gradually increased in violence along the Malabar coast until the 22nd of April, when it was comparatively calm to the southward while raging at the mouth of the Indus.

The bark Mermaid, 389 tons, Rodgers, which left Bombay for China on the 11th of April with a cargo of cotton and opium, met the gale to the southward, but having suffered very much, has not since been seen near Vingoria. A part of the cargo was saved, but the vessel will become a wreck.

The Buckinghamshire, large teak-built ship, which left London in January, fell in with the gale, was dismasted, and lost her masts cut by the board, and was drifted into the bay at Vingoria, where she anchored.

The Bombay Steam Navigation Company's vessel, Victoria, suffered very great damage.

THE QUEEN DOWAGER.—We understand it is the intention of her Majesty the Queen Dowager to visit Worthing during the month of June next.

THE ASCOT RACE BALL, AT WINDSOR.—The Race Ball took place at the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening, under the stewardship of the Earl of Granville (the Lord Lieutenant of the county), Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, and the Hon. Colonel Anson, Lord Hoxeby (Scots Fusilier Guards,) Colonel Hall (1st Life Guards) Colonel Reid, M.P., Major Mountjoy Martyn, Hamilton Parsee, Esq. and J. Harvey, Esq. The company was numerous and fashionable, and very select. The ball and refreshments were under the superintendence of Mr. Layton; and Julien's band was engaged for the occasion

GALLANTRY AND GOOD HUMOUR.—The Duke of Wellington purposes to give a grand entertainment on the 14th inst., at Apsley House, in celebration of the baptism of the infant daughter of Lord and Lady Charles Wellesley. The Queen has graciously signified her intention to be present, and to stand sponsor in person to the infant grand-daughter of the noble and gallant Duke.

THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM. The Globe says:—"Painful rumours are afloat as to matters at Stowe House, the residence of the Duke of Buckingham. The result of the circumstance is said to be a determination on the part of his Grace and the Duchess to quit England for a few years. It is said Stowe House will be shut up, and the gamekeepers, &c., dismissed. We understand the Marquis of Chandos will forthwith form an establishment, and take up his residence at Wotton House. The Duke is suffering slightly from water on the chest, and is staying at his town residence, in Pall-mall. Stowe House will, for the present, be shown to visitors on Tuesdays and Fridays, as usual. A reduction of servants on the establishment has taken place, and among other workpeople, nearly a dozen persons have been recently discharged.

DEATH OF SIR WILLIAM FITZGERALD, BART.—This gentleman died on the 20th ult., at his residence in Dublin. He was brother to Lieutenant-General Sir John Fox Burgoyne, Bart., and Lieutenant-Colonel Edmund Lacy Pennefather, and first cousin to the Right Hon. Edmund Pennefather, late Chief Baron of the Irish Exchequer. He was born in 1763, and was twice married; first, to Elizabeth, daughter of G. H. Parry, Esq., a physician at Bath; and secondly, in 1819, to Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Sir Robt. Chester, of Bush Hall Hertfordshire. In politics, Sir Eardley Wilmot was of the moderate Tory party, and was returned by the Liberal interest for the county of Warwick. Early in 1843 Sir Eardley Wilmot received the appointment of lieutenant-Governor of Van Diemen's Land, and was superseded in his appointment by Charles Joseph Latrobe, Esq., who arrived on the 13th of October, 1846, as administrator of the government. The cause of Sir Eardley's death is stated to have been complete exhaustion of the frame—a decay of nature. The melancholy event, unbroken all private and party animosity, has called forth the usual demonstrations of regret. We believe it was his expressed wish, previously to his decease, that his remains should be conveyed to England, to be placed in the family "resting-place."—Robert Town Papers.

SUDDEN DEATH OF DR. CHALMERS. A very great sensation was created on Monday at Edinburgh, by the intelligence of the sudden death of Dr. Chalmers. That venerable and distinguished Divine had been so recently in his usual health that the report of his having so suddenly expired came like a shock which seemed to electrify the public feeling. The particulars at this event are the following:—The Reverend Doctor had been called to London to give evidence before the Sites Committee of the House of Commons, and had returned on Friday to his own residence at Morningside, near Edinburgh, apparently in his ordinary health. On Sunday, though complaining a little, he attended the Free Church, and Morningside in the afternoon, in company with Dr. Cunningham, and walked with his friend part of the way home. He called upon a lady afterwards, and dined with the family as usual. In the evening he walked for a short time in his garden with another minister from the country, and conversed with his accustomed animation and cheerfulness. Before going to bed, he wrote a letter to his sister in England, intimating his safe arrival in Edinburgh, and remarking that such was now the celerity of travel ing, that though he scarcely expected to have the pleasure of seeing her, he might have the pleasure of seeing her again. Business however had prevented him from taking any share in the proceedings of the Free Assembly; and, indeed, he had, of late, almost retired from his public labours with the exception of preaching. But he had intended to have presented the Report of the College Committee to the Assembly, which had been drawn up by Professors Cunningham and M'Dougall. Being desirous to see the latter gentleman, with a view of making some slight alteration in the report, Mr. M'Dougall called upon him for that purpose, about eight o'clock on Monday morning, but was informed that Dr. Chalmers was in bed, and had not rung his bell. Being beyond his usual time, the servant then proceeded to see if anything was wrong, and on entering the room, she perceived the Doctor in a reclining position in bed, dead, and the body quite cold, indicating that life had been some time extinct. The immediate cause of his demise is said to have been apoplexy, or the bursting of a blood-vessel in the head.

TRAVELLING AT STEAMBOAT ON THE THAMES.—On Sunday last, in one half hour, no fewer than seven to eight o'clock, fourteen steamboats passed the Nine Elms pier with an average load of upwards of 400 each, making a total of upwards of 5600 souls.

BREAD RIOTS AT WELLS. A riot took place at Wells, on Tuesday evening, in consequence of the high price of bread, viz., 11d. the 4lb. loaf, although so large a reduction has taken place in wheat. Messrs John and Stephen Fry had all their windows fronting the street broken. On Wednesday morning a set of "movies" caused considerable consternation by parading the city with large clubs, but they dispersed without doing further mischief. Great praise is due to the inhabitants, who voluntarily went to the assistance of the magistrates as special constables. A commercial gentleman, who had only arrived a short time at the Somerset Hotel (which is nearly opposite the baker's shop), made use of some language for which he is bound over to appear at the assize.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS MONDAY.

The business of to-day was of a routine character.

The motion of Lord LYNDHURST for a committee on the Birmingham and Oxford Junction Railway petition was agreed to by 29 to 22.

The Factories Bill went through committee.

The Naval Service of Boys Bill, the County Buildings Bill, and the Army Service Bill, were read a third time and passed; and the House then adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

PORTUGAL.—In answer to some questions from Mr. BERNAL OSBORNE, Lord PALMERSTON said, that the four Powers had agreed to a protocol, with a view to bring about a pacific termination of the disputes in that country. (See Foreign Intelligence.) As soon as possible, all the papers on the subject should be laid upon the table.—Lord J. MANNERS said, there were rumours in town of a collision having taken place between the British naval forces and the Portuguese troops at Oporto. He wished to know if her Majesty's Government had obtained any information to that effect?—Viscount PALMERSTON: They had not received any information of that sort.

THE REMAINING BUSINESS OF THE SESSION.—Lord J. RUSSELL described to the House the plan which he intended to pursue with respect to the Government bills that remained on the table. From the noble Lord's statement, it appeared to be the determination of the Government not to proceed this session with the Registration of Births, &c., (Scotland) Bill, and to postpone till next session the Ecclesiastical Commissioners Bill, on account of the objections made to it by certain high authorities in the Church. He proposed to take the Railways (No. 2) Bill, which stood that evening for a second reading, on Monday next. On Thursday, in next week, he intended to proceed with the English Poor Law Bill; and, on Monday, the 14th, he proposed to go into committee on the Health of Towns Bill, which was a measure of very essential importance, and in which very considerable alterations had been already made.

THE POOR RELIEF (IRELAND) BILL

Lord J. RUSSELL then, in moving the order of the day for the consideration of the Lords' Amendments to the Poor Relief (Ireland) Bill and the Landed Estates (Ireland) Bill, requested the Speaker to state his views with regard to those amendments, as they affected the privileges of the House.

The SPEAKER observed that he had no hesitation in saying that the amendments in question infringed the privileges of the House. It was for the House, however, to decide how far they would, on the present occasion, assert their privileges, or consent to waive them. As regarded the amendments to the former bill, there was a precedent in which the House had agreed to waive their privileges, when infringed in analogous cases; but, as to those introduced into the latter, no such precedents existed.

Lord J. RUSSELL, having expressed his concurrence with the Speaker's decision, said he was not disposed to press the privileges of the House in the case of the Poor Relief (Ireland) Bill, and to all the amendments except one he asked the House to consent. The amendment to which he objected was that whereby the agent of the magistrate, ex-officer, or guardian, is made a guardian in the place of the non-resident magistrate. The noble Lord moved that the other amendments be taken into.

Mr. D. NORREYS objected to the amendment which omitted the 11th clause, limiting the amount of separate electoral rating.

After a discussion, the House divided:—

For agreeing to the Lords' amendment of the 11th clause	..	80
Against it	..	16
Majority	..	64

THE LANDED PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT (IRELAND) BILL.—A long discussion arose upon the various amendments to the bill, which were agreed to, with the exception of such as infringed the privileges of the House. A Committee of Conference was then nominated and appointed to confer with the Lords upon the rejected amendments.

RELIEF OF THE IRISH POOR.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, in moving for a further advance from the Consolidated Fund for the relief of the destitute poor in Ireland, by way of loan, on the security of the rates, brief stated the amount which had been expended since the public works in Ireland since August last, and the progress which had been made in substituting the new system of relief for that which it was designed to supersede. The sum proposed for the Board of Works had been reduced to about one-fifth of what it was in March. The system which had been pursued had been to encourage as much as possible the voluntary exertions of parties in behalf of the poor—a system which had, to a certain extent, succeeded. The application which it was now his duty to make was for a further advance of £600,000, in addition to that already made, to the Relief Commissioners, for the temporary relief of the destitute poor in Ireland, to be issued in instalments, the Government to have proof that the rate, on the security of which each instalment was advanced, was struck, and in the course of being absolutely levied.

The proposition gave rise to a general conversation upon the state of Ireland. In the course of it, Lord J. RUSSELL described the difficulties which had to be encountered, not only from the magnitude of the potato failure, but also from the disjointed state of society in Ireland, which had, to a certain extent, caused the necessity attended the measures of relief taken by the Government, the measures themselves had not failed, and had afforded a very great mitigation of the distress. The noble Lord assured the House that no advances would not be made except upon the security of rates to be immediately levied.

The vote was ultimately agreed to.

The House sat till nearly two o'clock in the morning for the disposal of the remaining business.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

The proceedings in the House of Lords were again brief and unimportant.

The Naval Prisons Bill and the Drainage of Lands Bill passed through Committee.

There was then a conference with the Commons upon the subject of the amendments made by the House in the Poor Relief (Ireland) and the Landed Property (Ireland) Bill

The Factories Bill was read a third time and passed, and the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. TUESDAY

THIRD READINGS OF RAILWAY BILLS. The following bills were read a third time:—Dublin and Belfast Junction and Navan Branch Railway, Dublin and Drogheda Railway, Dundalk and Enniskillen Railway, Eastern Counties Railway Extension (Cambridge to Bedford, &c.), Eastern Counties Railway (Maldon, Witham, and Braintree Railway Purchase), East Lincolnshire Railway (Deviation at Boston, and Branch to Great Grimsby and Sheffield Junction Railway Extension), East Lincolnshire Railway (Land and Navigation Purchase), Glasgow and Shotts Road, Glasgow, Barrhead, and Neilston Direct Railway, Great Southern and Western Railway Extension (Portarlington to Tullamore), Lowestoft Railway and Harbour (Extension near Reedham), North-Wales Railway (Branch from Wymondham to the Norwich Extension of the Ipswich and Bury St. Edmund's Railway, and the proposed Thetford and Reedham Railway near Norwich), North-Wilts Railway (Yarmouth Extension, &c.), Paisley, Barrhead, and Hurlet Railway.

It was agreed that the Coventry, Banbury, and Oxford Railway should be recommitted.

COLONISATION.—The chief subject which engaged the House to-day was a motion by the Earl of LINCOLN, for an address to her Majesty, praying that she would be graciously pleased to take into consideration the means by which colonisation might be made subsidiary to other measures for the improvement of the social condition of Ireland, and by which, consistently with full regard to the interests of emigration, the comfort and the prosperity of those who emigrate might be effectually promoted. The noble Lord said he had no wish to bring forward any scheme of colonisation for Ireland, or to recommend for adoption any of the numerous plans which had already proposed from various quarters during the last quarter of a century. What he wished was that an inquiry should be made with a view to carry out a system of colonisation different from emigration, but by the side of emigration. The Irish poor were peculiarly unfitted for those left behind. The noble Earl proceeded to show, by a variety of statistics, that, notwithstanding all the aid demanded by the Government, there would still be left destitute no less than two millions of people for thirty weeks in the year, and said that, as the Poor Law was clearly inadequate to the absorption of the surplus labour of the country, and, as the subsidiary measures of the Government were unavailing, they were, therefore, called upon to consider how far the requisite aid might be obtained from a systematic plan of colonisation.—Mr. HAWES was of opinion that if the noble Lord's views were carried out, he would find that the beneficial effects to be contemplated would not be realised. He did not think it expedient to assent to the commission at the present crisis, for those who would now be anxious to emigrate were not the people who were calculated to endure the hardships of a settler's life. Besides, if anything could benefit Ireland at this moment, it was capital; and yet the proposition of the noble Lord was to take away from the resources of that country £9,000,000 of capital, and £2,000,000 of its best labourers. The measure could be carried on by the Government better than by a Commission. He, therefore, opposed the motion. A debate ensued upon the general subject of emigration.—Lord J. RUSSELL then said, that although he was not prepared to advise the Crown to appoint a Commission immediately for the special object named by Lord Lincoln, and in the spirit indicated by him, because it would raise extravagant expectations on this side of the Atlantic, and extravagant apprehensions on the other side, yet he would consent to the letter of the motion, and agree to the address.

The House was "counted out" about one o'clock in the morning.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY

The House met at twelve o'clock, and sat about three hours. The business was of a miscellaneous but unimportant character.

The County Elections Poll Bill was withdrawn, on the recommendation of Sir G. LEWIS, on account of the approach of the general elections as a reason for not proceeding with it this session.

The Quakers' and Jews' Marriages Bill, and the Juvenile Offenders Bill passed through committee.

The Parliamentary Electors Bill was read a second time.

The second reading of the Poor and Highway Rates Exemption Bill, the principal object of which was to exempt poor cottagers from the rates, was then moved by Mr. P. SCRROPE, and opposed by Sir G GREY, who admitted, at the same time, that the law of rating was not in the most satisfactory state; but, nevertheless, moved as an amendment that the bill be read a second time that day six months. The bill was ultimately withdrawn, after which Mr. Wakley postponed, till Monday week, the second reading of the Medical Registration and Medical Law Amendment

The Royal Marine Service Bill was read a second time; and the House then adjourned.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY

Their Lordships disposed of some miscellaneous business.

The Clergy Offences Bill was referred to a Select Committee

Several Scotch bills were read a second time

The Poor Removal (England and Scotland) Bill was read a second time.

THE POOR RELIEF (IRELAND) SUPERVISION BILL.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE moved the second reading of the Poor Relief (Ireland) Supervision Bill

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH thought the bill was calculated to operate very injuriously.

Lord BROUGHAM thought that the change proposed was very portentous, inasmuch as it made the Poor Law a Government department. He considered that the bill was making the Poor Law a Government department.

Earl GREY said it was impossible for any member of that or the other House of Parliament to have watched the discussion which had recently taken place upon the Poor Law, without being convinced that the time had arrived when some change ought to be made in the constitution of the Board to whom the administration of the law was entrusted. In the other House of Parliament, within the last two years, every conceivable point in connexion with the administration of the law had been freely discussed, and the Secretary of State for the Home Department had been forced, upon many occasions, to defend and justify the acts of officers with whom he had little or nothing to do. Did it not strike noble Lords, therefore, that it would be introducing a great improvement into the system, if some of the administrators of the Poor Law had seats in the other House of Parliament, in order that they might be prepared, on their own individual responsibility, to explain or defend any act connected with the administration of the law that might be called into question by parties either within or without the walls of Parliament?

The bill was read a second time: and the House adjourned at half-past seven.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY

THIRD READINGS OF RAILWAY BILLS.—The following bills were read a third time and passed:—Ambergate, Nottingham, and Boston and Eastern Junction Railway (Alteration of Line and Branches to Nottingham); London and South Western Railway (Andover to the Bishopstoke and Salisbury Branch); Newport, Abergavenny, and Hereford Railway (Deviation; Newport, Abergavenny, and Hereford Railway (Extension to Taff Vale Railway); North Staffordshire Railway (Alterations and Branches); Swansea and Aman Junction Railway; Waterford and Limerick Railway; Caledonian Railway (Branches to Canmobie, &c.); Glasgow, Paisley, Kilmarnock, and Ayr Railway (No. 2), Glasgow, Paisley, Kilmarnock, and Ayr Railway, and Ayrshire and Bridge of Weir Railway (No. 3.)

THE THAMES CONSERVANCY BILL. Some discussion took place upon this Bill, and, upon a division, it was ordered to be re-committed, by 71 to 65.

PRISONS' BILL,

On the order of the day for going into Committee on this bill being read,

Mr. Ewart presented a petition from the towns of Maitland and Newcastle, in New South Wales, against the renewal of the system of transportation.

Sir G. GREY then rose to move that the House do resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House upon this bill. The present bill, with the one which immediately followed it (the Custody of Offenders Bill), formed a comprehensive scheme of prison amendment proposed by the present Government. The present bill proposed to unite under one management the government of the Parkhurst, Milbank, and Pentonville prisons. The Right Honourable Gentleman then entered into a full explanation of the Government plan for changing the punishment of transportation to forced labour at home, and in foreign parts belonging to England; the plan is formed in consequence of the dreadful evils and crimes created by the present probation system in Van Diemen's Land and elsewhere.

A debate ensued, which occupied the whole night, and was adjourned.

The House rose at a quarter to one.

RAILWAY COMMITTEES.—On Monday, in Group 3, the Committee decided that the preamble of the South-Eastern (North Kent and Bricklayers' Arms Junction) was proved.——The Great Western Company obtained a triumph in the Committee on Group 18. On the same day the Chairman (Lord Lincoln) stated that the Committee had decided that the preamble of the Cheltenham and Oxford was proved (the broad gauge or Great Western line), and that the preamble of the London, Cheltenham, and Oxford (the narrow gauge or North Western line) was not proved. The Committee stipulated, however, that the London and North-Western Company are to be allowed to lay down the narrow gauge on the line should a narrow gauge railway be hereafter completed to Oxford, and it is deemed necessary by the Railway Commissioners.——On Tuesday, amongst the measures proved was that of the St. Albans, Luton, and Dunstable Branches Bill of the London and North-Western, and the Manchester, Buxton, Matlock, and Midland Devation.——In Group 20 the preamble of the Great Western (Aberystwith and Extensions) was proved.——The Committee in 22 declared the preamble of the Gloucester and Hereford Canal Purchase not proved.——On Wednesday, the preambles of the following bills were declared "not proved:"—The Birmingham and Oxford Junction (Warwick and Staffs d line), the Midland (Cheltenham, Warwick, and Leamington line), the Oxford, Worcester, and Wolverhampton (Cheltenham and Evesham line), the Rochdale Canal (sale of the Manchester and Leeds), the Southport Branch of the East Lancashire, the Birmingham and Oxford Junction (amendment and deviation line), and the London and Portsmouth and London and South Coast Amalgamation Bill.—The preamble of the Manchester and Southport Branch of the London and North-Western, and of the Edinburgh and Northern (Tay Ferry Improvements) were declared "proved."

A FAMILY POISONED.

A very lamentable occurrence, by which a father and several of his children have lost their lives, took place in the village of Kensal New Town, Harrow-road, on the afternoon of Sunday last. It appears that a man named Thomas Hickman, aged thirty-four, occupied, with his wife and six children, a small cottage in Ponton Villas, Middle-row, adjacent to the Cemetery at Kensal-green.

On Sunday morning last, Caroline Bonemy, a sister of Mrs. Hickman, called to see her sister, when she was informed, and during the morning she was asked by her sister, who was otherwise engaged, to prepare a rhubarb pudding for dinner. It appears that after the batter was mixed, and all the flour exhausted, that the deficiency was made up with meal, and during the morning she was asked by a paper bag what she imagined to be another package of flour. This she added to the former mixture. At dinner, the family, including the sister of Mrs. Hickman, partook heartily of the pudding, and shortly after very alarming symptoms were perceptible in the whole of the children. Whilst Mr. and Mrs. Hickman were attending upon their children, they were, together with Caroline Bonemy, attacked in a similar manner, and they died for the first time imagined that the fruit in the pudding had caused the symptoms, and assistance was called in

Three medical gentlemen attended, but, notwithstanding all their efforts, five of the children and the father of the family died within a few hours

The statement made by the husband prior to death, and which was confirmed by his wife, was that a quantity of arsenic had been kept in a bottle, but some months since, by a mishap, the bottle was broken, and the contents were afterwards placed in an old flour bag and deposited in one corner of the cupboard, where it had remained until removed by his sister-in-law

The inquest, which was held at the Portobello Arms, Kensal New Town, on the remains of Thomas Hickman, aged thirty-three years; James Bonemy Hickman, aged nine years; Harriet Elizabeth Hickman, aged six years; Mary Anne Hickman, aged two years and ten months; John Hickman, three years; and Henry Hickman, one year and five months; the sufferers from the effects of the poisoned pie or pudding. The Jury having been sworn, proceeded to the cottage to view the bodies. The sight was a peculiarly distressing one. During the absence of the Jury from the inquest-room, the Coroner remarked to the medical gentlemen assembled in the case, the fact that the eyes of some of the sufferers were affected, which, at that spot, is about four feet high. The body of the engine driver was found lying between the rails, under the foremost carriage. He was quite dead. The stoker was lying within a yard or two of the engine-driver. One of his arms was off, the whole of the tender having passed over his arm, and severed it from his body. It is a singular thing that none of the passengers were, in the slightest degree, hurt; and, indeed, one of them states that he was not aware anything had happened until the train stopped, and that it did not stop violently. The inquest was then opened by Gregory, the driver of the engine, was held on Wednesday before J. L. Ellis, Esq., Coroner. Evidence, chiefly descriptive of the accident, having been given, the inquest adjourned for three weeks, in order to have the evidence of the stoker, who was unable to attend from the severe injuries he sustained by the accident.

FATAL RAILWAY ACCIDENT NEAR WORCESTER. A fatal occurrence happened on the Bristol and Birmingham Railway, at Norton, near this station, on Tuesday evening, by which one life has been sacrificed, and another perilled. Three men employed on the works lay down upon the rails and actually went to sleep, and in that position a luggage train coming up, two of them were run over and one named John Tovey, was killed on the spot. The other is so severely injured that it is doubtful whether he can recover

THE FRENCH IN ALGERIA.—FROM A PICTURE BY HORACE VERNET.

MAJOR-GENERAL SCOTT.

(We have been favoured by a Correspondent at New York with the accompanying Portrait and Memoir of the Commander-in-Chief of the American Army in Mexico. The Portrait is allowed to be an excellent likeness.)

Major-General Winfield Scott was born near Petersburgh, in Virginia, the 13th of June, 1786; and received from President Jefferson, at the age of twenty-two years, a commission as Captain of Light Artillery, in the army of the United States. Four years later, he was appointed Lieutenant-Colonel of the United States 2nd Artillery; and after the lapse of the very short period of six years from the time when he entered the army, the highest rank, that of Major-General, was conferred upon him.

By his intrepidity and coolness at the Battle of Queenstown, he acquired a distinguished reputation. At the Battle of Chippewa, July 5, 1814, General Scott received the charge of the veterans who had fought and conquered by the side of Wellington; and at that time commanded by the brave General Riall, who was afterwards wounded in the Battle of Lundy's Lane, July 25, of the same year. The latter action commenced late in the afternoon—"the sun went down, the darkness came on, and still the contest was carried on fiercely until midnight." Scott was wounded in this battle, more familiarly known to some as the Battle of Niagara.

MAJOR-GENERAL SCOTT, COMMANDER OF THE AMERICAN FORCES IN MEXICO.

By a resolution of Congress, passed November 3rd, 1814, a gold medal was awarded General Scott, in testimony of the high sense entertained by that body of his distinguished services. The presentation was made by President Monroe.

Scott, confided with the chief command of the army in Florida, arrived, on the 7th of February, 1836, at St. Augustine. After a successful campaign, he left that field on the 3rd of May, having been ordered to the country of the Creeks, on the occasion of an outbreak among the Indians of that nation, in the vicinity of the Seminoles.

Recently, a more brilliant scene of action has added to his high renown and lasting fame. The capture of Vera Cruz, and the famed Castle of San Juan d'Ulloa; the battle of Cerro Gordo, and the capture of Puebla; are events recorded in history and present to the minds of all.

THE FRENCH IN ALGERIA.

Intelligence of an important character has been received in France from Algeria, during the past ten days. It appears that Marshal Bugeaud, in spite of pacific professions, has made a very serious attack upon the Kabyles. On the 17th ult., when the column of Marshal Bugeaud reached the territory of the Beni Abbés, within four days' march of Bugia, it was unexpectedly attacked during the night.

"The fire of the Kabyles," writes the correspondent of the Débats, "was at first extremely brisk, and, as we remained in the camp, preparing our means of attack, they thought they had annihilated us. But, at three o'clock A.M., the drums beat to arms, two battalions remained to guard the baggage and haversacks, and all the others rushing towards the heights, carried in succession several villages. The resistance was obstinate, for we lost 57 killed and wounded. Three villages, containing manufactories of arms and gunpowder, were burnt. The casualties on the side of the Kabyles must have been considerable; for, in the evening of that day, their chiefs repaired to our camp to tender their submission, which was accepted. General Bedeau had effected his junction with the Marshal. He had been previously attacked with vigour, but the Kabyles had not thought proper to oppose his passage. It is believed that our troops will remain in that district of Kabylie until the 15th of June, under the command of General Bedeau."

No account is given of the number of natives killed and wounded, but it must have been very great. In his despatch, Marshal Bugeaud gives a long and detailed account of his proceedings. After entering Kabylie, the tribes sent in their submission to the French authorities, till he reached the tribe of the Beni Abbés, who occupy a large territory among the mountains on the right bank of the river. Of this tribe, only one fraction came to his camp; the rest showed a determination to resist the invaders. They assembled to the number of 4000 infantry; which, considering the difficulties which the invading army encountered in the rugged nature of the country, was a very formidable force. Besides this, the Zaouaoua had joined the Beni Abbés, and added considerably to their force. They assembled at a place called Akbou. The Marshal placed his army on the left bank of the river, while his advanced posts were on the right. The advanced posts were attacked at eight in the evening, by the sharpshooters of the Beni Abbés. A general battle ensued, which lasted the greater part of the night. As soon as morning dawned, the French assumed the offensive, and, without any very great difficulty, overcame the enemy. They took a great number of villages, which were given up for pillage to the soldiers. A postscript to Marshal Bugeaud's despatch, dated May 18, states that the Beni Abbés had surrendered, and that he had placed them under the authority of the Khalif of the Medjana.

(We take this opportunity of introducing to our readers an Engraving from a celebrated Picture by Horace Vernet, illustrating the French Conquest of Algiers.)

THE PROPOSED MONUMENT TO CAXTON.—Viscount Morpeth has consented to preside at a public meeting to be held at the Society of Arts, on the 12th instant, to promote the above object, suggested, it will be recollected, some time since by the Rev. H. Milman. Liberal subscriptions have already been received in furtherance of the object.

MR. COBDEN IN ITALY.—A banquet was given on the 24th ult., at Turin, to Mr. Cobden. The Comte Collobiano was in the chair; having, of course, on his right Mr. Cobden, and on either side the President and Vice-President of the Chamber of Commerce. After the usual loyal toasts, the honour of proposing the health of their guest, which was drunk with acclamations long and loud, devolved upon Professor Scialoja, a young Neapolitan of rare talents. After the Professor's speech, Mr. Cobden rose to return thanks. He spoke in French, and after apologising for the imperfect manner in which he could express his sense of the honour done him, made honourable mention of his fellow labourers in the cause of free trade, and of the statesmen who had carried it into effect. He had found that the conduct of Sir Robert Peel was held in high estimation on the Continent, and he believed that the same judgment which intelligent foreigners removed from the atmosphere of our political strife passed upon him, would be also awarded to him by posterity in England. (Loud cheers). Locomotives and fiscal prohibitions were incompatible things. Railways disdained the ancient Custom-house restraints. They could not nurse their modern giant in an old fashioned cradle. (Applause). If Germany had not formed its Zollverein, it would not now have possessed its net-work of railways, and other countries would also be obliged to have their customs unions. (Loud cheers). The protective system was not known by the Italian republics in their flourishing era. How could Venice, for instance, have grown great under that system? As this was probably [the last occasion of his addressing an Italian audience, he must be allowed to say what had most surprised and delighted him in his travels in their country. It was not their pictures, monuments, and ruins—he had been prepared to see them. Nor was it the distinguished men he had met, for their fame had reached him in England. His most agreeable surprise had been in finding so much interest felt everywhere in Italy upon the subject of the commercial reform in England. Loud and enthusiastic plaudits followed the termination of the speech Mr. Cobden had an audience with the King, on the 26th ult., who received him most graciously, and entered at once upon the subject of Free Trade, saying he highly approved the principles Mr. Cobden had advocated, and that it was his wish and intention to make reductions in the tariff as soon as possible, a promise which the Minister of Finance corroborated in the evening, at the English Minister's, where Mr. Cobden dined.

THE EMERTON TESTIMONIAL.

On Tuesday, the Collegiate School, at Hanwell, was the scene of a very gratifying testimony to the high character of the Rev. Dr. Emerton, the Head Master, who was then presented with a superb Silver Vase and Salver, purchased by subscription among gentlemen who had formerly been the Reverend Doctor's pupils, as well as those at present under his tuition. The weight of the vase and stand is 110 ounces, and the height 2½ feet. It was designed and manufactured by Messrs. Lambert and Rawlings, of Coventry-street; it is more massive than presentation vases usually are; around the lid is an egg-and-tongue moulding; the mouth is encircled by oak leaves and acorns; and within a wreath of the same is engraved this inscription:—

THIS CUP AND STAND WERE PRESENTED TO
THE REV. JAMES ALEXANDER EMERTON, D.D., BY
A few of his former Pupils, and those at present under his care, as a mark of their gratitude for his kindness as a Friend, and respect for his talent as their Tutor; deeply regretting his non-appointment to the Rectory of Hanwell, in which Parish he held the Office of Curate for twelve years.
June 1, 1847.

The presentation of the plate took place at one o'clock on Tuesday, when the Reverend Doctor having seated himself in a chair on the lawn in the grounds of the School, and the pupils being ranged along one side of the garden, and the friends and former pupils on the other, the Committee advanced from the House, with the Testimonial, and, having placed it upon a table, one of the Committee-men read an appropriate address, which was then signed, and inclosed in a glazed case. To this address, the Doctor rose and replied, in good taste; the scholars gave three hearty cheers, and the company dispersed to the different amusements of the day.

TESTIMONIAL PRESENTED TO THE REV. DR. EMERTON, HANWELL.

Early in the morning Dr. Emerton was presented by his domestics with a silver inkstand, in token of their esteem for the Reverend Gentleman as their master, and to record their regret at his not being appointed Rector of the Parish.

THE COBDEN TESTIMONIAL.—It appears, from the Report read to the Committee at Manchester, on Tuesday last, that the total sum paid in Manchester and London, amounted to £65,288 13s. 8d.; that the subscriptions printed, but as yet unpaid, amounted to £15,150, making the total £80,483 13s. 8d. The Committee agreed to a resolution to the effect that the time had arrived when it was expedient to close the subscription.

DEATH OF LADY PALMER.—The Right Hon. Lady Madelina Palmer, expired on Tuesday, in Chapel-street, Grosvenor-place, in her seventy-sixth year.

NEW POTATOES FREE FROM DISEASE.—Some fine walnut and ash-loaf kidneys were for sale in Winchester market, on Saturday last, fine in size, excellent in quality, and without the least spot or blemish. Several small punnets or baskets, holding from 1lb. to 2lb. each, sold at 1s. 6d. to 2s. each. They were forced in frames, and grown in the same gardens where disease last year was very general. There were also some very good new potatoes for sale, which had been grown in the open ground, in warm borders, under walls, which, though not so large as the forced ones, were entirely free from the last two years' malaria.

HEADS OF THE MONTHS.—DRAWN BY KENNY MEADOWS.

JUNE.

Crown we with flow'rs "the leafy month of June,"
The rose and lily twine in garland rare;
Let woodland birds thrill out their votive tune,
And Zephyrs waft it o'er the meadows fair.
Hark! to the mower's song! The perfumed air
Floats from the hay-sward to the slumbering stream,
Skimm'd by the swallow; while the shepherd's care,
Well wash'd, their fleeces bright as silver seem.
List to the lusty cheers that ring along
The Thames' fair margins, at the rower's race.
View where the cricketers—fleet, agile, strong—
Claim for their noble sport no second place.
While to crown all behold the brave balloon
Soaring upon the vesper breeze of June!

Month! glorious month! to England trebly dear!
Thou saw'st the seven good Prelates in the Tower, *
Which unto them a palace did appear,
For conscience combated a bigot's pow'r.
Thou too hast seen the gay and gallant flow'r
Of Gallia's chivalry crushed to the dust
At Waterloo; † hast also blest the hour
When the brave Barons wrench'd from tyrant's trust
Their rights, at Runnymede! ‡ . .
Hail! laurell'd June!
Prince of the year! the glad sun's favourite child,
Bring with thee on thy balmy wings the boon
Of Ceres. . . . . And never be exiled
From us her fostering smiles; but pure and bright
Shed o'er our suffering land their blessed light. L.

* June 17th. † June 18th. ‡ June 19th.

THE MACKEREL FISHERY.

Mackerel are fish of passage which visit every part of our coasts in the spring and early part of the summer, and are taken in great abundance. They are conveyed by rapid land journeys from the coast to London for sale; and, for the encouragement of the Mackerel and other similar fisheries, the carriages in which the fish are thus conveyed are exempted from post-horse duty. However, this measure is now almost nugatory, from the greater rapidity of railway transit.

The fishing-boats on those parts of the coast which are sufficiently near to the Thames are accompanied by fast-sailing cutters, which collect the takings of the fishing-boats, and proceed with the cargo to Billingsgate Market, while the boats pursue their occupation. During a favourable season, 100,000 Mackerel are brought to Billingsgate Market every week. Those fish, which, as described, are brought by land conveyance to London, are sold at a kind of auction on the beach by the fishermen to the owners of the carts or vans, whose success in the speculation depends mainly on their quickness in bringing them to the market for consumption.

The principal fisheries on the eastern coast of England are in the neighbourhood of Whitby, Hartlepool, and Robin Hood's Bay.

Mr. Duncan has chosen the Brighton fishery for the scene of his truthful illustration. The season commences in April or May, and terminates in July or August. Each boat employs from two to four men; the chain of nets used for taking Mackerel is more than a mile in length, and of great depth; and thousands of fish are taken at one draught. The greater part is purchased for the London markets, whither it is conveyed by railway. Thus, we read in a recent Number of the Brighton Herald:—"The catch of Mackerel off the town this week has been very great; not less than 40,000 have been brought in. One boat alone—the Sarah, Nat. Gunn—took 11,000 fish on Wednesday night, being the first night's shooting. They were very fine, and fetched 18s. a hundred. Other boats have taken from 2000 to 4000 and 5000 a night; and fish are very plentiful, reducing the prices from 36s. to 18s. per hundred. No news has been received from Plymouth, where there are still eight or ten Brighton boats, whilst 22 are employed off the town."

Trinity Monday.—On Monday, according to annual custom, his Grace the Duke of Wellington, as the Master of the Trinity House, accompanied by the elder and junior brethren, assembled in the Grand Hall of the Trinity House, and, after partaking of a slight repast, proceeded to the Tower and embarked in their state barges, attended by the officials of the Trinity House, the Master and Wardens of the Watermen's Company, and Captain Fisher, the harbour master, and a strong muster of Thames police. His Grace was loudly cheered by a large body of spectators on his embarking, as also by the passengers in the numerous vessels and steamers going down the river. On the arrival of the party at Deptford, his Grace landed, the procession then moved on towards St. Nicholas Church, the children belonging to the Seamen's Orphan School being drawn up in line. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Melvill, Chaplain of the Tower and to his Grace. The church was crowded in every part. At the conclusion of divine service, the Duke of Wellington returned to town in an open carriage and pair, the Brethren of the Trinity returning in the usual manner to Trinity House.

Robbery in a Court of Justice.—During the trial of a woman named Scholland, on Wednesday, at the Middlesex Sessions, for stealing a gold broach pin from John Risley, it appeared that the prosecutor was likely to lose the pin. The prosecutor said "it had been a most unlucky case for him. Yesterday, whilst waiting in the Court in expectation of the case being called on, my pocket was picked of my handkerchief, my pocket-book, and several papers of consequence to me; and now it seems, owing to the carelessness of the pawnbroker, I am also likely to lose my gold pin. I thought, at all events, that my property would be safe while I was within the walls of your Lordship's Court." (A laugh.) The Assistant Judge expressed his regret at the loss of Mr. Risley, but said he could afford him no redress.

MACKEREL FISHING.—BRIGHTON BOATS.—DRAWN BY DUNCAN.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, June 6.—First Sunday after Trinity.—The Moon enters her last quarter at 6h. 6m., a.m.

MONDAY, 7.—The length of the day is 16h. 22m ; and it has increased 8h. 37m. since the Shortest Day.

TUESDAY, 8.—The Sun rises at 3h. 47m. ; is due E. at 7h. 17m. and sets at 8h. 11m.

WEDNESDAY, 9. —Venus sets at 11h. 2m., p.m.

THURSDAY, 10.—SIRIUS rises at 0h. 26m., a.m.

FRIDAY, 11. -St. Barnabas.—Mars rises at 0h. 53m., a.m.

SATURDAY, 12 —Trinity Term ends

Jupiter has now disappeared, and the bright planet Venus shines brilliantly in the evening. The planets Mars and Saturn are near each other, and may be seen early in the mornings.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 12.

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M. h. m. 7	A. h. m. 7 40	M. h. m. 8 10	A. h. m. 8 43	M. h. m. 9 21	A. h. m. 9 55	M. h. m. 10 30	A. h. m. 11 2	M. h. m. 11 35	A. h. m. — —	M. h. m. 0 7	A. h. m. 0 31	M. h. m. 1 1	A. h. m. 1 30

* * On Thursday the 10th, there will be no high tide during the afternoon

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Napoleon" and "φιλοσοφως."—Whether the first quotation be from a classic author, we cannot determine. The couplet beginning "Immodest words" is from Iinnamon, as we stated.

"O. B. U." Kingston.—We cannot say, with certainty, which is the longest established Brewery in England: Barclay, dates from early in the last century.

"W. N. R." Jermyn-street.—We shall be glad to be favoured with a sight of the specimen

"Lorley" is thanked: the Epigram has point, but the subject is too prurient for our columns

"Young Ireland" should inquire of a Law Bookseller.

"P. S." Liverpool.—Apply to Cramer, Beale, and Co., Regent-street.

"K. T. C." Birmingham.—By insurance in the names of the parties to be benefited.

"J. R. D." Bosworth.—The assignment of the property is illegal.

"W. G." Tyrlis, is thanked for the "Sporting" note; though we cannot find room to insert it.

"E. L." Cassel .The communication of any event of interest will be acceptable.

"J. F." New York, is thanked for the Prints.

"A Subscriber," Marlborough. We cannot interfere in wagers.

"H. O." Margate.—Lasting at Calais is cheap, (for a town), but much dearer than in the provinces

"R. E." Rossteveor.—We have not space to illustrate the locality suggested, unless in connection with the Opening of the Railway

"Do Try." -We shall be glad to see the Verse, if it be a new print.

"A Constant Subscriber."—To catch Cockroaches, half-fill a glazed basin or pie-dish with sweetened beer, or treacle ad, and set it in places frequented by them. Or, stew the place with cucumber parings.

"J. F." Dublin, is thanked for the Sketch.

"Bedford."—See the daily Newspapers.

"Indiana." Such a recommendation as our Correspondent suggests would appear partial and unfair

"R. H. S." —"The Booksellers' Monopoly of the Opera Tickets" has long baffled the Lesses himself.

"A. F." may obtain a List of the Governors of Christ's Hospital at the Counting-house of the Hospital.

"W. A. D." is thanked for the Ode; but, we had not room to print it.

"P. G." Plymouth.—The Half-quarter Days are Feb. 8, May 8, Aug. 11, and Nov. 11.

"J. G. S."—We cannot state when the Nelson Medals are to be distributed; nor when the account of Naval Services will be published by the Admiralty. Both will, doubtless, be duly announced.

"Dannelsatre"—We have not time for the calculation.

"E. S. T." Brackley.—Safer in England.

"A Tyro," Liverpool.—Barrett's "Italian Dictionary."

"Junius," Blackheath.—The play of "The Love-Chase" is published by Moxon, Dover-street: "Money," by Saunders and Otley, Conduit-street.

"B. P. I." —The Painting has considerable merit.

"X. X., a Constant Subscriber." -The strength of the Lotion may be increased, but cautiously.

"Joseph," Antwerp.—See the "Hand-book of Birkenhead."

"A Solsker," Emsworthy, will, probably, find a View of Little Warley Church, near Brentwood, in the "Excursions in Essex;" or in Newcourt's "Repertorium Ecclesiasticum," which contains an illustrated parochial history of the County.

"An Officer of Rank," Simla.—We will readily engrave the Portrait whenever the General again distinguishes himself. Interim, we will take care of the Memoir

"A Subscriber."—Any good Almanack for the year contains a List of the East India Company's Directors.

"R. H.," Norwich. We believe the Arab horses in question to have been mostly presented to the owners of studs

"A. W. J.," Clifton.—Apply to Watkins and Hill, Charing Cross.

"Worcester."—"Archipelago" is a corruption of Aigeopelago, modern Greek for the Egean Sea. The term is applied to any sea interspersed with many isles, and to the isles situated therein. The celebration of Royal Birthdays is, doubtless, fixed by convenance

"Charles William." -The engravers may be right or wrong. They generally turn to some of the printed Catalogues of Arms, and select from the various bearings given to each name, the crest they think the correct one.

"Bardsley," Ashton-under-Lyne -Dr. Blomfield, Bishop of London, was born in 1786. He received his education at Trinity College, Cambridge; took his degree as third Wrangler, and was Senior Chancellor's Medallist. He is son of Charles Blomfield, Esq., of Bury St. Edmund's; and is married to Dorothy, daughter of Charles Cox, Esq.

"J. S."—The present Parliament might assemble in 1848.

"A Constant Subscriber."—A Marriage Licence can be procured at Doctors' Commons, by application to a Proctor. The names and places of residence must be given

"A Celt."—Lord Ponsonby, so well known as a diplomatist, is still alive. He is brother-in-law of Lord Jersey, and grandson of the Right Hon. John Ponsonby, Speaker of the Irish House of Commons, who was second son of Brabazon, first Earl of Bessborough, grandfather of the late Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland.

"Vincit Veritas."—Every married man is entitled to impale his wife's arms.

"A Subscriber," Cork. The word is Turkish, and the English pronunciation is no rule; but the g hard as most likely to be correct.

"Enquirer."—The quotation, "Hereditary bondsmen," &c., so often used by O'Connell, is from the second canto of "Childe Harold," stanza 76.

"H. C. S.," Brighton.—The context must explain the meaning, unless it is a misprint

"A Constant Subscriber." -The Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden, is now the largest Theatre in this country. The Birmingham Organ is the largest in England.

"Rudolph," Bristol.—Sz, gvh edges. We cannot reply as to the Truffle.

"W. B." can recover by the New Act.

"P." Colpy's "Latin Grammar"

"W. L. R."—We have not room for the Lines.

"M. M.," Exeter.—The slipper is a good remedy.

"G. S.," Old Brompton.—We cannot notice the matter

"A. B. Z." and "T. H.," Ipsham, should address their inquiries respecting the Opera to Mr. Webster, 17, Great Russell-street, Covent Garden.

"N. Y. Z. W.," Woolsor.—The Raweay Trips are, doubtless, good for; but, we cannot tell the rate.

"A Subscriber in Tupperary." "Moore's Sporting Sheet Almanack" is published at No. 1, West-street, St. Martin's lane.

"R. F.," Bristol. The Irish words "Och hone! virrasthrue!" in our Song, last week, signify "Alas! woe is me!"

"Ozonian." -We cannot engrave either of the Pictures: they are not worth it.

"An Admirer." -The figures at the base of the Statue of O'Connell, on Mr. Harvey's design, in our last Number, are Ireland, Mercy, and Anarchy—the latter laid prostrate.

"Anacta" is thanked. we will see.

"A. Z.," Wordsley. -The property in any original sculpture, model, or bust, is secured for fourteen years; and, if the artist survive that time, for fourteen years longer, provided the name of the proprietor and date of first publication be inscribed, as in the case of engravings.

"ΑΛφα."—See Hodgson's "Instructions for Candidates for Holy Orders."

"A Correspondent."—Roben Adair was a late student of the last century, who preferred Bacchus and the Muses to Themis and Rhadamanthus. His song—that is, the song which bears his name is an adaptation of the old Irish air of "Eileen Aroon," of which an adaptation is to be found in "Moore's Melodies."

"G. D.," Camberwell.—The cost of a Patent for England, Scotland, and Ireland, will be about £300.

"Nimrod."—The Derby and Oaks Stakes are named after the Earl of Derby, and his seat, The Oaks, near Epsom.

"J. W. H."—Lady Bloomfield's Stakes, at Ascot, were won by Pyrrhus the First; and the Emperor's Cup, at Ascot, by Alarm.

"R. R. M." Lisbon, is thanked.

"Echo of the Keys." A Correspondent is thanked for the offer of this communication; though we cannot print it.

 We have received several Letters respecting the Engraving in our last Number, of the bends of the Railway Accident at Chester; in reply to which we repeat the name and address of the Artist, from whom we received the sketches—Mr. W. Herdman, Liverpool. Next week, we intend illustrating the subject from sketches by an Artist of our own Establishment, whom we have despatched to Chester for the purpose.

BOOKS RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Irish Knitting Patterns. By Miss Lambert.——The Crochet Collar Book.——Trades man's Book of Design, Part 1.——Arabian Night's Entertainments, 2nd Vol.——The Disgrace to the Family, Part 1.——Sylvan's Handbook to the Lakes. Monumental Brasses. By the Rev. C. Boutell.

MUSIC.—Beautiful Flowers.——Swedish Songs.——Song of the Hay makers.——Musical Treasury, Parts 76, 79, and 80.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 5, 1847.

JUSTICE frequently seems to be more a question of time than principle ; it may be denied by power with impunity ; it may be asked for by weakness in vain ; but Time conquers it—wrests it at last from the most unwilling ; the misfortune is that it so often comes too late. Homer personifies Complaint, as the daughter of Jove, always pursuing Injustice over the world ; but, being weak and lame, rarely overtaking her enemy. Sometimes, however, Injustice of a sudden relents, and repairs the injury she has done, so readily that one wonders by what perversion of principle the concession was so long denied

For instance, will it be credited by future generations that it is only the official Gazette of Tuesday last, June 1st—"the glorious first of June," as it used to be called—that contains the notification of an honorary reward to be given to the veterans of all ranks who fought through the greater part of the War of the Revolution from 1794 to 1815 ? Is it, we say, credible ? Yet there is the Gazette containing, in due form, all the official notices and regulations, signed, "by command of Field Marshal the Duke of Wellington !"

Forty-one years from the date of the first land battle—that of Maida, fought in 1806—and fifty-three from the first naval engagement—Howe's victory over the French fleet—comes the mark of honour to those engaged in them ! What a weary heart-sickening interval ! The spirit of the time has gone ; we are in the midst of other days ; and, though these triumphs are not forgotten, it is not underrating them to say they are less thought of than of yore. Fifty-three years after date comes the justice and reward that should have followed instantly upon the deed as promptly as thanks on service—even from the most niggard and churlish individual : a great and wealthy nation is thus slowly just !

We are glad justice has been done, though so tardily ; and yet, in some respects, it is a question whether "better late than never" can be said of the transaction. In the first place, granting the special distinction now, proves the claim to it to have been always valid ; and men are compelled to ask, why was it so long denied ? Routine, of course, defends itself by pleading the "regulations" by which the capacity of desiring and appreciating such a mark of honour was supposed not to extend below "Flag Officers and Captains," in the Naval Service, and "Generals and Superior Officers," in the Army. Below those ranks Chivalry was ignored ; it was reckoned as duty, and paid for, but received no outward token of acknowledgment beyond. And, as Generals and Admirals, and Flag Officers, in the good old times of 1794, and long after them, were appointed by those who made the Parliament for the Minister, with the broad understanding of all your places for my votes, it follows pretty certainly that the Flags and the Frigates, the Regiments and Divisions, did not always go to the most fitted for them.

Our greatest names in both services have been those who had to struggle against the system; Wellington was superseded on the eve of one of his great victories to suit some home intrigue, and Nelson had more battles to fight with the Board of Admiralty than the French. Of course, rewards always fall on the heads that happen to stand in the right place to catch them, and the anger, discontent, and heartburnings of all who were not Generals and Flag Officers, may be conceived. They have been borne for half a century, and are now acknowledged to have been just. Yet, till now, all successive Ministries, and Admiralties, and Commanders-in-Chief have been coldly constant in their refusal to grant this acknowledgment. What a contrast to the more generous policy of those we fought against ! Napoleon distributed the Cross of the Legion of Honour almost on the field of battle, and the English Commander-in-Chief only in 1847 bestows the token that was earned in—1806!

We wonder how many of those who were middle-aged men and veteran soldiers in the Battles of Maida, and Vimiera, and Corunna, are alive now to receive and enjoy the reward? In all human business we ought to recollect that the term of man's life was abridged at the Flood; Methusalah might have carried a half-century or two for an event with complacency; but our less-favoured race find that space more than a whole life, not a fraction of existence. Three-score years and ten are not an average, but an exception; Government should really reflect on these things. The greater portion of those who fought under Howe and Moore has passed away, or is in the verge of the tomb; the youngest drummer boys and the smallest midshipmen of those years are grey-haired men! What is fit to be done at all should be done quickly.

We are no admirers of stars and ribands and medals for themselves; we should not wish to see them made valueless by indiscriminate bestowal, like that which makes the countless orders of the German Courts ridiculous, and has in France rendered even the Honour of the celebrated "Legion" very questionable. The deterioration is caused by giving them to every body, till at last the Order, as in Germany, ceases to be a distinction. But naval and military orders are not open to the same objection, and they are particularly suited to the character of the service performed. This was always felt to be true, but it was the rule to confine the distinction to the highest ranks, except in the case of the Battle of Waterloo. Every man and officer engaged in the last conflict of the war received a medal without exception, though some of the regiments and many of the officers saw service for the first time. The veterans who had fought through the whole war, and borne the brunt of the Peninsular campaigns, thought this unjust; many of them not having the luck to be present at the crowning victory, had no distinction at all, while younger men of less service walked about in all the pride of "a decoration." Thus for thirty years has the voice of complaint and remonstrance gone up, claiming of the authorities some badge of honour for the soldiers of the Peninsula. For the whole of that period the leader of that army has had not only a voice potential in all military affairs, but one perfectly absolute. When he was Minister, one word from him would have settled the question by the just and generous concession. That word was never spoken: he never interfered, discouraged all petitions; and, while himself oppressed with the weight of orders and stars from every Court in Europe, coldly denied to those who bore him through so many a well-fought field the small distinction of a medal! In his case, the assertion that such rewards should always be left to the Sovereign is little less than an evasion, since, for many years, he was, in fact, the Sovereign. As in many other things, it is not till public opinion was strongly expressed on the subject that the Duke and the Government have given way. The boon is thus deprived of all the grace that attaches to what is freely given; the long refusal is altogether inexcusable; the difficulties in the way have only been increased by the time that has elapsed. It is now a reparation for neglect, rather than a reward of service; and it is impossible not to see that the long denial will always remain a reproach and blemish on the character of the great military chief, who rigorously exacted the service of his army, but coldly shut them out from everything above pay and provender—"Generals and superior officers" excepted. Well may Colonel Napier say that the English army has always fought "under the cold shade of aristocracy."

EUROPE must reconcile itself to the idea of an American ruler of some kind—an Emperor, or President, according to circumstances —sitting on the Throne of the Montezumas. The supremacy of race is one of the resistless agents in the affairs of the world ; it works with the certainty of a natural law ; politicians and diplomatists may stand aghast at some of its manifestations, but they cannot tie the giant's hands with red tape ; and, at last, they have only to do again what they have done before—accommodate themselves to circumstances, as circumstances pay no manner of heed to them.

The nation that cannot govern itself, and is nothing but a mass of hopeless anarchy, falls with the most absolute certainty under the rule of the first that can ; nay, if a nation possessing all the virtues, cannot defend itself, it must accept the Government of another : in this case it is pitied if it cannot be saved. But Mexico is so utterly rotten and worthless that to do either is impossible. The Spanish blood has corrupted under the southern sun to the point where political dissolution is inevitable. The stronger race is upon them ; the two cannot dwell on the same continent together, save in their natural relative positions. The early settlers of Italy founded their Empire on the ruins of the Etruscan race; and they yielded to the Lombards and Goths : the north, when it once lays its hold on the south, seems to retain its grasp, and the Austrian is still the successor of the Cæsars. The present advance of the Americans on Mexico may not result in holding the country ; the Americans are hardly prepared to assume the Government of such a people ; but the day will come for that also, and it may be as well to accustom ourselves to the contemplation.

THE WEATHER.

The weather which we have experienced during the past week has been a continuation of that I have had to describe since the 10th of May : and it has caused a wonderful improvement in the growing crops since that time. In some respects the weather of the past week has been such, that, so far as I can ascertain, it is without a parallel on record at this season of the year. The following are the leading particulars of each day:—Friday, May 28, was a splendid day, and remarkable, both on account of the very high temperature attained on this day, as well as for the great dryness of the atmosphere At 7h., A.M., the reading of the thermometer was 66°; by nine it had increased to 81°; and it continued between this reading and 84° till 2h., P.M.; shortly after this time it had increased to 86°; and at 3h., P.M., it still further increased to 88°—a point, I believe, higher than has been before recorded to have taken place in May. This temperature did not decline quickly ; at 7h., P.M., the reading was 76°, and it did not descend below 64° during the night, and during the night it did not descend below 62°. At 3h., P.M., the temperature of the dew point was 56°, being 31° below that of the air, indicating a very dry state of the atmosphere, and showing that the weight of water in a cubic foot of air was 5½ grains, but that it would have required an additional quantity or eight grains to have saturated it. The degree of humidity was only 4, representing perfect saturation by 10. During the day the wind was nearly calm, but a very mild breeze blew from the N.E. and E.N.E. The lowest thermometrical reading on grass was 42½°, and the average temperature of the day was 71°. From 11½h., P.M., there were frequent flashes of lightning seen in the S.S.W., and they were followed by thunder at about 2h., A.M., of the 29th day, with heavy rain falling for a short time, during which nearly a quarter of an inch of rain fell. Saturday was a fine day, but cloudy till the evening ; the air was generally in a calm state ; the average temperature of the day was 65½°, and the lowest reading on grass was 53°. Sunday was a fine and nearly cloudless day ; the wind was from the S.W. and W.S.W. ; the lowest reading on grass was 50°, and the average temperature of the day was 61½°. Monday was a fine day, with a light air from the N., in the morning, and from the E., during the afternoon ; the average temperature of the day was 64°, and the lowest reading on grass was 35°. Tuesday was also a fine day ; its average temperature was 63½°, and the lowest reading on grass was 37° Wednesday was a fine day, with gentle airs from the E. ; its average temperature was 63°, the lowest reading on grass was 33½° Thursday was a fine day : the direction of the wind was variable ; the average temperature of the day was 62½° ; the lowest reading on grass was 37½°. During the day there were portions of cirri, cumuli, cirrocumuli, and haze prevalent. The average temperature of the week was 64½° The average temperature of the month of May was 57½°. The amount of rain collected during the month was 1¼ inch nearly.

The extreme thermometrical readings each day were—

Friday,	May 28 the highest during the day was 88 deg., and the lowest was 33 deg.
Saturday,	May 29	75	56
Sunday,	May 30	75	46½
Monday,	May 31	82	46
Tuesday,	June 1	81½	46
Wednesday,	June 2	81	45
Thursday	June 3	80½	46½

Blackheath, Thursday, June 3, 1847. J. G.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

MOVEMENTS OF THE COURT.

On Sunday morning the Queen and Prince Albert, the Duchess of Kent, the ladies and gentlemen of the Court, and the domestic household, attended divine service in the Private Chapel in Buckingham Palace.

On Monday her Majesty and the Prince, with the Royal Family, returned to Windsor. His Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, their Royal Highnesses the Hereditary Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Saxe Weimar, and his Royal Highness the Prince of Lucca, went to Windsor on that evening on a visit to her Majesty. The Queen gave a grand banquet on the evening in St. George's Hall. The dinner table was splendidly ornamented with gold plate, a very fine epergne, called "The Prince of Wales," forming the central ornament of the plateau. Numerous candelabras of silver gilt, filled with wax lights, were placed down the middle. At the west end of the hall was a buffet of gold plate, having in the middle a trophy captured at the storming of Seringapatam—the large head and paws of a Royal tiger couchant, covered with plates of pure gold. This figure formerly supported the Throne of the Sultan of Mysore. On either side were displayed a State Standard of Tippoo Sultan, the head of the staff of each standard being composed of a large amethyst, encircled with diamonds.

On Tuesday the Queen and Prince Albert went to Ascot. In the evening her Majesty gave another grand banquet. On Wednesday also, her Majesty gave a grand dinner.

WINDSOR, THURSDAY EVENING.—(From our own Correspondent.) Her Majesty and Prince Albert, accompanied by the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, and several of their Royal visitors, promenaded this morning in the private grounds in the Home Park. Shortly after twelve o'clock, her Majesty and the Prince of Leiningen, accompanied by the whole of their illustrious guests, left the Castle in seven of the Royal carriages and four, for the race-course at Ascot. The Royal party returned to the Castle between five and six o'clock. Her Majesty gave a grand banquet this evening in St. George's Hall ; covers were laid for seventy-two. The Duchess of Kent and suite left Frogmore this morning for Clarence House, St. James's), will leave town for Germany, accompanied by the Prince of Leiningen, on Tuesday next.

WINDSOR, FRIDAY EVENING.—(From our own Correspondent.)—Her Majesty, the Prince Consort, and the Royal family, accompanied by the Hereditary Grand Duke and Duchess of Saxe Weimar, the Prince of Lucca, the Prince of Leiningen, and attended by their several suites, took their departure from the Castle shortly after five for the Slough station, and proceeded thence to London. Her Majesty was escorted to Slough by a detachment of the 1st Life Guards. His Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia left the Castle this afternoon, for town. The remainder of her Majesty's visitors left in the course of the day. The Court is not expected to return to Windsor until August or September next.

ILLNESS OF THE EARL OF ALDERMANLY.—The Earl of Aldermanly, we regret to learn, is suffering from severe indisposition, at Quiddenham Hall, Norfolk.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

ELECTION FOR MARYLEBONE.—Mr. John Bagshaw, formerly member for Sudbury, and lately put forward by the Reform and Registration Association for the borough of Marylebone, in opposition to Sir Charles Napier, has withdrawn from the contest, and the interest of his friends is transferred to Lord D. C. Stuart.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS. On Saturday evening, Sir John Rennie, as President of the Institution, gave a Conversazione for the season, at his house in Whitehall-place. The spacious suits of drawing-rooms was brilliantly illuminated ; and on the tables, and in the library and dining-room, was a very choice collection of drawings of engineering and mechanical works, drawings, &c. The attendance of Members of the Institution of Civil Engineers, distinguished architects, artists, and men of letters, was very numerous ; and the reception was altogether in the highest style.

BATHS AND WASHHOUSES FOR THE LABOURING CLASSES.—On Tuesday the committee of the baths and washhouses for the labouring poor, situate in George-street, Euston-square, made a report of the number of persons who had availed themselves of its benefits since the opening of the establishment in August last. Up to Saturday in the past month, 63,313 males, and 7127 females has bathed, and 19,477 poor women had washed, rinsed, &c , the wearing apparel belonging to themselves and families, being a total of 77,908 individuals.

MORTALITY IN THE METROPOLIS The deaths registered last week in London were 995, being 110 more than the average number of the same week in seven former years. Probably about one-half of the excess must be ascribed to increase of population ; of the remainder the greater part has been caused by the unusual prevalence of fever amongst adults, and of affections of the mesenteric glands amongst children. Fifty-two persons died of fever, which is 18 above the average. Scurvy, or the kindred disease purpura, has recently increased to a great extent, both in London and throughout the country.

POSTSCRIPT.

IMPORTANT FROM PORTUGAL.

SOUTHAMPTON, JUNE 4.

The Tiger steam-ship arrived from the Peninsula this morning. She brings intelligence from Lisbon down to the 29th ultimo, and Oporto the 30th. The Bulldog arrived at Lisbon on the 27th, with news of the determination of the British Government to interfere on behalf of the Queen: it had excited great indignation amongst the popular party. A good deal of firing was heard in the direction of St. Ube's on the 28th. Contradictory reports were in circulation. One was that the Junta would yield; another, that it would fight to the last. The Gladiator crossed the bar at Oporto on the 29th, and came out crowded with English residents. The Junta and Bandeira would prevent the further landing and embarking of the troops.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

The Select Committee was appointed to consider the petitions relative to the Birmingham and Oxford Junction Railway Bill.

IRISH EMIGRATION.—Lord MONTEAGLE moved for the appointment of a Select Committee to consider the subject of emigration from Ireland. The noble Lord, in support of his motion, stated that the advantages which would arise to the people of Ireland, and also to the United Kingdom, of emigration were carried out upon a large and extensive system. Earl CAREW agreed generally in these views, and was willing to give facilities to a well-conducted system of emigration, but he could not even indulge the hope that it could now be carried out upon such a large scale as would relieve the present distress in Ireland:—Lord Viscount WILLIAM GORE also opposed that the Colonies, as well as Ireland, would be benefited by immediate and extensive emigration. After a reply from Lord MONTEAGLE, the motion was agreed to, and the Committee appointed.

The House then adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

THIRD READINGS OF RAILWAY BILLS.—The following bills were read a third time and passed: The Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Stour Valley Railway (No. 3) Branches; Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Stour Valley Railway (No. 2) (Smethwick Deviation); Bristol and South Wales Junction Railway and Aust Ferry; Coventry, Nuneaton, Birmingham, and Leicester Railway; Derby-Junction, Staffordshire, and Worcestershire Junction Railway; Dundee and Newtyle Railway; Dundee and Perth Railway (Alteration and Extension, and Branches to Cupar and Burnhead Brechlen); Eastern Counties Railway (Enlargement of the London and Stratford Station, and Amendment of Acts, Eastern Counties Railway (Annuities, Rights, and Ware Lines, &c.), Edinburgh and Bathgate Railway (Deviation and Extension); Great North and North Western Railway (Coventry and Nuneaton branches); London and North Western Railway (Aberdare and Wishaw branch; London and North Western Railway (Newport Pagnel, Olney, and Wellingborough Branch); London and North Western Railway (Peterborough and Wolverhampton Railway); Lynn and Ely Railway (Lynn and Dereham and Lynn Docks); Northampton and Banbury Railway, and the Parkgate and Chester and Birkenhead Junction Railway.

PORTUGAL.—Some conversation took place upon the subject of the recent protocol regarding Portugal, in the course of which Lord PALMERSTON said the only and so a reason of her Majesty's Government wishing for a delay of a few days was, that the House should be in full information of all that had transpired on the subject. When the papers were on the table he was convinced it would be seen that every disposition had been shown by the British Administration to secure to Portugal the rights which she was entitled to under the treaty, and to protect the liberties and security of Portuguese subjects. It was then arranged that Mr. Hume should have the opportunity of calling the attention of the House to the subject on Thursday next.

THE WELLINGTON STATUE.—In answer to a question from Mr. C. BERKELEY, Lord MORPETH said her Majesty had given her sanction to the removal of the statue of the Duke of Wellington from the arch at Hyde Park, after the Committee had been informed of it. Her Majesty had also expressed a wish that the arch should be completed and ornamented according to the original design.

THE POTATO DISEASE.—In answer to Mr. HORNBY, the Chancellor of the EXCHEQUER said the Government had received information of the re-appearance of the potato disease this year, but the accounts were, at present, too vague to enable the Government to act upon them.—Mr. LABOUCHERE regretted to say that information had been received of the appearance of disease in the early potato in Ireland.

THE PRISONS BILL.—The adjourned debate upon this bill was resumed by Mr. EWART, who said he should support the Government plan. The remainder of the night was occupied in a desultory debate upon the subject of transportation. Nothing of importance occurred up to the time of adjournment.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Paris papers of Thursday state that Marshal Gruchy died at St. Etienne on the 29th ult., in the 82nd year of his age. The Marshal, whose lungs had been always very delicate, had gone to spend the winter in Italy, and sojourned in succession at Pisa, Florence, and Rome. He had experienced considerable benefit from the journey, when on his return he was seized at St. Etienne with a serious illness, which terminated in his death. He was then proceeding to Vichy, the waters of which had been ordered for his wife. The Marshal leaves two sons, the one a General, and the other a Colonel of Hussars, and a daughter the Marchioness d'Ormesson.

POLICE.

MYSTERIOUS MURDER OF AN OLD WOMAN.

The officers of the D division of Police on Wednesday discovered that a woman had been murdered in a house near Bryanstone-square. It appeared that Mary Ann Hunt, a female about thirty years of age, out of a situation, about eleven weeks ago engaged the share of an apartment with an aged woman named Mary Stowell, a nursing the fruit kitchen at Mr Hayhis's, Lisle, No. 40, Adam street West, Bryanstone-square. On Wednesday morning, about half-past four o'clock, as police constable Butterly, No. 124 D, was on duty in Queen-street, Edware-road, he observed Hunt walking along with two bundles under her apron, and seeing him, as she appeared greatly agitated, he stepped across and asked her where she came from; to which she at first made no reply, but immediately afterwards said, "No. 40, Adam-street." On proceeding to the apartment lately occupied by the prisoner and deceased, a horrible sight presented itself. On the floor fronting the fire-place lay the body of Mrs. Stowell, her head literally smashed to atoms, a poker covered with blood and brains, with which the dreadful and diabolical crime had been committed, lying by her side. A thick piece of rope was round her neck tied in a knot, from which it would appear that the murderer had first attempted to strangle her while in her sleep, but her efforts being ineffectual, she had taken the poker.

Mary Ann Hunt was on Wednesday examined at MARYLEBONE Office, before Mr. Rawlinson, on the charge of murder.

The first witness was Butterby, 124 D, who said—At a quarter-past four this morning, as I was on duty in Adam-street West, I saw the prisoner put her head outside of the door No. 40. On her seeing me she drew in and shut the door. Thinking that there was something wrong, I walked towards the house, and, as I approached, I heard a female voice in the passage, which I knew to be the prisoner's. I made my way into the kitchen, and found therein the body of the old lady, with a poker lying beside her. Her head was under the grate. I got into the room at the front, and found the window open, and the sash had been broken. She had no gown on. She had a large wound on the face, and several other wounds on the crown of the head, which appeared completely crushed in. A great quantity of blood had flowed, and which appeared completely crushed in. I went to the door, which I found open, and I got out of the room. I went to the door, which I found open, and I got out of the room. I went to the door, which I found open, and I got out of the room

THE ROYAL CORTEGE ON THE DERBY DAY

GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE OF RUSSIA.

THE brothers and male children of the Emperors of Russia receive, from their birth, the title of Grand Duke: the scion of the Russian Royal Family at present on a visit to England is Constantine Nicholewitch, the second son and fourth child of the Emperor: he was born on the 9th of September (or the 21st according to the old style, which Russia still retains), 1827. He has been educated with the greatest care, and, it appears, has been destined to the naval service, though, in Russia, naval and military ranks are not so definitely separated as with us. He is, though so young, Lord High Admiral of the Empire. In countenance, he bears a slight resemblance to his Imperial father; but his frame does not hold out promise of attaining his sire's almost gigantic proportions. He converses in English with elegance and fluency.

HIS IMPERIAL HIGHNESS THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE OF RUSSIA.—FROM A DAGUERREOTYPE, BY MR. BEARD.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

ASCOT HEATH RACES.

About—About!
Search Windsor Castle, elves, within and out;
Strew good luck, ouphes, on every sacred room,
That it may stand till the perpetual doom,
In State as wholesome, as in State 'tis fit,
Worthy the owner—and the owner it.
Merry Wives of Windsor.

ACCORDING to Pindar, the Olympic Games were instituted, not alone to furnish a high festival for the Grecian States, but also for political purposes. Is there any affinity between the objects at Olympia and at Ascot? The former had its Theseus, its Hercules, and its Philip; the latter has its Princes, Potentates, and Powers—and had its Philippe also. Well, whatever the views of those who direct and marshal the Royal Meeting, there can be no doubt about its policy. The assemblage of a people on occasions calculated to promote sympathy and call forth cordial sentiments, is the principle of a right social economy.

When the iron autocrat of the North and the bland despot of the East looked upon the community of a free nation—as they saw it gathered together on the race-course of Ascot Heath—when they noted the popular resort, and tested its elements by comparison with the ceremonials of the bondsman—they read a moral which left them wiser, if not better, citizens. Mighty men from many lands have been the guests of our Monarchs during these anniversaries: they saw, haply, the state and wealth and pomp of which at home they had types—less striking, indeed, but still resemblances; but beyond it they commanded a spectacle which, for interest and account, stands without parallel beneath the sun: they saw A PEOPLE—men, as God made them—Nature, as unknown to the Muscovite or the Ottoman. Peradventure these revels may not be without their political purpose.

It was said by Cato that "the man who has not time to be idle, is a slave"—a passage of most sound philosophy: "nique semper arcum tendit Apollo." There is such a thing as making pleasure a business—which, again, is as tiresome as all work is slavish. Our neighbours across the straits of Dover make pleasure a pursuit, if not a toil: do they enjoy a holiday as freshly as John Bull? Apropos of Frenchmen—and the turf—the fashion in which the Parisian journals are wont to treat English racing is the richest thing in the world. One of them, describing the Derby, last week, thus wound up the catastrophe. "Le vainquer du Derby pour 1847, l'immortel Cossack, etait monte par Monsieur Hetman Platoff." Or, liberally translated: Cossack—the winner of the Derby in 1847—was ridden by Hetman Platoff. . . . . .

To return to our dates for vivente. Ascot Races fell this year at a propitious season. The weather was delicious; the national hope was putting forth blossoms full of the promise of good fruit; the popular prospects had begun to mend, and there was reason to anticipate that a time of prosperity and plenty was close at hand. The Lady of the Land, too, would "rain influence" on the scene. The sacred rooms of Windsor Castle would receive guests worthy their hospitalities; the rural Palace would be a place of high revelry, of august festivity. Such were the goodly hopes—let it be told how their promise came to pass.

Tuesday, the first of this instant June, was a fitting anniversary—both of the month and the occasion. It was the first day of the Royal Meeting, and assembled a company on the heath meet for the ceremonial they commemorated. The preparations for their reception were, moreover, worthy the guests. Great improvements had been effected in and around the Royal and Grand Stands. The lawns in front of each were enlarged; the avenues rendered more commodious—and an air of elegance and convenience given to them, most favourably contrasting with the ordinary character of such buildings. All the official arrangements were perfect—not to say imposing. Even the Clerk of the Course rode about his affairs, attended by a groom with a cockade to his hat! And then the Imperial procession—the Royal entrée—the gorgeous cavalcade—the Regal approach. A long array of chariots and horsemen, complete in equipment, and glittering in appointment—a spectacle of equipage such as the world could not elsewhere furnish—soon after 1 o'clock was seen proudly sweeping up the centre of the course, "hedged by the true divinity of sovereignty"—a free, fond people, greeted by the fairest of all welcomes, by hands with hearts in them. So did Victoria pass through the lines of her true subjects on that auspicious day—a priceless pilgrimage. Who was it that, seated by her side, bent eyes of wonder on that passage of deep interest between a Monarch and a Nation? A scion of the house of the Czar. And what moral doth he read in this book of life? Doth he mark what fruit comes of justice and of right, and learn profitably the philosophy of the bondman and the free? . . .

According to the usual etiquette, after entering the Royal Stand, her Majesty presented herself at its windows—surrounded by a brilliant Court—to receive and return the courtesies of the thousands who crowded to express their love and loyalty. This concluded, the sports commenced; and we will, for a space, leave the pageant for the professional portion of our detail.

The first news that awaited those who entered the official department was of a very distressing nature. John Day, jun., the trainer, whose run of good fortune has latterly been so remarkable, had been struck with delirium the preceding evening, and was said to be wholly divest of reason. He had sent, when his mind began to give way, for one of his masters, Sir Robert Pigott, the owner of Conyngham, and told him instantly to take precautions, as a body of ruffians was about to break into the stables. Sir Robert immediately sent to Colonel Rowan, and policemen were forthwith despatched from town, but it soon transpired that these fears were the hallucinations of an insanity, which, most probably, they had brought about. In character the racing was under the average of late years. It began with the Trial Stakes, which Prussic Acid won easily, followed by a Fifty Sovs Sweepstakes, won easily by Mr. Combe's colt, an animal with very queer fore-legs. This brought the Vase on the tapis, for which Mendicant was drawn. She has become the property of Sir Joseph Hawley, at a very spirited price. The Vase, a beautiful trophy, it will be seen, was won, after, apparently, a very close race, by The Hero. But old John Day's orders to his son, Alfred, who rode the horse, were, to draw it very fine, and the boy did as the father commanded. The Hero will be found a dangerous nag during the season—verb. sap. Another Sweepstakes of Fifty Sovs each being also carried off by Mr. Combe's colt, the Royal Party departed, among the same tokens of respect and attachment that had marked its arrival.

Conyngham won the Ascot Derby—in a dreadfully slow run race—and Red Hart the Welcome—in a form better certainly than he exhibited at Epsom. The Ascot Stakes, Woodpigeon, the worst fancied in the ring, won—though he ran out very suspiciously at the finish, and, had the post been a length or so further off, the result would have been different. Mr. Payne's Glendower cantered in first for the Two Year Old Stakes—with which the sport closed.

ASCOT RACES.—THE STEWARD'S STAND.

Wednesday—all breeze, and sunlight, and fragrance—failed to draw in the degree of its predecessor. Still, for the sportsman, it had its attractions: the sport was ample and excellent—but both too good and too great to admit of our presuming upon its details.

Thursday was the gala. A more exquisite sample of early summer never shed beauty over nature, or gladness over man's spirits. Long before the, the various avenues to the scene of festivity were thronged, and it was manifest that a brilliant anniversary of the Cup was at hand. Business, for once, was not the order even of the profession. You saw industrious —— taking his ease, with a posy in his button-hole; and hard hard-working —— discussing an ice and the small gossip of the hour. The list of the meeting was a bumper, and very large fields were left in. All promised an occasion of no ordinary interest; and the early comers strolled and stare i about—full of good hope.

At half-past one the Royal cortège entered the course, and passed up to the Royal Stand, greeted by the most loyal manifestations. At this moment the spectacle was one of surpassing interest. The whole heath was one panorama of brilliant company and equipages. Beyond all doubt the attendance was unprecedented in quantity—if not in quality. After the customary passages of courtesy between the Monarch and her devoted people, the first event was run for—the Queen's Plate—and won by Footstool. Then followed the most important race of the meeting—the New Stakes for Two Year Olds—this season peculiarly exciting from the great popularity of the favourite, Assault, one of Mr. Green's invincibles for next year's Derby. He frightened the field down to seven, and won in a canter, despite a very ugly looking hock. The Royal party then retired to lunch, and at three o'clock returned to the front, to see the Cup run for. A report prevailed that The Hero—now all the rage—had passed into other hands, but circumstances seem opposed to it.

As for the New Stakes, the magic number seven went for the Cup. How is the running to be told more truly than simply that, as soon as the flag fell, the He.o jumped off in front—led by several lengths by the Stand—made the pace good all the way, and finally won by a length with all ease. A more gallant performance was never seen on the turf. . . . . .

Her Majesty remained for two more races—the St. James's Palace Stakes—. very fine finish, won on the post by Montpensier; and the visitors' Plate, won by Footstool. The Court then left, amid the most enthusiastic cheers. The remainder of the running needs no more notice than that given by the returns.

Friday is in the same category: of it may be briefly said that it brought to a brilliant close the most brilliant anniversary yet celebrated of the Royal Meeting.

ASCOT RACES.—TUESDAY.

The presence of the Queen and Prince Albert gave éclat to the meeting to-day, and the attendance of visitors of the higher class was far more numerous than usual on the first day. Besides the distinguished per onages composing the party from Windsor Castle, there were present the Duke of Beaufort, the Duke of Rutland, the Duke of Montrose, the Marchioness of Ailesbury, the Marquis of Abercorn, the Marquis of Worcester, the Marquis of Exeter, the Earl and Countess of Wilton, the Earl of Mexborough, the Earl of Jersey, the Earl of Stradbroke, the Earl and Countess of Chesterfield, the Earl of Euston, the Earl of Bective, the Earl of Orford, the Earl and Countess of Eglinton, the Earl Brince, the Earl of Strafmore, the Earl of Uxbridge and Lady Adelaide Paget, the Earl of Longford, the Earl of Caledon, Viscount and Lady Elizabeth Lascelles, Viscount Canterbury, Viscount Castlerpe, Viscount and Viscountess Newport, Viscount Drumlanrig, Viscount Jocelyn, Viscount Somerton, Viscount and Viscountess Sydney, Viscount and Viscountess Seaham, Viscount Maidstone, Viscount Villiers, Lord George Bentinck, Lord Forester, Lord Macdonald, Lord Alexander Gordon Lennox, Lord Henry Gordon Lennox, Lord George Gordon Lennox, Lord Suffield, Lord Manners, Lord Edward Russell, Lord Gardner, Lord Henry Lennox, Lord Burghley, Lord Brownlow, Cecil Lord Paget, Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, Lord Stanley, Lord Charles Manners, Lord George Manners, Lord William Powlett, Lord F. Fitzroy; Hon. Col. and Mrs. Anson, Hon. Major Boyle, Capt. Rous, Hon. St. George Foley, Hon. J. Macdonald, Hon. W. Bagot, Hon. and Mrs. Barrington and the Hon. Miss Barrington, Hon. E. M. Mostyn, H G.S. Byng, Mr. Sandford and Lady Eleanor Graham, Mr. and Lady Blanche S Lowther, Sir W. W. Wynn, Sir J. Hawley, Sir R. Pigot, Sir R. Bulkeley, Sir H Mo ay, Sir W. M Stanley, Sir W. Codrington, Sir Gilbert Heathcote, General Wemy , Admiral Paulett, Colonel Peel, Colonel Knox, Colonel Bouverie, Colonel Stanley, Major Baring, Messrs Knightley, Balfour, A. Johnstone, R. Neill, Fitzroy, Greville, Rich, Bateson, Payne, J. Stanley, Shelley, Seymour, S Stanley, Bastard, Lowther, H Clayton, &c., &c.

The receipts at the Grand Stand were larger than they have been for some years past.

The Trial Stakes of 5 sovs each, with 50 added. New mile. 5 subs.

Lord Orford's Prussic Acid, 4 yrs	.. .. ..	(Nat) 1
Mr Mostyn's Absatis, 3 yrs	.. .. ..	(J. Evans) 2
Mr Hussey's Embrace, 3 yrs	.. .. ..	(Treen, jun.) 3

Prussic Acid made nearly all the running, at a bad pace, and won easily by a length Embrace beaten a head for second.

Sweepstakes of 50 sovs each, h ft. The second to save his stake. New mile. 6 subs.

Mr. Coombe's c by the Nob	.. .. ..	(Bartholomew) 1
Mr R. Boyce's Doctor Goodall	.. .. ..	(Robinson) 2
Mr Osbaldeston's f by Launcelot	.. .. ..	(Butler) 3

The Nob c. made all the running from end to end, and won easily by two lengths. Run in 1 min. 50 sec.

THE GOLD VASE given by her Majesty, added to a sweepstakes of 20 sovs each. Two miles. (9 Subs.)

Mr. J. Day's The Hero, 4 yrs. 9st 7lb	.. ..	..(A. Day) 1
Duke of Bedford's Bridle, 3 yrs, 6st 12lb	.. ..	(R. Pettit) 2
Lord Lonsdale's Jericho, 3 yrs, 8st 11lb	.. ..	(Bartholomew) 3

Jericho made running at a strong pace, followed by The Hero, Ellerdale third, and the others laid up, with the exception of Miles's Boy, who was out of the race in the first half mile. They ran without any change to the last turn, where Ellerdale gave way, and Bridle took her place. The Hero here joined Jericho, and Bridle going up immediately after, they singled themselves out at the stand, and raced home together: The Hero winning by a head, very little beating Jericho by a neck. Bingham a very bad fourth. Run in 3 min. 35 sec.

Sweepstakes of 50 Sova each; h ft. Old mile. (8 Subs.)

Mr. Coombe's c by the Nob	.. .. ..	(Bartholomew) 1
Mr. Mostyn's Cruiser	.. .. ..	(Nat) 2

The non-favourite made all the running, and won very easily by two lengths. Run in 1 min 49 sec

THE ASCOT DERBY Stakes of 50 Sovs each; h ft. Swinley Course. (16 Subs.)

Sir R Pigot's Conyngham	.. .. ..	..(A. Day) 1
Mr. Coombe's c by Sir Hercules	.. .. ..	(Bartholomew) 2

Won easily by a length. Run in 2 min 4 sec.

THE Welcome Stakes of 20 sovs each, with a bonus of 5 sovs each. Swinley Course. (22 Subs.), and 41 to the bonus only

Duke of Richmond's Red Hart	.. .. ..	.. (Nat) 1
Mr Mostyn's Swallow	.. .. ..	(J. Holmes) 2
Sir J Hawley's Miami	.. .. ..	(J. Marson) 3

Red Hart jumped off with the lead, followed by the Swallow, Miami third, and So Nice fourth. This lot kept the front to themselves to the turn into the Old Mile, where So Nice went up to Red Hart and ran with him to the road; she then gave way, and Red Hart, going on with the lead, kept it to the end, and won cleverly by a length, Swallow beating Miami by a length and a half. Run in 2 min. 4 sec.

The Ascot Stakes of 25 sovs each, 15 ft, and 5 only if declared, &c.; the second to receive 100 sovs out of the stakes, and the third 50. Two miles and a half. (195 subs, 91 of whom declared.)

Lord Exeter's Woodpigeon, 5 yrs. 7st 13lb	..	(S. Mann) 1
Duke of Richmond's Vampire, 3 yrs, 4st 12lb	..	(Treen, jun.) 2
Mr. Lilley's Glory, 4 yrs, 8st 10lb	..	(Dunman) 3
Mr. Combe's Sadar to The Nob, 4 yrs, 6st 9lb	..	(Dockeray) 4

A Sweepstakes of 50 sovs each, h ft; three quarters of a mile. (15 subs.)

Mr. Payne's Glendower	.. .. ..	(Nat) 1
Field-Marshal Grosvenor's Sir Oliver	.. .. ..	(J. Marson) 2
Duke of Richmond's Hornpipe	.. .. ..	(W. Abdale) 3

WEDNESDAY.

Sweepstakes of 50 sovs each, h ft. T.Y.C. (3 subs.)

Duke of Richmond's Reflection	.. .. ..	(Nat) 1
Lord Exeter's Sword Player	.. .. ..	(W. Abdale) 2

Reflection won by two lengths. Run in 1 min. 20 sec.

The Swinley Stakes of 20 sovs each, 15 ft, with 50 added. Swinley Course. (7 Subs.)

Mr. Pedley's Cossack, 3 yrs (A. Day), walked over, and Mr. Stephenson's Doctrine was drew her stake

The Fern Hill Stakes, of 15 sovs. each, 5 ft. with 50 added. One mile and a half. (14 Subs.)

Mr S Conway's Christopher, 3 yrs	.. ..	(F. Butler) 1
Mr. Drinkald's Good Boy, 3 yrs	.. ..	(A. Day) 2
Duke of Richmond's Hornpipe, 2 yrs	.. ..	(W. Abdale) 3

THE ROYAL HUNT CUP, value 200 sovs, with 100 added. One Mile. (37 Subs.)

Count Batthyany's Tragical, 4 yrs	.. ..	(W. Abdale) 1
Mr. Morley's Wintonia, 3 yrs	.. ..	(Hornby, jun.) 2
Lord Orford's Prussic Acid, 4 yrs	.. ..	(F. Butler) 3

Pam went off with the lead, followed by Gabbler, Tragical, and Patriot, the ruck laid up in a close but rather extended order. They ran in a line to the T.Y.C. post, where Tragical obtained the lead, having in attendance Dervishes, Good Cob, Don Cæsar, Jolly Dick, the filly out of Peaceflower's dam, Wintonia, and several others, Prussic Acid, who started in the rear, still lying off. They came thus to the stand, where Prussic Acid and Wintonia went up, headed Don Cæsar and Good Cob, and in a very near race for second Tragical winning by a neck. The same between second and third; Don Cæsar fourth and Good Cob fifth. Run in 1 min 45 sec.

The Coronation Stakes of 100 sovs each, h ft. New Mile. (14 Subs.)

Lord Exeter's Cossack	.. .. ..	(W. Abdale) 1
Sir J. Hawley's Miami	.. .. ..	(J Marson) 2

Betting: 2 to 1 on Miami. Cossack made all the running, and won rather cleverly by half a length. Run in 1 min. 51 sec.

The Windsor Stakes of 10 sovs each, with £100 added; the second to receive 50 sovs out of the stakes. One mile and three quarters. (71 Subs.)

Mr. Mostyn's Mr. Martin	.. .. ..	(J. Holmes) 1
Lord Orford's Ziska	.. .. ..	(F. Butler) 2
Mr. Fuller's Oxonian	.. .. ..	(Macdonald) 3

Sweepstakes of 10 sovs each, with 50 added. The winner to be sold for 300 sovs, &c. T.Y.C.

Mr Rolt's Bishop of Romford's Cob, aged	..	(E. Edwards) 1
Lord Exeter's Yeomen, 3 yrs	..	(W. Abdale) 2
Mr. Rolt's Evenus, aged	..	(Nat) 3

The Cob jumped off with the lead, made all the running, at a good pace, and won in a canter by two lengths. Run in 1 min. 16 sec. The winner was claimed. The Windsor Town Plate of 50 sovs. The winner to be sold for 100 sovs, &c. T.Y.C.

Lord Exeter's Tanais, 3 yrs	.. .. ..	(W. Abdale) 1
Mr. Rolt's Evenus, aged	.. .. ..	(E. Edwards) 2
Mr. Drinkald's Moodkee, 3 yrs	.. .. ..	(A. Day) 3

A very fine race, ran between the first four, and won by half a length, a neck between the second and third, and the same between the third and fourth. The winner claimed. Run in 1 min. 16 sec.

THURSDAY.

The Queen's Plate of 100 Guineas.

Footstool	.. ..	.. 1
Humdrum	.. ..	.. 2
Oliver Cromwell	.. ..	.. 3

The New Stakes.

Assault	.. ..	.. 1
Glendower	.. ..	.. 2
Tisiphone	.. ..	.. 3

Seven ran.—Won cleverly.

THE EMPEROR'S VASE.

The Hero	.. ..	.. 1
Wolf-Dog	.. ..	.. 2
Jericho	.. ..	.. 3
Mendicant	.. ..	.. 4

Seven ran.—Won cleverly.

FRIDAY.

Second Class of the Wokingham Stakes.

Bishop of Romford's Cob	.. ..	.. 1
African	.. ..	.. 2
The Widow	.. ..	.. 3

Ten ran. Won by two lengths.

Sweepstakes of 50 sovs each. New Mile.

Coningsby	.. ..	.. 1
Dr Goodall	.. ..	.. 2

First Class of the Wokingham Stakes.

Fic Nic	.. ..	.. 1
Milwood	.. ..	.. 2
The Cur	.. ..	.. 3

Ten ran.

The Great Western Plate of £350, &c.

Lady Wildair	.. ..	.. 1
Wood Pigeon	.. ..	.. 2
Patriot	.. ..	.. 3

Fourteen ran. Won by a length.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—We have gone through the formality of a quotation on the leading events at Ascot; but, lest it should lead to an idea that business is in a healthy state, we should add that it was dull in the extreme, and that it is likely to continue so until confidence is restored, which will not be on this side Goodwood:

ASCOT STAKES.

6 to 1 agst Humdrum	8 to 1 agst Gormand	12 to 1 agst Plaudit (t)
8 to 1 — Odessa filly	10 to 1 — Rydragnea	14 to 1 — Annandale
8 to 1 — Vampire	12 to 1 — Plantagenet

THE EMPEROR'S VASE.

6 to 5 agst Mendicant	7 to 1 agst Jericho	8 to 1 agst Feynton
6 to 1 — Sir Tatton Sykes	8 to 1 — Wolfdog

ST. LEGER.

7 to 2 agst Cossack	25 to 1 agst Swallow	33 to 1 agst Wolfdog
	40 to 1 agst Lincolnne

THURSDAY.—No betting.

THE HENLEY REGATTA.—The Henley Regatta is fixed for the 17th and 18th of this month. In addition to the cups usually contested for, the Stewards have lately had one placed at their disposal, by G. D. Donkin, Esq., which they have appropriated to the winner of the trial heats for the grand cup on the first day, if unsuccessful in the final contest.

ROYAL HARWICH YACHT CLUB. The annual regatta at Harwich has been fixed for Monday and Tuesday the 5th and 6th of July—Ipswich horse-races falling on the preceding Friday and Saturday. Six cups are to be sailed for at Harwich, open to all Royal Yacht Clubs

CRICKET. The match, Marylebone Club and Ground against Surrey, was terminated on Wednesday, when Marylebone won by four wickets.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Sphynx."—Too simple for publicity.

"J. A. K." Exeter.—If the two absurd positions sent were intended as a jest, they make a very dull one; and if, in sober re ality, "J. A. K." thought them suitable for publication, then, indeed, he has read the Chess column of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS to little purpose.

"R. W." Manchester.—Omit the 14th move on each side, and the Game, then, is perfectly correct.

"Cuca." The Matches in question will all be found in Volume 7 of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle." Mr. Witcomb's translation of Lewis's last Treatise may be got of any leading Foreign Bookseller.

"W. W." The position sent is original. It has been repeatedly published.

"A. L."—Hardly complex enough. Some of your former attempts were much superior.

"J. C. X."—Our solution is elegant and satisfactory; whether there is, or is not, another, is of little importance; and we must submit yours to the author, not having time or space for controversy upon so trivial a matter.

"W. H. C."—See the reply to Cuca, to "J. C. X." Your solutions are correct.

"W. F." Both solutions are correct.

"G. A. H."—The law is precisely the same with regard to suicidal Problems as to ordinary ones.

"Philo-Chess."—"Britannia."—"F. W. N."—Nothing will afford us greater pleasure than to find that the reconciliation alluded to has the effect of producing another Match. If Mr. Smart desires an opportunity for retrieving his laurels, he may be assured it will not be denied him.

"D. C."—Thanks. It shall have an early place.

"B. S. W."—The late Problem will appear next week.

"Echecs," York.—They shall both be reported on in the following Number. Solutions by "Sopraccita," "G. A. H.," "W. H. C.," "G. E.," "J. F. K.," "T. M.," "G. P.," "F. W. P." "W. F." and "D. C." are correct. Those by "Styk," "A. Z.," and "Philo-Chess," are wrong.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

(HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.)

No. 154.

The following interesting position occurred in play to Herr Standigl last week.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE	BLACK.
K at K 2nd	K at Q sq	Kt at K R 3rd	Ps at K R 4th, Q
Q at K Kt 5th	Q at Q 3rd	Kt at K Kt sq	4th and 6th, Q
R at K sq	R at Q B sq	Ps at K R 4th, Q 2nd	Kt 3rd, and Q
R at Q B sq	R at K B 2nd	and 4th, Q Kt 2nd,	R 2nd
B at K Kt 3rd	Kts at K Kt 5th,	and Q R 2nd
B at Q R 4th	and K 2nd

Black, M. Standigl, had now to play, and he gave mate in five moves.

No. 155.—By S. O. H. C., of Cork.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK
K at K 3 8th	R at K 1 3rd	P at K 1 4th
R at Q R 6th	Ps at K B 4th and	White to play, and mate in
B at Q Kt 6th	K 3rd	five moves.

No. 156.—By Mr. S. BODEN, of Hull.

This position, which is perfectly analogous to one that lately occurred to Mr. Boden in play, is a novel and instructive example of "mat etouffé."

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at K Kt sq	K at his sq	Kts at K 6th and Q B	B at Q 4th
Q at her B 7th	Q at K Kt 6th	5th	Kt at Q Kt 4th
R at K sq	R at Q sq	P at K Kt 2nd	Ps at K Kt 4th, K
R at Q R 7th	R at Q 2nd		B 2nd, K 2nd,
B at K R 7th	B at K B sq		and Q 3rd

White playing first, gives mate in five moves.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, No. 174.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q takes Kt	K to his 5th (best) a	4. Kt takes Kt (ch)	K to his 4th
2. Q to K 5th	K takes Q	5. Q P two—Mate.
3. Kt to Q 7th (ch)	K to his 5th

(a) If K takes Q or is played to Q B 2nd, mate follows in 3 moves.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, No. 175.

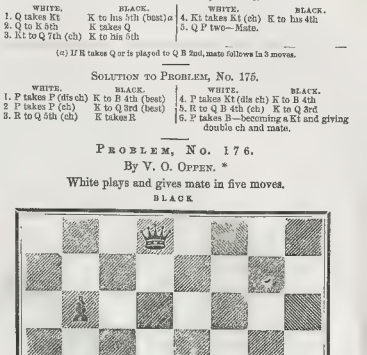
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. P takes P (dis ch)	K to B 4th (best)	4. P takes Kt (dis ch)	K to B 4th
2. P takes P (ch)	K to Q 3rd (best)	5. R to Q B 4th (ch)	K to Q 3rd
3. R to Q 5th (ch)	K takes R	6. P takes B—becoming a Kt and giving double ch and mate.

PROBLEM, No. 176.

By V. O. OPPEN. *

White plays and gives mate in five moves.

BLACK



WHITE

From the Berlin Schach Zeitung.

CONSULTATION GAME.

The following smart specimen of the King's Bishop's Gambit was played last week at the London Chess Club, by Messrs G. Walker and Medley, consulting against Messrs. Pelgiad and Von Carnap.

WHITE. (Messrs. W. & M.)	BLACK. (Messrs. P. & C.)	WHITE. (Messrs. W. & M.)	BLACK. (Messrs. P. & C.)
1. K P two	K P two	16. Q B takes P	Q to K Kt 3rd (b)
2. K B P two	P takes P	17. P to K 6th	P takes P
3. K B to Q B 4th	Q checks	18. Kt takes Q B P	P to K 4th (c)
4. K to B sq	K Kt P two	19. Kt to K 6th ch (d)	K to K sq (e)
5. Q Kt to B 3rd	K B to Kt 2d	20. Q to her 6th	B takes Kt
6. Q P two	Q P one	21. B takes B	K Kt to K 2nd
7. K Kt to B 3d	Q to K 4th	22 B takes K P	B takes B
8. P to K 4th	P to Q 3rd	23. Q takes B	Q to K R 3rd
9. P to K 5th	P takes P	24. Q R to Q sq	Q Kt to Q R 3rd
10. Q Kt to Q 5th	K to Q sq	25. B to Q 7th (ch)	K to Q sq (f)
11. Q P takes K P	B to Q 2nd	26. B to Q R 4th, dis ch (g)	K to Q B sq
12. K to Kt sq	Q to K Kt 3rd	27. Q takes K Kt	Q to her Kt 3rd, ch
13. P takes K Kt P	P takes P	28. K to B sq	Kt to Q B 4th
14. R. takes B	B takes R	29. R to Q sq	Kt takes B
15. K Kt takes P (a)	Q takes K Kt	And White mates in six moves.

(a) This assertion is invented by Petroff, who has very elaborately and skilfully analysed the numerous variations. M'Donnell suggested playing Q to K square, to which Black's answer should be K B to K Kt second and third.

(b) His best move. If he play Q to B fourth, or Q to K Kt 6th, or Q to K Kt second, White has a tri ! better attack.

(c This gives a move for move according to the analysis given in the Books.

(d) The best play according to Petroff and Jaenisch is Kt takes B.

(e) This was forgetfulness. K to K second is the m ve which wins

(f) The other side is more speedily fatal. (g) R to Q B sixth is stronger we think.

GAME BETWEEN MR. HORWITZ AND AN AMATEUR OF THE LONDON CHESS CLUB.

(In this admirably-contested struggle, Mr. H. gives his Q's Rook, which must be removed from the board.)

WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. M.)	WHITE (Mr. H.)	BLACK (Mr. M.)
1. K P two	K P two	25. R to K B sq	Q Kt P one (b)
2. K B P two	P takes P	26. K to R 2nd	Kt takes K B
3. K B to Q B 4th	Q checks	27. Q R P takes Kt	K to Kt 2nd (c)
4. K to B sq	K Kt P two	28. Kt takes Q B P	Kt to K 6th
5. Q Kt to B 3rd	K B to Kt 2nd	29. B takes Kt	Q takes Kt
6. Q P two	Q P one	30. B to K B 4th	Q to her B 3rd
7. K P one	P takes P	31. Kt to Q 4th	Q to K Kt 3rd
8. Kt to Q 5th	K to Q sq	32. Q B P two	Q R to Q sq
9. P takes P	Q B to Q 2nd	33. Q to her 2nd (d)	K R to K 2nd
10. K Kt to B 3rd	Q to K R 3rd	34. Q to K B 2nd	Q R to K sq
11. K R P two	K Kt P one	35. Q Kt P one	Q to K B 3rd
12. K Kt to his 5th	Q to K Kt 3rd	36. Q Kt P one	K R P two
13. Q B takes P	Q to Q B 3d	37. Q to K Kt 2nd (ch)	K R to K 8th
14. Q Kt to K 3d (a)	K Kt to R 3d	38. Kt to Q Kt 3rd	B to K B 4th
15. K P one	P takes P	39. B to K Kt 5th	Q to K 4th
16. Kt takes P (ch)	K to Q B sq	40. Kt to Q 2nd (e)	K to Q B sq
17. Kt takes B	Q takes B	41. Kt takes R	B takes Kt
18. K Kt to R 5th	Q to K R 3d	42. Q to her 2nd	B to K B 6th
19. Kt to K 3d	K R to B sq	43. Kt to K B 2nd	R t. K 3rd
20. Q to Q 6th	Q Kt to Q 3rd	44. B to K B 4th	Q to K 4th
21. K Kt to K 2d	K Kt to K B 4th	45. Q to her 4th	R to K 7th
22 K Kt P one	K R to K sq	46 R takes R	B takes R
23. K R P one	Q Kt to K 4th	47. Q to her 6th, and wins.
24. K B to Kt 3d	Q to Q B 3d

(a) Wh te plays with unusual caution in this game.

(b) Black might have gained a piece by taking the B with Kt, and then K Kt with K Rook.

(c) Again, " K takes R" appears an obviously advantageous move.

(d) Having in view to check presently at K Kt 2nd.

(e) This is al. very sound play indeed. White now threatens to win a piece.

THE LAST RELIC OF CAXTON'S HOUSE.

To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

SIR,—You are, doubtless, aware that the Printing-house of the famous Caxton, that stood for many centuries in the Almonry, at Westminster, has met the fate which awaits too many other structures dear to the antiquary's heart—and has come to the ground.

The old edifice was composed (in popular phraseology) of "lath and plaster," with the exception of one beam of wood which formed its main support. The beam in question, I am happy to say, was immediately purchased by a gentleman, highly distinguished for his antiquarian researches, who resides in the neighbourhood, and who is justly proud of having availed himself of the opportunity afforded for becoming the preserver of so interesting a relic. As an appropriate memorial of the old typographer's first labour in this country,* he has had a Chess-board and two sets of Chess-men made from the beam.

The men are extremely beautiful. The Pawns are about an inch in height, and the pieces lofty in proportion; the Rooks, Bishops, and Knights being minutely and elaborately carved in the old style; and the owner has, with good taste, left them unvarnished, so that the spectator can at once perceive the great age of the wood. The Chess-board is of a size adapted to the men, and is left uncoloured also, the squares being indicated by lines cut in the wood; while it is ornamented with a margin, on which, in raised letters, is a description of the circumstances under which it was made.

Trusting this brief communication may prove a precursor to a more detailed description of these interesting "remembrancers" from the pen of the accomplished possessor himself,

I subscribe myself, Sir, yours obediently,

C. R. L., an occasional Contributor to your Chess Column.

* This was "The Game and Playe of the Chesse," 1474, folio, pp 144, a translation of the work of Jacobus de Cessolis from the French of Jehan de Vignay, and generally be lieved to be the first book printed in England Three years before, while acting for our English merchants in Holland, Caxton translated from the French "The Recuyell of the Hist ries of Troye," which was printed at Ghent, and was undoubtedly the first work printed in the English language.—ED

GRAND MILITARY BAZAAR.—In our account of the Bazaar held at the Regent's-park Barracks, we omitted to particularise the stall of the Baroness Lionel de Rothschild, which was one of the very best in the Bazaar. It was arranged and attended to by herself, and cost several hundred pounds.

OUR MAGAZINE COLUMN FOR JUNE.

THE REVERIE

Mr. Carker, the Manager, rose with the lark, and went out, walking in the summer day His meditations and he meditated with contracted brows while he strolled along—hardly seemed to soar as high as the lark, or to mount in that direction: rather duly kept close to their nest upon the earth, and looked about, among the dust and worms. But there was not a bird in the air, singing unseen, farther beyond the reach of human eye than Mr. Carker's thoughts. He had his face so paris ely under control, that few could say more, in distinct terms, of its expression, than that it smiled or that it pondered. It pondered now, to tently As the lark rose higher, he sank deeper in thought. As the lark poured out her melody clearer and stronger, he fell into a graver and profounder silence. At length, when the lark came head-long down, with an accumulating stream of song, and dropped among the green wheat near h.m, rippling in the breath of the morning like a rivulet, he sprang up from his reverie, and looked round with a sudden smile, as courteous and as soft as if he had had numerous observers to propitiate; nor did he relapse, after being thus awakened; but cleaning his face, like one who belonged h mself that it might otherwise wrinkle and tell tales, went smiling on, as if for practice. Dombey and Son.

THE SECOND-CLASS RAILWAY PASSENGER.

He arrived at the station in an omnibus, and hath but small effects. He keeptth his money in a leather bag, and weareth remarkable gloves, whose fingers are long, so that it is a matter of some difficulty to take go d hold of change with them from the clerk's desk. He respecteth the po.iceman. He struggleth to sit "with his back to the horses," as he facetiously terneth the engine, and is great in rugs and comforters, and coats with mighty rows of pearl buttons. He buyeth a Man in the Moon, and getteth jolly thereon, albeit he doth not understand all the allusions. If he be of a jocose turn of mind, he talketh an old lady near him, that when they want the engine to go very fast, they put pig-iron and water in the boiler. On Monday afternoon, in the down train, he knoweth every field along the line, and who it belongs to; and speaketh much of turnips and drills. When the guard, whistling, approaching the terminus, ad esseth him the customary remarkeh, "Oh dear, you're very bad, sin't you?" He carreth his luggage from the train himself, and goeth home in a spring cart, or to a commercial inn. The Man in the Moon.

DID YOU EVER——?

Did you ever ride in an omnibus in which there was not a fat woman ?

Did you ever read "Paradise Lost" right through from the first to the last line ?

Did you ever come across a plous cabman ?

Did you ever see any chance of Lord George Bentinck becoming an eminent statesman ?

Did you ever know a policeman who had "conscientious scruples against taking an oath" ?

Did you ever know a "mistake" in a tradesman's bill to his own disadvantage?

Did you ever hear of a debate in the House of Lords in which, if Lord Brougham was present, he did not speak ?

Did you ever derive a very clear idea from this line—of frequent occurrence in Parliamentary reports—"Mr. So-and-so explained."

Did you ever get to the bottom of the sixth tumbler of toddy without feeling an inclination to talk about poetry and metaphysics ?

Did you ever meet an uncommonly dreary Tuesday man who had not taken high honours? The Man in the Moon.

VANITY OF LETTERS

Perhaps, in Vanity Fair there are no better satires than letters. Take a bundle of your dear friend's of ten years back—your dear friend whom you hate now. Look at a file of your slater's. how you clung to each other till you quarrelled about the money found anyhow! Get down the round-hand and sentimental to the man who has half broken your heart with selfish undnufulness since, or a parcel of your own, breathing endless ardour and love eternal, which were sent back by your mistress when she married the Major—your mistress for whom you now care no more than for Queen Elizabeth. Vows, love, promises, confidences, gratitude, how queerly they read after a while! There ought to be a law in Vanity Fair, ordering the destruction of every written document (except receipted tradesmen's bills), after a certain brief and proper interval. Those quacks and misantnropes who advertise indelible Japan ink, should be made to perish along with their wicked compositions. The best ink for Vanity Fair use would be one that faded utterly in a couple of days, and left the paper clean and blank, so that you might write on it to somebody else. Vanity Fair.

LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS.

It was autumn the balmiest autumn ever—that, and a setting sun!—a time when even London air—where plodding trade engrosses man's whole life—tastes of the richness of the country, and all things wear a peaceful, hopeful holiday! I have walked through Lincoln's Inn Fields with half the charms of rustic nature full upon me; and, looking upward (bear this, ignorant, uncharitable Frenchmen), have gazed into a heaven of unclouded blue—a blue as intense as the colour can be imagined; and within the iron railings of some London squares the small tree may be supplied with so much palpable fast that it needs but the most ordinary exercise of the imaginative faculty to believe oneself some hundred miles away from the metropolis, and on a spot where Nature's witchery has been employed with her fairest loveliness. Borrow the key of Lincoln's Inn Gardens and judge the truth of this. The sun had dropped below London's horizon, and gorgeous purple and copper-coloured streaks were shooting from behind the dark cloud, which (they stirred and by as though they had some great sadness at heart) eood mournfully, while they twirled themselves round as if they were commencing a game of blindman's buff, preparatory to the commencement of a night's dance. Before its mutton heart, expanded a huge nest of happiness. Happiness! Yes, throughout the choicest streets where pampered luxury needs three footmen behind its carriage, the superficial observer may detect happiness. Even in Saffron Hill, Gilee's Gaffron Hill, and countless unions, and, knowing this, Justice drops her scales and dons black crape despairingly. -From the Disgrace to the Family, by W. B. Jerrold, No. 1.

CENT. PER CENT

Cent. per Cent. was "at home" in the neighbourhood of St. James's—Jermyn-street is named, and it is certain that no street in the parish, Cent. per Cent. lived in Jermyn-street. Noblemen have been known to visit him there, and in less than eighteen months to bestow upon him the finest trees on their estates, which he sold to the timber-merchants. In what line of business Cent. per Cent. carried on that members of the class, known conventionally as the highest in the kingdom, have paid rent for their own mansions to Cent. per Cent. Ah, if we might estimate his character from this circumstance, how grand, how noble, and illustrious examples of the English nation voluntarily assigning to Cent. per Cent. the exalted position of landlord. Cent. per Cent. landlord to a Duke. The picture is unique. Douglas Jerrold's Shilling Magazine.

THOMAS CROMWELL.

This tool came originally from a journeyman's shop in Putney, of whom it has since been said that he was a sharp file, who would cut right through a difficulty, while Cranmer was active enough in hammering away at a point, but h.s hitting the right nail upon the head was generally very dubious. The father of Cromwell did smiths' work in genera., but nothing at all in particular, for he had amassed a decent fortune His son was sent as a clerk to a factory at Antwerp, where he learnt the books; but he soon showed that he had no taste for the life of cutting a figure. He entered the army, and was present when Rome was made a bed of ruins, by getting a complete sacking. He next entered the counting-house of a merchant of Venice, who dealt in Venetian blinds and looking-glasses, but young Cromwell soon threw up the one and indignantly laid down the other. On arriving in London, he commenced the study of the law, and took chambers in Inner Temple-lane, which were at that early period, a grand resort for all of acute ability. Wolsey, who had lodgings over the gate hard by, was in the habit of messing Cromwell, who eventually became what is professionally termed "the devil" of that ingenious and learned body. Cromwell was also a great favourite of Skelton's, the hair dressers, who Lave preserved a series of interesting historical documents, among which may be seen Wolsey's first brief, and other curious relics.—The Comic History of England.

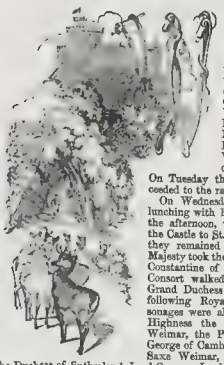
LANDING OF JULIUS CESAR IN BRITAIN.

In the still depth of midnight did the measured tramp of Roman infantry ring upon the silence, as they strode inland towards the heart of Kent, and beside those old forests and rocky mountains was the hearty tread of Cesar's cavalry heard; the rattle of their mail, and the jingling of their harness, broken by the short answers of the scouts as they rode hastily in and out, announcing a clear course, or with low obeisance receiving the commands of the general. We may picture some poor peasant startled from his sleep by that armed throng, dragged out of his watlled hut by the side of the wild forest, and rudely handled by the Roman soldiers, because he either refused to fly, or was ignorant of the position his countrymen had taken up. We may picture the herdsman hurrying his flocks into the forest fastnesses as he heard that solemn and distant tramp coming like subdued thunder upon the night-breeze, or unlike the wild shouts and angry imagled rolling of his own war-chariots, amid which the voices of women and children were ever mingled; so solemn, deep, and orderly would march along these well-defined forests, contrasted with the irregular movements of the Britons.—From the Picturesque and Popular History of England, by T. Miller, Part 1.

HOLIDAY DINNERS.

I have always, ever since I was a child, made it a solemn duty to observe, with the greatest strictness, all the feasts which have been ordained by our venerable mother church. Thank goodness, I can lay my head on my pillow at night in safety say. I have never allowed a single year to pass over my head without partaking with great devotion and extreme relish of the plum-pudding and mince-pie of Christmas, the pancake of Shrove Tuesday (prince by the splendid gin), or eats just mar ranta,

ST. GEORGE'S CHAPEL, WINDSOR.—ROYAL VISIT.



WINDSOR CASTLE has during the past week, been a scene of truly Royal splendour; her Majesty having invited the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, the Hereditary Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Saxe Weimar, the Prince of Lucca, Prince George, the Prince of Leiningen, and Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar, to the festivities of "the Ascot week."

On Tuesday the illustrious party proceeded to the races.

On Wednesday, her Majesty, after lunching with her illustrious visitors in the afternoon, walked with them from the Castle to St. George's Chapel, where they remained nearly an hour. Her Majesty took the arm of the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, and the Prince Consort walked with the Hereditary Grand Duchess of Saxe Weimar. The following Royal and illustrious personages were also present:—His Royal Highness the Grand Duke of Saxe Weimar, the Prince of Lucca, Prince George of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe Weimar, and Prince Leiningen, the Duchess of Sutherland, Lord Camoys, Lord Alfred Paget, Viscount Sidney, the Honourable A. N. Hood, Honourable Miss Dawson, and several other ladies and gentlemen in attendance on the illustrious foreigners.

On entering the Chapel at the cloister door, the Royal and illustrious party were received by the Hon. and Very Reverend the Dean of Windsor, who conducted them into the choir. The Queen took her seat in one of the stalls of the Military Knights, and pointed out to the Duke Constantine the various banners of the Knights of the Most Ancient and Noble Order of the Garter, which are suspended over their respective stalls on each side of the choir.

Her Majesty afterwards accompanied her Royal visitors to the nave, where they inspected the Beaufort Chapel, the cenotaph erected to the memory of the Princess Charlotte, and the great west window; returning through the Choir, they visited the Chapel built by Sir Reginald Bray, and afterwards inspected the Queen's Closet.

During the time the Royal party were in the Chapel, several fine compositions of Rink's, including his arrangement of the National Anthem, were performed on the organ by Herr Carl Kloss.

On leaving the Chapel, the Royal party returned to the Castle by the Norman Gateway.

The Collegiate Chapel of St. George stands in the centre of the Lower Castle Ward. A Chapel dedicated to St. George, for the service of the Order of the Garter, was erected at Windsor, by Edward the Third; but the present edifice was begun by Edward the Fourth, and was not completed until after the commencement of the sixteenth century. It is one of the most beautiful specimens of ornamental pointed architecture in this country.

Mr. Jesse tells us:—

"Bishop Beauchamp and Sir Reginald Bray were Edward's architects at Windsor. The arms of the former remain to this day as they were left cut in the masonry of this tasteful edifice, while the name of the latter survives in the little transept or chapel which bears his name and crest. The vaulting of the Choir was wrought and set up by John Hylmor and William Vertue, freemasons, who undertook it by Christmas, 1506. Beauchamp died in 1481, King Edward IV. in 1483, and Bray in 1503.

"This is a most valuable edifice for study—'but care must be taken,' says Rickman, 'to distinguish between the ancient work and the modern restorations or additions, which include the altar-screen, some of the work of the stalls, the organ-screen, the front, and several smaller parts. The west end of this Chapel,' he adds, 'is a very fine specimen of a large perpendicular window.' There are fifteen lights in three divisions.

"The exterior is more beautiful in parts than as a whole; it looks long and broken-backed—a defect more than atoned for, however, by the exquisite beauty of its windows and detail. If it wants the symmetrical proportions of King's College Chapel, at Cambridge, or the gorgeous fret-work of Henry VII.'s Chapel, at Westminster, it affords, in the beauty of its component parts, better material for study than either. King's College Chapel is of the reign of Henry VI., St. George's Chapel of the reign of Edward IV., and Henry VII.'s Chapel was built in the reign of that Monarch as his own mausoleum."

"The interior is divided, by a screen and organ-gallery, into two distinct parts—the Body of the Chapel, and the Choir. These again have aisles on each side, with five distinct Chapels and a Chapter House, abutting, at equal distances, from the main building. Two of these Chapels supply the place of transepts—the remaining three, and the Chapter House, form corresponding abutments at each angle of the edifice.

"The Choir is fitted up with the Stalls and Banners of the Knights of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, much in the same way as the Chapel of Henry VII., at Westminster, is fitted up with the Stalls and Banners of the Knights of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath. Each Knight has his banner, helmet, lambrequin, crest, and sword: the dead have mementos only in their armorial bearings. Several of these Stall-plates appertain to the Knights Founders of the Order; and all are curious.

"The Sovereign's Stall is immediately on your right as you enter the Choir; the Prince of Wales's on your left.

"On the north side of the Choir, close to the Altar, is the Queen's Closet or Pew.

"The great Painted Window at the east end, in three compartments, was designed by Benjamin West, P.R.A., and executed by Messrs. Jarvis and Forest, the subject 'The Resurrection.' The Altar-piece is by West, to whom we owe the designs for the east window of each aisle."

Altogether, the exquisite proportions of the interior, the richly-decorated roof, the painted windows, the banners and escutcheons of the Knights of the Garter overhanging their carved stalls, alike impress the mind with a sense of beauty, and powerfully seize upon the imagination.

The great objects of interest in this Chapel, beyond its exquisite architecture, are the tombs of the illustrious dead interred within its walls. Edward IV. is buried here, beneath the steel tomb attributed to Quintin Matsys. Henry VI. lies under a plain marble, in the opposite aisle. Henry VIII., and Charles I., are entombed under the Choir. At the foot of the altar is a subterranean passage communicating with the tomb-house, in which George III, George IV., William IV., and others of the present Royal family, are interred. In the nave is Wyatt's marble cenotaph of the Princess Charlotte.

THE ROYAL VISIT TO CAMBRIDGE.—This auspicious occasion is now drawing near, and the elements of preparation are not idle. Among other arrangements on a liberal scale, those that are making for the horticultural fête deserve preference. The installation of his Royal Highness will take place at the Senate-house, and, on the evening of that day, it is understood that a splendid fête will be given in the grounds of Magdalene College, by the Hon. and Rev. the Master (Neville Grenville) Dean of Windsor. On the previous day (Monday), it is expected that her Majesty and the Prince will honour the Vice-Chancellor by dining with him, in the hall; and that, on the evening of the same day, her Majesty will hold a Drawing-room, at Trinity-lodge.

MR. O'CONNELL'S WILL.—It is said that the whole of the landed property in Kerry, including Derrynane Abbey, and the town residence in Merrion-square, Dublin, have been bequeathed to Mr. Maurice O'Connell, M.P. Mr. Daniel O'Connell, jun., is left £5000, being part of a policy of insurance effected upon the life of his father. The name of Mr. Morgan O'Connell, who is already handsomely provided for in the Prerogative Court, is not, it is added, mentioned in the will.

MUSIC.

CONCERTS OF THE WEEK.

CONCERT OF ANCIENT MUSIC.—The Queen Dowager, the Duchess and Princess Mary of Cambridge, the Duchess of Gloucester, and the Duke of Cambridge, were present at the fifth Concert, on Wednesday night; Earl Howe being the Director. The pieces performed for the first time at these meetings, were Purcell's fine Anthem, "O sing unto the Lord" (1685); Luca Marenzio's Madrigal, "Spring returns;" Orlando di Lasso's Madrigal, "Ye Nightingales, so pleasant and so gay;" an air, by V. Martini, from "L'Arbore di Diana," sung by Mdme Caradori Allan; Boleldieu's air, "Quel plaisir d'etre en voyage," from "Jean de Paris," sung by Mdme. Dorus Gras; the trio, "Lessons of Love," by Daleyrac and the finale to the third act of Mozart's "Il Seraglio." Blagrove played Gemiani's fifth Violin Concerto. Handel's "Esther" overture; Webbe's glee, "When winds breathe soft;" John Benet's Madrigal, "All creatures now are merry-minded;" and a selection from Beethoven's "Mount of Olives," were included in the scheme. The vocalists were Mdme. Dorus Gras, Mdme. Caradori Allan, Miss S. Novello, Herr Staudigl, Herr Pischek, Messrs. Lockey, Barnby, Machin, and Peck. The selection was interesting in many respects. The next Concert will be on the 16th, under the direction of the Earl of Cawdor.

EXETER HALL.—Handel's "Alexander's Feast" and Mendelssohn's "First Walpurgi's Night" were performed on Monday night by Hullah's Singing Classes, aided by Willy's orchestra, and Messrs. Manvers and Phillips and Misses Birch and Deyal as principal vocalists. These works were creditably executed on the whole, although the Mendelsschnian difficulties were almost too much for the raw recruits.

M. WILLMERS.—The executive power of this pianist was exhibited at a second matinée musicale, on Monday, at Willis's Rooms. We think that his style is wanting in charm: those amateurs who, however, delight in the wonderful, seem to revel in his digital achievements. He was aided by the clever flautist Signor Ciardi, and the violoncellist Schepanowski, and by Benedict in Thalberg's noisy "Norma" duo for two pianos. Mdlle. Molina de Mendi, a cousin of Malibran and of Visrdot Garcia, sang the cavatina from the "Sonnambula," brilliantly Signor Salvator Tamburini, son of the great artist, also distinguished himself in a duo with Signor Marcolini. Pilotti was the accompanyist.

MADAME JULIETTE FORESTIER.—This lady is a pianiste and composer of some pretensions. She gave a soirée on Monday, and afforded evidence of considerable ability. There was no end to the irregularities in the order of the programme, in which figured the names of Madame de Lozano, Madame Hennelle, Signori Marcolini, Montelli, and Mecatti, Mdlle. Brocard, Herr Ehrmann, the violoncellist, &c. Pilotti and Biletta were the conductors.

MRS. ANDERSON.—The annual morning concert of this much esteemed pianiste, passed off brilliantly, her playing being deservedly applauded for its classical style. Costa conducted a well selected orchestra. Solos were played by Joachim (violin), Ciardi (flute), Godefroid (harp), and Piatti (violoncello). Sainton executed, with Mrs. Anderson, a Beethoven sonata for violin and piano. The Distin Family played on the Sax horns to perfection. The vocalists were Mdme. Dorus Gras, Mdme. Castellan, Mdme. Knapel, Mdlle Brocard, Miss Bassano, Miss Kirkham, Signori Gardoni, R. Costa, and Lablache: Herrn Staudigl and Pischek the first appearances of the latter this season.

M. JULES SCHULHOFF.—This very clever pianist combines a poetical style as well as extraordinary execution. At his soirée, his "Allegro" dedicated to Chopin, and imitative of the peculiar school of writing of the latter, was finely rendered. A Nocturne in A flat, and an "Etude de Concert," were also elegant compositions—elegantly performed. The brothers Heilmesberger, violinists, M. Oberthur, harpist; and the Misses Pyne, the Misses Williams, Miss Bassano, Mdlle. Vera, Mrs. Macfarren, and Mr. Bodda, aided in the scheme, Benedict, Vera, and Kuhe being the accompanyists.

MR. WILSON.—This admirable interpreter of the songs of Scotland commenced a new selection from the ditties of the Ettrick Shepherd, on Monday last, with his usual success.

MUSICAL CHIT-CHAT.

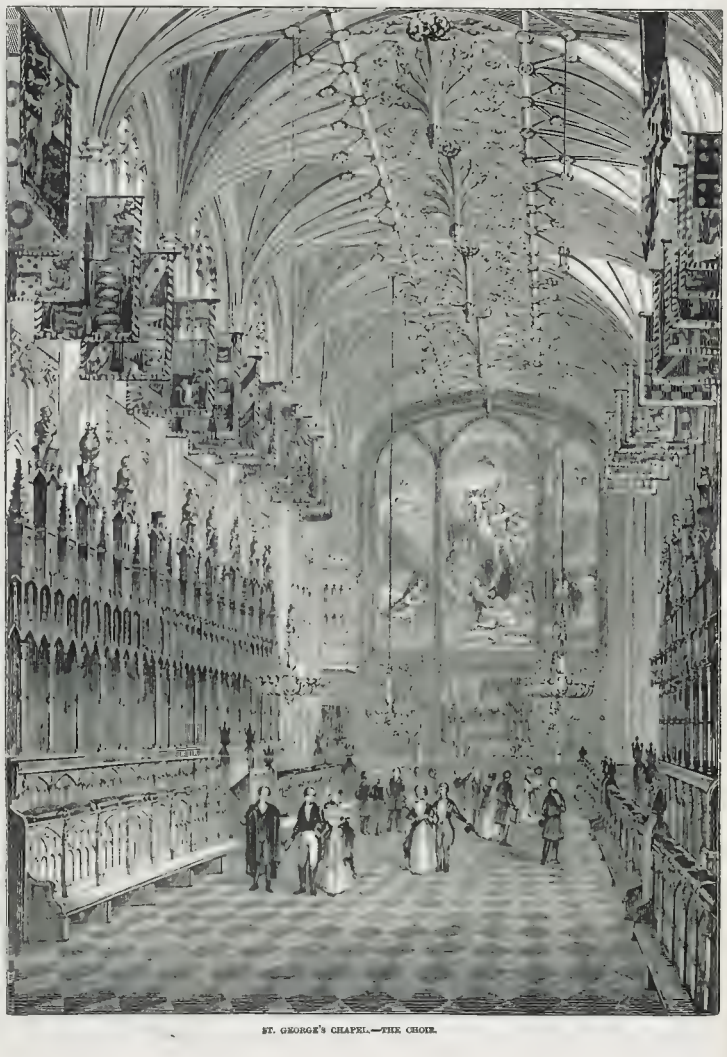
This morning, rehearsal of the seventh Philharmonic Concert, for Monday next, and Madame Mortier de Fontaine's Concert. On Tuesday, the sixth Meeting of the Musical Union; and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Seguin's Morning Concert. On Wednesday evening, Mr. H. Blagrove's Concert. On Saturday, the third Concert of the Pupils of the Royal Academy of Music. The seventh meeting of the Beethoven Quartet Society was on Monday last; Sainton, Joachim (alternating the first and second violins), Hill, and Rousselot, being the executants. On the same evening, the Amateur Musical Society gave their final performance. Mr. Gerhard Taylor gives a Harp Recital next Thursday evening; and in the morning, Mr. Sterndale Sennett gives his Annual Concert. On Friday morning, Madame Dulcken's annual Concert will take place. The Choral Fund annual Concert was given last night (Friday) at the Hanover-square Rooms. Vieuxtemps has left London for Germany. Joachim is gone to Dublin, and will play on Monday next at Liverpool. He will return to perform at the Musical Union on Tuesday, with Schuloff, the Bohemian pianist.

FOREIGN MUSICAL NEWS. We noticed, some time since, what the reigning Duke Ernest of Saxe Coburg, brother of Prince Albert, had produced an opera at Gotha, founded on Voltaire's tragedy of "Zaire." We now learn that it was represented at Berlin on the 23rd ult., at the Grand Opera, with immense success. Taglioni has been creating a sensation in Munich. Mendelssohn has just lost his sister, Madame Hensel, of Berlin, an accomplished amateur. Mozart's "Don Juan," has been produced with much enthusiasm at Warsaw. Mendelssohn's "Antigone" is to be got up at Athens. Two more aspirants for the vacant premiership of the Paris Académie Royale de Musique have been tried—Mdme. Beasim in "Lucie di Lammermoor" and Mdme. Betty in Valentine in the "Huguenots;" the former was a failure, the latter but a moderate success. Bordas gains ground as the Tenor, and Alizard as the Basso is much liked. Dupres was to reappear in a month. Mdme. Stoltz has gone to Italy at last. Vatel, the Director of the Italian Opera in Paris, had returned from London, having engaged, for the season 1847-1848, Grisi, Persiani, Corbari, Mario, and Ronconi, now at the Royal Italian Opera, and Gardoni and Lablache from Her Majesty's Theatre. An Italian Opera at Versailles is in progress.

THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE.—The Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, attended by a select suite, on Tuesday evening, honoured the Royal Gardens, Vauxhall, with his presence

PRESENT FOR HER MAJESTY.—Amongst the cargo of the Oriental steamer, which arrived a few days ago, at Southampton, from Alexandria, were eight splendid horses (two of them brood mares), a present from Mehemet Ali to her Majesty, in charge of native grooms, in the costume of the country; also two fine camels, and 4800 quails, the latter for sale in London.

BALL AT STAFFORD HOUSE.—The Duchess of Sutherland will give a Grand Ball, on Wednesday, the 16th instant, at Stafford House. We understand her Majesty and the Prince Consort will honour the Duchess with their presence, as also the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, the Hereditary Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Saxe Weimar, the Hereditary Prince of Lucca, &c. Upwards of 1400 invitations are said to have been issued.



ST. GEORGE'S CHAPEL.—THE CHOIR.

SCENE FROM MOZART'S "IL DON GIOVANNI."

SCENE XI., Act II. A Piazza, with Church, in the distance, and the Statue of the Commendatore in the foreground. Our Artist has here depicted one of the most striking scenes in the opera, when Don Giovanni (Tamburini) tells Leporello (Rovere) to invite the Statue (Tagliafico) to supper. The light of the moon, thrown on the figure of the Commendatore, was most effectively managed.

THE STATUE SCENE FROM "IL DON GIOVANNI," AT THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

THE CHELSEA OUT-PENSIONERS.

ON Friday week the metropolitan divisions of the Chelsea Out-Pensioners, numbering 1200 strong, in three battalions, were reviewed and inspected in Hyde Park, by the Duke of Wellington, in presence of Prince Albert and Prince George of Cambridge, and a numerous staff. This veteran battalion, which was first formed in 1843, consists of the Out-Pensioners of the Royal Hospitals of Chelsea and Kilmainham, who receive, in addition to the superannuation stipend, the sum of 2*s.* per diem while on duty; the corporals receive an addition of 6*d.*, the sergeants of 1*s.*, and the sergeants-major of 1*s.* 6*d.* The ages of the men vary from forty-five to fifty-five, which is the maximum. The staff consists of a lieutenant-colonel, three majors, five captains, eighteen sergeant-majors, fifty-eight sergeants, and fifty-eight corporals.

Shortly after nine o'clock, the cavalcade entered, and consisted of the Commander-in-Chief, attired as a Field-Marshal; Prince Albert, who was similarly attired; Prince George of Cambridge, who wore plain clothes; General Sir W. Gordon, Lieutenant-General Sir J. Macdonald, Major-General Brown, the Right Hon. the Secretary at War. Several ladies occupied places inside the circle. The Pensioners having presented arms and given the usual salutes, by dropping colours, &c., under the direction of Lieutenant-Colonel Tulloch, C.B., were put through various evolutions, &c., by marching, forming into line, and firing.

The Brigade formed into three Battalions, each commanded by two officers, and divided into eight companies, each under a sergeant, carrying his sword drawn. The men were drawn up in line, across the Park, facing Park-lane, having the Magazine guard-house immediately in rear of the centre.

Among the evolutions which attracted most attention was the manual exercise with the musket, which the second division performed with the agility and precision of bygone days. Prince Albert, and those around his Royal Highness, evincing much satisfaction at this proof of efficiency. The firing of the battalion volleys was, also, remarkably good. The throwing back of the line in the direction of Kensington gardens, and forming parallel with Connaught-terrace, was a movement very similar to one executed under the Duke of Wellington, and by some of the very men, when in action with the enemy.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

The event of last week at this theatre was the production of Donizetti's charming opera comique, "La Figlia del Reggimento," which has been repeated on Tuesday and Thursday, with increased effect, and unbounded enthusiasm, by audiences crowded to the very ceiling. The extraordinary comic power Mdlle. Lind infuses into the rôle of the cutler girl, strikes everybody who witnesses this perfect impersonation with astonishment; and particularly those who have only seen her as Alice, in "Roberto il Diavolo," or Amina, in "La Sonnambula." It is a charming tout ensemble, that excites the plaudits and cheers of the audience to a pitch seldom or never witnessed in this theatre; a combination of buoyant youthfulness, and unaffected grace and modesty; added to which, there is a certain frankness, gaiety, and naiveté, that is perfectly irresistible. On Tuesday evening, several morceaux in the first act were re-demanded; and, at her marvellous execution of the solfeggi and fioriture, in the second act, the enthusiasm of the enraptured audience was at its height. We can compare this splendid display of vocalisation to a sky rocket, that bursts in the air, scattering around the most refulgent and brilliant lights. Gardoni, as Tonio, and F. Lablache, as Sulpizio, were both able representatives of their respective rôles.

In justice to Mr. Maretzek, the chorus master, we must say the choruses were given with a perfect ensemble, preserving all the nuances which render them effective; and the band, under their enthusiastic conductor, Balfe, completed the well-deserved success which has attended his unwearied exertions during the season.

All the Royal boxes were full on Thursday night. Her Majesty Queen Victoria, her Royal Consort Prince Albert, and her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, the Grand Duke Constantine, her Majesty the Queen Dowager, the Grand Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Weimar, her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge, and the élite of the nobility at present in London, honoured the theatre with their presence.

On Tuesday night, her Majesty the Queen Dowager again honoured the performances with her presence. Her Majesty was attended by the Earl and Countess Howe, the Earl and Countess Brownlow, the Hon. Miss Seymour, and the Hon. W. Ashley. Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, attended by the Baroness Hammerstein, the Earl of Clare, Baron Knesebeck, and Mr. E. St. John Mildmay, were also present. Although this was the first day of Ascot Races, the house was crowded to suffocation, and the same excitement was observed for two hours at the various entrances to the theatre as on former occasions previous to the doors being opened.

On Saturday night, Donizetti's sprightly comic opera "L'Elsir d'Amore," was presented with the best effect possible.

The veteran Lablache was in full force; his gigantic pirouettes were received with shouts of laughter. We were glad to perceive that Madame Castellan had recovered from her late indisposition; she sung with infinite grace and spirit. Gardoni was encored in that exquisite melody "Una furtiva lagrima," and F. Lablache and Gardoni obtained the same honour in their duet. The admirable dancing of the charming Cerito in the celebrated pas de cinq, from "Rosida," one of the variations of which, remarkable for those stupendous bounds, which Cerito excels in, was encored. The revived ballet "La Esmeralda," concluded the evening's entertainments, in which all those exquisite mimic powers, combined with grace, for which Carlotta Grisi is so eminent, were displayed by that highly talented danseuse, and in which Perrot, by his matchless pantomime and quaint comicalities, sent the audience home in perfect good humour, having excited their mirth and laughter to a remarkable degree.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Mozart's "Il Don Giovanni," given on Saturday night, in presence of her Majesty and the Prince Consort, and Prince Leiningen, again attracted an overflowing house—a proof that the fashionable amateurs can appreciate the gems of the composer, as much as the classical dilettanti. With the exception of the Masetto, by Pietro Ley, the cast was perfect. Grisi's Donna Anna is one of the grandest specimens of lyrical portraiture: her delivery of the scene descriptive of her father's assassination by Don Giovanni, was Addonian in fire and action. Corbari's Donna Elvira was beautifully sung: the music is excessively difficult, especially in the trying intervals in the "Mi tradi," but she conquered them most artistically, and her pure and limpid mezzo-soprano tones told well in the concerted pieces. In the trio by Grisi, Mario, and Corbari, "Protegga il giusto cielo," there was a blending quality in the three voices rarely met with: it was enthusiastically encored, and by Royal hands. We have heard that this is a favourite trio of her Majesty, who sings a part in it with infinite skill and power. Madame Persiani's Zerlina is one of her best characters; but, elegant as her fioriture is, we would prefer that she adhered to the original text more closely in the "Batti, batti," which she sings in G instead of F—which is no gain for Lindley's charming violoncello obligato. Her "La ci darem" is delightful; and, with Tamburini's insinuating style, this duo is a certain encore. His Don Juan is one of those matchless pieces of acting that can only be seen once in one's life—whether the vocal or histrionic abilities be considered. He makes the libertine polished, graceful, and brave—the darker shades of the reckless character being thus relieved of their offensiveness. In the finale of the first act, when he turns round upon his foes, and in the Ghost scene, he was remarkably fine. Mario's divine singing of "Il mio tesoro" insures the encore with fureur. His accent to the B flat in his chest tones is of the most astonishing nature. Rovere's Leporello has to contend with the recollections of Lablache, who has made that part his own; but Rovere, by his racy humour and careful acting, secured the suffrages of the audience. The Commendatore is, on all hands, agreed never to have been so well sung as by Tagliafico. The pretty costume and stately style of Fanny Elsler in the Cavalier, in the minuet danced with Damilâtre, in the ball-room scene, with its triple band and double chorus, added to this memorable ensemble.

On Tuesday night, Rossini's "Il Barbiere di Siviglia" was performed for the first time, and with as great a triumph as the "Don Juan," "Lucrezia Borgia," "Semiramide," &c.; and yet Grisi, Alboni, Corbari, Mario, Tamburini, Tagliafico, &c., were not included in the cast, thus displaying the great operatic resources of the troupe. Mdme Persiani was the Rosina—she played it with bewitching grace and earnest life naïveté. Her singing of the "Una voce," of the "Pompe lo son," and of the vocal exercise at the Piano, was superb. She created quite a furore by her roulades in the latter, taking the most astonishing intervals with delicious effect. She was prodigiously cheered both by band and audience. Salvi was the Count, and acted it well, particularly in the disguises of the drunken trooper and of the singing master. He overlooked the "Ah ridente il cielo" with too many cadences, otherwise his singing was unexceptionable

REVIEW OF THE CHELSEA OUT-PENSIONERS, IN HYDE PARK.

The Dr. Bartolo of Rovere was a great hit: the fine qua lities of this comedian, which have gained him such great fame in Italy as the Bancho, it may be conceived what a treat was afforded by his singing of the song of "La Calunnia," one of the finest conceptions of Rossini. The making up of Mariel was a capital picture of the bloated, corpse, and malignant Spanish priest. Polonini sang the music of Fiorello, this small part being thus filled by a prime basso Admirable as the artists were whose names we have just mentioned in their respective parts, it is certain that the sensation of the night was the Figaro of Ronconi. It took the house by storm from its striking originality, its attractive finesse, its unceasing activity, its sympathetic vivacity. In the "Largo al Factotum" he was encored with fervour—it was a novel rendering and accompanied on the guitar with the most ludicrous effect. The orchestra, at one time, was at a stand-still, joining in the risibility of the and ence The Figaro of Ronconi is a study to any actor to follow him in the details of the most minute and intellectual play: we are ever witnessed would be impossible, but all his points were strictly subservient to the dramatic situation, adding to the effects if his coil agues, and never losing sight of the ensemble by burlesque or extravagance. Ronconi, after his great tragic display in "Maria di Rohan," has shown himself to be a buffo actor, equally as distinguished. The overture was encored, and the band, in the accompaniments, gained additional glory by their splendid execution. The applause, laughter, callings forward, &c., throughout the opera were incessant.

On Thursday evening Mozart's "Il Don Giovanni" was repeated, for the third time, being an extra night. Our Artists have supplied an Engraving of the scene, in which Don Giovanni (Tambarini), to the great dismay of Leporello (Ronconi) invites the Statue (Tagliafico) to the banquet. There was a full house, and the opera went off brilliantly. Mdme. Persiani and Tamburini being encored in "Là ci darem," Grisi, Corbari, and Mario in the trio "Protegga," and Mario in "Il mio Tesoro." The leading singers were called for at the end of the finale of the first act, and Tamburini at the end of the opera. This evening, Donizetti's "Lucrezia Borgia," will be given by special desire, the Queen Dowager honouring the new theatre with her presence for the first time. On Tuesday next, Bellini's "Sonnambula" will be performed, with Persiani, and Marini. On Thursday (the extra night) Rossini's "Barbiere," with Persiani, Salvi, Rovere, Ronconi, Marini, and Polonini, will be repeated, with the second act of "Lucrezia," for Orsini, Alboni, Marini, and Tamburini; and on Saturday next, Rossini's "Cenerentola" will be performed, to introduce Alboni in that character.

SURREY.

The operatical summer season at this theatre has been rendered remarkable by the triumphant production of a new opera, called "The Forest Maiden and the Moorish Page;" the music by Mr. J. H. Tully, and the libretto by Mr. E. Fitzball The story is of the true melodramatic unction, and is not destitute of interest, turning on the intrigues of Philip of Spoua (Leffler), married to Queen Mary, of heretic burning memory, played by Mrs. H. Vining. Philip strives to win the affections of Alice Copley (Miss Rainforth), who is under the Queen's care, whilst the father, a proscribed heretic (Mr. M'Mahon) is persecuted by Father Joseph, the Queen's confessor (Mr. H. Horncastle). Alice resists the Royal libertine's addresses, and she is betrothed to Francis Hartley (Mr Harrison). The Queen, suspecting the fidelity of Philip, employs Leon, a Moorish Page (Miss E. Isaacs), to watch his actions. By a series of incidents, Alice is sent to the Queen's apartments, and many gruesome risk of a stake at Smithfield, or a chop on Tower Hill;" but this Fitzballian catastrophe is prevented by the Moorish Page turning out to be a woman, and an early love of Philip. She (the Page) convinces the Queen of her innocence, and recalls a poisoned flower, not to be in the way of annoying her Majesty, thus enabling Miss R. Isaacs to die on the stage very charmingly, and Miss Rainforth to pour forth a brilliant finale

Ah! what joy,
What pure delight:
My day of bliss
Is golden bright.

This opera has been very well mounted, and is likely to have a great run. Mr. Tully's music was, however, worthy of a better libretto, and, we must add, of a better locality, and of better execution generally. He has a happy flow of melody, and his orchestral treatment is admirable. His defects are that he has overloaded the score for the instrumentalists, namely, pistols, drum, &c. This may have arisen from a desire to propitiate the taste of his audience, or from the weakness of his stringed player in the orchestra

Amongst the remarkable concerted pieces were the finales of the first and second acts; the former containing a quatuor, the canonic form, and a beautiful prayer; and the latter, a striking climax. A charming madrigal, "Now the golden summer fly," was encored; and a duet of freshness, "The tuneful lark," in the same school, was equally worthy of the distinction. Mr. Harrison has three ballads, of which the first, "On, softly sweet the moonbeams sleep," is the best, with the close accompaniment. This was encored, as also the martial strain, "From her I'll ne'er part." Miss Rainforth was encored in a pretty ballad, "A little cot beside the sea;" and Miss R. Isaacs, in the "Moorish Maid," an elegant inspiration. The gem is, however, the second act melody of my childhood is gone"—instrumented with the greatest elegance. Mr Leffler failed to impart any interest in his two songs—not being, apparently, acquainted either with the words or with the music

We hope that Mr. Tully's star has set in favourably for another opera, now that he has proved himself worthy of a place in the first rank of English composers.

HAYMARKET.

The farce, bearing the somewhat ungrammatical title of "Who do they take me for?" produced at this house on Tuesday evening, does not appear destined to achieve a very prolonged existence; in fact, we always have misgivings as to the prospect of fun when we see a name like Terence O'Reilly in the bills. We fear all the old stage conventionalities of the Irish character—which are so far from being comical done over again. There is humour, however, in the equivoque of this farce. An artist the aforesaid Terence (Mr. Hudson)—engaged on an "illustrated" publication, goes to Ireland to take a view of an estate, and is, in consequence, taken himself for a Baronet's steward sent to bid for it. From this slight point the plot starts, in the course of which the fortunate artist is "bought off" from bidding for the property by the steward, Pickings (Mr Tilbury), for three thousand pounds, he wishing to get it for himself. Then there is a meeting with an old sweetheart (Mrs Humby), and the rekindling of an old friendship for Kensington-lane, is lured into the scene of enchantment by their half hidden galaxy

Vauxhall opens this year under the management of Mr Wardell a gentleman who was the original proprietor, and who it appears was both many attractions. It has been altogether redecorated. A picture of the Piazza di San Marco, at Venice, has been built on the Waterloo ground: the admission is half-a-crown: there is a ballet, and a concert. Nobody did it like Vauxhall in the bygone humble things, at certain periods of the evening; steamers go almost to the very gates for twopence; and the refreshments do not appear to have advanced in price, amidst the general dearness. In fact, the Vauxhall of the first thoroughfare throughout the summer, there is a prospect of Vauxhall becoming not only a Hoya. property, but a very good common-place commercial one.

We were once told that an attentive reading of Goethe's "Wilhelm Meister" would put ten years on to our lives. As an antidote to this not very desirable effect, we think that a visit to Vauxhall takes away twenty. For, in the excitement of the attractions, we forget all the intervening time, and the fireworks go up as of old, and break in showers of gold, amid the mock expressions of wonder and admiration on the part of the populace—sounds we once uttered in pure delight. We have not decidedly did all that could be done with the bars; and Mr. Humby's good-humoured broadly-natural drollery was the same as ever. We did not hear who claimed the authorship of the farce, in spite of the question so clearly put in its title.

VAUXHALL.

The old proverb, which was barely kept up by its reputation last year, that Vauxhall and the rainy season always commenced together, is now fairly knocked on the head for good The Royal property of the nights are fine and warm: and the glass is as high as the top of St. Mark's Campanile. The familiar words "Grand Gala," start again in pragmatic ants from the posting bills, passengers to the mail trains, and the omnibus windows, are again alight to the air over the grounds, and discern lofty architectural structures rising above the manufactories of Lambeth; and the myriads of lamps twinkle through the trees as the passenger to

PUBLICATIONS, &c.

THE HANDBOOK OF JOINING; or, WHAT TO SAY, [illegible] Leech

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS. History of the Succession of the Ancient Roman Emperors, with the Prices of their Coins, Scarce Portraits, their Dates and Mottoes. Is just published by P. WHELAN, Dealer in Ancient Coins, 18, Strand, London; post free, 1s. 2d. Coins sent by post, Bought, Catalogued, &c.

SUMMER FASHIONS.—EXTRAORDINARY NOVELTIES in the LADIES' GAZETTE OF FASHION, for JUNE, price 1s. post free, 1s. 6d. The only work that contains the Correct Summer Fashions, double the number given in any other work, at the PARIS FASHIONS, Patterns of the Boy's Dress, and every novelty of the season. A page is Extra. Plate of Children's Dresses, beautifully coloured, GRATIS. Plates, 79 Figures, and 160 Patterns with Descriptions, &c.

BEMROSE, Holywell-street, Strand, and all Booksellers.

JENNY LIND. THE PIANISTA. No. 81, for June, Price 2s. [illegible] Lind, Mr. Thalberg, Mr. Benedict, Mr. Mary Shaw, Mr. Lucas, Mr. Sloman, Mr. Balfe, Mr. Barker, Mr. Mary Hiana Quadrilles, &c. &c. &c.

THE SOUTHAMPTON AND DORCHESTER RAILWAY.

THE WIMBORNE STATION, AND PART OF THE VIADUCT OVER THE RIVER STOUR.

THIS new line of Railway, it will be seen, by the following notes, passes through a country of picturesque character and antiquarian interest.

The line branches off from the South Western Railway, at the upper end of the town of Southampton, and passes, through a tunnel, under the old road to London. This tunnel is nearly 531 yards in length, and is cut through a soil of gravel and clay. The Railway then passes on to Redbridge and Brokenhurst, the latter station being most exquisitely situated amidst the charming scenery of the New Forest. The next station leads to Christchurch, a town containing some beautiful and interesting relics of the past, in the ruins of its ancient Collegiate Church and Priory, which are well worthy of notice. Wimborne Minstr is the next station, the town being about half a mile from the station. The Minster or Collegiate Church in this town is a most interesting remain of antiquity, said to have been erected between the years 705 and 723. Some assert that the existing remains are of the earliest Saxon style, whilst others are of opinion that most parts of the Church were built soon after the Conquest. The whole building has a cathedral-like appearance, and consists of a nave, choir, and transepts. Its length, from east to west, is about 180 feet. The chancel or choir is elevated considerably above the nave, there being an ascent of twelve steps to it. Amongst the many illustrious dead whose ashes repose within its walls, King Ethelred's remains are said to have been interred here, and a brass memorial relates the circumstance. This memorial, however, is of much later date than the Saxon period. We understand it is likely to be repaired, and it certainly deserves a complete restoration, as it is a remarkably fine specimen of ancient architecture. One of our Illustrations shows the Wimborne Station, and part of the Viaduct over the river Stour. The station, which is at the base of an embankment, is in the Tudor style of architecture, and is built of red brick, with dressings of yellow brick. We may here observe that all the stations have nearly the same arrangements, are of similar form, and are all built of red and yellow brick. The viaduct, which is of wood, as, indeed, are all the viaducts on the line, is about twenty-seven feet high. The next station leads to Poole, to which town a branch rail of two miles and a half in length is formed.

Wareham is the next station, and the town itself is nicely situated on a rising ground. At about five miles from Wareham stands Corfe Castle, celebrated in history for its being the scene of the murder of the Saxon King Edward, afterwards canonised as "the Martyr." It is said that Edward's remains were interred at Wareham.

About five or six miles beyond Wareham is the station at Wool, near which are the ruins of Binder Abbey. Moreton station then follows; and next Dorchester, where the line terminates. The station is about a quarter of a mile from the town; and, as may be seen by our Engraving, is well situated. The town of Dorchester is not seen in our View, as it is concealed by trees: the church tower on the rising ground is that of Fordington, a parish in continuation of Dorchester. The tower has remarkably handsome belfry windows, and a curious piece of sculpture over the doorway; but the interior of the church is very plain.

Dorchester was anciently named Dumovaria, and is supposed to have been an important Roman station, from the numerous antiquities discovered there. The Railway passes within the distance of a field of the celebrated Roman Amphitheatre, a view and description of which are given in a late number of our Journal; and which, at one time, was threatened with destruction by this same railway. The Amphitheatre is still in good preservation; and from it our View of the Railway Station was made, its rising side being shown in the Illustration. The station is very neat in its arrangement; the arrival and departure platforms, and coverings, being very complete, and well ordered in every respect. The total length of the Railway, from Southampton to Dorchester, is sixty-two miles and a half.

The completion of this Railway is an important work in the perfecting of the South Western system; upon which we find the following statement in the Hampshire Telegraph:—"The coast communication of the south and south-western districts, by means of the South-Eastern and Brighton, and their connection with the South-Western, and again by the latter with Yeovil, Cornwall, Portsmouth, and the south of Devon, will soon become as perfect as possibility can make it. So that by its means, and that of the electric telegraph, Government commands, troops, stores, and ammunition may be transmitted, by the one in a few minutes, and by the other in a few hours, to all the principal dockyards, arsenals, and ports. The completion of the Southampton and Dorchester places the South-Western Railway in possession of an extended territory of 62 miles. They hold an interest in it to the extent of £320,000, and are to lease it at £20,000 per annum, with half surplus profits." Originally, the South-Western Railway was but a line of 78 miles between London and Southampton; whereas, it is now the centre of a great system, which, including extensions in progress, makes a total length of 265 miles.

The Southampton and Dorchester Railway was advertised to be opened on Tuesday; but, on Saturday night, the tunnel under Aslatis' Carriage Bazaar gave way; and the opening for traffic has, consequently, been deferred by the Company.

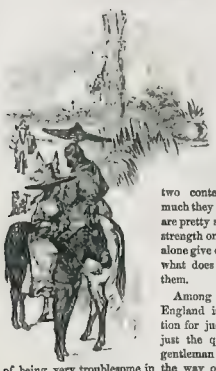
THE DORCHESTER STATION, FROM THE ROMAN AMPHITHEATRE.

LONDON: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JUNE 5, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 267.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JUNE 12, 1847. [Sixpence.

INTERVENTION.



INTERVENTION by a third party in the quarrels of others is proverbial for making matters worse. The same homely rule applies to quarrels and interventions on a larger scale, whether the assistance proffered is that of weapons or sound advice. The two contending parties, however much they differ between themselves, are pretty sure to resent the greater strength or superior wisdom that can alone give others a right to meddle in what does not immediately concern them.

Among the "family of nations" England is rich, and has a reputation for judgment and experience—just the qualities that give an old gentleman in social circles the power of being very troublesome in the way of interference with everybody: so England is the great meddler with and settler of all the vexed questions and quarrels of its neighbours, and always has been. Our Governments seem to inherit by tradition a tendency to thrusting themselves into the midst of disturbances, of which the real causes are very little known, and

> If there is anything in which we shine,
> 'Tis in arranging all our friends' affairs,
> Not having, of our own, domestic cares.

We are at the old work again—patching a continental Government, propping up a throne with bayonets, and preserving a crown to a Royal head, that, if half that is said be true, is not worthy to wear one. As the most democratic government in Europe, we always side with Sovereigns and Courts against the people. There has been a revolution in Portugal, and just when the popular force was acquiring strength enough to bring the Court to terms, England "intervenes," and Donna Maria may go on misgoverning as before. With a famine on our hands, living a difficulty, a debt of ten millions incurring and more in prospect, we have over and above our own concerns the affairs of Portugal to settle, by the persuasive and reasoning power of a fleet in the Tagus.

A good deal is said, in the way of satire, of the Celtic love of a row; but it is nothing compared with the English love of "intervention," which we take to be the vernacular of the Foreign Office for the same thing, or what is pretty sure to lead to it. And our strength is generally exercised abroad in a direction contrary to the current of public opinion at home. Here we are continually struggling for an accession to popular rights and privileges; abroad, popular movements are sure to have our opposition: the most rotten Royalty, the most tottering Throne, moves our fleets and armies to its aid, though the crimes and stupidities that have shaken both would by most Englishmen be visited with execration.

Everywhere we are the champions of Absolutism and Royalty by right divine; though at home we have reduced the power of the Sovereign to that of the first magistrate of the kingdom, and stripped prerogative of nearly all its privileges—and done it, too, by precisely the same means we are so ready to put down in others. James the Second never did more to forfeit his crown or the confidence of the people than Maria of Portugal. England rebelled; and a Whig "Junta" shipped him off to count his beads at St. Germains. If Louis the Fourteenth had landed a French army at Dover, it is possible the Revolution might have been delayed: indeed, the "intervention" was talked of; but, as it never came, the Old Court party found no support, and the House of Hanover ascended the Throne by a successful insurrection. And ever since we have been active enemies abroad of the very policy that turned out so well for ourselves at home. The Bourbons never had such friends and allies as England, though all the monarchs of that race were the most bigoted supporters of the Church, with the dignitaries of which it is high treason by the English law to hold political communication. The circle of inconsistencies in which this involved us is altogether extraordinary, and we shall feel the effects of them throughout all future time. The present Royal Family of Portugal, the House of Braganza, was founded by a successful rebellion against the Spanish Government in 1601, headed by John, Duke of Braganza. Everywhere it is the same; throughout history we see royalties degenerate, till, in the person of some unusually obstinate and incapable person, they become intolerable and are set aside. In France, the elder branch of the Bourbons is gathering experience, if not wisdom, in exile; in Spain, in like manner, the direct heir does not wear the Crown, and dares not set foot on the Spanish soil. The present rulers would shoot him with as little ceremony as they did two of his Generals only the other day. England, by an exception to her ordinary rule of action, acquiesced in the revolution of 1830 in France, and the accession of Isabella in Spain; yet we might just as well have fought for Charles the Tenth as Louis the Eighteenth, and plunged into another "war of the Spanish succession" for Don Carlos, as battled through the first frightful quarter of this century for that phantom legitimacy, which in all nations has nearly received notice to quit the world and trouble it no more. The House of Braganza, too, has had one warning, that, as it was made, it can be unmade; Don Miguel, like his Royal companions in misfortune—Don Carlos, the Count de Montemolin, and the Duke de Bordeaux—is an exile. He lost the Portuguese throne from sheer incapacity, aggravated by moral depravity. Donna Maria, as a woman, a wife and a mother, is, in her private character, we believe, blameless; but a nation is not bounded in a Court, and millions may feel the effect of rashness, folly, and want of intellect, to whom the Queen and the mode of life in the palace are wholly unknown. If Sovereigns will govern in their own persons, if they will act as Ministers, they must with the functions take the responsibility of office, and be prepared for removal and deposition when they outrage common sense. It is just this truth which the Portuguese people are trying to impress on their Queen, and which the English fleet in the Tagus will encourage her in persisting not to recognise. Sir C. Napier, and Colonel Wylde, and all the naval

"THE VISIONARY."—PAINTED BY A FRIPP.—EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

The original of this Illustration was suggested to the Painter, Mr. Alfred Fripp, by the Melodies of Moore. The picture is called "The Visionary," and the lines in Moore are—

> Thus shall Memory often in dreams sublime,
> Catch a glimpse of the days that are over;
> Thus sighing, look through the waves of Time,
> For the long-faded glories they cover.

The character of the composition is conveyed in our Engraving; but the colour like the language of poetry, in translation can preserve.

and diplomatic agents we have set to work there, will merely make her Majesty bolder in her obstinacy; a settlement will be patched up for a time, and as soon as we withdraw our forces from the scene, the conflict will begin again, and will not end till the Court is coerced into reason and good faith, or the whole Royal Family is sent on its travels.

What is the insurrection? It is impossible to believe that men whose names have been known to Europe as Ministers and soldiers for these twenty years, should throw off their allegiance, raise an army, form a Junta, take possession of the second city of the kingdom, seize the fleet, and find ready support from nearly all the commercial interests of the nation, without real and cogent causes. The support the Junta has received shows the disaffection to be general and deeply rooted. Lord Palmerston admits this himself.* The Portuguese, like the Spaniards, are attached to the Monarchy; but no worship now is blind or unreasoning, and, no doubt, their attachment may be too much tried. The Court that has everything in its favour—old associations, the command of all the wealth, offices, rank and honours of the nation—could not fall into contempt, and be left by the best heads among the statesmen of the country, unless it had grossly abused its influence. At the present moment, for all that appears to the contrary, the real "balance of power" in the country is with the rebellious Junta, not the established Government. England throws her influence into the scale, and, of course, the Royal cause will triumph; but it is at the risk of supporting enormous injustice. We apprehend if parties were pretty equally divided here, the public would be excited to something little short of fury, if one of them were to call for and receive support from foreign troops! Let British property, by all means, be protected, and the person of the Queen too, if necessary; though it does not appear to be in any danger. But to connect the interest and the arms of England with the Court party in Portugal, is a mistake; it will make our name detested by three-fourths of the population; and, in the long run, the controversy must be settled in accordance with the feelings of the mass of the nation. No interference in the world can prevent it; it never did; and never will.

There is now no doubt that the league of the European Sovereigns against the French Republic was the direct cause of the execution of Louis the Sixteenth. They assembled their armies on the frontier for his defence, and the French flung the head of the Monarch at their feet, as their gage of defiance. All interference, unless it is sought, is resented: "Who made thee a judge and ruler over us?"

It should be remembered that Insurrection is almost the legal form of political struggle in Portugal; parties there, instead of voting at elections or in the Chamber, take arms and fight, though in rather a dilatory fashion. The country, with two hostile armies in possession of it, may be said to be in its normal state; and, as a matter of calculation, it would be better to let them "play out the play," and see which would get the upper hand, and note what would come of it. The Queen was placed on the throne by a rebellion and a civil war that lasted for several years. The Constitution, which the Court always tried to violate, was settled by two revolts in September and November, 1836, and by some fighting in 1837, in which Saldanha was then as now engaged. What settled ground of policy can there be under such a state of things? The declaration of Das Antas, that he is in arms for the Queen's authority, may be quite true in one sense; just as, at the early period of our civil war, the King might have come to terms with the Parliament and reigned still, though with restricted powers. Taken altogether, we do not see what Portugal will gain by the repression of the movement; it represents a mass of discontent that will break forth at some time or other, perhaps hereafter with more violence than now. And, as to policy, or capacity for Government, anything worse than the Court party it is impossible should arise. Lord Palmerston seems to have a perfect knowledge of the fact, and evidently leans to the Junta: though his active interference is for the Queen.

NAVAL AND MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

DEATH OF THE HON. CAPTAIN AUGUSTUS VILLIERS.—The Hon. Captain Augustus Villiers, second son of the Earl and Countess of Jersey, died at Rome, at the close of last month, after a long illness. The deceased was in his 38th year, and served for some years in the Royal Horse Guards Blue, and married, 1831, the Hon. Miss Mercer Elphinstone, the youngest daughter of the late celebrated Admiral Lord Keith.

COURT MARTIAL.—A Court-Martial assembled at Portsmouth on Wednesday morning, on board the Victory flag-ship, to try William Shurman, a private marine of the Scourge steam sloop, for repeated acts of insubordination. The Court, after hearing all the evidence, found the prisoner Guilty, and sentenced him to receive fifty lashes, and subsequently to be imprisoned in Winchester gaol and kept to hard labour for two months. This Court was composed of Rear-Admiral Sir Charles Napier, K.C.B., president, and of Captains Sir J. Stirling, of the Howe; Dacres, of the Avenger; Hon. Frederic Pelham, of the Odin; and Milne, of the St. Vincent, members

THE FINE ARTS.—His Royal Highness Prince Albert presided on Tuesday afternoon at a meeting of the Commission for Promoting and Encouraging the Fine Arts in the Rebuilding the Palace of Westminster. The Commissioners present were—Lord Auckland, Lord Colborne, Viscount Mahon, Sir R. Peel, Sir R. H. Inglis, Mr. Wyse, Mr. Hallam, and Mr. Vivian. The Secretary, Mr Seguier, was in attendance. The Prince and the Commissioners left the committee-room at four o'clock, and went to Westminster Hall to inspect the oil paintings sent in for competition. His Royal Highness and the Commissioners left the Hall at half-past five o'clock.

THE WILL OF THE LATE SIR FRANCIS WOOD.—The will of Sir Francis Lindley Wood, Bart., late of Hickleton and Hemsworth, in Yorkshire, was proved in the Prerogative Court on the 3rd ult., and in London on the 31st. It was executed in the year 1845, and to which he added three codicils. His son, the Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood, Bart., Chancellor of the Exchequer and Member for Halifax, who succeeds to the estates, is the acting executor. Sir William B. Cooke, Bart., is also executor appointed by the will. To his son he leaves all his furniture, plate, pictures, diamonds, carriages, horses, cattle, and farming stock absolutely as well as the residue of his property after providing for annuities and other bequests. He limited the expenses of his funeral to £300; and has left legacies to each of his servants. Amongst his relations and acquaintances, to whom he has left remembrances by will, are the following:—His daughter, Ann Childers, and his son-in-law, J. W. Childers; his brother, Henry Wood; his brother-in-law, W. Busfield; his nephew, Charles Armstrong, and to Juliet Armstrong; to Admiral Sir Charles Richardson, and to Sir William Cooke, his executor. To his friend J. Parker, Esq., M.P. for Sheffield, a bequest of £200. And he has directed mourning rings to be given to his nearest relatives.

* If the cause of the Junta had been going down, and if success had attended the arms of the Queen, or if anything like energy and enterprise had been shown by her Generals, enthusiasm by her adherents, wisdom and stability by her Ministers, the members of the Junta might have accepted a temporary exile for themselves, as the price for the restoration of constitutional securities to their country; and they might have preferred such a certainty to the chance of better terms by the continuance of the civil war. But the state of things seems to have been exactly the reverse; and it appears, from the accounts which you have given, that, if the civil war had been allowed to take its course, without any foreign interposition, the result of continued conflict in the field was more likely to be the retirement of the Royal Family than that of the leaders of the Junta from the territory of Portugal.—Despatch to Sir H. Seymour.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE

PORTUGAL.—DEFEAT OF THE JUNTA.

The Moniteur of Wednesday states that despatches had reached the French Government announcing that the Spanish Government had received information, dated Lisbon, the 22nd inst., to the effect that the Count das Antas has been made prisoner with two or three thousand men, and that all the property of the Junta has fallen into the power of the squadron blockading Oporto.

FRANCE.

An important political fact has this week been elicited by the Paris papers, viz.—The proposed interference in the domestic affairs of Switzerland by the neighbouring great Powers, a note has been delivered by M. Bois le Comte, French Minister at Berne, to the President of the Directory, intimating the determination of the neighbouring Powers to enforce the provisions of the treaty of Vienna, as they related to the independence of the Swiss cantons. M. Ochsenbein, President of the Directory, stated in reply that the Confederation "would oppose with all their might all attempts on the part of Foreign Powers to interfere in their domestic affairs."

The Chamber of Peers has been chiefly occupied in discussing a Bill providing a rather extensive medical reform. In the Deputies, when the Credits Bill for Algeria was brought forward, a charge was made by M. Garnier Pages relative to the harbour of Algiers, which he said was purposely left in an unfinished state out of complaisance to England. The Minister of War replied by showing that the defensive state of the coast was of the most complete and satisfactory character.

The late French Ambassador at this Court, the Count de St. Aulaire, is to leave Paris on the 15th for London, for the purpose of taking leave of the Queen. The Duke de Broglie, who succeeds Count de St. Aulaire as Ambassador, will leave Paris for this country in the first week of July

The Hon. Richard Edwards, third son of Lord Kensington, now First Attaché at St. Petersburg, has been appointed to succeed the late Mr. C. Sheridan as First Attaché to the British Embassy at Paris.

The appeal of Mdlle. Plessy, the well-known actress, from the judgment condemning her to pay 100,000f. as damages for refusing to perform her part with the Théâtre Français, came on for hearing before the Court Royal, Paris, a few days ago. The facts of the case were, that in 1845, Mdlle. Plessy suddenly disappeared from Paris, and afterwards steadily refused to return to the Théâtre Français to fulfil the engagement into which she entered for a number of years, at a salary of 12,000f. per annum. She shortly after went to St. Petersburgh, where she obtained an excellent engagement at the Imperial Theatre. In support of the appeal her advocate urged that she had almost been driven to act as she had done, on account of the Théâtre Français insisting on her fulfilling her engagement at a time when she was deeply wounded from a disappointment in love. He also contended that the amount of damages awarded was excessive, regard being had to the amount of her salary. The advocate of the theatre maintained, on the contrary, that Mdlle. Plessy had gone to St. Petersburgh more from a desire to promote her pecuniary interests than from anything else, she having obtained an engagement equal to about 100,000f. per annum. He maintained, also, that her departure was a great loss to the theatre, and that the damages awarded ought not to be cut down. The Court dismissed the appeal, and confirmed the judgment

The Paris papers allude to the important circumstance that a convention has been signed by the French and British Governments, for the transmission of the mails from Paris to London and vice versa, viâ Boulogne instead of Calais.

The Chamber of Peers is occupied with an alleged breach of privilege committed by M. Emile Girardin, the Editor of the Presse. That paper, of the 12th of May, contained an article reflecting on the House of Peers, and insinuating that promises of Peerages had been made by the Ministry, and sold to the individuals named for 80,000f. each. The Chamber of Peers decided that M Girardin should be called to the bar: but, as he is a member of the Chamber of Deputies, it was necessary that the latter Chamber should give their assent. A Committee of the Chamber of Deputies was appointed to consider of the matter, and, in the meantime, M. Emile Girardin has given an explanation in the first bureau of the Chamber of Deputies. He admitted that he wished to destroy the Ministry, but said he would not do so by means of an intrigue. M. Girardin reiterated his assertion that promises of a peerage had been sold, and said he should defend his assertion both in the Chamber of Deputies and the Chamber of Peers.

SPAIN

Our latest advices from Madrid mention that the Queen, on the evening of the 2nd, received the Apostolic Messenger of the Pope with great distinction, kissing the ring upon his finger, and desiring him to sit by her. The relations of the King and Queen remain the same as before. Several riots have taken place in different parts of Spain, owing to the high price of grain. At Aviles, some persons were killed in an attempt to prevent the exportation of a quantity of corn, on the 26th ult. They, however, succeeded in their object, having beaten back the military

A Royal decree is published in the Madrid Gazette, countersigned by M. Pacheco, whereby the long banished "Prince of Peace," or Manuel Godoy (Grandee of Spain of the first class, Duke d'Alcudia, Knight of the Golden Fleece, and of Charles III., and Captain-General of the Spanish armies), is authorised to return to Spain, and four umpires, selected by him and the Minister of Finances, are to decide as to the compensation to be allowed him for the confiscation of his property in 1808.

Another decree states that the Queen, "wishing to perpetuate the remembrance of the signal triumph achieved on the 29th July, 1808, by the Spanish arms, in defence of the liberties and national independence, has conferred the Grandeza and title of Duke de Baylen to the lawful descendants of Francisco Xavier de Castanos."

One of the Madrid journals states that Queen Isabella is as intrepid a horsewoman as she is a skilful driver: "Lately (says this paper) there arrived at Aranjuez several English, Norman, and other foreign horses, of which two were chosen for the Queen, who immediately mounted one of them, without being at all acquainted with its qualities." A more decided instance of her intrepidity has been related in the saloons at Madrid. One of the dragoons of her guard was thrown by a vicious horse. The Queen ordered the soldier to be put upon the animal, and, mounting it, brought it in less than half-an-hour under perfect subjection.

MEXICO AND THE WEST INDIES.

The Dee, West India Mail steamer, arrived on Thursday morning, having left Vera Cruz on the third of April.

The news brought by this steamer from the seat of war is, that there were still several Mexican officers detained in the castle of San Juan de Ulloa. In every respect the city was quiet, and had assumed the appearance of peace. The Americans were beginning to feel the effects of the climate severely, the hospitals being nearly full of invalids, and several deaths had taken place from sickness, and not in any way connected with the late engagement. This circumstance was, however, kept very quiet, as its publication only tended to discourage the American army.

The last accounts received of General Scott were, that he was still progressing towards Mexico. He had reached Peralta, and was to leave that place on the third of April

On the news reaching Mexico of the late battle at Cerro Gordo, and Santa Anna's flight, D. Pedro Ananga was appointed President, with unlimited power for everything, with the exception of listening to any overtures of peace from the Mexicans, as they were determined to defend the city to the last. Canalizo, or D Juan Alvarez, was to be Commander-in-Chief, and the seat of government removed to the interior (Celaya).

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

THE NEW SMALL DEBTS ACT.—In the BANKRUPTCY COURT, on Wednesday, Mr. Buchanan, Basinghall-street, applied to Mr. Commissioner Fane to grant a summons under the Small Debts Act, calling upon a defendant to show cause why he should not have a warrant of committment issued against him for having failed to pay an instalment of half-a-crown, which sum had been ordered to be paid by Mr. Commissioner Fane. Mr. Commissioner Fane said it would be a great hardship upon the plaintiff to grant his application The expenses of such a proceeding (serving the warrant, &c.) would probably amount to a guinea, and then, when the defendant came into Court, he might pay the half-crown, and the plaintiff would be at all the expense, as there was no power by this Act of Parliament to allow the costs until after a warrant had been obtained. Mr. Commissioner Fane said the recent decision of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas upon this subject must be extraordinary; and it appeared to him (the Commissioner) that the Judges had thought that the Court was harassed in every possible way. First, there is a personal service of the writ; next, there is a personal service of the Small Debts summons, and so on. Under these circumstances, the Court must refuse to grant the application. Mr. Buchanan said that, for the future, he should advise his clients not to proceed under this act, and put up with the costs of the action. The class of persons who were summoned under this act were only persons who paid under coercion, and most difficult to serve.—The application was then refused.

MEDICAL COPYRIGHT.—In the Court of QUEEN'S BENCH, on Wednesday, a decision was given in the case of Russell v. Smith. It was an action of debt upon the statute passed to protect the property of musical composers in their compositions. The plaintiff was the author and composer of a song called "The Ship on Fire." The defendant had, at Mr. Bonhanan's request, given by him at Crosby Hall, sung this song, the audience at that entertainment having been admitted on payment of money. The questions were whether, under this statute, Crosby Hall could be treated as a place of public entertainment, and whether the singing of this song could be called a dramatic entertainment. The plaintiff had obtained a verdict at the trial, Mr. Justice Erle being of opinion that both these questions could be answered in the affirmative. A rule for a new trial had since been moved for, and the Court had taken time to consider the application. Coleridge Denman, on Wednesday, stated that the Court thought the rule to show cause ought to be granted.

FAILURE IN SUFFOLK.—Some sensation has been excited at Ipswich by the sudden departure of a professional man for the Continent, leaving liabilities to the amount of £25,000 unsettled. These embarrassments are reported to have been caused by railway speculations. A banking firm in the town is said to be a creditor to the extent of £10,000; and a shareholder in London, well known in Ipswich, creditor for a similar sum. The alleged defaulter, who was a magistrate of the borough, enjoyed a very lucrative practice, and possessed property, it is said, to the amount of £40,000.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

THE POOR REMOVAL (ENGLAND AND SCOTLAND) BILL.

Lord CAMPBELL moved the committal of the Poor Removal (England and Scotland) Bill, describing its objects and probable effects. He believed no greater power could be exercised under it than was now exercised in sending paupers back from one parish in England to another.

Lord BROUGHAM approved of the measure, and instanced Liverpool as a proof of its necessity—Liverpool, where they were inundated with those swarms of Irish paupers who had recently caused so much trouble and difficulty there

Earl FITZWILLIAM thought the bill was full of ambiguity, and wished to know when Irish paupers were sent to Scotland or Waterford, upon whom the expense of removal was to fall; or whether the expense of sending them to their places of settlement was to fall on the port where they were landed?

Lord CAMPBELL said the law in that respect was unaltered.

The Earl of WICKLOW considered the bill to be one of the most iniquitous and unconstitutional that had ever been proposed to Parliament.

After some further discussion the bill passed through Committee.

NATIONAL EDUCATION.—The Bishop of Exeter put some questions relative to the proposed Government plan of Education, in reply to which, the Marquis of LANSDOWNE said that the schoolmasters were to devote themselves exclusively to their duties, and not to undertake ecclesiastical duties.

The Representative Peers (Scotland) Bill was read a second time.

The Drainage of Lands Bill and the Naval Prisons Bill were read a third time and passed.

The House then adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. MONDAY.

A discussion took place on the Warwick County Prisons Bill, and, on a division, the second reading of the bill was rejected by 60 to 41.

Sir the late Sir EARDLEY WILMOT, BART.—Mr. SPOONER drew the attention of the House to the case of the late Sir Eardley Wilmot, who was removed from the government of Van Diemen's Land by Mr. Gladstone, while Secretary for the Colonies, owing to some false accusations against the right hon. Baronet transmitted from the colony to the Government at home. When Sir E. Wilmot applied for power to defend himself against the charges contained in a private despatch of Mr. Gladstone, it was refused him; but, now that he was no more, his family were naturally anxious that the subject should be brought under the consideration of the House, in order that the most unqualified contradiction might be given to the anonymous accusations upon which he had been dismissed, and upon which his private character had been traduced. Mr. Spooner read a number of letters and documents completely refuting the charges against Sir E. Wilmot, and shewing that he had been cruelly slandered and seriously injured. He had appealed to Earl Grey to enable him, by the means at his disposal in the Colonial Office, to clear his character, but had received nothing but a cold and repulsive reply.—Lord Brougham said, that if the hon. gentleman had concluded with a specific motion he would at once have seconded it. As it was, he would give his testimony to the injury and injustice which had been inflicted upon Sir E. Wilmot, and sincerely hoped that the appeal of Mr. Spooner would not have been made in vain.—Sir R. PEEL justified Mr. Gladstone's conduct. He said that three persons connected with the colony had volunteered charges, alleged to be circulated in the colony, with respect to Sir Eardley Wilmot's private life. But the removal of Sir E. Wilmot from the government of Van Diemen's Land did not rest on these rumours. Mr. Gladstone, however, did not think it right to re-appoint Sir Eardley to any other government until the charges made against him had been refuted. Mr. Gladstone was now convinced that the charges were without foundation, and he (Sir R. Peel) was also convinced that Sir E. Wilmot's character had been completely vindicated.—Lord J. RUSSELL likewise expressed a similar conviction. He declared that Earl Grey's refusal to appoint Sir E. Wilmot to another colony had no reference to the charges made, but rested solely on the noble Earl's estimate of the late Baronet's fitness for colonial administration.—The subject occupied the House for some time, but no specific result took place, although it seemed to be the general opinion that the character of Sir E. Wilmot had been completely vindicated.

The Marriages (Scotland) Bill, and the Registration of Births and Deaths (Scotland) Bill were postponed by the Lord ADVOCATE for the present session.

The House sat till half-past twelve o'clock, and advanced various bills.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

THE ROYAL ASSENT.—The Royal assent was given by Commission to the Factories Bill, the Poor Relief (Ireland) Bill, the Landed Property (Ireland) Bill, and a number of private bills.

NEW BISHOP OF MANCHESTER

A curious incident occurred in regard to the bill for establishing a new bishopric in Manchester.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE laid upon the table what he imagined was the bill having duly given it view

Lord BROUGHAM took up the supposed bill, which consisted of sheets of blank paper, which the noble Marquis had, by mistake, laid upon the table, instead of the bill, and asked, "Is this the bill? (A laugh.) If so, there does not seem to be much in it!" (Much laughter.)

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE apologised for the mistake.

Lord CAMPBELL said, it was an historical fact that a certain Lord Chancellor had frequently laid sheets of blank paper before the House, under the impression that they were bills. (A laugh.)

Lord BROUGHAM replied, that, looking at the nature of some of the bills that passed their Lordships' House, he wished with all his heart that they had been nothing but blank sheets of paper. (Much laughter.)

The bill was then placed on the table, and read a first time.

The House adjourned at an early hour.

HOUSE OF COMMONS TUESDAY.

The first part of the evening was occupied in a discussion upon the broad gauge clause of the Coventry, Banbury, and Oxford Junction Railway Bill, which was carried, on a division, by a majority of 35, the numbers being 108 to 70.

CORN AND NAVIGATION LAWS.—Lord J. RUSSELL, in answer to Mr. BANKES, replied that it was his intention to move the further suspension of the Corn and Navigation Laws until the 1st of March, but that he did not contemplate the adoption of an assize of bread.

Sir EARDLEY WILMOT.—Mr. HOSKINS asked the Colonial Secretary if he would give the names of the three persons who, according to Sir J. Graham's statement, had made the accusations against Sir J. E. Wilmot, which accusations were the cause of the late hon. Baronet's removal from the Governorship of Van Diemen's Land.—Mr. HAWES said there was no official record of the accusations in the Colonial Office, and he did not know the names of the persons.—Mr. B. ESCOTT called on Sir J. Graham either to give the names of these persons or assign a reason for refusing to do so.—Sir J GRAHAM replied that the names had been communicated to the present Sir E Wilmot, who would, most probably, call on those persons for explanation. In the meantime it would not be fair to leave them exposed to public invective during twelve months, and, therefore, he would not give the names.

BONDING OF BRITISH SPIRITS.—Mr. MOFFATT moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the operation of the existing regulations in reference to the bonding of British spirits in the United Kingdom, and to the rectification of British spirits for exportation.—While Mr. Moffatt was proceeding with his remarks in support of his motion, the House was "counted out," at half-past eight o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. WEDNESDAY.

To day's sitting, as usual on Wednesdays, was a morning one.

RAILWAY BILLS Soon after the House had assembled, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER brought under notice the resolutions which had been agreed to by the Select Committee appointed to consider the most expedient course to be pursued in regard to the many Railway bills in progress. He explained that in this report the Committee had unanimously decided not to interfere, and stop compulsorily all railway bills for this session. It had likewise determined not to make a selection of those bills which were to be allowed to go on. It had, however, resolved to give the promoters of a railway bill the power of suspending further proceedings this session, with the option of commencing in the next session at the stage where a bill might now be suspended, the deposits being meanwhile returned to the depositors. It had also agreed upon a resolution, that in all present and future bills there should be a provision inserted for the prohibition of the payment of any interest or dividends out of capital. With respect to the application for powers to construct branches from, or extensions of, existing lines, the Committee recommended a subscription contract for three-fourths of such additional capital as might be necessary, and prohibited the payment out of former capital of deposits on any new application to Parliament. The Chancellor of the Exchequer then stated the nature of the resolutions of the Committee relative to the power of any stage of lines of railroads, resolutions which provide that there shall be no power of sale or lease until the Railway Commissioners are satisfied that half the capital authorised to be raised has been actually expended. The Committee proposed further, that no power should be granted of the original line, no company should be allowed to guarantee interest on additional capital by means of a company out of the original line should be opened. The right hon. gentleman having thus stated the nature of the propositions of the Committee, moved the first resolution, empowering the promoters of such railway bills as were now in progress to suspend further proceedings upon them after the second reading or any subsequent stage at which they might have reached, and, on certain conditions, to resume them at the same stage in a subsequent session.—Sir R. HALSTOND objected to these resolutions being discussed at the time of private business, whereby the orders of the day would be superseded, and moved the adjournment of the debate.—This opposition led to a short conversation, and ultimately to a compromise—namely, that the original line should be opened. The right hon. gentleman having thus stated the nature of the propositions of the Committee, moved the first resolution, empowering the promoters of such railway bills as were now in progress to suspend further proceedings upon them after the second reading or any subsequent stage at which they might have reached, and, on certain conditions, to resume them at the same stage in a subsequent session.—Sir R. HALSTOND objected to these resolutions being discussed at the time of private business, whereby the orders of the day would be superseded, and moved the adjournment of the debate.—This opposition led to a short conversation, and ultimately to a compromise—namely, that the original line should be opened. The right hon. gentleman having appear more irregular than they really were, which was quite unnecessary. Lord MONTEAGLE supported the bill. The bill was read a second time, and the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS THURSDAY

THE RAILWAY RESOLUTIONS.—The House met to-day at twelve o'clock, according to arrangement, to discuss the Railway resolutions proposed by the Chancellor of the Exchequer. The debate was of a desultory character. Some verbal amendments were agreed to, and others rejected. The Resolutions having been all carried, the House soon after two o'clock adjourned till five.

THIRD READINGS OF RAILWAY BILLS.—The House met again at that hour, when the following bills were read a third time and passed: The Manchester, Buxton, and Midland Junction Railway Bill, the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway, and Manchester and Lincoln Union Railway, and Chesterfield and Gainsborough Canal Amalgamation. Royston and Hitchin Railway (Sale or Lease.)

NEW MEMBER FOR CORK.—Mr. S. O'BRIEN gave notice that on Monday next he should move that the Speaker do issue his warrant to the Clerk of the Crown to make out a new writ for the county of Cork, in the room of the late Daniel O'Connell, Esq.

ACCIDENTS ON RAILWAYS. Colonel SIBTHORP gave notice that on going into Committee of Supply, he should call the attention of the House to the accidents which occurred upon railways, and to the best means of guarding against these evils.

THE PRISONS BILL.—The remainder of the night was devoted to the adjourned discussion upon the question of going into Committee upon the Prisons Bill.

RAILWAY COMMITTEES. On Monday, in No. 4, the preamble of the London and Blackwall Improvement was declared proved.—The preamble of the Gloucester and Stonehouse Junction was declared proved, in 18.——It was decided, in No. 1, that the preambles of the Liverpool and Newcastle Junction, of the Burnley Collieries Branch, and of the East Lancashire Deviations, were proved.——On Tuesday, the preamble of the Leicester and Bedford to Hitchin, Northampton, and Huntingdon, was declared proved, in 17.——On Wednesday, in the Lords, the opposition to the Waterford, Wexford and Wicklow, having been withdrawn, the bill was passed.——The following other bills were passed in Lord Shaftesbury's Committee:—Cork and Bandon, Cork, Blackrock, and Passage; Midland Great Western of Ireland (Extension from Athlone to Galway); Glasgow, Barrhead, and Neilston Direct.——The preambles of the Liverpool, Manchester, and Newcastle Junction, and Northern Counties Union, were passed, in 38.——On Thursday, in Group 39, the Committee decided in favour of the preamble of the Clarence Railway and Leeds and Thirsk Amalgamation Bill.——In Group 40, the Committee decided that the preamble of the Edinburgh, Leith, and Granton (Union Canal and Caledonian Railway Junction), was not proved; and that the Caledonian (Edinburgh Station and Branches to Granton and to the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway) was proved.——Yesterday, the House of Lords decided that the preamble of the Windsor, Staines, and South Western Railway (from Richmond to Windsor) had been proved.

IRELAND.

MR. O'CONNELL'S FUNERAL.—THE "YOUNG IRELAND PARTY."

The Council of the Irish Confederation met on Monday, William Smith O'Brien, Esq., M.P., in the chair.

The Chairman stated that, having heard that Mr. O'Connell's family were desirous that the members of the Irish Confederation should not attend the funeral of Mr. O'Connell, he had thought it right to address the following letter to Mr. John O'Connell:—

4, Westland-row, June 7

"My Dear O'Connell,—As I should be very reluctant to take any part in reference to the funeral of your lamented father which may not be acceptable to his family I shall feel obliged if you would let me know whether it is their wish that those who dissented from the policy adopted by the Repeal Association during the last twelve months should attend the funeral.

I should not have deemed it necessary to trouble you with this inquiry, if I had not learned that it is the impression of some of my friends that Mr O'Connell's family desire that none of those who are called the "Young Ireland Party" should be present on the occasion.

I remain yours very faithfully,

WILLIAM S O'BRIEN

John O'Connell, Esq.

As our Council meets to-day at three o'clock, perhaps you will kindly forward an early reply. He regretted to say that he had received the following reply from Mr. Maurice O'Connell:—

30, Merrion-square South, June 7

Mr. Maurice O'Connell presents his compliments to Mr Smith O'Brien, and begs to say that his brother, Mr. John O'Connell, has just submitted to him Mr Smith O'Brien's letter of this morning's date, it becomes his duty in reply to inform him, that all arrangements for the funeral having been entrusted to the Glasnevin Cemetery Committee and the Rev. Dr. Miley, the family leaves it entirely in their hands

Mr. O'Brien stated that he did not desire to suggest any course to the Council in connection with the funeral, but he thought that each member of the Irish Confederation ought to act upon the occasion in accordance to his own sense of propriety; but, for his part, he inferred from Mr. O'Connell's letter, that it was the wish of the family that he should not attend the funeral.

THE WHEAT AND POTATO CROPS IN IRELAND.—The agricultural reports continue to be favourable, as regards the growth of all kinds in Ireland, and an early corn harvest is anticipated in all quarters. Some of the accounts disagree upon the subject of the potato crop. On one side, allegations are made that the disease of last year has again appeared, and instances are mentioned where whole acres have been blighted; but, on the other, the most positive details of the existence of the disease are published. Almost without exception, the Irish provincial journals state that the new potato crop presents a most healthy and luxuriant appearance, without the slightest symptom of the much-dreaded disease. It is quite probable that the potatoes in some localities are affected; but as yet not to any serious extent; and it may happen, as was the case last year, that a large portion of the early crop will escape altogether. The disease, if it exist, must have assumed a very modified form, and one much less rapid in its pervenous than that of last July. But, with regard to the wheat, oat, barley, and bere crops, there is a universal concurrence of opinion as to their satisfactory progress, and the prospect of an abundant yield.

ANOTHER MURDER IN LIMERICK. Another brutal murder was perpetrated near Limerick on Sunday night. The victim was a steward to Dr. Wilkinson, and resided at Trough. In the dead of night the house was attacked by an armed party. Casey, the ill-fated man, sprung from his bed to meet their sudden entrance, when they fired through the door and shot him in the heart. Casey's son pursued the miscreants, one of whom was arrested. This murder was perpetrated within two miles of Limerick, and not far from the scene of the assassination of Mr. Watson a few weeks ago.

A RELIC OF THE IRISH PARLIAMENT. By the death of Mr. Nicholas Price, of Saintfield-house, in the county of Down, a pension of £1000 a year reverts to the Crown. This pension Mr. Price enjoyed since the period of the Union, as compensation for the extinction of the office of Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod in the Irish House of Commons. The deceased was in the 97th year of his age, and was married to Lady Sarah Pratt, sister of the first Marquis of Camden, by whom he had one daughter, the wife of Major Blackwood, of Strangford, who now succeeds to the Saintfield estates.

THE DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE'S FETE TO THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE AT CHISWICK. The Duke of Devonshire gave a delightful fête on Tuesday, at his beautiful villa, the Palladium, near Chiswick, in honour of his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Constantine at Russia. The Grand Duke arrived shortly after three o'clock, accompanied by his Excellency Baron de Brunnow, and attended by a numerous suite. The Grand Duke and Duchess of Saxe Weimar, the Duchess of Gloucester, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, the Hereditary Prince of Lucca, and the Prince and Princess of Lichtenstein, were among the visitors.

BANQUET AT THE AUSTRIAN EMBASSY.—His Excellency the Austrian Ambassador and the Countess Colonna Walewski, entertained a select party on Saturday evening, at Chandos House, which was honoured with the presence of their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, and a distinguished circle of the nobility

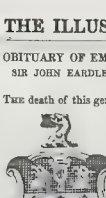
INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—On Saturday, Sir John Rennie gave his second and closing conversazione for the season. The attendance was very numerous and brilliant; the suite of rooms being crowded throughout the evening. Among the company we noticed the Marquis of Londonderry, the Marquis of Northampton, the Bishop of Norwich; and many of the leading engineers, architects, painters, and literati. There were several novelties among the models, which proved very attractive.

DINNER TO M. SOYER.—On Tuesday evening, a dinner was given at the London Tavern, to M. Soyer, by his friends, to mark their sense of his philanthropic and disinterested exertions for the relief of the poor in Ireland. There were about 150 guests present, Mr. E. Smith presiding, in the room of Sir Andrew Leith Hay, who was unable to attend. The carte of the dinner was characteristically excellent: among its novelties, the "Suedoise à la Jenny Lind" was in great request. After the customary loyal toasts, the Chairman proposed the health of M. Soyer, who, in returning thanks for the honour, assured the company that, "at the present time, from 20,000 to 25,000 poor persons were being daily relieved, without the slightest confusion, from the central kitchen in Dublin: all the depôts were supplied with wholesome and nutritious food, and he included, and at a saving of above one penny per head per diem, compared with the old system of preparing food in the Unions." The musical arrangements were in good taste: there was some excellent singing by Mr. Genge, and Mr. F. Smith; and the entertainment passed off very delightfully.

THE RECENT POISONING CASES AT KENSAL-GREEN.—On Wednesday morning, Mr. Walker, M.P., coroner for Middlesex, concluded his inquiry into the circumstances attending the deaths of James Hickman and his children, caused by partaking of a pudding with which a considerable quantity of white arsenic had become mixed. The particulars appeared in our paper of last week. The inquiry took place at the Portobello Arms, Kensal-green. Three medical gentlemen clearly proved that the deaths were occasioned by poison Harriet Hickman, wife of the deceased man, detailed the circumstances connected with the placing of the arsenic in the pudding, in the manner already stated. Caroline Bonamy (Mrs. Hickman's sister) deposed that she was a servant, but that having left her situation on the Tuesday previous to the occurrence of the sad event, she went to reside with the Hickmans. She assisted her sister in making the pudding, and while doing so observed that the small quantity of what she thought flour taken from the bag was much whiter than the other, and intended mentioning the fact to her sister, but it escaped her memory. The Coroner went through the evidence, expressing his conviction that the deaths of Hickman and his family were caused by the arsenic, which had thoughtlessly been left about; but that Mrs Hickman and Caroline Bonamy were totally ignorant of its nature when they mixed it up with the flour of which the pudding was composed. The Jury unhesitatingly returned a verdict to that effect.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

SIR JOHN EARDLEY EARDLEY WILMOT, BART., OF BERKSWELL HALL, CO. WARWICK



THE death of this gentleman, subduing all private and party animosity, has called forth an universal expression of regret. The melancholy event occurred at Hobart Town, on the 3rd February.

Sir Eardley, only son of John Wilmot, Esq., of Berkswell Hall, a Master in Chancery, and grandson of Sir John Eardley Wilmot, Knight, a celebrated lawyer, at one time Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, represented a branch of the ancient Derbyshire family of Wilmot, of Chaddesden, and derived, in the female line, from the Eardleys, of Eardley, in Staffordshire.

He was born 21st February, 1783, and married twice. By his first wife, Elizabeth Emma, daughter of C. H. Parry, M.D., of Bath, he leaves a large family, of which the eldest son is the present Sir John Eardley Wilmot, Bart. By his second wife, Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Sir Robert Chester, of Bush Hall, Herts, Sir Eardley also had issue. From 1832 to 1843 he sat in Parliament for Warwickshire. but retired in the latter year, on being appointed Governor of Van Diemen's Land. The duties of that office he performed until 1846, when he was superseded by Charles Joseph Latrobe, Esq. Previously to his departure from England, the late Baronet had acted as a Deputy-Lieutenant for Warwickshire, and was for several years the able and respected Chairman of the Quarter Sessions. The recent debate in the House of Commons explains fully the particulars of Sir Eardley Wilmot's recal from his Government.

SIR WILLIAM FITZGERALD, BART., OF NEWMARKET-ON-FERGUS.

SIR WILLIAM FITZGERALD died at his residence in Dublin, on the 30th ult. He was son of Edward Fitzgerald, Esq., of Carrygoran, M.P. for the county of Clare, to whom Col. Augustus Fitzgerald, of Silver Grove, left a considerable portion of his large property; and succeded to the Baronetcy in 1834, at the decease of his brother, Lieut.-Gen. Sir Augustine Fitzgerald.

Sir William married, in 1816, Emilia-Cumming, youngest daughter of William Veale, Esq., of Trevayler, in Cornwall, and niece of Sir Alexander Penrose Cumming Gordon, Bart., by whom he has left issue, three sons—the eldest, Sir Edward Fitzgerald, the present Baronet; and one daughter, Emilia Mary, wife of the Hon. James Butler, 6th son of Lord Dunboyne.

MARSHAL GROUCHY.

EMMANUEL, COUNT DE GROUCHY, a Marshal of France, was born at Paris, on the 23rd October, 1766. He was the scion of a noble family, and commenced his military career, under the old regime, in 1781. In 1786, he was a Lieutenant in the Scotch Company of the King's Guards. On the breaking out of the Revolution, Grouchy adopted the popular side, and soon became known as a leading warrior of the Republic. He rapidly rose to the rank of a General of Division; and, from that period of elevation, in 1794, until 1815, he was in continual and eminent active employment. He was wounded in the arm at the engagement of Sounieres, near Nantes; at the famous battle of Novi, where Suvarrow beat the French, he received fourteen wounds, and yet sustained the death struggle of the Republican army. In December, 1796, nearly three years prior to his fame at Novi, General Grouchy acted as second in command to Hoche, in the celebrated attempt of the French upon Ireland. The fleet of the Republic on that occasion contained 25,000 men, but the main portion of it was dispersed by a storm. Seventeen vessels, however, of 10,000 men, anchored in Bantry Bay; and, had the troops landed, Ireland, which was badly prepared for defence, would have been placed in imminent danger. Grouchy, unwilling to act in the absence of his superior officer Hoche, who was with the other ships, hesitated to avail himself of the opportunity, and, by sailing back, may be said to have saved the sister island. This fact is the more particularly singular, when it is considered that, nearly twenty years afterwards, similar hesitation on the part of the same general secured to the English the victory of Waterloo. In 1808, Grouchy was governor of Madrid, and he was then made military power until the memorable month of June, 1815, when he held the appointment of Commander-in-Chief of the French cavalry. His conduct at Waterloo, to which we have alluded, has been so frequently and so differently represented, and so much commented upon, that it is unnecessary to enter upon it here: suffice it to say, that the general belief now is that his fatal error during the battle arose, not from intention, but from an unhappy indecision. Grouchy was suspended on the 24th of July, 1815; but was restored to his rank in 1820; and, in 1825, received an annual pension of 12,000 francs. He was made a Marshal of France on the 15th of November, 1831. He latterly lived in strict retirement. His death occurred at St. Etienne on the 29th ult., in the eighty-second year of his age.

THE MARQUISE DE SOMMERY.

MADAME LA MARQUISE DE SOMMERY, born Riquet de Caraman—the last of eight brothers and sisters, all of whom had to bear the storm of the French Revolution, its prisons, exile, wars, and other trials, yet all of whom reached an advanced age—departed this life, at Bath, on the 22nd of May, in the seventy eighth year of her age.

She was born on the 28th of October, 1768; and was married to the late Marquis de Sommery in 1786. She was one amongst the last representatives at Versailles, during its splendour, pomp, and ceremonies of the ancient Court, and attracted the admiration of all by her grace and beauty; but these personal advantages, added to others which she possessed, had no power to seduce her heart; misfortune soon taught her to despise the flattering illusions of this world, and she gave herself up without reserve to sentiments of piety and religion, and to the fulfilment of affections and duties, from which nothing could withdraw her attention. She became the mother of fourteen children, of whom only six survive. During the trials of emigration she displayed heroic acts of devotedness, experienced all the severe privations of exile, and bore all with astonishing firmness and submission. Her religious and political convictions, joined to a sacred veneration for the memory of her cherished husband, who died in Bath in 1814, all concurred to induce her to fix her residence in England, where she sought refuge in the year 1793, after having passed a few years in Germany. It was by these considerations that she felt herself called upon to make the sacrifice of family interests (interests, nevertheless, most dear to her), and she never more saw her native land.

BIRTHS

At Edinburgh, the Lady Anne Charteris, of a son.——The lady of Alexander John Sutherland, M.D., of a son.——At the Vicarage, Hendon, the wife of the Rev George Rawlinson, of a daughter.——April 21st, at Poona, East Indies, the lady of John Biggs, Esq., H.M. 8th (King's) Regiment, of a daughter.——At Kendal, the lady of Robert Braithwaite, Esq., of a daughter.——On the 16th inst., at Wirksworth, Derbyshire, the lady of Alfred Arkwright, Esq., of a daughter.

MARRIAGES

At Paris, Henry R Steven, to Florance Matilda, eldest daughter of the late Charles Shannon, Esq.——On the 8th inst., R. T. G. Graham Montgomery, Esq., to Janet Phillips, eldest daughter of the late Lieutenant-Col Burney, R. N. [illegible]——At St. Mary's Church, Bryanstone-square, Thomas Addison Emmet, Esq., M.D., to Augusta Mercedes, Lady Baird Prescott, Esq.——At St. Helier's Church Jersey, James Cochrane, Esq., of her Majesty 16th Regiment, to Mary, daughter of Thomas Gibone Brewer, Esq.——At St. George's Church, Hanover square, John Warrender Dalrymple, Esq., youngest son of the late Sir John Dalrymple, Bart., to Sophia, youngest daughter of the late James Paith, Esq.——At Pimlico, George Bonington, Esq., to Harriet, youngest daughter of William Arnold, Esq.—— At Warwick, the Rev. Charles W. Landor, to Caroline, youngest daughter of William Staunton, Esq.

DEATHS

At Castle-green, Ludlow, aged eighty-four, George Hodges, Esq.——At Kensington, George White, Esq.——On the 27th ult, aged sixty-seven, Dougal Campbell, Esq., M.D., for forty years, Royal Artillery, at Hodgson-square, Newcastle.——At Chelmsford, Lady Baird Prescott, widow of General the Right Hon. Sir David Baird, Bart., G.C.B., K.C.——On the 23rd ult., Henry Dixon, Esq., of Deptford.——At Newark, Nottinghamshire, John Stephenson, Esq., in the 81st year of his age.——At Chipping Barnet, in the 79th year of her age, Mrs. Hannah Ann Marr, relict of the Rev. William Marr, B.D.——At No. 14, Hillsborough-terrace, Exeter, widow of the late D. Clarance, Esq., aged 83.——At Overbury, Worcestershire, in the 83rd year of her age, Jane Eyston, widow of the late Basil Eyston, Esq.——At Liverpool, Harriett Margaret, the wife of T. A. Curtis, Esq.——At Totnes, Devon, May 31, Arthur Dalrymple, the fourth and infant son of Thomas Dalrymple Buckeridge, Esq.——At Hammersmith, aged seventy, Miss Anne Patterson.——At Holloway, John Lawson, Esq.——At Hemel Hempstead, Mrs. Cooper, in her ninety-first year.——On Tuesday, the 8th inst., in Woburn-square, Cabel Hoope, Esq., late of Oporto, aged seventy.——At East Dulwich, Timothy Thorne, Esq.

EPITOME OF NEWS.—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

It seems to be now pretty well settled that the Session of Parliament will terminate before the second week in July, and that the dissolution will immediately follow, should no unforeseen circumstance arise to render its postponement necessary.

The Duke of Norfolk, Earl Marshal of England, has been unanimously elected President of the Royal Humane Society, in the room of the late Duke of Northumberland

A letter from Rome, of the 25th ult., says —" Cardinal Micara, Dean of the Sacred College, died at five o'clock yesterday evening, at the age of 72. This Cardinal always showed himself the enemy of the Jesuits.'

Last week, the new harbour and docks at Stranton, near Hartlepool, were opened. They will afford shelter to vessels on this dangerous part of the coast, and, at the same time, give facilities to commerce.

We read in a letter from Munich of the 27th ult.:—"There has just been stolen from our museum a painting by the celebrated Dutch painter Mieris, who died in 1681. It was the portrait of the artist himself, and the only production of Mieris possessed by the Bavarian Museum."

The Directors of the Leeds Railway Company are now engaged in establishing a line of telegraphic communication between Manchester and Leeds. Already the communication between Manchester and Rochdale is complete, and the powers of the telegraph were tested for the first time last week

The Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between Naples and Prussia, acting in the name of the Zollverein, which was concluded the 27th January last, has just been ratified. It establishes perfect reciprocity, and enacts, first, that merchandise and products coming from Prussia and the States of the Zollverein, shall pay 10 per cent. less than the merchandise and products coming from other states now pay according to the Neapolitan tariff.

The Réforme states that M. Ratier, a farmer near Poictiers, has completely succeeded in preserving his potato crop from the prevailing malady by placing a handful of common salt on each portion of seed. A similar experiment has been tried at Thann, in the department of the Upper Rhine, with equal success, by M. Willien, a chymist.

A Mr. Lillibridge, of New York, has discovered a method of make ice cream by steam. He proposes to cool the parched throats of the people at half their former rates.

Letters from Italy state that the principal chiefs of the thirty-three provinces of the community of Capucins have been convoked at Rome for the election of a General of the Order. It is the first time for seventy years that the friars of this religious community have been able to meet together. Among the countries represented are France, Ireland, Belgium, Bavaria, Austria, the Tyrol, and Switzerland.

The German States, it is said, have resolved on some important postage reforms Letters are to be sent by the most direct routes, and the postage is to be uniform, and as low as possible.

The ceremony of laying the foundation stone of the high-level bridge over the Tyne, at Newcastle, is to be performed shortly by the Earl of Zetland, Grand Master of the Fraternity of Freemasons.

The continental journals announce a decline in the prices of wheat and bread in various places. At Colmar, Mulhouse, Rouffach, Soulz, Belfort, Strasbourg, Besancon, and various towns on the French frontier, there has been a general fall of from 4 to 7 francs within a week. Letters from Frankfort say, that within eight days wheat has fallen in that market from 26 florins to 15 florins per mett.

The broad gauge extension from Gloucester to Cheltenham, it is said, will be opened before the expiration of the present month.

A letter from China, says the Breton of Nantes, has been received in that town, stating that several captains of French, English, and American vessels have had audiences of the Emperor of Japan, soliciting the opening of his ports to the commerce of their respective countries.

Last week the branch from the Drogheda Railway leading to Howth, now completed to the harbour, was opened for traffic throughout.

It appears from an official account that the gross revenue of the Post-office, arising from every source whatsoever, for the year ended 5th January, 1847, was £2,904,067 15s. 1d. Deducting the amount of foreign and colonial postage for the year, the total revenue was £2,304,319 2s. 2d. The total number of letters to and from all places beyond seas for the year 1846, was 8,540,456; the total number of newspapers, ditto, ditto, 2,698,376; and the total amount of postage for the same, £624,768 12s. 3d.

A Parliamentary paper shows that the total quantities of wheat returned by the inspectors of corn returns as brought to market annulled, in the [illegible] of January, 571,[illegible] qrs.; in February, to 391,946 qrs.; in March, to [illegible] qrs.; and in April, to [illegible] qrs. The gross total quantity brought to market in the year 1846 amounted to 5,958,957 qrs.

The Dublin papers announce the death of Dr. Litton, Professor of Botany to the Royal Dublin Society.

The inhabitants of Whitelsea, in the Isle of Ely, the birthplace of Major-General Sir Harry Smith, will give a grand banquet in honour of the gallant officer on the 1st of next month.

The Hampden Estate, celebrated as having been the residence of John Hampden, and where his remains are deposited, is once more in the market. The property, it will be recollected, was purchased some time since from the Earl of Buckinghamshire by Lord Harry Vane.

The Prussian Gazette states that an accident occurred on May 27, on the railway from Warsaw to Czenstochova, by which five persons out of sixty were killed, four others were severely wounded, and eight slightly. The accident was occasioned by the train going off the rails.

The Rev. George Millers, Minor Canon of Ely, has just succeeded, under will, to the large real and personal estate of Miss Frances E. Millers, of Duddon Grove, Cumberland. The personal property is estimated at £60,000. A bequest of £6000 to Bindman Frew School is the only other bequest.

The vessel Socrates has just brought from Calcutta, besides 6403 bags of rice in the husk (now free of duty), 50 bags of wheat. This is a novel importation from the East Indies.

Very favourable accounts have been received from Barbadoes. The advices, which extend to the 6th of May, represent the weather as beautiful; the yield of the crop exceeded the expectations of the most sanguine.

At the sitting of the Imperial Academy of Sciences of Helsingfors (Finland), held on May 21, M. Nordenskjold, one of the members, presented a new kind of stone, which he discovered near the gold-washing establishment of Nyschnei-Tagilsk (Russia). It is like a diamond in appearance, but of less specific gravity. M. Nordenskjold has given it the name of diamondtoid

M. Devarenne, a founder, at Berbn, recently received an order from Helsingfors, the capital of the Grand Duchy of Finland, to cast in zinc, for the Cathedral of that city, colossal statues of the twelve Apostles, after those sculptured in marble by Thorwaldzen for the Church of our Lady at Copenhagen. Six of them have been cast. They are the largest works in zinc ever executed, and are modelled in a style of excellence that has excited great admiration.

A Cumberland paper gives a list of 40 individuals interred at Cockermouth Church between the 1st of January, 1846, and the 1st of June, 1847 —a period of 17 months, whose united ages amount to three thousand two hundred and ninety one years! being an average of more than fourscore years each.

There have of late been an astonishing number of fires in Silesia. The most destructive was in the large village of Brantiz, where more than 230 houses were destroyed and three persons burnt to death.

The Spanish Government issued on the 2nd a decree relative to the coinage, by which it is enacted that the monetary unity is to be the real, but that there shall be pieces in gold of the value of 100 reals (20*l.*), to be called Isabellinas; in silver of the value of ten reals, to be called the half-piastre or decen; and in copper the one-tenth of a real. There are also to be struck of silver pieces of twenty, four, and two reals, and copper pieces of five and one real.

During the last Session, the House of Commons sat 140 days, and there were 76 divisions on public matters, 61 before, and 15 after midnight.

A Mr. S. B. Rodgers, of Nantygilo, has published a pamphlet on the practicability of constructing 10,000 miles of railway through Europe and Asia, and thus connecting London and Paris with Canton and our East India possessions, and all the great cities and provinces on its route. The route proposed is by Paris, Munich, Vienna, Belgrade, and Constantinople; thence through Syria, Persia, Beelochistan, and Scinde, to Godlpoor, Calcutta, through the Birman Empire, and the north part of Cochin China, to Canton.

Accounts from Badajos of the 30th ult. mention that the division of the Spanish army stationed on that part of the Portuguese frontier was to occupy Yelves and Estremos, and to lay siege to Evora, which was garrisoned by the insurgents. Another division was to enter Portugal from Andalusia, and operate in the Algarves. Little or no resistance was expected.

From Hayti we learn that the Haytien barque Le Président was blown up on the 23d of April, whilst she was engaged in firing minute guns in celebration of the anniversary of the death of President Guerrier, who died five years ago. A the time she was blown up, there were eighty convicts in chains on board, in the hold, who all perished. The accident occurred from a spark lighting on the powder which was placed on the deck to be fired.

Some arrivals of peas have taken place from France, which, as a raw vereitable, are free of duty; and arriving at this early period, before the home crop has become sufficiently abundant to be very cheap, have no doubt met with a ready market.

A writer in the Morning Herald gives an interesting account of the speed attained at different periods on the Great Western Railway. For instance, on the 25th of May, the Great Western locomotive, with a train of seventy tons, performed part of the distance at the rate of upwards of seventy miles an hour. On the following day, the Iron Duke proceeded, with a train of fifty tons, at the average speed of forty-four miles per hour.

The number of passengers between England and Boulogne, during the week ending the 6th of June, was 1577, of which 792 went to and 785 came from Boulogne. The number of passengers to and from Calais, was 311, being 102 less than the corresponding week last year.

We this week present our readers with a fac-simile of an interesting group, taken, a few days since, at the Polytechnic Institution, by Mr. Beard's patent photographic process.

The features of his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Constantine will be immediately recognised: the other three individuals composing the group are Admiral Lütke, the celebrated Russian circumnavigator; Conseller d'Etat Haurowitch; and the Baron Friedricks; all of whom are attached to the person of the Prince.

THE GRAND DUKE,

who is now so zealously employed in making himself acquainted with our institutions, arts, and manufactures, has been trained to the very best account by his Mentor and friend, Admiral Lütke, under whose orders the young Prince has been serving, and has acquired the rank of "Post-captain in the Russian navy." As such he subscribed himself, a few days since, when he visited the model-room of the Admiralty, at Somerset-House. He is "Titular Grand Admiral" of the Imperial fleet.

ADMIRAL LUTKE

is Adjutant-General to his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Russia, and is the famous circumnavigator of the globe, who has added so much to our geographical knowledge by his discoveries in the North Pacific, &c. The expedition which the gallant Admiral commanded, consisted of two Russian sloops of war, the Moller and the Semarin, and left St. Petersburg in 1827. The result of the researches made during the absence of the expedition was published by the gallant Admiral on his return in Russ, was subsequently translated into French, and has since become a naval text-book.

Admiral Lütke is one of the most distinguished Academicians of St. Petersburg, and a great patron of science and literature. He is himself well known as an author, and his "Memoirs on the Tides" are of the same high order as those of our most eminent mathematicians. He has long been one of the honorary members of the Royal Geographical Society of London. The gallant Admiral was likewise the first who made a correct hydrographical survey of the White Sea; and since the recent creation of a Geographical Society at St. Petersburg, Admiral Lütke, in his capacity of Vice-President of the Society, and under the auspices of the Grand Duke Constantine has shown much zeal in extending geographical knowledge of his own country, as well as that of the countries bordering on the vast Empire of Russia.

Admiral Lütke was appointed tator to the Grand Duke on his return to Russia, after having completed the circuit of the globe: his Imperial Highness was then only five years old; and the Admiral has since continued to superintend and direct the education of the young Prince.

BARON FRIEDRICKS

ranks as a Lieutenant in the Imperial Navy, and is about the same age as the Grand Duke; he has been associated with his Imperial Highness as companion for some years past. He is the son of Baron Friedricks the elder, who is one of the Equerries to the Emperor; and his mother is one of the principal Ladies of the Empress' Court.

M. DE HAUROWITCH,

a physician of eminence, was appointed to the person of the Prince about the same time as Admiral Lütke, and has since continued to attend his Imperial Highness during his travels.

The Imperial party will, we learn, remain in London about a fortnight, and then travel through the interior of England into Scotland.

HIS IMPERIAL HIGHNESS THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE OF RUSSIA, ADMIRAL LUTKE, M. HAUROWITCH, AND BARON FRIEDRICKS.
FROM A DAGUERREOTYPE, BY MR. BEARD.

Though less in stature, and only in his twentieth year, the Grand Duke is, as the Scotch say, "his father's own son," frank, manly, intelligent, and courteous. He has certainly made himself very popular with all, and everywhere, in the very short space of time during which he has been amongst us.

In the Illustration, nearly in the centre, is seated the Grand Duke, with Admiral Lütke on his right. Leaning on the Admiral's chair is Baron Friedricks; and, on his left, Dr. Haurowitch.

NORFOLK ISLAND.

By the Ministerial measure now in progress through Parliament, it is proposed entirely to abolish the punishment of Transportation, of which Norfolk Island was, until lately, a sort of experimental ground for a new system of convict discipline, which, while carrying out the punishment inflicted by the law, should lead to reformation of the criminals. Detention in the Island was the first of the five stages through which a convict had to pass on arriving at the colonies. This stage applied to all sentences of transportation for life, and to the more aggravated cases of convicts sentenced for any term not less than fifteen years. Four years were fixed as the longest, and two years as the shortest period of detention in Norfolk Island.

The new system adopted here appears to have so signally failed; and the state of things existing there during last year presented "so much guilt, wretchedness, and mismanagement;" that, in September last, Earl Grey instructed the Governor of New South Wales, with the least possible delay, to break up the establishment at Norfolk Island, and to withdraw the whole population of that settlement to Tasman's Peninsula. This removal has been effected; there being left upon the Island only a sufficient establishment to take charge of the buildings.

Norfolk Island, situated in the 29th parellel of south latitude, is about 1500 miles north-easterly from Van Diemen's Land, and contains about 9000 acres in superficial extent. There are but two seasons, summer and winter; the former occasionally oppressively hot, and the latter characterised by heavy rains and strong winds.

The Island has not a river, but springs are found in various directions. The country is extremely picturesque, and very beautiful; the surface presents a general level of about 300 or 400 feet, broken into rather steep valleys. At the west part, Mount Pitt rises to the height of about 2600 feet. The timber-trees are abundant, and highly ornamental; the elegant Norfolk Island pine prevailing. Lemon, lime, and guava trees abound throughout the Island, as if indigenous; also, the Cape gooseberry and castor oil plant. There are, likewise, produced on the Island, oranges, grapes, figs, bananas, peaches, pomegranates, melons, and pine-apples; the coffee-tree is grown, as are, also, barley and oats; but the growth of Indian corn or maize has been unsuccessful.

About a year since, there were nearly 2000 convicts, of whom 923 were from Van Diemen's Land, or New South Wales, labouring under second or more convictions; the remainder (1425) arrived direct from England. These men were located at three stations on the Island. The principal settlement, or "King's Town," is situated on the south side of the Island, facing the sea, on the shore of Sydney Bay, and a little above the level of the sea. Opposite to it are Nepean and Philip Islands; the former a barren rock, about a mile to the east; the latter to the south, about six miles distant, partially wooded, and presenting a bold headland to the southward.

The principal buildings at the settlement are the prisoners' barracks, in which they slept; the lumber-yard, in which they messed; the hospitals; and the gaols, old and new. The prisoners worked in gangs under convict subordinates, in the manner shown in the Illustration.

As the soil of Norfolk Island is very fertile, a British settlement was formed there in 1789, from Sydney; but, although the grain sown produced abundant crops, and potatoes and other vegetables succeeded, and although the climate was very favourable to the health of the settlers, and the water good, it was abandoned some years afterwards, on account of the difficulty of landing.

NORFOLK ISLAND.—THE CONVICT SYSTEM.

ANTIQUITIES AT EXETER.—The following antiquities were found at Exeter, during the last week. In Gandy-street, at the depth of fifteen feet, a small Roman calix, or cup of Samian ware, inscribed "MIV. IVAG Mance Pavli" in the bottom. A quantity of bones of men and animals was found on the same spot. Also, a Jetton, or Nuremberg token; on one side, the Reichsapfel or Imperial globe: on the other, "Gottes Gaben sol Man Lob." ("God's gifts should man praise"). At Heavitree, a copper coin of West Friesland, with its arms—viz., two Lions ca, date 1630. In the cemetery, a coin of the second brass of Domitian, "CAS AVG GERM. PERP." somewhat defaced: and an silver token, of the first year of Cromwell's protectorate, "JOHN DAGOE, of EXON, 1653," on one side, with a lion passant gardant; on the other, "I. D. A." in a circle, well preserved.

DINNER AT BEAUFORT HOUSE.—The Duke and Duchess of Beaufort gave a grand dinner party at Beaufort House, on Monday night, to the Prince and Princess Lichtenstein, the Earl and Countess of Chesterfield, Lord Fitzroy Somerset, Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, Honourable W. Bagot, Honourable [illegible] Leveson, Dr. Quin, Mr. E. St. John Mildmay, Mr. and Mrs. John Stanley, and the Marquis of Worcester.

NEW LANDING STAGE ST. GEORGE'S PIER, LIVERPOOL

NEW LANDING STAGE, LIVERPOOL.

THIS stupendous work has just been completed at Liverpool, for the convenience of the public; it was launched on the 31st ult., from the dock in which it was built, and then took up its station for permanent use opposite the George's Pier Head. The stage was towed to her moorings by seven steamers; and on its leaving the dock works there was long and loud cheering among the workmen; and the piers were also crowded with spectators, from the Clarence to the Albert Dock.

The figure of the upper surface of the Landing Stage is very nearly that of a ship's deck, with a bow at each end. The length of the Stage is 508 feet, and its width all over 82 feet. The flooring consists of 3-inch planks, of the best pitch pine, such as is used for the same purpose in a first-rate line-of-battle ship. The planks are secured with patent compressed tree-nails, and are made perfectly tight by caulking; and, to prevent the lodgment of water, the surface is made to slope gently towards the edges. From the edge inwards, for a breadth of 16 feet, the planks are laid longitudinally, or parallel with the sides of the stage; after that, for a breadth of 18 feet, they are laid diagonally, down the centre, they again run longitudinally, and in the same order between the centre and the opposite side. Thus, much additional strength is gained, by increasing the power of resisting the shock of a vessel or other body coming in contact with the sides of the Stage.

The edges are not protected by any bulwarks or chains, as they might interfere with the passage. Massive oaken stanchions, a foot square, and secured on the inside by strong iron knees, encircle the deck, at intervals of ten feet, with low mooring-posts in the intermediate spaces, well strapped to the deck. Near each bow are four longitudinal timbers, thirty-five feet in length, to serve as mooring-bits, and bearing evidence of a capacity for sustaining the utmost strain to which the mooring-chains may be subjected.

The flooring rests upon a double tier of balks firmly strapped together, making the entire depth of the wood-work 3½ feet. Underneath, running transversely with this substantial platform, are 39 iron pontoons, flat on the upper surface, on which the timbers rest, and cylindrical on the lower, so as to offer the smallest amount of obstruction to the flow of the tide beneath. The length of the pontoons corresponds, of course, with the breadth of the flooring; except when the latter tapers off towards the ends, they are 80 feet long, by 10 feet in width, and 6 in depth. These pontoons are connected with the wood-work by iron straps, and they can be entered by man-holes from the deck, for the purpose of being examined and repaired.

The connection between the Landing Stage and the Pier will be by means of two iron bridges, which are now in course of construction by Mr. Cubitt, the engineer of the Stage. The length of these bridges will be 180 feet, and the width 17 feet: one for ascending, and the other for descending.

The pontoons will always be in deep water, so that steamers will be able to come alongside in any state of the tide. The area of the deck is 4467 square yards, or nearly an acre. The tonnage, by carpenters' measurement, is 16,000 tons; upon the centre area of the deck, 40,000 persons could find standing room. There are 40,000 cubic feet of timber in the Stage. And, in the construction of the pontoons, from six to seven hundred tons of iron have been used. The draught of water is two feet ten inches, but it will be over three feet when at its proper bearings, a draught which will require a superincumbent weight of 2500 tons. The entire depth is eleven feet—namely, pontoons 6 feet, and deck 5 feet. The cost of the Stage will be upwards of £30,000, and the working of it £1500 per annum, irrespective of repairs. A lighthouse, with powerful reflectors, is erected at each end of the Stage.

We have, by aid of a Liverpool paper, been thus minute in detailing the construction of this stupendous Stage, from a persuasion of the great importance of the work. Some doubt has been expressed as to the possibility of the Stage sustaining a gale of wind, and a heavy sea; others doubt the holding power of the anchors. These are matters which, however, can only be tested by time. We believe this new structure to be unmatched for its colossal proportions—and the cheapness of the work—considering its strength and magnitude.

FIRE AT MESSRS. MAUDSLAY AND FIELD'S, THE ENGINEERS.

IN part of our impression last week, we stated that about one o'clock on Saturday morning a fire occurred on the extensive premises of Messrs. Maudslay and Field, the engineers, in the Westminster-road. The flames had a terrific appearance, and were seen for miles. There was such a small supply of water that the fire could not be extinguished for some hours.

Some exaggerated accounts have appeared of the extent of the damage, but Mr. W. Rogers, the architect, of Lambeth, who has surveyed the premises, states that not a fifth portion of the premises was destroyed. He adds that the damage has been confined, with little exception, to the carpenters' shops, pattern store, vice lofts, &c.

The fire originated in the carpenters' shops, which are situate in the eastern extremity of the building; thence it spread with great rapidity to the pattern lofts on one side, and to the boiler shops on the other.

The great loss to the firm is the total destruction of the pattern lofts, with their valuable contents. Here were stowed away the patterns of various castings—some of the most valuable and intricate description—made during the last 20 years.

The boiler shops and forge shops have also suffered very much, the former being unroofed, and all the inflammable matter contained therein entirely consumed. This portion of the factory, however, fortunately contained no tools or machinery which cannot be replaced in a few weeks, and but a brief stoppage of the works will ensue

THE FIRE AT MESSRS. MAUDSLAY AND FIELD'S, SKETCHED FROM WATERLOO-BRIDGE.

The factory and premises are insured in the Sun Fire Office on a policy of £16,900. Even this large amount will fall infinitely short of Messrs. Maudslay's loss, to say nothing of the inconveniences which must ensue from the temporary stoppage of even a portion of the works. Some idea of their extent may be formed from the fact that upwards of one thousand workmen were employed on the premises yesterday week

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK

SUNDAY, June 13. Second Sunday after Trinity.—New Moon at 9h. 52m. in the morning

MONDAY, 14. The Length of the Day is 16h.30m., and it has increased 8h. 45m. since the Shortest Day.

TUESDAY, 15 Venus sets at 11h. 0m. p.m., near the N.W. by N. point of the horizon.

WEDNESDAY, 16 Mars rises at 0h. 35m. a.m., near the East point of the horizon.

THURSDAY, 17.—St. Alban.—Saturn rises at 11h. 56m. p.m., near the East point of the horizon

FRIDAY, 18.—Battle of Waterloo.

SATURDAY, 19.—The Sun rises at 3h. 44m., is due East at 7h. 17m., and sets at 8h 18m.

The planet Venus will shine brilliantly between the times of sunset and her setting herself. The planets Saturn and Mars are near each other, and rise nearly due East about midnight.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE, FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 19.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
h m a m p	h m a m p	h m a m p	h m a m p	h m a m p	h m a m p	h m a m p
1 53 2 20	2 42 3 0	3 20 3 43	4 5 4 25	4 44 5 3	5 25 5 45	6 5 6 22

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"P. P." We engraved, in our Journal, so long ago as Oct. 11, 1845, (No. 180) the first Portrait of Millie Jenny Lind that appeared in this country

"J. B. B."—Burke's "Peerage;" Fleming and Tibbins's "Grand Dictionnaire."

"A Subscriber," Burton.—We hope the Grain Hoarders in our Correspondent's neighbourhood will be disappointed.

"C. S. P."—"Afraid" is a participial adjective

"T. W.," Ramsgate.—The first is a lex horse.

"A Parisian Admirer," Guernsey.—Sabbath regales cant.

"Anglesea," North Wales.—Probably, an application to a Colonial house in the City may succeed.

"P" is thanked; but we have not room for the lines.

"E. R. A.," Kensington. The parties are not related.

"S. P. E."—Italian and Spanish.

"P. B."—Apply for the certificate.

"H. V." Stockport, will, perhaps, favour us with the Engraving and descriptive details

THE NORTHAMPTON AND DORCHESTER RAILWAY was opened for traffic on the 1st instant. Our information, last week, was derived from a Southampton newspaper

"A Correspondent" who inquires what it will cost to send "a box" to China should apply to a gratuated Scale of Charges at the Peninsular and Oriental Company's Temporary Parcel Office, No. 44, St. Mary Axe. A box, one cubic foot measurement, will be taken to China for £1, ten shillings per cwt. (payable to the Egyptian Government) on every article above £5 being added to the rate.

"Worcester." "R. G. H.," Dartmouth, maintains that "Archipelago" is not a corruption of "Aigeopelage;" but derived from Αρχὸς, principatus, and πελαγος, mare, "a Government on the Sea." "R. G. H." *also informs our Correspondent "*Φιλοσοφος," (but philosophus, in Greek, is spelt with an ὁ, (omikron,) not ω, (omega,) in the last syllable.

"Llewelyn."—Hemmingway's "Panorama of North Wales" is a good work of its class.

"W. R. T." See the "Mechanic's Magazine"

"A Recent Speculator" will find the fullest details of "the Hop Trade" in the Mark Lane Express, and in the Kentish newspapers.

"E. A. A."—Hyperion was the son of Cœlus and Terra: he married Thea, by whom he had Sol, Luna, and Aurora. Hence, his name is frequently used to denote the Sun.

"S. S." is recommended to appeal first to the District Commissioners.

"Ronalde del Sarto" is correct: in one of our Replies last week, "the Derby Stakes at Ascot" should be "at Epsom."

"A Subscriber." Strangers are admitted to the New House of Lords on Saturdays, by Tickets previously obtained on Wednesdays at the Lord Chamberlain's Office; and during the hearing of Appeals without tickets

"E. P."—Wenham Lake is 15 miles from Boston, in the State of Massachusetts.—See the details of the Ice Trade in No. 189 of our Journal.

"L. L. M.' Ashton. In both cases, from necessity.

"M. A. 1. Both persons should be named in an introduction.—2. We do not know 3. Declined

"X. A. X.," Cork. Begin with the "Manual of English Grammar," published by Cleaver

"J. B. W." It is perfectly legal to translate French works into English, and publish the same; but, it is rarely, profitable to do so.

"A Subscriber." Elizabeth's Shilling is worth from the price of old silver to £2 All depends on the devices and the rarity of type.

"Juncus."—The Tax on Armorial Bearings was not affected by Sir Robert Peel's Tariff Measures.

"M. D. S." A communication has been sent in answer to the enquiry

"A Free Years' Subscriber."—Through interest with the official authorities. The pay is too small to enable an Englishman to live upon it.

"J. B. T." We cannot account for the apparent paradox between the name and figure-head of the Janette; but the latter is, probably, used in commemoration of a feat of Lord Rosmore's ancestor, Van Wassenaer, of Holland, who, according to Burke's "Peerage," swam across an arm of the sea, in order to convey important intelligence to his besieged countrymen, during the Duke of Alva's campaign.

"D. B." The Reform Club-House, in Pall Mall, was completed in 1840.

"Jed." We cannot tell

"O. R. H."—We do not interfere in Wagers.

"A Clergyman's Daughter."—Mr. W. Wonder, Dealer in Coins, 17, Great Russell-street, Covent Garden.

"C. H."—Address the Lord Chamberlain.

"A. B.," Belfast, should assure the interest of a Member of Parliament.

"W. and S."—The Trials of O'Connell and others have been published in a volume: apply to Benning, Fleet-street

"F. E. G." In the autumn

"A Constant Subscriber," Boulogne. See any good Collection of Comic Songs.

"Biker," Peterborough.—Apply to Mr. Weale, bookseller, High Holborn.

"Portsmouth" "To the Lord of Burghley" is a play published at 3s. 6d.

"Money Fret."—We make no apology for neglecting to furnish you with a list of the Derby and Oaks for next year, as a compliance with your request would occupy about three of our columns. Horses "is" entered for the Derby, when yearlings, during the July Meeting at Newmarket, with the Messrs. Weatherby.

WOLFDOG is a fine-spun-old, and is not, consequently, in the forthcoming St. Leger It was a typographical error. This to several Correspondents.

BOOKS RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK

PITMOCK'S Scripture History. ——Manual of Domestic Economy.——Whittaker's Opinions and New Discoveries.

MUSIC.—The Merry Chimes.——The Swedish Star. —Oh, I have had a lovely Dream. —The Swedish Star Polka.——Davidson's Melodist. Vol. 1.—— Davidson's Songs of Britain. Vol. 1.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 12, 1847.

THE adage that "too sharp never cuts well" is exemplified in Mr. Gladstone. He has more than the intellectual acuteness of a sophist, or one of the old scholastic disputants. To most men there is one plain rule of right and wrong; Mr. Gladstone sees many degrees of both, and acting as a Minister on this refined view of a question of moral conduct has plunged him into one of the most discreditable positions that a Statesman could occupy. While he was Secretary of the Colonies in 1846, he thought it necessary to recal Sir Eardley Wilmot, the Governor of Van Diemen's Land, for reasons in which that gentleman's private and public conduct were blended together. Mr. Gladstone most ingeniously divided them; and in a secret despatch told him that his private life was such he could not employ him under the Crown again, —completely ruining him with two blows when one would have sufficed. The Governor's public faults seem to have been that he was hardly gaoler enough for that thieves' settlement, and did not send home accounts sufficiently "penetrating" of the "inward life" of the convicts, who were converting the place into a perfect dwelling-place of devils. Divested of the kind of cant in which it is written, the public despatch seems to amount to this—that the Governor did not keep the Colonial Office fully informed of the dreadful doings in the colony. But the Office had other means of information; it listened to charges against the Governor's private life; believed them without proof, for no facts were alleged; and Sir Eardley Wilmot was dismissed, in the two-fold manner above specified. The disgrace was so keenly felt, that, added to the anxieties caused by an impaired fortune, it caused his death; and now, when it is too late, it appears conclusively that the rumours which Mr. Gladstone with such strange rashness acted on were wholly false and unfounded. All the officers, civil, military, and ecclesiastic, of the colony have joined in proving their falsehood, and Mr. Gladstone has made the most abject of apologies! Every one is wondering how a clever man, like the late Colonial Secretary, could possibly have so committed himself; the slightest practical tact, or worldly common sense, would have saved him from the blunder. It is beginning to be thought there is in him a love of singular modes of action, like that which made him quit the Government, because he disapproved of the Maynooth grant, and then vote for it; following up the inconsistency by an explanation that left all man more in the dark than before. The House of Commons has devoted one night to a discussion on this last official blunder of Mr. Gladstone; and the effect of the debate is very unfavourable to him as an administrator; it shakes confidence in the strength of his judgment; for, unlike less able men, no excuse can be found for him in a deficiency of other mental qualities; he has them rather in excess, or, perhaps, refined to the point at which they become useless. Who could fancy that an English Minister, at the present day, could be found listening to rumours, and acting on them, as if they were proved facts, against one of the main rules of the department, which is, that all complaints against a colonial Governor shall be forwarded to the home Government through that officer himself, who may thus be made aware of them? It was impossible even for the accused man himself to ascertain the charge against him; simply for the reason that his accusers had alleged things that were neither quite rumours nor quite facts, but, to use Mr. Gladstone's hair-splitting phraseology, "occupying an intermediate position" So unvarying in their character are the acts of arbitrary power, that a passage in Juvenal exactly describes the affair :—

> What was the crime for which he fell? And who > Was the informer? What evidence? What proof?
> Nothing of these ——
> A lengthy and verbose epistle came > From Capreæ.*

Even Mr. Gladstone's style, "lengthy and verbose," is perfectly described; we have only to substitute the Colonial Office for Capreæ, and the picture is complete.

The discussion ended, as all such discussions do, in the comfortable conclusion that nobody was to blame. Sir Eardley Wilmot was acquitted, and not a stain rests on his memory. Mr. Gladstone ruined and killed him, from the best possible motives, and has said he is very sorry for what happened; very few blame his inconceivable folly and rashness in the matter. And of the three persons who whispered the false charges at the Colonial Office, fearing to warrant them by their names, two still hold office in the Colony, and the third is a "highly respectable" individual! Nothing can be done to them, because "there is no official record" in Downing-street of such charges ever having been made; that is to say, a public officer was ruined in fortune, and had his "life's life lied away" by words, and not by document! There must be a separate code of official morality from that which rules private life: in ordinary society, any one acting as Mr. Gladstone did would be disgraced for ever, and the two informers could be mulcted in heavy damages, for slander; but the Colonial Office cannot be touched.

* Sed quo cecidit sub crimine? Quisnam
Delator? Quibus indiciis? Quo teste probavit?
Nil horum; verbosa et grandis epistola venit
A Capreis. JUVENAL: Sat. X.

DEATH, or the changes of life, are perpetually bringing up the names of men who, having "had their time of talk," have sunk out of note and become wholly forgotten. Their revival is like calling up relics of another age to the eyes of the present, that requires an explanation to be given it of who and what they were. The past week has brought to the surface two names, on which, perhaps, more public execration has been heaped than on any other public characters of the last century—Marshal Grouchy, and Godoy, the Prince of Peace. Grouchy was one of the Generals of the Revolution, whose name, like those of Hoche, Moreau, and others, sank under the ascendancy of Napoleon, who disliked the men of that era; but he was an able man, and did such good service in the Russian campaign that the Emperor, in the latter part of his career, was won to confidence in him. It was Grouchy who commanded the army detached by Napoleon to check the advance of Bucher on Waterloo, and to prevent the junction of the Prussian with the English forces. Whether it was treason, or incapacity, or bad luck, certain it is he failed; and he was considered by the French as the great cause of the "disaster" of Waterloo. For years the operations of Grouchy during those few eventful days continued to be a military controversy, and we believe the question is not yet settled. It is said by some that he adhered strictly to the orders of Napoleon; that Marshal Ney was a great misunderstanding somewhere, for when the Prussian columns appeared, the Emperor for some time believed them really to be Grouchy's corps: he was soon undeceived. The Marshal's name is one of those that will be remembered by their connection with an immense failure.

Don Manuel Godoy, the Prince of Peace, filled a still more prominent position, and was visited with a still greater amount of national hatred: he was the so-called paramour of the Queen of Charles the Fourth of Spain, the Monarch who was entrapped by Napoleon, and made to renounce his throne, his incapacity rendering him a passive tool in the hands of the favourite. The detestation in which the Spaniards held the name of Don Manuel amounted to a fanaticism. Byron speaks of the muleteer "checking his song to execrate Godoy;" to him the nation attributed its subjugation by the French; and it is only after a lapse of forty years that his fessen is so far forgotten that he is allowed, by Royal decree, to enter Spain and resume the titles from which he was degraded. He is now a man of eighty-three: various accounts are given of his origin; according to some he is of noble birth: in the notes to "Childe Harold" Byron describes him as an adventurer selected by the Queen, like Munoz in later days, from the ranks of the Guards, and raised, step by step, till he was created Duke de Alcudia and Principe de la Paz, and gained political power enough to commit treason by betraying his benefactors. At least, that was the opinion of the time. Nothing good or bad has been heard of him for the last forty years, and he has outlived most of the generation that were his enemies. How he escaped with life from the convulsions of popular fury against him is little less than a miracle.

We copy the following from a contemporary. .

"The distinction of his life might be summed up in this one sentence that he has been the most successful Court minion of whom mention is made in modern history. Instances enough are to be found in the records of nations other than Spain of successful favourites—Raxzios and Leicesters; but whatever their career as paramours might have been, as political characters they were mere nullities. Not so with Godoy. In the course of his period of power he contrived to lose the colonies and navy of a mighty kingdom, and to these osses he added the domestic impoverishment of Spain, by seizing on the funds of her hospitals and charitable institutions, in the place of which he gave them Government securities. None of these facts are, however, the chief miracle of Godoy's career. This, we take it, happened at Aranjuez, on the 19th of March, 1808, when, in order to save his wife's minion from destruction, Charles IV., King of Spain, actually abdicated the Crown."

His influence over the King was so great that it was attributed to witchcraft.

THE WEATHER.

The weather, till Saturday June 5, continued fine, but on Sunday a marked change took place, the air became cold, the sky principally cloudy, the direction of the wind was north, where it continued nearly constantly till Thursday. The following are some particulars of each day

Friday was generally a fine day; the sky during the morning was principally cloudy, and during the afternoon it was generally covered with broken clouds and scud; the day was warm, its average temperature was 67½°. Saturday was nearly cloudy throughout, and there was a sensible decline of temperature; the average temperature of the day was 59½°. Sunday the sky was principally covered by cloud, the afternoon and evening were cold; the average temperature of the day was 54°. Monday was a cloudy day throughout, and very cold; its average temperature was 49½°. Tuesday there was cold, some rain and hail fell, there were thunder and lightning between noon and one p.m., and again between five and six p.m.; the average temperature of the day was 55°. Wednesday was dull generally before noon, the day was bright during the afternoon, and at night rain fell; its average temperature was 54°. Thursday was a dull, cloudy day, rain was falling early in the morning; its average temperature was 53°. The average temperature of the week was 56½°, being 8° less than that of the preceding week.

The extreme thermometrical readings each day were—

Friday,	June 4, the highest during the day was	80½ deg.,	and the lowest was 54½ deg.
Saturday,	June 5	66	44
Sunday,	June 6	62½	45
Monday,	June 7	56	38
Tuesday,	June 8	62½	47
Wednesday,	June 9	59½	43
Thursday,	June 10	62	45

N.B. Thursday, June 3rd (last week), was a fine, bright day, the wind was principally from the East; its average temperature was 63½°. The highest reading on the day was 80½, and the lowest was 46½°. The average temperature of the week ending June 3, was 64½°. The average temperature of the month of May was 57½°, and during the month, 1¼ inch of rain fell.

Blackheath, Friday, June 11, 1847. J.

COURT AND HAUT TON.

THE COURT AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

On Sunday morning, the Queen and Prince Albert, the Duchess of Kent, the Prince of Leiningen, the ladies and gentlemen of the Court, and the domestic household, attended Divine service in the private chapel in Buckingham Palace. The Hon. and Rev. C. Leslie Courtenay officiated.

Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent visited the Queen and Prince Albert on Monday at Buckingham Palace, and remained to luncheon. Lord John Russell had an audience of her Majesty. The Queen took an airing in an open carriage and four yesterday. His Royal Highness Prince Albert rode out on horseback, attended by his Equery in Waiting.

The Queen and Prince Albert, accompanied by his Serene Highness the Prince of Leiningen, left Buckingham Palace soon after eight o'clock on Tuesday morning, for Clarence House, St. James's, to take leave of her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent on her departure for the Continent

On Wednesday, her Majesty and her Royal Consort, accompanied by the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal, took an airing in an open carriage and four. Their Royal Highnesses Prince Alfred, the Princess Alice, and the Princess Helena, took their usual airings in the Royal pleasure grounds. In the evening, her Majesty and Prince Albert gave a dinner party to the Queen Dowager by dining with her at Marlborough House. His Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Constantine, their Royal Highnesses the Hereditary Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Saxe Coburg, and his Royal Highness the Hereditary Prince of Lucca were of the party. In the evening the Royal Family and a few other persons joined the circle, and Mdlle. Lind, Messrs. Lablache, Standigl, and Gardoni had the honour of singing.

THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE OF RUSSIA.

His Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Constantine, attended by Admiral Lütke, Rear-Admiral Count Heyden, Baron Friedericks, Colonel Lontkowsky, Captain Schwabe, M. de Bourg, and the Hon. Colonel Grey, left Mivart's Hotel on Wednesday morning, and proceeded to the terminus of the Blackwall Railway, whence they travelled to Blackwall. His Imperial Highness crossed the entrance of the East India Docks, and visited the steamboats belonging to the Corporation of the Trinity House in Bow Creek, where he inspected the light ships and buoys in process of construction and completed. The Grand Duke next visited Messrs. Ditchburn and Mare's steam-engine manufactory. His Imperial Highness went on board several vessels while in the yard, including the Vulcan, Government steamer, and two steam ships which Messrs. Ditchburn are at present building for the Danish Government.

The party on leaving Messrs. Ditchburn's yard, walked round the East India Docks, where they went on board the first class ship Wellesley, with which the Grand Duke expressed himself extremely pleased. On leaving the East India Docks his Imperial Highness and suite proceeded to the Brunswick Tavern, where they partook of a dejeûner The West India Dock warehouses, where the party were, attended by Mr. Hawkey, Mr. Chatterton, and several of his co-Directors, were next visited. His Imperial Highness subsequently went to Messrs. Seaward's engineering works at Millwall. The Grand Duke next embarked from the Limehouse Pier in the Queen steamer, where the party to the Tunnel Pier. His Imperial Highness having walked through the Tunnel from end to end twice, remembarked at the Tunnel Pier and returned to Westminster-bridge.

His Imperial Highness yesterday morning took equestrian exercise in the Parks, dining with the Queen Dowager in the evening, and at a later period honouring the Countess of Sefton with his presence at her Ladyship's grand ball at Sefton House.

On Thursday morning his Imperial Highness drove to Covent Garden Market, in the vicinity of which the party walked for some time. His Imperial Highness subsequently went to Bow-street Police Court.

The Grand Duke and suite next visited the British Museum, in going through which they occupied above two hours. In the afternoon his Imperial Highness, attended by several members of his suite, walked to the Egyptian Hall for the purpose of witnessing the exhibition of the "Beauphanax" The Grand Duke dined alone with his suite, and afterwards went to her Majesty's Theatre, where he occupied a seat in her Majesty's box.

PRINCE OSCAR OF SWEDEN.—On Monday, his Royal Highness Prince Oscar, accompanied by Baron Rehausen and Count Rosen, and attended by Colonel Berkley Drummond, in one of the Royal carriages, paid a visit to the Government establishment at Woolwich. On Tuesday, the Prince visited the Dockyard at Portsmouth. Previously to dining with Admiral Sir Charles Ogle, the Commander-in-Chief, at Admiralty House, his Royal Highness Prince Oscar and suite visited the Victory, 104, ordinary guard ship. He was accompanied by Captain Pasco, the commander of the Victory, who conducted him over the vessel. The Prince expressed himself highly sensible of her former services under the gallant Nelson, detailed to him by Captain Pasco, who, it is well known, was in her at Trafalgar, as Nelson's flag-lieutenant. The dinner and ball were very splendid. The ball was fully and fashionably attended. The Prince danced nearly the whole evening, as did most of the Swedish officers. At about two o'clock his Royal Highness Prince Oscar took leave of the gallant Admiral, Sir Charles Ogle, and expressed himself with the attentions that had been shown to him during his short visit, and the Undine steam-yacht then took the Prince and party out to Spithead. The Eugenie and Nordenskold sailed on Wednesday for Stockholm, where it is expected Prince Oscar to arrive by the 20th instant, which is the reason of his making so short a visit in this country.

DEPARTURE OF THE DUCHESS OF KENT FOR THE CONTINENT. On Tuesday morning her Grace embarked at Woolwich in the Garland, for Ostend. Her Royal Highness reached Ostend in about nine hours, and left on Wednesday morning for Brussels.

ARISTOCRATIC MARRIAGE.—The marriage of Lord Charles Lennox Fitzroy, second son of the Duke of Grafton, with ANN, youngest daughter of the late James Balfour, Esq., of Whittinghame Castle, county of Berwick, was solemnised on Wednesday, at St. George's Church, Hanover-square, in the presence of a select circle of the friends of both families

FETE AT HOLDERNESSE HOUSE.—The Marquis and Marchioness of Londonderry gave a magnificent entertainment, on Monday evening, at Holdernesse House, in honour of his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia. The entertainment was prefaced by a banquet, which was graced by the presence of the distinguished foreign Princes at present in town, as well as by the leading members of the aristocracy. The banquet was succeeded by an assembly at which not less than a thousand members of the fashionable world congregated.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES &c.

OXFORD

June 7

The Rev. Hibbert Binney, M.A., scholar and tutor of Worcester College, was this day elected a Fellow of that Society

ARCHDEACON HALE.—On Sunday the Rev W. Hale Hale, Archdeacon of London, read himself in, as Rector of St. Giles's, Cripplegate, to which living he had been inducted by the Bishop of London, and his legal assessors, on the late question of right, or precedency.

CONSECRATION OF LAMBETH NEW CHURCH.—On Monday the Bishop of Winchester, attended by the diocesan clergy, consecrated the newly-erected church of All Saints, New-cut, Lambeth

CHURCH FOR SEAMEN. The church for seamen of the port of London will be consecrated by the Bishop of London in the course of the present month. Prince Albert has intimated his intention of being present. The new church contains 800 sittings, all of which are unappropriated and entirely free.

NEW CHURCH IN SOUTHWARK.—A new church in the borough of Southwark (dedicated to St. Luke) has been, for some time past, in course of erection, and will be consecrated, by the Bishop of Winchester, in the course of next month.

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS. FRIDAY.

THIRD READINGS.—The Lunatic Asylums (Ireland) Bill was read a third time and passed; as was, also, the Turnpike Roads (Ireland) Bill.

PORTUGAL.—Lord STANLEY gave notice that, on Tuesday next, he should ask their Lordships to agree to a resolution, the substance of which would be, that the papers laid by her Majesty's command, before both Houses of Parliament, do not appear to justify the interference of this country in the internal affairs of Portugal.

THE CLERGY AND THE EDUCATION GRANT.—The Bishop of EXETER moved the following resolution:—"That it is the opinion of this House, that no grant of public orders, not exercising ecclesiastical functions, ought not, as such, to be ineligible to the office of schoolmasters in schools receiving aid from the Parliamentary grant." The right rev. Prelate trusted their Lordships would prevent her Majesty's Government from taking for ever on that ill-rewarded and neglected class of public servants a lasting mark of degradation.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. FRIDAY.

RAILWAY BILLS.—It was arranged that no House should sit at twelve o'clock on Monday next to dispose of a number of Railway Bills.

THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO.—In answer to Dr. BOWRING, Lord PALMERSTON said her Majesty's late Government had made an official tender of their services to put a stop to the war which existed between the Americans and the Mexicans, and the present Government had renewed that offer in a more official form, but the parties did not appear disposed to accept of it. Therefore the British Government could not at present take any further steps on the subject.

AFFAIRS OF PORTUGAL.

Mr. HUME brought forward the following motion:—"That, in the judgment of this House, the armed interference of this Government between political parties in Portugal is unwarrantable in principle, and likely to lead to serious and mischievous consequences." The hon. member addressed the House at great length on the affairs of Portugal, which he considered to be in a most critical state, and proceeded to condemn the policy of her Majesty's Government, which he considered unwarrantable and unjustifiable. He considered that the Charter had been grossly violated by the Government of the Queen of Portugal, and therefore, that there was no justification for the interference of England.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

PORTUGAL.

Advices from Lisbon to the 4th inst., received yesterday, confirm the important news, given in page 370, of the capture of vessels of war belonging to the Junta. Some additional details are given, from which it appears that Count Das Antas, early on the morning of the 31st ult., took the decisive step of crossing the bar of Oporto, with "three steam vessels, one corvette, and four transports," carrying all the disposable forces of the Junta (some 2500 in number), "seizing out," as he said, "to give a mortal blow to the factions which oppress Portugal." Knowing, as he did, that Sir Thomas Maitland, with the British squadron, was close at hand, and had received orders to capture all vessels of war attempting to enter or depart from Oporto, he must have having been fired, and that Das Antas, the officer who gave the order having been placed under arrest for it. Das Antas, as President of the Junta, and "General-in-Chief of the National Forces," delivered in a protest against the capture; and was then sent back on board his ships and men to the Tagus. They will remain in the custody of the English forces, will be kindly treated, and will not be required to land in Portugal against their will.

On hearing of this capture, Sir W Parker, commanding in the Tagus, wrote to Sa da Bandeira, stationed at St. Ube's, acquainting him with the fact, and suggesting that as he could not now hope for reinforcements from the Douro, he also should surrender with his troops, and, availing himself of the British steamers, join his comrades, and accept, with Das Antas, an asylum in the cabin of the Hibernia. Sa would not consent to this, but he sent back one of his staff with his patches for the Junta, requesting that he might be despatched to Oporto in one of our steamers, and agreed to suspend hostilities till he recieved further instructions On the sixth instant, Sa's aide-de-camp was landed at Oporto; and the same day, as it appears, the five members of the Junta, deprived of their President, determined to accept the four articles tendered them by Colonel Wylde on behalf of the allied Powers on the 7th ultimo.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

REPRESENTATION OF THE CITY OF LONDON.—Mr. W. Payne, the City Coroner, intends to offer himself at the ensuing election as one of the members for London. Mr. Payne in his address professes to be a free-trader He promises to introduce a bill for the complete exoneration of Dissenters from the payment of church rates; and says he will advocate the adoption of such measures regarding Ireland as will place it on "a footing more congenial with its relative position to this country, and induce her Majesty annually to visit that portion of her dominions, and return the Parliament to Dublin, for the transaction of such affairs as relate to that part of the United Kingdom." He pledges himself never to be absent from his duty. A requisition has been numerously signed, begging Sir Robert Peel to allow himself to be put in nomination.

ELECTION FOR MARYLEBONE.—On Tuesday night, a large and influential meeting of the electors of the borough of Marylebone took place at the Exmouth Arms, Exmouth-street, Hampstead-road, for the purpose of addressing Lord Dudley Stuart an opportunity of expressing his political sentiments, as a candidate for the representation of that borough. The chair was taken by Charles Eden Wyndham, Esq., of Wyndham Lord Dudley Stuart, in addressing his speech, advocated vote by ballot and triennial Parliaments. He was also in favour of abolishing the rate paying clauses of the Reform Bill, and at the suggestion of a person present, spoke of the window tax, which he thought ought to be repealed.

THE NEW SHERIFFS.—The gentlemen who are to be proposed for Sheriffs, are Charles Hill, Esq., of the firm of Hill, Fawcett, and Hill, stock and share brokers, Threadneedle-street, and William Cubitt, Esq., the builder and engineer, of Gray's Inn-lane

THE NEW OFFICES AT THE TREASURY.—The erection of the new offices of the Treasury at Whitehall has been completed, and the whole of the scaffolding removed. The new building completes the whole of the course of buildings of the Privy Council, Home and Foreign Office, and Treasury-offices, formerly in an assembly edifice, but now presenting a façade of elegant and elaborate architecture, in keeping with the magnificent structure of the new houses of Parliament, and a great architectural ornament to Whitehall. The interior is in a forward state for the reception of the officers of the different departments

ENLARGEMENT OF GOLDSMITHS' HALL.—On Wednesday preparations commenced for the erection of a new wing to its hall and the easey and melting house.

WESTMINSTER ELECTION.—On Wednesday evening, a meeting of Mr. C. Lushington's general committee, which was numerously attended, was held at the Crown and Anchor Tavern, Strand, to receive the report of the committee in reference to the state of the canvass in behalf of that gentleman. Mr. Gessin of St. James's in the chair. Mr. Huggest, the secretary, produced the report of the voluntary names of the gentlemen of the committee, which showed a return most favourable to the interest of Mr. C. Lushington, the number being as eight to one in favour of that gentleman and General Sir De Lacy Evans, against Mr. C. Cochrane, Mr. Bankhead, Mr. Pruet, Mr. Childs, Mr. Hodgson, Mr. Cox, Mr. French, &c., addressed the meeting, urging the renewed exertions of the committee to complete the canvass, when steps were taken for that purpose.

HAGGERSTON.—On Tuesday evening the first general annual meeting of the supporters of the Grotto-passage Ragged Schools, was held at the Literary Institution, Edward-street, Forman-square. An interesting feature in the meeting was the presence of upwards of 70 of the children for whom the schools are intended. Lord Ramsaid having taken the chair, the children sang a hymn written for the occasion. The Secretary then read the report, which stated the schools were formed in honour of the ignorance and degradation of the youth of both sexes in the district establishment, a year ago, had received 150 boys and 120 girls, the average daily attendance being 30 To carry on their operations the Committee had received the sum of £163, and had expended all but £5. They now appealed to the public for support to keep the schools in existence. The report having been adopted, resolutions on behalf of the schools were carried.

BIRTHS IN THE METROPOLIS.—The number of births in the week ending June 5, was 1325, of which 706 were males and 619 females, a number which exceeds that of the previous week's return by 92. The number of deaths was only 970 (495 males and 360 females), being less than the births by 355, less than the deaths of the previous week by 174, and less than the weekly average of the last five springs by 128.

KING'S COLLEGE HOSPITAL.—The eighth anniversary dinner of this institution was held at Stationers' Hall, on Wednesday. Sir Robert Peel presided, and made an eloquent and forcible appeal in its behalf, which, we are glad to say, was well responded to by the 300 gentlemen present. The subscriptions amounted to nearly £1700 Sir R. Peel contributed £100.

SUICIDE AT WORCESTER.—A determined act of suicide was committed on Tuesday afternoon, at Worcester, by Mr. Benjamin Sheppard, a surgeon of that city. Between twelve and one o'clock Mr. Sheppard went into the shop of Mr. Stringer, a chemist and druggist, and asked for a phial bottle of prussic acid, which he said he wanted for a patient. Mr. Stringer, knowing Mr. Sheppard, did not hesitate to give him the quantity asked for, and Mr. Sheppard thereupon retired into a parlour adjoining the shop, and swallowed it. Mr. Stringer, going into the room immediately afterwards, found the phial empty, and the deceased on the ground. He exclaimed, "You have not drank it, have you?" to which Mr. Sheppard replied, "It's all right," and died in a few minutes after.

FORGERY AT A WRIT AT AN ATTORNEY.—A legal practitioner, named Turner, has been committed for trial, by the magistrates of Sheffield, upon a charge of having forged a writ. It appears that Turner had been instructed, a few days last, by one of his clients, to issue a writ against a person who had failed to pay the money which he had borrowed of the client. Before the writ had arrived the defaulter made arrangements for payment; but Turner said that he had received the writ on the day following that on which the arrangements were made, and he was, consequently, paid 25s. costs. When this sum was paid, he was required to deliver the original writ; and, with some reluctance, he handed over a writ in which several erasures were discernible The writ was suspected to be a forgery, and Turner was afterwards apprehended. A clerk in the Queen's Bench-office, London, stated, at the last examination, that no process for such a writ had been issued in November last; and that he believed that the precipe for the writ produced in Court had been issued in January, 1846. The prosecutors offered to abandon the proceedings if Turner could produce a letter from his London agent, enclosing the writ, or otherwise show that he had really received it; but he was unable to offer any proof whatever.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

LOSS OF SEVEN LIVES ON THE NORTH WESTERN RAILWAY.

A very serious accident took place on the London and North Western Railway on Saturday night, near Wolverton station.

The down mail train from Liverpool, consisting of nineteen carriages of various descriptions, started at the appointed time, a quarter before nine o'clock on that evening, from the Euston-square terminus, and was due at Wolverton at fifteen minutes before eleven. The train was heard approaching the Wolverton station at its proper time, and was properly signalled by police constable Fossey, who was stationed at the "Blue Bridge" between 600 and 700 yards on the London side of the station. The signal indicating that all was right for the train to enter the station was heard at the latter point. The points, at this time, were right for the train to pass on to the station; when the man, as if suddenly struck with the idea that he had omitted something, ran a distance of nearly fifty yards, and altered the points. The train proceeded; and, as soon as the Engineer perceived himself turned into a siding, he reversed his engine, and backed the wheels, whilst the six-wheel break was applied to the tender; the guards simultaneously applying the same to the hinder part of the train, which consists of nineteen carriages. In spite, however, of all these precautions, a fearful crash ensued On the Superintendent reaching the spot, a shocking scene presented itself.

The engine had driven into the siding for upwards of 100 yards, and the first truck to stems, breaking its buffers and buffer-plank, twisting upwards the front part of the iron platform round the engine ("No. 153," and one of Stephenson's long boiler), but remaining with the tender in every other respect uninjured. After the tender came two parcel vans, and then followed second-class carriages. The parcel vans escaped unhurt, and the damage done to the two first second-class carriages appears not to have been very extensive. On the first carriage the under-guard, Staines, was seated with his back to the engine, but with a presence of mind which was wonderful he saved his life by throwing himself on the roof of the carriage on which he sat; had he sat down on it his legs would have been crushed to pieces. Neither he nor the driver of the engine, nor the fireman, descried their positions at a moment so perilous. The three breaks on the train were applied at the same moment, and the steam was shut off. It was the fourth carriage from the engine (or the second second-class carriage) which was the immediate cause of what happened, though apparently itself uninjured. The back part of this carriage probably coming unequally in contact with the buffers of that behind it, rushed, wheels and all, right into the body of the fifth carriage from the engine (or the third second class carriage), while the latter was driven in behind by the weight of that portion of the train which it preceded. The consequence was, that the sides and roof of the fifth carriage from the engine were burst open, its compartments were reduced to shivers, and seven of the passengers squeezed horribly to death. All the steam was at once let off. It was completely annihilated. Mr. Turner and the others who have received the most serious injuries seem all to have been in this carriage. The destruction of it is so complete, that the only wonder is how any of the passengers it contained could have survived.

As soon as possible after the sufferers had been attended to, and the broken carriages removed from the line, an investigation was made into the circumstances of the accident. It is stated that, at the Wolverton station, the points are always kept straight with the main line, and they require to be altered, to allow a train to enter the siding. It appears that the constable Fossey, after having given the signal for the arrival of the mail train, ran from the bridge, where he was stationed, to the points of the siding, about 40 or 50 yards, and held them back, so that the mail train passed on to the siding, instead of passing onward down the main line. On the constable Fossey being interrogated as to the causes which led him, after signaling the arrival of the mail train, to run down the line, for the purpose of turning it on to the siding, the only explanation which he afforded was, that he afterwards thought it was not the mail train, but a luggage train, and he did so for the purpose of securing its safety. This statement, however, being very much doubted, the superintendent of the Wolverton Station felt it his duty immediately to give him into custody

Besides the seven persons killed, there are four others more or less severely injured. The following is a list of the

PASSENGERS KILLED.

Mr. John Simpson Sherratt, of Lichfield, formerly secretary to the Lichfield and Birmingham Railway Company

Mr. T. Makenzie, a graduate of Magdalen Hall, Oxford.

Mr. J. Clifton, linendraper.

Mr. J. B. Rattray, of the firm of Keay and Rattray, of the Lily Bank Foundry, Dundee.

Mr. Miller, honorary secretary to the Ragged School, held at 107, Broadwall, London.

Mr. Cope, a clerk in the London and Westminster Bank, who was proceeding to Wolverhampton on leave of absence; and a

Mr. Henry Smith, a solicitor of Birmingham

We subjoin a list of those persons injured by the collision.

Mr. Turner, of Brewood Hall, Staffordshire.

A journeyman baker, named Eadss, in the service of the proprietor of the Royal Hotel, Leamington.

A person named Shannon, residing at Manchester; and

A person named Sindon, a native of Dublin.

These four were the only persons seriously injured; several who sustained only slight contusions by the shock having proceeded on their journeys shortly after the melancholy occurrence.

Information of the melancholy occurrence having been forwarded to Mr. Cowley, the Coroner for Buckinghamshire, that gentleman arrived at Wolverton early on Sunday morning, and, after inspecting the scene of the accident, made arrangements for commencing an investigation on Monday.

The Jury having been sworn, went to see the bodies. They then proceeded to view the locality where the accident occurred. Carriages, intended to represent the two cases had been placed on the siding, in order to make the manner in which the accident occurred more clearly intelligible, and every explanation required was most readily afforded by the railway officials.

After some discussion, it was unanimously agreed to adjourn the inquiry until Friday (yesterday)

On Wednesday, Captain Coddington, the government inspector of railways, arrived at Wolverton, and investigated the circumstances connected with the collision. The gallant captain made a minute examination of the points at which the train entered the siding, the exact distance of which from the Wolverton station is stated to be 980 yards. The latest report as to the condition of the parties injured is that they are progressing favourably; some of them, it is believed, will be able to attend the adjourned inquest. The company have directed that all the funeral expences of the sufferers should be charged to them.

The annexed diagram will assist in explaining the cause of the calamity. The points are there shown open to the siding. The "Blue Bridge" is on the London side of Wolverton Station; and distance from thence to the points, and from the points to the coal waggons, is denoted by figures; for the diagram is unavoidably compressed end-wise, as the entire length of the whole paper would be insufficient to admit it to the full scale in proportion to its width.

EXPLOSION, AND LOSS OF EIGHT LIVES, NEAR LIVERPOOL.

On Wednesday (last week) an explosion of fire-damp took place at Gerard's-bridge Colliery, St. Helen's, belonging to Messrs. Speakman, Caldwell, and Co.

There were at the time about fifty men employed under the ground, but most of them were got out in a few hours, very little injured; but eight of the number were found dead

The names of the persons killed are, John Matthew, collier, aged forty-five; Peter Matthew, collier, his son, aged twenty-two; John Matthew, seventeen; David Matthew, fifteen; and Jos. Matthew, ten, also his sons, all drawers; he has left a wife and several young children. Joseph Worral, collier, aged fifty, left a wife and five children; John Lea, drawer, seventeen; and James Morris, drawer, twelve.

At the Coroner's Inquest, the Jury returned a verdict of "Accidental Death, caused by gases arising from the combustion of coal, which was set on fire during an explosion."

THE STRAND COAL HOLE DESTROYED BY FIRE Early on Monday morning, a fire took place upon the premises termed the Surrey Coal Hole, adjoining the Surrey Theatre, in the Blackfriars-road. Whilst police-constable Brien, 120 M, was going his rounds, he noticed an unusual glare of light in one of the upper windows of the tavern, and, without delay, an alarm was raised, and, after some trouble, the inmates were aroused; by that period, however, the fire had obtained such hold of the lower floors, that it was utterly impossible for any one to descend by the staircase. A ladder was brought to the place, and, by that means, two, if not three lives, were saved from destruction. Before the ladders arrived, the brother of the occupier of the premises, and also the barmaid, threw themselves from the second and third floors of the premises, and in so doing they were seriously injured. For some time the destruction of the Surrey Theatre appeared certain, but it was saved by the exertions of the firemen; but it was nearly seven o'clock before the fire was extinguished, and not before the whole of the stock in trade, furniture, and other effects of the tavern were consumed, and the building nearly gutted. The loss by this disastrous event will be very considerable. The occupier of the premises (Mr. J. W. Tabernacle) had £300 in cash, on the second floor. Fortunately, however, the firemen have since found the whole of the money in the ruins, and not at all injured by the action of the flames.

SUICIDE ON THE SOUTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.—On Wednesday morning about seven o'clock, a young woman and a man, a stranger to her, were standing near to each other on the bridge which crosses the Wandsworth-road over the South-Western Railway, near the Plough, at Battersea. The young woman opened a gate at the side of the bridge, as the express down train came in sight, and ran down the bank and threw herself upon the down line of rails. The line taking a curve concealed her from the view of the driver until the train was almost upon her. The driver saw her as he put off the steam, but almost momentarily what is termed the "guard" of the engine struck the unfortunate creature, and hurled her a distance of thirteen yards. She was thrown into a small ditch by the side of the line. The man, who had arrived near her on the fence, inflicting a gash extending from the forehead to the neck. Her right arm was completely smashed, and the thumb and fore-finger of the left hand were cut off. She was taken, still alive, to the Wandsworth Union, where she arrived only ten minutes after her admission. She is a fine-grown woman of about thirty years of age, has dark brown hair and eyes, and very pleasing features. She was dressed very respectably. Her handkerchief was marked "F. C. A.," and her linen "J. A."

CURIOUS FORGERY BY A GERMAN.—A young German has undergone an examination at Manchester, on suspicion of having committed forgery, under the following circumstances: The prisoner, who is a native of Germany, and cannot speak a word of the English language, gave his name as Adolphus Schulz. He appeared to have been respectably connected. It appeared from the evidence, and also from his own admission, that, some time ago, he and those with whom he was connected, paid into the banking house of Messrs. J. H. Stemetz and Co., at Vienna, 20,000 florins, or £2000, and received for the amount a letter of credit on several highly-respectable houses in England. The letter of credit set forth that any of the houses named might pay the whole amount, or such part of it as they thought proper, the bales of the holder of the letter, inflicting a gash extending from the forehead to the neck. Her right arm was completely smashed, and the thumb and fore-finger of the left hand were cut off. She was taken, still alive, to the Wandsworth Union, where she arrived only ten minutes after her admission. She is a fine-grown woman of about thirty years of age, has dark brown hair and eyes, and very pleasing features. She was dressed very respectably. Her handkerchief was marked "F. C. A.," and her linen "J. A."

CURIOUS FORGERY BY A GERMAN.—A young German has undergone an examination at Manchester, on suspicion of having committed forgery, under the following circumstances: The prisoner, who is a native of Germany, and cannot speak a word of the English language, gave his name as Adolphus Schulz. He appeared to have been respectably connected. It appeared from the evidence, and also from his own admission, that, some time ago, he and those with whom he was connected, paid into the banking house of Messrs. J. H. Stemetz and Co., at Vienna, 20,000 florins, or £2000, and received for the amount a letter of credit on several highly-respectable houses in England. The letter of credit set forth that any of the houses named might pay the whole amount, or such part of it as they thought proper, the bales of the holder of the letter, inflicting a gash extending from the forehead to the neck. Her right arm was completely smashed, and the thumb and fore-finger of the left hand were cut off. She was taken, still alive, to the Wandsworth Union, where she arrived only ten minutes after her admission. She is a fine-grown woman of about thirty years of age, has dark brown hair and eyes, and very pleasing features. She was dressed very respectably. Her handkerchief was marked "F. C. A.," and her linen "J. A."

COUNTRY NEWS.

THE ELECTIONS.

BUCKINGHAMSHIRE. A public meeting of the electors of Buckinghamshire took place at Newport Pagnell, on Wednesday, when Mr Disraeli attended, and was introduced to the electors. Mr. Greaves was the Chairman. Before Mr. Chester eulogised the services of Mr. Disraeli to the Protection cause; and Mr. Disraeli then addressed the electors for some time upon the present state of public affairs. The hon. gentleman made the subject of Protection a prominent topic of his speech. He said that such was the financial condition of the country, that the Chancellor of the Exchequer would be compelled to take some steps next year. It would be of no use merely to reduce the Income Tax, but a new system of moderate Customs duties must be proposed, and of course the principle of a small duty upon corn would then again be discussed. When the Customs duties were destroyed, the opposite Exchequer resources could not stand. "Then," said Mr Disraeli, "we shall not long have the malt-tax, and the vexatious process connected with it, to submit to, if this opinion be sound and just, which the Legislature ought to accept. The persons, therefore, who are now most effectually pulling down the Excise customs are Mr. Cobden and his friends and disciples, and that by the opinions which they have promulgated. If the Excise system, then, be full of peril and danger—if the Income-tax is about to cease—then I want to know where the revenue of England will be, or what the Chancellor of the Exchequer will do, unless he comes forward with a scheme and with principles which will ensure a permanent reconstruction—I want to know, if they do not take these principles as the foundation of their revenue—I want to know where the revenue would come from. But, if these principles are adopted, then the principle of Protection is once again before the Legislature." Mr. Disraeli was very favourably received; and resolutions, pledging the meeting to support him, in conjunction with Mr Du Pre and Mr. Tower, were agreed to OXFORD. Mr. John Cobbett, son of the late William Cobbett, will, it is said, be returned with Mr. Fielden, without opposition.

CITY OF WORCESTER. There is very likely to be a pretty considerable commotion in this city whenever a general election shall take place. Mr. Bailey, who has represented the Conservative party in two Parliaments, has intimated his intention to retire at the next election; he aspires to the honour of representing a county constituency (Dreon). A vacancy will therefore be created, to fill which three candidates are already mentioned, viz., Sergeant Glover and Mr. Rufford, on the Conservative interest, and Mr. Hardy, who entertains extreme opinions of a newly-promulgated tendency.

LIVERPOOL.—A meeting of the general committee of the Reform Association was held on Tuesday, at which it was reported that Sir Thomas Birch, Bart., of Hale Hall, had consented to allow himself to be nominated as a candidate for the Liberal interest at the next general election. A unanimous vote in his favour was passed, and the Chairman was requested to convey the result of the meeting to Sir Thomas.

MANCHESTER. There is no appearance of a contest for this borough. It is generally believed that Mr. John Bright and the Right Hon. T. M. Gibson will walk over.

COLCHESTER. Mr. Whittle Harvey declines coming forward, having carefully examined the returns placed in his hands by his Committee.

HASTINGS.—Mr Villiers will not be a candidate for the representation of South Lancashire. Should the Honourable Gentleman be nominated it will be by his friends, and not the consequence of any arrangement with him. He intends to remain in the constituency permitting the representative of Wolverhampton. There has, however, been a meeting of the electors of South Lancashire, at which it was agreed to support Mr. Villiers and Mr. Brown at the next election.

SHREWSBURY Sir FITZROY Kelly will offer on the Conservative interest for this borough.

WINDSOR.—There is no truth in the report that Sir E. L. Bulwer Lytton will not again contest Lincoln. Of his success little doubt is entertained; the latest intelligence being that Mr. Collett is likely to resign his seat.

BRIGHTON.—In addition to Captain Campbell and Lord Alfred Harvey, a third candidate has taken the field for Brighton, in the person of William Conisgham, Esq., of Kemp-town.

KIDDERMINSTER. Mr. Ferrand having issued his retiring address to the electors on Wednesday (last week), A. Lawson, Esq., M.P., arrived in the town the same evening, and immediately commenced a canvass of the electors. A requisition to Mr. Ferrand, signed by the Committee of Trade, and a few others, requesting that gentleman to reconsider his determination, and contest the borough.

SANDWICH.—Lord Charles Pelham Clinton, a son of the Duke of Newcastle, is a candidate for this borough, on "Protestant" and "Procestive," and "Conservative" principles.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—Viscount Fielding has consented to come forward as a candidate for the representation of the University, on Protestant principles.

GLASGOW.—The gentlemen spoken of as candidates for representing this city in Parliament, are Mr. Dennistoun, the present member, who is to be accommended by Mr. Macvicar, the Free Church Professor of Trade, and Mr. Oswald, who refires; the Lord Provost and Mr. Dixon, of Govan Iron Works, are also named; and there is some talk of asking Sir Robert Peel to allow himself to be nominated.

THE ELECTION FOR LONDON.—The requisition to Sir Robert Peel, Bart., has already obtained nearly 2000 signatures.

BIRTHDAY OF THE KING OF HANOVER.—Last Saturday was the birthday of His Majesty the King of Hanover. His Excellency Count Kielmansegge, his Majesty's representative at the Court of Great Britain, gave a grand dinner in honour of the day, at his residence in Grosvenor-place His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge honoured his Excellency with his company

THE LATE DR. CHALMERS.

THIS eminent divine was born in 1776, and towards the beginning of the present century he commenced his distinguished theological career as Minister in the parish of Kilmany, in Fifeshire. He remained there for twelve years, and was translated to the Tron Church of Glasgow in 1815. During this time he produced his work on Natural Theology, and his "Sketches of Moral and Mental Philosophy." His "Evidences of the Christian Revelation" were originally published in the "Encyclopædia Britannica," under the management of Dr. Brewster. In Glasgow, his astronomical and commercial discourses, so sensible, so profound, and so Christian, proved of incalculable benefit to the moral and social improvement of his fellow citizens—aye, and to many thousands of his fellow men, both in and out of Scotland. His work on the civic and Christian economy of large towns is of inestimable value. In 1823 Dr. Chalmers accepted the Chair of Moral Philosophy in the New College of St. Andrew's, where he remained until 1828, when he received the appointment of Theological Professor in the University of Edinburgh.

From the period of his settlement at St. Andrew's until his removal to Edinburgh he published his works on "Endowments," and on "Political Economy," his "Bridgewater Treatise," and his "Lectures on the Romans." Altogether his published works form twenty-five volumes: their circulation has been very large. In 1843 the Doctor resigned his Professorship in the University, and became Principal of the New College. The death of Dr. Chalmers was very sudden. He was found on the morning of the 31st ult., dead in his bed, to which he had retired the previous night, in apparent health. As the intellectual leader of the Free Church of Scotland, as an able writer and preacher, and as one of the best of good men, Dr. Chalmers leaves behind him an undying reputation. The spiritual and earthly welfare of all men was the mainspring of his thoughts and actions. His love and care extended to every class, but his heart was chiefly with the poor of his people. He devoted his great and comprehensive powers to their enfranchisement from sin and suffering. Under his influence virtue and happiness have become the inmates of many, many cottage homes in Scotland. His death is, indeed, a public and an irreparable loss.

THE LATE REV. DR. CHALMERS.

THE INTERMENT.

On Friday, the last earthly duty was paid to the remains of Dr. Chalmers. The place of sepulture was the Southern Cemetery, at Grange, near Edinburgh, in which, it is stated, that the Doctor had expressed a wish to be buried. The funeral was the largest that, perhaps, ever took place in Edinburgh, or in Scotland.

There were about 1500 persons in the procession at the time it left the residence of the deceased. These may be classed as follows:—Pupils belonging to Merchiston Academy (which is presided over by the brother of the deceased), 50; students and probationers, 280; ministers, elders, and deacons, not members of Assembly, and ministers and elders of other denominations, 570; members of the General Assembly, 190; magistrates and council, 17; private friends of the deceased, 36; and the general public, 336. The procession took fully a quarter of an hour to pass any given point on the route. The ranks formed in two lines, between which the coffin, with its plate, inscribed, "Thomas Chalmers, D.D., died May 31st, 1847, aged 67," was borne along, followed by the son of Dr. Hanna, as chief mourner, the relatives of the deceased, &c. When the coffin was lowered into the ground the members of the procession no longer retained their places; they all drew towards the grave and gathered round it in one vast and dense multitude, in silent awe, whilst dust was piled above the dead.

The Correspondent of the Daily News observes:—"The character as well as the number of the mourners was worthy of notice. There were Lords of Session, and the humble sitters in the Westport Church—a sort of ragged church, wholly raised by Chalmers—Professors of the University, and Students of the Normal School; the Commissioner and Moderator of the Established Church Assembly, and the officials of the Free Church Assembly; Episcopalians, Presbyterians, and Independents; Tory, Whig, and Radical; old men, and the boys of the Merchiston Academy: and there, too, was Principal Lee, who contended with Chalmers in the Moderatorship, and who succeeded to his vacated chair in the University; Dr. Wardlaw, of Glasgow, who fought with him on Church Establishments; and Provost Black, who contended with him about seat-rents, made up for his absence in London by sending his carriage to swell the funeral cortège. The gazers looked on with a silence intensely expressive. It could be no common loss that soothed into order and sadness an indiscriminate mass of on-lookers extending along the sides of the streets for nearly two miles."

The rear of the procession was brought up by about forty carriages. Among these were the carriages of the Lord Provost (his Lordship being absent in London), the Duchess of Gordon, and several of the Lords of the Session. Among those who were present in the procession, not connected with the Free Church, were the following:—Lord Belhaven, Lord High Commissioner of the General Assembly of the Established Church, and the Rev. Dr. Paul, the Moderator; together with Principal Lee, Professor Robertson, the Rev. Norman M'Leod, of Dalkeith; the Rev. Dr. Steven, Edinburgh; the Rev. Mr. Caird, Edinburgh; the Rev. Mr. Russell, Yarrow; the Rev. Mr. Balfour, Colinton; and the Rev. Mr. Chalmers, of Dunfermline. Among those belonging to other denominations, were:—The Rev. Dr. Brown, the Rev. Dr. Harper, the Rev. Dr. Peddie, the Rev. Mr. Johnston, the Rev. Mr. A. Thomson, the Rev. Mr. Davidson, the Rev. Mr. Robertson, the Rev. Mr. Thomson (Stateford), of the United Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Dr. Wardlaw, the Rev. Dr. Alexander, and the Rev. J. R. Campbell, of the Congregational Church; Archdeacon Williams, and the Rev. Mr. Drummond, of the Episcopal Church, &c. The Judges of the Court of Session present were Lord Moncrieff, Lord Ivory, and Lord Robertson. There were, also, present the greater number of the Senatus Academicus of the University of Edinburgh, namely—Professors Wilson, Syme, Alison, Christison, Traill, More, Simpson, Innes, Pillans, Gregory, Donaldson, Smyth, Thomson, Kelland, and Balfour, in addition to Principal Lee and Professor Robertson, whose names are given above.

On Sunday public discourses were delivered in the hall of the Free Church Assembly, at Morningside, where the Doctor was a member, and which was his last and favourite experiment in church extension. In the other free churches, in almost all the dissenting places of worship, and in many of those of the Establishment, his death was the sole or leading theme of pulpit disquisition. The mourning habiliments of the inhabitants were as general as in the case of a Royal death.

"The cause of Dr. Chalmers's death," says the Daily News, "was generally understood to be apoplexy, but the autopsy has shown it to have been disease of the heart, that organ having, to a considerable extent, been converted into fatty matter, and so becoming incapable of muscular action. The other parts of the body were decidedly healthy. Phrenology is rather at fault regarding Dr. Chalmers. From the largeness of his head externally, and the peculiarity of his mental temperament, the leading craniologists have long spoken of him as of necessity possessing a large brain; but the post-mortem inspection of the encephalon has disabused this idea. Thus, the weight of brain in Dupuytren was 64 oz., in Cuvier 63, in Abercrombie 63, in Chalmers 53—the average weight in persons from 50 to 60 years of age being 50oz. 2 drms."

FUNERAL OF DR. CHALMERS, IN THE NEW SOUTHERN CEMETERY, EDINBURGH.—FROM A SKETCH BY MR. A. RITCHIE.

FETE AT THE ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY'S GARDEN, REGENT'S-PARK.—SKETCHED FROM THE LAKE.

THE ROYAL BOTANIC SOCIETY, REGENT'S PARK.

On Wednesday, the second Exhibition for the season, of this Society, took place, and was honoured by the presence of several distinguished visitors. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Colonel Bouverie, was received at an early hour, by the President, the Duke of Norfolk. The arrival of the Prince was soon followed by that of their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, and the Hereditary Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Saxe Weimar and suite.

The weather was very fine, and the grounds were in high condition. The number of visitors was far greater than on any former occasion; and the ladies, in elegant morning costume, contributed much to the gaiety of the scene. The light and delicate hues of most of the dresses, and the fanciful colours of the parasols, gleaming amidst the trees in the bright sun light, had a charming effect, which was greatly enhanced by "the still, sweet fall" of the music of three military bands, stationed in different parts of the gardens. There, too, was the band of the Caledonian Asylum, in picturesque costume; and ever and anon a company of pipers paraded the walks. Viewed from the summit of the UPPER ROW OF PORTRAITS.

MR. BARON ALDERSON. LORD CHIEF JUSTICE WILDE. LORD DENMAN, CHIEF BARON POLLOCK. MR. JUSTICE PATTESON. MR. JUSTICE COLERIDGE.

LOWER ROW OF PORTRAITS.

MR. BARON PLATT. MR. JUSTICE ERLE. MR. JUSTICE CRESSWELL. MR. JUSTICE MAULE. MR. JUSTICE COLTMAN. MR. BARON ROLFE.

RESERVED CROWN CASE, IN THE EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

artificial mound, near the lake, the coup d'œil was very striking; there were numberless visitors promenading in the broad walk, and on the turf; whilst others, grouped together, were seated to hear the strains of music, which ended, a general move was made towards another band, just commencing; and, at the conclusion of their spirit-stirring melody, again another group of musicians would essay their harmonious discourse, so that an ever-moving, brilliantly-attired crowd was constantly presented to view

The show of flowers was exceedingly abundant; and many were of exquisite beauty, and they proved so attractive that the tents were thronged throughout the day The Pelargoniums were chiefly contributed by Messrs. Cock, of Chiswick; Beck, of Isleworth; Gains, of Battersea; Catleagh, of Chelsea; and by Staines, Robinson, Cuysh, and Barker; the Orchids by Messrs. Rucker, Blandy, Rollison, and Warner; and Veitch, of Exeter. There were, also, large miscellaneous collections of stove and greenhouse plants, by Lady Antrobus, Miss Trail, Mr. Fraser, and Mr. Cook; and of roses, contributed by Messrs. Paul, Lane, Francis, and Lee.

Our Illustration is taken from the lake, and shows, in the distance, the magnificent Winter Garden, stocked with flowers of all hues, at the end of the broad walk; and the thronged of promenaders moving to and fro; the tent represented in the middle ground was a great point of attraction to the visitors, from the exquisite beauty and infinite variety of the pelargoniums, &c., therein displayed. The Gardens, we may observe, are, in many respects, superior to those at Chiswick; especially in their picturesque inequality of surface, and the fuller growth of the trees. Their situation, just on the verge of the town, is another advantage, by which you escape a long dusty drive.

COURT OF THE EXCHEQUER CHAMBER.

CROWN CASE RESERVED.

OUR readers are, doubtless, aware, from the occasional occurrence of matters of great weight and difficulty in the administration of Justice, that when any of the other Courts is equally divided in opinion, the cause before judgment may be adjourned into the Exchequer Chamber, before the whole of the Judges, who hear and determine upon it.

The rule is, that where a point is raised by Counsel in a criminal case affecting life or liberty, and the point is entitled to weight and consideration, a single Judge does not decide, but reserves the point for the opinion of the Judges A day is subsequently named for the argument, consideration, and judgment; in the meantime, the sentence is suspended. This rule particularly applies to criminal law.

These cases are termed "Crown Cases Reserved;" and the most recent of them has suggested the opportunity of presenting our readers with portraits of the several Judges, who, upon such occasions, wear their scarlet robes; and the scene has altogether, an impressive dignity.

The case to which we refer is that of the Queen v. Garbett, on the 29th ult., when all the Judges met in the Exchequer Chamber, to hear the arguments of Counsel; Mr. Montague Chambers appearing before their Lordships to argue an extremely important question on the rule of evidence to be observed where the answers to questions tended to criminate the party. The prisoner, Garbett, it will be recollected, was tried and convicted at the last Old Bailey Sessions before Mr. Baron Alderson, of forging the acceptance to a bill of exchange

The argument was adjourned to Saturday, June 5, when our Artist made his sketch in the Court. There were then present, seated as shown in the Engraving, Lord Denman, Lord Chief Justice Wilde, Chief Baron Pollock, Mr. Baron Alderson, Mr. Justice Patteson, Mr. Justice Coleridge, Mr. Justice Maule, Mr. Justice Cohman, Mr. Baron Rolfe, Mr. Justice Cresswell, Mr. Justice Erle, and Mr. Baron Platt.

Mr. Willes was on the above day heard on behalf of the prosecution; and Mr. Chambers having replied, the Court rose.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Happy the ages and harmless were the days,
For then true love and amity were found.
When every village did a May-pole raise
And Whitsun-ales and May games did abound.
And all the lusty youngsters in a rout
With merry lasses danced the rod about.—PASQUIN'S Trifonchos.

The poets, or such of them as have made the social state of mankind the theme of their songs, rarely represent the progress of high civilization, the efforts of enterprize and science, or the accumulation of great wealth, as the means or end of natural happiness. But a condition of great refinements, of vast energy, speculation, and enormous individual possession now exists in this and many other nations the consequence of which is a demand for more stimulating excitement than the simple pleasures of less artificial days. Exotic tastes are the fruits of a forced social position. Moral as well as physical exhaustion must have its drain: hence the origin of much that is now objected against certain of our popular sports—or rather the abuses that have been grafted upon them: and good ground exists for such a prejudice: the turf is the territory of the "bold bad man," to which he is so generally born. He is the hero at fair for thereon the Legislature leaves him at liberty to minister to himself. Gambling on horse racing has reached a shameless point—it enjoys a disgraceful impunity: and this allusion to it comes of a most grateful contrast, furnished by a meeting of little pretension, whose anniversary occurred in the present week. Let us approach it secundum artem.

On Tuesday last, the Royal Thames Yacht Club held its second regatta of the season. The match was for the Challenge Cup: won last year by Mr. Smith's clipper—the Secret and finally secured to him in the present by that peerless little craft—for the prize must be won two years in succession. The day was alternate cloud and shine with occasionally a heavy squall. Six yachts sailed and a very interesting trial of skill and trim was the result. The following day set before the merry men of Middlesex—and the other metropolitan counties—the passage of horse coursing on Moulsey Hurst known so lovially as Hampton Races

The weather was delicious, for there had fallen some most genial rain: dust there was none: but of freshness and fragrance a prodigal banquet. The Hurst was a mighty encampment of savoury sutlers: a canvass city of feasting and frank revelry. There you might have seen, if you took the precaution to go—which we hope you did -great Lords riding as like their servants as they could, but never half so well—and a young gentleman enacting the drama of "Douglas"—incognito his nose. (One maidens there were most musical and melancholy—the swarthy sybils of the tribes of Egypt, who insured you ten thousand a-year at the cost of sixpence down, and the contingency of marrying the loveliest creature under the sun. You want, haply, to hear something about the racing. Well, Forest Flower won the Surrey and Middlesex Handicap, and Mr. Rolt the Corinthians -for Count Batthyany most certainly lost it—though he was second. Then there was a plate—in heats and a match, which was postponed to the morrow, and thus wound up a most pleasant afternoon. This was on Wednesday, but Thursday was the Cup day -the gala; an extraordinary occasion, in the good meaning of the term. As there is a new avenue of approach opened to Hampton—by rail to Richmond, and thence by some natural conveyance—of course there was a new stream to supply the ordinary tide of flood. The attendance was very great; "all for fun, and a little for the bottle," as the chant goes. The temperature was low, threatening rain, but it kept up. The sport was very good. Embrace won the Claremont Stakes, beating two others, easily; and Blind Hookey Her Majesty's Plate, after a dead heat with Alwal. There was more racing in heats, and all was conducted most creditably

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.

The Challenge Cup was sailed for and won on Monday by the Secret. It was a hardly contested race, and was pronounced as being the best match that has been sailed on the Thames for some time. The Challenge Cup is now definitively the property of Mr Smith, the owner of the Secret.

Shortly after eleven the signal was given, the canvass was hoisted smartly aboard of all the boats, and the Secret got a good start, whilst some of the other craft got into a scrimmage, and were obliged to make a board in to windward. Away she went, closely followed by the Zuleika, the Antagonist, the Ino, the Challenger, and Prima Donna. In this order they encountered a squall off False Point, near Woolwich, which compelled them to douse their topsails.

The squall came booming over the flats from the northward and westward, and, after it had spent its fury, the huge topsails were again hoisted, and the little Zuleika wooed the breeze so successfully, that she forereached and weathered on the Secret, and actually overhauled her off Tilbury Fort. The Secret, however, again crawled ahead, and rounded the buoy off Coalhouse Point at fifty-six minutes after one, the Zuleika one minute after her, the Ino at fifty-eight minutes after one, the Antagonist at two, the Prima Donna at two minutes after two, and the Challenger brought up the rear two minutes after her.

THE FIRST MATCH FOR THE GRAND CHALLENGE CUP.

The return match lay between the Secret, the Ino, and Antagonist. The Secret kept ahead until she arrived in Blackwall Reach, when, with the wind right aft, she carried away her jib-sheet, and the sail lashed away like the Mulligan in the Polka; but as she had a good start, this little contretemps did not matter, and the weather jib-sheet being fast on the larboard side, the sail was secured, and she sailed round the buoy at Greenwich amidst the cheers of thousands of spectators. The Ino ran a good second, and the Antagonist a good third, and the three other vessels were not far astern.

Thus terminated this excellent race, to the great satisfaction of all who witnessed it. The Challenge Cup, valued at 130 guineas, was then presented to Mr. Smith with the usual ceremonies. The Duke of Beaufort, accompanied by Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence, was out in the Intrepid, and Lord Anglesey in the Pearl. Lord Alfred Paget was not present at the match.

TATTERSALL'S

MONDAY.—The Ascot betting increased the bad feeling produced by the "tightness" of the money market after Epsom, and is likely to cripple speculation for some time to come. Several horses were backed this afternoon for the St. Leger and Goodwood Cup, but only the Cossack, Van Tromp, Black Dwarf, The Hero, Wolfdog, and Fitz Emilius, in any real demand. Enough, however, was done to warrant a tolerably full quotation.

NORTHUMBERLAND PLATE.

5 to 1 agst Conspiracy	12 to 1 agst Inheritress
12 to 1 —— Executor	12 to 1 —— Clermont

ST. LEGER.

3 to 1 agst Cossack	18 to 1 agst Foreclosure
6 to 1 —— Van Tromp	17 to 1 —— Black Dwarf
11 to 1 —— Mr. Martin	20 to 1 —— Red Hart
	30 to 1 agst Exeter
	30 to 1 —— Ilrassione
	33 to 1 —— Conyngsby

GOODWOOD CUP.

7 to 1 agst The Hero	13 to 1 agst Sting
7 to 1 —— Wolfdog (t)	13 to 1 —— Fitz-Emilius
10 to 1 —— Monkbland	15 to 1 —— Sir Tatton Sykes
12 to 1 —— Dutcot	20 to 1 —— Hale
	30 to 1 agst Burgundy (t)
	30 to 1 —— Eryx
	32 to 1 —— Mabbenthlean
	35 to 1 —— Grisaton (t)

No betting on Thursday.

HAMPTON RACES -WEDNESDAY.

The following is the bill of fare for the first day:—

The Surrey and Middlesex Stakes of 30 sovs each, 10 ft, and 5 only if declared, with 50 added. The second to save his stake. Two miles. (46 Subs, 26 of whom pay 5 sovs each.)

Sir JI Fleetwood's Forest Flower, 5 yrs	(J Sharp) 1
Mr. Elwes's Messenger, 4 yrs, 6st 12lb ..	.. (A Day) 2
The Corinthian Stakes of 10 sovs each, 5 ft, and 25 added. Once round and a distance. The winner to be sold for £200. &c. (18 Subs.)
Mr. F. P. Rolt's Spectator, aged, 11st 4lb ..	.. (Owner) 1
Mr. Nicholl's Carrieleopard, 3 yrs, 11st 5lb ..	.. (Owner) 2
Mr. Mostyn's Draco, 4 yrs, 10st 7lb	(Lord E. Cecil) 3
The Railway Plate of £20, given by the South Western Railway Company, added to a Sweepstakes of 5 sovs each. The winner to be sold for £200, &c.
Heats. Once round and a distance. (5 subs.)
Duke of Beaufort's f by Assassin, 3 yrs	(J. Sharpe) 1 1
Sir G. Heathcote's f by Astracan, 3 yrs	(Coatsworth) 2 2
Mr. Smith's b by Mulley Molosh, 3 yrs ..	(Crouch) 3 3
First heat.—Won by half a length. Second heat.—Won by five lengths.

THURSDAY.

The Claremont Stakes of 10 sovs each, 5 ft, with 25 added. (Five Subs.)
Mr. T. Hussey's Embrace, 8st 4lb	(J. Sharp) 1
Sir G. Heathcote's Brother to Khorassan, 8st 4lb ..	(Chapple) 2
Lord Strathmore's Sweet Sauce, 8st 4lb	(Crouch) 3
The Queen's Plate of One Hundred Guineas. The winner to be sold for £500, &c.
Heats. Two Miles
Mr. Olliver's Blind Hookey, aged ..	(Owner) 0 1 0 1
Lord Warwick's Alwal, 3 yrs ..	(Planner) 1 2 0 2
Mr Payne's Marquis of Conyngham ..	(J. Sharp) 0 3 dr
Blind Hookey made a good running from end to end, and, after a fine race up the distance, won by a neck
The Innkeepers' Plate of 25 Sovs, added to a Sweepstakes of 5 Sovs each; the winner to be sold for 100 sovs. Heats, one mile and a quarter. (14 Subs.)
Duke of Beaufort's b f by Assassin, out of Esmeralda, 3 yrs ..	(J. Sharp) 1 0 1
Mr. Nicholls's Rowland, aged	(E. Parr) 0 1 2
Mr Osbaldeston's f by Lanercost, out of Mountain Sylph's dam, 3 years	(Planner) 0 2 0
Captain Thompson's Etona, 5 yrs	(Bell) 0 3 0
Mr Drew's Sylph, aged	(Hackett) 2 0 0

The first heat was won by four lengths, the second by a neck, and the third by a length.

CRICKET.—The match between the Marylebone Club and Ground v. Sussex was concluded on Wednesday. The Marylebone lost by 108 runs. The final score was—Sussex, 331; Marylebone, 223.

EVERYBODY'S COLUMN.

BY ALBERT SMITH.

THE FISHING SEASON.

SOME readers are aware, since we last wrote the fishing season has commenced in the Thames; and our excellent friend, Mr. Straggles, has been the first to avail himself of it. In the tranquil punt, or on the latter-cupped bank, he quests the excitement caused by Jenny Lind; but a pleasing poetic melancholy has filled his mind; and, whilst watching his float, he has composed the following ballad, to Lindpaintner's glorious music of "The Standard Bearer," which all our readers have, doubtless, heard; but, if they have not, the sooner they do, and sung by Herr Pischof, the better.

THE FISHER'S WATCH.

(Joe Straggleseachi.)

Upon the painted Thames a fisher wight
Is watching where his float is idly dangling;
And thus, because he cannot get a bite,
He clears his throat and sings, whilst all are angling—
"The fish that I have caught I will not name,
Nor yet confess my bites have all been grounders;
But I will bear my basket just the same
As though 'twere filled with gudgeon, dace, or flounders,
As though 'twere filled with gudgeon, dace, or flounders."

The night comes on: the bleak rise up in shoals;
The fisherman is seen from pitches hunting;
And, whilst half starved, he eats his ground-bait rolls,
His song is heard by dozens round him punting.
"The fish that I have caught I will not name," &c.

At length, worn out, he seeks the last up-train,
The Kingston Station fills with tired numbers,
He sees his blue day-ticket stamped again,
And saintly sings, the while he almost slumbers,
"The fish that I have caught I will not name,
But I will bear my basket as a token,
And if by chance they should find out my shame,
I'll swear that by a trout my line was broken,
I'll swear that by a trout my line was broken."

We have furthermore been favoured, by Mr. Straggles, with a vivid representation of the same view applying equally well to all the nearest pitches to the stations on the South-Western Railway. Mr. Straggles has informed us that there was a fish and three-quarters to each angler between Kingston and Hampton Court Bridges. The crowd embraced all classes and ages, from the boy with his long twig and crooked pin to the octogenarian, who now and then spared their rods and spoilt the children that accompanied them.

THE SURFACE OF THE THAMES AS IT APPEARED LAST SUNDAY;

The heat of the day rendering a bath desirable, Mr. Straggles had also an opportunity of taking a hurried sketch of where it was scarcely possible to avoid the baits of the gentle—men shove.

THE BOTTOM OF THE THAMES AS IT APPEARED LAST SUNDAY,

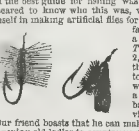
Mr. Straggles lost some time in going on from Kingston to Walton, having been told the best guide for fishing was "Walton's Complete Angler;" but nobody appeared to know who this was, when he got there. He has since occupied himself in making artificial flies for his next essay; which he contrives in this fashion, from his feather bed, an old hat, and a worn out shaving brush. He calls No. 1, The dandy-grey-russet May Hackle, and No. 2, The big fubbertigibbet Tea-caddie; and says they are "killing baits," and not to be told from nature. Not knowing the originals, we cannot tell; but we should conceive a swarm of flies like the above, with large barbed hooks in their tails, a very dreadful visitation.



Our friend boasts that he can make flies to any pattern. We have seen some conveying old ladies to country parties, that we think would defy all his ingenuity.

THE NEW CAB WHEELS

The application of caoutchouc to cab wheels, to deaden all noise and shaking, is another proof of the ingenuity of the age. Every one will soon be able to enjoy "the quiet rubber" even while riding along the streets. It will, however require much care; as, if put on too thickly, the elasticity thus given to the vehicles will lead to the not very desirable effects below represented.

FEARFUL EFFECTS OF CAOUTCHOUC WHEELS.

Like the jumping German of the song, as the vehicle would derive fresh impetus every time it came down, and spring higher in consequence, there is no knowing but that at last it might go clean out of the sphere of earth's attraction, and take its passengers an untintended journey

A new set of ideas will be opened to the poets, when this invention becomes general. Songs may begin—

"Merrily, merrily, goes the cab
Along the streets she bounds.
So darts the winkle from the crab,
Or the deer before the hounds."

SHAMELESS EFFRONTERY

We are sufficiently lost to all sense of shame to publish the following atrocious conundrum How we called up sufficient nerve to do so, is a mystery even to ourselves. However, here it is

What is the difference between a surgical operator and a wisard? One is a cupper, and the other is a saucerer.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

On Saturday last "La Figlia del Reggimento" was again repeated at this theatre. Mdlle Lind's performance of Maria, setting aside the surpassing merit as a musical accomplishment, is truly a wonderful piece of acting. That she should exhibit its rich our deepest admiration for the lively character of Alice, and engage our warmest sympathies in behalf of the simple Annina, is not so astonishing as to find without looking for an instant for the truth of the impersonation, she should so completely enlist our affections and tastes on behalf of a character which, in other hands, would be the reverse of elegant or refined that of a sutler girl. But, with Mdlle. Jenny Lind, whatever she undertakes, it will always be so. There is an innate grace and dignity of manner which never leaves her, and which, united to the winning archness, naïveté, and naturalness of her acting, forms the most fascinating combination. The look of enjoyment in her face communicates itself to, and completely carries away, her listeners, and it is the impression of all those who see her as Maria, how thoroughly she relishes her part. A careless spectator (but there are few such, when she performs) would lose a great deal of the merit of her performance; she must be watched at every moment, to catch the ever-varying expression of her features. The look of completely astonished as she struts about the stage, singing her regimental air—her mimic coquetry, with the old Sergeant: the struggle between inclination and the sense of duty, when studying the old-fashioned romance with the Marquise, all display a delicious discrimination of character. Her performance of Adina in "L'Elisir d'Amore" (which, although not possessing much intrinsic merit, becomes one of the gems of the opera when sung by these two admirable artists. It is the only thing of consequence that Garcia has to do with the whole opera, and we cannot admire too much the charming manner in which he succeeds in blending his voice with that of Mdlle Lind. This was particularly remarkable at the moment when the two voices sunk together in the lowest whisper and then swelled again with such admirable ensemble. Indeed, we never before remember to have heard a duet sung with such perfection, and in which the two voices were more exactly suited to each other. Who will ever forget the natural, but comic expression with which she repeats the words "Per Bacco" when the proud lady the Marchioness of Birkenfield claims her as her niece, and then the exquisite feeling she infuses into the words "Lasciar Ludri mia!" and "Addi," when she is about to bid adieu to her supposed father and the companions of her youth, at the end of the first act?

The second act gives Jenny Lind full scope for a wonderful display of vocalisation. It is when she is practising the romance with her aunt that she launches forth into the most elaborate succession of flourishes shakes and cadences of all descriptions, to the utter astonishment of the Marquise, who can scarcely believe her ears, and then, just as she is in the midst of one of the highest and most difficult passages, she dashes down the music in a fit of impatience, and begins singing her favourite regimental air. This is the best scene of the opera, and always excites universal laughter. Her Majesty, the Prince Consort, the Royal children, and an immense assemblage of Royalty, rank, and fashion attended the performances on Saturday. The Queen was again present, with the Grand Duke Constantine, the Duchess of Cambridge, &c., on Tuesday, when "La Sonnambula" was given. It is needless to dwell upon the performance as a whole has acquired an ensemble which makes it go off far more brilliantly and effectively than at first, and the music itself gains upon the ear. It is impossible to hear this opera three or four times before we can obtain an adequate idea of its greatness as a work of art, or of the exceeding beauty of its detached morceaux.

Mdlle. Lind, on each occasion, had so many bouquets thrown to her that it was with some difficulty she could carry them off the stage. The charming danseuse, Cerito and Carlotta Grisi, on Saturday, Tuesday, and Thursday evenings, displayed their exquisite chorographic talents in the ballets of "Giselle" and "Ondine."

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Donizetti's "Lucrezia Borgia" was repeated on Saturday night, by special desire of the Queen Dowager, who honoured the new theatre for the first time with her presence, accompanied by the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia. The house was crowded to excess by rank and fashion, and the opera went off brilliantly; the chorus in the prologue, "Passiam la notte," with Marini's majestic organ, being encored; and the duet in the

THE LATE RAILWAY ACCIDENT, AT CHESTER.

SCENE OF THE LATE RAILWAY ACCIDENT, AT CHESTER.—DILAPIDATED SPAN OF THE DEE BRIDGE.

In fulfilment of our engagement, we this week present our readers with Illustrations descriptive of the late lamentable accident at the Dee Bridge, on the Chester and Holyhead Railway.

The general view is taken from the high ground on the Saltney side, looking down upon the dilapidated span of the Bridge, and showing the space left open between the piers by the fall of the girder and road-way. The bent ends of the overhanging rails are shown for the purpose of marking more clearly the late track; the rails, as well as every other part of the ruin having been removed from the verge of the opening before we visited the spot.

The Bridge crosses the river at an angle of about 48½ is constructed with three spans skewed to the same angle—of 100 feet each; each span being sustained by four trussed girders, one on each side, and two in the middle, making the two roadways independent of each other; on the inside of the bottom flange of each pair of girders, shoes are cast, having a dooe-tail socket, into which wrought-iron ties are fitted to secure the girders from springing outwards at the bottom, a tendency to which is occasioned by the weight of the road-way and the oscillating pressure of the passing trains. Between these, and resting upon the same flange, are strong timber bearers or joists, upon which a flooring of four-inch planks is laid: on this the longitudinal sleepers are fitted, carrying the rails and check-rails, the latter being continued twenty-six f et beyond the span of the Bridge each way. Between each pair of girders near twenty tons of ballast had been recently laid, and we were informed by a gentleman on whom we can rely, that the unfortunate train in question was the first that had attempted to cross the Bridge after the ballast was so deposited.

Having heard much about the deflection of the girders when a train passed over, we watched them carefully on the occasion of two goods trains coming up, and could not perceive any more than a slight vibration, certainly nothing like a deflection of inches; they were unaccompanied by engine and tender. We have given this brief and general description, with the view of making the following details—more immediately referring to the melancholy catastrophe—clear and intelligible to the general reader.

Fig 1

ELEVATION OF GIRDER.

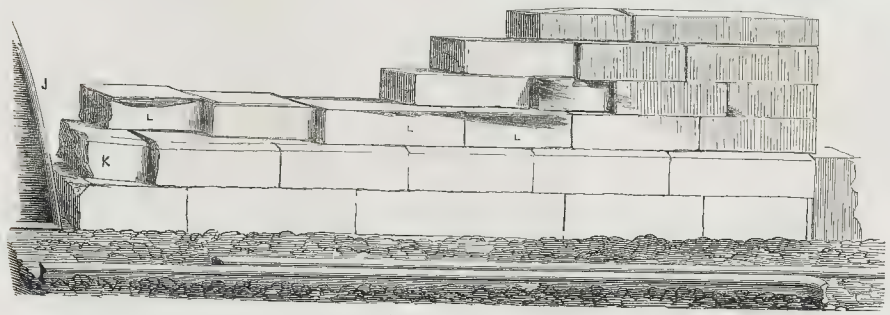
By the evidence given on the inquest, the public are already aware that the same facts are adduced in support of widely differing opinions; and as it is our object rather to furnish the material for others to judge from, than to volunteer an opinion of our own—we shall proceed to state the facts as they existed on our visiting the spot.

Fig 1 is a side elevation of the broken girder, showing the exact form and position of the fractures. A is the Saltney end. From B to the fracture C, the girder is represented in its perfect state (except the rails which are indicated at the opposite end, and shown entire in the general view), with the truss or tension plates, D, which run through, and are secured at A and B to the plates E. F F are enlarged transverse sections, and G G are plans of flange, showing the fracture, H. At the end H, is a section of masonry, showing the bearing of girder.

Fig. 2, as an elevation of the inside of the parapet, commencing from the end of the fallen girder, and extending 26 feet toward the Saltney end; the fractures and abrasions are carefully marked; as, on this piece of shattered wall, arguments of a very varied character are founded. J shows the end of the girder. K, where the tender first struck the wall; L L L, marks of abrasion, made by the screws and other slight projections on the side of the tender, several of which are broken off, and others much ground down.



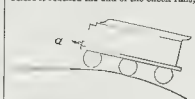
PARAPET OF THE BRIDGE.

The train consisted of the engine and tender, following which the carriages were arranged—1st One first-class 2nd One second class (with break and guard-box) 3rd One second. 4th Luggage-van 5th Second-class.

One opinion, having the weight of high authority, is, that the tender, by some means, got off the rails whilst upon the Bridge, and struck the girder at I, which, instantly giving way, the train fell through, the connection between the first-class carriage and the tender being broken in the fall: whilst the latter, having received additional impulse from the engineer turning on the steam just at this point, cleared the Bridge, struck and grazed the wall as before-named, running, still off the rails, a distance of seventy feet, to where it now lies. The engine had parted from the tender, and continued on the rails, having sustained scarcely the slightest injury.

Another opinion attributes the accident to some radical defect in the material or construction of the girder. Evidence having been given that the deflection had amounted to from four to six inches during the passage of a heavy train, it is inferred that on this occasion the girder gave way first at C, and that the piece I. was "jumped" out by the fall.

It was at this point that the engineer states he felt the sinking, and turned the steam full on; the sudden jerk from which gave an impetus to the tender, and enabled it to reach the Saltney side. The way in which it got off the line, before it reached the end of the check rails, is thus accounted for:—



The tender has six wheels: the curvature of the sinking rails would throw two or four of them out of bearing, where the slightest impediment or impulse, at either side, would make it change position on the line; and that this occurred just before striking K, and that the coupling at a was broken by the sudden elevation of the fore part, and consequent bending down of the screw to the tug of the engine.

The evidence of the boy went to show that the carriages had nearly all crossed the Bridge, before the entire floor and rails gave way, and that the last carriage ran back, dragging the others, which had become disengaged from the tender, into the river; and it does appear that the first-class carriage struck the parapet at K, from whence portions of the plate glass and window frame were projected, marked in the large drawing at A. From this, it would appear that a portion of the carriage was cscaude the parapet at the time it struck, which would make it very unlikely that any of the carriages had actually reached the Saltney side in comparative safety.

Another opinion is that the masonry was defective, and that the girders had not sufficient bearing; but, on examination, no deficiency was apparent in either respect. Others, that the tender struck the end of the girder A, and dislodged it from its bearings, from whence it fell into the river, and got broke by the fall—but there is no appearance on the coping of its having been driven off in that way—the stone being perfectly free from any marks of the girder having slid outward.

There appears no very clear mode of accounting for the tender leaving the line where the check-rails were fixed, except by supposing a curve in the rails; and, if a curve did occur, it must have been produced by something having sunk or given way.

The conduct of the engineer on the trying occasion is deserving of all praise; and there is a satisfaction in knowing that all that presence of mind and courage could do, was done at the moment, and done well.

Whilst we regret the absence from Chester of Mr. Lee, the Engineer to the line, and Mr. Munt, of the Chester and Holyhead Railway, to whom we were directed for information, we gladly acknowledge the readiness with which those gentlemen who were on the spot, and connected with the Railway, furnished us with some of the foregoing facts; and, if we have omitted any points which to them seemed important, it is only because we wished to avoid implying censure on any parties.

PICTURE-MODEL OF VENICE, AT VAUXHALL GARDENS

VAUXHALL GARDENS

THE VIEW OF VENICE.

THE above is a view of the pictorial model of a portion of the city of Venice, to which we alluded last week. It is set up on the "Waterloo Ground," where the fireworks are exhibited; and its effect about dusk, when the outlines are softened, and the real and artificial features more intimately blended, is very truthful. The spectator is supposed to be on the Grand Canal, at its entrance. In front of him is the landing-place leading to the PIAZZA di San Marco, with its two columns, on one of which the "winged lion of St. Mark" is a prominent object. The pile of buildings on the right is, or rather was, the Ducal Palace; and within its quadrangle are the "giant steps," down which the head of Marino Faliero rolled, and the terrible "lion's mouth" letter-box which received so many denunciations. Were the view continued still more to the right, the next opening would show us the Bridge of Sighs, crossing a narrow canal at some height, from the palace to the prisons. The Cathedral of St. Mark is before us, and over its principal door are the four celebrated horses of gilt bronze, which Napoleon removed to Paris, and which were afterwards returned. It is said that in the treasury of this fine church is the Gospel of St. Mark, written with his own hand.

The Campanile, or Bell Tower, is the lofty steeple to the left, from which Joel Il Diavolo makes his descent. The original is about three hundred feet high, and is ascended, not by steps, but a series of inclined planes, so that a horse may be ridden to the very top. There is a story of Lord Byron's having once done so, on his pony—the only one in Venice. We do not see much of St. Mark's Place from this point. It extends to the left, surrounded by arcades, in which are shops and cafés. It is something like what the Palais Royale would be if the gardens were removed, together with the railings, and the whole area paved. People of all nations assemble here, and in the number of the Turks gravely smoking and drinking their coffee, you see the first traces of approach to the East. They are chiefly merchants, who come over from Trieste in the steamer.

It is a pity that real water could not have been introduced in front of this view, as the imitation, however well done, mars the truthfulness of the model generally. It is by the lake that the Surrey Gardens are enabled to give such marvellous additional effect to their views. There is room enough at Vauxhall for a very fair sheet of water, which need not be above a foot deep, as it requires to be but very shallow indeed for reflection; and in this the great beauty of the pyrotechnic display lies. The fireworks, however, at Vauxhall, are very splendid, and the Gardens fully maintain their reputation for these displays.

THE EXPEDITION IN SEARCH OF SIR JOHN FRANKLIN.—The party of Royal Sappers and Miners who are to form the "searching" party to be despatched on a boat expedition in search of Sir John Franklin and his party, in case no intelligence of them should reach England before next spring, have embarked on board the Prince Rupert and the Westminster. The instructions to the party are, to land at FORT JACK, and proceed to the company's station on the M'Kenzie river, where they are to winter; and, in the event of an unfortunate doubt still hanging over the fate of the intrepid Arctic voyagers, they will be joined by Sir John Richardson, in the spring of 1848. The men are all to be teetotalers, that is, no grog or spirits will be served out to them, but they will receive double pay and rations, and will have an abundant supply of pemmican, or the dried flesh of the buffalo. Winter dresses, prepared from the skin of the moose deer, are also provided for them, and every provision has been made to enable them to meet the rigours of the terrible climate they will have to endure. The men are all accustomed to the use of boats, which they will have in continual use on the M'Kenzie, and have been selected from the trades of carpenters, smiths, &c.

THE NEW PARLIAMENT.—As nearly six years have elapsed since the last General Election, it may not perhaps be altogether uninteresting to our readers to be reminded of the course that was then adopted with respect to the dissolution of the old and the meeting of the new Parliament. Her Majesty in person prorogued the then Parliament on the 22nd of June, 1841. The dissolution by proclamation took place on the following day, the new Parliament being summoned to meet, and met accordingly, on the 19th of August, a period of 58 days thus intervening between the two events. The Legislature having then assembled, the sittings continued for a period of seven weeks—viz., from August 19 to October 7, when the session, by successive adjournments, was carried over until the month of February of the following year. Supposing this precedent to be followed on the present occasion, and that Parliament be adjourned on the 8th, and dissolved on the 9th of July, as anticipated, then, allowing, as in the former instance, 58 days for the elections and the interval necessary for, and consequent upon, the calling of a new Parliament, the second session of the 11th Victoria will commence on the 7th of September. On the previous occasion, the new Parliament commenced its sittings on the 19th of August, which were protracted until the 7th of October, principally from the fact of Lord Melbourne's Government having been outvoted on the Address in both Houses, in reference to the paragraph in the Speech from the Throne, calling upon Parliament to consider the laws regulating the trade in corn, with the view of determining whether they did not aggravate the natural fluctuations of supply, embarrass trade, derange the currency, diminish the comforts and increase the privations of the people—votes, which necessarily led to the delays and adjournments consequent upon the formation of a new Administration. Circumstances, however, have changed since then; and it may, therefore, be presumed that the forthcoming initiatory session, if it commences on or about the 7th of September, will terminate in a month or five weeks from that period, should no untoward circumstances, foreign or domestic, intervene.

FIRST AND SECONDS FLOUR.—At a recent meeting at Hastings, on the subject of the high price of provisions, Mr. Putland said: "An authority had gone forth for the general use of seconds flour. That article was the one generally, he might say invariably, consumed by the poorer and middle classes. The effect had been to raise the price of red wheats, from which alone that article was manufactured, equal to the white wheats, and had raised seconds flour to an extent unknown before. By this means a great injury had been inflicted on the poor. He found from recent trials and experience that nothing would sustain the working man so well as good strong red wheat flour. They might get rice, sago, or any other commodity, by which they would obtain an increase of bulk, but not of life-sustaining power, so that he much questioned any saving being effected. They should, therefore, be cautious how they sent forth any recommendations which would have the effect of urging the further progress of the error. He felt that they ought to advise that those who could afford it should use the best bread, and thereby leave more of the second quality for consumption by the poor."

THE BOSJESMANS, AT THE EGYPTIAN HALL, PICCADILLY.

THE exhibition of these extraordinary "Bush People," at that ark of zoological wonders—the Egyptian Hall, continues to attract numerous visitors. The group comprises two men, two women, and an infant, brought from that part of South Africa which borders on the English possessions and the territories of the Kaffirs.

With the ethnological characteristics of the Bosjesmans, literally, "Bushmen," the public have been made acquainted through the writings of Lichtenstein, Burchell, Campbell, Thompson, Pringle, and other intelligent travellers in Africa. The name of Bushmen, according to Dr. Knox, is inappropriate, since the race is unknown in woody land; the Doctor conjectures that the interior of Africa may be peopled with hards of tribes of this race; and he has a somewhat fanciful hypothesis identifying these poor creatures with the pigmies in Homer, who waged war against the cranes. It seems, however, ascertained that the Bosjesmans are a branch of the Hottentot race, which separated from the rest long before the establishment of the Europeans in Southern Africa, and took to a wandering life in the northern and more inland parts of the country. They are now beginning to be surrounded by civilisation; and, consequently, they must either become civilised themselves or become extinct. The latter seems the more probable; and, on this account, the present Exhibition is important, especially in illustration of the study of Ethnology, which is every year advancing in popularity.

The curious creatures at the Egyptian Hall are grouped upon a raised stage at one end of the large room; with a "flat" scene, set vegetation, hanging wood, &c. from the country of the Bushmen, cleverly painted and arranged by Mr. Johnstone. This is a vigorous piece of scenic effect, and greatly relieves the repulsive aspect of the aboriginal group. On our visit, one of the men, and the younger female, lay upon the floor, asleep, wrapped in their rugs, and skin clothing. The mother sat nursing her babe; and the other man sat smoking at the opposite corner; while in the centre blazed an open fire, which one of the party occasionally replenished with wood. The women wore conical caps, made of hide, and gold ornaments in their ears; the men, a sort of skin cloak, which hung down to their knees over a close tunic; the legs and feet were entirely bare. The most active individual of the party was the man whom our artist has represented standing: he addressed the audience very emphatically, and gave a sort of pantomimic description of the taking of a serpent, whose stuffed form he held up by way of illustration. His action was vehement, and not altogether graceless; and his pantomime was very striking. The frequent and strong clacking sound of the tongue, and the drawling of the ends of the sentences, were very peculiar. This fellow would make a capital melodramatic actor Neither of the party betrayed the least timidity: the mother occasionally left her child to receive money from the spectators, and kissed with fervour the donor's hand. The man, too, gratefully received a cigar, but did not leave off smoking his hemp-seed, to enjoy the higher flavoured luxury.

In stature, these Bosjesmans are low; they are lean; their legs are symmetrical; and in physiognomy, they agree with what Lichtenstein says of the race: "they have the universally distinguishing features of the Hottentots, their broad flat nose, the long prominent cheek-bones, and the yellow-brown hue of the skin;" and "their physiognomy has the same characteristic features as that of the Hottentots, only more wild and animated, owing to their insecure and wandering habits of life."

During our visit, the party went through a variety of performances illustrative of their customs in their native country: their whoops were sometimes startling: they seemed more than once to consider the attentions of a spectator as an affront, and were only stayed by their attendant from resentment. There were several implements lying about; but the bow and arrow appeared to be the favourite weapon.

Altogether, this is an exhibition of unusual interest and value. The first effect, on entering the room, may be repulsive; but, the attentive visitor soon overcomes this feeling, and sees in the benighted beings before him a fine subject for scientific investigation, as well as a scene for popular gratification, and rational curiosity. It was strange, too, in looking through one of the windows of the room into the busy street, to reflect that by a single turn of the head might be witnessed the two extremes of humanity—the lowest and highest of the race the wandering savage, and the silken baron of civilisation.

The portrait in the background of the sketch, we should add, is that of the gentleman under whose care the Bosjesmans have been brought from their native country to form one of our metropolitan sights.

THE BOSJESMANS AT THE EGYPTIAN HALL, PICCADILLY

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"Cur."—The Author's solution of Enigma 165 (a masterly stratagem) is 1. R to Q R 2nd, K P one: 2 B to K 3rd, K to K 3rd; 3. R to Q 2nd, P takes P; 4 B takes P, K to K R 3rd; 5. R to Q 6th, mate: or, 1. R to Q R 2nd. K to K Kt 3rd; 2. R to K R 2nd, K P one; 3. B to K 3rd, K P one; 4. R to K R 3rd, K to K B 3rd; 5. R to K R 6th, mate. Your exclusive is left for you at the Office of this Paper; or, on receipt of your address, will be forwarded.

"C. B. D." You are quite mistaken; look once more, and with attention.

"W. A. E." It is you who are in error: the Problem is perfectly correct.

"A Constant Subscriber."—The Game of Chess in Italy differs from ours in the method of Castling, and in the unfettered privilege a Pawn has of marching two steps on his first move without the inability of being taken in passing by a hostile Pawn. For the Rules of the Game as played among the Natives of India, see the "Chess-Player's Chronicle," vol. 4, page 145, where some games played by an Englishman and two Natives are given.

"T. N."—The solution of Enigma 168 is given above. The position is of remarkable beauty and originality; and we have to reproach ourselves for not having given it the prominent position in our column to which it is entitled.

"P. G. B."—Your suggestions have been anticipated. The "Hand-book," which is in the eve of publication, contains above one hundred and fifty illustrative diagrams, and omits no one of the subjects to which you have alluded.

"A Freemason."—The Subscription to the London Chess Club is three guineas a year.

"H. A. D."—Your signature is quite undecipherable. To gain admission to one of the Metropolitan Chess Clubs, you should write to the Secretary. For the old London Chess Club, address the George and Vulture Hotel, Cornhill; and for the St. George's Club, to No. 5, Cavendish-square.

"T. B."—Your solution shall be examined.

"J. T."—The solutions requested shall be given next week.

"Duo"—De la Rue's or Dr. Roget's folding Chess-Board may doubtless be got at the Office of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle." The work you require is Bohn's forthcoming "Handbook," which will be out in a few days.

"B. A. D."—Your signature is quite undecipherable. To gain admission to one of the Metropolitan Chess Clubs, you should write to the Secretary. For the old London Chess Club, address the George and Vulture Hotel, Cornhill; and for the St. George's Club, to No. 5, Cavendish-square.

"T. B."—Your solution shall be examined.

"J. T."—The solutions requested shall be given next week.

"Duo"—De la Rue's or Dr. Rogot's folding Chess-Board may doubtless be got at the Office of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle." The work you require is Bohn's forthcoming "Handbook," which will be out in a few days.

"A Freemason."—The Subscription to the London Chess Club is three guineas a year.

"*H

MR. ROBERT GREEN (Pupil of MM. Benedict and Leopold De Meyer) has the honour to announce that his FIRST GRAND EVENING CONCERT will take place, at the HANOVER-SQUARE ROOMS, on FRIDAY, June 25, to commence at Eight O'Clock precisely, on which occasion he will be assisted by Mesdames Caradori, A. and M. Williams, and Dolby; Signor Belzzi; Messrs. H. Phillips and John Parry. Pianoforte, Messrs. — and R. Bensa; Harp, M. Godefroid; Violin, Mr. Willy; Conductors, Messrs. Benedict, Green, and De Glimes. Full particulars will be duly announced. Tickets, 7s: Reserved Seats, 10s. 6d.; may be had at all the principal Music Warehouses, and of Mr. Robert Green, Montagu House, Eltham, Kent SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.—The SEVENTY-FIRST ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN, at their Gallery, 53, Pall-Mall, each day, from Nine till Dusk. Admittance One Shilling. Catalogue, Sixpence.

J. W. WRIGHT, Secretary.

THE NEW SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS.—The THIRTEENTH ANNUAL EXHIBITION is NOW OPEN at their Gallery, 53, Pall-mall, near St. James's Palace, from Nine o'Clock till Dusk.—Admission, 1s.; Catalogue, 6d.
JAMES FAHEY, Secretary.

EXTRAORDINARY IMPROVEMENTS in PIANOS, most desirable in every respect, at prices very moderate, notwithstanding their novel and beautiful appearance and quality of tone. To be seen only at MOTTS, 76, Strand. N.B. Good Pianos (which have been taken in exchange) at low prices.

PIANOFORTES.—The cheapest house in London to purchase these first-rate instruments is at H. TOLKIEN'S, manufacturer, 28, King William-street, London Bridge. H. T., having completed his extensive alterations, begs his friends to view his splendid stock of PIANOS, which is not to be equalled by any maker, and at about half the price charged by them. H. T.'s much admired Piccolo cabinet pianos, 25 Gs. Old instruments taken in exchange.—TOLKIEN, 28, King William-street, London Bridge

DANCING TAUGHT, in the most fashionable style, by MR. WILLIS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden-square. Private Lessons in the Polka, Cachuca Valse, and Varsovienne Tempo, at all hours. Mr. Willis attends Families in New Ready, Price 6d. Also, Parcels, privacy and expedition. An Evening Class on Monday and Friday. Terms may be had on application as above

MESSRS. WILKINSON and DOBSON, Goldsmiths, 32, Piccadilly, having nearly completed the sale of that part of their Stock on which they have been enabled to make a large reduction, in consequence of a change in the Firm, respectfully invite the early attention of purchasers to the remaining portion, which will be offered only for a short period. It comprises some very choice Silver Plate, Modern Jewellery, Diamond Ornaments, and first-class Sheffield Plate

JONES' £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. They comprise every modern improvement, and are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The great reduction is made at once sets aside all "and" for either of the Swiss manufactured Watches or any other house. On receipt of a Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES for £4 4s., one will be sent Free. Send Jones' Sketch of Watches, and free for a Twopenny Stamp

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—A Pamphlet, explaining the various descriptions, and the advantages of each, with a List of Prices, will be forwarded, gratis, by post, if applied for by a post-paid letter.—T. COX SAVORY and CO., Goldsmiths, Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street).

ORNAMENTAL CLOCKS.—Recently received from Paris, an amazing large variety of PORTER-LEAVY CLOCKS, to strike the hours and half-hours, in Ormolu, Marble, and China. The designs are Pastoral and Historical, and include a few of great merit in the style of Louis XIV. For prices see List, which may be had, gratis, on application as above

MUSICAL BOXES.—A large stock of the first quality, playing a variety of choice airs, overtures, &c., including selections from the following favourite operas: "The Bohemian Girl," "Maritana," "Daughter of St. Mark," the "Bondman," &c. A catalogue of the airs is now published, and may be had gratis, on application to T. COX SAVORY and Co., Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London

SILVER PLATE, New and Second-hand.—T. COX SAVORY and Co's Pamphlet of Prices, with outlines, may be had gratis, or will be sent post free if applied for by a paid letter. The contents are the prices, weights, and patterns of new and second-hand silver tea and Forks; new and second-hand Tea and Coffee Services, Waiters, Silver-gilt Plateau, &c. The new plated on white metal spoons and Forks, Watches, Clocks, Cutlery, Lustres, Candelabra, and Jewellery.
T. COX SAVORY and CO., No. 47 Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London

SILVER TEA SERVICES of New Patterns.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Working Silversmiths, 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank, respectfully inform their customers that they have just completed a large assortment, in accordance with the present improved taste, and that they are sold at reduced prices from those customary in the trade

Uxbridge Pattern.			Thistle Pattern.
Strong Silver Tea-pot	£10 18 0		Strong Silver Tea-pot	£13 0 0
Ditto Sugar-Basin	5 14 0		Ditto Sugar Basin	7 11 0
Ditto Cream-jug	4 10 0		Ditto Cream Ewer	5 15 0
Ditto Coffee-pot	6 16 0		Ditto Coffee-pot	10 17 0
Complete	£36 12 6		Complete	£42 10 0

A variety of upwards of 56 Silver Tea and Coffee Services may be seen in the Show Rooms and on application (by illustrated price current, containing 100 engravings), with the weights and prices of recent designs, will be forwarded to any part of Great Britain, Ireland, India, or the Colonies. Knock on silver plate exported 1s. 6d. per ounce

GREEN-GINGER WINE is the most refreshing, wholesome, and [illegible] beverage, and is the only genuine article when bearing the fac-simile of their signature affixed to the labels of each bottle.—Observe the name "JOHN STIVEN and CO." over the name of the town, Leith. Sold, wholesale, at the Manufactory, Bristol; Barge-yard, Bucklersbury, London; Duke-street and Henry-street, Liverpool, respectively; and by retail everywhere

A REALLY COOL GLASS of CLARET, Port, Sherry, or Champagne, at this season of the year—Spring Waters of ice-like coolness, luster of a delicious consistence, and all the other articles which the hot weather has rendered necessary to the refreshment of the table, may be had, wholesale, at the Manufactory, Bristol; Barge-yard, Bucklersbury, London; Duke-street and Henry-street, Liverpool, respectively; and by retail everywhere

SCHWEPPE and Co.'s SODA and other MINERAL WATERS, so well known and appreciated for upwards of 60 years past, continue to be manufactured under the personal superintendence of a Member of the Firm, and are delivered direct from the Springs of the GERMAN SELTZER WATER Principal Establishment, 51, Berners-street, London; Branch Manufactories at Liverpool, Bristol, and Derby, and sold by nearly all respectable Chemists in every town in the United Kingdom.

BREWER and COMPANY, LAUNDRESSES to her Majesty Queen Adelaide, beg to inform the Committees of Club Houses, and the Proprietors of Hotels, that their establishment is replete with every description of [illegible] Their premises being convenient, their drying ground spacious, with ample supply of water, and that to undertake the largest body of work required to be done.—Address, 6, 7, and 8, Providence-street, Walworth

WINDOW BLINDS.—TYLOR and PACE, general window blind manufacturers, 3, Queen street, three doors from Cheapside. Venetian blinds, 8d. per square foot; Holland roller blinds, 6d.; Holland spring ditto, 8d.; Union roller blinds, 4d.; perforated zinc blinds, in mahogany frames, 1s. 8d.; gauze wire ditto, 1s. 10d.; cornice blinds of striped cloth, 1s. 9d.; transparent blinds, each, 18s., 28s., 34s., 40s., and upwards. Detailed List of prices forwarded on application, post free

BED FEATHERS, PURIFIED by STEAM with PATENT MACHINERY, whereby they are rendered perfectly sweet and free from dust.

Mixed	1s. 6d. per lb.	Best Foreign Grey Goose	2s. 6d. per lb.
Grey Goose	1s. 8d.	Best Irish White ditto	3s. 0d.
Foreign White	1s. 8d.	Best Dantzic ditto	3s. 6d.

HEAL and SON'S List of Bedding, containing particulars of weights, sizes, and prices, sent free by post on application.—196, Tottenham-court-road, Tottenham-court-road

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH, and SMYRNA SPONGES Useful Inquiry.—For proof of the extreme durability, power of cleansing, and economy, ask all who have used Metcalfe's Brushes. The Tooth-brush performs the highly-important office of searching thoroughly into the divisions, and cleansing to the most extraordinary manner, and never come loose. Its peculiarly pointed form renders the most extraordinary manner, and never come loose. Its peculiarly pointed form renders the most extraordinary manner, and never come loose. Its peculiarly pointed form renders

RE-APPEARANCE OF THE APHIS VASTATOR ON THE POTATO PLANT.

In No. 246 of our Journal, we alluded to the researches of Mr. Alfred Smee,* which led him to infer that the present Malady in the Potato plant is to be attributed to a small insect of the family of Aphides, which he calls the Vastator. During the past week, he has announced the recurrence of the insect—an event which now becomes of such vast importance to the political and social welfare of this country, that we are induced to give a more highly finished illustration of this destructive pest in the winged state (Fig. 1), and call attention to other species allied to it. The creature feeds on the under surface of the leaf, and may now be found in nearly every potato ground round London. We have observed it at Peckham, Fulham, Tottenham, Blackheath, Sydenham, Stratford, Lewisham, Chigwell, Beckenham; and we hear of it from the midland and western counties. In our former number, we figured the Vastator in the larva, pupa, and final state; and, therefore, we must refer our readers to these figures. Upon attentively examining the potato plant, a single insect in the larva state may be detected here and there upon the under surface of the leaves, or a little colony may be noticed, like a flock of sheep, remaining motionless, and sucking the juices of the plant. They first appeared on or about the 24th of May, and, therefore, have hardly had time to commit serious damage, although we have observed that the fatal gangrene has manifested itself on some leaves (Fig. 2).

FIG. 1.—THE APHIS VASTATOR MAGNIFIED ONE HUNDRED TIMES.

FIG. 2.—POTATO LEAF DISEASED.

The Aphis Vastator appears to be one of the most important of Aphides, from the large number of plants used by man which it attacks; and Mr. Smee has given the following list of plants which it destroys or injures.

PLANTS DESTROYED BY VASTATOR.

WILD.

Shepherd's Purse	Mustard	Pasture Grass	Spurge
Groundsel	Bohemian Nigrin	Nettle	Geranium Mollo
Turnip	Dutemarra	Violet

CULTIVATED.

Clover	Spinach	Carrot	Tulips
Beet	Turnip	Parsnip	Crocuses

PLANTS PARTIALLY DESTROYED BY VASTATOR.

WILD.

Belladonna	Plantain	Chickweed	Dock
Stramonium	Pansy	Thistles	Elder
Hyoscyamus	Mallow

CULTIVATED.

Potato	Cabbages	Cinerarias	Cacti
Tomato	Celery	Verbenas	Passion Flowers
Sweet Potato	Horseradish	Peach	Fairy Rose
Artichoke, Garden	Parsley	Nectarine	Mary Solani
——— Jerusalem	Major Convolvulus	Apricot	Other Greenhouse
Wheat	Marigolds	Date Palm	Plants
Indian Corn	Balsams	Ipomea Learii

This list of plants, which is probably very incomplete, shows the omnivorous character of this Aphis, which entitles it, if not to our respect, at least to our fullest consideration. Its influences in producing dry or wet gangrene is highly important, and our Illustration exhibits the manner in which the leaf and leaf stalk of the potato plant blotches after its attack.

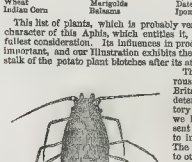

FIG. 3.

The family of Aphides contains numerous species, but those inhabiting Great Britain have not as yet been satisfactorily determined. In works on Natural History they are so sparingly figured, that we have thought it advisable at the present moment to delineate several species to indicate their general characteristics. The Vastator is similar in many respects to other species, and one which it resembles is called the Hop Fly (Fig. 3). The produce of the hop entirely depends upon the absence or presence of this pest, and Rusticus calculates that its extent of damage amounts sometimes in value to three millions. It is best distinguished from the Vastator by two strongly-marked projections on the head, on the inner side of the base of the antennæ. The Green Fly also very much injures our geraniums. It may be known from the Vastator by the superior length of the body, antennæ, and legs; in fact, all parts are relatively longer than the Vastator, and, in the winged state, the body is a bright green without black marks. The parsley, carrot, and parsnip crops are also this year covered with their respective Aphides, not much differing from the Vastator, and on the strawberry plant sometimes countless multitudes may be found, which much injure the plant and lessen the produce.

The cabbages and cruciferous plants are, towards autumn, with a white downy

* The Potato Plant, by Alfred Smee, F.R.S., Surgeon to the Bank of England, and Lecturer on Surgery.

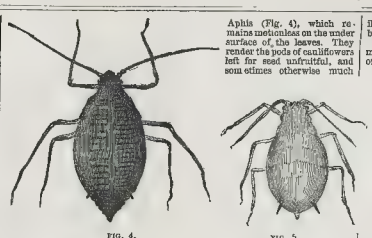

FIG. 4. FIG. 5.

Aphis (Fig. 4), which remains motionless on the under surface of the leaves. They render the pods of cauliflowers left for seed unfruitful, and sometimes otherwise much damage the plant by causing the leaves to rot at the part punctured. In our frames we may observe the under surface of the leaves of cucumber and melon plants to be covered with a minute specimen of Aphis (Fig. 5), which may be at once recognised by its black abdominal tubercles, and which, if not destroyed, will seriously injure the plants. This Aphis has been also known to feed upon various kinds of achemenes. Upon trees we have numberless species; and we shall first speak of that which infests the rose (Fig. 6). Every lady knows how injurious this creature is to the queen of flowers; and, though not so fatal to the plant as those which infest smaller vegetables, it still does much mischief. There are three other species which infest this tree; but the careful gardener can easily remove them by syringing with plain water.

FIG. 6.

Sir Joseph Banks long since pointed out how severely the apple tree has suffered from the American Blight, which killed numerous coding trees. It is much diminished in quantity since the beginning of this century, but is still to be seen in nearly every orchard (Fig. 7). This creature has very long pincers to penetrate the bark (Fig. 8), as it will feed upon the trunk of the tree. On the apple tree may be found two or three other Aphides, which we have not space to figure, but which are now doing damage.

FIG. 7

FIG.

The sycamore (Fig. 9) is infested by two Aphides, one living upon the leaf, the other on the young shoots. That on the leaf is very large and beautiful. It is so prevalent this year round London, that on one occasion we observed that the honey dew covered the plants underneath the tree. The honey dew is sugar excreted by these creatures, which is one of the most marvellous and interesting facts in Natural History. It is voided by all Aphides, and considerable quantities might be collected from large colonies of Aphides. Somewhat resembling the sycamore Aphis is that of the elm, chesnut, and walnut-tree and nut-bush. That infesting the lime deserves notice, from the great beauty of its wings, which are spotted (Fig. 10). In this diagram the artist has exhibited the manner in which the Aphides carry their wings when at rest, and is well worth the trouble of watching how the creature expands its wings when it takes its flight to more congenial situations. Other Aphides infest the maple, bird cherry, and blackberry.

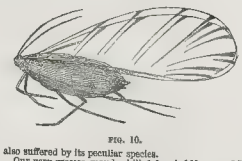

FIG. 10.

also suffered by its peculiar species.

Our very grasses may be killed by Aphides and Mr. Smee has recorded instances of the indestructible couch-grass having been cut down by a minute Aphis feeding upon the juices of the leaf (Fig. 13).

The cereal grains—the wheat, the oat, the barley—are infested by a large Aphis, which occasionally effects the total loss of the crop (Fig. 14).

Other vegetables used by man are also affected by these pests. The broad bean is now covered with a large black Aphis (Fig. 15). The stalks after its attack grow black, and the plant perishes, producing little or no fruit. The gardeners generally conquer this animal by cutting off the tops of the plants with a sickle. A very different Aphis injures the scarlet bean. The pea has also a noble Aphis, which feeds upon its leaf, and causes the plant to die locally, or at the underground stem (Fig. 16). In this instance, a Pupa has been figured, to show the peculiar form of this period of its existence, when it has rudimentary wings.

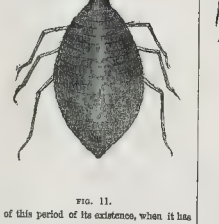

FIG. 11.

Our escalent roots, moreover, do not escape the depredations of these insects, for upon the artichoke there is one which lives upon the tuber (Fig. 17). This species is remarkable for its very long sutorial apparatus, or rostrum; and for this reason the artist has delineated the under view of the creature.

Aphides are prolific in the highest degree; millions may soon be bred from a single individual, without preliminary matrimony. Professor Owen estimates that a quintillion may be produced by one individual in a single season, which illustrates their enormous fecundity. This fecundity must cause us, indeed, to be apprehensive of their appearance on the potato plant.

In a lecture delivered at the London Institution, Mr. Smee stated that from a multiplicity of observations on numerous kinds of Aphides, and upon a diversity of plants, he had developed the following laws of the effects which they produce:

1. Aphides feed on living plants.
2. Aphides come first upon healthy plants.
3. Aphides suck the juices after having pierced the cuticle.
4. Aphides, by sucking the juices, impair the qualities of the sap.
5. The sap, being injured, no longer performs its proper functions.
6. The injured sap cannot perfectly nourish the plant.
7. Unnourished or imperfect tissue is apt to die.
8. Partial death follows by the attacks of Aphides may be local at the part affected, or remote that is to say, at a distance from the attack.
9. The ultimate death of the plant may arise from the death of a part necessary to the whole, which would thus cause its total death.
10. Wild plants, or plants in a condition well calculated to develop fibre, well resist the attacks of Aphides.
11. Highly cultivated plants, or plants not under circumstances favourable to the formation of fibre, ill resist the attacks of Aphides.
12. Plants are most injured by Aphides at that period of their growth when they are required to deposit most fibre.
13. Plants having their tissues damaged from Aphides are apt to propagate diseased tissue in a similar future growths.
14. The injury to plants hastens the transformation of Aphides.
15. The attacks of Aphides are almost invariably followed by the growth of fungi.

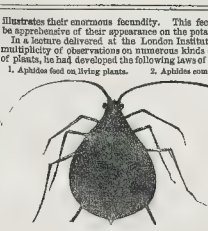

FIG. 12.

In obedience to these laws, Mr. Smee states that the Aphis Vastator (1) feeds on the living potato plant (2); comes first upon healthy plants (3); sucks the juices after having punctured the cuticle (4); impairs the qualities of the sap (5); which then cannot perform its proper functions (6); and the formation of fibre and starch is retarded (7). The imperfect tissue is apt to die (8), either locally at the part attached, or remotely at the collar, underground stems, or roots (9); which death at the collar may separate the leaf from the root, and thus destroy the greater part of the plant (10). The reputed wild potato plant and plants growing in a poor soil and dry atmosphere resist more than (11) the highly cultivated varieties and those growing in a rich soil and a moist, cold, and dark place (12); and the injury takes place principally when the starch is being deposited in the tubers (13). A set from former diseased plant is liable to manifest the disease in all its future growths (14). When the potato plant begins to perish the larvæ become perfect insects, and fly away to commit ravages elsewhere (15). The injured potato plant has a vast number of parasitic fungi growing upon it.

FIG. 13.

FIG. 14.

Insect plagues, from the beginning of the world, have given rise to fearful famines. They are spoken of in the Scriptures as "the army of the Lord, strong to execute his word." If insects now threaten us with famine, so insects promise to be our defence; as an army of ladybirds may totally annihilate the Aphides, and leave none behind to injure our crops. In announcing the recurrence of the

FIG. 9.

Vastator, we rejoice also to announce that in some localities vast troops of lady birds have appeared, which have already cleared whole trees. Moreover, the powers of man to effect their destruction must not be overlooked, for to him is given "dominion over everything which moveth upon the earth."

FIG. 15.

FIG. 16.

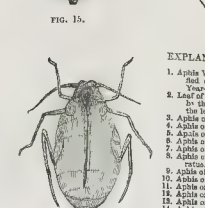

FIG. 17.

EXPLANATION OF THE FIGURES.

1. Aphis Vastator in its winged state, magnified one hundred times. (From "The Year-Book of Facts," 1847.)
2. Leaf of potato plant damaged this year by the Vastator, showing gangrene in the leaf and leaf-stalks.
3. Aphis of the hop larva.
4. Aphis of the cabbage larva.
5. Aphis of the melon larva.
6. Aphis of the rose larva.
7. Aphis of the apple (Lecaligra) larva.
8. Aphis of the apple larva, piercing apparatus.
9. Aphis of the sycamore (winged).
10. Aphis of the lime (winged, in repose).
11. Aphis of the oak larva.
12. Aphis of the cherry-tree larva.
13. Aphis of the grass larva.
14. Aphis of the oat larva.
15. Aphis of the bean larva.
16. Aphis of the pea pupa.
17. Aphis of the artichoke larva, under side, showing a very long rostrum.

LONDON Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JUNE 12, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

No. 268.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JUNE 19, 1847. [Sixpence.

THE REVIEW.

IN MOST occasions, a Review is a brilliant spectacle, and we can fully appreciate the feeling that makes so many thousands as anxious as Caleb Quotem to have "a place" at it; with a little sunshine to brighten the uniforms and glance back from the bayonets, the evolutions tell on the popular eye with great effect; then there are the standards, and the drums and trumpets, and "the noise of the captains, and the shouting;" we do not all wonder at the attraction of the sight; and yet, dazzling as it is, we would not make it the stock exhibition for all the foreign Princes that visit our shores, and least of all would we parade our military strength, or rather weakness, before a Grand Duke of All the Russias.

It is an old and established practice; but, as Cassio said of drinking, we wish courtesy would devise some other custom of entertainment. In the first place, there is nothing new in it to these illustrious strangers; it must be rather tedious than otherwise. There is scarcely a petty Royalty on the Continent that cannot get up a better thing of the kind than we can; there are few Kings of Europe who could not bring more troops together at a short notice than we can muster in St. James's Park, with considerable preparation. And as to the greater Powers, like Austria, Prussia, and Russia, our Reviews, to a scion of either of those Royal Houses, must look like a muster of their Palace Guard for a day's duty; and, compared with the great military spectacles to which they are accustomed, are petty and insignificant. Why do we continue to play this military much ado about nothing, when we know it has no novelty to those we delight to honour, and no grandeur to make up for the want of novelty? We forget the power of others in this respect, and thrust forward what gives a false estimate of our own.

And, independently of this, we question the taste of displaying our armed strength to Royal guests. Our army is one of defence only; it is not, as in Russia, the Government: what interest can it have for the Grand Duke Constantine, if he has no intention of invading us? To show a friend too pointedly all the intricacies of the locks, bolts, and bars of your mansion, really looks as if you suspected him of burglarious designs on the family plate, and that, if he were made acquainted with the perfection of your patent Bramah, it might deter him; but it is an uncomfortable feeling, there can be no pleasure in entertaining a guest with whom you walk round the house, under serious misgivings as to the safety of the spoons.

What, really, is the meaning and purpose of all we send so many Foreign Princes to see, at Woolwich? It is the store and manufactory of the means of national defence; and the Grand Duke was carefully shown how rapidly we can screw up ball cartridges enough to riddle a whole regiment of Cossacks, and with what celerity we turn out a thousand gross of percussion caps; he was led through the whole workshop of the tools of death and destruction, and full explanations were given him of the merits of the latest improvements in shrapnells and congreves; the exhibition terminated with the boring of a cannon by machinery, perfectly adapted to the purpose, it is said. The firing in the Marshes he declined witnessing, and returned to London, for the much more agreeable purpose of opening a State Ball with the Queen.

The same thing is repeated with all foreign visitors; of our military establishments, and military reviews, they must undergo a tary thorough course; we forget they have them on a much larger scale at home. The standing army of Russia counts six hundred thousand men; the military force of Austria is about the same; yet those armies have little more than their garrison and frontier duty to do; and their Sovereigns can "play at soldiers" on a scale that England—thank God!—cannot attempt. Russia can summon whole squadrons from many nations, with all varieties of arms and costume; she has regiments of Uhlans, of Tartars, of Mahometans, of Cossacks of the Don, in addition to the enormous masses of infantry, the bulk of her army, whose lives are as valueless as the leaves of the forest, their place being almost as readily supplied. To think that one of the Lords of these nations in arms can be gratified at the sight of a handful of troops manœuvring on a grass plot in a Park, is, we apprehend, a mistake. A glance at the map of the world, on which our military stations nearly girdle the globe, would give him a much better idea of our power. Our army is always at work, and works hard; it is not a parading force merely; in proportion to our territory, it is the smallest military establishment in Europe. If the greatness of the defensive, and necessarily destructive power, is the chief object of Royal curiosity, our Navy could furnish a much more imposing spectacle than our Army, and one the Continental Nations would find it more difficult to match. A fleet under sail is in itself a magnificent sight; the command of the elements it exhibits, seems a grander thing than that of the limbs of men. A fleet in motion appears, too, to be doing its work; a battalion going through its evolutions only looks as if it were training to it; the mechanism is visible: "the way of a ship in the sea" has been a source of wonder from of old.

We detest the idea of wars of territory, wars of religion, wars for a dynasty; but we have neither doubt nor scruple as to a war of defence, and for that we must always be prepared. Yet we do not know that we are required to parade our readiness on all occasions before those against whom there is at least a probability that our arms may be used. War is no longer the chief occupation of nations; and military display should not be made the chief thing among the pursuits of life. The social system bears too many signs of its feudal and military origin; all our titles are vestiges of military rank; Dukes were once leaders of armies, and retain the appellation, though they lead nothing but a hunt, a steeple chase, or, in rare instances, a party. Military glory is no longer the highest; and the strength that gains it is not so much a matter of pride as a thing necessary. A military spectacle, therefore, in the midst of a peaceful and commercial city, has lost much of its meaning. In fact, the "pomp of war" requires the shadow of coming peril to give it earnestness, and raise it above mere display. An army going out to certain conflict has a deep and terrible interest hanging over it; but a Review is a holiday sight, and nothing more—and, in England, we commonly have them on so small a scale, that, as an exhibition of power, they had better not be attempted at all.

THE DEAD ELEPHANT AT THE GARDENS OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY, REGENT'S-PARK.—DRAWN BY GEORGE LANDSEER.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

DEATH OF THE ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY'S ELEPHANT.

It became our duty, last week, to record the decease of one of the most remarkable individuals of the metropolitan menagerie, the favourite of the Gardens of the Zoological Society, in the Regent's Park. We are now able to present our readers with a portrait, and a short notice of the "mighty dead."

"Jack," the late "monster elephant" of the Zoological Gardens, expired on Sunday morning, June 6th, 1847, at his residence, in the Regent's Park, which he had occupied for more than sixteen years; having been purchased by the Society on May 20th, 1831, from Captain Smith, who brought him from the East Indies. He was then supposed to be 24 years of age, so that he must have been about 40 at his death. In the large enclosure which was allotted him, his enormous size and power were fully displayed; and the manner in which he disported his self in the long remembered, as well as many an amusing feat of his inquisitive trunk, unexpectedly protruded to a distance some unguarded visitor had deemed impossible.

Notwithstanding all the advantages of his situation, his health had been for many months declining. He suffered from an affection of the left knee; the pain occasioned by it rendered him irritable to allow the application of sufficient remedies; and, of course, prevented him from taking exercise; the want of which, together with his vast weight, aggravated the complaint, until his general health was so much affected, that, latterly, it had become too evident that his life must soon terminate. Shortly before his death, the symptoms of his malady became more distressing, and it was thought desirable that visitors should be no longer admitted to see him: he survived his seclusion two days. On Sunday morning, (the 6th instant,) at four o'clock, he was in his usual posture, leaning on the partition in front of his apartment: at five o'clock, he had sunk back to the ground, and lay with his hind legs stretched forwards, his fore-legs extended in front, his trunk resting on the left fore leg. Thus he remained, perfectly quiet, until seven, when his trunk relaxed, and sank to the ground, and his eyes closed: he was dead! There was no movement—no shudder—not a sigh: his head did not fall: he lay upright, in nothing more than the perfect stillness of repose. The doors were all closed; and the morning sun, which usually used so gladly to shine in through his window, rested gloomily on the dark, mighty form, which had lost none of its majesty in death.

Thus died poor Jack!—how much more peacefully than his predecessor in celebrity, at Exeter Change! His remains were hastily dissected under the direction of Professor Owen, who has, we are most glad to learn, perfectly recovered from a slight wound received during the operation. Various portions of the vast frame have been distributed to the Royal College of Surgeons, the Anatomical School of Oxford; King's College, London; the Royal Veterinary College, &c.; there to undergo an examination, which will give important additions to our knowledge of the anatomy of this mightiest of those that walk the earth. We doubt not that poor Jack will thus be not less useful in death than he was once admired in life; and wails it will devolve on others of his race to teach London's millions the majesty of the monarchs of the woods, he will have found an immortality in the annals of science

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

The Paris papers have this week created considerable excitement, by the publication of the official documents relative to Portugal, which were submitted to the Chambers by M. Guizot. These documents are very voluminous, and may be considered as affording the views of the French Government upon the whole of the recent events in Portugal.

The first despatch is from M. Guizot to M. Forth-Rouen, dated 24th October, 1846, acknowledging the receipt of despatches of the 14th, descriptive of what had taken place at Lisbon, relative to the overthrow of the Palmella ministry; and, after expressions of regret, announces his intention of reinforcing their naval station in the Tagus, by sending a ship, which should be at the disposal of the Queen and her family, so far as might be compatible with the line of neutrality which they, the French Government, intended to observe, and especially to receive them on board, should circumstances there them to seek an asylum.

The next despatch is from M. Guizot to the Count de Sainte Aulaire, dated February 11, 1847, enclosing him one from Count Bresson, descriptive of the steps taken by the Portuguese Envoy at Madrid to obtain, according to the terms of the Quadruple Treaty, the co-operation of the Spanish troops against the rebels of Septembrist and Miguelist forces. This despatch was to be shown to Lord Palmerston, accompanied with the following declaration:—

"You are authorised to let him know that we are ready to concert measures with the other Courts, parties to the Treaty of 1834, relatively to the resolutions that the existence of the casus fœderis and the situation of Portugal may render necessary."

The third is from Count St. Aulaire to M. Guizot, dated London, Feb. 18, in which he describes his interview with Lord Palmerston, who held that the demand based upon the treaty of Quadruple Alliance, although holding good in principle, could not be justified unless in the case of Don Miguel re-appearing in Portugal at the head of an imposing force, which was not then the case.

M. GUIZOT writes to Count St. Aulaire on the 19th, enclosing a despatch from Viscount de Carreras, to the effect that, in the opinion of the Portuguese Government, the casus fœderis had arisen, by the flight of Don Miguel from the Roman States, as well as by the late movements of Bandi Salsi at Oporto, and M. Guizot states his own agreement with this opinion, the more so, because the Miguelite General Povoas was exercising authority among the insurgents. He thinks, also, that Spain should be induced to afford the required assistance, and desires that Lord Palmerston shall be made acquainted with the readiness of the French Government to co-operate with the Cabinets of London, Madrid, and Lisbon.

Count St. Aulaire replies on the 23rd, to the effect that, in the course of a long conversation with Lord Palmerston, his Lordship, while admitting that the principle of the Treaty of 1834 subsisted, yet still thought that the circumstances which led to it did not exist, and that the casus fœderis existed also, about which he expressed the greatest doubts. He, however, requested that matters should be over until the arrival of Senor Isturitz, expected in a few days, when he would give finally his opinion.

The next despatch is of the 2nd April, from M. Guizot to Count St. Aulaire, and is marked confidential. It relates to a rumour of an intention on the part of England to exclude France from taking part in the treaty. A postscript, however, rectifies the false impression upon which the despatch was conceived, and the Ambassador is told that he need not shew it to Lord Palmerston.

A circular, addressed by M. Guizot to the Comte de Jarnac, the Baron de Varennes, and the Duc de Glucksberg, dated April 15, comes next in order, and is for the purpose of announcing the definitive rejection of Lord Palmerston, whose reasons for doubting that the casus fœderis had arisen are recapitulated, of sending Colonel Wylde upon the mission already known. This circular is itself described as being the substance of a despatch read by Lord Normanby to the Ministers.

The next is from Count de Jarnac, dated May 7, announcing the acceptance by Donna Maria of the conditions of the mediation offered by England.

This is followed by another of the 20th, mentioning the refusal of the insurgents to admit the same, with the outline of the convention suggested by Lord Palmerston as subsequently agreed to. Two despatches of the 21st and 22nd succeed, but they contain nothing of importance. We next have a despatch from the Baron de Moncorvo, and the signing of the protocol, as already known. The last document is a despatch from M. Guizot to the Baron de Varennes, dated May 26, transmitting a copy of the protocol, and pointing out that the co-operation of France and England should be purely maritime

These documents are discussed by the Paris journals in an angry tone. The Constitutionnel and some of the other Opposition papers censure M. Guizot for having insisted on the liberties of Portugal, and suggest that all the credit of supporting popular principles is due to England.

The Paris Moniteur of Sunday contains news from Oporto of the 8th, confirmatory of the Junta having accepted the terms offered by Colonel Wylde.

On Monday, in the Chamber of Deputies, M. Cremieux, brought forward the subject of Portugal. He began by protesting against the proceedings of the preceding Friday night in the House of Commons, commencing much upon certain expressions of Mr. Hume, who ventured to assert that Louis Philippe owed all his throne to his deserted principles, and that the Chambers had also very basely apologised for it. Guizot of course entered into a minute and laboured defence of his Government. Some of the Paris papers affect to think that M. Guizot's explanation on the state of affairs in Portugal was intended to satisfy the Lord J. Russell. M Guizot began his speech by declining to follow M. Cremieux in the unfavourable history that gentleman gave of Donna Maria's administration. He declared that, if the Portuguese Peerage had only been between the partizans of two charters, France would not have interfered, and that, accordingly at the end of last year he had declared in favour of the principle of non-intervention. At the commencement of the present year, however, fresh facts arose. The Miguelite party had developed itself, and began to play a more important part. The Miguelite party had issued a proclamation, and taken arms. Don Miguel himself had left Rome, and gone to London, to be within reach of passing events. This had changed the face of matters, and the Queen demanded the support of those who had signed the Quadruple Treaty. The resolutions of the French Government [illegible] consequent changed, and it had been decided upon mediation with England [illegible] but it was directed against Don Miguel rather than against the Junta [illegible] that he had proofs that England wished to act alone in the matter. [illegible] asserted that France had never intended to intervene with England, but he admitted that Spain was invited to interfere alone. It was in consequence of these facts that he had proposed a joint intervention. M. Guizot concluded by stating that France did not set herself up as the redresser of wrongs wherever they might show themselves, but that where French interests were concerned the Government was ready to interfere, as it had shown in Spain, Greece, and now in Portugal.

M. Odillon Barrot followed, and vehemently attacked the Government. No one else appeared disposed to speak, and, therefore, the subject ended as abruptly as it did in the House of Commons.

The Constitutionnel announces that the French Government have authorized the removal to Rueil, near Paris, of the remains of Louis Bonaparte, former King of Holland, and of his eldest son, who died in 1831, in order to be united with those of the Empress Josephine and Queen Hortense.

Marshal Bugaud has arrived at his residence in the neighbourhood of Perrenes from Algiers. He landed on the 8th inst. at Cette.

The debate in the Chamber of Deputies on the proposed grants for Algeria was evidently managed by the Ministry shunning several of their positions upon the bill, which was finally carried by a majority of 231 to 30. The Ministers adopted two proposed amendments, one giving 300,000 francs in aid of retired officers settling in the colony, and another requiring the Bank of France to establish a branch in Algeria.

Queen Christina has arrived in Paris, and gone for the present to reside at Madame. She remained four days from the 1st to the 4th instant, at Rome, on her route from Naples, and had a private audience of the Pope.

The petition of Prince Jerome Bonaparte, ex-King of Westphalia, to be allowed to end his days in France, has been rejected by the Chamber of Peers, under the advice of the Cabinet.

In consequence of the late fall of prices in grain, a firm extensively engaged in the corn trade at Marseilles has just suspended payment. It would appear that the persons who purchased corn on time from the importers, refuse, now that prices are lower, to take the goods. This line of conduct it is which has caused the failure of the house in question. Upwards of a hundred cases are at present before the Tribunal of Commerce of Marseilles to force purchasers on time to receive their corn.

A fall in the price of bread in Paris is announced of three centimes the kilogramme. Nothing can be more favourable than the accounts of the growing crops.

SPAIN

There is no political news of importance from Spain.

The Madrid papers are filled with gossipping and scandalous articles upon the subject of the disputes between the young Queen and her husband.

The journals confirm the intelligence received from Cuba, that a division of the Spanish army had entered Valencia de Mino, after a sharp skirmish with the Portuguese, the latter returning to Cuura, leaving, according to the Faro, thirty-one prisoners in the hands of the Spaniards. The loss on the side of the Spaniards is described as trifling. The Espanol announces the concentration of Spanish troops upon Zamora, and their march in the direction of Verin, Galicia, but adds that the surrender of Das Antas will put a speedy end to the suspension of operations

All Catalonia seems to be in a very agitated state. The Heraldo says that Don Conde de Montemolin has given directions that all means shall be employed by his partizans to cause disturbances in that province. The Heraldo says that the exasperation is at its height. The Montemolinists have commenced a system of paying extraordinary activity, and that they believe that a general rising is on the very eve of taking place.

The Phare des Pyrenees publishes a letter dated the 8th from the frontiers of Catalonia, stating that the Montemolinists have taken possession of the powder magazine of Manresa, and that they employed all the horses of the town to convey the powder to a place of safety. The letter adds, that whilst this was going on, another band made an expedition against Igualada. It represents the capture of the powder magazine as a matter of great importance.

The quarrel in contract has been taken by Messrs. J. O'Shea and Jorda, on account of the Fomento Bank, at the rate of 85 dollars 11 reals per quintal. This is a great rise on the price paid by the house of Rothschild.

BELGIUM.

The news from Belgium this week is unusually interesting. Reports prevailed of the serious illness of the King of the Belgians. Some of the Paris letters allude to this fact; but, on the other hand, no mention of it is made in the Brussels papers. On the contrary, the King, Queen, and Royal Family are described as pursuing their daily avocations, as if nothing were the matter; and the Independance Belge of Monday says that the Queen was, on the following Sunday, to attend the public inauguration of the galleries of St. Hubert; and the Emancipation says that the King is about to pay a visit to London.

The Belgian Ministers are said to have all resigned on Monday last, but the cause of their resignation is not yet known. It was said at Brussels that M. Rogier had been requested to form an Administration

In consequence of the excessive rise in the price of bread, serious disturbances have taken place at Antwerp, which, for a time, threatened to be of the most fatal kind. The Burgomaster, attended by the city authorities, endeavoured to calm the mob with the assurance that measures would be adopted to prevent the rise of bread; yet so enraged were the mob, that the gendarmes were called out, and it was not till several persons were arrested that they could be dispersed

THE UNITED STATES AND MEXICO.

The Britannia arrived on Monday, with New York papers to the 31st ult. They contain very little of importance. Hostilities have not taken important skirmishes had taken place, but the accounts of them are very indefinite. General Scott, however, is pursuing his advance towards Mexico with vigour Although letters of troops—and, in fact, all communications having left him, their time of service having expired—he had pushed on a column to Puebla, where no resistance was expected. General Worth had taken possession of Puebla, without opposition, and was preparing for an attack upon the capital. Reinforcements of a large number of troops having left him, was unable to move from his position.

In the capital of Mexico everything was in confusion. Little or no preparation for defence was made. Santa Anna had declared the city under martial law; but his term of service would expire on the 16th inst., when a permanent President would be established. The better class of people were deserting the city in consequence. Gen. Bustinitz had made preparation for removing to Morelia. The guerilla system had been established. Canalizo, in a proclamation, commanded his followers to spare neither age nor condition. Every American found within the territory of Mexico, whether armed or unarmed, was to be put to the sword

Hvvas also stated that General Alvarez was marching from the north of Mexico with more than 25,000 troops, who will be scattered in guerilla parties between Jalapa and Puebla and toward Vera Cruz, and a general disposition exists among the inhabitants of many villages to arm and accompany him as guerillas.

The commercial advices are satisfactory. There is a large supply of breadstuffs ready for shipment. The receipts at New York were from 30,000 to 33,000 barrels, and the stocks in the interior were reported to be much larg r than had been previously estimated

From Texas we have advices to April 10 Decrees had been issued blockading the whole coast, disarming all engaged in the outbreak of January 11, requiring all office-holders concerned in it to submit to the Government within twenty days, punishing the militia engaged in the affair of February 21, and levying taxes on all towns which do not submit to the present authorities.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

THE LATE FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY.

The adjourned inquiry into the recent melancholy accident at Wolverton, was resumed and completed on Tuesday, at the Infant School-room of that station.

The first witness examined was Mr. J. S. Gent, surgeon, who was a passenger by the train on the occasion the accident occurred. He deposed that he heard the whistle of the engine sounded some time before the train arrived at the "points" under the charge of Fossey, and that he also heard the break of the carriage in which he was sitting applied immediately after.

Mr. Robert Freeman and Mr. Rogers, surgeons, were then examined, with respect to the cause of the death of the seven deceased persons. It was their opinion (in which Mr. Gent fully concurred) that the parties died from suffocation. Only two of the bodies viz., those of Smith and Clifton, had received extensive fractures.

From the explanations given, it appeared that the occurrence originated solely in the mistake of the switchman, and not from the absence of the proper light at the head of the engine; a fact proved by the signal that Fossey himself gave to the station, that a passenger train, viz., a train with an engine bearing a white light at the buffer beam, was approaching, and which it will be seen is supported by the verdict of the Jury

The Coroner summed up at considerable length, and the Jury, after about two hours' deliberation, delivered the following verdict:—

Manslaughter against Barnard Fossey. The Jury feel it their duty to express that the company ought to be more particular in the selection of officers for a post of such importance to the safety of the public as the one lately occupied by Barnard Fossey; that Barnard Fossey having turned a train into the same siding, on Monday, May 31st, contrary to rule, ought to have been discharged immediately; and likewise that every train should have a number of breaks proportioned to its size and weight, it appearing quite evident to the Jury that had that precaution been taken, the train could have been stopped, and the recent awful and deplorably catastrophe have been avoided."

THE SUICIDE ON THE SOUTH WESTERN RAILWAY.—We last week gave an account of a curious attempt committed by a young woman on the South Western Railway, near Wandsworth. Her name was Francis A. Arney; she was nineteen years old. It appears that her parents reside at Barton, near Gosport. She left home to go to service at Richmond, about three weeks since. On Saturday week she was suspected of having robbed her mistress, and her boxes were searched but nothing was found. The suspicion preyed upon her mind, and on the next day she left the house, with the pretence of going to church, but did not return. Her mistress received a letter from her the following day, in which she said that she had been disgraced by having her boxes searched, that she should never return either to her place or family, but that she should take her own life. An inquest was held, when the above facts came out in evidence. The Jury returned a verdict "That the deceased died from injuries by a locomotive engine striking her, she being on the line of the London and South Western Railway, being at the time in a state of temporary mental derangement."

COLLISION ON THE LONDON, BRIGHTON, AND SOUTH EAST RAILWAY. The [illegible] Hastings on Monday morning, at half-past seven A.M., when between Lewes and Falmer, was retarded by the slippery state of the rails on the incline. An assistant engine was sent after it, which, running up to the train too quickly, caused a concussion. Several passengers received bruises, and some were cut on the face.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

The House sat but a very short time, and the business transacted was unimportant.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—MONDAY.

The House met at twelve o'clock, when a great number of railway and other bills were read a third time, and passed. At two o'clock the House adjourned till five.

THE AFFAIRS OF PORTUGAL.

When the House re-assembled, at five o'clock, the adjourned debate upon Mr. Hume's motion respecting Portugal was resumed by Mr. P. BORTHWICK. It was as follows: "That, in the judgment of this House, the armed interference of this Government between political parties in Portugal is unwarrantable in principle, and likely to lead to serious and mischievous consequences." Mr. Borthwick spoke in favour, condemning the proceedings of the Court of Lisbon, which, he said, had driven the people into insurrection, and still more strongly censured the conduct of the Government of this country in siding with the oppressors, and crushing the oppressed, as soon as they appeared to have any chance of regaining those liberties of which they had been tyrannically deprived. Upon the plain, common-sense point of the question, he called upon Lord Palmerston as the statesman who upon what principle he departed from the usual policy of the country in supporting the Queen of Portugal any more than he would have supported any other tyrant in the oppression of the people? Were we to do wrong, and to violate every principle of justice, merely because if we did not others would. He hoped the House would never sanction such a principle, and that they would agree to the motion of the hon. member for Montrose.

Mr. CHRISTIE considered that the Government had given an ample defence for the armed intervention. It might be that their interposition would not have the effect desired; but the noble Lord the Foreign Secretary had acted for the best, and the responsibility of failure would belong to others.

Lord J. MANNERS said that the principle of non-interference as a general rule had been agreed to on all sides of the House; but it was contended by the Government that the present case was an exception to the general rule. He listened with the greatest attention to the speech of the noble Lord at the head of the Government with great attention; but he must say the noble Lord had wholly failed in convincing him of the necessity of interference, and the hon. gentleman who had just sat down had answered him better. He believed that the present interference would do nothing but give a new lease of wrong-doing and of tyranny to the Court of Portugal

Mr. T. DUNCOMBE expressed his regret that he had not in an earlier period of the Session heard sentiments from the Protectionists on the other side of the House as liberal and sympathising towards the people of Cracow as they now heard with regard to those of Portugal. The intervention, however, had taken place, and they had now only to do the best that remained in their power—that of seeing that the people of Portugal should have all the benefits which had been held out to them by the treaty of the Quadruple Alliance. He did not think the result of the intervention would be dangerous or mischievous to the liberties of Portugal; but, in order to ensure that it would not become so, he should move, as an amendment to the motion of Mr. Hume, "That Great Britain having become a party to a foreign armed interference in the affairs of Portugal, with the view of terminating the civil war so unhappily existing in that kingdom, it is the opinion of this House that, on principles of humanity and justice, it will become the duty of the British Government to endeavour, by every just means in their power, to secure to the people of Portugal the full enjoyment of their constitutional rights and privileges."

Mr. MACAULAY expressed his satisfaction at the proposed amendment. He entered into a luminous and comprehensive historical sketch of Portugal, and England, from the course of events, was compelled to interfere, and precisely in the way she had done. In his opinion it was utterly impossible that, related and connected with Portugal as we were, we could have observed the ordinary rule of non-interference from the moment that France and Spain stirred in the matter. If we had not interfered, and allowed them to do so, we should have sunk England to the bottom in the scale of nations. If we had not interfered, he declared that we should go so far as they interfered, we should have incurred a terrific responsibility, and not impossibly provoke a general war. Nothing remained for the Government to do but that it should justly, kindly, humanely, and safe for the interests of Portugal. He defied any person who had read the articles of the protocol to deny that such had been the course of our proceeding. There were three objects, almost incompatible, which we were bound, if possible, to secure. Without putting any one of them in hazard the dignity of England, the liberty of Portugal, the peace of Europe. (Cheers.) It seemed to the Government that there was one way, and one only, of attaining those objects. If the noble Lord the Member for Lincoln thought there could be little dispute about the manner in which it had been carried into execution. To interfere was a duty which the Government was compelled to resort, according to the opinions so emphatically expressed in the amendment.

Lord G. BENTINCK said he was sorry that the House would fully agree with Mr. Macaulay, that he was exceedingly glad that the hon. member for Finsbury had used the very words of the Government with his amendment. The hon. member, although he had ever the words of liberty on his lips, most certainly had the lump of despotism in his heart when he abetted the Minister in his armed interference. He was glad to hear from Don Pedro (then in Brazils) to Lisbon, he despatched a packet, in order that a day might not be lost in recalling him home, seeking, in the most positive terms, a message, not from the Government of himself, but from the King of England, not to protract his stay in Lisbon for one day longer. So deeply did Mr. Canning feel the honour of his country had been compromised by the conduct of Sir C. Stuart, that it is in my knowledge, though he had been promised a Peerage in case he succeeded in his mediation between Portugal and the Brazils, Mr. Canning perceived the false position in which he had been placed by allowing himself to be the bearer of the new Charter or Constitution, and considered he had forfeited this title he had otherwise so justly earned; so that it was only, as I know, after a reference to Lord Bathurst, that the Peerage was granted to Lord Stuart de Rothesay. I feel the conduct of her Majesty's present Government contrasts sadly and solemnly with that of Mr. Canning in 1826. He had right on his side, and, feeling he was bound to the people of Portugal by those ancient treaties and alliances, he dared not the frown of the Crown of France, and still less that of Spain. (Hear, hear.) Is this a time, when the subjects of Great Britain are raising their complaints to this House against this bankrupt state, which owes them £70,000,000, that we are to be told we can be bullied and brow-beat by this kingdom of Spain? (Hear, hear.) If the noble Lord opposite, confident in his own sense of right in the justice of England, and, more than all, in the justice of the cause of the people of Portugal, had held the language of Canning, he might have done as Canning did—he might have thrilled the heart of every member of the House with his proud declaration to humbled and obedient Spain and slavish France:—"I call the new world into existence to redress the balance of the old." We go to defend the Crown. We go there to plant the standard of England on the well-fought fields of Portugal, and where that standard is planted, a foreign dominion shall not come." (Hear, hear.)

The debate was then again adjourned.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

INTERFERENCE WITH PORTUGAL.

Lord STANLEY brought the affairs of Portugal before the House, and moved a Resolution: "That the papers presented to both Houses of Parliament, by her Majesty's command, afford, in the opinion of this House, no justification for the recent interference of this country, by force of arms, in the internal affairs of Portugal." Lord Stanley declared he was favourably opposing the Government, and took credit for forbearance in regard to the policy pursued towards Ireland, on the ground that the subject was beset with difficulties. He could not, however, continue the same forbearance to the foreign policy of the Government, when, as he believed, it was entering on a course which was inconsistent with the principles of justice, and in violation of the well-established law of nations which we could not adopt or support by any obligation of treaties, but, rather, which was contrary to the provisions and positive stipulations of treaties of old standing and frequent renewal—when he found the interference in the internal affairs of Portugal undertaken in a manner not only at variance with the rights of an independent nation, but also, in no spirit, he must say, of impartiality between the contending parties, and when he believed that the result of this course on our part was to place this country in a position of serious and long-continued embarrassment, then it was their duty no longer to be silent, then it became their Lordships to vindicate themselves in the eyes of their country and of themselves, for the part they had taken, present time and for posterity, against the supposition that they had partaken in the principles or approved of the course pursued on this occasion by her Majesty's Government. (Hear, hear.) Lord Stanley detailed the circumstances which had preceded and followed the recent changes of Ministry in Portugal, and insisted that the intervention of England had not secured any advantages for Portugal. On the contrary, instead of really securing the legitimate station, the policy of England had endangered the throne of that country, and humiliated the Sovereign by a long course of measures adverse to constitutional government. He deeply feared that England would be no longer regarded as the protector and the ally of the Portuguese people, but as a power ready at any time to violate the rights of that people, and always prepared to put down their privileges on the demand of the Crown of Portugal. In future, England would be considered as a partisan of the Crown of Portugal, not as a protector of the people of Portugal.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE defended the Government upon the same grounds as those taken by Lord John Russell in the debate in the House of Commons. The Government had a choice of difficulties—to permit the triumph of despotism under Donna Maria; of republicanism under the Junta; of absolutism under Don Miguel; or of interfering, to effect some arrangement by which the constitution might be restored and the monarchy preserved. The latter alternative had been adopted, which he contended was consistent with sound policy, and calculated to lead to the establishment of a sound constitutional Government in Portugal.

The Duke of WELLINGTON opposed Lord Stanley's resolution, and gave his support to the Government. He argued that this country ought to refrain from interference with the internal affairs of other Governments, but it was impossible a British Ambassador at a British Minister could exist in any country in Europe in which he could not exert a most important and predominant influence in maintaining peace in that country; and, moreover, he considered it was in the power of no country to exercise a more salutary influence over society in the country in which he resided. Declaring, as he did, his conviction that there should be strict abstinence observed in the exercise of any right of interference with the internal government of any country which was even in a state of illness, he still maintained that it was the duty of the Ministers of Great Britain, wherever residing, to watch the proceedings that were taking place in every country with which the sovereign of England had intercourse, in order to endeavour, by all the means in their power, to maintain its tranquility and the authority of its Government. The noble Duke defended the sort of mediation which the Government had adopted, for, in his opinion, the mediation of several Powers, acting in concert, was infinitely less likely to compromise the independence of a small state than the exclusive ascendancy or protection of any one Power. He opposed the proposition of Lord Stanley, because, if agreed to, the effect of it would be to prevent her Majesty's Government from having the opportunity to bring to a successful issue the mediation which they had undertaken, and which they had hitherto conducted in so satisfactory a manner.

The Earl of WINCHILSEA supported the motion, which was opposed by the Earl of St. Germans.

Lord ASHBURTON said he could not approve of the intervention; but, nevertheless, he could not give his assent to the sweeping condemnation conveyed in the motion of Lord Stanley.

Lord GRANVILLE supported the Government, on the ground that they had taken the only line which, under the circumstances, could be adopted, and they had secured for the party opposed to the Portuguese Court all the objects for which that party had contended, under the guarantee of the three intervening Powers.

Upon a division, the numbers were—

For Lord Stanley's Resolution	47
Against it	64
Majority for Ministers	17

The House adjourned at half-past ten o'clock

HOUSE OF COMMONS. TUESDAY.

THE ADJOURNED DEBATE UPON PORTUGAL.

The adjourned debate upon Mr. Hume's motion was resumed by Sir DE LACY EVANS, who contended that, in the midst of difficulties, the Government of Great Britain had adopted the course likely to be attended with least evil, and with the most beneficial consequences.

The next speaker was Sir R. PEEL, who said he rose at an early hour, to mark his reprobation of the practice that had grown up of confining the more important part of the debate to two or three hours at the close of the evening, which was prejudicial to the public service, because it led to an unnecessary consumption of the public time. Sir Robert Peel, like the Duke of Wellington, supported the policy adopted by the Government. After perusing the papers which had been presented relative to the recent transactions in Portugal, he said he thought the Government had done right in interfering as they had done. He believed, too, that France and Spain would have interfered in an objectionable manner if we had stood aloof. "Upon these considerations (said Sir R. Peel), seeing the probability that this strife would have long continued, if not suppressed by your means—remembering that it was for the interests of humanity that you should interfere—looking to the great likelihood that, if you had not interposed, France and Spain would not only have desired, but have been compelled to interfere—knowing the further probability that, in either issue, whether the result were a triumph to the Queen or to the insurgents, moderation and justice would not have been maintained: in the midst of these conflicting considerations, all of which had to be weighed by the Government, should I say I will not consent to visit with condemnation those who, under such circumstances, deemed it expedient to decide upon offering British intervention?" (Cheers.) Sir Robert Peel was of the same opinion as the Duke of Wellington in regard to the policy of concerting with other Governments:—"I say it is infinitely better we should continue to act in concurrence with the other Governments, bringing to bear upon the question the moral influence of the three great powers who established the Treaty of Donna Maria and of the Queen of Spain. In deference to motives of public policy it is infinitely better we should not attempt to control the Executive Government, under considerable difficulties, by any resolution which would involve a course undignified and impracticable. It is infinitely better that we should leave the Government to decide unencumbered and unembarrassed by our advice upon the right line to pursue after a minute review of the whole of the events in Portugal, condemned the conduct pursued towards the Duke of Palmella, upon whom he passed a high eulogium, and concluded by saying, "I believe that the fact that calls forth the Spanish faction and the Portuguese faction I know they may be worthy of the name they have chosen to assume—if such men and such principles are to influence the future Government of Portugal, then there is no security for peace, no security there for continued attachment to the Crown. (Hear, hear.) And then, indeed, it will not be in the power of England longer to give that advice, and to lend that assistance, which I think she can freely give and freely lend, and which I hope will be effectual for the single purpose for which they have been given and lent—to maintain an ancient monarchy, and to obtain from that monarchy guarantees for constitutional freedom." (Great cheering.)

Dr BOWRING then rose, but, while he was speaking, a motion was made that the House should be counted, and there not being forty members present, an adjournment took place at a quarter before eight o'clock.

Thus, Mr Hume's motion has been indirectly disposed of for the present, as the subject cannot be discussed again unless another day be appointed for the purpose

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

THE COUNT OUT.

The House met to-day at twelve o'clock, when rather an amusing conversation took place in reference to the House having been "counted out" on Mr. Hume's motion respecting Portugal.

Mr. P. BORTHWICK commenced it by asking what course was to be pursued in regard to the amendment of Mr. T. Duncombe on the subject of the affairs of Portugal.

Lord JOHN RUSSELL begged to assure the House that so far as the motion of the hon member for Finsbury was concerned the British Government would take care to use its influence to protect the just rights of the people of Portugal, whether the motion of the hon. member was passed or not. He was happy to say that within the last ten minutes he had seen letters which assured him that the Portuguese Government, notwithstanding the surrender of The Attias, would extend the conditions offered through the British Government, and would still grant a full amnesty to all persons who were engaged in the insurrection; and also the rights of the Portuguese would be preserved and observed. Under these circumstances, he thought the motion was unnecessary.

Mr. DUNCOMBE said that the object of his motion had been attained, but he could not understand the course which had been pursued by the country party in counting out the House, and that too after the virtuous indignation which they had expressed as to the injustice which had been done in Portugal.

Mr. HUME asked, on whose motion the last India Bond was counted out?

Mr. GRAHAM said he was not in the House at the time it was counted out, for, notwithstanding his respect for the hon. member for Bolton, he preferred his dinner to the hon. member's speech.

The adjourned debate on the Tenants' Right (Ireland) Bill was resumed by Mr. S CRAWFORD, and led to some discussion and a division, by which it was negatived by a majority of 112 to 25.

The Poor Law Removal Amendment Bill was, on the motion of Mr. G BANKES, ordered to be read a second time next Wednesday.

Six o'clock having arrived, the SPEAKER adjourned the House without putting the question.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

THE BIRMINGHAM AND OXFORD JUNCTION RAILWAY. Lord LYNDHURST moved the consideration of the Report on the Select Committee on the petition respecting the Birmingham and Oxford Junction Railway. He made a long and learned Lord, after going through a detail of the proceedings, contended that the purchases made by the different parties connected with the North Western Railway were not bonâ fide purchases, and that they were not made for ordinary purposes; and moved that the Committee be instructed to proceed with the inquiry.—Lord RADNOR suggested the addition of the words "and consider whether the standing orders ought to be dispensed with."—The Duke of RICHMOND suggested that the consideration of the bill be postponed for a month, in order to enable the promoters of the bill to comply with the standing orders.

A conversation ensued across the table between Lord LYNDHURST, Earl GREY, Lord Brougham, Lord Redesdale, and the Duke of Richmond, at the conclusion of which, the Earl of DEVON moved, in return, that the Committee do proceed in the usual way.—Lord KINNAIRD said, on a former occasion he voted against going into committee, because he did not think it wise for the Legislature to enter on the matter while it was before a court of law; but their Lordships having decided to appoint a committee, he would not support the motion for going further into the inquiry.—Earl FITZWILLIAM supported the motion for a further inquiry. After considerable discussion, a division took place on Lord Redesdale's motion, which was rejected by a majority of 6, the numbers being, contents 22, non-contents 28.

The Manchester Bishopric Bill was then postponed, and the House rose at eight o'clock

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

A great many Railway Bills were read a third time and passed.

AFFAIRS OF PORTUGAL.

Mr. B. OSBORNE gave notice, that on Monday next he should move a resolution "to the effect, that as Government had interfered in the affairs of Portugal, it was just and proper for the intervening parties to guarantee the full constitutional rights and liberties of the people of Portugal, and, if necessary, to enforce the same.

In answer to a question from Mr. HUME,

Lord PALMERSTON said that the blockade at Oporto had been taken off.

In answer to a question by Mr. B. OSBORNE,

Lord PALMERSTON said the Junta in Portugal did not appear, at present, disposed to accept the terms offered to them. Whatever negociations might take place on the subject the British Government would observe good faith.

On the order of the day being read,

Lord G. BENTINCK rose and called the attention of the House to the infraction of the 1st, 15th, 17th, and 18th articles of the Treaty of Lisbon, of July, 1842, and asked her Majesty's Ministers whether any and what steps had been taken to obtain from the Government of the Queen of Portugal redress for the past, and security against future injuries of a like kind done to British interests.

Lord PALMERSTON said that he understood the noble Lord to ask him a question relating to the decree which had been passed, for the purpose of giving currency of the Bank of Portugal at a forced or a nominal value, and, secondly, with regard to certain suspended guarantees with regard to the British subjects in Portugal. The noble Lord said he would admit that this was not the first instance in the history of nations of Governments being obliged to give by law a forced value to a paper currency which was suffering from considerable depreciation, and that paper had been received at a value somewhat different to that which, according to the Free-Trade notions of the noble Lord, it would fetch in the market. But the notes were received by the Government of Portugal in payment of taxes at the same rate they were compelled to be received by private individuals. The other subject, the abolition of the Court in which the causes of British subjects were tried, had, since the suspension of the Constitution, been made a question of legislation, and the Court was now re-established.

In answer to a question from Mr. EWART, Lord PALMERSTON stated that the English naval officers in the Tagus could not receive any decoration from the Portuguese Government.

The remainder of the evening was occupied by a discussion in Committee of the Poor-Law Administration Bill. All the clauses were agreed to, the report received, and the House adjourned.

RAILWAY COMMITTEE.—On Tuesday, the following bills were sanctioned by the House of Lords:—Caledonian (Glasgow, Garnkirk, and Coatbridge branches to Glasgow, and stations), Herne Bay and Canterbury Junction; Swansea Valley.—In the Commons, in Group 94, the preamble of the Chester and Holyhead (Holyhead Extension) was declared to be proved. The Committees have been sitting during the week, but the proceedings have been unimportant.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

JENNY LIND AND MR. BUNN.

An argument took place at Chambers, on Monday, before Mr. Justice Coleridge, in the case of BUNN v. LIND. It is an action brought by Mr. BUNN, of Drury Lane Theatre, against Mdlle. Jenny Lind, to recover compensation in damages for an alleged breach of contract. A summons was obtained at the instance of the defendant, calling on the plaintiff to show cause why a commission should not issue to examine witnesses at Berlin, and why, in the meantime, all proceedings should not be stayed. Mr. Lewis, of the firm of Lewis and Lewis, attended on Monday to show cause, and Mr. Jennings appeared in support of the application.

Mr. Lewis informed his Lordship of the nature of the action, and said he had to apply for an adjournment of the summons for a period of three months.

Mr. Justice Coleridge inquired the reason for an adjournment, remarking that the parties whom it was wished to examine by a commission might die in the meantime.

Mr. Lewis said the action had been set down for the adjourned sitting, after the term just ended, but there was no probability of its being tried until the sittings after the term, and, therefore, there was no immediate necessity for a commission. The plaintiff, as his Lordship was aware, would have to join in the expense of the commission, or he could apply for a separate commission; but it was desirable, to prevent any cause coming on, that he fixed for some months, to apply for an adjournment of the application for three months; and for this additional reason, that the celebrated composer Meyerbeer, whom it was proposed to examine by the commission, was confidently expected to arrive in London in time to be examined on the trial of the action

Mr. Jennings, in reply, complained of the delay occasioned by the parties on the other side. In January, he had offered to examine the witnesses, but the action was delayed for some months, and now it was sought to occasion a further delay.

Mr Lewis (interposing) observed that the defendant was not within the jurisdiction of the Court in January.

Mr. Jennings proceeded to remark that the declaration was only delivered on the 6th of June instant; the pleas were delivered on the 9th, and issue was joined on the 11th; and the cause for trial was on the same day fixed for the sittings in London about to commence. He (Mr. Jennings) had therefore applied for the commission as soon as he possibly could, and he had an affidavit showing its necessity. It was material for the defendant's case that the Earl of Westmoreland, her Majesty's Envoy to the King of Prussia, and the composer Meyerbeer, should be examined, and, as his Lordship had observed, if the present application was delayed for three months, the defendant might be deprived of their evidence.

After some further argument on both sides, Mr Justice Coleridge said he thought that no sufficient ground had been shown for an adjournment of three months; and, on an application for time to answer the affidavit, said he would adjourn the summons for a few days: and an adjournment was accordingly ordered

The matter was again argued on Thursday, when Mr. Justice Coleridge made an order for the Commission to issue, which order is returnable on the first day of Michaelmas Term.

EXTENSIVE FRAUDS UPON THE CUSTOMS.

On Tuesday, the Court of EXCHEQUER was engaged all day with the trial of a case, the Attorney-General v. Fennell.

It will, probably, be recollected that, at the sittings after Easter term, a Custom-house officer named Howse, and a sugar broker in the City named Avery, were convicted of having defrauded the revenue to a large extent, by the adoption of certain precautions which the Custom-house authorities had previously thought infallible. Howse had been employed as a locker in a bonding warehouse in Tooley-street, and Avery as a sugar broker.

The precautions used before goods could be taken out of bond were deemed infallible till last autumn, when it was discovered that Howse had, in the course of the year, released, on twelve different occasions, goods in contravention of certain precautions which the Custom-house authorities had previously thought infallible. Howse had been employed as a locker in a bonding warehouse in Tooley-street, upon the East India Dock

THE CIVIL WAR IN PORTUGAL.

CAPTURE OF THE FLEET OF THE JUNTA, OFF OPORTO.

ing that as he could not now hope for reinforcements from the Douro, he also should surrender with his troops, and, swalling himself of the British steamers, join his comrades, and accept, with Das Antas, an asylum in the cabin of the Hibernia. Sa would not consent to this; but he sent back one of his staff with despatches for the Junta, requesting that he might be despatched to Oporto in one of our steamers, and agreed to suspend hostilities till he received further instructions. On the sixth instant, Sa's aide-de-camp was landed at Oporto; and the same day the five members of the Junta, deprived of their President, determined to accept the four articles tendered to them by Colonel Wylde on behalf of the allied Powers on the 7th ultimo.

We subjoin another account, received from a Correspondent (F. H. L.) at Oporto:—

"The Armistice till the 10th June, demanded by the English Government, having been refused by the Junta, on the 27th May, H.M.S. Gladiator, and the Spanish man-of-war, Soberano, in the river, made preparations for leaving without delay. As the Gladiator could not go out but at spring tide, she was obliged to wait till Sunday, the 30th, at two o'clock. The Junta employed the intervening time in marching 3000 of their troops down to Foz, and embarking them on board the transports and war-steamers that were off the bar waiting for them. It appears, they were intended to proceed to the capital, where an insurrection was expected to break out in favour of the Junta, on their appearance. The troops continued to embark during the whole of Sunday night, after the Gladiator had gone out; but her Majesty's ships were prevented from taking any offensive steps, as their ally, the Spanish vessel, had not yet left the river, for want of wind. She, however, went out on Sunday night. A declaration of war was presented to the Junta; Count das Antas received an official despatch, whose contents were not published at the moment he was embarking at the head of his troops on Sunday evening; and, as was well known, the Junta had been threatened with the loss of their fleet if they persisted in the embarkation of their troops. There is, therefore, reason to suspect they were fully aware of what would follow, and their conduct was probably dictated by motives of policy; or, fear of the consequences to their own safety from the rage of the people, if they surrendered at once to the demands of England; and the wish to get the troops out of the city. Be that as it may, the mass of the people had not the least idea of what awaited them; and their surprise, consternation, and rage may be more easily imagined than described. During the morning, the British and Spanish vessels surrounded the Portuguese ones; and, about two or three in the afternoon, called on them one by one to surrender, and brought them up alongside the America. The Portuguese attempted no resistance, and the whole fleet was captured without any fighting. On the ensuing night, the English steamers, taking their prizes in tow, set off to Cascaes Bay, at the entrance to Lisbon. The Royal Tar gave them some trouble; for the Portuguese tried to sink her after she surrendered; but they arrived safely at their destination, and lodged their prisoners at Fort St. Julian, where they remain under the protection of the British flag, guarded by English marines."

We select a few notes from the Times account:—

"Rumours of British armed intervention had been current for several days, as some part of the orders received by the Bulldog steamer had transpired, and the alarm became so great on the Saturday and the Sunday morning that a perfect panic seized the English, and no less than 230 of our fellow-countrymen, including servants and children, embarked in the homeward-bound packet, the Gladiator, and other vessels. I believe 84 of the lot fell to Captain Robb's share, not to speak of 33 children, some being babes of ten days old, so that the comforts of her Majesty's steamer were distributed on a scale never contemplated by her surveyor or the Admiralty.

"On Monday morning the whole of our squadron and the ships of the Junta were seen peaceably, and, to all appearance, sociably, at anchor off the bar—'the wolf lying down with the lamb'—but a notice placed on the bar-book soon altered the case; and, we saw, as it explained, that the Portuguese fleet was, in fact, environed by the British squadron. The whole truth then became known, and it was found that, at four A.M., on Monday, Sir Thomas Maitland had captured the whole of the Junta's ships, and had disarmed the expedition.

"The order for the disarming of the troops, issued by Sir Thos. Maitland, was obeyed without resistance. It is stated that one of our boats fired unnecessarily into one of the smaller Junta vessels, and that two men were killed; but that affair is under inquiry. One officer is said to have stabbed himself to the heart sooner than give up his sword, and two sailors to have thrown themselves overboard, one of whom had the good luck to swim to shore.

"The full extent of the news was not known till the afternoon of Monday. It, of course, produced a violent irritation in the town, and caused the remaining English subjects to reflect very seriously on their situation. The Junta, however, behaved admirably: not one of them quitted his post, and by their orders strong patrols of cavalry and infantry were put into movement, with strict orders to protect strangers and to repress every symptom of disorder.

"I am glad to say that not a single Englishman has had reason to complain of the slightest insult or injury. The people were much irritated on seeing their fleet carried to the southward, each of our steamers having a Portuguese vessel in tow; but the peace of the city was so well preserved that we walked about in full security, and even those who committed the imprudence of being out at late hours of the night reached their homes in safety."

We have Lisbon letters to the 9th inst. Matters were in a state of suspense until the further instructions of the British Government were known. Meanwhile the Portuguese prisoners, to the number of near 4000 were huddled together in the small fortress of St. Julian.

Sa da Bandeira still holds out at St. Ubes, but it is thought that he intends to surrender to the English naval forces as soon as they appear before him in a hostile attitude.

Sir H. Seymour, it is said, has endeavoured to induce the Queen to appoint M. Lavradio to form a new Cabinet, but her Majesty refuses to comply, and exhibits dislike to the popular party.

A telegraphic despatch had been received at Lisbon from Oporto, announcing that on the 8th the members of the Junta had communicated in the British Consul their willingness to accept the proffered convention, and make their submission accordingly, but that not having received any definitive answer from him, they had resolved to send the Marquis de Loule for that purpose. Count Tulpa has been sent to Lisbon, from St. Ubes, empowered to treat with the ...h Minister and Admiral on behalf of Sa da Bandeira and his army.

The whole of the steamers and other ships taken by the British squadron have been handed over to the Portuguese Government, and the delivery of the arms, it is supposed, will follow next.

The mode in which the Queen's authority should be resumed appears to have created great difficulties. The English Consul had caused the blockade to be raised as far as the British, Spanish, and French flag was concerned; but it was not yet understood that the Portuguese squadron had concurred, and therefore the mercantile blockade is still in force.

Saldanha did not seem disposed to afford time to the Junta, and that body alarmed by his menaces, was increasing the defences of the Sierra Convent and of Villa Nova. The Spanish Consul was also in doubt whether he should not advise an immediate advance of the Spanish troops, as the people were in many places ill-treating the Gallegos.

Oporto was tranquil, and no insult or injury had been offered to any British subject.

FORT ST. JULIAN.

GATE OF FORT ST. JULIAN.

THE ILLUSTRATIONS.

In the larger Engraving, representing the taking of the Junta force, the foremost steamer is the Gladiator, Captain Robb; the two next, the Oporto and the Royal Tar (Junta), the latter with 1000 troops on board. The two schooners to the right are, also, of the Junta force; as are the barque in the distance, right, the Menalllo steamer, left, with Das Antas on board; and the corvette and brig, to the extreme left, the latter with troops and ammunition. In the centre is the American, Captain Sir Thomas Maitland (British); to the left, the Spanish brig, Soberano (not engaged); next, the Bulldog and Sidon, British steamers; and to the extreme right, the Nautilus.

The two Views of the Fort of Julian are from Sketches by another Correspondent.

THE REV. DR. HOOK.

We present our readers with a portrait of this eloquent dignitary of the Church; the illustration deriving additional interest from the Reverend Doctor being now in London, and announced to preach Two Sermons in the Church of St. Sepulchre, Snow-hill, on Sunday (to-morrow) morning and evening, in aid of the Parochial Girls' School.

The Rev. Walter Farquhar Hook, D.D., Vicar of Leeds, Prebendary of Lincoln, and Chaplain in Ordinary to the Queen, is son of the Very Rev. James Hook, D.D., Dean of Worcester, by Anne, his wife, daughter of Sir Walter Farquhar, Bart., and was born in 1797. The Vicar of Leeds married, June 4, 1829, Anna-Delicia, elder daughter and co-heir of John Johnstone, Esq., M.D., F.R.S., of Monument House, Edgbaston, Warwickshire; and of Galabank, N.B.; by whom he has issue.

Dr. Hook is an accomplished scholar, and able writer; and a long list of published works testifies his literary activity. The Reverend Doctor was ordained in 1821; and, after serving in two laborious curacies, was, in 1559, appointed to the Vicarage of Trinity Church, Coventry; and, in 1837, was elected to the Vicarage of Leeds. In June, 1838, he preached in the Chapel Royal in St. James's Palace, his celebrated Sermon, "Hear the Church," which the author printed from the occurrence of circumstances that seemed to require its publication. The leading topics of this eloquent discourse are "the claims, the character, and the privileges, of the Church," not as a mere National Establishment of Religion, but as the Church, a religious community, intrinsically independent of the State: the printed copy before us is of the 31st edition.

THE REV. WALTER FARQUHAR HOOK, D.D., VICAR OF LEEDS.

Dr. Hook has also publish.ed a "Church Dictionary," and "Ecclesiastical Biography," both valuable works of reference; "The Last Days of Our Lord's Ministry;" "Sermons preached before the University of Oxford;" "Sermons on Various Subjects," &c., all characterised by piety and devotional fervour; and the majority of them by their appropriate appeals to mixed congregations. Dr. Hook is, also, engaged in editing several minor religious works, published at the lowest possible rate for extensive circulation; of one series, "The Devotional Library," several portions have appeared.

The Vicar of Leeds has appeared too, as an able advocate of National Education, in a Letter to the Lord Bishop of St. David's, "On the Means of Rendering More Efficient the Education of the People." This pamphlet is now in the tenth edition. The system which it proposes has given rise to much controversy: it suggests two classes of schools: 1. The schools of religious doctrine, precept, and training. 2. Literary or secular schools, which are to be taught by masters and apprentices holding diplomas from the Government, awarded after examination by a Board of Examiners, appointed by authority.

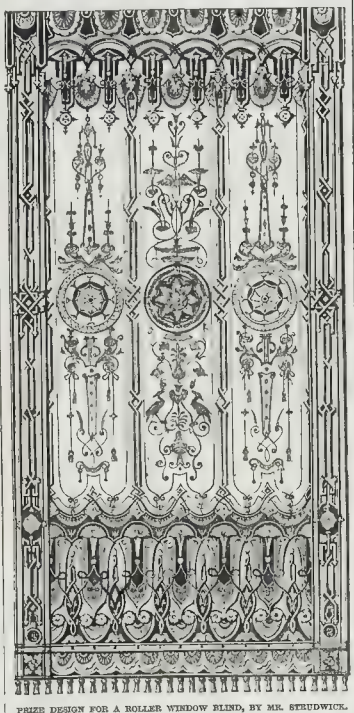
We have not space to enter further upon the details of Dr Hook's plan, which has excited more attention than any recent educational scheme. With respect to its cost, says the Reverend Vicar, "Great sacrifices, I am sure, all persons will be prepared to make, who are really aware of the social misery and danger which exist in some parts of the manufacturing districts, who reflect upon the masses of the people who might be happy, and are wretched, and on he immorality which, through ignorance, abounds in the land."

AVALANCHE IN GERMANY.—The Brussels papers state that the picturesque village of Lichtenberg, amid the ruins of the Palace of the Counts of Keunsh, surrounded by the most lovely gardens and fields, and which used to rivet the eye of the passing traveller, was transformed into a waste on the 16th or 19th inst., by the bursting of an immense avalanche of sand, stone, and water. The little stream which runs through the village was swelled to an immense volume, and, as it rushed along, destroyed several houses, dislodged huge masses of stone from the back of the valley and giant trees, covered the surrounding country with rubbish to the height of a man, and opened cavities and ravines of immense dimensions, and of the 45 dwellings, left only nine standing. Next day the Gulbuck, a mountain stream, about a mile below Lichtenberg, was also converte i into a broad rushing river, in its devastating course covering the fruitful and with a thick layer of rubbish, stones, dislodged masses of rocks, and water. The scene is heart-rending—the houses are buried up to the sills of the doors, the graves in the churchyard have sunk in, and the mightiest trees only lift up their crowns like sea of sand.

THE "GREAT BRITAIN" STEAMER.—Several large cases, capable of carrying thirty or forty tons of sand or other material, are made, and in progress of being made, on the strand opposite the Great Britain ship, and a number of balks are being fitted with large sheaves. The Great Britain has been raised several feet, without any external application, except the lifting forward, by four large spars and pontoons, and the lighting of the vessel herself. Numbers of carriages and other vehicles, conveying the curious, daily attend the Great Britain, and great activity seems to prevail under the superintendence of Captain Claxton, who is said to be confident as to her being floated when everything is ready and prudent time arrives.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.—DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES.

THIS very interesting Anniversary Meeting took place on Thursday the 10th inst., in the Great Room of the Society's House, in the Adelphi, when the attendance was very numerous and brilliant. His Royal Highness Prince Albert, as President of the Society, filled the chair. The Report was highly satisfactory, and specially acknowledged the efficiency of the judicious suggestions of the Royal President for "the development and application of the principles of taste along with those of science, for the promotion, in short, of the union of the beautiful with the useful in our arts and manufactures." The Society, we learn, has increased its roll of members 150 during the past year, and we congratulate the institution upon "a greatly extended sphere of practical usefulness, and a prosperity, public interest, and substantial revenue, greatly increased beyond all previous experience."



PRIZE DESIGN FOR A ROLLER WINDOW BLIND, BY MR. STRUDWICK.

His Royal Highness, the President, after gracefully expressing his satisfaction at this new position of the Society, presented the numerous Medals and other Prizes, conversing with the several successful inventors, and considerately listening to their details of the specimens. The list of Medals, &c., awarded, is as follows:

The Gold Medal to Messrs. Davidson and Symington, for their method of applying Currents of Heated Air to Seasoning Timber and to the various Manufactures—Messrs. H. Minton and Co., for the Models of a Jug and a Loving Cup—Mr. Thomas Dawkins, for his new process of Silvering Glass with pure Silver—and John Everett Millais, for his Original Composition in Oil. The Gold Isis Medal to Messrs Richardson and Co., for their specimen of Enamel on Glass—Thomas Brown Jordan, for his Machine for Carving Wood, Stone, melled Cobors on Glass—Mr. Henry Grainger, for the best specimen of &c., for ornamental and decorative purposes—Mr. Henry Grainger, for the best specimen of White China—The White Earthenware—Messrs. H. Minton and Co., for the best specimen of White China—The White Earthenware—Messrs H

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, June 20.—Third Sunday after Trinity.—Accession of Queen Victoria, 1837. The Moon enters her First Quarter at 7h. 32m. p.m.

MONDAY, 21.—Summer Solstice.—Queen Victoria proclaimed, 1837

TUESDAY, 22.—Summer commences.—The Length of the Day is 16h. 34m., and it has increased 8h. 49m. since the Shortest Day

WEDNESDAY, 23.—Midsummer Eve.—Nativity of St. John the Baptist.

THURSDAY, 24.—Midsummer Day. The Sun rises at 3h. 49m., is due E. at 7h. 32m ; and sets at 8h. 16m.

FRIDAY, 25.—Saturn rises at 36 minutes before midnight, and Mars at 8 minutes after midnight; both planets near the E. point of the horizon.

SATURDAY, 26.—George IV. died, 1830.—Venus sets at 10h. 43m. p.m.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE,
FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 26.

Sunday	Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday	Saturday
M. A. M. 6 50	M. A. M. 7 18	M. A. M. 7 45	M. A. M. 8 30	M. A. M. 9 35	M. A. M. 10 45	M. A. M. 11 57
h. m. 1 2	h. m. 2 5	h. m. 2 8	h. m. 3	h. m. 3 5	h. m. 3 6	h. m. 2 50

* * On Friday the 25th, there will be no high tide during the afternoon.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"O. P." Edinburgh.—The last Derby Stakes, at Epsom, were won by Cossack.

"J. W." Weedon.—The Derby was won by Running Rein in 1844.

"Brass Seal."—The specimen sent, judging by the architectural details, is of the fifteenth century; the legend, translated, "Seal of the Brotherhood of St. Lazarus of Jerusalem in England." The value of the Seal depends much upon extrinsic circumstances, not within our cognisance.

"Pro idence."—We cannot undertake to recommend Loan Societies.

"P. S."—Our latest edition contains Saturday's "Pastoryn."

"J. F. B." Manchester.—We cannot engrave the Statue. By the way, we are not influenced in such matters by the opinion of Contemporaries.

"J. L." Barnsley.—Apply to the Captain of the steamer

"J. K. S. W." We cannot advise.

"H. S. M.," Halifax.—Look at the Engraving again.

"A Constant Reader."—The new arrival at the British Museum will be engraved in our next

"Sweets Oreon." The couplet "Immodest words," &c., is to the Earl of Roscommon's "Essay on Translated Verse." (See Tonson's Edition of Works of Celebrated Authors, Vol. I., page 6, date 1750.)

"Rochester."—Apply to a Navy Agent

"A. B." London.—We believe that the Reverend Gentleman belongs to the family of Berkeley of Cotherdge, in the county of Worcester, which is a distinguished branch of the ancient and noble House of Berkeley, sprunging from the Hon. Thomas Berkeley, fourth son of James, fourth Lord Berkeley, by Isabel, his wife, daughter and co-her of Thomas Mowbray, first Duke of Norfolk.

"E. B. B."—We do not know the work.

"A Constant Subscriber." Peckham. We do not understand the question.

"T. T.," Uiverstone, is thanked; but we have not room.

"Bungor."—The date of the first printed Newspaper is 1622 (See page 294.)

"Beatrice." Kennington.—The terms are synonymous

"R. P." Uiverstone.—The subscription to Her Majesty's Theatre is sixty nights.

"Dan Tucker." Uncertain.

"Rustens," Oldham, is thanked. Gold and Silver Fish may be bought in Covent Garden Market.

"ΔΕΛΤΑ." We think from "L. E. L."

"A Subscriber from the Commencement." It is impossible to give the exact sound by spelling, but the name is decidable, with the accent on the first, dwelling on the diphthong. Germans themselves do not exactly agree in the mode of pronouncing it.

"Δ." We presume the quotation meant is—

"Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The valiant never taste of death but once."

It is from "Julius Cæsar," Act 2, Scene 2.

"H. P."—We have not room.

"A Constant Reader." —Apply to any druggist.

"G. M.," Bolton.—John son spells the word, Potato: Bailey derives it from Potadoes, Span ; Potato, Ital o Batata, Amer

"An Irish Subscriber" should apply to the nearest bookseller.

"H. C. C." Ashtead.—See the Volumes of the "Naturalist's Library," containing Moths and Butterflies. The person is an Englishman.

"F. C." Harleston. See "The Backwoodsman," (Lib. Ent. Knowl.); or Bonnycastle's last Work on Canada.

"W. S. G."—We cannot decipher the word in question.

"Amelia." Tasmania, the British colony, is a name of Van Diemen's Land; from the original discoverer, Tasman. The Bishop has been newly appointed to the colony.

"An Old Subscriber," Carnarvon. Thanks.

"Curioso." See Britton and Brayley's "Westminster Palace," for Engravings of the Old House of Lords. There is no Directory of Lodging-house Keepers, exclusively.

"W. J. B." See one of our late Numbers.

"J. F. E."—The middle-named Theatre.

"Q. E. D."—About 5½. 9d.

"An Old Subscriber." Quay is pronounced Ké.

"*G. H. M

POSTSCRIPT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

THE "GREAT BRITAIN" STEAMER.—In answer to a question from the Earl of RODEN, the EARL of AUCKLAND said that he expected in a few days to receive a report relative to the steps which had been taken for the safety of the Great Britain steamer, and he would then lay it before their Lordships. He had given instructions to the Admiral on the station to render such aid as he might think necessary.

THE JUVENILE OFFENDERS BILL.—The Earl of DEVON moved the committal of the Juvenile Offenders Bill—A slight discussion arose upon the subject of the criminal law generally; the bill went through Committee; and the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

NEW MEMBER.—The Hon. F. Gower was introduced by Mr. Strutt and Mr. Evans, and took the oaths and his seat for the borough of Derby.

Several Railway and other Bills were read a third time and passed.

PRIVATE BILLS. MR. GREENE, in the absence of Mr. Hume, moved the adjourned debate on the question, "That it is expedient that the constitution and practice of all committees on private bills, as far as relates to railway bills, should be assimilated as nearly as may be to those of committees on railway bills; and that it be an instruction to the Committee for Revision of Standing Orders, to make provision accordingly."—Sir R. INGLIS seconded the motion. The motion elicited considerable discussion, but, on a division, was carried by 88 to 60.

THE HEALTH OF TOWNS BILL.—Lord J. RUSSELL having moved that the House should go into Committee on this bill, Colonel SIBTHORP opposed the bill, and moved, as an amendment, that the House should go into Committee on the bill that day three months.—Mr. NEWDEGATE seconded the amendment, and said he objected to the bill on the ground that it was unconstitutional, and tended to deprive the people of the advantages which they derived from their municipal institutions.—The subject occupied the House the rest of the night. In the course of the discussion, Lord MORPETH made an earnest appeal in favour of the bill, and said he should be ready to make any amendments which might be considered desirable, but he must anxiously entreated the House to take this step in the way of procuring the great object of sanitary reform, which was so much desired by the country. On a division taking place, the motion for going into Committee was carried by 191 to 80.

HENLEY GRAND REGATTA.—FIRST DAY

The annual meeting at Henley, which, next to the Thames Regatta, certainly ranks as the most important, pleasant, and attractive in the kingdom, commenced on Thursday. The scene opened most auspiciously, and was characterised by the fairness of interest of no ordinary character. The programme exceeded that of any former year, and the event was rendered more than usually interesting from the circumstance of its being the first occasion this season in which the University Crews of Oxford and Cambridge had met.

At half-past two, Mr. Henry Wood, many years a member of the Leander Club, who had kindly undertaken the office of umpire, took his seat in an eight-oared cutter, manned by crack watermen from London, and the sport immediately commenced.

THE DIAMOND SCULLS.

First Heat.

Mr. W. Maule, Trinity College, Cambridge	..	..	(Light blue) 1
Mr S. Wallace, Amateur Scullers' Club, London	..	..	(White, red cross) 0

Second Heat.

Mr. E. G Moon, Magdalen	..	..	(Dark blue) 1
Mr J. N Lambert, London	..	..	(Red) 0

THE GRAND CHALLENGE CUP.

Trial Heat.

Oxford University Boat Club	st. lb.	Cambridge University Boat Club (Dark blue)	st. lb.
E. G. Moon, Magdalen	11 4	6. W. K.ng Oriel	11 0
2 M Haggard, Christ Church	10 6	7 1. Wenlle Brasenose	11 3
3. J. Oldham, Brasenose	11 2	8. Burton .. .. Christ Church	10 13
4. F Boyds, Brasenose	11 10	9 10
5. E Griffiths, Worcester	13 6	C. Soames (steerr), St. John's	0

Cambridge University Club (Light blue) 0

	st. lb.		st. lb.
W Maule, Trinity	9 13	6. Harkness, St. John's	11 4
2. W Gesbourne, St. John's	10 10	7 Vincent Trinity	10 0
3. E. P. Wolstenholme, Trinity ..	10 7	Jackson .. .. .. St. John's	11 0
4. A. Garfel, Trinity	13 8	Maddock .. .. .. St. John's ..	10 3
5. C. A. Maddock, Trinity	13 9

They started at a rattling dashing speed, Oxford on the Bucks side with a slight lead, both crews remarkably well, and almost oar and oar for several strokes, and then the Oxonians drew fairly in advance, the whole of the men in each boat straining every nerve. A gallant struggle continued throughout, the Cantabs keeping such fine pace with their opponents, that it was not until they had neared the bridge or rising ground on the meadow side (nearly half the distance) that the Oxonians had done more than draw their length away. Notwithstanding the gallant spirits of the Cantabs, they were unable to overtake their opponents, and Oxford won the race by two lengths, the betting on the event had fluctuated considerably. Oxford are said to have been the favourites; but we believe that the betting was pretty even.

THE SILVER WHERRIES.

Messrs. Pollock (Cambridge Subscription Rooms) and Fellows(Leander Club) (Red) 1
Messrs. N. B. Polehampton (Pembroke College, Oxford) and J. Polehampton, jun. (Dark blue) 0

Second Heat.

Messrs. W. G. Falls and W. Coulthard (St. George's Club) .. (White, red cross) 1
Messrs E Wolstenholme (Trinity, Cambridge) and S. Vincent (Dark blue, white stripes) 0

THE DIAMOND SCULLS.

Grand Heat.

Mr. Maule (Trinity College, Cambridge) ..	..	..	.. 1
Mr. E. G. Moon (Magdalen College, Oxford) ..	..	..	.. 0

SILVER WHERRIES.

Grand Heat.

Messrs. W. S. Falls and W. Coulthard (St. George's Club) (White, red cross)	..	..	1
Messrs. Pollock (Cambridge Rooms) and Fellows (Leander) (Red)	..	..	0

CRICKET.—The match between the Marylebone Club and Ground v Northern Counties, which, as has already been stated, was commenced on Monday, was played Tuesday, and was not brought to a conclusion till Wednesday, when the Marylebone were declared the victors by five wickets. The state of the weather, during the two latter days, was such as to spoil the play.

SECOND DAY.

THE GRAND CHALLENGE CUP.

Oxford University Boat Club ..	..	..	.. (Dark Blue) 1
The Thames Club, London ..	..	..	.. (Purple and Crimson) 0

THE VISITORS' CHALLENGE CUP.

The Christchurch Club, Oxford ..	..	..	(Dark Blue and White Cross) 1
The St George's Club, London ..	..	..	.. (White with Red Cross) 0

THE LADIES' CHALLENGE PLATE.

The Chilles of Hale, Brasenose, Oxford ..	..	..	(Blue and Yellow) 1
Cambridge.—The First Trinity. (The holders) ..	..	..	.. (Purple) 0

THE KING OF THE BELGIANS.—The Nationnl states that two expresses arrived in Paris on Monday, from Belgium, announcing that the life of King Leopold was despaired of. His Majesty was afflicted with insanity.

ILLNESS OF THE RABBI DR. HERSCHELL.—We regret to find the following in the Times of papers of the 14th inst.:—"Berlin, June 5: Baron Alexander de Humboldt is so dangerously ill that his physicians despair of his recovery."

DEATH OF CARTER, THE MAD DOG.—This individual, who obtained some notoriety for his daring exploits with wild animals, expired at his residence in Arundel-street, Strand, yesterday morning. He had been for some days past exhibiting his Mazzeppa horse at the Surrey Zoological Gardens.

MURDER NEAR LIVERPOOL.—On Sunday afternoon a young girl was murdered by a maniac, at Knowsley, under most dreadful circumstances. The murderer had been wandering about the premises, unobserved by any of the servants, and entered a cottage near the boundary of the park, in which there was an old woman and a young girl, and commenced a violent attack on the former, and shewing such signs of ferocity that the girl ran out of the cottage in great terror, calling for assistance. She was immediately pursued by the maniac, who seized her by the hair of her head, and literally tore off the scalp along with the hair. The dreadful screams of the poor girl brought several people to her assistance, by whom the maniac was secured, after a desperate resistance, but it required the efforts of eight men to wrest the hair and scalp from his grasp. The injury inflicted on his victim was so dreadful that she died the following day. The girl's name is Ann Leyland. That of the maniac is James Dwerryhouse. He is about 35 years of age; had been for some years in the army; served in India, and was discharged with a considerable pension about four years since. For the last two years he had been employed as a signal man on the London and North Western Railway, stationed at Broad-green, the duties of which office he performed up to Saturday evening last. The Coroner's jury have returned a verdict of "Wilful Murder" against him.

TAWELL THE MURDERER.—On Thursday, a commission, issued on behalf of the Crown, was opened at Hertford, before Mr. Waddington, Q.C., Mr. Pollock, and Mr. Maule, the Commissioners, and a Jury, to inquire what freeholds, leaseholds, lands, messuages, tenements, goods, chattels, &c., James Tawell, late of Great Berkhampstead, possessed at the time of his death, &c. At the conclusion of the evidence, the Jury returned a verdict, "That James Tawell died possessed of certain freehold property, which he held on committing the crime of murder, and personal property, which he held on his execution. That the freehold property was of the annual value of £71; the leasehold property being worth £100; the shares in the Sydney Banking Company worth £510, in the Bank of Australia worth £4000; household furniture and other property worth £600." The whole value of his property was estimated at nearly £6000. The case excited much interest and great sympathy for Mrs. Tawell, who is highly respected.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

SWITZERLAND.

A very serious accident took place near Berne, on the 11th instant. A bridge was being built over the Aar, at Siefflenau, at about a league from Berne. A scaffolding has been erected to support the beams, over which were to pass the enormous blocks of stone necessary to form the last arch, when a gust of wind made the scaffolding fall, with the workmen then standing on it. About thirty were seriously hurt, seven killed on the spot, and several others drowned in the Aar. The hurt are so mutilated, that it is despaired of saving their lives. They are for t he most part poor men, with large families. The damage is estimated at 50,000fr. Mr. Colombara, the principal architect, is responsible for the loss.

ALGERIA.

The Monneur Algérien of the 10th inst. announces that the Prince de Joinville left Algiers on the 7th for Blidah, on a tour of inspection through the south. The troops which had accompanied Marshal Bugeaud in his expedition into Kabylia, were expected at Algiers on the 10th, after a peaceable excursion through the territory of several tribes, who had not yet recognised the authority of France. The column which had marched from Setiff had also received the submission of a number of tribes, not, however, without an exchange of a few shots on the 31st, and the loss of one man killed and four wounded. The intelligence from Morocco describes Abd-e.-Kader as very powerful in the district situate to the north of Tuza, and quietly residing with his deira in the neighbourhood of a camp of regular troops of the Emperor, commanded by his son. Muhley Abderrahman, say those accounts, is afraid to return to Fez, and there is every probability that important events will shortly take place in that direction.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

LIEUT.-GEN. SIR COLIN CAMPBELL, K.C.B.

THIS distinguished officer, whose death occurred on the 13th instant, was fifth son of John Campbell, Esq., of Melford, in Argyllshire, and brother of the late Admiral Sir Patrick Campbell.

He was born in 1777, and joined the army in 1799, when he almost immediately entered on the active duties of his profession. His gallantry in the Peninsula soon won for him the notice of his illustrious Commander, and his name and exploits occupy no inglorious space in the official despatches.

For a considerable time he held the appointments of Assistant-Adjutant-General and Assistant-Quartermaster-General; and for his eminent services at Talavera, Busaco, Fuentes d'Onor, Badajos, Salamanca, Vittoria, the Pyrenees, Nivelle, Nive, and Toulouse, he received a Cross and Six Clasps.

At the consummating victory of Waterloo, Colonel Campbell commanded the Royal Scots; and so conspicuous was his conduct on that memorable occasion, that the officers of the regiment testified their admiration by the presentation of a sword valued at seventy guineas, and the Sovereign conferred, in recompense, the insignia of the Bath. Sir Colin was also invested with the orders of Maria Theresa, St. George, the Tower and Sword, and Maximilian Joseph of Bavaria. Subsequently, after acting for several years as Lieutenant-Governor of Portsmouth, and holding the command of the South-West District, he was appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, and finally, in 1840, made Governor of Ceylon, in which island he remained until the recent appointment of Lord Torrington. In 1836 he became Colonel of the 72nd Highlanders, and in 1838 received the rank of Lieutenant-General. At the period of his decease, Sir Colen Campbell had just completed his 70th year. He married Miss Harden, daughter of Henry Harden, Esq., but was left a widower in 1808, with three sons and three daughters: the former are Col. Fitzroy Campbell, C.B., Capt. Campbell, Aide-de-Camp to Sir Charles Napier in India; and Capt. F. Campbell, R.N. Of the daughters, the eldest, Maria Louisa, married first to Hon. C. F. Norton, and second, to the Hon. Edmund Phipps.

SIR RICHARD PLASKET

SIR RICHARD PLASKET was the third son of Mr. Thomas Plasket, of Clifford-street, London; he was born in 1782, and early in life filled an appointment in the Colonial Department. He was subsequently employed as private and public Secretary to the Governments at Ceylon, Malta, and the Cape of Good Hope. The important duties of these official places he discharged for a period of twenty-six years with so much satisfaction to the Home Administration, that, in consideration of his eminent services, he was nominated a Knight of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, on its institution in 1818. He married in 1836.

The death of Sir Richard occurred at Hampson House, near Torquay, Devon, on the 11th inst., in the sixty-sixth year of his age.

JOHN BUONAROTTI PAPWORTH.

THE death of this gentleman, late Vice-President of the Royal Institute of British Architects, occurred on Wednesday last, at his residence, Park End, St. Neot's; whither he had retired from London, after more than fifty years of professional practice. Early in life, his excellent judgment and kind heart acquired for him the intimacies of the leading artists; and, also, the confidence of many wealthy amateurs as to the direction of their patronage, and as to the decoration of their mansions. In his practice, he originated and accomplished the adoption of the tasteful style of modern furniture; which led to his selection by Government for the trust of carrying out the formation of the Somerset-House School of Design. His works on Garden and Rural Architecture, were the result of his experience in Landscape Gardening, which he joined as a profession with his other art. Amongst the clients to whom he owed an extended general practice, he numbered several of the late branches of the Royal Family, especially the Princess Charlotte; and also the present King of Wurtemberg, from whom he, having designed the English Park and Palace at Kaunstadt, received the appointment of Architect to his Majesty.

Mr. Papworth was highly respected, not only by his private friends and by his clients, but also by those severer judges, the members of his own profession. The splendid token of their esteem we engraved in our Journal, at the beginning of the year.

COUNTRY NEWS.

THE ELECTIONS.

HERTFORDSHIRE.—A requisition is in course of signature, to Sir E. L. Bulwer Lytton, Bart., begging him to allow himself to be put in nomination, in conjunction with Mr. Thomas Brand, at the approaching general election.

EVESHAM.—The sitting member for the borough is Mr. Berthwick, who will seek re election. Two other candidates are talked of—Mr. Rudge on the Conservative interest, and a worthy merchant on the Whig side.

HENNESSEVIELD.—Mr. George Wilson, the Chairman of the Anti Corn Law League, is a candidate for this borough, with every prospect of success.

STAFFORDSHIRE.—It is now generally understood that Edward Buller, Esq., retires from the borough of Stafford, again to represent the Northern Division of that county, in the place of Mr. David Wats Russell, who declines again to come forward. It is understood that Mr. Adderley, the colleague of Mr. Russell, will not be opposed by the Liberals, unless another candidate in the same interest should offer himself.

BIRMINGHAM.—On Tuesday, a very numerous meeting of the friends of Mr. Spooner took place, Mr. V. C. Alston in the chair, at which it was resolved to support Mr. Spooner as a Conservative, and Mr. Muntz in conjunction with him, on the ground of his past general attention to the interests of the borough. This step, it is presumed, will render the return of Mr. Muntz certain. The Whig-Radicals (as distinguished from the Whigs) will support Mr. Scholefield; and it is rumoured that they intend to bring forward another candidate, if practicable, to displace Mr. Muntz.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.—A meeting of Mr. Goulburn's friends was held on Monday at the Union Tavern, Trumpington-street, Sir Henry Pechell presiding. The meeting was well attended, and resolutions were passed, pledging those present to support Mr. Goulburn in the approaching contest. A committee was formed for the purpose of carrying out the object of the meeting. The two new candidates have been brought forward, to contest the University. One of them, Mr. J. Shaw Lefevre, is already in the field. The other candidate who is expected to be brought forward, is Mr. Fielding, son of Lord Denbigh.

TAMWORTH.—Mr. William Yates Peel will represent this borough in connection with the late Premier, in the new Parliament. This is now placed beyond doubt by the retirement of Capt. O'Quinn.

SOUTH SHIELDS.—It is now ascertained that Mr. George Stephenson will not come forward for South Shields: he had been applied to, but refused to offer himself.

THE MEETING OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION AT OXFORD.—The arrangements for the meeting at Oxford, commencing on the 23rd instant, are as follow:—Admission of members of the Association and ladies to the public buildings and colleges will be given by tickets; to the Bodleian Library, between the hours of 9 and 4; the Botanic Garden, until 8 P.M.; the Ashmolean Museum, from 11 to 4; the Museum of Mineralogy and Geology, from 1 to 4; the Anatomical Museum, Christ Church, from 2 to 5; the Randolph Galleries and collection of Raffaelle and Michael Angelo drawings, from 11 to 4; New College Chapel will be open for service at 8 and 4, and the College, for inspection, between 10 and 12. Most of the other Colleges have already intimated their intention of allowing their halls, chapels, &c., to be seen, gratuitously, between the hours of 9 and 4; the University press, from 2 to 4; the Architectural Society's room, Holywell, until 4 P.M. By permission of his Grace the Duke of Marlborough, the house, grounds, and private garden of Blenheim will be shewn to all members and associates daily, at the usual hours, between 11 and 2, and at any hour on Saturday, June 26, by tickets, to be obtained on application to the local treasurer, in person or by letter, at the reception room, Oxford, by 20th July. By especial permission, the members will be permitted to visit upon Saturday, besides the private garden, the kitchen garden, hothouses, pineries, &c. Prince Lucien Bonaparte is amongst the distinguished visitors expected to attend the meeting. He will lodge in Magdalene College, where also the Earl of Rosse, formerly a member of the Society, will again take up his quarters

ELECTION FOR DERBY.—The Hon. Frederick Leveson Gower, the brother of Lord Granville, was on Wednesday elected for the borough of Derby, in the room of Lord Duncannon (now Earl Besborough). A Mr. M'Grath, a Chartist, had also been put in nomination, and a poll was called for; but, as he declined to pay his share of fees to the Mayor, the latter declared that no poll had been demanded.

EPITOME OF NEWS—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

A fire broke out, in the night of the 26th ult., at St. Dimitri, one of the suburbs of Pera, and consumed 300 houses

The French papers assert that the differences between the two powers appears to have been due to the good offices of Austria.

The School of Design at Nottingham had an exhibition last week. The drawings were numerous, and are stated to have displayed a marked improvement, when compared with those of the previous year. The number of pupils has greatly increased.

Last week, Mr. Bright, M.P. for Durham, was married, at the Friends' Meeting House, Wakefield, to Miss Margaret Leatham, according to the usual form adopted by the Society of Friends.

The Mr. Henry Smith, whose name is given amongst the list of killed in the frightful collision at Waterloo, is Mr. Henry Smith, the Manager of the North Lancashire Steam Navigation Company.

Measures are in progress for the erection of a statue of the late Dr. Chalmers, to be executed by Mr. Steel, from the admirable bust lately sculptured by him, and to be placed within the New College, Edinburgh.

From the River Plate Monte Videan advices to the 13th of April have reached us, and from Buenos Ayres to the 5th. The blockade still continued. Oribe was in quiet possession of the country. From South America we learn that steamers had erected itself into an independent state.

Accounts from Van Diemen's Land state that the funeral of Sir Eardley Wilmot took place on the 10th of February: it was conducted with sympathising solemnity. His Excellency Mr. C. J. Lasrobe (acting Governor till the arrival of Sir W. Denison) departed on his return to Port Philip on the 12th. The first levee of the new Governor was numerously attended.

A rather serious accident took place last week on the Berlin and Hamburg Railway. Three luggage waggons ran off the rails, by which several persons were much injured, and several fine horses and cattle killed.

Colonel Outram has been appointed resident at Baroda, in room of Sir R. K. Arbuthnot, resigned. The salary is £4000 a year: the appointment is the highest in the gift of the Governor of Bombay. Mr. H. B. E. Frere, late private secretary to Sir George Arthur, a young civilian of the highest promise, succeeds Col. Outram at Saltara.

The Prince Archbishop of Breslau has been put under arrest in his own palace for a month, for having given publicity to the sentence of excommunication pronounced by him upon Prince Gergain de Hatzfeld, a measure contrary to the laws of the country, without the special authorisation of the Government.

The Bohemian States were closed on the 2nd inst. One of the resolutions contains the petition that the State lottery may be abolished. The price of corn and provisions is falling throughout the country

On Monday the Extension from Stratford of the North Woolwich branch of the Eastern Counties Railway was opened for public traffic.

The Ville d'Angers, which arrived on the 13th inst. at Havre, from Calcutta, left, at St Helena on the 7th of April, the Chinese junk, having on board the Chinese crew and actors, whose departure for England we have already noticed.

The emigrants to America, who left Liverpool during the month, from the 16th of May to the 14th of June, amount to about 17,865 adults, exclusive of those people who go out by such light craft as do not come under the provisions of the Emigration Act. Of these 17,865, about 5785 only have gone to the colonies of North America; the remaining two thirds, or 11,570, have proceeded to the United States

General Sir Harry Smith has taken a house in the neighbourhood of Canterbury, where he intends to reside for some time.

The new American steam-ship Washington, arrived at Liverpool on Tuesday afternoon, it being her first voyage across the Atlantic. This vessel was nearly fourteen days on her passage, and therefore somewhat disappointed expectation, as her engines are said to possess the extraordinary power of 2000 horses. There was, however, a trifling disarrangement of machinery on the voyage.

A large fleet of merchant ships has arrived in Cork harbour laden with bread stuffs. The bay never was covered with them. It is said that upwards of 100 vessels are in the harbour, or on their way to it, are no less than hundreds of other vessels bearing a similar welcome freightage.

A recent order of the King of Prussia enacts that, pursuant to existing laws, clergymen who depart from their duty shall be submitted to different degrees of punishment. Those who preach against any form of religion sanctioned by the State are liable to dismissal, and to imprisonment of from four to six months.

A short time ago, the notorious Captain Johnson, late master of the Tory, whose trial for the murder of several of his crew attracted so much attention, endeavoured to effect his escape from Bethlehem Hospital, but was frustrated in his attempt.

On the 1st inst., a solemn funeral service was celebrated in the church of the Irish College, S. Agatha, Rome, for the repose of the soul of the late Mr. O'Connell. The church was lighted up with torches and candle, and ornamented in an appropriate manner, with black drapery, for the mournful ceremony. In the centre of the nave a rich catafalco was erected, of considerable elevation. In this was placed the heart of the deceased

During a thunder storm which broke last week over the Commune of Origuelles (France), five young girls and a young peasant took refuge under a walnut-tree. The electric fluid fell on the tree, and reaching the peasant, threw them with violence on the ground. The young man was killed on the instant. Three of the girls were severely burnt, and the other two were for a time stunned, though they afterwards recovered.

It has been resolved to open the first 40 miles of the Caledonian Railway, from Carlisle to Beatock on the 1st of August next, and preparations are being made accordingly.

The Odessa papers announce the export from thence, during the month of April, of grain to the enormous amount of 5,690,906 silver roubles, an extent that was never before attained at that port in a single month. The principal portion consisted of wheat

New potatoes from Lisbon have been sold at Manchester and other places lately at 35s. for 1s. In using them it is necessary for housekeepers to put a little salt in the water in which they are boiled, to loosen the skins.

The Lowestoft and Reedham line of Railway was to be opened yesterday

The passengers between England and Boulogne during the week ending 13th of June, were 1564 against 1235 in the corresponding week of 1846. The passengers between Calais and England in the same week, were 354 against 316 in 1846.

The Crown has now the power of creating an Irish peerage, there having been three extinctions of titles since the last creation, viz.:—Lords Mountsandford, Hartland, and Allen.

The Cashel Railway will be opened to Maryborough on the 1st of July.

Mr. George Ogle Moore, who some months since retired from the office of Registrar of Deeds of Ireland, in which he was succeeded by Mr. Morgan O'Connell, son of the late Mr. Daniel O'Connell, died a few days ago at Bath. Mr. Moore formerly represented the city of Dublin in the Imperial Parliament. By his death a large pension reverts to the Crown

New potatoes, of excellent quality, have been sold this week in Covent-garden at 1d. per lb., and green peas at 9d. per peck.

It is a remarkable circumstance that the sales of grain in the provincial markets should continue to exhibit such a marked falling off. Last week, according to the official return, there were purchased only 31,064 qrs. of wheat, 2,401 qrs. of barley, and 3,803 qrs. of oats. The expectation of large arrivals has no doubt induced the millers to hold off.

Papers from the Mauritius, to the 17th of March, contain most satisfactory accounts of the sugar crop of that island, which, it is said, would not be less than 122 millions of pounds, which is an enormous increase over the produce of ordinary years.

A Vienna letter, Vienna, of the 8th instant, state that, in consequence of the demands of several German Governments, the Cabinet had decided that the prohibition of the export of grain should not apply to purchases made previous to the publication of the decree of prohibition, and therefore that corn sold the week might leave the country on payment of the prescribed duties.

In consequence of the passing of the Factory Bill, several manufacturers in Preston and neighbourhood have determined to reduce their hours of labour to ten. A similar course has been resolved on by an extensive firm in the neighbourhood of Bolton, and by some others; and in all probability it will be generally adopted.

Parliament will, it is now said, be prorogued by the Queen in person on Monday, the 12th of July, and the elections will not take place till after the harvest, the end of September or beginning of October.

About seventy whales were captured at Stronsay last week, and have since been sold at excellent prices, on an average, leaving to a great number, who were engaged in the capture, about 15s. to 20s. each.

The trial of Mary Ann Hunt, accused of the murder of Mary Stowell, has been postponed till the next Sessions of the Central Criminal Court. The prisoner's Counsel expects to prove that his client is insane. The Grand Jury have returned a true bill against the prisoner for murder.

An American paper states that a field of potatoes was wholly destroyed by the rot, but was permitted to lie over to this season without culture, and it was discovered to have produced a fine crop of potatoes, without a single symptom of disease.

The number of vessels reported at the Custom-house as having arrived in the Thames and docks on Monday last from foreign states, was 84, laden with grain, cattle, provisions, and merchandise of every description. This is exclusive of 17 vessels from Ireland, similarly laden, making altogether, in one day, the large number of 101.

An export of silver is now taking place from France to Russia. A similar export also is expected from this country.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY—THE NEW RAPHAEL.

THE Trustees of the National Gallery have lately purchased this small and very interesting picture by Raphael. This work was brought from Italy many years since by the celebrated collector, Sir Marks Masterman Sykes, who died about twenty-five years ago, and bequeathed it to his widow, who, dying lately, her representatives sold it to the National Gallery, along, we are informed, with a cartoon of the same subject by the same master. The purchase-money stands in the estimate at £1000; and the subject is there stated to be "The Vision of a Knight." The Knight in full armour is lying asleep, and on either side of him a female figure is standing. One of these, from the attributes with which she is endowed, would seem to represent Religion; the other holds an olive branch in her hand. The picture, though reckoned an early one of the master, and even supposed to have been executed before he studied under Perugino, yet possesses a great deal of that grace of line and sweetness and propriety of expression which distinguish his later works. It has been enclosed in a suitable case, with plate-glass, such as those which protect the Corregios and some other valuable works.

SHAKSPEARE'S HOUSE. The present proprietors of the place of our great poet's birth are, it appears, compelled to sell it, by the terms of the will of a former owner. The house is a freehold, and is valued at about £2000. It will be sold by auction in the course of the summer; and one or two enthusiastic Jonathans have already arrived from America, determined to see what dollars can do in taking it away. The timbers, it is said, are all sound, and it would be no very difficult matter to set it on wheels and make an exhibition of it.

PRESENTATION OF NEW COLOURS TO THE SECOND BATTALION OF THE "FIRST ROYALS." This interesting ceremony will take place in Salford Barracks, on Monday next, being the anniversary of the Battle of Vittoria, where this old and gallant corps highly distinguished itself. The new colours will be presented by Lieutenant-General Sir Thomas Arbuthnot, K.C.B.

DEATH OF COMMANDER DEBENHAM. Commander Debenham (1814), another of the heroes of the late war, died on Tuesday, in the 76th year of his age.

RIFLE BRIGADE.—By the recent demise of Lieutenant-Colonel Irton, of the Rifle Brigade, it is understood that Major Walpole will receive the Lieutenant-Colonelcy of the 2nd battalion, without purchase.

MILITARY BANQUET.—On Wednesday evening the officers of the Guards entertained the staff of the Rifles and the 43d Foot at a banquet laid out beneath a tent on the ground facing the Wellington Barracks, Birdcage-walk. His Royal Highness Prince George presided. The Hon. Commissioned Staff of the House hold Brigade also displayed a wonted hospitality to their brethren of the line.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY.—THE NEW RAPHAEL.—"THE VISION OF A KNIGHT."

THE WATERLOO BANQUET—JUNE 18.

(The Illustration is from a Sketch taken in 1846.)

ONCE more assembled in the Victor's Hall,
Shine forth the reliques of the glorious band;
Life waning Stars, whose dying beams recall
The Sun of Waterloo! Each honoured brand
Is wreathed in olive; while the heart and hand
Rise with the wine-cup over Memory's pall—Pictons and Ponsonbys—Old Lynedochs, and
The brothers of the blade who dared the Gaul.
Highly the cup is raised to chainless Spain—
To Talavera's day of deathless fame—
To Salamanca's towers—Vittoria's plain,
Where sank Gaul's Eagle in a flood o flame;
Thence floated Britain's banner to the breeze,
That waved it o'er the vanquish'd Tuileries.

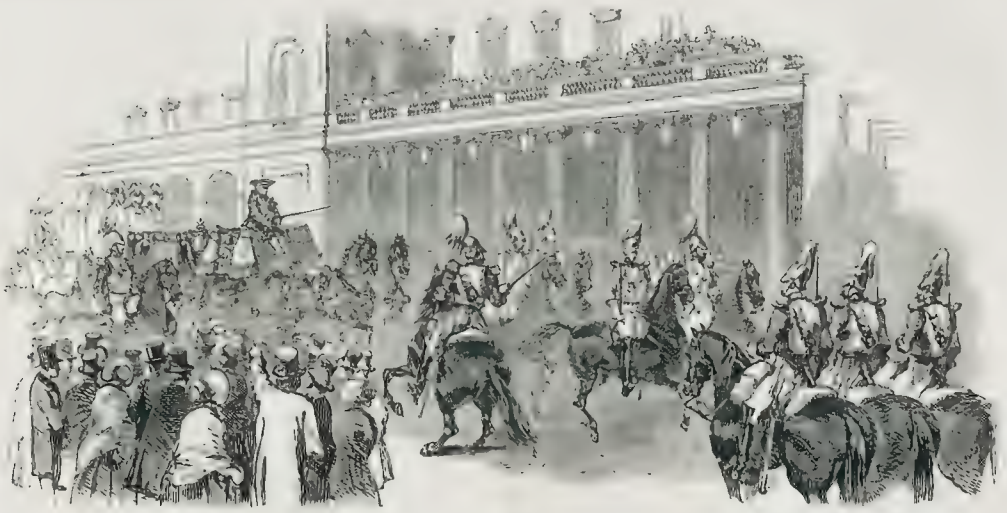
Chained to his Elban rock, Gaul's demi-god
Writhes like Prometheus, bound by Fate's decree;
Burns with ambition to resume the rod—
His iron sceptre of lost sovereignty.
Alas! alas for human-kind; that he
So greatly gifted should become the scourge
Of every land whose children would be free,
Or sink beneath the battle's gory surge
Calm slept pale Europe on her victor shield,
Lull'd by the song of Hope to sweet repose.
Fair Peace came smiling o'er the fertile field;
And twined, in love, the Lily and the Rose—
The sails of Commerce wafted o'er the main
Earth's blessings—men were brothers once again.

Awake! arise! the clarion wildly blares!
The captive Eagle captive now no more,
Has burst his chain, and on bold pinion dares
To swoop in thunder o'er Gaul's startled shore.
"Down with the Lilies!" "Up the Tricolor!"
The flag of Austerlitz in triumph waves
Over the Tuileries; and now outpows
Tow'rds Waterloo, Gaul's legions — to their graves!
They come like billows roaring 'gainst the rock
Vain is their courage—their devotion vain;
Back rolls the tide of war. The charging shock
Hath crush'd for aye Napoleon's restless reign.
Peace to the brave who on that red day fell!
Peace to all hearts who guard her blessings well!

And honour to the men, who never raised
Their swords against the liberties of man
Honour eternal! for, their swords erased
A scorching stigma! Peace must head the van
Of man's regeneration: lay her ban
On fratricide, which too long hath been deem'd
True glory's rubric—never failing plan,
By which man's happiness is best redeemed;
But the glad cup goes round. Oh! may they yet,
Though few, how gallant, met within that Hall:
Chieftains and Chief, till many a year be set,
And Death, indulgent, sounds his last recall.
Raise we the cup of mingled joy and grief,
Wreathing the laurel with the cypress leaf.

THE WATERLOO BANQUET AT APSLEY HOUSE.

THE QUEEN'S STATE VISIT TO HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.



ARRIVAL OF HER MAJESTY.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.—THE STATE VISIT.

Those who were fortunate enough to be present at Her Majesty's Theatre on Tuesday evening, will long remember the splendour of that temple of lyrical art, which was celebrated (as our French neighbours say) for two solennités: the State Visit of her Most Gracious Majesty, and the triumphant success of Mdlle. Jenny Lind in the chef d'œuvre of Bellini, as Norma. As early as half-past three o'clock, several parties had assembled at the various entrances of the theatre; and the doors were opened half-an-hour earlier than usual. Crowds of her Majesty's loyal subjects thronged Pall Mall, who greeted the Queen en route to the theatre, where her Majesty was received with a flourish of trumpets by the band of the Guards, and cheers by those assembled at the doors. Precisely at eight o'clock, the Queen entered the Royal box with his Royal Highness Prince Albert, accompanied by their suite; when instantaneously the band struck up "God Save the Queen," which was sung by the leading members of la troupe melodieuse. Mdme. Castellan singing the last verse. The applause at the conclusion was genuine, and highly enthusiastic. Her Majesty, having gracefully acknowledged the cheers and plaudits of her loyal subjects inside the house, sat down; and the performance commenced.

For twelve years, this opera has been deservedly highly popular in this country—there is a charming strain of melody that pervades it, and that must delight every true lover of music.

The admirable performance on Tuesday evening of Jenny Lind as the Druid Priestess, was as remarkable for her superb vocalisation as her beautifully impressive reading of the rôle of Norma. On her entrée, she was received with the same marks of genuine approbation as on other occasions, which were renewed on her concluding the first movement of the celebrated aria "Casta Diva," when one of those notes were heard, so pure, so full, so bell-toned, and continued for such a length of time, that everybody present was equally astonished and delighted. The second movement was remarkable for a new reading of the text, when she introduced some chromatic fioriture, which were executed with the greatest precision, truthfulness of intonation, and produced a most brilliant effect. At the conclusion of the first movement of the popular duet "Deh con te," a new cadenza was most effectively given, in which Mdlle. Lind seemed to revel in all the exuberance of her exquisite taste; and she was ably seconded by Mdme. Barroni, who was the Adalgisa of the evening. The beauties of Mdlle. Lind's acting and singing in this rôle are so numerous, that, to do her justice, we should mention every piece in which she has to perform in the opera. We, however, must not omit her exquisite reading of the duet "In mia man alferi tu sei," and the celebrated "Qual cor tradisti," which were triumphs in the lyric as well as dramatic art.

The uniform excellence of Signor Fraschini's reading of the rôle of Pollio was remarkable; he was warmly applauded in the last scene. When we say that Lablache represented Oroveso, need we say any more? The choruses were sung with perfect ensemble, and the orchestra achieved wonders—performing most carefully and brilliantly, and preserving all those nuances which charm by their contrast under their talented chef, Balfe.

Immediately after witnessing the divertissement, in which the charming Cerito displayed all her choregraphic fascinations to perfection, the National Anthem was again sung, when her Majesty, her Royal Consort, and suite, left the theatre.

The decorations of the Royal boxes were magnificent. The box usually occupied by her Majesty, the Queen Dowager's, and the two boxes on the left of the Queen's, were hung outside with draperies of rich crimson Genoa velvet, trimmed with gold lace and broad bullion fringe; and blue velvet, trimmed with silver lace. The Royal Arms were displayed on the front of the box, on blue velvet: the top was surmounted with a gilt crown; and at the corners, were war trophies; the whole being surrounded with richly-carved gilt pillars. A platform, covered with scarlet cloth, was placed on the stage, on which stood, according to custom, two of the Yeomen of the Guard.

The inside of her Majesty's box was as remarkable for taste and elegance as the outside for gorgeous display. It was lined with white satin, covered with light blue tulle, and ornamented with richly-carved gold mouldings. The ante-chamber was hung with pink silk, over which was white tulle, trimmed with a profusion of Valenciennes lace. There were several pier-glasses surrounded with wreaths of artificial flowers, which had a most brilliant effect.

In the refreshment-room, and in the passages, were bouquets and rare exotics. The passages were richly hung with blue velvet, and wreaths and festoons of artificial flowers, and were brilliantly lighted with lustres.

The whole was tastefully designed by Madame Copere, who worked a splendid pincushion for her Majesty's ante-chamber, composed of crimson velvet, richly embroidered in gold.

At the conclusion of the performance, the Queen sent for Madame Copere, and complimented her upon the elegance and good taste she had displayed in the fittings for the royal reception.

THE ROYAL BOX.

On Thursday night, the programme comprised opera, oratorio, song, divertissement, and ballet: beginning with the two middle acts of "Ernani;" then followed a divertissement from "La Esmeralda," in which Carlotta Grisi and Perrot danced; then, a vocal and instrumental concert; next, another divertissement, introducing Mdlle Rosati; a scene from the "Matrimonio Segreto," by Lablache and F. Lablache; and lastly, the ballet of "Alina," with Cerito and St. Leon.

The principal features of the Concert were two Swedish airs by Mdlle. Lind; both were very wild and pretty. The first resembled the Swiss "Ranz des Vaches," and was sung with an arch and playful expression, conveyed not only by her vocal inflexions, but by her looks and gestures. The other was in a lively dancing measure, and sounded like the joyous carol of some light-hearted country maiden. Both airs were encored with acclamations. Mdlle Lind sang previously, with Gardoni and Staudigl, a trio from the "Creation." Mdlle. Lind sung her part with quiet simplicity and good taste.

In another vein was her buffo duet with Lablache, the singing lesson from the "Fanatico per la Musica," which she executed with great skill and humour. In each of her performances, Mdlle. Lind was rapturously applauded; and gave so many delightful proofs of the versatility of her genius. The theatre was crowded to excess.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

Her Majesty and the Prince Consort, the Grand Duke Constantine of Russia, and Prince George of Cambridge, with an audience composed of rank and fashion, witnessed the second representation of Bellini's "Norma," on Saturday night. Great as was the sensation previously created by Grisi, it is no less certain that never did she act and sing more magnificently than on this occasion. She was called on after the opening cavatina, "Casta Diva." In the trio, she was twice encored in the "Oh non tremore, O perfido," the cheering lasting several minutes; but received another encore in the next scene, "Ah! guai a te sleale vittima," in which she electrified the house, the Royal party evidently participating in the great excitement. Grisi's second act was one continued series of ovations, and twice, at the fall of the curtain, was she called forward by the delighted audience. Salvi acted with infinite vigour; and his singing of the "Qual cor tradisti," was marked with impassioned feeling. Marini's superb bass voice, in the Oroveso, especially in the restored air, made a powerful impression. The sweet vocalisation of Corbari, in the Adalgisa, left nothing to be desired. The military band on the stage, with the noble orchestra, under Costa's bâton, completed this memorable ensemble.

After the opera, a new ballet by Signor G. Casati, called "Manon Lescaut," was produced with the greatest success. The story is based on incidents in the novel of the Abbé Prevost, bearing the same name; and it has supplied Mr. Bunn with the libretto of the "Maid of Artois," composed by Balfe for Malibran. The ballet-writer has taken Manon's scene of flirtation with the Marquis de Granville, and the despair thereat of her lover, De Grieux. The incident of the enlistment of the latter, through the trick of the Marquis, is also introduced. Then, there is the divertissement at the grand opera of "Flora and Zephyr," in which Manon takes the place of the principal danseuse, who is indisposed—the firing of the pistol at the Marquis by De Grieux—the trial and condemnation to transportation of the latter by a court-martial—the separation between Manon and De Grieux in the prison, and the discovery that the latter is the son of the Marquis, which leads to a happy denouement. There seems to be but one opinion that this is one of the most interesting and best mounted ballets ever produced in this country. Signor Casati is a first-rate master, in choreographic combination, as was proved in the divertissements; and in which the gyrations of the nymphs in silver masses and labyrinths were beautifully managed. He played the lover, De Grieux, with much animation. O'Bryan's Marquis was carefully done. The great attraction was, of course, the dances of Carlotta Grisi, one of her most poetic creations. Her vivacity in the scene in the Palais-Royal—her grace in the Flora and her passion in the prison scene, were much applauded. The scenery, by Grieve and Telbin, is charming; and no expense seems to have been spared in the costumes of the ancien régime with the parruques of the dames and cavaliers. The music is of a better quality than usual; although, with such soloists as are in the Covent Garden band, there ought to be greater opportunities for display of their qualities.

On Tuesday night, by general desire, Alboni repeated her exquisite delineation of Semira, in "Il Barbiere." The scene was quite full, and the contralto produced quite a furore. She was encored in the duo with Ronconi, the prince of Figaros. This opera has established this great artist in public favour. Marini has also gained great glory in Basilio.—In "Calzolaia" never was Lablache more so well sung before. Rovere's Bartolo is a capital piece of acting; and the amateurs are indebted to him for the restoration of a very comic bass song. Salvi's Count contributed in no small degree to the general perfection of this cast. "Manon Lescaut" was repeated for the second time—Fanny Elsler being encored in one of her sparkling pas.

On Thursday (the extra night), "Norma" was given for the third time; and the second act of "Il Barbiere." Grisi's reception was most rapturous. She was encored twice successively in the trio finale of the first act, at the end of which she was called before the curtain. In the second act of the opera, she was encored two three times by the audience, to acknowledge her histrionic genius and vocal excellence. We never witnessed a more enthusiastic performance; the floral shower was unceasing, and Grisi's and Marini's were among the most successful in picking up the wreaths of laurel, bouquets, &c. Grisi was certainly in superb voice, and never acted with more overwhelming energy. Corbari came out strongly in this second act, and received her merited share of applause. Salvi was in spirit and intensity: her voice was always sweet and sonorous. Salvi and Marini participated in the glories of this fine ensemble; and, as for the chorus and band, they were perfect. The second act of "Il Barbiere," Alboni gave to the singing lesson, "Una voce," and was imperatively called upon to repeat it, so charming was the vocalisation. Ronconi's Figaro, Rovere's Bartolo, Marini's Basilio, and Salvi's Count, were as much relished by the house, which was crowded to excess, as on former occasions.

Of the Morning Concert (yesterday) we must defer our notice until next week. Verdi's "Due Foscari" was produced (on Saturday) with Salvi, Grisi, Marini, Ronconi, Tagliafico, &c. On Thursday next, by general desire, Mozart's "Il Don Giovanni" will be repeated. It will be the last night of Fanny Elssler's engagement.

THE CLOSE OF THE LYCEUM.

On Friday evening, the "Keeley management," which has for more than three years provided such excellent entertainment for the play-going, was brought to a conclusion, owing to the unfortunate disagreement between the lessees and Mr. Arnold. Mr. and Mrs. Keeley took their benefit upon the occasion, the pieces selected being "Martin the Foundling," "Jenny Lind," and "The Bonâ Jimp." The Misses Williams sang a duet; little Miss Frampton danced the "Pas de Tombre," from "Ondine;" and Mrs. Keeley spoke a Farewell Address, written by Mr. Albert Smith.

A shower of bouquets from all parts of the house followed the Address. Mr. Keeley was then loudly called for; the cheering was taken up behind the scenes, and continued after the curtain had risen. We have seldom heard a more gratifying demonstration of feeling.

After the performances concluded, an elegant supper was given to the different members of the company, and the principal patrons of the theatre, the stage being rapidly converted into a commodious "banquet hall" for that purpose. Between seventy and eighty ladies and gentlemen sat down; and all the individuals engaged on the establishment were also regaled in a similar way. Mr. and Mrs. Keeley took the head of the table, supported by their invited guests. Champagne, claret, and other wines were circulated with profuse liberality; and the viands, provided by Mr. Rhodes, were unexceptionable.

A variety of toasts were drunk, after which Mr. Henry Villebois presented Mr. Keeley with a very handsome snuff-box, as a mark of the high esteem he felt for him, after a twenty years' friendship. It was not until midnight gave a very unmistakeable warning that the company thought of separating, after a most delightful meeting. And then the Lyceum was left to the uncontrolled management of the mice and spiders, until the next lessee may be found enterprising enough to open its doors.

We perceive that the theatre is "to be let" until the period of Madame Vestris entering upon her management. The opening is named for October.

FRENCH PLAYS.

The return of M. Bouffé has been hailed with delight by the habitués of Mr. Mitchell's pleasant theatre, and the greatest success, as of old, has attended his representations. On Wednesday evening he performed two of his best characters to a numerous and delighted audience—Le Père Turlurette and Joseph, in "Le Gamin de Paris." The parts were admirably chosen to exhibit M. Bouffé's wonderful versatility; one of them being that of a centuenrian, and the other, as our readers may be aware, the idle mischievous street-boy of Paris. It is difficult to say which character he more completely identified himself; or whether his simpish jocularity or touching pathos was the more effective or natural. M. Bouffé is an actor of rare talent—one of those stars but seldom seen in the firmament, and when he quits the stage there is no one who we know can may supply his place. His engagement is only for the present month, and no opportunity should be lost of seeing him. He is, amongst actors, what Miss Kelly was—what Mrs. Keeley is—amongst actresses; possessing equal command over the smiles and tears of the audience. On our own boards we have not his parallel. Individually we have actors who come near him in his separate characters, but none who combine the widely-different attributes of his genius.

PRINCESS'.

Mr. Macready's short engagement at this theatre concluded last night, with the performance of "King Lear." That he has not been so attractive as on former occasions is, perhaps, partly owing to the absorbing interest excited in the western-seeking portion of the public by the rival Opera; partly, to the inefficient way of getting up the pieces in which he has played; and partly to the absence of novelty, the only attempt at which has been the revival of "The Bridal," a tragedy on "The Maid's Tragedy" of Beaumont and Fletcher, and brought out some years back at the Haymarket, when Mrs. Warner and Mr. Macready played, as now, the two principal characters. The part of Melantius is one of Mr. Macready's best impersonations. His keen impassioned and fragmentary mode of delivery are not out of place in the rugged and genial soldier who returns from the wars in good humour will, himself and the world, to find himself the denouncer of fraud and the avenger of wrong; while his skill in by-play, and his power of giving effect to passages of sarcasm and tenderness, are brought out by the situations of the drama. Few things on the stage are finer than his acting in the scene where he extorts a confession from Evadne, or the one in the dungeon, where he is expecting death from the hands of the ruffians who are introduced by the gaoler. The hushed attention, rather than applause, of the audience, in these scenes, was the highest compliment that could be paid to the power of the actor. Mrs. Warner's Evadne is still, as it was, admirable; and we have not seen the part of Amintor so well acted, since the time of poor Elton, as it was by Mr. Creswick—one of the best of our rising actors. The scenery and dresses were unusually inappropriate. The action seemed to take place alternately in ancient Rome, the France of Louis XIV., and modern London.

The "Bridal" was followed, on Wednesday evening last, by a lively farce, in one act, called, "Ladies, Beware!" in which the visitors to the French Plays will recognise "Une femme qui se Jette par la Fenêtre" a vaudeville we alluded to a week or two ago.

Miss Cooper appears to have replaced Mrs. Stirling in this theatre.

HAYMARKET.

On Saturday evening a new piece called "The Jacobite," was produced at this theatre, and with most unequivocal success; indeed, it is one of the most pleasant dramas that we have had a long time under our notice. Nameless as it is upon all Planché, and rumour also says that it is a translation. If so, it this plays all that remarkable tact in adapting a French plot to English incidents which we have before spoken of—where the disagreeables of the translations brought out under the names of "Who's your Landlord?" "Queen Mary's Bower," "Spring Gardens," &c., the productions of the aforesaid clever dramatist.

The chief weight of the piece rests upon the shoulders of Mr. Buckstone, who as John Duck, a scrivener's clerk formerly, but now a waiter at an inn, from love of the landlady's daughter, Patty (Miss Reynolds), kept the house in screams of laughter whenever he was on the stage. The ingenuity of his plan to render it somewhat long to describe, although it can be easily followed in action. The chief situations arise, however, from the chances which John Duck has of getting £100, for that sum will ensure him the hand of Patty, from her mother's consent, otherwise denied. In seizing on these chances, he involves himself in all sorts of scrapes, principally whilst tracking a proscribed Jacobite Major Murray (Mr. Howe), a rival for Sir Richard Broughton (Mr. Stewart), in the affections of a Lady Somerford, who has prevailed on Sir Richard to procure his pardon. This he has done, and keeps the document in his pocket, and, towards the end of the piece, it is about to burn it, by each of the parties whom John Duck has been taken up himself as a Jacobite conspirator, and made an endeavour to escape by the chimney, drops down into the fireplace, saves the pardon from the flames, and gives it to the Major. The ingenuity of this

NATIONAL SPORTS.

Oh, pardon my digression, or, at least,
Peruse The always with a general end
That I digest, like grass before a feast:
For, like an aged ass or tiresome friend,
A rigid guard as or a zealous priest,
My muse, by exhortation, means to assail
All people, at all times, and in most places,
Which puts my Pegasus to those grave paces.—BYRON

THE last of the metropolitan race meetings is that held on Moulsey Hurst; where, as things have come to the worst, let us hope the old saying may be fulfilled, and that, next year, they will mend. Well, Hampton Races fell upon last week, and the present was a pause or a "pull," to speak in the vernacular, wherein turtles might get their breath for more dashing enterprise. Presently there will be issues of account—further afield: for the nonce, a take-leave to dabble in theories: to digress—with the best intentions—despite the fate which is said to attend them

The day after to-morrow there will be held at Ryde, Isle of Wight, a Special General Meeting of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club. Pressing letters have been written to the members to attend on that occasion, when a question is to be mooted touching the method of electing the officers—in future. We allude to this, because matter of a similar kind has moved a strife among the members of a sister society at Cowes—which, probably, has given the coup de grace to its cordiality, if not to its existence. A spirit has long been at work in the R. Y. S. that augured evil for its fortunes. Let the Victoria Club be warned by the example: thus extracting good out of mischance. It has the appointment of Vice-Commodore to fill up, and but one candidate in the field—Mr. G. H. Ackers. That gentleman is also a member of the Squadron, and a very spirited patron of yachting, both as a builder and sailor. The practice of handicapping wager vessels has very generally attained under his countenance and direction.

From racing by water we pass to the like pursuit ashore, and to a portion of its present economy, which is of modern introduction. We speak of Sweeps and Lotteries, that now prevail in every town and village from the Land's End to John o' Groats. Within a few years, from being a contrivance for speculating in gloves and half-crowns among social parties after their pic-nic on a race-course, they have grown into one of the most extensive channels for gambling probably ever known in this country. The advertising columns of several journals are almost wholly occupied with announcements of these schemes, in which the prizes range from tens to thousands of pounds sterling. From this taste, or mania, has sprung such fruit as might be expected. Ruin and its consequences have followed. Indulgence in the fatal facility for wild gaining afforded by the general existence of this system. We point it out to public observance, however, not because of what it has occasioned already, but to stay the vast amount of moral mischief, as well as natural ill, that must come of it, if suffered to continue, and spread a popular pestilence. In their legitimate character, our National Sports are of honest purpose, and wholesome results. They serve to draw men together in good fellowship, and to promote goodwill and right understanding. Turned clean from their true object, of consequence, the very reverse ensues. Go, mark a "Sweep" drawn, and what are the feelings which wait upon the process: envy, hatred, and malice are its attendant spirits. In gambling, there are two evils—

The one is winning and the other losing.

The first is infinitely the most dangerous. We laugh at the logic of the Irishman, who fell into life and dissipated habits after winning £10,000 in the lottery; but consoled himself with the reflection that he had not drawn a £20,000 prize, or he should have been ruined outright. Nevertheless, his philosophy was sound. More adventurers will rue drawing a winner in a racing sweep than those who never had a turn of luck. Thus much in the vein of exhortation: a word more pleasant by way of epilogue.

The great modern reformer, the public press, has taken these novel nuisances in hand, and the end must crown all to the social advantage. The tide of flood on which sweeps and lotteries floated to fortune has turned—henceforth their career will be "bound in shallows"—and their ventures lost. They may haply find an advocate still, but the general hand is against them. The leading journals have taken up the question, and the right will prevail. They have denounced the practice as mischievous, immoral, illegal. It is their desire and determination—

To mend
All people at all times and in most places,
That puts their Pegasus to these grave paces.

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—Speculation, although far from being so heavy as it was before "Sweeps" became the rage, continues to take a very comprehensive range, so that if we have not an opportunity of dwelling upon the importance of the business transacted this afternoon, we are enabled to make a formidable display in the way of quotation.

NORTHUMBERLAND PLATE

5 to 1 agst The Conjuror (t)	12 to 1 agst Examiner	12 to 1 agst The Best of Three
8 to 1 —— Crossjayday	13 to 1 —— Inheritress	14 to 1 —— Miss Sarah
8 to 1 —— Grimston	13 to 1 —— Eryx

GOODWOOD STAKES

17 to 1 agst Vampyre	33 to 1 agst Miss Ella (t)	40 to 1 agst Kimbleswarth (t)
25 to 1 —— The Questionable	35 to 1 —— Queen Mary (t)	40 to 1 —— Morpeth
30 to 1 —— Dulcet	40 to 1 —— Alcibiades (t)	40 to 1 —— Tourmenter
30 to 1 —— Marlexx	50 to 1 —— Zigzis (t)	55 to 1 —— Emigrant

GOODWOOD CUP.

3 to 1 agst The Hero (t)	12 to 1 agst Mendicant	16 to 1 agst Burgundy
7 to 1 —— Wolfdog	13 to 1 —— Fitz Emilius (t)	20 to 1 —— Sanbeam

ST. LEGER

3 to 1 agst Cossack (t)	20 to 1 agst Black Dwarf	30 to 1 agst The Farmer's
6 to 1 —— Van Tromp	20 to 1 —— Lanrastone (t)	Daughter
	40 to 1 agst Coningsby

DERBY

13 to 1 agst Assault (t)	25 to 1 agst Mr. Despersadum	37 to 1 agst Surplice (t)
30 to 1 —— Flatcatcher (t)	(t)	45 to 1 —— The Shroff

SUTTON PARK RACES.—TUESDAY.

The Stand Handicap of 10 sovs each, 5 ft, and 3 only if declared, with 30 added, the second to save his stake. Heats, once round and a dis.

Mr. Barrow's Hector, 5 yrs, 8st	.. .. ..	..	1 1
Mr. Wesley's Elmina, 4 yrs, 6st 8lb	.. .. ..	..	2 2
Mr. Messer's Tit Bit, 4 yrs, 8st	.. .. ..	..	3 3

The Edgbaston Plate was won by Idcleia, in four heats, beating eight others.

The Birmingham Stakes of 25 sovs each, 15 ft, and 5 only if declared, with 200 added, the second to receive £50. Twice round and a dis.

Lord Chesterfield's Lady Godiva, 5 yrs, 8st 10lb	.. ..	(Nat) 1
Mr. Davis's The Wizard, aged, 7st	.. ..	2
Fitzwilliam, 7st 9lb, Roderic, 7st 7lb, and Alliance, 7st 7lb, also ran.

BIDDURY CLUB MEETING. WEDNESDAY.

The Biddury Stakes of 20 sovs each, 10 ft, and 5 only if declared, &c. Two miles.

Mr. Waller's Columbus, 5 yrs, 10st 12lb	.. ..	(Capt. Peizel) 1
Mr. Clifton's Valiant, 5 yrs, 10st 12lb	.. ..	(Capt. Brooke) 2

The Champagne Stakes of 30 sovs each, h ft, for two-year-olds. Last three quarters of new mile. (11 Subs.)

Mr. Payne's Woodcrait	.. ..	(Nat) 1
Lord Calcraft's Skylock	.. ..	(Marlow) 2
Mr. Drinkald's Good Boy	.. ..	(F. Butler) 3

Even on Woodcraft. Won by a length.

Handicap Plate of £50. One mile.

Mr. W. Etwall's Longstock, carried 10st 6lb	.. ..	(Mr. Evans) 1
Mr. J. Bayly's Satyr, 5 yrs, 11st 2lb	.. ..	(Owner) 2

Sweepstakes of 50 sovs, h. ft. New mile. (16 Subs.)

Duke of Richmond's Red Hart, 8st 4lb	.. .. ..	(Nat) 1
Mr. Gully's Tantivy, 8st 7lb	.. .. ..	(A. Day) 2

Won in a canter.

A Free Plate of £50 for all ages. Three-quarters of a mile.

Mr. Elwes' Messenger, 4 yrs	.. .. ..	(Owner) 1
Mr. W. Etwall's Longstock, 5 yrs	.. .. ..	2

Several others ran. Won by a length.

FOUR-OARED CUTTER MATCH BETWEEN THE ST. GEORGE'S AND THETIS CLUBS

The great boat race between the St. George's and Thetis Clubs came off on Monday, and was attended most numerously by the leading London clubs.

ST. GEORGE'S				(White, with red cross)	1.
	st. lb.				st. lb.
W. Coulthard, stroke	11 8	2. J. R. Lane		.. ..	10 12
3. S. Wallace	12 8	1. W. S. Falle		.. ..	9 4
E. Whyte, steerer		Dist. Only.
THE THETIS..				(Purple)	2.
	st. lb.				st. lb.
G. Porter, stroke	11 9	2. Murray..		.. ..	10 8
3. Byrde	10 11	1. J. Robinson			9 10
		Barchets, steerer.

The distance contested was from Chiswick Eyot down to Putney Bridge, and at a little after two the crews passed the first stations, St. George's, who had won the choice, taking the Surrey shore, which gave them a decided advantage. Mr. Jenkins, of the Leander Club, the twice champion of the Thames as winner of the silver sculls, officiated as umpire; and, both parties being ready, a capital start was effected at a few minutes after five. Both went away beautifully at the same moment, but in the course of a minute the St. George's had obtained a decided lead. The Thetis laboured gallantly to overtake their opponents, and gained slightly upon them when near Hammersmith Bridge, through which the St. George's boat passed two lengths in advance. The Thetis began to ship water shortly after passing through Hammersmith Bridge, and continued to take in a great deal all the way down. Had she taken a little more in there is every probability that she would have been swamped. The St. George's retained the lead throughout, and won easily by eight or ten lengths. Betting was 5 and 6 to 4 on the winners.

ROYAL MERSEY YACHT CLUB.—The first sailing match for the season, in connexion with this club, took place on Wednesday, and proved a brilliant affair. Eight yachts were entered. The Echo, of 34 tons (a new iron yacht), the property of Mr. F. Cato; Seabird, 30 tons, Mr. H. Melling; Empress, 25 tons, Mr. E Rodgett; Monona, 17 tons, Mr. J. Rylands; Jessette, 15 tons, Mr. R. Brocon; Hebe, 15 tons, Mr. J. Cross; Mallard, 12 tons, Mr. J. D. Maddock; Ichtha, 9 tons, Mr. J. Edward. After a fine contest, the first class prize was won by the Empress, the second class by the Echo, and the third class by the Hebe.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS

"T. B." Liverpool. It is your solution of 107 which is erroneous: ours is correct.

"J. J." Glasgow.—No. 157 seems impracticable, but we have no means at hand to refer to the original of that or No. 158. You may furnish us with the right solution of No. 164.

"S. S. W."—1. No such match as that first mentioned was ever projected, at least to our knowledge. 2. The number of games played in the Match with France was twenty-one, of which the English player won eleven, the Frenchman six, and the remainder were drawn. We shall be glad to hear there is a prospect of another contest, but we are not aware that anything definitive has been settled. 3. We cannot say

"A. D. A."—Your solution of the Indian Problem is correct. The author is not known.

"M. P." At no period in the history of Chess were so many facilities afforded for the acquirement of the game. Independently of the practical experience obtainable at the Clubs and public rooms devoted to Chess playing, and the theoretical knowledge to be acquired from the periodicals connected with it, scarcely a month elapses without the appearance of some Treatise or explanatory work upon the subject. It is a curious fact that, at this moment, no less than three productions on the Game are on the eve of issuing from the press, viz.:—The "Handbook," published by Mr. Bohn, in England; an Abridgment of Bilguer's "Handbook," from the pen of Von Il. der Lasa, printing at Berlin; and a Treatise by Mr. Petroff, to be published at St. Petersburg.

"B B." Melbourne. The solution you require shall be given in the ensuing Number. For the much-talked of Indian Problem, we must refer you to the wrapper of any monthly part of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle."

"F. B." Leeds, should forward the solution he suggests.

"Gos."—The solution to the ingenious Enigma No. 76 is—1. R to K 6th: 2. R to K 4th; 3. P to K 4th—mate. Enigma No. 124 you have not described correctly. On referring to our Paper, you will find the White Knight at King's 4*th. The solution is* 1. Kt to Q 8th; 2. K B to Q Kt 5th: 3. B to Q B 3rd; 4. B mates. Are not both of these extremely clever?

"Occa."—"A Member of the George's"—"R N V" "M. a y" The "Handbook" is now publishing, in advance. You must apply to your booksellers.

"T. W.," Liverpool, and "D. C." Glasgow.—Received with thanks.

Solutions by "G. A. H.," "Sopracenta," "G. P.," "J. D.," "Miles," "Goss," "E. B." Melbourne; "P. T. M.," Buffalo; "H. G." "P. P.," "R." are correct

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM, No. 177.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
1. Q to K Kt 6th (ch)	B takes Q	4. Kt takes K B	Q takes Kt or *
2. Kt to K B 5th	R takes R (best)	5. Kt to K 3rd (ch)	K to K B 4th
3. B to K 2nd (ch)	R interposes	6. B takes R—checkmate

* 4. Q to K B's 3rd
Q takes Kt

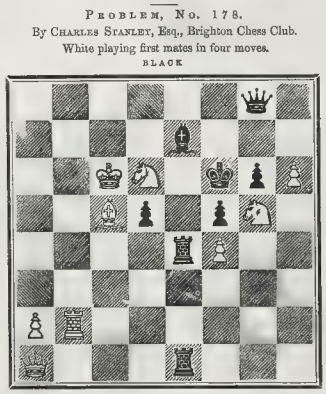
3. Kt takes K P (ch)
6. B takes R—mate

PROBLEM, No. 178.

By CHARLES STANLEY, Esq., Brighton Chess Club.

White playing first mates in four moves.

BLACK



WHITE.

GAME BY CORRESPONDENCE, JUST TERMINATED, BETWEEN STOCKHOLM AND UPSALA.

(The moves appeared originally in the Stockholm Aftonblatt evening paper.)

BLACK (Stockholm).	WHITE (Upsala).	BLACK (Stockholm).	WHITE (Upsala).
1. K P two	K P two	13. Q B to R 3rd	Q takes K P
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	14. Kt to Q 2nd	Q P two
3. B to Q B 4th	B to Q B 4th	15. Q R to K sq	Q P takes B
4. Q Kt P two	B takes Q Kt P	16. Kt takes P	Q to Q 4th
5. Q B P one	B to Q R 4th	17. B takes Kt	R to K sq
6. Castles	B to Q Kt 3rd	18. Kt takes B	Q takes Q
7. Q P two	Q to K 2nd	19. R P takes Q	R P takes Kt
8. P takes K P	Q Kt takes P	20. B to Q 6th	B to K 3rd
9. K Kt takes Kt	Q takes Kt	21. B takes Q B P	Q R to Q B sq
10. Q to Q Kt 3rd	Q to K R 4th	22. B takes P	Q R takes P
11. K P one sq	K to K B 2nd	23. Q Kt P one sq
12. K to R sq	Castles	Drawn Game.

CONSULTATION GAME, PLAYED IN THE BERLIN CHESS-CLUB, BY HERR MULLER AGAINST HERRN WOLF AND V. D. GOLTZ.

WHITE (Herr M.)	BLACK (The Allies.)	WHITE (Herr M.)	BLACK (The Allies.)
1. Q P two	K P P two	28. Kt takes B (i)	K takes Kt.
2. Q B P two	K Kt to B 3rd	29. Kt to Q B 3d	Kt to Q B 3d (k)
3. Q Kt to B 3rd	K P one	30. Q R P one (l)	B to Q Kt 2d
4. Q B to K Kt 5th	Q P one	31. B takes B (m)	R takes B
5. K P one	K B to K 2nd	32. R to Q 2d	R to Q B sq (n)
6. B takes Kt	B takes B	33. Kt to Q Kt 5th (o)	R to Q 2d
7. K B P two	Q Kt P one	34. Q Kt P one	Q R P one
8. K to K 2nd	Q P one	35. P takes R	P takes P
9. K B to his 3rd	Q R to his 2nd	36. R to K Kt 2d	K R P one
10. K Kt to K 2nd	Q Kt to Q 2nd (a)	37. K R P one	B takes Q R P (p)
11. Q to her R 5th	Q R P one (b)	38. P takes P	P to K B 6th
12. Q Kt to his 5th	Q R to his 3rd	39. R to Q B sq	R to Q R 4th
13. Castles	Castles	40. K R to Q Kt 2d	K P one (q)
14. K B to Q sq (c)	K Kt P two (d)	41. Q R to Q B 6th	P takes P
15. K Kt P two	B to K Kt 2nd	42. Kt takes Kt P (r)	R takes Q RP
16. Q to her B 2nd	P takes K Kt P	43. Kt to K B 5th (ch)	K to Kt 3d
17. B to K 4th	K P P one	44. K B takes Q Kt P	R to Q R 5th (s)
18. P takes K Kt P	Q takes P	45. Kt takes Q P	Kt to Q Kt 5th
19. Kt to K B 4th	Q to K R 3rd (e)	46. Q R to Q B 8th	R to Q R 3rd
20. Q Kt takes Q B P (f)	Q R to his 2nd	47. R takes R	Kt takes R
21. Q Kt to his 5th	Q R to Q 2nd	48. K P one	R to K 2d
22. B to Q B 3rd	Q R to Q sq	49. R to K 8th	R takes R
23. Q to K Kt 6th	Q takes Q (g)	50. R takes R	Kt to Q B 4th
24. Kt takes Q	K R to B 2nd	51. K to R 2d	K to Kt 4th
25. P to K 4th (h)	K to his R 2nd	52. K to R 3d	Kt to K 3d
26. Kt to K B 4th	Kt to K sq	53. Kt to K B 6th	Kt to Q B 5th (ch)
27. Kt to K R 5th	Kt to Q B 2d	54. K to R 2d	Kt to K Kt 3d
		And the game was resigned as drawn.

(a) B to Q 2nd would have been a better move.

(b) The only way to save the Knight.

(c) White's object was to occupy the centre of the board with his two Rooks, but it would have been better to play the Q B P up before Q Kt move.

(d) Black is so confined, that he can only develop his game by an attack on this side.

(e) White has nothing to apprehend from this attack, as Black's Q R and Q B cannot be brought into action.

(f) With the view of exchanging Queens, and not to win the King's Pawn and Rook for the Kt, by the taking K P next move—this would cause the immediate loss of the game.

(g) The best move.

(h) Black is now in a very confined position: he must strive to prevent the advance of his adversary's centre Pawns, and must particularly avoid exchanging both Rooks.

(i) White loses this Bishop, and thereby, it might become dangerous.

(k) Q R to Q B 3rd would also have been a good move.

(l) Better than Q Kt to K 4th, to which move Black would have been able to break up his centre Pawns if White took Q Kt P.

(m) If White had played Q Kt P one, Black would have played K P one. Q Kt might also have played with advantage to Q B sq.

(n) A bad move, by which the Q B occupies the open file of the Q B 2nd.

(o) The only chance of drawing the game.

(p) Kt takes P at Q 6th would have been stronger, but Black might still have rendered the advanced P troublesome.

(q) Black, who only strives to win the White Pawn for his Knight, which is quite inactive, saves the game by it. If White took the Kt he could not, after losing his Pawns, expect to win with two Rooks and a Kt against two Rooks.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

(HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED.)

No. 170. By Mr. WOODWARD, of Liverpool.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q Kt 2nd	K at Q 5th	B at K B sq.
R at K 8th		B at K B 6th

White playing first mates in two moves.

No. 171.—By Mr. BODEN, of Hull.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q B 3rd	K at Q 3rd	Kt at K 6th	Kt at K B 4th
R at Q Kt 8th	R at K R 3rd	P at Q Kt 2nd	P at K Kt 8th
B at Q 7th	B at Q Kt 2nd

White to play and mate in three moves.

No 172.—By Mr. CLARK.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at his 6th	K at his sq	Ps at K Kt 6th and
R at Q Kt 3rd	R at K R sq	Q 4th.
B at Q Kt 6th

White to play and mate in four moves.

KING STEPHEN'S OATH.

(BY ANASTATIUS GRÜN.)

(King Stephen was the great founder of the Hungarian Monarchy; he was contemporary with our Edward the Confessor. The Emperors of Austria still repeat his oath on their Coronation; it is the contrast between the hatred of Charters which the German Rulers now exhibit, and the free spirit of the old race whose sceptres they have inherited, which Grün wishes to expose.)

Hark! the Bells of Weissenburg ring blithely through the morning air,—
Now the peal has sunk in silence—they have crown'd the Monarch there;
See! he comes from the cathedral, bright his robes with gold and gem,
In his hand the sword of Empire, on his head the diadem.

Angels wrought that crown of splendour, so the pious legend says,
From the ruby's crimson lustre, from the diamond's starry rays;
But a common smith at Dobschan, plying there his daily trade,
Smote with hammer on the anvil, till he forged that battle blade.

A long procession passeth forth to where a rising hill is spread,
With carpets coloured of the hues the people love—green, white, and red; *
There the aged Chancellor waiteth, bearing proudly in his hand
The purple cushion with the Charter of the Kingdom and the Land.

And round him gather'd rank on rank, behold the men of Hungary;
Warriors stern and bearded magnates, all the nation's chivalry,
Bishops with the stole and crosier, mitred Abbots, all are there,
And the Empire's standard-bearer—free the banner floats and fair.

Proudly up the hill advancing, rides the King, that nation's Lord;
To East and West, and North and South, he waves aloft his battle sword.
Then pausing for a moment, looked upon the mass beneath him spread,
Then raised his hand towards the sky and to the silent thousands said:

"Hail my people! hail and listen! from my Chancellor's hand receive,
The Charter that your Monarch gives you, 'tis a gift of love believe;
With will enforced and heart in unison, freedom I on all bestow,
And that Law to which obedient I, its first of subjects, bow.

"I swear by yon Eternal Heaven, that e'en in storm its blessing brings;
I swear it by my kingly heart, where e'en with wrath affection springs;
Ne'er to govern like a despot—but by Law and Rights to rule,
Princes are not always sages, never is the Law a fool!

"And by that Heaven I'll keep this Charter, ever sacred, whole, and true,
Never at my fancy change it, or interpret it anew;
If from out the stately fabric, look'd by time a stone should fall,
Yet it shall not wholly perish, nor be wreck'd and shattered all.

"God forbid I e'er should lead you, to the battle's purple plain,
In civil strife, whose fends would mark our annals like the hand of Cain;
Our annals pure and bright, but stained one day with brother's blood fall there,
No fountain's source, no falling tears, can ever wash it white and fair.

"I swear to keep untouched, unstained, the honour of your Land and Race,
Bright as a Warrior keeps his arms, pure as a Priest the holy Place!
A nation's weal is like yon plain, where plenty pours her corn and wine,
Its honour is this azure arch, where stars in golden glory shine.

"I swear to counsel wise and just, a willing heart and ear to lend;
I ne'er will chain the free-born word, though poor and weak that counsel send;
Not always where they most are sought, within the Royal gardens bound,
But on the wild and lonely heath, the fairest roses oft are found.

"Wisely will I use your treasure, none to waste and much to spare,
For the widow's tear bedews it, and the peasant's sweat is there;
How can a King in festal pride rejoice to see the goblet pass,
When he has thrown his brightest pearl—his people's love—into the glass?"

Soon died the gentle summer's breeze that heard the Monarch's oath that day,
And o'er that little grass-clad hill dark centuries have roll'd away;
Those iron ranks of bearded men, the bulwarks of a nation's trust,
Are seen no more; long, long ago, they sank to ashes and to dust.

But still at Ofen they preserve King Stephen's mantle, crown, and sword;
Arm'd sentries in the Castle, keep above the relics watch and ward,
And still when thro' a King mortal, robe, sword, and crown are worn again,
Alas! that Stephen's spirit too, the watchers could not there retain!

The people see his mantle still, to wish his heart beneath its fold;
His sword is war'd, and ah! they sigh, could Stephen's hand the hilt but hold!
His crown yet shines—but binds no more with gems and gold a Stephen's brow,
And when his oath is heard they ask, "will it be kept save now?"

LEW. FILMORE.

THE CAXTON MONUMENT.

On Saturday, (as we announced in our last,) a meeting was held at the House of the Society of Arts, in the Adelphi, for promoting the erection of a Monument to William Caxton, the earliest English printer; and to commemorate the introduction of Printing into England.

The room was filled in every part, and among those present were the Marquis of Northampton, the Dean of Westminster, Sir John Boileau, Mr. Bancroft, Hon. Mr. Stapylton, Mr. Macready, Mr. Maclise, R.A., Mr. Uwins, R.A., Mr. T. Longman, Mr. Rivington, Rev. Mr. Hunter, Mr. Amyott, Mr. J. Murray, Mr. J. Forster, Jun. Scott Russell, Mr. Lyell, Rev. H. H. Milman, Alderman Wood, Mr. J. S. Buckingham, Mr. E. H. Bailey, Dr. Cuming, Dr. Nuttall, LL.D., Mr. J. C. Hall, Mr. Charles Barry, Mr. Jerdan, Mr. Murray, Mr. Close, Mr. Clamp.

At half-past two o'clock, on the motion of the Rev. Mr. Milman, the chair was taken by Lord Morpeth, M.P., amid loud cheers. His Lordship, in an eloquent address, drew a vivid picture of the career of Caxton, and the humanizing influences of his art, and concluded his speech amid tumultuous plaudits, by recommending the proposed site o the monument, (at Westminster,) as eminently appropriate.

The Dean of Westminster then proposed the first resolution:—"That it is desirable to raise some national testimonial to commemorate the introduction of printing into England, and in honour of William Caxton, the earliest of English printers." The resolution was seconded by Mr. John Murray, and carried unanimously.

Mr. Bancroft moved the second resolution, "That the proper site for any work of art, commemorative of the introduction of printing into England, and in honour of William Caxton, would be at the west front of Westminster Abbey, at the end of the new street." He passed upon the services of Caxton a glowing eulogium, and dwelt upon the fitness of the proposed site. The Rev. Mr. Milman seconded the resolution, which was unanimously adopted.

The Rev. Joshua Hunter proposed the third resolution, which, when somewhat amended, at the suggestion of Mr. Jerdan and Mr. Buckingham, was to the effect, "That a committee of upwards of seventy members and gentlemen be chosen; and, as a Sub-Committee, to determine the composition of the work of art:—Charles Barry, Esq., R.A., the Rev. H. H. Milman, William Etty, Esq., R.A., Sir R. Westmacott, R.A., and the Dean of Westminster."

The resolution, as it originally stood, vested in the Sub-Committee the determination of the nature, size, and details of the work of art; but this was strongly objected to, and the remodelling of the resolution to the form in which the meeting adopted it was the result of the opposition.

Mr. Scott Russell proposed, and Mr. Uwins seconded a resolution, for raising public subscriptions for the proposed monument by acclamation, and carried unanimously.

The thanks of the meeting were then voted to Lord Morpeth for his conduct in the chair; and, a suitable acknowledgment having been made by the noble President, the meeting separated.

We shall have much pleasure in recording, from time to time, the progress of this very interesting object; a feeling of gratitude in which the whole civilised world must participate.

A Correspondent suggests that we call upon every man, woman, and child, who can read—from the Universities down to the Ragged Schools, to subscribe if only the smallest coin: then, (adds he), we shall have a really national monument

* The national colours of Hungary.

VISIT OF THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE TO WOOLWICH.

THE FOUNDRY AND BLAST.

A visit of inspection to Woolwich,

"Where noble ships have birth,
"And wars dread engines lie in store,"

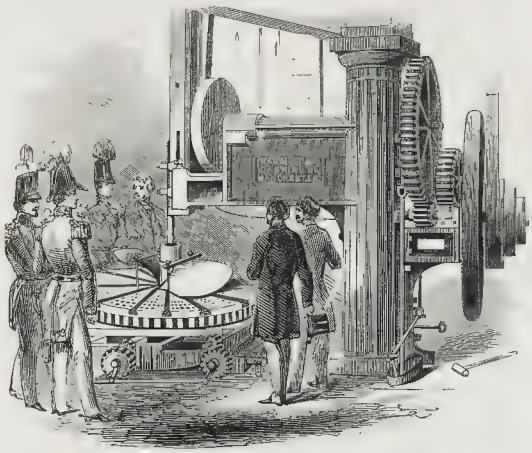
has long been a favourite sight for Royal and noble visitors from other lands The curiosity is rational enough; for, about the instruments of what Burke calls "the mystery of murder," there has ever been a sort of international ingenuity, which introduces us to a vast variety of industry and system.

The Dockyard, Arsenal, Rotunda, &c., at Woolwich, are, probably, familiar to most of our readers by visit, or through the guide-books, in the most sensible of which it is well remarked that on entering the Arsenal, "the spectator is struck by the silence which seems to reign around him, interrupted by the not unmusical hum of an ever-working steam-engine, and the perpetual click, click, click, of light hammers, coming from the distant field of shot and shells; the slow sentry pacing up and down, with vigilant eye on each visitor as he passes; the long gravelled esplanade; the flowing river, closing the view, studded with many a slowly moving sail;" and the sadder scene of convict gangs at work, in their prison clothes.

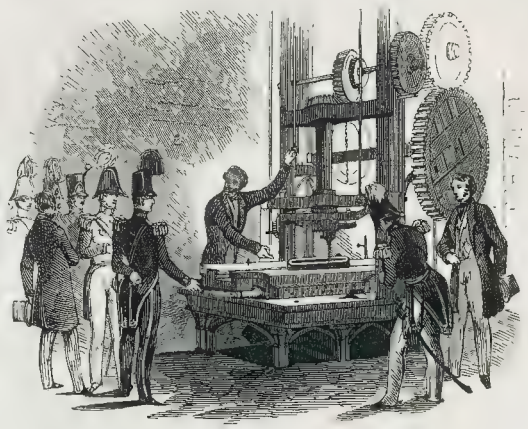
Such are the general characteristics of the scene; but, on the occasion we are about to record, the Visit of the Grand Duke Constantine, yesterday week—there was considerable official bustle. His Imperial Highness and the Hereditary Grand Duke of Saxe Weimar, accompanied by Vice-Admiral Lütke, Rear-Admiral Count Heyden, Baron Friedricks, Captain Loutkowsky, Count Orloff, Dr. Hamrowitch, and Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. C. Grey, arrived at the Dockyard in three carriages with four horses each. Captain Schwabe, of the Russian navy, and M. de Berg, Secretary to the Embassy, were also in attendance on the Grand Duke, who was received, on alighting from his carriage, by Commodore Sir Gordon Bremer, K.C.B. and K.C.H.; Captain Hall, of the Dragon steam-frigate; Commander Ryder, of the Vixen steam-sloop; Lieutenant Fowler, Flag Lieutenant; Mr. Lang, Master Shipwright; and Mr. Atherton, Chief Engineer.

THE FACTORY.

His Imperial Highness first proceeded to the Fitting-Room of the Factory Department, where Mr. Atherton explained to the Grand Duke the various descriptions of machinery at work in preparing the different parts of marine steam-engines. One of the Machines for Planing Iron in an oval form, or in square lengths with circular ends, appeared to attract his Imperial Highness' attention so much, that, after he had visited the other branches of the department, he returned to it again to witness its operation in planing a part of a steam-engine two feet long, with circular ends about six inches in breadth from the centre of the circular part. The machinery is self-acting, and performs the operation of planing iron in a straight line on both sides: it describes the circular part at each end by the same continuous motion, in a manner which it would be impossible to attain by the simple manual labour of the most experienced art san The turning and finishing brass screw propellers also appeared to interest his Highness in this department. We have engraved the Machine for this purpose, as well as the Planing Machine.



MACHINE FOR CUTTING THE INTERIOR OF SCREW PROPELLERS.



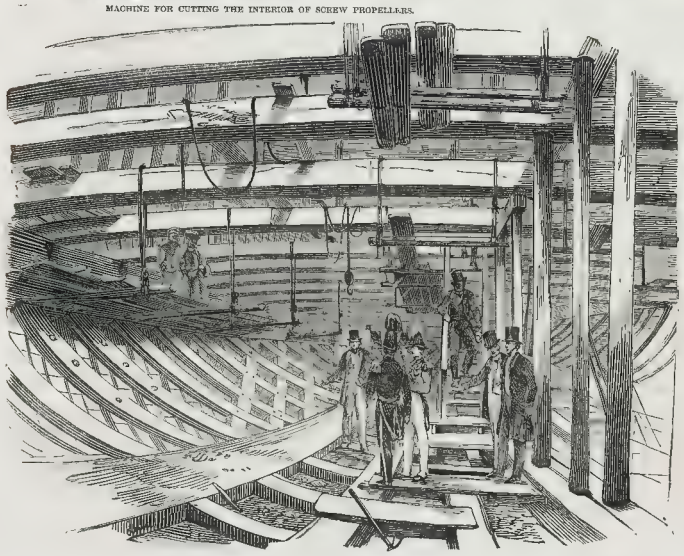
MACHINE FOR PLANING.

THE SMITHS' SHOP, AND FOUNDRY.

Next were visited the new spacious Blacksmiths' Shop, where forty-four fires were at work; though, not a particle of smoke was to be seen, so perfect is the ventilation. The fires are supplied with a powerful draught by means of a fanner, driven by a steam-engine, and the draught can be regulated with the greatest nicety, by a very simple guide, according to the strength of the fire required. The same fanner supplies a most powerful draught of air for melting the iron in the furnaces of the Foundry; and his Imperial Highness, after feeling the strength of the current of air himself, beckoned some of the members of his suite, who had not witnessed its power, to cross to the place where he was standing, and the power of the current of air was so great as nearly to lift them from the ground.

The smoke from the working fires, we should here explain, is conveyed by invisible pipes to the large chimney-shaft of the Foundry (at some distance from the Blacksmiths' Shop), and there it escapes at the mouth of the shaft, at an elevation of 10 feet higher than "the Monument on Fish-street Hill."

Our artist has represented the Foundry and Blast.



THE HOLD OF "THE ROYAL ALBERT."

THE DOCKYARD.

The Grand Duke, on leaving the Factory Department, went round the Basin, and witnessed the Hydra steam-vessel in King William IV. dock, and the Dragon steam-frigate in the basin. Under the shears, alongside the Dragon, was one of Porter's anchors, of five tons one quarter weight, about to be put on board the Diligence transport-ship, for conveyance to the Queen, first-rate ship of war, at Portsmouth. His Imperial Highness examined the anchor for some time, and its properties and advantages were explained to the Grand Duke and Admiral Lütke, who appeared much interested with it.

THE "ROYAL ALBERT."

His Imperial Highness was then conducted by Mr. Lang, Master Shipwright, to the Royal Albert, 120-gun ship, and went under and round the whole of her bottom and into the interior, to witness the strong manner in which this splendid vessel is put together. The Grand Duke remained nearly three-quarters of an hour in the interior, examining her from various points to view her symmetry, and descending to the hold to see the way in which she is strengthened by diagonal timbers, and the strong massive knees of iron supporting the orlop deck.

We have engraved a portion of the interior of this noble ship.

DEJEUNER AT THE MESS-ROOM.

At one o'clock P.M., the Grand Duke left the Dockyard on horseback, accompanied by his suite, and Sir Roderick Murchison, Lieutenant-Colonel Anderson Royal Horse Artillery, and a numerous staff of officers, for the garrison, and was received at the north-west gate by Field-Marshal the Duke of Wellington

VISIT OF THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE TO WOOLWICH.

GRAND REVIEW OF THE ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Commander-in-Chief; Field-Marshal the Marquis of Anglesey, Master-General of the Ordnance; Major-General his Royal Highness Prince George of Cambridge, all in military costume; Lieutenant-General Sir Thomas Downman, Commandant of the Garrison; Major-General Sir Hew D. Ross, Deputy Adjutant-General of Artillery; Major-General Parker, C.B., Lieutenant-Governor of the Royal Military Academy; Lieutenant-Colonel Strangways, Lieutenant-Colonel Ward; Major Cuppage, Brigade Major; Captain Fylden, Deputy-Assistant Quartermaster General of Artillery; Lieutenant-Colonel English, Commanding Royal Engineers; and Brigade-Major Sandham, with a numerous staff of officers attached to the garrison. On entering the north-west gate, a Royal salute was fired from a battery of four nine-pounders, and the Grand Duke was accompanied to the Mess-Room, where an elegant déjeûner was served, the band of the Royal Artillery playing on the Parade in front, while the Royal party remained in the Mess-Room. The field battery that fired the Royal salute was under the command of Major Mee, and the guard of honour, consisting of two Lieutenants, three sergeants, and fifty rank and file, under the command of Major James.

THE REVIEW ON WOOLWICH COMMON.

After leaving the Mess-Room, the Grand Duke and the brilliant staff of officers proceeded to the Common, where the troops were drawn up in line, the whole under the command of Colonel Cruttenden; the Royal Horse Artillery under Lieutenant-Colonel Louis; the right wing of the Foot Artillery under Lieutenant-Colonel Willis; the left wing under Lieutenant-Colonel Higgins; and the Field Batteries under Major Cator. The Grand Duke, on arriving on the ground, was received with the usual honours, and then rode down the line in front, and up the rear. On taking his stand at the flag-staff, the troops marched past at slow time; the Royal Horse Artillery afterwards passed at full gallop, and went through the evolutions of a field-day, to the apparent approbation of his Imperial Highness and all who witnessed them. After passing down the front and up the rear of a fine body of recruits drawn up in line without arms, the Grand Duke proceeded to the Repository Grounds and Rotunda, to witness the exercises in that department, and the ancient and modern arms and models in the latter. The time of his Imperial Highness being limited, he proceeded from the Repository Grounds to the Royal Arsenal, and the mortar practice in the marshes was countermanded.

THE ARSENAL AND LABORATORY.

On arriving at the Arsenal, the Grand Duke visited the extensive Dépôt of Stores under the charge of Mr. Joseph Cheetham and Mr. Sparkes, and then entered the Laboratory department. His Imperial Highness had only time to visit the making of percussion-caps, which was shown to the Royal visitors by Major Foster, Firemaster. The finish and rapidity with which they are made are such, that a few boys, by the aid of machinery, complete 72,000 percussion-caps on an average daily. In the boring department of the foundry, his Imperial Highness witnessed the boring and turning at the same time on the outside of a 24-pounder brass howitzer; the mode of finding the centre of guns by machinery; and an ingenious new machine, constructed by the engineer of the establishment, for planing all parts of guns, including those under the trunions which cannot be turned. This machine is self-acting, and was set in operation to-day for the first time, and gave great satisfaction. The Grand Duke witnessed in the boring department two large rollers for pressing powder when in progress of being made, fit for service, each weighing 4½ tons.

His Imperial Highness thanked Lieutenant-Colonel Dundas, C.B., head of the department, and left with Lieutenant-Colonel Gordon, to view the Carriage Department; and immediately after left for town. A Royal salute was fired from the wharf, and the Royal standard was hoisted at the different flag-staffs in the garrison and Royal Arsenal in honour of the Royal visitors. Lord Adolphus Fitzclarence and a brilliant assemblage of spectators were present on the Common during the day.

THE LATE LADY SUSAN PERCY.—The Honourable Lady Elizabeth Susan Percy, who died at Rome on the 7th of April last, has left funded and personal property in England, and within the province of Canterbury, estimated at £90,000. Her Ladyship made her will at Rome, on the 22nd of April, 1845 which was witnessed two days afterwards, and has bequeathed to her faithful man-servant and maid-servant each an annuity of £60, free of duty; and to the Rev. James Hutchinson, whom she appointed one of her executors, but is not acting, the leaves £200 as a mark of esteem. Her brother-in-law, A. M. Drummond, Esq., is alone the acting executor. All the rest and residue of her property she bequeaths to her two nieces, Emily and Eleanor Drummond, to be divided equally between them. It was her Ladyship's wish that, wherever she might die, there to be buried, privately, and not in a vault.

LAUNCHES AT BLACKWALL.—A fine frigate-built ship for the East India trade was launched from Messrs. Green's building-yard, at Blackwall, on Tuesday afternoon. She was named the Sutlej, and is about 1300 tons. A smaller vessel, of about 450 tons, was launched at the same time, to be called the Free Trade. She is to have an auxiliary screw propeller, and is to be employed in conveying cattle from the Continent. She is of rather a handsome form, and floated well.

THE 85TH FOOT.—The Colonelcy of the 85th Foot, vacant by the death of Sir Thomas Pearson, has been conferred upon Lieutenant-General Sir John Wright Guise, Bart., an officer of long standing.

GRAND REVIEW—THE STAFF.

POLICE.

A GERMAN BARONESS COMMITTED FOR ROBBERY.

Fredericks Ange, a handsome looking and fashionably attired native of Germany, was examined, at WESTMINSTER Police Court, on Tuesday, on a charge of stealing ten sovereigns from the residence of Mr. James Thomas Roberts, a shorthand writer.

From the evidence given on that and on a previous occasion it appeared that the prisoner had resided, for the last three weeks, at the house of Mr. Roberts's mother, in Water-street, Blackfriars, and that on an intimacy arose between the prosecutrix and the prisoner, the latter of whom represented herself to her as a German Baroness. The accused called at Mrs. Roberts's residence, 15, Holywell-street, Milbank, on Friday (last week), and, finding that she had an opportunity of knowing that there was a considerable sum of money, in gold and silver, in a cash box, and deposited in a trunk, and manifested considerable desire to know the exact amount, beside which she examined the prosecutrix's bunch of keys, alleging, as a reason for so doing, that she had lost her own, and thought some of Mrs Roberts's keys might fit her locks. At about one on the following day she repeated her visit, and so pressed Mrs. Roberts, who at first declined, but, ultimately, reluctantly consented, to fetch her some ham, as she could procure it so much better than the servant, that she compiled, and was absent about twenty minutes, during which time the prisoner was alone in the apartment. On Mrs. Roberts's return, the prisoner declined to take any of the ham, and invited Mrs. Roberts to take a drive with her round the Regent's park; she went with her, and returned home in two hours and a half, her apartments being during her absence left open, and there being other residents in the house. At a little after nine at night, Mr. Roberts went to the cash-box, and finding that the key would not turn the lock, forced it open, and discovered that ten sovereigns had been extracted. In consequence of his wife communicating the above circumstances to him, and the landlady of the house stating that she had discreetly heard the prisoner go towards the place where the money was deposited, during Mrs Roberts's absence, the prosecutor suspected the prisoner, and immediately repaired to her residence. He asked her for the ten sovereigns, when she replied that she had no ten sovereigns, but that she immediately left the room, counted out ten sovereigns, upon the table, and taking a gold chain and eye-glass and some jewellery from a drawer, offered them to the prosecutor, and also requested her landlady to lend her eight sovereigns, which, with the two she had, would make £10. She at the same time repeatedly declared that she had no other money than that in her purse, but, upon a minute search, six sovereigns were found between a table and a chair, concealing which, with the two she had, would make the two found in the purse, were all quite new, and in this respect corresponded with the ten stolen from Mr Roberts.

The prisoner's answers to the charge, through an interpreter, was that she was perfectly innocent. She accounted for the possession of the six sovereigns, by stating that Frederick, the head waiter at the Royal Hotel, Blackfriars, had lent her the money, as she was about to start on a journey which might require it. She said she could have no necessity to steal, as she could procure any sum of money she wanted at the Royal Hotel. With respect to the ham, she observed that Mrs. Roberts said she was fond of it, and therefore she had fetched some.

A gentleman from the office of Messrs Wire and Chilly, solicitors, attended on the part of the accused, represented her to be most respectably connected, and to have come to England with a view of showing that, at the time the prisoner offered her the chain, jewels, and money to Mr. Roberts, that she did not clearly understand the nature of his visit, or of the observations made to her. In reply, Robert said that the prisoner perfectly understand him; he spoke to her partly in German, partly in English, by reason for which was that the officer, who was present, might understand what he said to the prisoner. She, at the time of offering the money, said, "Take them, only let me be till to-morrow." Mr. Roberts, in her cross-examination, agreed with her statement that the prisoner could carry on a conversation in tolerably good English, and added that she could read an English book.

Mr. Broderip said he considered it his duty to commit the prisoner to Newgate for trial.

HER MAJESTY'S ACCESSION TO THE THRONE.—The anniversary of her Majesty's accession to the throne falling this year on a Sunday (to-morrow), by one of the rubrics prefixed to the "Form of Prayer, with thanksgiving to Almighty God," for the anniversary of the Queen's accession, is transferred to the following day. It is observed, it is provided that, if that day shall happen to be SUNDAY, the whole office shall be said entirely

ARRANGEMENT OF THE AFFAIRS OF A NOBLE DUKE.—The Globe, which lately had a paragraph announcing that the affairs of a noble Duke were in a very deranged state, says—" We are glad to h.r that a noble Duke, having property in a country near the metropolis, has arranged his affairs to the satisfaction of all parties; in the attainment of which he has been mainly aided by the disinterestedness of the noble Marquis his son."

ROSHERVILLE GARDENS. These beautiful gardens have been very attractive this season when the weather has been fine, and the amusements provided give great satisfaction to the numerous visitors who seek health and recreation in a trip to Gravesend. We think it right to mention, however, that the proprietor practice prevails at these gardens of making people pay extra to witness different portions of the entertainments. The proprietors should be satisfied with the price of admission, and that once paid, the public should be allowed to see all that is to be seen. The extra charges should be "reformed altogether."

THE MARKETS.

LONG EXCHANGE (Friday). Since Monday a very limited quantity of English wheat has been received up to our market, and the few samples of that article here to-day have sold The continuance of wet weather caused some of the holders to demand more money for their good qualities of both red and white, but the trade was very inactive, and where concessions being small, at the late decline in values. Upwards of 12,000 quarters of foreign wheat have arrived this week. We had a large quantity on offer on Monday, very dull sale, at barely stationary prices. In barley next to nothing was doing, and, in some instances, the currencies were lower. Beans and peas of both trade was dull, at late figures. The imports of 33,100 barrels of American flour caused the trade to rule heavy, at barely stationary prices

ARRIVALS.—English: Wheat, 3080; barley, 483; malt, 1606 oats, 90. Irish: Wheat 4097, ——; malt, ——; barley, 12,760; oats, 1,760; barley, 1620, malt, —— oats, 1670 Flour: 2100 sacks, 23 100 barrels.

English. Wheat, Essex and S. ——, ——, ——,

PUBLICATIONS, &c.

The Fifth Edition, 2 vols., 31s., cloth,

BOOK of FAMILY CRESTS and MOTTOS. One Volume, comprising a Cyclopædia of Names, of nearly every Family in the Kingdom, &c.; and the other, upwards of 4,000 Engravings, &c. "No wonder the Book is a favourite."—Spectator. WARRINGTON, Publisher, 18, New Bridge-street.

The 73rd Year, and 14th Edition, improved, with a Chapter on Heraldic Architecture, &c.

CLARK'S INTRODUCTION to HERALDRY. Upwards of 1000 Engravings (including the Arms of the Nobility and Gentry), 12mo, 12s. cloth. "Containing everything necessary to a thorough knowledge of the art." Lower's Curiosities. WARRINGTON, Publisher, 18, New Bridge-street.

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS: History of the Succession of the Ancient Roman Emperors, with the Form of their Coins, leading Portraits, their Dates and Mottoes. Is just published by P. WHELAN, Dealer in Ancient Coins, 46, Strand, London, price 1s.; by post, 1s 2d. Coins sent by post, Bought, Catalogued, &c.

MR JAMES'S NEW HISTORICAL ROMANCE
Now Ready at all the Libraries,

RUSSELL; a Tale of the Reign of Charles II. By G. P. R. JAMES, Esq. "Three vols. post 8vo., Price £1 11s 6d
London: SMITH, ELDER, and Co., 65, Cornhill. And may be had, by the same Author,
THE ANSELO von EHRENSTEIN; its Lords Spiritual and Temporal. Its Inhabitants Earthy and Unearthly. 3 vols., price £1 11s. 6d.

THE BOOK OF KNITTED LACE, price 6d., Just Published, contains simple and minute Directions for Knitting Valenciennes Lace, Infinite Lace, Italian Lace, Lyons Lace, Mignonette Lace, Bedford Lace, Point Lace, in the most beautiful patterns and various edgings: now first arranged in a popular form.
London: WILLIAM STRANGE, 21, Paternoster-row.

SUMMER TOURS.—To be Published next week, in small Octavo, Price 6s.,

THE BOOK of SOUTH WALES, the BRISTOL CHANNEL, MONMOUTHSHIRE, and the WYE; a COMPANION and GUIDE to the Railways, Watering-places, Mountain Districts, Picturesque Rivers, Historical Remains, &c., throughout the Southern Division of the Principality. With a Picture of Bristol. By CHARLES FREDERICK CLIFFE. Illustrated with Maps and Engravings, by eminent Artists. London, Hamilton, Adams, and Co.; Bristol: H. Cottan; Llandovery: W. Rees

SWEDISH MELODIES.—The whole of the Swedish Melodies, set sung by Mdlle. Jenny Lind at Her Majesty's Theatre on Thursday Evening, are now published, the original words and English adaptations, the pianoforte arrangements sung by Her Sable accompanist to the celebrated vocalist, at JULLIEN'S Royal Musical Conservatory, 214, Regent-street.

MADEMOISELLE JENNY LIND.—The Public are respectfully acquainted that those compositions issued by various music publishers, bearing the name of Mademoiselle Jenny Lind, and entitled as her songs, have neither been composed by her on any occasion whatever; and the only authorised Edition of the Songs sung by her at the Concerts in the Palaces of Her Majesty the Queen Dowager, Her Majesty's Theatre, and the Nobility's Concerts, are the SWEDISH MELODIES as published by JULLIEN and Co., 214, Regent-street, with the original words and English adaptations; the copyrights of which have been legally assigned to them by Mr. Bishop, of Queen-square.
Royal Musical Conservatory, 214, Regent-street

NEW SONGS.—JENNY LIND'S Vivandière's Song, Splendidly Illustrated with a Portrait of JENNY LIND as Maria, in "La Figlia del Reggimento."——SPORLE'S Last Song, "The Emigrant's Farewell." This is a very pleasing melody, and the accompaniment (ad libitum) will be performed by Mr. Sporle. Either of the above Songs forwarded Postage Free on receipt of twenty-four Postage Stamps.—London: Published by D. WILLIAMS, 30 (Founder-court), Cheapside.

JENNY LIND.—THE PRINCESS, for June, No. 81, Price 2d., contains the Vocal Music to Meyerbeer's Grand Opera of "Robert le Diable" with the French, Italian, and English Words. No. 80 contains Jenny Lind's Portrait, 3 of her Songs, and 3 of Pacchen's, all with the German and English Words. The whole for 2s. No. 77, contains "Mary Blane," and Ten other of the Serenaders' Songs, with the "Mary Blane Quadrilles," for 2s. No. 76 is Comic Negro Pieces. Nos. 78 and 6 contain 16 of Russell's Songs. Either No. p.p., 36 stamps. Pianists Office (first floor), 67, Paternoster-row

THE MOST AMUSING VOLUME OF THE SEASON
Just Published, Price 6s. 6d., cloth, Vol. I. of

THE MAN IN THE MOON.—No family can possibly be without it. Several railway companies have made it compulsory on all their passengers to be provided with at least one copy. Another has consigned it to the Continental authorities as a passport; and in Britain, the real Family Secret, or how to make Home Happy, will be found in every page by those who have the MAN IN THE MOON, edited by ALBERT SMITH and ANGUS B. REACH. The Number for June is Now Ready. Price 6d.
Office, 17, Warwick-lane, and sold by all Booksellers.

TO CRICKETERS AND ANGLERS.

NYREN'S CRICKETER'S GUIDE, corrected by the latest Authorities Laws to June 1847. With "The Cricketers of my Time," by GOWDES CLARK, Esq. Also, WALTON and COTTON'S ANGLER. Illustrated by MAJOR'S 76 Engravings. 12s 6d., crown 8vo., half bound Morocco.
WARRINGTON, Publisher, 18, New Bridge-street.

In a neat Pocket Volume, with Coloured Vignette, price 2s.,

EVERY LADY HER OWN FLOWER GARDENER; a Manual for Ladies Managing their own Gardens By LOUISA JOHNSON
"A pleasant and most comprehensive little volume, which we hope the ladies will have ever seen, and has evidently been written by a good florist. We strongly recommend it to all admirers of Flora this time to cultivate them."—The Sun
London: WM. S. ORR and Co., Amen Corner, and 147, Strand

THE EXHIBITION CATALOGUE OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY, Unabridged, Complete in the public press, by the Editors of the Daily and Weekly Newspapers: containing the entire Critique upon every Picture in the Academy and Suffolk-street Exhibitions, appropriately inserted in the order of the numbers in each Picture. In sale to-day, price 1s.—London: H. BUDGIN, 231, Regent-street, and by all Booksellers in England, Ireland, and Scotland.

DEDICATED BY EXPRESS PERMISSION TO HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN DOWAGER. SECOND AND CHEAPER EDITION.
Now Ready, Complete in One Vol., with Plates, 10s. 6d. bound,

MARY ANN WELLINGTON, THE SOLDIER'S DAUGHTER AND SOLDIER'S WIDOW
By the Author of "Mary Ann Clarke."
Also Just Published, by the same Author,
A FIFTH EDITION OF THE HISTORY OF MARGARET CAVENDISH, a Suffolk Girl. Complete in One Vol., with Illustrations, 10s. 6d. bound
"The biography will be read with interest."—Britannia.
HENRY COLBURN, Publisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

ILLUSTRATED EDITION COMPLETE—Price 2s. 6d.

THE NEW TESTAMENT, WITH SIXTY ILLUSTRATIONS BY EMINENT ARTISTS
A Large Copper-plate View of the Holy Land; and Notes, Historical and Descriptive
"The ILLUSTRATED NEW TESTAMENT contains some fine bold and imaginative sketches. Much taste has been shown in the choice of subjects; and even those which have been as it were, plentifully sketched, are treated with originality of conception."—Daily News
"A publication characterised by the spirit of the well-known proprietors of the 'Illustrated London News,' and destined, we doubt not, to circulate far and wide. The illustrations are characterised by a daring originality, and finished with a boldness and beauty that makes them immensely attractive."—Weekly Chronicle
London: Published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand. Sold by all Booksellers

Just Published, 8vo., cloth, 10s.,

ON PULMONARY CONSUMPTION; and on Bronchial and Laryngeal Diseases; with Remarks on the Principles of Radicism chiefly resorted to by the Consumptive Invalid. By Sir CHARLES SCUDAMORE, M.D., F.R.S., &c. &c.
JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

Just Published, Part II. (to be completed in Five Quarterly Parts, at 2s. each), TREATISE on the ART and ECONOMY of FUEL, Much Enlarged and Re-written, embracing the more recent Views, Facts, and Inconveniences of Chemistry and Statistics. By WILLIAM HENRY ROBERTSON, M.D., Physician to the Buxton Bath Charity.—London: JOHN CHURCHILL, Princes-street, Soho.

HOW TO LIVE, Price 1s.; by post, 1s. 6d.,

WHAT TO EAT, DRINK, and AVOID; addressed to the Nervous and Dyspeptic. By Dr. CHARLES WESTERHOLT, M.D., L.S.A., &c.—SHERWOOD, 23, Paternoster-row; the Author, 19, Argyll-place, Regent street; and all Booksellers

HON. GENERAL MURRAY and DR. HENRY ED WARDS. Price 2d. A Brief but True Statement of the Case between, with sound further Thoughts on the great fact of the Communion of the Incarnate Dead with the Unconscious Living.—London: The full Knowledge of which will be the Outpouring of the Seventh Vial, now generally expected, because immediately succeeding the Turkish Vial. 32 pages demy-8vo., Frontispiece, Coloured Diagram, and Portrait of the Author.

MISERY, the sequel. The writer is also author of several esteemed works, which have obtained the highest approbation of not a few of the most eminent Divines and Critics of the day."—Church of England Journal

COLOURED PHOTOGRAPHIC PORTRAITS by Mr. BEARD, fastened, as taken by the sun,

34, PARLIAMENT-STREET, WESTMINSTER, AND, KING WILLIAM-STREET, CITY.
ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION, REGENT-STREET.
"Mr Beard's Portraits are to be seen at the Polytechnic."—Times

EMPLOYERS REQUIRING CLERKS, Collectors, Travellers, Warehousemen, Shopmen, Porters, Servants, Governesses, Nurses, Assistants, Apprentices, Boys, or Persons of any description, to engage, or Parties wishing for Employment, can find it at the Universal Commercial Institution, 2, Leicester City (Established 1840), or attend at the Institution Warehouse, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street. Gentlemen and Tradesmen may attend their establishments on the Premises, Measuring Lists for one month for 2s 6d; no further fee or gratuity is allowed. Apply to the Secretary, Prospectuses forwarded on receipt of a stamped envelope.

OMNIBUS ADVERTISING.—THE OMNIBUS PUBLICITY COMPANY have REMOVED their OFFICES, to No. 7, CHARING CROSS, and having secured a Number of 200 superior Omnibuses to run daily between the City and the suburbs, under their direction for external and internal Advertising are prepared to exhibit bills on such vehicles at very moderate and advantageous charges. The extent of orders already executed by this Company demonstrates the fact that Omnibus Bills are the most effective and direct channel for advertising the advertisements—long public. Routes, numbers, and prices sent on advertising grants.
J. Charing- cross, 17th June, 1847

THERE is not probably any existing art which confers a more genuine pleasure than that which preserves the likeness of those we love, and endeared to us by the ties of relationship, or by still closer bonds, and we all must be impressed with the gratification derived from possessing a faithful likeness of a parent or valued friend. In order that, when death or distance shall separate us, we may, through the medium of the painter's art, recall to our mind and alight the features and expression of those whose memory we hold most dear. Mr HYMAN DAVIS, PORTRAIT PAINTER, Student of Royal Academy, begs to inform the Nobility and Gentry that he has removed to a more commodious and elegant residence, 39, Percy-street, Rathbone-place, where he will receive visitors from ten till five. Having studied the works of the best masters, more particularly those who have devoted their talents to the art of Portraiture, including the late Sir Thomas Lawrence, Sir M. A. Shee, &c., he can guarantee to those who may favour him with their patronage a true-painted portrait, in addition to a perfect resemblance. Specimens may be seen, and terms ascertained, on application to Mr. DAVIS, 39, Percy-street, Rathbone-place.

ALABASTER, Marble, Bronze, Derbyshire Spar, and other ORNAMENTS for the Drawing-Room, Library, and Dining-Room, consisting of a new and choice Assortment of Vases, Figures, Groups, Candlesticks, Inkstands, Tablets, Busts, &c. Imported and manufactured by J. TENNANT, 149, Strand, near Somerset House. Lists sent on application.

NUMBER ONE, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD. — The Cheapest and Best TEAS are supplied by DAKIN and COMPANY, Tea Merchants, number One, St. Paul's Churchyard.

NEEDLEWORK, BERLIN WOOL, AND TRIMMING BUSINESS.—To be DISPOSED OF, in one of the most leading and respectable thoroughfares of London, a First-rate BUSINESS, with Stock, Fixtures, and Goodwill, now offered from the Executors to MOSES FAUDEL and PHILLIPS, 39 and 40, New-street, Bishopsgate.

WANTED, by a YOUNG WOMAN of 28 years of age, a SITUATION as LADY'S MAID, or as COMPANION to an Invalid Lady. She can dress hair, work under, and is a pleasant companion. Has no objection to travel. Address, A. B., 3, Pleasant-place, Hackney-road.

DANCING TAUGHT, in the most fashionable style, by Mr. WILLIS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden-square. Private Lessons at his Rooms, Private Parties, Balls, and Value a Desire Terms, as all hours, to Ladies and Gentlemen of any age, wishing privacy and expedition. Terms may be had, on application as above.

PIANOFORTES.—The cheapest house in London to purchase these first-rate instruments is at H. TOLKIEN'S, manufacturer, 28, King William-street, London Bridge. It is having completed his extensive alterations, begs his friends to view his splendid stock of PIANOS, which is not to be excelled by any maker, and at about half the price charged by them. H. T.'s much admired Pianos, cash price £35. Old instruments taken in exchange.—TOLKIEN, 28, King William-street, London Bridge

LESSONS in MILLINERY and DRESS-MAKING.—MRS. HOWELL, of 304, Regent-street, two doors from Margaret-street. Sole Inventress of Teaching the Art of Dress-making in a Series of Lessons, undertakes to arrange a pupil to obtain, in a most expeditious manner, a correct knowledge of Cutting, Fitting, and Executing in the most Finished Style, in Plain Needlework, or Dress Making. The terms of this system can be fully ascertained by reference to Pupils Apprentices and Improvers Wanted. Millinery Rooms as usual. Model

RETIRING FROM BUSINESS.—J. RAWLINS respectfully announces that in consequence of his relinquishing business he is OFFERING for SALE at a great reduction his valuable STOCK of FAMILY LINEN and gauze. Superfine Goods, comprising damask table-linen, sheetings, Irish linen, lawns, diapers, huckabacks, glass cloths, napkins, towels, quilts, counterpanes, long quilts, muslins, flannels, blankets, counterpanes, quilts, &c., together with a variety of fancy dresses, silks, &c.—33, Oxford street corner of Holles street.

LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN AND INFANTS' UNDER-CLOTHING Mrs. NORTON'S Show-Room, 72, Strand, is now replete with an unrivalled Assortment of Infants' Hoods and Cloaks, finished off in superior style, which is now offered to the Public at the most reasonable prices. Ready Every Lady will know that the size of a Dress is not, before it is tastily worn by the friction of the ring, which has hitherto been indispensable, on account of the inconvenience attending Bands at Cuffs of all description.
W. and J. SLOANE, 31, Old Bond-street, 13, Royal Exchange; and 94, Fleet-street

LADIES, Send a Post-office Order for Three Shillings, and by Return, Prepaid, you will receive one of the MONTPENSIER OPERA, or Evening Long Cape, in the newest knitted Silk Open Thread and coloured Floss Silk, light as air, will wash, and forms the most elegant Head Dress ever invented. Also, on the receipt of 12 Postage Stamps, is forwarded, Prepaid, the FREE AS MOTION KNITTED Pattern of Lama Shoe, knitted with Evan's Hoar's Head Cotton, and trimmed with Ribbon, is warranted to Wash, gives perfectly free motion, and will wear Three Months in any colour. The Knitting Needles, by POSTMENER, making the Division of the Dress imperceptible. Is also forwarded, on receipt of 9 Postage Stamps, Orders to be made payable at the Borough Branch Office, to E. DRESSER & ROGERS, Berlin Wools, 142, Borough.

WATCHES and CLOCKS.—A Pamphlet, explaining the various constructions, and the advantages of each, with a List of Prices, will be forwarded, gratis, on application, to any part of the country, by CHARLES FRODSHAM, Goldsmiths, Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

ORNAMENTAL CLOCKS.—Recently received from Paris, an unusually large variety of FOURTEEN-DAY CLOCKS, to strike the hours and half-hours, in Ormolu, Marble, and China. The designs are Novelties, and the prices will be a saving of great worth in the sale of LOUIS XIV. The price is four, five, and seven guineas each.
A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, 9, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank.

MUSICAL BOXES.—A large stock of the first quality, playing upwards of 600 airs—overtures, &c., including selections from the favourite operas—"The Bohemian Girl," "Martha," "La Sonnambula," "Norma," &c., &c. A Catalogue of the Music is now published, and may be had gratis, on application to A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill. (Seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

SILVER PLATE, New and Second-hand.—T. COX SAVORY and SONS, Working Goldsmiths and Jewellers, will be happy to be sent post free or applied for by a paid letter. The contents are the prices, weights, and patterns of new and second hand Silver Spoons and Forks, new and second-hand Tea and Coffee Services, Waiters, Silver-edged Fluted Goods, the new plated or white metal Spoons and Forks, Watches, Guards, Coffers, Ladies' and Gent. Dress Chains and Jewellery.
47, GRACECHURCH-STREET, (Seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

SILVER TEA SERVICES, of New Patterns.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Working Silversmiths, 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank, respectfully inform their customers that they have recently finished a new pattern Tea and Coffee Service, which they will be most happy to inspect, and that they are sold at reduced prices from those customary in the trade.

Ubridge Pattern.				Thalia Pattern.
Strong Silver Tea-pot	£10	18	0	Strong Silver Tea-pot	£4	16	0
Ditto Cream-jug	1	14	0	Ditto Cream-ewer	2	2	0
Ditto Coffee-pot	3	10	0	Ditto Coffee-pot	3	10	0
Complete	£56	12	0	Complete	£13	10	0

A variety of new and elegant patterns of 50 Silver Tea and Coffee Services may be seen in the Show-Room, on application, and the Electro-plated Services, consisting of Tea and Coffee Urns, will be found equally moderate in the prices of recent designs, will be forwarded to any part of Great Britain, Ireland, India, or the Colonies, on receipt of a remittance or reference.

ELEGANT FANS.—Gentlemen desirous of making a handsome and acceptable present to a Lady should pay a visit to MECHI & 4, Leadenhall-street, near Gracechurch-st., where they may inspect a variety of FANS, tastefully ornamented, at all Prices. Should the Lady of their choice not be among the number, a FAN will be found equal to the occasion, as a glance at his Stock will at once testify. In his celebrated SNOW-LOOM will be seen the most recherché Fans, fetching, which at Paris, Napoleon, in Worc Tables, Work Boxes, Hand Screens, Writing Desks, Dressing Cases, Card Cases, Cake and Note Baskets, &c. Everything for the Toilet and Work Table may be purchased of Mechi, of first-rate quality, and at the most moderate Prices

THE NEW CALISTHENIC CHEST EXPANDER, invented by H. COST, M.R.A. (Sole Proprietor.) This unique and elegant instrument fulfils a desideratum long felt as necessary, and which has been hitherto unattainable, namely, a simple apparatus that, without fatigue or much exertion. This instrument, by elegant in form may lie on the drawing-room table a every ready for use. The simplicity of its action can only be fully appreciated by an inspection at Mr. COST'S residence, Ivy Lodge, Lower Clapton. Every article from One Till Five o'Clock; or on Sundays, from Three Till Five, at Harper's Library Room, 71, Mortimer-street, Cavendish-square.—Studies fitted up with every Calisthenic Instrument for the improvement of young persons forming on the newest principles.

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH, and SMYRNA SPONGES Useful Inquiry.—For proof of the extreme durability, powerful cleansing, and true economy, ask all who have used Metcalfe's Brushes. This Tooth-brush performs the highest and important office of securing thoroughly the division and cleansing in the most extraordinary manner, bears never comes loose. In. Peculiarly penetrating Hairbrushes, with the durable unbleached Russian bristles, which do not turn white. An improved Improved Clothes-brush, that cleans harness in, in one-third the time. The new Velvet-cloth, and immense stock of Combs and Brushes, may be purchased at METCALFE and CO.'s only Establishment, 130a, Oxford-street, one door from Hol es-street.

LADIES TRAVELLING, or during the Promenade, the Aquatic Excursion, or while otherwise exposed to the Scorching Rays of the Sun will find LYDORS for sale, containing natural antiseptics entirely subdue to the Complexion, and, by their cupil not action, endangering health. The only GENUINE has the words "ROWLAND'S KALYDOR" on the wrapper. Sold by them, at 20, Hanover-garden, London, and by all Chemists and Perfumers.

IMPORTANT TO FAMILIES.—THE POPULAR REMEDY

PARR'S LIFE PILLS, a mild, safe, and most effectual cure for Indigestion, Bilious, Liver, and Stomach Complaints, Sick Headache, Costiveness &c. This compilation is truly excellent; they are compounded entirely of vegetable products, found from all part ailing and deserving matters, which render their operation mild and

[illegible]

Their value as a general tonic and restorative of the impaired stomach and biliary system is fully manifested to the Proprietors by their increasing rapid sale, and the numerous testimonials so warmly given by those who have proved their efficacy.
Sold in Boxes at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 11s family Packets at 11s. each, by all respectable medicine vendors throughout the World.

CHESS.—To be DISPOSED OF, a Set of CHINESE Elaborately Carved IVORY CHESSMEN. Price Four Guineas. A Bargain.—Apply at No., TAYLOR'S 8, Essex-street, Strand.

DUKE ST. JULIEN CLARET, 28s. per Dozen; Pints, 18s.; imported direct by MESDES and BUTLER Wine Merchants, &c., 155 Regent-street (a be sufficiently recommended. Also, some superior Gordon's Golden Sherry at 24s. per dozen. On receipt of a Post-office Order, or reference, will be immediately forwarded.

CURRALL and SON, Importers of COGNAC BRANDY, of the highest quality: choice Old Pale at 60s., and Brown at 48s. per Dozen. Bottles, Re per Dozen; Hampers, do. Brandies at 5, 6, and 24s. per Gallon. Pale High-flavoured Sherry at 30s. per Dozen.—83, Bishopsgate-street Within

A REALLY COOL GLASS of CLARET, Port, Sherry, or Champagne, at the season of the year—Spring Waters of ice-like coldness, free of a nauseous consistence, and all the other articles which the most weather half a-dozen, received by the Proprietors direct from the Vineyards, at the LINCOLN'S-INN WINE FOUNDATION, HITTER COLLEGE, &c. A large assortment at the City Agents' GEORGE and JOHN DEANE, Cooking in the Monument, 46, King William-street, London Bridge

SCHWEPPE and CO.'S SODA and other MINERAL WATERS. So well known and appreciated for upwards of 60 years past, continue to be manufactured, as heretofore, upon the largest scale, at their several Establishments. Importers direct from the Springs of the GERMAN SPA SELTERS WATER. Principal Establishment, 51, Berners-street, London. Branch Manufactories at Liverpool, Bristol, and Dublin, and sold by nearly all respectable Tradesmen in every town in the United Kingdom.

THE ORIGINAL AMERICAN METALLIC TABLET STROP, with four sides for keeping Razors in perfect order; invented by MR. SAUNDERS, of New York This article is used and recommended by the first cutlers of Europe. To be obtained wholesale and retail, at the Depôt, No. 67B, Strand.

AIR GUNS and AIR CANES.—An entirely new and further improved assortment of these portable and silently destructive weapons, now on sale, adapted by HOLLAND and HOLLAND, 98, Strand (West End), with ball, small birds with shot, Flak with harpoons, &c. &c. Prices commencing at 55s. each, guns and spares complete. (See Treatise, price 6d.; by post, 7d.)—HOLLAND Gun maker, 98, Strand. Rifling, New Oxford-street.—REMOVED FROM 316, HOLBORN.

SHIRTS.—GENTLEMEN are reminded that the Cheapest, Most Durable, and Best-Fitting SHIRTS are supplied by WHITELOCK and SON, 165, Strand Three doors from the Lowther Arcade Clock, within Four Doors of Somerset House, 40, and 41, Linen, 3s. 6d. and 4s. 6d. Gentlemen waited upon in any part of London, with samples, or Patterns sent into the country, free, upon receipt of the amount, and 1s. as part payment of postage. The measure required is the neck, chest, and wrist, tight.

WELLINGTON SURTOUT, Patronised by Prince Albert and the Royal Family, to be had in London only of the Patentee, JAMES FOULERE, 6, Cornhill-street, Regent-street, and 11, Poultry; also 2 the recognised Agents in the Command-a-Bal Guineas. For close fitting are daily papers.

TROUSERS.—A good fit in this garment can be seldom obtained. GRAVES, Practical Trousers maker and Tailor, 313, High Holborn, after many years' experience and study, e enabled to assert, without fear of contradiction, that he can fit gentlemen with this garment better than any other person in London The characteristics of his fitting is a gentlemanly ease, without wrinkle, for sitting, standing, walking, or riding. A well-assorted Stock of the newest designs to select from R. GRAVES, 313, High Holborn

BERDOE'S LIGHT SUMMER COAT, a REAL LUXURY for WARM WEATHER (worn over, or without, another Coat). The WATERPROOF PALADIUM, the latest improvement of Macintosh, wo-kneaded, wo-kneaded, and moderate cost, continues (unaided by any merely slop-trade pretensions) to sustain its established reputation, as the most convenient, economical, and permanently popular Garment for universal and continuous super-fashion to the wishes of the respectable classes. An extensive assortment kept to select from, or made to order at a day's notice.—W. BERDOE, Patentee, 96, New Bond-street (near Oxford-street), and 98, Cornhill, London.

THE REGISTERED PALETOT CASE. TO THE EDITOR OF THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS
SIR,—In a report, published by most of the London daily journals, of the proceedings before the Vice-Chancellor of England, on Saturday, June 12th, we were recorded as resisting the protection of the Court, in respect to an infringement of our patented right to an invention, and we are informed that the Judge (which was true) knew nothing
From the great popularity we have attained, by the sale of the subject of the injunction, a garment styled the Registered Paletot of Llama Cloth, it may be assumed that the public will be somewhat interested with the precise facts of the case
We have already been described as a "sharp practitioner" our invention, we with much care, selected a name hitherto unknown in this country, as, trading the origin of the word Paletot, it is shown that it was derived from the Arabic word Paltock, worn by the Moors, and afterwards by the French Inquisits, "Circumspitior corpori Paltock. habiten Greenrum," by Bayle, and adopted by the Council of Trent, as a garment
That we exercised due caution in selecting an unusual name has by the result of these recent proceedings in the Court of Chancery, been fully proved. For such, and invariably, is the state of mercantile matters, that many of individuals engaged in it, but with no apparent patronage and success attend any member in particular, he is immediately subjected to the charge of "piracy" and "sharp practice" by the whole body. And we advertised our invention simply as a new overcoat, it is more than probable that are this we should have been unmolested in the matter, but we thought it necessary to distinguish it from the public by some name, and somewhat similar description to that which from the first has been employed by us
Some doubt has at this early stage, perhaps, more numerous than the case will be for us to be an example, as we are now determined to enforce our rightful claims to the originality of the new garment we have introduced, and registered Registered Paletot of Llama cloth; but, not being lawyers, to proceed against those who may have unwarrantedly used a similar title, without first giving them notice, that we shall immediately apply for permission through the medium of your columns, now to notify this our invention with respect to all present or future copyists. For it was clearly from the affidavits made by Messrs. Dawbarn and Son, the solicitors of Mr. Warring and Son, of Birmingham, as to many of the other influential agents, that they have experienced equal inconveniences with ourselves, through so many of the public wearing the registered paletot of the same or similar construction that if that of the Registered Paletot of Llama Cloth It may be judicious here to explain that we believe that, had a continuance of these unfair proceedings allowed, we should have been irretrievably ruined, when purchasers have been induced to believe that these parties were the original manufacturers, from the circumstance of which has come to all present or future copyists For,

SIGNOR LABLACHE, "OROVESO." MDLLE. JENNY LIND "NORMA."

SCENE FROM THE OPERA OF "NORMA," AT HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.—(SEE PAGE 393.)

BRIGANDAGE IN ATHENS.

We have received the following letter, describing one of the many outrages recently perpetrated openly, and with the sanction of the Government of Greece; these crimes have become so frequent, that they are now regarded as part of a dreadful system of plunder and cruelty which has obtained the name of "Brigandage." The letter fully confirms the public accounts of the disorganised state of society in Athens; its authenticity may be relied on:—

To the Editor of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS

SIR,—A crisis is approaching in the affairs of Greece. It is impossible that the iniquities permitted and encouraged by Colletti can much longer be carried on with impunity. Murder, torture, incendiarism, are common; and not only go unpunished, but are absolutely committed by the picked and favourite agents of that Minister who betrays while he sits in administration of the law and of the Constitution.

Who in England will believe it possible, that at noon-day, in the very town of Athens, in the presence of gens d'armes and officers (looking on, but not preventing), a crowd of miscreants attacked with stones and other missiles, the house of a respectable individual, and, having made forcible entry, they seized and threatened to kill him; frightened his wife into convulsions; and injured his daughters' hands and arms with the stones with which they broke the door and windows. They robbed him of his wife's jewels, and all the money they could find of his own; besides a deposit of 7000 drachmas placed in his hands for the purpose of building a synagogue, which had been collected amongst his fraternity in Portugal and elsewhere, for that purpose. Worse than all, they tore up, before his eyes, archives and vouchers of a public debt, the loss of which will press heavily on him; they then deliberately destroyed and broke to pieces all the furniture and property which they could not carry away. The work of destruction and alarm went on for an hour and a half, and no police interfered to stop it.

The writer of the above was at the English church on the morning this outrage took place (4th April), when the Secretary to the English Embassy was called out, and protection craved of the British Minister, Don Pacifico (the sufferer) being a native of Gibraltar, and consequently a British subject. Sir Edmund Lyons, ever alive to the calls of suffering humanity, with his characteristic promptitude, lost no time in insisting upon gens d'armes being placed in the lobby of Don Pacifico's house, to prevent further insult, and immediately made a strong representation to Colletti. Hitherto it has been made in vain; for, at the end of four or five weeks, no steps whatever have been taken to remunerate the sufferer, or to bring the aggressors to justice.

HOUSE OF DON PACIFICO, AFTER THE SACKING.

In short, all law in Greece is at present outraged, or only made subservient to the will of Colletti, whose only aim is to keep himself in power, and to support a despotic Prince, who, ever since he was compelled to sign the Constitution (in 1843), has never ceased endeavouring to destroy it.

Freedom of election was guaranteed, but is prevented by the most iniquitous means: even, the freedom of municipal elections, which was respected by the Turks for centuries, has been trampled under foot by Colletti; and one trembles for the new elections of Deputies which the extreme exercise of the Royal prerogative in dissolving the Chamber, though the Ministers had no Budget, has rendered necessary. But it is urged that Colletti has recomposed his Ministry. So he has: but what sort of men are his new colleagues? One of them is M. Glarakis, who, when he was King Otho's Minister before the Constitution, committed all sorts of barbarities

These atrocities are perpetrated, houses are burnt, and property destroyed, to avenge a vote being given to a Deputy in opposition; and to make it appear to the distant world that the Greeks are turbulent, and not fit to be governed by a Constitution, and require a strong despotism. On the contrary, the moderation evinced by the Greeks in 1843, when they accomplished their bloodless Revolution, when the King and his Ministers were completely in their power, and the temptations were not few for removing them altogether from the power of ever oppressing them again—this, and the patience with which they have so long borne insult and injury, in the hope, by constitutional means, to obtain redress, ought to satisfy the most sceptical, and will satisfy those who deign to inquire into particulars, that they are worthy of their Constitution, and only want a good Government to bring forth such noble qualities as would bring praise on any country.

Strange to say, France, who has suffered so much in the cause of liberty, abets these proceedings, and lends money, without scruple or limit, to enable Colletti to bribe Deputies, without which he would long since have been turned out of office.

But, can it be that England will much longer look on tamely, while such things are? or will she permit French troops to be landed, as well as French money—under the pretence of preserving order, but, in truth, with the hope of reducing Greece to a mere province of France? Forbid it, Justice! forbid it, Humanity! A civil war will be the consequence, which will again lay waste that beautiful, that interesting country, and render her eventual restoration to peace and prosperity further off than it was when she was under the dominion of the Turks

I have contented myself with a simple relation of a few facts: were I to let loose the feelings of indignation with which the atrocities I could enumerate have inspired me, I should, perhaps, seem to be overstepping the bounds of truth.

A TRAVELLER IN THE LEVANT, AND A FRIEND OF GREECE.

Malta, May 10, 1847.

THE PRINCE OF CANINO'S PICTURES.—Lord Ward has just completed the purchase of the pictures bought in by the Prince Canino at the Cardinal Fesch's sale two years ago—namely: The Rembrandt, "St. John Preaching in the Wilderness;" a Raphael, in his very early manner, "The Saviour on the Cross;" a beautiful Teniers, "The Saviour Crowned with Thorns;" and a celebrated picture by Fra Bartolomeo, "Angelica du Figole," representing the Lost and Saved. The first of these, one of the finest, if not the very finest, works of Rembrandt, was strongly pressed upon the attention of the French Government, who were advised to offer £4000 for its acquisition. Upon the Prince Canino's buying the last, the Pope (Gregory the Sixteenth) congratulated him upon being the owner of so great a treasure in art, and thanked him for keeping it in Italy. These works are now on their way home. It is said to be the intention of the noble purchaser to exhibit next year all the works of art he has become possessed of during his lengthened stay abroad, amongst which are the celebrated "Madelaine," by Correggio, and two frescoes, by the same artist, said to be matchless.

FIRE IN THE STRAND.—On Thursday morning, a few minutes before one o'clock, a fire broke out on the premises of Leighton and Sons, bookbinders, 5, Angel-court, Strand. The flames soon extended to the houses Nos. 6, 7, and 8. In the house No. 7 was an elderly female, a cripple, who was extricated at the utmost risk. The parties in the last two mentioned houses have lost all their property, and both are uninsured. By dint of great perseverance, in two hours the fire was sufficiently subdued to remove all apprehensions of further danger. The whole of the stock in trade, furniture, and fixtures in the premises Nos. 5 and 6 are entirely destroyed. It is said that the loss will amount to several thousand pounds, and the whole of the insurances effected upon the buildings and their contents do not exceed £5000

THE ASCOT CUP.

As a pendant to our Engraving of the Queen's Vase, on the 5th, we now give a small copy of a rubbing from the brass in the Church of Walton-upon-Thames.

marking the tomb of John Selwyn, whose feat in leaping upon the back of the hunted stag, guiding it to the Queen's feet, and there cutting its throat, we described as chronicled by Grose the antiquary. Under the figure is the following inscription, in old English letters:—

"Here lyeth ye bodye of John Selwyn, gent, keeper of her Matis parke of Oteland, under ye right honorable Charles Howard Lord Admyrall of Englande, his good lord; who had issue by Susan his wife V sonnes and VI daughters all lyving at his death, and departed out of this world the xxii days of Marche, anno domini, 1587."

Walton-upon Thames is a pleasant village, about a mile from the station of that name on the South Western Railway. In the Church may also be seen the Gresly's Bridle, to put on women' mouths too much given to chattering. It was reported that a law-suit was lost in consequence of some idle feminine tattle, and the bridle was sent in derision to the village. On fair-day, it is a great object of attraction, and every lass tries it on.

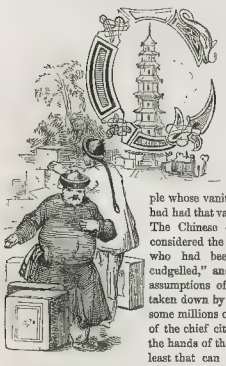
THE ALLEGED CASE OF MR. BUNN AGAINST JENNY LIND.—This action was made by the plaintiff a Special Jury cause. It cannot be tried before the sittings after Michaelmas term, which sittings will not commence before December next As already stated, the plaintiff has laid his damages in the declaration for the alleged breach of an agreement, signed by Mdlle. Lind, to sing at Drury Lane Theatre, at £10,000; and, on the part of the defendant, several pleas have been pleaded, in which pleas the alleged agreement forms, of course, the principal feature. The plaintiff has demurred to one of the pleas, and the demurrer has been set down for argument in Michaelmas term namely, the 9th of November The counsel engaged on the part of the plaintiff are Sir F Kelly, Mr. Cockburn, Q.C., and Mr. Peacock; and for the defendant, the Attorney-General, Sir F Thesiger, and Mr. Higgins. The action has been brought in the Court of Queen's Bench

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198 Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JUNE 19, 1847.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

No. 269.—Vol. X.] FOR THE WEEK ENDING SATURDAY, JUNE 26, 1847. [Sixpence.

WAR IN CHINA.



ANTON has so constantly furnished to the Indian Mail a catalogue of small quarrels and uneasy bickerings between the English Factory and the Chinese authorities, that they have lately attracted but little notice. They were set down as the natural expressions of irritation by a people whose vanity is excessive, and who had had that vanity seriously wounded. The Chinese disputes were, in fact, considered the grumblings of a nation who had been "exceedingly well cudgelled," and whose extraordinary assumptions of superiority had been taken down by the necessity of paying some millions of dollars to ransom one of the chief cities of the empire out of the hands of the "foreign devils." The least that can be allowed to the vanquished is the privilege of expressing his dissatisfaction. Nay, the English public was not at all surprised at hearing of various frays and cases of conflict, in which something had passed harder than words. But distance and imperfect information had left us rather unprepared for an outburst of actual war, and a feat of arms almost unexampled for its daring and the rapidity of execution. A campaign of thirty-six hours, ending in the destruction of a whole line of forts, mounting 879 guns, is rather startling. Those who planned the operation must have known the character of the people well; for, made against any other race, it would have been sheer madness. This will be more evident, when we consider that the population of Canton is calculated to be much more than a million, and that the Bogue forts are the sole defence of the river. By the ordinary rules that guide military operations, to attack the defences of a population of a million, and threaten the city itself, with a force of only nine hundred men, would be insanity. We could not venture such "long odds" against the Cape Kaffirs or John Heki, though civilisation in South Africa and New Zealand is far lower than the point it has attained in China. The Chinese have a military organisation, some knowledge of fortification, they have ordnance and large guns, and on this occasion showed some readiness in the use of them; and yet a total inability to defend themselves is as marked a characteristic as their invincible contempt for us, and their insolence both in words and deeds.

In fact, there has been a good deal of ignorance on both sides, and we are only beginning to come to an understanding. Seeing the perfection the Chinese have attained in many of the manual arts, and knowing they have a policy and a government as settled and artificial as those of the oldest European States, we have given them credit for more real ability than, as a people, they deserve. The Celestials do not improve on acquaintance; as, we believe, all Governors and negotiators have experienced. To begin with one great defect—one that is the root of all weakness and worthlessness—from the highest to the lowest they have no sense of truth, or the slightest conception of the value of good faith: as a sentiment it does not exist. The latest writer on their character, Mr. Thomas Meadows, says, with respect to "Chinese lying," you should "listen to their tales and accept their promises, as if you really believed the former and trusted in the latter—but be careful you do no such thing." In commercial matters there is a degree of self-interest involved that checks this dishonesty of word and action; but in public affairs there is no dealing with a people who act on trickery as the rule and good faith as the exception. Nor, in spite of all that has been said of the character of the Mandarins, do we see that they are much better than the people. Their whole system of administration is corrupt, though bribery and peculation are severely punished—when found out. They are as little to be trusted as the rabble: they defame and vilify the residents and merchants in their proclamations, and hold them up to the violence of the mob, at the very moment they are entertaining the same men with apparent cordiality at their tables; and when an Englishman is attacked or beaten, if reparation be insisted on, they are as ready with a decree against the people; and, if very much pressed, will seize somebody and punish him—whether the real offender or not is immaterial; for Chinese justice is by no means particular about beheading the wrong person—nay, a rich man can be bastinadoed, or even (according to a late authority) hanged by substitute, as we avoid service in the militia. Taken altogether, there are more vices and fewer virtues in the Chinese character than we have supposed; and their defects are those that will make their subjection to the rulers of the rest of the East an absolute necessity. In China, as in Hindostan, the conflict of Race has begun. From the moment the rule of total exclusion was broken, that conflict became inevitable; and we are now seeing its earliest events. What India underwent in the days of Clive and Hastings, will surely be the future history of China; and Pottinger and Gough will be hereafter the parallels of those founders of our Eastern Empire. We are compelled to act: our forbearance is not comprehended, and gains only insult, and, as there is no instance in the records of mankind of the powerful race submitting to the caprice and insolence of a weak one, the end of the matter is evident. We shall have to supersede the Mandarins by "Stipendiaries" in boots and round hats, and to suggest to the

SAVIGNY, MINISTER OF REVISION OF THE LAWS.) COUNT ARNIM, (FOREIGN.) DUESBERG, (FINANCE.) EICHHORN, (PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.) ROTHER, (COMMERCE.) RODELSCHWING, (HOME MINISTER AND KING'S REPRESENTATIVE.) MUHLER, (STATE AND JUSTICE.)

THE PRUSSIAN MINISTERS.—(SEE NEXT PAGE.)

Brother of the Moon the propriety of retiring into private life on a pension.

The single doubt we have of this step being among the results of time is, that Canton, the only place where we have a footing on the mainland of China, is not a fair sample of the whole empire. It is described as the most depraved city of the land, its population as the refuse of the whole people. It is a sort of Alsatia, or refuge of the most turbulent and worst portion of the Chinese; licentiousness abounds, and thieving is common. It is said "there is an organised band of 20,000 robbers in and around Canton." It is this population which the Government is continually exciting against the "foreign devils," by whose intercourse alone the city is supported! In any riot life is not safe; a fire creates such a scene of brigandage that the mob has often to be fired on to keep it off. From these, and various other symptoms, we imagine the Chinese Government is, with the assumption of absolute power, in reality very weak. The people post up placards denouncing the authorities quite as often as the authorities denounce the people by the same means. Among the proclamations published during the late disturbances, one proscribes Keying, the Imperial Commissioner, and declares it "desirable that every one should exert himself, that, all uniting together, may set fire to his palace, and then cast his dead body into the street. To do this is not exceeding the law!"

The desire to keep within legal bounds is edifying; but the whole of the proclamations are a study; they illustrate the Chinese system of falsifying everything. The Central Authority and the Emperor are kept as much in the dark as to the real state of things as possible. Thus, the attack on the forts is stated by the "Militia and gentry of Canton" to have been made by Chinese "outlaws," speaking the native tongue, but "clothed in a foreign dress." This evidently means the Regiment of Madras Native Infantry, who were engaged in the operation. The whole affair is thus coloured as a rebellion, not an invasion. The same body advise the people to kill all carpenters and masons who may be brought from Hong-Kong or Whampoa to work for the English Factory. Assassination, or killing without risk to themselves, is with them, as with the North American Indians, the chief rule of war. All the defence they could devise for the city was to have pots of lime, brickbats, stone, &c., ready on the house-tops, to be "thrown down with thundering force," if the Barbarians entered it. In everything there is the same want of power either of thought or action, most extraordinary in a community that has cities as populous as London. It is as if all the children of the universe had gathered together, and set up as a nation for themselves, and, thinking impotence and mischief manly, indulging in them to a point beyond enduring; till a few of their fathers, not choosing to put up with it any longer, step in, kick the whole of their absurd social fabric about their ears, and subject them to a real, wholesome authority.

THE PRUSSIAN MINISTRY.

THE debates in the newly-established Prussian Diet, imperfectly as they have been published, have excited considerable interest, and attracted attention to the policy and personnel of the Prussian Ministry. We have received from Berlin sketches of the principal functionaries of the State; and we accompany them with an account of the general system of the Government they have to administer.

The ruling power of Prussia is purely administrative. The kingdom itself is an union of provinces, gained by Frederick the Great in war, or ceded to his successor at the General Peace of 1815; differing in religion, customs, and feelings, they are held together by the network of a Beaurocracy, which extends one system of administration over all, and is worked by an immense body of officials, all of whom are completely dependent on the King from the First Minister of State to the humblest toll-collector. If all our parochial, municipal, and magisterial officers were paid and controlled by the Government, instead of being divided into independent local jurisdictions, we should have something approaching the Prussian system of Government.

The Government belongs to the King exclusively. It exercises the sovereign power, with the assistance of a Council of State, a Ministry of State, and of Privy Councillors.

The Council of State is composed of a President and Vice President, of the Princes of the Royal Family above eighteen years of age, of the Chief Ministers of State, of the Commanders-in-Chief and Presidents of Provinces, and of sixty Officers of the Executive, who are nominated to seats in this Council through the confidence of the Sovereign.

The Ministers of State are composed of the Prince of Prussia, and all the Privy Councillors on duty.

The Departments of the Government are nine in number, under the control of the actual Ministers; they are the following:—

The Department of the King's Household, in two divisions.

The Department of Public Worship, Public Instruction, and of Medical Affairs. These three important branches are under the direction of Dr. Eichhorn.

The Ministry of Revision of the Laws, directed by Dr. Savigny.

The Ministry of Foreign Affairs, under Baron de Canitz and Count Arnim.

The Department of the Interior is under Baron Bodelschwing-Velmede.

The Ministry of Justice, under the State-Councillor Muhler.

The Ministry of Finance, under Privy-Councillor Duesberg.

The Ministry of Commerce, under Rosher.

The War Department is conducted by General Von Boyen.

In addition to these, there are certain central superior authorities, subservient to the departments of the Ministry. The first are—the General Tribune of Censure attached to the Ministry of Justice, the Direction of Public Works, the Consulting Committee of Arts and Finances, the General Direction of the Lottery, the Committee of Examining Commissaries attached to the Ministry of Finance, the Archives of the State and of the Cabinet, under the special direction of the Ministers of the Royal Household and of Foreign Affairs. The second are the Court of Accounts, the Post-office, the General Administration of the Debts of the State, the Commercial and Statistical Offices, and the General Commission of the Royal Domains. The Court has likewise its officers—the Grand Chamberlain and the Grand Marshal, the Master of the Royal Hounds, a General Inspector of the Aulic Music, a Grand Butler, a Grand Master of the Ceremonies, a Marshal of the Court, and inferior officers, such as Prefects of the Castles of Konigsberg, Stolzenfels, Breslau.

DR. DE SAVIGNE.

DR. DE SAVIGNE is the chief of one of the departments into which the Ministry of Justice is divided: he has charge of the revision of the laws: some are daily becoming extinct, or superseded by others. When it is recollected how numerous are the "acts to amend an act," in England, it is seen that this duty is quite sufficient to employ an able man—and Savigné is eminent as a lawyer and jurist. He is a member of the Council of State by virtue of his office. Muhler is his colleague in the administration, and takes the general superintendence of judiciary proceedings. De Savigné has been, since 1815, associated with Eichhorn in a periodical publication devoted to jurisprudence and the philosophy of law.

COUNT ARNIM.

COUNT ADOLPH ARNIM-BUITZENBURG is a member of the Council of State, which includes all the chief officers of Government, as of right; other and inferior functionaries may be nominated to it by the "confidence of the King." Count Arnim, as Minister of Foreign Affairs, is one of the principal members of this body. His family belongs to the rank of the ancient nobility of the German empire, taking their title from a domain called Buitzenburg. One of his ancestors was a Field Marshal under Wallenstein, in the troublous times of the Thirty Years' War. At a later period it has produced statesmen and men of letters, whose works are still in good repute. His immediate predecessor was Minister of Justice of Prussia at the time of his death in 1805. Count Arnim is a Minister of liberal tendencies, but of moderate principles. He is one of the best speakers in the new Diet; and it was by the influence of his speech on the Address, in reply to the harangue of the King, that the expressions of dissatisfaction with the terms of the constitution were stopped. He fully agreed with the views of the movers of those resolutions, and boldly expressed his opinion; but he thought the urging of those views at that moment impolitic. The increased stability and influence of the Diet, which is the result, is a consequence of moderation and forbearance at the outset, seem to have justified his policy.

DUESBERG AND ROTHER.

THESE Ministers are connected by their official duties, and may be classed together; of the two, Rother holds the more prominent position; he is an active Minister of Finance, especially well versed in the practical management of the monetary business and currency of the nation. In 1837, on the death of M. Fries, he was appointed Chief of the Royal Bank of Berlin, and its branches in the principal towns and cities of the provinces. The State debts are under his management, and he is Chief Commissioner of the Society of Maritime Commerce. But he is not the only Finance Minister; the department is more divided and subdivided than almost any other; he is, however, one of the chiefs; he holds a seat in the Council of State.

DE Duesberg, before he was placed in the Department of Commerce, was the subordinate Minister of Public Worship, his "speciality" being the superintendence of the temporal and State questions connected with the Catholic Church and population.

DR. EICHHORN.

JOHANN ALBERENT FRIEDRICH EICHHORN was born on the 3d March, 1779, at Werthaim-on-the-Maine; his father held an office in the service of the Reigning Prince of Lowenstein; he was so enthusiastic an admirer of Frederick the Great, that, after the completion of his studies at Gottingen, he induced his son to enter the civil service of Prussia, in which he rapidly rose to the rank of Assessor, from whom the higher Ministers of State are chosen. On the breaking out of the War of Liberation, in 1813, he gave up this post, and served as a volunteer in the Army of Silesia, in which his administrative ability promoted him to be Auditor and Paymaster. He was also extensively engaged in the negotiations with Napoleon relative to exchange of prisoners. It was in these transactions he exhibited the diplomatic talents which afterwards associated him with the Liberal Minister, Stein, in the difficult negotiations required in the resettlement of Germany after the dissolution of the Empire of Napoleon, when Princes and Dukes were scrambling for "their own again," and as much of their neighbours as they could hold of.

Integrity and great tact and intelligence led him satisfactorily through affairs of extreme difficulty with unusual success, and his efforts were acknowledged by all the Sovereigns of Europe: he has more orders and stars, perhaps, than any man living—the Duke of Wellington excepted

"The sight of our arrival passed with vigilance on our side, and with quietness on the part of the Chinese. The whole affair had been so sudden, they did not know which way to turn; besides, trusting in our weakness, the Government and people had thought themselves secure. On the following morning the guns were drawn up, and the troops under arms, to receive Keying, but not to salute him—the British Plenipotentiary having insisted that Keying should wait upon him at the English Consulate, within the factories; or, if he did not, that he would not see him at all. To this, to him humiliating proposition, Keying at last reluctantly agreed, and the hour was fixed. Time passed, when two of the principal Mandarins having arrived, without there being any signs of Keying's approach, it became evident that his delay was intentional; the troops were dismissed; and, when Keying did arrive, he was received at the landing-place by Captains Kennedy and Sargent, who conducted him through a crowd of idle lookers-on to the Consulate. Keying felt his situation bitterly; and, although he behaved with dignity and composure, his mortification at being obliged to wait upon Sir John Davis in the very sight of his own populace, was beyond his powers of concealment. The conference lasted some hours, and in the afternoon it transpired that the Plenipotentiary had submitted to Keying the only conditions upon which he would consent to suspend the operations of the force, and that he had granted him until six, P.M., the next day, for consideration. During the day, a slight disturbance took place in the outskirts of the factories to the westward, but it was soon quelled, and two of the mob publicly flogged in the streets; an officer's guard was posted near Mowqua-street, the scene of the disturbance

"It was thought advisable, on the morning of the 5th, to destroy the French Folly Fort, as a few guns carried from the city to the central tower would entirely command the passage of the river. Accordingly, at nine A.M., the fort was blown up by Colonel Philpotts and the engineers, covered by a strong party in the armed boats of the Vixture. Reports were current all day of attacks being meditated by the troops and populace, and of double-dealing on the part of the authorities; in consequence of which, every precaution was taken, the streets barricaded, and the guard-rooms rendered defensible by Captain Bruce, the Adjutant-General. At five o'clock in the afternoon, the Associate Gentlemen of Hunters were inspected by General D'Aguilar. One hundred well-armed British yeomanry appeared on parade; and the defence of the factories, aided by a detachment of troops, was assigned to them during the assault of the following morning. Keying now requested an extension of the time allowed for consideration till the next morning, and Sir John Davis granted it to him. This evening, Captain Bruce's attention was drawn towards a large building at the back of the factories; and, on entering it, he found it occupied by a strong party of Chinese troops: many of them escaped, but upwards of forty were secured in the afternoon, the assault was commenced—thus averting the bombardment of the city by little more than an hour.

"For the remainder of the day a portion of the troops were employed in pulling down the various buildings, so often complained of, that had been erected against the garden walls, &c., and the removal of which was in conformity also with the old treaty and the new convention. A house, in front of which an officer's Captain Sargent, aide-de-camp to Sir John Davis) had been severely injured by a large stone thrown from the window, was razed to the ground, and the heap of ruins remained at once a memorial and a warning to the people of Canton of the punishment inflicted and due for cowardly attacks upon unoffending individuals. The following day (the 7th of April) the barriers were removed, and the Cornet sailed with the 42nd Regiment Madras Native Infantry for Hong Kong; but two days' more delay on the part of the Chinese authorities, or an attempted evasion of their engagements, put Sir John Davis's firmness to the proof, and, determined to show that he was equally prepared now as yesterday to enforce his demands, General D'Aguilar ordered the barricades to be instantly re-erected, and the troops to be held in readiness during the night. This method of negociation was crowned with complete success, and the point in question—the punishment of the Fuhshan rioters within the factories was at once inflicted. Early this morning (the 8th), three of the Fuhshan rioters were brought to the factories and punished at the Consoo-house, in presence of the British as well as of the Chinese authorities; and every demand of Sir J. Davis having been acceded to, General D'Aguilar made immediate preparations for withdrawing the troops, with the exception of a company of the 18th Regiment, under Captain Graves, at Bow Logan, who are to remain until the improvements which are carried out, as well as to guard against any sudden outbreak of the mob upon the departure of the expedition. Shortly after noon, the force re-embarked, and arrived at Hong Kong the following day, when a general order was issued to the troops, congratulating them on the success of their exertions.

"Meantime the position of the town of Victoria (Hong Kong), left almost defenceless during the absence of the forces, was becoming critical, and the danger was not the less imminent or unpleasant from its indefinite nature. It was ascertained that the Tribid societies were roused into activity by this opportunity of ridding the Kong of the foreign devils, and were organising the Chinese population of the place. The neighbouring islands and mainland are the resort of the most determined thieves and pirates in China, who frequently extend their attacks into the very harbour of Hong Kong itself.

"The handful of troops and police left on the island were unequal to any prolonged defence or guard of a straggling town stretching four miles along the water side, and command of the heights above the hills behind, which afford the means both of unseen approach and secure retreat to the marauders. Happily, the provisional government and military command of the island were left in the hands of the Hon. Major Carne, a host in himself, and equal to every emergency.

"Such are the details of an expedition of which the naval and military operations were as boldly planned as they were promptly and vigorously executed."

STATE OF INDIA.

The last accounts received from Hong Kong inform us that the demonstration has been crowned with success, and that not only have apologies been made for last affronts, but concessions of future privileges have been tendered by the Chinese Commissioner to her Majesty's Plenipotentiary. The most important of his concessions are:—That after two years the city of Canton shall be opened to the British; that the British shall have the range surrounding country for exercise or amusement as at Shanghai; that the Chinese aggressors of British subjects in ten specified cases are to be arrested, brought to Canton, and punished in the presence of persons deputed by her Majesty's Plenipotentiary; that the lease of a site for dwellings and warehouses is to be granted to British merchants as at others on the Homan side of the river, a site for a church in the neighbourhood of the present foreign factories, and burial grounds at Whampoa. Precautions are also to be taken for preventing collisions between the Chinese populace and foreigners.

Nothing of consequence has taken place in India since the last arrival. The Bombay Times, in its monthly summary, says:—"The Hon. Company's steamer Semiris, which, at the date of last despatch, was feared to have been lost in the Hurricane of the 20th May, has made her appearance; she suffered considerably, and seems to have been in great danger, but happily accomplished her voyage. The Buckinghamshire continues to make her way up the coast under jury-masts The gale appears to have been most singular in its whole character: it seems to have taken its rise to the east and south of Ostacamund, about 10° N. and 76° E. Here it blew with fury from the 13th to the 18th, its violence being most severe about the 15th. It can be traced north and west for the space of about 1300 miles; it travelled over the ocean from Cochin, on the Malabar coast, to Bombay and Ahmedabad, and thence to Shikapore, in Upper Scinde, in latitude 28° N. by 68° E. At the first-named of these four places it raged on the 21st; at the second and third, on the 24th and 23rd; and at the fourth, on the 24th. Throughout its course heavy falls of rain accompanied it, even where these are nearly unknown.

"The disturbances in the Goomsoor districts seem, for the present, to be quelled. Brigadier Dyce has been succeeded in the command of the troops in the country by Brigadier Campbell.

"There is nothing new from Lucknow. The conduct of the resident, Colonel Richmond, is promising their lives to the Affghans who attempted to murder the Prime Minister, has been a source of considerable discussion.

"The Sikh trophy guns are about to be sent, to form a triumphal arch or column.

"A rumour—a groundless one, we hope—prevails, that Lord Hardinge will quit India on the 1st of January, 1848. He and the Commander-in-Chief are now at Simla, and will so continue during the hot season.

"Profound tranquillity continues throughout the Punjaub.

"Dost Mahomed continues his operations against the Ghilzies. The troubles of the country seem to be abating, and it is not at present more disturbed than at any time since we first became acquainted with it—much less so, most assuredly, than it was when in our possession.

"Cholera has been making sad havoc at Ahmedabad.

"Two atrocious murders have been committed by a Malay sailor. On coming back from sea he went to the house of a former mistress, and by refused admission to reside with her. He left the house, and shortly after returning, found another man had taken his place. Upon this he stabbed the man, who died on the spot; wounded the woman, who died almost immediately afterwards; injured a third and fourth, one of whom lies in a dangerous state in the Jamjeebhoy Hospital. The man at once permitted himself to be made a prisoner.

"The sum subscribed towards the Irish Relief Fund at Bombay amounts to £9,300—upwards of £23,000 having been collected throughout India."

VISIT OF THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE TO BRISTOL.—The Grand Duke Constantine visited Bristol on Sunday evening, by a special train, on the Great Western Railway, from the seat of the Earl of Pembroke. His Imperial Highness was received by the Mayor and by the Russian Consul, and was entertained at dinner at the White Lion; and, on Monday, the bells were rung, salutes fired from the shipping, and other marks of respect offered. His Imperial Highness left on Monday afternoon for Troy House, the Monmouthshire seat of his Grace the Duke of Beaufort.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—MONDAY.

The business transacted to-day was of such a routine character as only to need a brief mention. The Royal Assent was given, by Commission, to many bills, the Church Temporalities (Ireland) Act Amendment Bill was windrawn. Some bills went through Committee, and the House adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS. MONDAY.

WITHDRAWAL OF THE GOVERNMENT RAILWAY BILL.

MR. STRUTT, on moving the order of the day for the second reading of the Railway Bill, stated the real character of the measure, in order to remove the misconceptions which had gone abroad as to what it contained, and what it did not contain. It had, he said, been urged, but most erroneously, as a preliminary objection to the bill, that the measure which passed in 1844 amounted to a compact between the Legislature and Railway Companies, which the bill before the House would violate. He denied that the bill of 1844 precluded the House from further legislation on the subject, and not only so, but in 1845 it was resolved to introduce into all railway bills a clause empowering the Railway Commissioners unimpaired for future legislation, as regarded existing Companies. Mr. Strutt then explained the various enactments of the present measure. He said that the principal points involved in the first division of the bill were compensation to landlords, preliminary inquiries in the country, the hearing of evidence before the Commissioners, and fares and tolls; and, in the second, those providing for the appointment of an efficient police, for the proper regulation of cheap trains, for the conveyance of the mails (the arrangements for which were now in a most unsatisfactory state), and for the conveyance of the military and police. The bill also contained a clause empowering the Railway Commissioners to call for returns from the different Companies, and to test these returns, if necessary, by inspecting their books—a power which was essential in order to secure anything like an efficient inspection. Mr. Strutt having given this explanation of the bill, proceeded to state what were the intentions of the Government in regard to it. The bill had been proposed to the House at an early period of the Session, but it had been unavoidably postponed from month to month till now. The Government were still anxious to have it passed into a law at the earliest possible period; but, as it had received intimation from parties connected with the bill of their determination to offer in every opposition in their power, and to delay its passage as much as possible, and as it therefore appeared impracticable, at this late period of the Session, to discuss it satisfactorily to pass into a law, it had come to the conclusion that the wisest course that it could pursue would be to withdraw the bill for the present, with a view to introducing another bill next Session of Parliament, founded upon similar principles.

The announcement of the withdrawal of the bill created some excitement in the House, and there were some derisive cheers.

Colonel SIBTHORP, in an angry tone, said that, in the whole course of his residence he had never seen a measure so shuffled off. Affairs as at the present time. Was it fair to the public and to that House to be thus trifled with? Why were members brought down to that House, if the Government had no intention to proceed with that bill? He considered the time was still very early for the Session of the year, and more than two hours. More shame for him to detain them in such a manner. (A laugh.) He had listened with great attention and anxiety to the speech of the right hon. gentleman, and now it appeared it was all to no purpose. He believed the hon. member for Sunderland to be too honourable a man to intrigue with the Government as to these railways, but he suspected that there had been some gross underhand jobbing, which managed, or rather mismanaged, the whole business. The Government had insulted the public with regard to this bill, and he did not believe they would bring any measure of the kind forward next session—they would be afraid to do so. He was pretty sure of being in the next Parliament, and he would take care that the matter should not be suffered to rest. The next Parliament, probably, would be a railway Parliament, when they would find the Government constantly truckling to railway directors—such was the melancholy state to which this country was reduced. If that great man who was whose death he had joined with others in commemorating a few days ago at a public dinner, and if he cause to that house and found what had taken place, then he would exclaim, "On my poor country!" (Laughter.) He could hardly have believed it possible if he had not witnessed it, that such gross imbecility and absurdity could be exhibited by any Government with the public interest.

MR. ROEBUCK likewise censured Mr. Strutt for having waited the time of the House in speaking two hours about a measure which he had once before explained, and which was about to be withdrawn. The hon. member required to know whether or not the Government intended to go on with the Railway (Ireland) Bill?

MR. HUME complimented Mr. Strutt on having at last discovered the wisest course. The propriety of rejecting the bill was amply proved by the speech of the right hon. Railway Commissioner himself.

Lord J. RUSSELL said, the number of adjourned debates compelled them to postpone several measures to the present late period of the session, and, if there was not time now to carry them out, surely the delay ought not to be charged upon the Government. The Railway Bill, therefore, he would proceed with certainly this session. The second reading he would move on Friday next.

Lord G. BENTINCK promised the noble Lord his support, as his only objection to the Irish Railway Bill was that it did not go far enough.

After a few observations from Mr. W. COLLETT and Mr. CARDWELL, the Railway Bill was withdrawn.

Some unofficial business was disposed of, and the House adjourned at half-past eight o'clock.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—TUESDAY.

THE BISHOPRIC OF MANCHESTER BILL.—A discussion took place in Committee on this bill. On the second clause, Lord KENYON said he must bring it to issue, for the purpose of inserting—"And whereas doubts have arisen whether the Bishops of new sees to be established under the provisions of this Act may not demand a seat or right of voting in Parliament, be it enacted, pursuant to the declaration of her Majesty, hereinbefore recited, that unit her Majesty will be pleased to summon to Parliament any Bishop holding one of the said sees, no Bishop holding the see will be entitled to demand as of right a writ of summons to Parliament." The Marquis of LANSDOWNE, the Lord Chancellor, and the Bishop of LONDON opposed the amendment, which was supported by Lord STANLEY and the Marquis of BUTE. On a division, the amendment was rejected by 44 to 14, and the bill went through Committee.

The Trust Money Investment (Ireland) Bill, the Newfoundland Government Bill, the Prisoners Removal (Ireland) Bill, and the Loan Societies Bill were read a third time and passed.

The House then adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—TUESDAY.

DUTIES UPON COTTON.—Mr. MUNTZ moved that the House resolve itself into a Committee of Customs to consider the duties upon the importation of copper (Act 5 and 6 Vic., c. 47), with a view to their reduction or abolition.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer objected to the motion. The finances of the country were not in such a state as would allow him to sacrifice any income, however trifling. After some observations from Lord W. Fowlett, Mr. Carew, Mr. Bernal Osborne, Mr. Wilbraham, Mr. Spooner, Mr. Scholefield, and Sir Robert Inglis, the motion was withdrawn.

IRISH WASTE LANDS.—Mr. MUNTZ moved the following resolution: "That the waste lands of Ireland offer an available means for the immediate employment and future maintenance of a part of her population, now apparently redundant, and that it is expedient to apply them to this great national object, making equitable compensation to their present proprietors." Mr. F. Scrope was proceeding to state the reasons which induced him to submit the proposition, when a motion was made that the House be counted, and forty members not being present, an adjournment took place at half-past seven o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—WEDNESDAY.

The House, which met at twelve o'clock, sat till six.

THE POOR REMOVAL ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

A long discussion ensued upon this measure. The adjourned debate was resumed by Captain PECHELL, who spoke strongly in favour of the measure.

Mr. R. Palmer, the Marquis of Granby, Mr. Spooner, Mr. V. Smith, Mr. Rice, and Mr. F. Miles, addressed the House in support of the Bill; Sir J. Graham and Mr. C. Buller in opposition to it.

Upon a division, the second reading was negatived by a majority of three only, the numbers being, for the second reading, 103; against it, 106.

In the course of the sitting, Lord J. RUSSELL, at the request of Lord G. BENTINCK, postponed the further progress of the Health of Towns Bill till next week, but expressed a hope that he should not then be met with the objection of "too late in the session," as he himself wished to proceed with the bill this week.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—THURSDAY.

PORTUGAL.—Lord BROUGHAM wished to call the attention of her Majesty's Government to the propriety of liberating Das Antas and the other officers who had been captured at Oporto, on their parole of honour. Such a step, he was convinced, would operate very beneficially on the affairs of Portugal.—The Marquis of LANSDOWNE said, that every disposition existed on the part of the British officers to show all due respect and attention to that brave officer, consistent with his high character and station.

BISHOPRIC OF MANCHESTER.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE moved the order of the day for bringing up the report on this bill.

Lord REDESDALE moved, as an amendment, the omission of the second clause.

The Marquis of LANSDOWNE said the noble Lord was too early with his amendment. The Bishop of Bangor had an amendment before him.

The Bishop of BANGOR then rose to introduce the amendment of which he had given notice. It named the counties to be comprised in the Bishoprics of St. Asaph and Bangor.

It was opposed by the Bishop of LONDON, and was withdrawn.

The House then adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—THURSDAY.

HEALTH OF TOWNS BILL.—Mr. ROEBUCK wished to know whether, as the Health of Towns Bill was on the paper for Tuesday next, it was really intended to bring on such a measure to-morrow (last Session, or whether it was the intention of the Government to have it Struttified? (A laugh.)—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that it was the intention of Government to bring on the bill.

CHESTER AND HOLYHEAD RAILWAY.—On the order of the day being moved for the third reading of the Chester and Holyhead Railway (Extension at Holyhead), a long desultory discussion took place.—Mr. HUME strongly opposed the bill, and moved as an amendment, that it be read a third time that day three months.—The house divided, when there appeared—

For the third reading	.. .. ..	80
Against it	.. .. ..	30
Majority	.. .. ..	50

Several additional clauses were then brought up and agreed to, and the bill was read.

PORTUGAL.—Mr. ROEBUCK wished to ask whether the prisoners who had been taken in Portugal by the English fleet were supported at the expense of the British Government, and if so, whether that expense would appear as an item in the next budget. (Hear.) —The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said the only answer he could at present give to the question was, that the Portuguese prisoners at present were supplied with provisions by the British fleet in the Tagus.

Mr. STRUTT, in reply to a question from Mr. RICE, stated that the Railway Board had made a minute inquiry into the causes of the late accidents, and taken precautions against their recurrence.

POOR-LAW ADMINISTRATION BILL.—The third reading of the POOR-LAW Administration Bill was then moved, and led to a long and angry debate, in which Lord THOMAS FITZGERALD, the performances as the Queen's Theatre with their presence in the evening. The Royal suite consisted of the Marchioness of Douro, Lady Caroline Cocks, Hon. Miss Paget, Lord Byron, Lord Alfred Paget, and Colonel Wylde.

On Wednesday the Queen and Prince Albert rode out on horseback, attended by the Hon. Miss Stanley, Lord Alfred Paget, and Colonel Bouverie.

The Queen held a Court on Thursday afternoon at Buckingham Palace. Count de St. Aulaire, Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary from his Majesty the King of the French, had an audience of her Majesty on his return to his embassy at the British Court.

THE ACCESSION OF HER MAJESTY QUEEN VICTORIA.—Last Sunday, her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria completed the twenty-first year of her reign, having ascended the throne of Great Britain on the 20th of June, 1837.

ARRIVAL OF THE KING AND QUEEN OF THE BELGIANS.—The King and Queen of the Belgians arrived at Buckingham Palace, on Wednesday evening, on a visit to the Queen.

CRATEWORTH.—The Duke of Devonshire has left Devonshire House for Chatsworth, where the noble Duke will receive a visit from his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Constantine, in the course of the ensuing week.

SIR ROBERT PEEL AND THE GRAND DUKE CONSTANTINE.—Sir Robert and Lady Peel and Miss Peel have left town for Drayton Manor, Staffordshire, in order to make preparations for the reception of the Grand Duke Constantine, who, accompanied by his Excellency Baron Brunnow, will visit the right hon. Baronet during the early part of the ensuing week, and will honour Sir Robert with his company for three days.

FESTIVITIES AT BEAUFORT HOUSE.—The Duke and Duchess of Beaufort gave a superb entertainment on Wednesday evening, at Beaufort House, to their Royal Highnesses the Hereditary Grand Duke and Grand Duchess of Saxe Weimar. The hospitalities commenced with a grand banquet, at which his Royal Highness Prince George, and a distinguished circle of the nobility, had the honour of meeting the Grand Duke and Grand Duchess. The banquet was succeeded by a ball, the invitations to which included several Royal personages, as well as the leading members of the aristocracy and fashion of the world.

ARISTOCRATIC BALL.—Miss Burdett Coutts gave a grand ball on Wednesday night, at her mansion in Stratton-street, on which occasion she was honoured with the company of their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge, the Duke of Wellington, and a large number of the fashionable world.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

CURIOUS RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—An accident, attended with great loss of property, occurred on the morning of yesterday week on the Great Western Railway, between the Chippenham and Wootton Basset Stations. It appears that a goods train, consisting of between thirty and forty trucks, containing merchandise and cattle, and propelled by two powerful engines, one of which was in the rear of the train, left the Chippenham Station about one o'clock in the morning, and proceeded as far as the bottom of the inclined plane, near Wootton Basset Station, when a chain, which connected the two parts of the timber waggon, broke, and the leading engine ran away with a few trucks and the fore part of that containing the timber. One end of the timber, being thus left without support, immediately fell and buried itself in the ground, forming an obstacle to the progress of the train. The driver of the engine behind the train, not being aware of what had occurred, and attributing the additional resistance to the inclined plane, left his steam on, and drove the waggons one over the other with tremendous force. About a dozen trucks were more or less damaged, one being driven completely into a field near the line, and several quite smashed up. By the accident, 73 sheep, 8 lambs, and 1 calf, were destroyed, many of them having either a limb broken or the body frightfully injured The guards and engine-drivers escaped unhurt. No passengers are taken by the goods trains on the Great Western Railway.

SUICIDE WHILE LABOURING UNDER A COFFER.—An inquest was held on Tuesday at Bethlehem Hospital, relative to the death of Sarah Pocock, aged forty-five years, late an inmate, who committed suicide under the most dreadful circumstances. Elizabeth Witness, laundrymaid, proved that she had known the deceased about three months as being an occasional visitor to the establishment. On Monday last, shortly before twelve, witness and the several washerwomen suddenly missed deceased. Witness ran into the wash-house and saw deceased standing on the top of a large copper, which was boiling over. She called out to prevent her from so doing, but, before she could reach her, the deceased jumped into the boiling liquid. Witness obtained the assistance of another female, but they were unable to get her out, as she was rendered and crouched herself down in the water. Several men were immediately called in, and the deceased was taken out in a dreadful state, and in most frightful condition, and removed to the infirmary. Henrietta Hunter, the matron, deposed to meeting the deceased soon after the melancholy affair had taken place, and, upon questioning her, she admitted that she had jumped in, as she had a wish to die. The deceased was considered to be labouring under a fit of insanity, as she was sufficiently collected and rational. The occupation of the mind in such cases was quite necessary, and recommended by the medical officers. The deceased never betrayed any symptoms of violence. She must have removed the lid of the copper, as it was perfectly safe a few minutes before. The Jury returned a verdict of "Temporary Insanity."

COMMITTAL OF TWO LADY THIEVES AT BRISTOL.—The magistrates at Bristol, on Tuesday, were engaged in hearing a charge of felony preferred by the officials of the Great Western Railway Company, against two females of elegant appearance and in a proper condition as to their means of living.

It was stated that the prisoners had been for some time past engaged in pocket-picking in railway carriages, from which they earned a handsome livelihood. A lady named Barnard, from Cheltenham, was in the habit of visiting the booking-office, waiting for a down train, by which she purposed proceeding to Swindon-upper-Mare. She had arrived too late for one train, and was waiting for another, when she was accosted by a female, who presented memoranda in her pocket-book, she felt some one push against her. Upon looking round she saw the prisoners, but they appeared to be too respectable for her to suspect anything wrong, and accordingly went on with her writing. In a few minutes afterwards she was again pushed against by the prisoners, who, upon her again looking up, immediately left the office. Their precipitate departure induced her to suspect something was wrong, and Mrs. Barnard immediately put her hand into her pocket and missed a small bag, in which were five £5 notes. She gave an alarm, and the railway police went in search of the prisoners, who were found in the London booking office of the Great Western station, waiting to take their departure for town. They were at once captured, and while they were in custody one of them was seen to throw away from her the bag containing the stolen notes. Mrs. Barnard at once identified them as her property, and the "ladies," who denied the theft and appealed to their "high respectability," were committed before the magistrates, who, upon hearing the facts, committed them for trial.

KABYLIA.—PLAIN OF BOUGIE, FROM THE RAMPARTS.—FROM A SKETCH BY A RECENT VISITOR.

KABYLIA.

(With two Sketches by a Correspondent.)

THE recal of Marshal Bugeaud from the Government of Algeria, and his recent proceedings in Kabylia, have led to some very animated discussions in the French Chambers. During his "Pacific Promenade" in the country of the Kabyles, he has devastated ten towns; and, as a mark of the civilisation of the inhabitants of these mountain republics, it is noticed that they possessed public libraries, containing Arabian and Berber manuscripts of great value, all which were burnt by order of the Marshal.

From the Sketch book of a Correspondent, who has very lately returned from a tour in Kabylia, we are enabled to present our readers with the two annexed Illustrations; and the accompanying details:—

The town of Bougie, in Kabylia, lies on the north coast of Africa, at the western extremity of the Gulf to which it gives its name. It has been successively in the hands of the Romans, the Moors, the Spaniards, the Algerines; and, lastly, the French. In the construction of its ancient walls, the characteristic masonry of its several masters may be traced: this variation of architecture adds to its picturesque effect, and is an interesting record of its history.

Its neighbourhood has lately been the scene of an attack made by the French upon the Kabyles, the inhabitants of a mountainous district, extending fifty miles inland to Setif; and, on the west and east, to within a short distance of Algiers and Philippeville respectively. They are a people quite distinct from the Arabs, living in villages, manufacturing their own arms, ammunition, &c; carrying on a considerable trade, and generally remarkable for their intelligence. They are supposed to be the aborigines of the country that they still inhabit, and are said never to have been entirely subdued, even by the Romans, who once were masters of the North of Africa, and who have left traces of their greatness to the present day.

The Expedition of the French, lately undertaken against these people by the Governor of Algeria, under the mild title of a "Promenade Militaire," is thus described in the Presse:—"The expedition, called pacific, against the Kabyles, which was undertaken, in spite of the Chamber and public opinion, and imposed on the Government by the caprice of Marshal Bugeaud, has produced its necessary consequences: the Kabyles, attacked without reason in their hearths, have defended themselves—the blood of our soldiers has unnecessarily flowed."

The writer of this notice was a passenger in the French Government steamer which conveyed the first detachment of engineers to Bougie. They carried with them a bridge, which was disembarked at the mouth of the river Ould Sabel, over which it was to be erected; and which, running through a plain at the foot of the mountains, falls into the gulf, about a mile to the east of the town: this was then the farthest limit to which any one could venture with safety. The column under Marshal Bugeaud, coming from Algiers, followed the course of this river; and it was from its right bank that he dated his despatch, giving an account of his unprovoked attack on the Kabyles, in which more than fifty of his men and officers were either killed or wounded. A second column, under General Bedeau, from Constantine, by way of Setif, within sight of the ramparts of Bougie, suffered about the same loss: several villages of the Kabyles were destroyed, and their inhabitants (as has been too often the case in the warfare of the French in Algeria) put to the sword. The results of this expedition are the submission of the tribes, and an agreement to pay tribute; but, it remains to be proved whether it will secure that free and safe passage from Bougie to Setif, and other places in the interior, which was the ostensible object proposed.

The scenery of the Gulf of Bougie is very beautiful: the mountains, which are of considerable height, were, in the spring, partially covered with snow; their sides are wooded and furrowed with a succession of valleys, which, for ages, have protected the Kabyles from invasion, and secured their independence. In the far distance, and scarcely to be discerned, are their villages; and the slopes, descending to the plain, show signs of cultivation, which appears to be carried to a considerable extent.

BUGEAUD IN ALGIERS.

Raise high the goblet quaff'd by Catiline!
Shrink not brave warriors: 'tis but Kabyle blood!
Swart Africa too long has bravely stood
Against your "holy bayonets," Right Divine
To revel in man's gore! Ay! quaff the wine
Of Moloch, children of the Tricolor!
Let the night-blaze of villages outshine
Upon the banner of each gallant corps!
And thou, great Duke of Isly, baker famed
Of Dahra's human holocaust go on!
Make an Acesdema, then be it named
Peace, while proud Gallia hails her worthy son.
"Ah! bean pays de France" shall thirst of war
For ever thin thy nobler nature mar?—L.

PORTUGAL.

The news from Portugal is important. The letters from Oporto of the 15th announce that the desired settlement of affairs has not taken place. On the contrary the Oporto Junta refuses to submit, and has refused the amnesty proffered by the Queen. The Junta has thus broken faith, for the British Consul at Oporto was distinctly informed that they would submit on ascertaining with certainty that the original amnesty and terms carried by Colonel Wylde would still be conceded, and the Consul thereupon informed Saldanha of the Junta's assumed determination, and begged him not to advance upon the town, thus serving the Junta's object, which was merely to gain time. The blockade, which had been suspended, was renewed. Spanish troops to the number of 12,000 men were on their march towards Oporto on the 11th.

The Queen of Portugal has issued a proclamation, couched in very affectionate and conciliatory terms towards the people of Portugal, in which her Majesty says that, in order to obtain the submission which is due to her, and to re-establish public order, she has resolved to adopt every measure dictated by humanity and the public safety, such as according a very extensive amnesty, and the restitution of all employments and of all honours.

The Cortes are also to be convoked, and the elections are to be proceeded with, after submission shall have been duly made, and public order restored on every point of the kingdom, in maintaining in all its plenitude the liberty of elections, the free exercise of all rights, and the scrupulous and impartial execution of the constitutional charter, in all its provisions.

This proclamation is followed by a decree, proclaiming a general and complete amnesty for all political crimes and offences committed since Oct. 6; the whole to be buried in oblivion, and stating that all persons deprived of their honours and distinctions shall have the same restored to them.

A letter from Zamaro states that the Spanish General Concha occupied Braganza on the 11th, with a division of his army.

SIR GEORGE POLLOCK, G.C.B.—This gallant and distinguished officer has returned to England from Calcutta. We regret to state that he is still in so delicate a state of health that he is unable to appear in public. At present, indeed, he is a close prisoner to the house, and compelled to decline all invitations, public or private. It is said, however, that there is every prospect of his soon recovering, under the invigorating influences of his native climate.

LICENSED VICTUALLERS' SCHOOL.—The forty-first anniversary of the Licensed Victuallers' School was celebrated on Wednesday, at the White Conduit Tavern, Pentonville, by a magnificent dinner, at which about two thousand persons were present. The chair was occupied by Joseph Carter Wood, Esq., who was supported by Lord Robert Grosvenor, M.P., Sir William Clay, M.P., Colonel Wood, M.P., Mr. Thomas Duncombe, M.P., Mr. Alderman Johnson (the late Lord Mayor), Mr. C. Cochrane, &c. &c. &c. After the usual loyal toasts had been drunk, the children now being educated in the school were introduced, and an appropriate address, of a poetical character, was spoken by two of the senior boys. From the annual address to the subscribers, it appears that in the past year the subscriptions have been increased by the sum of £440; at the last election twenty-five children were admitted into the school, and at the next it is contemplated to admit thirty. Since the school was established, 1987 children have been admitted, of whom 257 have been apprenticed, 461 sent to service, 214 taken by relations and friends, 26 died in the school, 12 expelled for repeated misconduct, and there are now within the walls of the institution 117 scholars. The toast of "Prosperity to the School," was received with unbounded applause; and in proposing it, the chairman spoke warmly in favour of the extension of education. Among the subscriptions were £50 from the Chairman, and ten guineas each from Lord R. Grosvenor, Colonel Wood, Sir W. Clay, and Mr. T. Duncombe; Mr. Alderman Johnson subscribed £31 10s., Mr. C. Cochrane £21, Mr. B. B. Cabbell £10 10s., and a number of others to a similar amount. The total amount of subscriptions was stated to be £2039 13s. The remaining toasts were "The Members for the Metropolitan Districts," "The Morning Advertiser," "The Governor and Committee of Management of the Licensed Victuallers' School," and several others of a similar description, and the proceedings did not terminate till a late hour. Mr. Toole officiated as toast master.

FATAL OCCURRENCE AT MILBANK.—On Sunday, a youth named Tripp, whose parents reside in Chelsea, met an untimely death by semi-decapitation, at Messrs. Cubitt's, where he was employed in the steam-sawing department. It appears that he was at the time in a position with the works he had no right to occupy, when, unexpectedly, a part of the machinery that vibrates perpendicularly fell in its descent, guillotine-like, upon the neck of the unfortunate youth, by which the vertebra was cut completely asunder, and death all but simultaneously ensued.

COLLIERY EXPLOSION.—An explosion of fire-damp took place about nine o'clock on Tuesday evening, at Felling Colliery, near Gateshead-on-Tyne. Three men and a boy were killed, and several others who were in the mine at the time were injured severely.

KABYLIA.—BOUGIE, FROM THE SEA.—FROM A SKETCH BY A RECENT VISITOR.

LADY DEANE COMMENCING, AT DUNDANION, THE CORK, BLACKROCK, AND PASSAGE RAILWAY.

COMMENCEMENT OF THE CORK, BLACKROCK, AND PASSAGE RAILWAY.

THIS important line of Railway was commenced on Tuesday, at Dundanion Castle, the seat of Sir Thomas Deane, two miles distant from the city of Cork. The splendid demesne, overhanging the river, presented a scene of bustle from an early hour. "Hundreds of the labouring classes," says the Cork Examiner, "thronged the grounds, in anticipation of employment, which desirable boon will be immediately conferred on some fifteen hundred or two thousand men, at most remunerative wages, under the spirited direction of Mr. Moore, the contractor." There were also present, crowds of villagers, in holiday attire. The spot selected for the cutting or turning of the first turf was contiguous to the old Castle of Dundanion, celebrated as having once afforded shelter to the famous William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania.

The excellent band of the 67th regiment was on the ground from an early hour; and, by their able performances, delighted the promenaders until about half-past one o'clock, when the visitors, forming a very numerous and fashionable gathering, were called from their promenade by a single gun, and then repaired to the drawing-room of the mansion of Dundanion; where, having formed in processional order, they advanced, headed by Lady Deane, leaning on the arm of Archdeacon Kyle, (in the absence of Sir Thomas,) to the spot marked for the cutting. On arriving here, Lady Deane was presented by the Directors, Alderman Thomas Lyons, Dr. Lyons, and Mr. B. Hall, with a beautifully wrought silver spade, the workmanship of Mr. Hawksworth, Grand Parade; on which is engraven the following inscription:—

The First Sod of the CORK, BLACKROCK, AND PASSAGE RAILWAY,
Was turned by LADY DEANE,
At Dundanion,
With this Spade, on Tuesday, the 15th day of June, 1847,
And presented to her by the Directors of the Company.

The Barrow is, also, a fine specimen of cabinet-work, by Mr. Allen, of Grattan-street.

All being in readiness, a deep incision was made in the turf, and Lady Deane, with admirable dexterity, lifted the sod and placed it in the barrow, which she then trundled, for a short distance, amidst the shouts of the people, the firing of guns, and the music of the band to "God Save the Queen."

Several gentlemen, including the Mayor and Directors, then followed Lady Deane's example; at the conclusion of which, Archdeacon Kyle said he had been commissioned by Lady Deane to return her best thanks to the Directors for their very handsome present of that day. Interested as she was in the trade and welfare of the City of Cork, she hoped that the present eventful crisis—the commencement of such an important undertaking—whilst it afforded ample return to the gentlemen embarked in it, would also prove the means of bestowing ample and remunerative employment on the operative and labouring classes at large. (Loud cheers.)

The ceremony then terminated; and the guests returned to the mansion, where an elegant banquet was served; in the absence of Sir Thomas Deane, the respected and venerable father of Lady Deane, Robert O'Callaghan Newenham, Esq., presiding; Lady Deane and Archdeacon Kyle, supporting him on the left, and Alderman T. Lyons, J.P., on the right. There were, also, present the Mayor, James Murphy, J.P., Ringmahon Castle; St. John Jeffreyes, J.P., Blarney Castle; Daniel Leahy, D.L., Shanakiel House; Col. Spinks and Lady, Col. Westropp, Henry O'Seward, Mrs. and the Misses Seward, Passage; and a party of distinguished guests, for whose names we regret that we have not space.

The Banquet having terminated, Alderman T. Lyons proposed, in eulogistic terms, the health of the respected hostess, "Lady Deane," which was drunk with the greatest enthusiasm. Alderman Kyle returned thanks on behalf of Lady Deane. The health of "The Queen" was then drunk, with the usual honours; as was also "Prince Albert and the other members of the Royal Family." The ladies then withdrew; and there followed a long list of toasts, commencing with "The Lord Lieutenant, the descendant of the great and good Lord-Chancellor Hyde, of the reign of James II." The new Railway Company, and its officers were toasted with much enthusiasm; as was Sir Thomas Deane (the absent host). The festivities terminated with the health of "the Ladies." The guests, after paying their respects to Lady Deane, and other members of the Dundanion household, departed; and thus the auspicious proceedings terminated.

COOLNESS OF A SPANISH ROBBER.—The Valencia diligence was robbed a few days ago near Cuenca. The chief of the thieves seems to have been quite an orator. The passengers not having produced of their own accord sufficient to satisfy his demands, he represented, with the air of a man defrauded of his dues, and treated shabbily, that really this was a very small number of watches for so respectable a party; and that, however much it went against his grain to commit anything in the shape of violence, the principles of duty would force him to proceed to commit a few little atrocities, unless the gentlemen present consented to conduct themselves in a handsomer manner. This dignified appeal to the consciences of the passengers did not fail of producing an effect. They searched their trunks and pockets a second time with more diligence. Some ounces of gold, some jewels, that had escaped their attention at first, were drawn forth to light, and handed over to the bandit. He was contented with this supplementary addition to the spoils, and refrained from the little atrocities he had reluctantly been obliged to throw out a hint of; nevertheless (said he), he could not refrain from observing that it was always safer, as well as more becoming, upon these occasions, to speak the truth at once.

HULLAH'S NEW MUSIC HALL.

ON Monday, the foundation stone of the edifice in course of erection in Long-acre (nearly opposite the end of Bow-street), for the use of Mr. Hullah's Singing Schools, was laid by Viscount Morpeth. The Bishop of Norwich, Lord Lyttelton, Mr Gladstone, Mr. Justice Coleridge, Sir E. Codrington, the Rev. Sir Henry Dukinfield, Dr. Jelf, of King's College, and several other gentlemen of distinction were present on the occasion; and the area of the building was crowded with Mr. Hullah's pupils.

Prayers having been read, the members of Mr. Hullah's class sang the Hundredth Psalm, after which, Lord Morpeth performed the ceremony of laying the stone, on which is inscribed merely his name and the date. His Lordship then addressed the meeting upon the moral and social good which might be expected to result from a more general knowledge of music, the comfort it might carry into domestic circles, and the spirit of earnestness, and, more than all, of unity which it might give to devotional exercises. He said that all must admit that no man had done one-half so much towards giving a knowledge of music to the million in England as Mr. Hullah, who, besides the musical attainments he imparted, rendered no small service to society by the spirit of unanimity and goodwill generated by his classes. His Lordship ended a long and eloquent speech by wishing every success to the institution.—Mr. Beaver read an address from the singing classes to Mr. Hullah, expressive of their satisfaction at the course he was adopting, which satisfaction they had proved by subscribing among themselves £500 towards defraying the expenses of the building, a cheque for which sum was handed to Mr. Hullah by Mr. Beaver.—Mr. Hullah returned thanks, hoping that his pupils, with many of whom he had been connected for six or seven years, in common with himself, would always be actuated by the same principle of unity and co-operation, without which the new hall would be no more than four walls and a roof, void of influence or profit.—The Bishop of Norwich proposed a vote of thanks to Lord Morpeth, and alluded to the effects of music upon both soldiers and sailors, asking who did not feel more loyal when he heard the national anthem, or "Rule Britannia," sung or played?—Lord Morpeth thought they could not do better than close the proceedings by requesting Mr. Hullah's pupils to sing "God Save the Queen," which was performed in a creditable style.

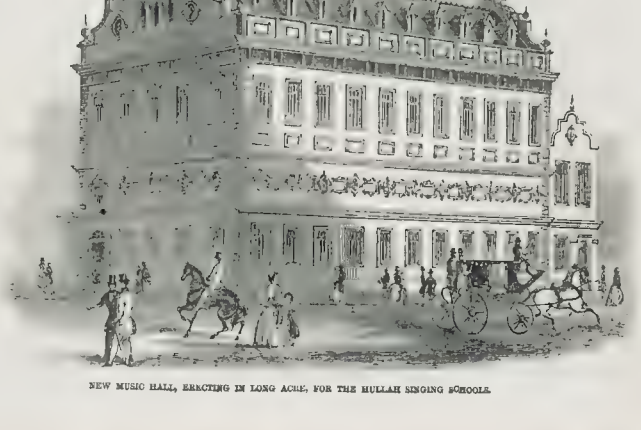
In the evening, the event of the day was celebrated by a Concert at the Crown and Anchor Tavern, in the Strand, at which upwards of 1000 persons were present. On the platform were Miss Birch, Miss Dolby, Mr. Braham, Mr. H. Phillips, the Messrs. Distin, &c.; and their performances gave great satisfaction to the crowded audience.

We annex a view of the New Hall, showing the north front, in Wilson-street (leading from Endell-street to Drury-lane); and the east front, facing Charles-street, Long-acre; the plot of ground being connected (at the south-west corner) with Long-acre, by another plot. Thus, the situation admits of three entrances, from three different sides of the building—from Long-acre, Charles-street, and Wilson-street. The design is by Mr. William Wesmacott; it is in the Elizabethan style, and in the roof, reminds one of the Town-hall in Belgium; the dormers will light a large room to be fitted up for a ventilating apparatus, and as a Library of Music and Musical Literature. The Great Concert Hall will afford accommodation for three thousand persons.

With respect to the portion of the building now in progress, the lease of a house standing on a portion of the ground being as yet unexpired, as much of the building as will cover a length of 87 feet, is in the first instance to be completed; the use of the ground now occupied by the house, No. 89, Long-acre having been granted by the ground landlords, as a temporary entrance.

THE LATE THOMAS HOOD.—We have much pleasure in stating that Lord John Russell has announced her Majesty's gracious intention of conferring a pension of £100 a year upon the children of this highly-gifted but unfortunate author.

THE BANKER AND THE SPANISH ROBBERS.—Mr. J. A. Smith, M.P., who is on a visit to Madrid, went a few days since to the Escurial with his son, and while staying there his friends at Madrid found out that a band of robbers had formed a plan to waylay him on his return and carry him off to the mountains, in hopes of obtaining a heavy ransom for the release of "the English banker." The political chief of Madrid, to whom information of the plot was given, sent a party of the civic guard, who came upon the robbers about three miles from Madrid. Five of them were armed to the teeth. The civic guard succeeded in taking some of the band, the rest escaped. Mr. Smith had not come up at the time.



NEW MUSIC HALL, ERECTING IN LONG ACRE, FOR THE HULLAH SINGING SCHOOLS.

CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK.

SUNDAY, June 27.—Fourth Sunday after Trinity.—Full Moon at 10h. 8m. p.m.
MONDAY, 28.—Queen Victoria crowned, 1838.
TUESDAY, 29.—St. Peter. Mars rises at 11h. 57m. p.m.
WEDNESDAY, 30.—Mercury sets at 9h. 45m. p.m.—Saturn rises at 11h. 4m. p.m.
THURSDAY, July 1.—The Sun rises at 3h. 49m.; is due E. at 7h. 23m.; and sets at 6h 17m.
FRIDAY, 2.—Visitation of the Blessed Virgin Mary.—The Day has decreased 7 minutes in length.
SATURDAY, 3.—Dog Days begin.
Venus appears near the W. horizon soon after sunset. The planets Mars and Saturn appear near the E. horizon before sunrise. The Moon is near to Saturn on July 3.

TIMES OF HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE, FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 3.

Sunday		Monday		Tuesday		Wednesday		Thursday		Friday		Saturday
M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.	M.	A.
h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.	h. m.
0 32	1 1a	1 30	2 0	2 30	2 58	3 30	3 55	4 30	4 50	5 30	5 49	6 30	6 49

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"A Constant Subscriber."—The Rev. Dr. Hook's celebrated Sermon, "Hear the Church," may be had of the Messrs. Rivington.
"A West India Subscriber," Barbadoes, should forward his question by some other medium than that which subjects us to a shilling expense.
"D. W. A."—We cannot direct you.
"A Subscriber."—Mix suspected flour with lemon-juice or vinegar; if the flour be pure, they will remain together at rest; but, if there be a mixture of whiteway or chalk, a fermentation will ensue.
"Medicus," Northampton, is thanked: the correction has been made. The "School Botany" is by Professor Lindley.
"Constance," Stoke Newington.—We had not room.
"Indiana."—Apply at a Corn-chandler's
"Augusta," Burton-crescent.—Apply, by letter, to the Lord Chamberlain.
"P."—Valpy's Latin Grammar.
"M. W. H."—The volume shall be left for return.
"Peter Teazle," Rochdale.—A Series of New Plays, entitled the "Acting Drama," is in course of publication, under the experienced editorship of Mr. Webster, of the Haymarket Theatre.
"S. P. L. B.," Bath.—Read "have perished."
"An Admirer."—The Engraving will, probably, appear next week. We cannot specify the duration of the musical engagements in question.
"Diamond." We are not aware of Government having offered a premium for the discovery of "Squaring the Circle."
"Alfred D."—We must decline giving an opinion in such a case.
"J. C.," Cornhill.—The present authorised version of the Bible originated in the Hampton Court Conference of Prelates of the Church and the Dissenting Ministers, at the instance of the King, 2 James I., 1604. (See, also, the excellent article "Bible," in the "Penny Cyclopædia."
"W. W."—We have already corrected the popular error of considering the pretended document of 1688, in the British Museum, as the first English Newspaper: it is a forgery. (See page 234 of the present volume.)
"A. W."—The Epigram is not worth reprinting
"A Shilbereen Reader." We cannot state the value of the Coin. As a genee al rule, apply, for situations in Public Offices, or Companies, to the principals.
"W. W."—Try ground alum
"K. K. K."—If cotton and woollen clothing, after washing, be rinsed in a moderate solution of nitre in water, it will prevent their readily taking fire, and improve their appearance.
"A Subscriber," Berwick.—The Picture of Boulogne, and Guide to Jersey; to be had of Cruchley, Fleet street.
"Danum," Nottingham. Taylor's "Bee-keeper's Manual," (Third Edit.) The address of Mr. Sholl, the inventor of the Barrel Bee-hive, is Lamb-street, Spitalfields.
"J. D.," Wicklow.—Apply to any druggist.
"Omega Sigma."—"—brother-in-law."—We cannot reply to the questions on Military Costume.
"Quæ."—Apply to Mr. Webster, 17, Great Russell-street, Covent Garden, with your "Queen Anne's Farthing."
"J. T."—We have not room.
"Francis," Blandford, had better await the announcement of the Distributors.
"F. P.," Southsark. Or Mosaic u, literally, beaten gold: the term is most commonly applied to articles of copper, gilt.
"T. T. T. T."—A Portrait of Queen Isabella, appeared in No. 232 of our Journal.
"W. C.," Woodford. The marriage of second cousins is legal.
"J. V. L.," Kensington.—Hyde Park, London, contains 388 acres: Phœnix Park, Dublin, upwards of 1700 acres.
"E. P. S."—The line is by Dryden.
"Goss's" five guineas shall be added to.
"tota," Lincoln, should apply to the principals.
"P. E." For details of Mr. Bain's Electric Telegraph and Clock, see the "Artizan," No. 15; the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, No. 105; and the "Year-book of Facts," 1845
"A. M. K." has merely to append London to the words.
"Plato" should make interest with the Railway Directors.
"H. S.," Bradford. Black's "Picturesque Tourist of Scotland." Hemmingway's "Panorama of North Wales." Cliffe's "Book of South Wales," just published.
"M. L. C.," Liverpool.—Mdme. Persiani is an Italian. She was the daughter of the celebrated tenor singer, Tacchinardi.
"S. T. W."—Lord John Russell was never Premier till the accession of the present Ministry; he was Home Secretary, and Secretary for the Colonies, under Lord Melbourne.
"W. T." Wansford.—The Act limiting the period of enlistment to ten years has passed.
"An Old Guardsman" is correct, according to the view he takes of the matter; we treated it on a broader and more general principle. We perfectly agree with his estimate of the troops in detail: finer men, or more perfect equipments, it is impossible to produce.
"Visitor."—The best route to Vevay is as follows:—Folkestone, Boulogne, Paris, Dijon, the Jura, and Geneva. The journey might be done, as far as the mere travelling time is concerned, in five days and four nights; but passports, and other commental causes of delay, would not enable you to accomplish this under ordinary circumstances.
"M. D.," Wavertburgh, is requested to send a specimen.
"Wyaneve" is altogether mistaken: we have already referred to the edition and page of Rozcommon's Works in which the couplet occurs; which must be final.
"B. H.," Bristol, is thanked for the cuttings.
"Alfred." We have already engraved a Portrait of Dr. Wolff.
"L. C. C."—We must decline giving an opinion
"M. A.," Lincoln's Inn. The Consecration of Bishops will take place in Westminster Abbey, on the Feast of St. Peter, June 29, (next Tuesday), at half past ten, a.m., punctual.
"J. T. L."—A Rector is a clergyman who has the charge of a parish, and has the tithes, &c. A Vicar is the incumbent of a benefice.
"D. T.," Cockermouth, should apply to a Music-seller.
"A Young Farmer." To prepare Quills, steam them for four hours; then dry them, and in twenty-four hours, cut the nibs, and draw out the pith; lastly, rub them with a piece of cloth, and expose them to a moderate heat in an oven or store
"Καλλεκωψ, Cork." The word Bathophage is of three syllables as in the Greek Βηθαγη.

THE POTATO DISEASE. We have received a letter from Mr. Westwood, the Secretary to the Entomological Society, described in the most courteous language, denying that the Aphis Vastator is the cause of the Potato Disease; and, advancing a theory of his own, in which he assumes the malady to be Cholera, analogous, in many respects, to the Cholera in man. At, however, Cholera is particularly characterised by diarrhœa, griping, and spasmodic contraction of the muscles, we do not subscribe to Mr. Westwood's Cholera theory. Up to the present moment, the Aphis Vastator is the only agent which has been proved to lead to the destruction of the plant, and, is now remains for other investigators to ascertain whether any other agent has assisted in the production of the mischief.

 Replies to a few Genealogical and Heraldic Inquiries are, unavoidably, deferred till next week.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION AT OXFORD.—Next Week we shall illustrate this important Meeting in a Series of Engravings, by our own Artists.

NOTICE. After next Saturday, July 3, all Back Numbers of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS will be charged One Shilling each. The prices of the Parts and Volumes will be as usual: the Parts, 2s. 6d. each; and the Vols., 18s. each, except Vol. I., 21s. All the Numbers are kept in print, and can be had on the above terms

BOOKS RECEIVED DURING THE WEEK.

Mc'Leod's Arithmetical Questions.—The Knitter's Friend.—The Knitter's Casket.—The Baby's Wardrobe.—Marie. By Count D'Orsay.—Post Office Railway Director.
MUSIC.—The Princess' Polka.—A Friend in Time of Need. A Song.—L'Aigle Quadrille.

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JUNE 26, 1847.

THE great measure of Railway Government, which was to define the powers and set in motion the machinery of the new Railway Board, has broken down: the "late period of the session," and the "difficulties" of the question, have destroyed it: after a long and elaborate speech from Mr. Strutt, on Monday night, describing all the advantages of the plan, all the benefits and protection the public would derive from it, he suddenly, and to the surprise of the House, withdrew the bill altogether. That great leviathan, Mr. Hudson, shook his vast sides with laughter at the result of the Ministerial attempt to bind him with a band, and the smaller fry of the sea of speculation echoed their Monarch's hilarity: it was a scene of infinite contentment and cheerfulness. There, probably, never was a Ministry with such a talent for failing in all its endeavours. There is nothing it will not give up at the mere appearance of a difficulty: the mention of the word is enough: it scared them into stopping short of their own convictions on the Education Question; it has terrified them out of the best part of the Health of Towns Bill; and it has frightened them into dropping the only plan of Railway Government that ever was formed on anything like a system.

Men may contemplate difficulties till they despair: the more obstacles are dwelt on the more they magnify; and the apprehension that is so alive to them will often create them where they do not exist. Had the Government been resolved and determined to carry their Railway plan, they might have done it; for it was brought in at the beginning of the session: but it has been what is called "hung up" ever since. And the delay is now made the chief excuse for abandoning it. The same delay has been almost fatal to all that is left of the Health of Towns Bill. The efforts of the Government have been so feeble on both that the parties interested in maintaining things as they are, are emboldened to an opposition little short of defiance. Those places are exempted from control that are strong enough to resist interference, just as those interests are untouched that have wealth and power in the House; and the mass of the public are left exactly to the old status quo.

It is curious that, at the very time the Government is defeated, or defeats itself, in the attempt to establish some kind of control over Hudson and Co.'s highways (for the roads of the country are no longer under the protection of the Sovereign or the law), accidents of all kinds are increasing, as if to prove the necessity of it. Cast-iron arches break down with the weight of an ordinary train; brick arches sink into the streets of the metropolis, simply by their own weight; trains are turned into sidings, and produce fatal collisions; cattle trains are crushed by engines propelling from behind, and sheep and calves converted into veal and mutton by a wholesale slaughter. Government Inspectors and Engineers, who are only called forth by disaster, are seen walking over masses of fallen brickwork with the mortar still wet, or prying into the fractures of iron girders, or looking at shattered engines and carriages, from which the railway officials, "with their usual promptitude," as the reports say, (practice we presume making perfect), have conveyed the killed and wounded.

General Pasley's name has become quite a sound of ill-omen; it is only heard after some startling occurrence. His reports of the causes of accidents are, no doubt, discriminating, and all that can be desired; but the railway people never seem to derive any warning or improvement from them; and the Government abdicates the powers that might compel some attention to matters essential to the public safety. We fear the cheap and rapid system of construction is beginning to prevail in these undertakings; and it is quite impossible to secure good work for under payment. The suburbs of the metropolis will soon be intersected with lines of railroad, necessarily carried on viaducts; how many, on an average, are to be allowed to fall in, and bury the foot-passengers in the streets below them? We are no advocates of too much Government intermeddling. There are some things that no foresight can prevent, and Governments are no more infallible than private companies, seeing that human agents are the instruments of both. Neither Belgium nor Prussia, where the Government conducts everything, is exempt from casualties. On one of the Belgian lines, a short time since, they nearly killed the Queen and her suite. But the inability of a Government to do everything, does not exempt it from doing what it can; and what is wanted is not so much minute interference, as the establishment of some real responsibility in the Company itself.

At present, a frightful accident happens, an inquiry is made, the blame is cast on some spiritual man or driver, he is imprisoned or dismissed, and the public hears no more of the matter. But nothing touches the Directors or the Company, who, from parsimony or other motives, may have employed too small a number of servants, and those, probably, for the same reasons, not the best qualified of their class. The raving maniac who, the other day, murdered a poor girl in the Earl of Derby's grounds, had, up to the previous day, been a signal-man on a railway, and symptoms of insanity had evidently been noticed in him for some time. Yet he was still employed! What would be the fate of the Captain of a ship of war who had knowingly placed a sailor so affected at the helm? If the ship had been lost through it, he would have been degraded and dismissed the service. It is this kind of responsibility that should be attached to Railway Companies. Lives are as much in their charge as in that of a Captain in the Navy; but the responsibility should take a money form; the only penalty that can touch a Corporation is a pecuniary one. People must travel by railways now; they have no choice. The good or bad reputation of a line is becoming of less importance; make it, then, their interest to be careful, by imposing on them a more direct liability, either to private parties or the Government, in cases where accident is plainly caused by the misconduct, carelessness, or incapacity of their servants.

THERE really is some truth in what has been said satirically, that in England every public abuse requires a victim of high rank before it is abolished. The sanatory improvements now struggling with the sluggishness and suspicions of the public, would be greatly quickened by the death of somebody in some grand street, with a filthy alley or court behind it—and there are many such. Sydney Smith looked forward to a Bishop being burned in a railway carriage with confidence it would settle the "locking in" question. We have heard that many years ago one of the pieces of water in the Parks was unfenced and dangerous, being near a thoroughfare; but, though many ordinary people were drowned in it, nothing was done till a short-sighted nobleman walked into it one evening and perished. It was railed round next day. The whole power of popular opinion has not been able to abolish the miserable system of demanding payment for entrance to our cathedrals. The House of Commons, Sir R. Peel, popular periodicals, leading journals, nay the Quarterly Review itself, have all denounced the system in vain; a partial modification was all they obtained. But last week two-pence was demanded of a Lord at the door-way of St Paul's, and now, like Sydney Smith, we have hopes. If the money-taker could have known a Peer of the realm by instinct, as Falstaff knew the true Prince, he would have let him pass free; the two-pence extracted from the pocket of Earl Fitzwilliam has, perhaps, given the death blow to the practice. That two-pence inspired a speech in the House of Lords; what amount of coin taken from a commoner could have produced that effect? So small a sum of money was never better laid out for the benefit of the public, or, we will add, that of the Church itself. The system of money-taking at a Cathedral door, necessitates arrangements most unsuitable to the sacred character of the edifice; in St. Paul's, it being in the centre of a metropolis, those arrangements are more than usually extensive: we recollect with pain sundry barriers and iron spikes, to keep the public within certain bounds; and the presence of a policeman, his uniform looking doubly hideous in such a place, had a most chilling effect in the House of Prayer. The sum raised by the practice cannot be of much importance to a richly-endowed Chapter—almost as little, we should think, as the two-pence to Earl Fitzwilliam. But the principle involved both in the demand and the payment, is one that is doing more harm than many might suppose.

THE WEATHER.

THE temperature of each day during the past week has been below the average of the season: the sky has been nearly always covered by cloud. There have been several fine showers of rain, but its aggregate amount is but small. From Jan 1 to the present time, only 7 inches of rain have fallen; the average annual quantity is about 25 inches; so that, in the coming half year, we may expect two-and-a-half times as much as we have hitherto had. The following are some particulars of each day during the past week:—Friday, the sky was generally covered with cirrostratus and fleecy clouds; a heavy rain was generally falling during the morning. The direction of the wind was from S.W. generally, but it was variable. The average temperature of the day was 57½; the lowest reading, on grass, was 43½. Saturday, the sky was generally covered by cloud till the evening; the directions of the wind were W.S.W. and N.N.W. The average temperature of the day was 59°; the lowest reading, on grass, was 40°. Sunday was a dull day; the sky was nearly wholly covered by cloud all the day. Some rain fell after 9 P.M.; the direction of the wind was S.W. The average temperature of the day was 57°, and the lowest reading, on grass, was 39°. Monday, the sky was cloudy till near midnight, with very slight exceptions; the direction of the wind was S.S.W.; the average temperature was 57°, and the lowest thermometrical reading, on grass, was 47°. Tuesday, the appearance of the sky was variable; the direction of the wind was S.S.W. The average temperature of the day was 57½°; and the lowest reading, on grass, was 44°. Wednesday was a dull and wet day; the sky was nearly cloudless early in the morning, but, afterwards, became quite cloudy. At three P.M. a heavy rain fell, accompanied with vivid lightning and loud thunder: this storm was much more severe felt in every respect in the metropolis than at Blackheath. The general direction of the wind was S.W. The average temperature of the day was only 56°, and the lowest reading, on grass, was 34½. At night there was a lunar halo, whose radius was 22½°. Thursday the sky was principally covered with large clouds and a good deal of scud. Early in the morning two mock moons were visible; the one on the left side of the moon was well defined, and they were both of them at the distance of 23½° from the real moon. The direction of the wind was principally S.W. The average temperature of the day was 56½°, and the lowest reading on grass was 45°. The average temperature of the week was 57½°.

The extreme thermometrical readings each day were:—

Friday,	June 18, the highest during the day was	65	deg., and the lowest was	50 deg.
Saturday,	June 19	69	,,	43 ,,
Sunday,	June 20	68	,,	48 ,,
Monday,	June 21	69½	,,	48½ ,,
Tuesday,	June 22	67	,,	48½ ,,
Wednesday,	June 23	63½	,,	41½ ,,
Thursday,	June 24	67½	,,	49 ,,

Blackheath, Friday, June 25, 1847. J. G.

METROPOLITAN NEWS.

ELECTION OF SHERIFFS.—The election of two Sheriffs took place on Thursday morning. The Lord Mayor took the chair shortly after one o'clock. The Recorder having briefly addressed the electors, the names of the various candidates were read by the Common Sergeant, and William Cubitt, Esq., fishmonger, and Samuel Hill, Esq., spectacle-maker, were unanimously elected to be Sheriffs for the city of London and Middlesex. The election of candidates for other minor municipal offices was then proceeded with, the City Chamberlain and other officers being, for the most part, re-elected.

CITY OF LONDON ELECTION.—Mr. George Lyall has announced that he will not present himself as a candidate at the ensuing election.

ELECTION FOR MARYLEBONE.—On Monday evening, a numerous meeting of the electors of the borough of Marylebone took place at Lawson's Rooms, Gower-street, for the purpose of hearing an exposition of the political sentiments of Mr. Sergeant Shee, as a candidate to represent the borough in Parliament. Mr. Sergeant Shee, on presenting himself, was received with great applause, and stated his political views. He approved of household suffrage, grants for education, and the ballot. He was opposed to church rates, and to the endowment of the Irish clergy. The learned sergeant having answered a variety of questions, a resolution approving of him as a fit and proper person to represent the borough in Parliament was adopted. As Sir C. Napier is not going to Lisbon, he intends to contest the borough again. It is said he has coalesced with Sir B. Hall. The Conservative candidate is Sir J. Hamilton.

EXHIBITION OF WORKS OF ART AT WESTMINSTER HALL.—The public exhibition of the oil paintings and other works of art intended for the decoration of the New Palace at Westminster, is appointed to commence on Monday next.

PROPOSED DIVISION OF ST. PANCRAS INTO ECCLESIASTICAL DISTRICTS. On Monday, an adjourned special meeting of the vestry of St. Pancras took place at the vestry room, for the purpose of considering a proposal made by the vicar, the Rev. T. Dale, for dividing that populous parish into ecclesiastical districts, and for the erection of ten new churches. The Rev. T. Dale presided. The proposition underwent considerable lengthened discussion, it was rejected by a large majority.

THE METROPOLITAN TURNPIKES AND THE RAILWAYS.—On Tuesday, the turnpike toils north of the metropolis, which were put up to auction on the 18th of May last, but which were not sold, were offered for public competition by the Commissioners of the Metropolis Turnpike Roads, at the office of the Commissioners, Whitehall place, Mr. Lloyd, of Lincoln, in the chair. The first lot consisted of the Kensington, Brentford, and Isleworth roads. The Commissioners offered these at £15,500. Mr. Levy, the lessee of a large portion of the toll roads, said they were worth more than £14,000. In consequence of the Richmond Railway. Last year they produced £16,170. There was no bidding for them. The second lot comprised the Harrow roads, which were supposed of last year for £1110. The tolls were reduced one-third, and they were offered at £650. They were purchased for £860, by Mr. Jones. The third lot comprised the Stamford-hill roads, the Green-lane roads, and the Seven Sisters road, which realised last year £10,200 The sum now proposed was £9210; Mr Levy bought them for £9210. The commissioners then offered the first lot at £15,000. Mr. Levy was the buyer of them for £15,010. The whole of the tolls realised £53,723.

THE NEW MODEL PRISON, CLERKENWELL.—On Wednesday this prison was inspected by the Government officers, previous to being placed in the hands of the authorities. It is not, however, expected to be opened for the reception of prisoners till July. It is exclusively intended for the reception of persons remanded for further examination from the police-offices and committed for trial, and will be called the Middlesex House of Detention. It contains 1000 cells, each being fitted in the same way as those at the Model Prison at Pentonville. All persons under detention are to be kept apart, the exercise grounds be ng so constructed that they can hold no communication with each other RAGGED SCHOOL IN CLARE-MARKET.—On Monday a meeting, numerously an respectably attended, was held in the vestry room of St. Clement Danes Church with his lordship in the chair, on behalf of a ragged school in Clare-market. Lord Ashley presided on the occasion, and in strong terms urged upon the meeting the destitution, misery, and ignorance, of many children in that locality, and the necessity of some steps being taken to them the blessings of education. The meeting was then addressed by several speakers in support of resolutions recognising the success which has hitherto attended the formation of ragged schools, and adopting one of the Seven Dials Ragged School, about to be opened near Clare-market, as worthy the support of the parishioners of St. Clement Danes and the inhabitants of the surrounding district. The resolutions were adopted.

THE PRICE OF BREAD.—From Monday the bakers throughout the metropolis reduced the price of the 4lb. loaf one halfpenny. The best bread is now charged 11d. Second quality 9½d. and 9d. In Whitechapel, the New Cut, Westminster, and other populous districts, the price is 8½d. and 8d, weighed on delivery. Rye bread 7d. and 7½d. the 4lbs.

DEATHS AND DEATHS IN THE METROPOLIS.—The births and deaths for the week ending June 19, are thus given in the Registrar General's return:—Births, 1,178; deaths, 978.

THUNDER STORM IN THE METROPOLIS.—On Wednesday the metropolis was visited by a thunder storm, the rain at one time falling very heavily, causing considerable damage to the fruit trees around Wandsworth, Barnes, Mortlake, Battersea, and other places. Towards evening the atmosphere became clear, and the sun shone with unusual brilliancy. It subsequently became very lowering, the wind ceased, and the night closed in with a continual drizz.ng rain.

DISASTROUS FIRE.—Early on Monday morning, a fire broke out in the King's Head and Ladder could be procured. The property of Mr. John Waller, which was attended with serious consequences. After some trouble, the inmates were aroused, but the fire had made such progress that very few of the residents were able to descend the staircase. One person named John Pemberton, a lodger in the house, finding that the flames had cut off all escape by the stairs, jumped from the top window, and, falling on to the stone flags beneath, fractured his thigh, and was otherwise severely injured that it was necessary to take him to the hospital. Another lodger jumped from the same window, but was not much injured. A third party got out of one of the windows and hung by the hands until a ladder could be procured. The building was nearly destroyed, and the furniture, stock-in-trade, &c., partially consumed. The total damage will amount to several hundred pounds. Fortunately, Mr. Waller was insured for the stock, &c.

DEATH OF DR. LYNCH.—This advocate of sanatory regulations expired on Wednesday, at his residence in Farringdon-street, of inflammation of the throat, after a few hours' illness. He was one of the Commons Commissioners for the Ward of Farringdon Without, and senior surgeon to the West London Union. He had the honour to deliver the Hunterian oration. Dr. Lynch was only thirty-eight years of age.

THE CONSERVANCY OF THE THAMES.—On Wednesday a Court of Common Council was held for the further consideration of the question of agreeing to the Government bill, relative to the conservancy of the river Thames. A long discussion took place within closed doors, and it terminated in the adoption of the Government measure by a majority of 25.

POSTSCRIPT

HOUSE OF LORDS.—FRIDAY.

ROYAL ASSENT.—The Royal Assent was given by Commission to the Destitute Persons (Ireland) Bill, the Employment of Able-Bodied Poor (Ireland) Bill, and several other Bills.

THE QUALIFICATION OF PEERS (SCOTLAND) BILL.—The Earl of ROSEBERY moved the second reading of this bill, and, after a slight discussion, the motion was agreed to

A motion of the Earl of DEVON to refer the petition of the Chairman of the Oxford and Birmingham Junction and the Birmingham and Wolverhampton and Dudley Railway Companies to the Select Committee on standing orders, excited some discussion, but the motion was agreed to without a division.—The House then adjourned.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—FRIDAY.

THE HIGHWAYS BILL.—The House met at noon to-day, and discussed the Highways Bill in Committee. Several objections were made to the bill, and an amendment to enquire the central authority given to the Commissioners having been carried by 80 to 48, Sir G. GREY withdrew the bill.

The House then adjourned till five o'clock.

THE SPEAKER CONSERVANCY BILL.—The House met again at five, when Mr. WARD moved that this bill be re-committed, as some of its provisions he considered affected the rights of the Crown.—Mr. HUME considered that the bill was of a very objectionable nature.—The proposal met with some opposition, but, upon a division, it was agreed, by 92 to 24, to re-commit the bill.

CAPTAIN WARNER'S INVENTIONS.—On the motion for going into a Committee of Supply, Lord INGESTRE moved for a Select Committee to consider the Report of the Commissioners appointed to investigate Captain Warner's inventions.—Lord J. RUSSELL opposed the motion, on the ground that there had been sufficient trials of the inventions.—Mr. ASHLEY supported it, believing that unmerited obloquy had been cast upon Captain Warner, and that he ought to have fair play.—After a debate, the motion was withdrawn.

Some miscellaneous business was then disposed of, and the House adjourned.

ROYAL VISIT TO WESTMINSTER HALL.—Her Majesty and Prince Albert, accompanied by the King and Queen of the Belgians, and suite, inspected the Cartoons in Westminster Hall yesterday afternoon. Her Majesty remained some time in the Hall, and afterwards spent a few minutes in the House of Lords.

MR. COBDEN.—Mr. Cobden has written from Venice to the electors of Stockport, informing them that he shall solicit their votes at the ensuing election. The hon. gentleman expresses his regret that the electors should be called upon to exercise the franchise at a period of manufacturing depression, and proceeds to argue that the present crisis affords proof of the soundness and beneficence of the principles of Free Trade. In conclusion, Mr. Cobden suggests reasons for believing that the Free Traders will have to exert vigilance in the next Parliament, and says he shall be ready to return to active political life "with renewed health."

ROYAL COMMISSION OF FINE ARTS.—On Thursday afternoon the Judges met to award the premiums for the best oil-paintings sent to Westminster Hall in the first week in June, pursuant to notices issued by her Majesty's Commissioners of Fine Arts in 1844. The following is a list of successful artists:—In the Fresco Class, £500: Mr. F. R. Pickersgill, 8, Leigh-street, Burton-crescent; Mr. G. F. Watts, 48, Cambridge-street, Edgware-road; Mr. Edward Armitage, 13, George-street, Adelphi.—In the Second Class, £300: Mr. John Gilbert, 59, Fetter-lane; Mr. Paul Falconer Poole, 1, St. John's-place, Lisson-grove North; Mr. Noel Paton, Wocer's-alley Cottage, Dunfermline, N.B.—In the Third Class, £200: Mr. James Eckford Lauder, 35, Upper Charlotte-street, Fitzroy-square; Mr. Charles Lucy, Tudor-lodge, Albert-street, Mornington-crescent; Mr. John Calcott Horsley, the Mall, Kensington Gravel Pits.—The Exhibition contains, altogether, 120 paintings, many of them of a colossal size.

AMBERGATE, NOTTINGHAM, AND BOSTON, &c., RAILWAY.—A numerous meeting of shareholders in the above line was held yesterday, at the George and Vulture, George-yard, Lombard-street, pursuant to an invitation from a portion of their body, who had been in communication with the Directors on the present position of the Company: Benjamin Badger, Esq., barrister-at-law, in the chair. The circular calling the meeting, and the report of what had taken place in the correspondence, having been read, the chairman animadverted severely on the unwillingness of the Directors to sell, lease, or let the line, and recommended the shareholders to look after themselves. Several gentlemen warmly advocated the Chairman's views, and eventually appointed the following gentlemen as a Committee, with power to add to their number, to watch over the interests of the shareholders at the General Meeting, in August next:—Herbert Ingram, Esq.; Benjamin Badger, Esq., barrister; J. Davis, Esq.; S. H. Armitage, Esq., of Wakefield; Horatio Phillips, Esq.; F. Wakefield, jun., Esq., Nottingham; and Richard Wilkinson, Esq.

DEATH OF MR. RAWLINSON, THE MAGISTRATE OF MARYLEBONE POLICE COURT.—Yesterday morning, between the hours of five and six o'clock, the above gentleman departed this life, at his residence in town. The deceased gentleman was the oldest magistrate in the metropolitan district, and had been ill more than a week or ten days.

CRICKET.—THE GENTLEMEN OF KENT AND THE GENTLEMEN OF ENGLAND.—This interesting rivalry, which occupied the attention of the cricketing world, at Lord's, on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, was brought to a close on the last-named day. England. first innings, 181; second, 235. Kent: first innings, 180; second, 97. England, therefore, won by 156 runs.—BRAZENOSE (OXFORD) v. CLAPHAM.—This annual contest came off on Thursday, at Blackheath, when the result was the defeat of the former upon the first innings by 77 runs.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON THE CROYDON RAILWAY.—An accident of a very distressing nature occurred near the Annerley station of the above railway, on Thursday evening. Mr. Buckmaster, who tenants the Annerley Tavern, holds some land on the opposite side of the railway to that on which the tavern is situate. On this land some labourers were employed in haymaking, the nephew of Mr. Buckmaster, aged only nineteen, superintending their operations. He was in the act of crossing the railway to the field, when a pilot engine, on its way to town, passed the station at a rapid pace, and, before the unfortunate young man could clear the line, he was struck by the off-buffer and thrown a distance of several yards, falling with great violence on the back of his head, by which his skull was fractured. He was taken to Guy's Hospital, but was dead on arriving there.

LATEST FOREIGN NEWS.

PORTUGAL.—SURRENDER OF SA DA BANDEIRA.

Accounts have been received from Lisbon and Spain, stating that Sa da Bandeira had surrendered at discretion, prisoner of war, at Setubal, on the 14th inst., with 2000 regular troops.

The two provinces of Beira are completely relieved of revolutionary troops, who have retired to Grotto.

Letters from Lisbon to the 19th inst., reached us yesterday afternoon.

The insurgent force at Setubal had been entirely broken up and dispersed; 142 chiefs and officers and more than 400 of the soldiers were now in custody in Lisbon; they had fled to the interior, but were overtaken by Vinhaes at Alcazar do Sal, where he made upwards of 300 prisoners, and many others besides surrendered to him. The leaders were on board our squadron in the Tagus, and in custody until the submission of the Junta shall bring the amnesty into force. The neck of the insurrection in the south of Portugal was broken, and the progress of pacification there would be rapid, though Evora, reinforced by the fugitives, might hold out for some time.

Thirty of the prisoners had escaped from Fort St. Julian.

Up to the 21st inst., the English squadron had not arrived at Oporto from Lisbon to take an attack upon the former city. There was a force of 9000 in insurgents congregated, and it was reported they would yield to the English power, and that only; and should the Spanish army arrive to show fight, they would defend the city to the very last. It was stated that the Spanish army, 3000 strong, was at Braga, about ten leagues from Oporto, whither they were making with all expedition.

A decree had been issued making Bank of Lisbon notes legal tenders for only one-third of each payment, from the first of July forward. This measure will throw all commercial operations into the greatest confusion.

SPAIN.

The Paris papers of Thursday publish full details of the affair at Canton. The Debats justifies the course adopted by Sir J. Davis, sets forth the moderation of the English, and says they demanded nothing which ought not to have been conceded four or five years ago. On the other hand, the Presse, with its accustomed hatred of England, and its usual perversion of truth, speaks of our conduct as unjustifiable and barbarous.

The Chamber of Deputies, on Wednesday, resumed the consideration of the Budget. An amendment was carried against Ministers, the effect of which will be to reduce the expenses of the Council of State by 45,000f.

CHURCH, UNIVERSITIES &c.

CAMBRIDGE, June 21.

At a Congregation held this day the following degrees were conferred:—

Doctor of Civil Law.—Henry J. S. Maine, Trinity College, Professor of Civil Law.

Ad Eundem.—William Sutherland M'Donall, M.A., Christ Church, Oxford; James Jackson, M.A., Brasenose College, Oxford.

June 23.

At a Congregation holden this day, the following degrees were conferred:—

M.A.—C. W. Underwood, St. John's College; W. Murton, St. John's College; T. Dixon, Jesus College.

B.A.—W. H. Morris, St. Peter's College.

THE DEANERY OF MANCHESTER.—The Rev. G. N. Bowers, Rector of St. Paul's, Covent-garden, will be the new Dean of Manchester.

INTERESTING GEOLOGICAL DISCOVERIES.—The Journal des Debats publishes the following letter, dated Odessa, the 4th inst.:—"The Count de Castelbajac, Professor of Geology at the Imperial University of Dorpat, who at this moment is travelling in the south of Russia, has discovered in a property situated to the north of Odessa, several skeletons of fossil animals of enormous dimensions. The skeletons are 83 in number, viz., 6 elephants, 1 rhinoceros, 2 oxen, 4 stags, 1 antelope, 51 bears, 2 hyenas, 3 dogs, 3 cats, and 1 ruminating animal, species unknown. These skeletons, together with the bones, were found under a thick layer of calcareous earth. The discovery made by M. Erdmann is the more remarkable, as hitherto there never have been any remains of the antediluvian animal reign discovered in Russia."

EPITOME OF NEWS.—FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

It is now confirmed that the Porte has accepted the proposition of Prince Metternich for settling the difference between Greece and Turkey The Grand Vizier's letter has been handed to the English Minister, and by him forwarded to Vienna. The dispute is regarded as arranged. M. Mussurus will return to Athens, but will not, it is thought, long remain there.

On the 14th inst., the anniversary of the battle of Marengo, a colossal statue of Napoleon was erected on the field, to commemorate the victory of the French army. The generous thought is due to M. Jean Antoine Delayo, of Alexandria, an enthusiastic admirer of the Emperor.

The Ayr Advertiser says there was found dead lately, on the banks of Pulgarny, alias the Water of Bladenock, near Drumlanford House, a craigy heron, the stomach of which contained the amazing number of thirty-nine fine trout.

On Monday week a trout was taken with a rod and line in the river Wye, near Hereford, of the following measurement:—Length, 22½ inches; largest girth, behind pectoral fin, 13½ inches. When first caught it weighed 9lbs. The fish was in fine season.

Two persons, a man and a woman, who sought refuge in a barn along with a crowd of persons in Tenworth, on Tuesday last, during a thunderstorm, were struck dead by the electric fluid.

In the night of the 13th the residence of the Count de Goerlitz, at Darmstadt, was in great part burnt down. Fire broke out in the chamber of the Countess, who perished in the flames.

The thirty-three prisoners who were taken at Torres Vedras have arrived at Angola. Amongst them were Counts Bomfin and Villa Real.

The sale of horse-flesh has been permitted in Hanover, and thousands of poor people exist on it. It is sold in many places, ready cooked, at 1½d. per pound.

Joseph Ady has been defeated in the New County Court, Whitechapel. He was summoned by a gentleman who had paid him £1 for useless information, and the court ordered him to refund the money, with all expenses, within a week from the hearing of the summonses.

The Queen of Portugal has written a letter to the Duke of Palmella, in the most gracious manner, commanding his return to Lisbon, and his resumption of the position which he had so long and so deservedly held in the Councils of her Majesty before he was compelled, by the civil war, to quit the country.

The "London," a new eight-feet-driving-wheel narrow gauge engine has lately made several trips on the North Western Railway, from Wolverton to the Camden Town station. On Friday (last week), with 12 carriages, or about 50 tons, seven consecutive miles were performed within seven minutes, and one mile was run in 50 seconds, or at a rate of more than 68 miles per hour. It is stated that the engine was perfectly steady at this velocity.

The Trent steamer, which arrived with the West India mails on Monday, brings the news that the Mexican Congress had given Santa Anna instructions to set fire to and burn the whole city of Mexico, rather than that it should fall into the hands of the Americans. There is nothing of interest from the West India Islands.

West and Farmery, the individuals charged with forging scrip of the South Western Railway Company, have been found guilty at the Central Criminal Court, but the question as to what is the exact legal nature of scrip is to be argued before the fifteen Judges in November next. Judgment is, therefore, respited.

A large meeting was held in the Vestry Hall, Lambeth, on Monday evening, at which donations and subscriptions, amounting in all to near £200, were contributed for the purpose of replacing the valuable tools lost by the workmen in the late fire at Messrs. Maudslay and Field's, the engineers.

In its sitting of the 16th, the three States of the Prussian Diet adopted, by 220 votes against 205, the bill for the admission of Jews to all places, except such as are connected with the exercise of other forms of worship, or in the religious instruction.

We learn from Modena that the Duke and Duchess de Bordeaux have been on a visit to the Duchess of Parma, the widow of Napoleon, and were on the 12th inst., still with her at Parma.

On the 21st of May last, the packet-ship Eulalia, belonging to St. Sebastian, while on a passage from Havana to Galway, was overwhelmed by an iceberg. Two boats, containing the captain, 14 of the crew, and 14 passengers, succeeded in getting clear of the wreck, but the third, with 20 persons in it, most of whom were women, was drawn down with the vessel, and every soul perished. On the following day the remaining boats, with their crews, were picked up by the schooner Newport, of Stockton, which vessel has reached Galway. The loss of the Eulalia and cargo is estimated at £25,000.

The Montevideo Times of the 28th inst. states that a farmer in the Weald of Kent has for the last two years dug up excellent crops of potatoes, the whole of which had exhibited the usual signs of disease. The plan he pursued was simple—immediately on the disease appearing as usual in the haulm, the whole of the haulm was cut off and removed, and good crops entirely free from disease were the result.

The Minstrel has arrived from Monte Video, which she left on the 19th of May. General Rivera continued to invest Monte Video, whose inhabitants were occasionally shot by his forces. About a fortnight before the Minstrel left, an English quartermaster was murdered, and the carcase of his horse sold for beef in the market-place.

The Admiralty have ordered two ships at Pembroke to be immediately cleared out and fitted as fever ships for Liverpool, to which port they are to be towed by steam vessels as soon as they are ready.

The Queen of Portugal has sent a present to the crew of the Leith and North British Railway Company, in acknowledgment of their conduct in saving the life of her husband, the King Consort, at the late accident on the Edinburgh and Dalkeith Railway. The present consists of a gold watch, with suitable inscription, for the engine driver, and a silver watch for the stoker, who was severely injured in the accident, but who is now recovering.

The Ayr Advertiser says there was found dead lately, on the banks of Pulgarny, alias the Water of Bladenock, near Drumlanford House, a craigy heron, the stomach of which contained the amazing number of thirty-nine fine trout.

On Monday week a trout was taken with a rod and line in the river Wye, near Hereford, of the following measurement:—Length, 22½ inches; largest girth, behind pectoral fin, 13½ inches. When first caught it weighed 9lbs. The fish was in fine season.

Two persons, a man and a woman, who sought refuge in a barn along with a crowd of persons in Tenworth, on Tuesday last, during a thunderstorm, were struck dead by the electric fluid.

In the night of the 13th the residence of the Count de Goerlitz, at Darmstadt, was in great part burnt down. Fire broke out in the chamber of the Countess, who perished in the flames.

The thirty-three prisoners who were taken at Torres Vedras have arrived at Angola. Amongst them were Counts Bomfin and Villa Real.

The sale of horse-flesh has been permitted in Hanover, and thousands of poor people exist on it. It is sold in many places, ready cooked, at 1½d. per pound.

Joseph Ady has been defeated in the New County Court, Whitechapel. He was summoned by a gentleman who had paid him £1 for useless information, and the court ordered him to refund the money, with all expenses, within a week from the hearing of the summonses.

The Queen of Portugal has written a letter to the Duke of Palmella, in the most gracious manner, commanding his return to Lisbon, and his resumption of the position which he had so long and so deservedly held in the Councils of her Majesty before he was compelled, by the civil war, to quit the country.

The "London," a new eight-feet-driving-wheel narrow gauge engine has lately made several trips on the North Western Railway, from Wolverton to the Camden Town station. On Friday (last week), with 12 carriages, or about 50 tons, seven consecutive miles were performed within seven minutes, and one mile was run in 50 seconds, or at a rate of more than 68 miles per hour. It is stated that the engine was perfectly steady at this velocity.

The Trent steamer, which arrived with the West India mails on Monday, brings the news that the Mexican Congress had given Santa Anna instructions to set fire to and burn the whole city of Mexico, rather than that it should fall into the hands of the Americans. There is nothing of interest from the West India Islands.

West and Farmery, the individuals charged with forging scrip of the South Western Railway Company, have been found guilty at the Central Criminal Court, but the question as to what is the exact legal nature of scrip is to be argued before the fifteen Judges in November next. Judgment is, therefore, respited.

A large meeting was held in the Vestry Hall, Lambeth, on Monday evening, at which donations and subscriptions, amounting in all to near £200, were contributed for the purpose of replacing the valuable tools lost by the workmen in the late fire at Messrs. Maudslay and Field's, the engineers.

In its sitting of the 16th, the three States of the Prussian Diet adopted, by 220 votes against 205, the bill for the admission of Jews to all places, except such as are connected with the exercise of other forms of worship, or in the religious instruction.

We learn from Modena that the Duke and Duchess de Bordeaux have been on a visit to the Duchess of Parma, the widow of Napoleon, and were on the 12th inst., still with her at Parma.

On the 21st of May last, the packet-ship Eulalia, belonging to St. Sebastian, while on a passage from Havana to Galway, was overwhelmed by an iceberg. Two boats, containing the captain, 14 of the crew, and 14 passengers, succeeded in getting clear of the wreck, but the third, with 20 persons in it, most of whom were women, was drawn down with the vessel, and every soul perished. On the following day the remaining boats, with their crews, were picked up by the schooner Newport, of Stockton, which vessel has reached Galway. The loss of the Eulalia and cargo is estimated at £25,000.

The Montevideo Times of the 28th inst. states that a farmer in the Weald of Kent has for the last two years dug up excellent crops of potatoes, the whole of which had exhibited the usual signs of disease. The plan he pursued was simple—immediately on the disease appearing as usual in the haulm, the whole of the haulm was cut off and removed, and good crops entirely free from disease were the result.

The Minstrel has arrived from Monte Video, which she left on the 19th of May. General Rivera continued to invest Monte Video, whose inhabitants were occasionally shot by his forces. About a fortnight before the Minstrel left, an English quartermaster was murdered, and the carcase of his horse sold for beef in the market-place.

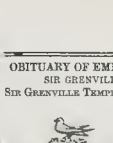
The Admiralty have ordered two ships at Pembroke to be immediately cleared out and fitted as fever ships for Liverpool, to which port they are to be towed by steam vessels as soon as they are ready.

The Queen of Portugal has sent a present to the crew of the Leith and North British Railway Company, in acknowledgment of their conduct in saving the life of her husband, the King Consort, at the late accident on the Edinburgh and Dalkeith Railway. The present consists of a gold watch, with suitable inscription, for the engine driver, and a silver watch for the stoker, who was severely injured in the accident, but who is now recovering.

OBITUARY OF EMINENT PERSONS RECENTLY DECEASED.

SIR GRENVILLE TEMPLE TEMPLE BART., OF STOWE.

SIR GRENVILLE TEMPLE, formerly Lieutenant-Colonel of the 15th Hussars, died at Constance, in Switzerland, on the 7th, aged 48. He was the eldest son of the late Sir Grenville Temple, 9th Baronet, whose father, Sir John Temple, succeeded to the title in 1786, at the decease of his kinsman Sir Richard Temple. The Baronet just deceased was born 20th July, 1799, married 5th May, 1829, Mary, daughter of George Baring, Esq., brother of Lord Ashburton, by whom he leaves a large family, the eldest son of which is the present Sir Grenville Leofric Temple, Bart., an officer in the Royal navy, born in 1836.



The ancient family of Temple derives its surname from the manor of Temple, county of Leicester, and deduces its descent from Leofric, Earl of Chester, who lived in the reign of Edward the Confessor. The Leofric married the celebrated Godiva, of Coventry notoriety, who is said to have appeased the wrath of her offended lord, and to have obtained a restitution of privileges for the good citizens of Coventry, by exhibiting on horseback, in the simple habiliments of Eve, to the confusion of an unlucky knight of the needle, whom tradition hath stricken blind for presuming to peep. Certain it is that pictures of the Earl and his Countess were set up in the west window of Trinity Church, in that ancient city, about the reign of Richard II., more than three centuries after the occurrence of the supposed event; his Lordship holding a charter in the right hand, with the words,

I, Lurick, for love of thee
Do set Coventry toll-free.

And there is still a yearly procession of a naked figure observed by the grateful citizens, on Friday after Trinity Sunday.

DAVID LEAHY.

MR. LEAHY, by birth an Irishman, was called to the English bar by the Hon. Society of Gray's Inn. The learned gentleman joined the Western Circuit: but, though in some practice, his success was not commensurate with the great ability he undoubtedly possessed. As a writer on literary, political, and legal subjects, Mr. Leahy was, however, actively and continually employed; and he was esteemed to possess such deep rooted forensic and constitutional knowledge, that he was chosen as one of the counsel in the defence of Mr. O'Connell. The soundness of his arguments on that occasion was afterwards recognised by the Judgment of the House of Lords. The volume he subsequently published relative to the trial added much to his reputation.

On the recent establishment of the Local Courts, Mr. Leahy was appointed the Judge for the Greenwich and Lambeth districts; and it is much to be lamented that he has been snatched away just as he had attained that position which his talents entitled him to hold.

Mr. Leahy died on the 21st inst., at his Chambers, in Mitre Court-buildings. The demise of this excellent person is the subject of deep regret to a very wide circle of friends, to whom his high social, as well as mental qualifications, had endeared him.

JAMES ASPINALL, ESQ.

THIS highly respectable gentleman was a member of the Corporation of Liverpool, and had filled the office of Mayor of that important town. He was also a magistrate for the county of Lancaster.

The death of Mr. Aspinall was awfully sudden. While in Vauxhall Gardens, on the night of Thursday the 17th inst., with a party of friends, he fell down, and at once expired. The cause was apoplexy, brought on, no doubt, by his excessive corpulence. Mr. Aspinall, though only forty-two years of age at his decease, weighed 21 stone.

MEETING OF THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION AT OXFORD.

Oxford has been very full of company during the week, in consequence of the meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science.

Among the earliest arrivals at the Reception-room were—Baron Bonaparte, Prince of Canino; the Chevalier Bunsen, the Prussian Ambassador; the Hon. Mr. Bancroft, the American Minister; Count Rosen, from Sweden, deputed especially from that country by the Crown Prince, in order to exhibit some remarkable maps of his execution, illustrating the productions of iron and wood, and the relative altitudes of the kingdom: there were, also, present, the Marquis of Northampton; Sir T. Acland, M.P.; Sir C. Lemon, M.P.; Sir R. Murchison, Sir W. Snow Harris, Sir Henry Delabeche, the Dean of Westminster, &c.

The first meeting of the General Committee was held at one o'clock on Wednesday in the Council Chamber of the Town-hall. In the chair was Sir R. Murchison, the President at Southampton. A lengthy discussion took place on a resolution to reunite the Mechanical along with the Mathematical Section, with which it was formerly connected. On the question put to the vote, the numbers appearing equal, the Mechanical Section was permitted to have existence for at least the present session.

Sir R. H. Inglis, the Treasurer, read the report of the finances of the past year, which made the total receipts £1167 6s. 10d. Among them was the donation of £100 subscribed by Prince Albert at the last meeting at Southampton, whilst the incidental receipts from the contributions of members and associates made up the remainder of the sum.

The meeting, which was more numerously attended than on any previous occasion, was then adjourned till Saturday morning.

The preliminary meeting of the Association took place at the Theatre, on Wednesday afternoon. The chair was taken by Sir R. I. Murchison, F.R.S. He was supported by the Marquis of Northampton, the President of the Royal Society; the Prussian and American Ministers; Sir T. Dyke Acland, Bart., M.P.; the Earl of Enniskillen; Sir John Herschel, Bart.; Sir John Richardson; Sir James Rose; Dr. Faraday; Professor Owen, and many other of the leading members.

Sir R. I. Murchison, in opening the business of the meeting, said that there was a very fair matter of congratulation in the proceedings of the Association during the past year, accompanied as they were, likewise, with the reminiscences of its first visit to Oxford. He was glad to be enabled to recognise in the room the presence of representatives of the science of Russia, Prussia, Sweden, Norway, Holland, and France. Amongst the latter, he could not but feel satisfaction in announcing the name of M. Le Verrier, whose astronomical reputation was European.

Sir R. H. Inglis, the president elect, who wore his academ[illegible]n, as Doctor of Civil Laws of the University, delivered the preliminary add[illegible]r, which occupied about two hours. In the course of his address, he alluded [illegible] the progress which had been made in the different branches of scientific inquiry since the last meeting. At the head of these was an important discovery in astronomy—the re-ult of pure intellect. He would not presume to dispute upon the rivalry or merits of Le Verrier and Adams, but it was certain that on one had found by lonelight watchings what the other had predicted by the results of calculation. In allusion to the astronomical assertions of the Earl of Rosse, one of the vice-presidents of the present meeting, he must state that his telescope was the greatest contribution that ever wealth had made to science, particularly in its combination of chemical and mechanical ingenuity. In chemistry, discoveries of great importance had been made, particularly in the discovery of electrical currents produced from the muscular contractions of the living body, and which ceased sooner in warm than in cold-blooded animals. Since the last meeting many important and interesting researches had been made in the insect creation, as the results of the microscopical exhibition to be held in the ensuing week would doubtlessly prove. One of the latest discoveries of the microscope was the circulation of the blood from the arteries to the veins, a matter propounded by Harvey, but never before demonstrated. In natural history, and particularly in botany, important practical developments were being made. Electricity was working wonders for the benefit and comforts of mankind. In the United States of America there was an instantaneous communication of 1,900 miles; and when the Hibernia steamer lately carried out the intelligence of the dearth of corn in this country to Boston, it was instantaneously conveyed to New York, the streets of which were the next day filled with carts from neighbouring farmers laden with the produce of the country, and for English use.

The Marquis of Northampton proposed, and the Chevalier Bunsen seconded, a motion of thanks to Sir H. Inglis.

Thursday was the first day for the business of the sections. The rooms devoted to such subjects as geology, natural history, and mathematical and chemical science, were not without numerous and attentive audiences. The section for geology and physical geography, which is presided over by the Dean of Westminster, and had the advantage of the presence of Sir H. De La Beche, Sir R. Murchison, Professor Sedgwick, and other eminent geologists, was crowded throughout the sitting, the ladies forming by no means an unimportant proportion of the assembly. All the sections met on Thursday, and many subjects were discussed.

We, this week, illustrate the General Meeting. Towards the hour appointed for its commencement, very numerous groups of gentlemen, several in their academic costume, entered the spacious building, and were there warmly met by many of the fair sex to grace the proceedings. At three o'clock, the lower gallery was completely filled with visitors, chiefly ladies; whilst the gentlemen and some ladies occupied the seats on the floor of the building.

The only alteration made in the general appearance and arrangement of the Theatre was the placing seats for the visitors in the body of the area

Our Illustration shows the interior of the Theatre; with the President seated in his chair; the visitors in the gallery; and the members of the Association and their friends, in the pit or body of the building

Next week, we shall more fully illustrate the Proceedings; with a series of Views of the several Meetings, which, from their being held in different edifices, will enable us to convey to the reader some idea of the architectural variety of the city of Oxford; as well as of the interest of the Transactions.

HER MAJESTY THE PRINCE OF WALES, THE PRINCESS ALICE, AND THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON.

A SKETCH FROM THE LATE REVIEW.

THE QUEEN.

'Tis merrie June. The sun shines out
On cuirass of the Cuirassier,
On bay'net bright, while banners flout
The gay breeze, 'mid the people's cheer.
Why rings to heaven that joyous shout?
Our Sovereign Liege is riding by.
The mother and the wife, throughout
Worthy all blessings from on high.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

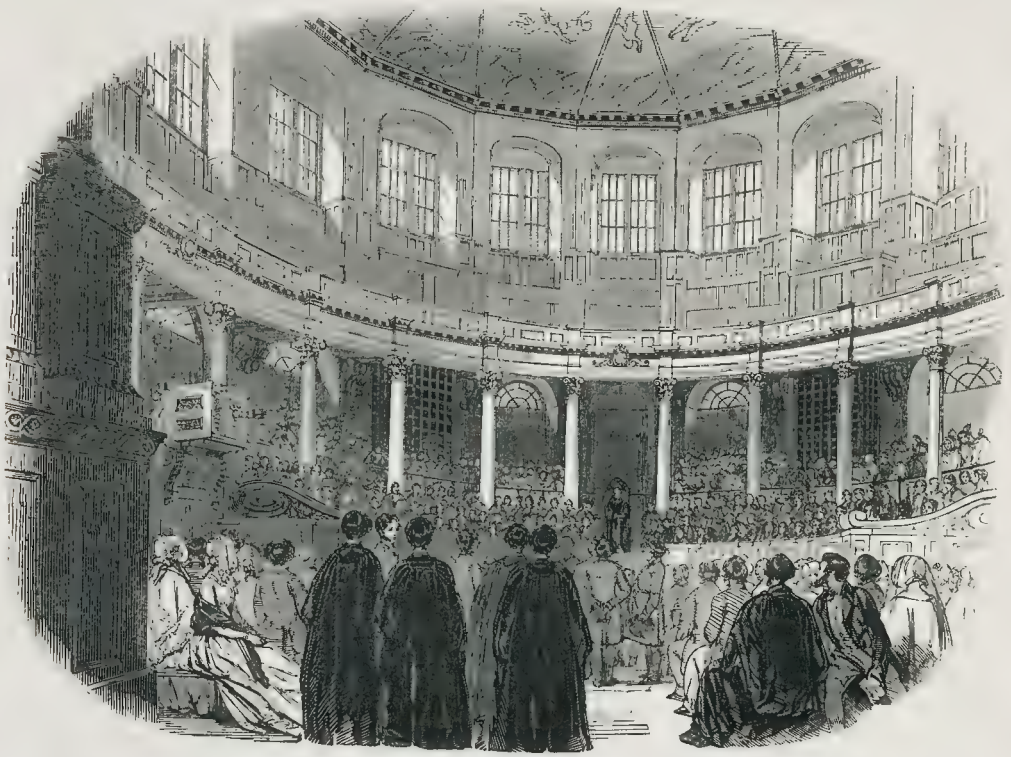
Still rings the People's glad acclaim,
What calls their fervent blessings down?
The youthful Heir of spotless fame,
Heir to Old England's love and crown.
The Prince of Wales! That g'orious name,
Cressy and Agincourt well knew;
When sank the oriflamme in shame
Before St. George's banner true.

THE PRINCESS ALICE.

Loudly the welkin peals again,
What! view ye not you blooming child,
Sweet as the Lily without stain,
Or Rosebud in the desert wild—
The Princess Alice? Royal Flow'r!
May the parental virtues beam
Bright in thy soul as in a bower,
By Seraphs built on Life's fair stream.

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON.

Hurrah! The shout bursts out once more,
The veteran Captain's silvery brow,
Well known upon Iberia's shore,
Bends lowly to his saddle-bow.
The aged eagle greets the dove,
Gallant and goodly is the scene.
Hurrah! for him who bravely strove
At Waterloo! GOD SAVE THE QUEEN!—L.



THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION AT OXFORD.—GENERAL MEETING IN THE UNIVERSITY THEATRE, ON WEDNESDAY.—SEE PRECEDING PAGE.

F I N E A R T S.

"THE BLIND PIPER."—BY FREDERICK TAYLER.—FROM THE EXHIBITION OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

EXHIBITION OF THE SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER-COLOURS.

On the general merit of the present Exhibition we have spoken at length in our paper of the first of May. Copley Fielding was never better; or Prout, for some years past, nearly so good. That long "View in Lincolnshire," by De Wint is one of the best examples of his style we remember to have seen. "The Lake of Geneva," by George Fripp, is a Callcott in Water-Colours. Could we say more? Mr. Evans, of Eton, has been as much at home in "The Forest of Atholl" as "The Woods of Windsor," or the pleasanter "Banks of the Thames." Hunt is equally happy in representing ploughboys with pies, and butcher-boys with pigs, as he is in catching the thoughtful air of trampers on the road, or in giving to grapes and plums the blue mist or meal that we see upon them before fingers have touched them. That "Claddagh Fisherman's Cabin," by Alfred Fripp, is a charming interior, full of simple truth and beauty. Cox has put to shame his other drawings—and he has several in the Exhibition—in that fine Gainsborough-like picture, the "Bolton Abbey;" and Frederick Tayler has added a new charm to his style, and shown a facility of invention, new, though not unexpected. It is pleasing to speak of artists long favourites with the public—some of whom triumph as before, and others excel their former efforts. But the novelty of the Exhibition is somewhat by—thousands have seen it besides ourselves—and we only return to the subject that we may introduce to our readers (to speak like artists) a Frederick Tayler and an Alfred Fripp. Mr. Tayler delights to exhibit on the "screens;" but, go where he will, he is always prominent and pleasing. One of the best of his pictures is No. 236. "Fording the Stream"—a Berchem-like composition, full of poetic truth and beauty. Another, equally excellent (engraved in our present Number), is "The Blind Piper"—representing a young and interesting girl conducting her blind and aged parent over a narrow bridge, under which a deep gully is visible. The care and caution of the girl are admirably expressed. Of the eleven works contributed by Mr. Tayler, the picture we have engraved and the picture we have described, are unquestionably, the most happy. He has only to concentrate his resources, and he will then be a better painter than he is—good as he is now.

There are two Fripps who exhibit in the present Exhibition—George Fripp and Alfred Fripp, both artists of merit, and both of them favourably known. Mr. George Fripp has chosen his scenes, for the most part, from the rich landscapes of Yorkshire, though Geneva, and the valleys of the Thames and the Meuse, have afforded subjects to diversify his pencil. Mr. Alfred Fripp, on the other hand, has almost confined himself to Ireland—to the cabins of Claddagh fishermen, the peasants of Connaught, and the girls of Munster. His large picture, "The Hallowed Relic" (No. 172), is essentially Irish; his "Visionary" was engraved in our Journal of the 12th inst.

THE NIMROUD SCULPTURES.

The accounts that have reached this country from time to time of the recent excavations and discoveries amongst the supposed ruins of Nineveh, have excited the curiosity not only of the antiquarian but of all scriptural students, from the illustration which they afford of passages in Holy Writ, of which all material traces appeared to be lost. We are indebted for such remains as have hitherto come to light to the indefatigable labours of M. Botta, the French Consul at Mossul, and to our own countryman Mr. Layard; and, it is no more than justice to the latter to remark that he was the first to indicate the probability of these ruins, though his suggestions were so coldly received by our Government that he was left to pursue his researches unaided, excepting by the private resources of Sir Stratford Canning. The French Government, however, with its accustomed liberal sympathy in the cause of science, stepped in, and most nobly assisted M. Botta, who has thus been enabled to precede Mr. Layard in discoveries of sculptures, &c., &c., at Khorsabad, which have, some time since, been forwarded to Paris. The prompt liberality of our neighbours has, at length, had some effect upon ourselves, as we are informed that some pecuniary assistance has been transmitted to Mr. L., though, certainly, somewhat at the eleventh hour; for he has energetically worked, regardless of obstacles, and succeeded in forwarding to this country some of his important discoveries, which have within the last few days arrived safely at the British Museum. These interesting remains consist of two fragments of a colossal statue of a human-headed bull, and eleven Basso Relievi, the whole from a vast building upon a mound at Nimroud, on the left bank of the Tigris, about twenty-five miles south of Mossul, and the site, as there is every reason to believe, of the most renowned and ancient city of the Assyrian Empire. It would be idle to attempt to assign a date to these interesting sculptures without fully and carefully investigating the inscriptions that belong to them, but which have not yet reached England. The extent and magnificence, however, of the two palaces described by Mr. Layard, and of that discovered at Khorsabad by M. Botta, as well as the elaborate detail of the sculptures, lead us to the conclusion that they are of such remote antiquity as to afford evidence of that primitive civilization of the human race, so abundantly proved in the books of the Old Testament. At all events, there can be no doubt that these remains date prior to the time of Sennacherib, who reigned about 2660 years ago; for the total dismemberment of the Assyrian Empire, which followed only a century later, could scarcely have allowed time to execute works so magnificent as these monuments prove to have existed. The walls of the palace at Nimroud, from which these works were taken, are of unburnt brick or clay, incrusted with slabs of marble eight inches thick and seven feet wide; the height cannot be ascertained at present, as the inscription has been cut off to render the slabs more portable. The slabs were firmly united together by plugs of brass or wood, as well as wedge shaped stones, like those common in the buildings of ancient Egypt. The decorations of these palaces seem to have been arranged in horizontal compartments, alternately filled with sculpture, and with the cuneiform character of the country, so that each wall presented a record of the valour and achievements of the great King, both in war and in the chase, written in the vernacular of Nineveh and in the universal language of art.

None of the bas-reliefs apparently relate to the actions of the same King, certain of the subjects seeming to follow naturally and consecutively. Though no system appears to have been adopted in the order of arrangement at the Museum, it must not be supposed that a regard to this description, with the exception where the two slabs have been originally joined together. The first figure represents the attack of a fortified city. The king, accompanied by his body guard, bearing his arms, and attended by a single eunuch, all on foot, directs his arrows against the city. The king's dress consists of a long fringed robe, with a shorter tunic, coming in front, and also seen at the back, bordered and fringed. He has cords and tassels depending from his girdle, in which he wears two daggers and a sword. He has two arrows in his hand, and wears a cap like a truncated cone, with a point at the top, like that represented in the Sculpture at Nahr-el-Keib; a plain fillet passes round the cap, and is tied behind with long ribbons. His ear-rings have long pendants, and the bracelets on his wrists are distinguished by rosettes. The body-guard have conical caps upon their heads; surcoats reaching midway down the legs; sandals on their feet, and massive rings upon their wrists. Earrings are worn by all; in each of the Sculptures some being distinguished by three-lobed terminations, some consisting of rings with broad, and others with long, pendants. Each of the body-guard has a round shield upon his left arm, which he holds upraised, to protect the King from the missiles of the enemy. One wears a quiver of arrows; and a sword by his side, and holds two arrows for the King's use, whilst the other carries the King's javelin, and is without a sword or quiver. The universally prevalent fringe is long, and to be observed in the Royal robe, fringed at the bottom; a sash round his waist, over which his sword belt is buckled; ear-rings, and bracelets, but no sandals. On his left side are a bow and quiver full of arrows, and in his hand the battle-axe, an instrument like a whip handle, with a rosette at one end, and a loop at the other. It is worthy of especial remark that, in all the Sculptures, the personal attendants of the King, whether his bearded guards, soldiers armed with bows, arrows, and clubs, and bearing square wicker shields; one soldier is in the act of throwing a stone, under cover of his companion's shield. The wicker war-engine carries with it a battering ram, which is being good work upon the walls of the town, plainly shown by the dislodged and falling stones. The besieged city has embattled walls, with towers at intervals—these towers being higher than the walls. The gateway of the city is arched, the doors opening in the middle, and guarded by towers on each side; and there are loopholes and windows both in the towers and the walls above the gateway. The defenders upon the walls are discharging arrows, with which their quivers, slung over their backs, are amply stocked. They bear the square wicker shield, and are distinguished from the besiegers by wearing a fillet round their heads, like that worn by a people represented on the Egyptian monuments, instead of the conical cap. In front of the wall is alleged is a magnate of the city, holding a slackened bow in his left hand, and apparently endeavouring to obtain a parley. We would call attention to the peculiar position of his right hand, giving it, by bringing the finger and thumb together, as the action is still used in the East, where attention and consideration are required: it is invariably accompanied by the word "Sabr"—patience.

THE NIMROUD SCULPTURES, AT THE BRITISH MUSEUM.—BULL HUNT.

The second slab is the fragment of a Rellevo, in which the figures are colossal They consist of the King, who is in the act of drinking; behind him is his mill lary eunuch, holding his bow and the ornamented instrument before described. The King wears the truncated cap, with the fillet tied behind, ear-rings with the long pendant and drop at the end; rosette-shaped bracelet; a necklace of alternate long and round beads; a tunic richly ornamented with tassels, and his robe furred and embroidered and set with gems at the border. The eunuch likewise wears a neck-lace, furred robe, and richly-ornamented under garment; his head is uncovered, and hair elaborately curled.

The Third Rellevo represents the Chariot of the King drawn by three horses. The Chariot is almost precisely the same as the Egyptian; to the sides are fixed, crosways, two quivers full of arrows, each; quiver being also furnished with a small bow and hatchet. What appears to be a richly-ornamented bow-case, is fixed in front of the Chariot and over the horses' backs The bossed shield of the King hangs at the back of the Chariot, where the spear is likewise fixed in a place appointed for it, decorated with a human head. In front is the metal bar, fixed to the pole, as in the Egyptian Chariots; and the harness and trappings of the horses are exactly like the Egyptian, but their tails are knotted. The horses have beads upon their heads with ornaments characters cut upon them, probably a chaplet of amulets, as is still the custom of Oriental nations. In front of the Chariot is the King's Groom, clothed in a short tunic, bordered and fringed; a belt round his waist, sword suspended from the shoulders, sandals upon his feet, but his head uncovered, and hair elaborately curled. Within the Chariot is the Charioteer, holding the reins, and with a whip in his right hand. His dress is a tunic, with a sash and belt round the waist, and sword by his side; but he wears no covering on his head nor bracelets on his arms. The body-guard behind the Chariot have bordered but not fringed tunics; and over their shoulders round highly-bossed shields, which are held in the hand of the second soldier, wearing a sword, but not clad in armour, is kneeling in front, intimating fighting in ranks; the aim of the whole seems to be at something above, of which, perhaps, the representation is missing, a supposition supported by the fact that the King is no where visible on this slab. A vulture is directing his flight towards the battlefield, where another above the Chariot is devouring a dying man, who has fallen within in the act of flying. He wears the fillet which indicates the enemy.

The Fourth which we shall describe (the ninth of the arrangement of the Museum) represents the Standard-bearers of the great King, with their respective charioteers. Each bears a distinct standard—each drawn by three horses and one a bull, and the other, horses. The chariots and the trappings of the horses are the same as before scribed, excepting that the horses have plumes upon their heads. There are only two complete chariots, but only six legs are represented; and the officers are without caps, though, in other particulars, their dresses are the same as on the former slabs. The victorious army is pursuing the enemy through a wood, indicated by the trees and bushes; and the vultures hovering over the first chariot, and the headless bodies stretched amongst the trees, are sufficiently suggestive that the carnage has been great. One of the leaders of the enemy is implored by the horses of his chariots are falling, plunging and struggling in different directions, in admirable opposition to the composed array of the King's body-guard, distinguished by the conical cap and whip-like instrument. The wheels of the chariots of the enemy have eight spokes—whereas, the other chariots have but six.

(Continued on page 412.)

THE PAINTER PRISONER.

(An Extract from the Note-Book of a Tourist through the Isle of Wight.)

——"Another interesting incident occurred in our making the tour of the Island, which, if I could describe vividly as did the amiable lady who first narrated it to us, would, doubtless, give the reader as much melancholy pleasure as it afforded to ourselves

"In one of the beautiful vales in the centre of the Island stands a villa occupied by the respected widow of a medical gentleman, with whom we were, in years gone by, acquainted. We called at her house; and, on looking at some paintings which adorn her walls, a set of landscapes, during our party observed that some of them were sweetly painted in the style of Morland, but that he thought they were by different masters. Our hostess politely set him right, and named him Paul, and painted by his own hand. He was a friend of George Morland's, and that she herself had witnessed their progress when painting, under the following peculiar and melancholy circumstances

"Paul D——was a successful painter. George Morland, but, as was the case with his master, Paul's talents were beclouded by habits of continued intoxication. He was, in consequence, not only unable to tread in the higher walks of his profession, but had, not unfrequently, difficulty in procuring a meal. Under this, he frequented it to us, would, doubtless, give the reader as much melancholy pleasure as it afforded to ourselves

"In one of the beautiful vales in the centre of the Island stands a villa occupied by the respected widow of a medical gentleman, with whom we were, in years gone by, acquainted. We called at her house; and, on looking at some paintings which adorn her walls, a set of landscapes, during our party observed that some of them were sweetly painted in the style of Morland, but that he thought they were by different masters. Our hostess politely set him right, and named him Paul, and painted by his own hand. He was a friend of George Morland's, and that she herself had witnessed their progress when painting, under the following peculiar and melancholy circumstances

"Paul D——was a successful painter. George Morland, but, as was the case with his master, Paul's talents were beclouded by habits of continued intoxication. He was, in consequence, not only unable to tread in the higher walks of his profession, but had, not unfrequently, difficulty in procuring a meal. Under this, he frequented a low public-house, and, in order to procure the means of purchasing, or even now of painting for, a meal to support nature. In this dilemma, the poor fellow went to the first cottage he saw, with the intention of begging for a morsel of food to help him on his way. He looked—no one answered. He opened the door, and found the family were all from home a silver watch unfortunately hung over the mantel-piece—hunger was urgent, despair desperate—he found no food; but, in an evil moment, took the watch and hurried from the house! Reflection soon came, and, shuddering at the crime he had committed, the poor conscience-stricken Painter knew not what to do; he dared return to the cottage for fear of detection. He recovered sense of honesty would not allow him to convert the stolen watch to his own use. These feelings—his over night's excess—the pain of his frozen fingers—the general debility that his night sleep had induced—produced on his mind such a b..wilderment, that, hardly knowing what he did, he threw the stolen property into a pond by the road side; and, in hopes of escaping from his own feelings, hurried on his way to Sandown. The Cottager returned soon after Paul had departed; he missed his watch. was informed that a person had been seen to leave his cottage a few minutes previous. He pursued, caught, and charged the Painter with the theft. Paul unhesitatingly admitted it, and returned with his captor to where he had thrown it. The pond was dragged with a rake, and the stolen property recovered. The prisoner was, notwithstanding, taken before a magistrate, admitted the robbery, and was forthwith committed for trial to Fisherton Gaol.

"The husband of our narrator was then living, and was considered the medical attendant at the county gaol; and the poor frost-bitten prisoner, of course, became his patient. The surgeon's skill soon stopped the courses of sloughing and of gangrene, which had taken place in the frozen fingers; and the kind husband's benevolence, in supplying such generous food and wines, from his own table, as the poor starved Painter required, soon restored him to health and physical capability. Paul was an ingenious man, and his mental feelings were revived their proper position. In gratitude for the benevolence, skill, and attention of his Doctor, the poor fellow proposed to paint him a series of pictures, as part payment of the great debt he owed him; for he had yet several months to remain in prison, ere the coming of the Judge. The Doctor, with kind feelings, foresaw the advantages it would be to the prisoner, and agreed that he should paint a series of landscapes for him, reserving to himself the right of paying such sum as they might be worth when finished. Mahogany panels were purchased, brushes, paints, and pencils were supplied, and the Painter commenced his labours. Long ere the assizes took place, Paul had finished—not only the series of landscapes (ten, I think, in number)—but also a couple of exquisitely finished hand-screens, which latter he insisted on presenting to the Doctor's lady, who had, with similar benevolence to her husband's, superintended and administered the comforts to the Prisoner, and had daily visited him during his long and dreary imprisonment. It is presumed that some influential persons, who were acquainted with the Painter's strange and romantic story, had interfered with the owner of the watch: for when the eventful day of trial at length came, no person appeared to prosecute, and Paul was discharged by proclamation. He received from the kind Doctor a considerable sum for his landscapes; and left the court an altered, a richer, and a better man."

B. B

MUSIC.

PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.—The rooms were crowded to excess at the eighth and last Concert for the season, 1847, on Monday night. In the first part Mozart's symphony in D, No. 8, called the "Jupiter," on account of its colossal fugue in the last movement, and Beethoven's "Leonora" overture, played at one of the previous Concerts, were nobly executed. In the second act Sterndale Bennett's picturesque but Mendelssohnian overture, the "Naiades," Beethoven's "Pastorale" symphony, and Weber's overture, the "Ruler of the Spirits," were fine y performed, despite of some evidences of fatigue in the wind instruments in the "Pastorale," owing to the length of the programme. Herr Hellmesberger played De Beriot's third violin concerto in E minor nicely but not brilliantly. Mdme. Dorus sang Scarlo's air "Jours de mon enfance," from the "Pré aux Clercs," with the vlol n obligato beautifully played by Sainton, and Auber's air "Du moment l'enfance from the "Serment." The latter is but a series of solfeggi, but they were most finely done by the accomplished vocalist. Pischek gave with much spirit the "Zampa" song by Herold, and with Mdlle. Dorus Gras Mozart's "Crudel perche?" At the close of the concert, Costa was called for, and greeted heartily by the band and company, as an acknowledgment for his valuable services as conductor during the past season, through which the Society was saved from destruction. We are happy to add that the instruments will receive a boni, in addition to their regular pay, and that a balance will be added to the funded capital of this truly National Institution, which has effected so much for the cultivation of the highest order of classical music in this country.

CONCERT AT THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.—The morning performance at Covent Garden was brilliantly attended. The house was crowded in every part by rank and fashion. The "Stabat Mater" was admirably executed, although, owing to Mario's hoarseness, he was unable to sing the tenor part. Salvi was his substitute in the "Cujus animam," and Sig Lavia and Mr. Genge took the parts in the two Quartets at full. Grisi's powerful voice in the "Inflammatus" and "Eia Mater," and Alboni's exquisite pathos in the "Fac ut portem," secured rapturous encores for both these pairs. Madame Rounconi and Alboni, in the duo "Quis est homo," and Tamburini, in the "Pro peccatis" and the "Fia mater," were immensely applauded. The choruses and band were beyond all praise. The overtures to "Oberon," "Semiramide," and "Fidelio," were executed by the orchestra, under Costa's baton, with unparalleled power and brilliancy. Costa was the prolonged cheering at each display, that encores might have been accepted for all three. In the miscellaneous act, Mdme. Rounconi sang the cavatina from "Maria di Rohan" as well, as to be earnestly applauded both by band and audience: this artiste, as a concert singer, may take a high position. Rounconi gave an air from Donizetti's "Gemma di Vergy;" and Salvi was compelled to sing Verdi's "Ciel pietoso" twice. Rosselli's chorus, "La Gondoliera," created this admirable entertainment, the success of which has caused an announcement for a second Concert, on Friday, the 2nd of July, when Beethoven's "Battle Symphony" will be played, the two military bands having been engaged to attend on the glorious 18th. Beethoven's "Leonora" overture is also to be done, and will bring out the force of the fifteen first-rate violinists Costa has collected in his band of eighty artists. These morning performances will enable many amateurs, especially ladies who live at the outskirts, and do not like to be out late at night, to hear this great orchestra, and the leading singers.

MUSICAL UNION.—At the Seventh Meeting on Tuesday afternoon, at Willis's Rooms, the programme combined vocal as well as instrumental attraction. Mdlle. de Meindi sang Bieling's air "La Primavera" very sweetly, and Pischek gave a German ballad (MS.), by Luders, "Die beiden Grenadier;" and an air by C. Kreutzer, "Die Nacht is schn," with violin obligato by J. Hellmesberger, admirably. Mozart's Quartet in D, No 7, was played by J. Hellmesberger, Deloffre, Hill, and Piatti. The Andante and Finale of Spohr's double Quartet, No 2, op 87, were assigned to Sainton, J. Hellmesberger, Hill, Piatti, Deloffre, Thirlwall, C. Hellmesberger, and Howell. The Adagio and Rondo of Onslow's Quintet, op. 35, in C, showed off Sainton and Hill, Pinsonet, Howell, and Thirlwall. Hummell's Septet in D minor, op. 76, was nobly rendered by Madame Dulcken (piano), Ribas (flute), Barret (oboe), Jarrett (cornu), &c. Joachim, Deloffre, Hill, and Piatti executed Beethoven's Quartet in E flat, No 6; and Spohr's Quartet for three violins, by G. Hellmesberger, was brilliantly played by the composer, his brother, and Sainton, closing a remarkably fine concert.

MADAME DE LOZANO.—This vocalist has a powerful body of distinction, who has been compelled to resort to the profession, gave a Concert at Willis's Rooms, conducted by Signor Pilotti, on Monday; and, in addition to her own national airs, afforded proof of her accomplishment in the Italian school. She was assisted by Madame Mortier de Fontaine, the Misses Pyne; Signori Gallo, Montelli, Marcolini, the Ciebras guitarists; Madame Forestier, pianiste; and Mr. Reeves, harpist.

CONCERT OF ANCIENT MUSIC. The seventh Concert, on Wednesday night, under the direction of the Archbishop of York, for the King of Hanover, contained an excellent selection. The "Cecilian Ode" of Handel, which had great success in Italy, made his début in Mozart's "A te, fra tanta affanno," from the "Davidde Penitente." He displayed a fine quality of voice, and a good style, but the aria itself was not considered in the Handel school. Graziani had vocastic assemblage. M. Roger and Madame Dorus Gras sang Paisiello's charming duetto from Metastasio's "Olimpiade," "No giorni mai felice," excellently. Madame Dorus Gras sang Mr. Lindsay Sloper's "Ave Maria" with success, but not orthedox; and we preferred Mr. Williams's clarionet obligato. She also gave Cherubini's air, "Jeunes filles," from the "Anacreon." Madame Caradori Allan in two Italian airs. The orchestra "per glory will not be affected by Pischek's version, too vociferously declaimed to our minds in the recitative; but the air, "Waft her Angels," was feelingly sung. Mohul's Quartetto from "Joseph," "No, no, shind," was supported by Messrs. Cooper, Reeves, and Machin, but Mr. Peck's part was not heard. Cherubini's "Lodoiska" overture, choruses by Handel and Beethoven, and gleanings from Gluck, Mozart's "Cemenza di Tito," &c., were also included in the selection. The eighth and last Concert will be on Wednesday next; and on the 13th and 14th, the annual morning rehearsal and evening performance of the "Messiah," in aid of the Royal Society of Musicians.

MADAME GRAZIANI.—This gifted pianiste gave a very delightful matinée on Wednesday, at her residence, in Marlborough-street, affording many specimens of her classical style and finished execution. She gave the air, with variations, from the Kreutzer Sonata for Piano and Violin, with Mr. Dury, with the utmost taste, feeling, and precision. Mr Godefroid played some of his charming pieces on the harp, and Mdlle. de Meindi sang Spanish melodies excellently.

MISS DOLBY AND MR. LINDSAY SLOPER.—The fair vocalist and the clever pianist gave a Morning Concert, on Wednesday, at the Hanover-square Rooms, which were crowded to excess. Miss Dolby had a most flattering reception. She sang ballads by T. Linley and G. E. Hay, Kossmi's airs, "Ah! quel gioria," and Mozart's "Pesta o cara," with her usual taste and finished style. Mr. Lindsay Sloper's Rondo, in B minor, by Mendelssohn; one of Heller's studies; and, with Benedict, a new pianoforte duo for two pianofortes, admirably. John Parry was encored in "Lalla Rookh," and Mr. Sloper for singing. The other vocalists were Mdme. Dorus Gras, Mdlle. Vera, Miss Rainforth, Mr. H. Phillips (who sang Mendelssohn's scena "On Lena's gloomy heath" finely), the Misses Pyne, Signor Tausel, Chatterton, &c. The Misses Lindsay Sloper were the accompanyists.

Mr. STOCKING'S CONCERT.—We are requested to state that Mdlle. Cinzia Pagliardini is a pupil of MM. Schilling and Schulz, for the piano, and of Madame Pagliardini, her mother, for singing. We are informed that Signor Tito Pagliardini, who lectures us for not having seen the programme, when he addresses a correction to the journals, to be more cautious for the future. We have Mr. Stocking's programme before us, and not only is the name of the singer recorded, which Signor Pagliardini asserts was never mentioned, but a majority of the artists are specially referred to as "pupils of Mr. Stocking," and caused the mistake in noticing the Concert. We are sorry to have given any cause for the slightest degree calculated to be "injurious to her in her profession," as Signor Tito so warmly asserts.

MUSICAL CHIT CHAT.

The concert last evening (Friday), of Mr. Robert Green, the pianist, will be noticed in our next publication. On Monday morning, rehearsal of Ancient Concerts; and Mdlle. Vera and Signor Emiliani will give their Concert at the Beethoven Rooms, Harley-street. In the evening, Mr. Parry's new Oratorio of "Hezekiah" will be produced at the Hanover-square Rooms; Mr. Wilson closes his season at the Music Hall; Mr. R. Blagrove, the concertmaist, gives his Concert at the Hanover-square Rooms; and the fifth and last evening of the Beethoven Quartet Society, with Joachim, Sainton, Hill, and Rousselot, will take place. On Wednesday evening, the eighth and last Ancient Concert, and Mr. Muller's soirée for the production of Mendelssohn's "Lorelei." Mdlle. Meindi an air from the "Sonnambula." Joachim played Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, and one of Ernst's pieces.

Madame Jenny Lutner has left London for Stuttgardt. She is married to Herr Dingestadt, of that capital. The Hellmesbergers have also quitted town on their return to Vienna, their usual city. Schulolf, the pianist, has left for Paris. Don R. de Clebra gave a Guitar Recital at the Princess' Concert-room, on Friday. The engagements for the Italian Opera at St. Petersburgh, for the season 1847-1848, comprise Mdlle. de Gilli, prima donna; Mdlle. Angri, contralto; Guasco, tenor; and Signor Tamburini, basso. Mdlle. Charton, of the Brussels Company, when it was at Drury-Lane Theatre, is now the star of the Opera Comique, in Paris.

THE THEATRES.

HER MAJESTY'S.

The subject of Jenny Lind's performance of Norma, has, since she first appeared in this character, last week, formed matter of discussion in every circle. That she gives a new reading to this part, one of the most important in a dramatic point of view, of the operatic repertoire, every one knows; but so much has been said about the extreme tenderness she infuses into her performance, that those who have seen her are led to think this is the only characteristic of her impersonation. But the real Norma is not one tender and loving, but proud and passionate; and the difference between the performance of Mdlle. Lind and that of her predecessors in the part, is, that with her the former feelings are too powerful to allow the latter to have their full sway unimpeded course. In the moments of the greatest and most fiery anger, her voice, her movements, all betray that her anguish is stronger still. She does not rave at Poliione as one who finds in the pleasure of seeing him crouch beneath her eye, some compensation for the misery he has inflicted Her anger is the strong indignation of a faithful heart at its betrayal, and the cry of an anguish that is too mighty to be borne in silence. But, how can we say that tenderness is the only feature of Mdlle. Lind's performance of Norma, who only observe the look of withering scorn which she casts on her faithless lover—a look which one could hardly believe her gentle features capable of conveying.

Mdlle Lindin Norma is great from first to last. It is not a splendid burst here and there which constitutes the beauty of her performance; it is a fine intellectual conception of the character which is sustained throughout, not a look or a gesture escaping her, but which is in perfect keeping; and this is not, we are convinced, the effect of art, but of that marvellous power of identifying herself with the character she performs, which, more than anything else, constitutes her great charm. From her first entrance, beneath the calm dignity and inspired manner of the priestess, may be traced the workings of a heart ill at ease. Few things can exceed the beauty of her opening recitative, terminating with those long dying notes, so inexpressibly touching, in which no one can equal her. The "Casta Diva" is sung by her with a touch of sadness, blending with the calm sweetness of the air. And let us remark, en passant, the few notes she throws in while the chorus take up the strain. It is as if some bird of the woods, in which the scene is laid, had broken in upon the voices of the singers. It is only Mdlle Lind who can produce such effects as these. To the second part of the "Casta Diva," she gives a totally different character from the first. The one, calm and religious in its expression; the second, where she calls Poliione to mind, is the outpouring of earthly passion.

We must hasten over the intermediate scenes, splendidly given as they are by her, to that where she attempts to murder her children. To this scene, which has always appeared to us one of the most powerful and unnatural horror, she gives truth and probability. Her face is blanched and almost convulsed by agony; her wild look and tottering step give indications of a brain almost distraught, while she contemplates the fatal act, and seeks to nerve those purpose (a purpose of madness, it is true) has been strongly taken, and whose mind has been worked up to the dreadful act. Thus, the mother's love which stays her hand is rendered more touching. Never shall we forget the look of horror with which she throws back her head, her hair falling backward also, when she has let the dagger drop. It is almost too true and too painful.

In the last scene she is splendid. The two duets with Poliione, "Io mia non sfirn tu sei" and "Mal cor tradisti," she gave us with a passion, feeling, and dignity, unsurpassed. Nothing can be more beautiful, too, than the look of wild exultation which lights up her features while preparing her vengeance; but, it is when, after hav. g denounced herself, the remembrance of her children comes across her, that her despair breaks all bounds, and takes gestures, and movements, and tones, which would rend the coldest heart. Here she reminded us of some scene of Shakspeare. She is truly worthy to carry out the inspirations of our immortal bard; for hers is the acting, as his is the language of nature, and will force the hearer to forget all cavilling and fault-finding, to every heart that is susceptible of a spark of feeling.

We do not speak of the encores, the calls before the curtain she obtained, for all these are but feeble testimonials to genius such as hers.

The ever-charming opera, "La Sonnambula," was repeated on Thursday night to one of the most densely crowded houses we ever witnessed. Mdlle. Lind continues her triumphant career in her favourite rôle, Amina, in which she displayed on Thursday all those wonders in the vocal art that enrapture as well as astonish her hearers. Every ovation that was possible was offered to the fair audience to testify the delight they had experienced: she was called for after each act, and appeared amidst a tumult of applause, when floral crowns and a shower of bouquets were thrown at the feet of the fair songstress. No other parts were ably supported by Gardoni as Elvino, and F. Lablache as Count Rodolph. The choruses went admirably, and the band was everything to be wished for. The exquisite dancing of Carlotta Grisi in an act of "Giselle," whose charming Certto in a selection from the ballet of "Alma," concluded this varied and splendid entertainment.

ADELPHI

The new piece, called "Title Deeds," produced at this theatre on Monday evening, may rather be considered as a three act drama than a "comedy," for such it is termed in the bills. Its plot is as follows:—Humphrey Haywhipp (Mr. Oxley), a cabman, who has risen in private life, has found a box left in his cab by a gentleman about to start for the West Indies. Urged on by Mrs. Owlet (Mrs. Laws), the mother of his wife, Sally (Miss Woolgar), he breaks the box open instead of taking it to the owner, and, having found a number of valuable deeds, and finds in it a quantity of money and papers. On this, he determines to leave London and return to his native village of Glastonbury, taking with him Peter Rush (Mr. Wright), a poor little-breed, half-starved creature, living on his wits, and writing rejected plays for Richardson's theatre, who has been for some time a fellow-lodger. The gentleman whom Haywhipp drove to the West Indies is Mr. Merrit (Mr. Lambert), a solicitor of the firm of Fustick (Mr. Lambert), Morant, and Philip Fustick (Mr. Boyce). Philip is fond of sporting, and gets linked into a series of racing transactions with Mr. Turfy Goodwood (Mr Paul Bedford); and Mr. Morant is desirous to pay his addresses to a captivating widow, Mrs. Everyoy (Mrs. Yates), who has two nieces, Matilda (Miss Emma Harding), and Rosa (Miss Ellen Chaplin). With all the parties in this position, the first act closes.

In the second we find Haywhipp in his cottage at Glastonbury, with Peter Rush installed as tutor to his children; and all of them in easy circumstances. But the cabman finds it at ease. The consequences of his ignites wealth embitters his existence; and, although he is noticed by Philip, who is a country squire down there, and has everything he wishes, the complains of want of sleep, and a constant dread of being disturbed in possession of the box. Philip gives a dinner party, and invites Peter and Haywhipp, to meet Mr. Goodwood. During the dinner Mr. Morant returns suddenly from the West Indies; and informs Philip that the box left in the cab by Haywhipp is one that the loss of the box containing the title deeds, has led to their being unable to avail themselves of their vast Indian estates; and that the worst must be prepared for. Goodwood arrests Mr. Morant, as a party to the fraud. The consternation and shocking death incurred by Philip; Mr. Morant is also put into a sponging-house; and all parties are plunged in the deepest misery. Mr. Morant has had a bill printed, offering five hundred pounds reward for the recovery of the title deeds. Haywhipp gets hold of this, and sends his wife to make a full confession to Rose. But, Mrs Owlet, whose intellect has been declining, has stolen the box and hidden it no one knows where; nor can she herself recollect where she has left it. Rose has, however, been for some time engaged in making a drawing of Glastonbury Abbey by moonlight; and Sally Haywhipp seeing it by chance, detects a resemblance to her mother in a female figure introduced into the view, and taken by Rose from nature. This affords a clue to the locality of Mrs. Owlet's wanderings. The box is found, just as an execution is put in the mansion of the Fustick's. Mr. Morant claims the box and the deeds, and is about to carry them off, and Haywhipp is promised suitable and honest employment by the firm; whilst Mr. Turfy Goodwood, finding his gains by betting are all forfeited, through a change of having changed the losing horse, upon which he got Philip to lay such heavy wagers, is glad to compromise as he possible.

Of this plot, the serious—or rather the part intended to be the "comedy" portion—was the most ineffective; but, wherever Mr. Wright and Mr. O. Smith were on the stage together, the audience were convulsed with laughter. And we have seldom seen either of these gentlemen to greater advantage. To Mr. Wright, especially, great praise is due, for his subdued and natural acting. He made every point he tell; and there was not an exaggerated or unnatural look or gesture, or tone, which provoked continuous applause. Mr. O. Smith dressed and played with all the artistic care for which his assumptions are remarkable: and Mr. Paul Bedford had not a great part to do, but introduced, with very great effect, Tom d'Urfey's old song of "The Leather Rotiel." Miss Woolgar's Sally was another proof of the advancement this young lady is making in her art. She will sustain the reputation she has gained for the display of melodramatic pathos in "The Flowers of the Forest;" and, in the third act of this piece, her performance was so powerfully effective that the house rang with the applause which followed almost every speech. With care, she may become the leading heroine of domestic melodrama as well as our first soubrette. Mrs. Yates's performance of Mrs. Everyoy was a graceful and lady-like piece of acting; but there was not much scope for making a display in the part. However, the drama was entirely and deservedly successful; and, when the author was called for, and the well-known face of Mr R. B. Peake smiled acknowledgments of the compliment, the applause was uproarious.

We heard in the theatre that the piece had been written for the Haymarket; with Webster for Haywhipp; Buckstone for Peter Rush; Farren for Mr Fustick; and Miss Fortescue for Rose. Of course, in the present tenure, in consequence of a chief performer throwing up his part. We think it is better calculated for the Adelphi than for the other house. On Wednesday evening, every seat was filled.

After the drama, an entertainment called a "Magyar Mulatsag," which means, according to the bill, an Hungarian Fête, was given. It introduced six dancers, three of either sex—with most remarkable names, who display much activity, especially Mons. Toth Samu, who gave us the best imitation of a large fantoccini figure we had ever seen. We question, however, whether they did anything which our own pantomimists could not exceed. His four "instrumental vocalists," whom we spoke of at the Haymarket, also appeared, and were loudly applauded; but the approbation was not altogether unqualified. Several novelties are announced to be in preparation at the Adelphi; and a new farce, called "How to Settle Accounts with your Laundress," will be produced next week.

PRINCESS'

Mr. Macready's engagement at this house, which did not turn out so profitable to the treasury as was anticipated, has been followed by that of Madame Vestris and Mr. Charles Mathews, who made their first appearance this season on Monday evening, and were very warmly received. No new pieces were brought ent for them, but "Love's Telegraph," "A Curious Case," and "The Critic," were considered, and proved, sufficiently attractive. We somewhat fear, however, that the Princess' is becoming a "star" theatre; we mean that some name in large letters will always be considered necessary in the bill, to ensure a good house. This is to be regretted, since, in the olden time, with its stock company, no theatre offered a better entertainment. Its interests have also been injured by the constant production of sorry translations, which have come out, and gone in again, with unmeaning rapidity. It is evidently such a good property, that we should regret to see any further decline of its prosperity through careless management.

SURREY.

On Wednesday evening, after the opera of "Maritana," a new drama was produced, called "The Rag-picker of Paris, and the Drum-maker of St. Antoine," being a translation by Mr. Edward Stirling, of the last drama brought out for Frederick Lemaitre, at the Porte St. Martin Theatre, in Paris, and called "Le Chiffonier de Paris."

The drama is in three acts, preceded by a prologue, the action of which takes place twenty years before that of the piece, on the Quais d'Austerlitz—"a Quay in Austerlitz," as the bill calls it. Its story is of the highest-pressure Boulvart school, involving murder, theft, infanticide, and treachery of every description; but the incidents are remarkably well put together, and the interest kept up with great dramatic tact. We can imagine that with the great Frederick in the principal character, and the costly mise en scène of the Porte St. Martin it must be a great hit in Paris. Not that it is otherwise at the Surrey, for the applause throughout was uproarious, as well as at the conclusion; but it has evidently been got up in a great hurry. We were acquainted with much of the scenery; and one or two chances of making a capital effect—the sauve at the Baron's, for one—were lost sight of. It was very well played; we were both surprised and gratified at Mr. H. Webb's delineation of the Chiffonier. Even when following every point which had evidently been written for Lemaitre, and in which he must be so great, Mr. H. Webb did not suffer by the mental comparison. He played with a comic earnestness and force highly creditable; and produced an impression upon the audience which we had not before given him credit for being enabled to achieve, Mrs. Vining played the grisette with much feeling, and Mrs. Daly, as a sage-femme, gave us an exceedingly characteristic representation.

The house was very well filled, every private box being occupied; and the drama will, without doubt, have a long and lucrative run.

ASTLEY'S.

"The Storming of Quito, or the Warrior of the Sun," which is the last spectacle produced at the above house, is an equestrian edition of Sheridan's "Pizarro." The play has been, however, much altered. Two or three family personages, not found in the original tragedy, are introduced; and Elvira and Valverde disappear altogether. But this is all for the best. We question whether an Astley audience would be found to sympathise much with their fortunes, whilst, in the action of the piece, there are situations for every kind of effect most likely to be well realized with the peculiar resources of this establishment. Of course the horses are introduced wherever an opportunity presents itself; the best being the escape of Rolla with Cora's child, which is achieved upon horseback in a very striking manner. The costumes—especially of the Peruvians—are very tasteful and gorgeous, singling well with the armour and trappings of the Spanish cavalry; and the tableaux we may particularize the concluding one arranged with an eye to the picturesque. Mr. W. West, lately well known as the intelligent stage-manager at Drury Lane, has re-appeared on these boards in the character of Rolla; and very well indeed he sustained it. His efforts were well supported by the other members of the Astley troupe, in whom great strength of lungs, to overcome the sound-absorbing saw-dust, is more requisite than fine delineation of character. It is not every one who can throw his voice to the back of the gallery; and without this power, the constant recommendations to "speak up" would somewhat interrupt the performance. The audience ratified the success of the "Storming of Quito" with their hands; and with such heartiness that we can conscientiously chronicle it as complete; and we doubt not but that Mr Batty will find a fresh and hitherto unexplored gold mine in Peru, to reward him for his enterprize.

THE ETHIOPIAN SERENADERS.

On the first of July, the original Ethiopians will appear for the last time but one in England, for the benefit of our old friend "Bones"—for so we must call him; we cannot bring ourselves to believe that his name is Fell; and on the Saturday following they will take their farewell of us, appearing on that evening with white faces. We must order every body to go and bid good-bye to Bones. By every recollection of his veneration for Dan Tucker—his silent grief at the memory of poor Lucy Neal—his simple-hearted terror at the Ghost Chorus—and his polite reception of Ole Joe, he is entitled to a bumper at parting. Mr. Mitchell favours us with some clever Portraits of the Serenaders. The likenesses are admirable.

THE AL FRESCO AMUSEMENTS.

Mdlle. Caroline, the most graceful and daring cowgire in the world, has returned to VAUXHALL, after an absence, if we mistake not, of five years; and, mounted on her beautifully trained steed, is again witching the world with her noble horsemanship. The weather during the past week has not been altogether so favourable for out-of-door diversions; but, despite the rain, the Royal Property has had no very great reason to complain of want of patronage, and there is really a great deal to see there just at present.

At the SURREY ZOOLOGICAL GARDENS, M. Jullien is conducting a splendid band, and Gibraltar is taken every time with increased effect. On Tuesday evening, when we looked in, there could not have been less than two thousand visitors —at a rude guess—the admirable behaviour of whom was not the least pleasing feature of the assemblage.

NATIONAL SPORTS.

However, he replied at hazard, with
A modest confidence and calm assurance,
Which lent his learned heathenish pith,
And pass'd for arguments of good endurance. BYRON.

THE present has been a merry week for those who can afford to be merry and wise; but not a momentous occasion for those who are fain to extract all the poisant they can from the elixir of pleasure—conventionally called existence. There was but one race meeting—that of Newcastle-upon-Tyne—whither only the ultra sporting set are wont to repair, and to which we shall return anon, as the chief matter for this our literal incubation.

Afloat, it was mere paddling, to breathe the manly hearts destined, at no distant day, to beat high with emulation, and pulling for dear life from Westminster-bridge to Putney.

At cricket there was one match of account—that played at Lord's, between the Gentlemen of England and the Gentlemen of Kent. In yachting a meeting, at Ryde, to elect a Vice-Commodore to the Royal Victoria Yacht Club. At the Royal Thames Yacht Club Rooms, in Covent-garden, also, a meeting, for the entry of the wager vessels for the match to be sailed on the 7th of July; but these passages were of temporary interest, and only for those whom they immediately concerned. Last week we ventured to deal with a portion of the policy of the turf, which, as it seemed to us, was of general application, and public concern. This week we take the liberty to treat of that which forms a parent of the modern system, that, in our poor thought, would also be "more honoured in the breach than the observance."

It has been the habit so long to scoff at all reform political as well as social—that the privilege has assumed something of the character of a duty for those who are supposed to represent good order, institutions, and such like ad captandum phrases. When Akenside set up for a patriot—with his Epistle to Curio—the best of his Castalian verses by a great deal—he got soundly laughed at for his pains. Having thus apostrophised the Minister ex posse:—

See private life by wisest arts reclaimed,
See ardent youth to noblest manners framed;
See us achieve what's or was sought by you,
If Curio—only Curio—will be true—

one of his modern commentators thus observes on his end and aim:—"It was Pulteney's business, it seems, to abolish fairs and masquerades: to stint the young Duke of Marlborough to a bottle of brandy a day, and to prevail on Lady Vane to be content with three lovers at a time." Now, could Pulteney have done this —or any part of it—there would have been good cause for congratulation. But why the sneer? The post was dealing with a general principle, and that is the province of the reformer: the details will spring out of the system as the flowers from the stem. In a right spirit—if even the proposition was a mistaken one—we resolutely repudiated the modern contrivance for the encouragement of indiscriminate gambling on horse races. A word here—in all courteous argument—with the practice of catering for the taste—in shape of those catalogues raisonnées which now regularly appear in anticipation of all the leading turf issues of the season.

When first those gallant Pindarics yclept "Derby Prophecies" made their appearance, they were taken, as they were intended, for good fun—and no more. Now they are looked for and applied as stimulants to a morbid appetite. It is true, they have no influence with those versed in the mysteries of betting, and the subtleties of the odds; but the multitude will mean down with their "half-and-half," and regard their conclusions "as proofs of holy writ." Again we select a modern instance—from the laboratory of one of the most scientific professors of the art. In his late analysis of the Northumberland Plate, there was this passage—written in

A modest confidence and calm assurance.

"EYRE, I should think, doubtful as to showing; his weight, with 9lbs. extra for winning the Grand Stand Plate at Epsom, is 6st 8lbs.; which quite obliterates his chance by winning on the occasion." Nevertheless this "calm assurance," he "went and won," as the stable boys say, putting "into the hole" hecatombs of the confiding, that, taking the argument for matter "of good endurance," laid against him, some for the simple issue, to lose; some for the double event, neither to win nor start. During the existence of the South Sea Bubble, we are told by the biographer of Walpole, "his calm good sense preserved him from the general infatuation; he condemned the prevailing madness in public, and turned a considerable sum by taking advantage of it in private." Regard should be had to this possibility of its being urged in the history of the Turf during the nine teen h century, that its prophets had succeeded in discovering the philosopher's stone; the art of turning base mettle into gold—in some such doggerel couplet as this —

Herein lay the spell of their alchemy's lore—
The "coming events cast their shadows before."

TATTERSALL'S.

MONDAY.—A great number of horses were backed this afternoon, and a few of them, viz., Conspiracy, Grimston, Blackburd, Milliner, Stultz, Martext, The Hero, Fitz-Emilius, Cossack, and The Farmer's Daughter, were in good demand, but the general business was bad, and the changes of slight importance.

NORTHUMBERLAND PLATE.

9 to 2 agst Conspiracy (t)	6 to 1 agst Backbird	15 to 1 agst Best of Three
7 to 1 — Grimston (t)	12 to 1 — Excessor	15 to 1 — Weryjacker
8 to 1 — The Conjaror	12 to 1 — Eryx	18 to 1 — Vanish

GOODWOOD STAKES.

10 to 1 agst The Questionable	20 to 1 agst Sir's (t)	25 to 1 agst Martext
15 to 1 — Vampyre	22 to 1 — Sir Hiner (t)	33 to 1 — Blackbird (t)
	40 to 1 agst Tyrone (t)

GOODWOOD CUP.

3 to 1 agst The Hero (take 10 to 4)	12 to 1 agst Fitz-Emilius (t)	20 to 1 agst Eryx
	15 to 1 — Sir Tatton Sykes	33 to 1 — Sunbeam
9 to 1 — Wolfdog (take 10 to 1)	20 to 1 — Hale	66 to 1 — Asch Asch (t)
	20 to 1 — Biryguny

ST LEGER.

5 to 2 agst Cossack	13 to 1 agst Perseverance (t)	20 to 1 agst Black Dwarf (t)
7 to 1 — Van Tromp (t)	17 to 1 — Farmer's Daughter	25 to 1 — Limestone (t)
12 to 1 — Red Hart (t)	17 to 1 — Martext (t)	25 to 1 — Mogador (t)
	40 to 1 agst Tyrone (t)

DERBY.

20 to 1 agst Nil Desperandum	25 to 1 agst Piscatcher (t)	40 to 1 agst Cerelan (t)
	40 to 1 agst Kite Ochiltree (t)	100 to 1 agst Incendiary (t)

THURSDAY.—A thin muster, and very little business doing; and the only horses in favour Milliner, Stultz, Burgundy, and Martext, for the Goodwood Stakes; and Eryx for the Goodwood Cup; for the latter race, Wolfdog and Mendicant are altogether friendless:—

GOODWOOD STAKES.

15 to 1 agst Stultz	20 to 1 agst Milliner (t)	30 to 1 agst Sir George
20 to 1 — Burgundy (t)	25 to 1 — Martext (t)

The Questionable is declared to have been quite sick since Epsom Races, and to be a doubtful starter for this event.

GOODWOOD CUP.

2 to 1 agst The Hero	16 to 1 agst Fitz-Emilius	15 to 1 agst Burgundy
9 to 1 — Eryx	18 to 1 — Wolfdog	18 to 1 — Sir Tatton Sykes
	33 to 1 agst Mendicant

ST LEGER.

5 to 2 agst Cossack	6 to 1 agst Van Tromp	12 to 1 agst Mr. Martin
18 to 1 agst Farmer's Daughter	25 to 1 Mogadore

DERBY.

33 to 1 agst Sancaris	40 to 1 agst Bevarlac
40 to 1 — Nil Desperandum	50 to 1 — The Stinger

500 even between The Stinger and Glendower.

NEWCASTLE RACES.—TUESDAY.

The Newcastle commenced on Tuesday, with every prospect of being the most successful in respect of company and the quality of the sport that has been had for several seasons. The weather was remarkably fine, and the course in excellent order.

The Produce Stakes of 50 sovs each, h ft, for two-yr olds: colts, 8st 7lb; and fillies, 8st 4lb. Three-quarters of a mile. (13 Subs.)

Mr. J. Scott's The Stinger	allowed 3lb	(F. Butler) 1
Mr. Allen's Camphine,	allowed 3lb	(Joy) 2

Betting: 4 to 1 on The Stinger. The Stinger made all the running, and won easily by four lengths.

The North Derby Stakes of 25 sovs each, p.p., with 100 added, for three-yr olds: colts, 8st 7lb; and fillies, 8st 2lb. The second to receive £50. One mile. (.8 Subs)

Lord Eglinton's Van Tromp	.. .. ..	(J. Marson) 1
Lord Zetland's Helias	.. .. ..	(Templeman) 2
Mr. J. Taylor's George Hudson	.. .. ..	(Holmes) 3

Van Tromp took the lead, with Helias second, George Hudson third, and Christopher last, for the first 300 yards, when he resigned it to Helias and George Hudson, the latter making the running to the distance. Helias and Van Tromp then went in front, the favourite winning easily by a length.

The Tyro Stakes of 10 sovs each, and 50 added, for two-yr-old colts 8st 7lb, and fillies 8st 4lb; the second to save his stake. From the Newcastle Turn in. (23 Subs.)

Mr. Padley's Lady Mary, by Lanercost	.. ..	..(Bumby) 1
Mr. W. H. Johnstone's Black Ball	.. ..	.. (Nat) 2
Mr. T. Dawson n. The Spaniard..	.. ..	(Cartwright) 3

Spaniard made play, with Black Ball second, Lady Mary third, and the others well up, to the Morpeth Turn, where Black Ball took the lead, and carried it to the distance; Lady Mary joined him there, ran a fine race up it, and won by a head.

The Hunters' Stakes of 10 sovs each and 20 added; the second to save his stake. Two Miles. (12 Subs.)

Mr. Merry's Pilot, 5 yrs	.. ..	(Hon. S. Erskine.) 1
Mr. Selby's The Falcon, aged	.. ..	.. (Captain Bell) 2

The Maiden Plate of £50. Heats, once round and a distance.

Lord Glasgow's f, by the Provost, out of Miss Whip, 3 yrs, 7st 2lb; carried 7st 5lb	.. ..	.. (Nat) 1
Mr. Ridley's Barnton, 3 yrs, 7st 5lb	.. ..	(Cartwright) 2

Betting: First Heat—2 to 1 agst George Stephenson, 3 to 1 agst Lord Glasgow's filly, and 3 to 1 agst Barnton.

Won by a head. The second was a dead heat between the filly and Barnton; the others were won by a length.

WEDNESDAY.

The Free Handicap of 10 sovs. each, and 50 added; the second to save his stake. (13 Subs.) Three quarters of a mile.

Mr. Dawson's Sir Leon, 3 yrs, 5st 10lb	.. ..	..(Prince) 1
Mr. B. Eddison's Little John, 6 yrs. 7st	.. ..	.. 2

The Produce Stakes of 50 sovs. each, h. ft.; for colts, 8st. 7lb.; and fillies, 8st, 4lb. Two miles. (15 Subs.)

Mr. John Scott's The Whiffler	.. ..	(F. Butler) 1
Mr. Merry's Maid of Motherwell (allowed 3lb)	.. ..	.. 2
Mr. St. Paul's Ulysses ..	.. ..	.. 3

The Northumberland Plate of 200 sovs, added to a Handicap of 25 sovs each, 10 ft, and 5 only if declared; the second to receive £50 out of the stakes, and the third to save his stake. Two miles. (100 Subs, 49 of whom declared.)

Lord Eglinton's Eryx, 3 yrs, 6st 2lb, and 6th extra		(Prince) 1
Mr. S. L. Fox's Excessor, 3 yrs, 8st 5lb	.. ..	.. 2
Sir J. Gerard's Grimston, 4 yrs, 7st 12lb	.. ..	.. 3

Her Majesty's Plate of 100 Guineas; for three-year-olds, 7st 2lb; four, 8st 2lb; five, 10st; six and aged, 10st 5lb. Three Miles.

Lord Zetland's Helias, 3 yrs	.. ..	(Longstaff) 1
Mr. John Scott's Alderman's Daughter, 3 yrs	..	(Simpson) 2
Mr. Padley's Tanais, 3 yrs	.. ..	(Cartwright) 3

THURSDAY.

The Tyne Stakes of 10 sovs each, for two-yr-olds. Three-quarters of a mile. (21 Subs.)

Mr John Scott's Stinger	.. ..	(F. Butler) 1
Lord Eglinton's De Witt	.. ..	.. 2

The Members' Plate Handicap, of 15 sovs each, 10 ft, and 5 only if declared, with 50 added; the second to save his stake. Once round and a distance.

Lord Eglinton's Plaudit, 5 yrs	.. ..	.. (Prince) 1
Mr Stephenson's Sheraton, 4 yrs	.. ..	.. 2

The Gold Cup of £150, by subs. of 10 sovs each; the surplus in specie. Two miles. (22 Subs.)

Mr. B. Green's The Conjuror, 4 yrs	.. ..	(Wintringham) 0 1
Sir J. Gerard's Grimston, 4 yrs	.. ..	(Marson) 0 2
Lord Zetland's Helias, 3 yrs	.. ..	.. 3

After the dead heat, even betting between Grimston and The Conjuror. Won by a length, after a fine race.

The Gateshead or Lottery Stakes of 10 sovs each, p. p., and 50 added, for three-yr-olds. Two miles. (32 Subs.)

Lord Eglinton's Van Tromp	.. ..	(Marson) 1
Mr. John Scott's Tan Whiffler	.. ..	.. (Butler) 2

The Corinthian Stakes of 15 sovs each, 10 ft, and 5 only if declared, with 20 added. (13 Subs.)

Mr. Meiklam's Aristotle, aged	.. ..	(M'Donogh) 1
Mr. Selby's The Falcon, aged	.. ..	.. 2

The Corporation Plate of 80 guineas, added to a sweepstakes of 5 sovs each. Heats, two miles. (24 Subs.)

Sir J. Gerard's St. Leon, 3 yrs	.. ..	(Duncan) 1 1
Mr. Merry's Badinage, 5 yrs	.. ..	.. 2 dr

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.

The entries for the great prize of 100 guineas, given by this distinguished club, open to all Royal Yacht Clubs for vessels of any tonnage (a time race, half-a-dozen or ten miling, well known to every yachtsman), on Tuesday night at the Piazza Coffee House, Covent garden. Subjoined is the brilliant list of entries, which exceeds anything ever known previously on the Thames.

Yachts.	Tons.	Ports.	Owners
Arrow	84 ..	Cowes	T Chamberlain
Gazymode	70 ..	Southampton ..	J. H. W. S. Figot
Eclipse	60 ..	Weymouth ..	J. P. Wickham
Princess Olga ..	35 ..	Cowes	T. B Rutherfurd
Lily of Devon ..	31 ..	Plymouth	W. F. Morre
Belvedere	25 ..	Lesson	Lord A. Paget
Secret	25 ..	London	J. W Smith
Ino	25 ..	London	H Gibson
Fawn	25 ..	Poole	T. F Selby
Little Gaudlet ..	15 ..	Portsmouth ..	A. Portain
Zolilla	31 ..	Southampton ..	Mr. Ring
Bianca (schooner)	31 ..	Cowes	Lord C. Paget
Blue Bells	31 ..	London	Twisden Hodges
Fleur de Marie ..	25 ..	London	W Sawyer
Quiz	18 ..	Harwich	W. J. Mil l
Prima Donna	25 ..	London	Captain Ives
Chamois	8 ..	Southampton ..	S. Parot
Snake	20 ..	Poole	Messrs. Wambl.f
Antagonist	25 ..	.. ..	G. F. Narter

The race will come off on Wednesday, the 7th of July, the distance being from Erith round the Nore Light and back.

CHESS.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

"G. B. S." The position you have sent is quite incomprehensible. Black's Rook may be taken on the first move for nothing, while the move you give is not practicable. Write the situation out with care, and don't send it till you have submitted it to the ressaun of some skilful friend.

"Frank H.," York.—When, in a Problem, it is stipulated that White "wins" in so many moves, instead of "mates," you may generally infer that White is to obtain an indisputably winning position in that number of moves, without absolutely effecting checkmate

"Z. Y. X.," Nottingham.—Your suggested emendation in the solution of No. 177 appears to afford Black too many opportunities of escape. But we will submit it to the author.

"P.," Birmingham.—Enclose an address, where any one desirous of engaging in a Game by Correspondence may write to you; insert it in our Paper, and you will have plenty of candidates for the contest. As to your rank in Chess skill, that will easily be defined, if, on your next visit to the metropole, you will accept the odds of a Knight from one of the leading players, and play him a dozen games.

"B. M. P."—Quite right. Thanks for the correction.

"A. L.," Holkham.—Always acceptable.

"J. A. P."—They shall be examined in turn; but, we cannot give them priority of two or three hundred others which precedes them, and are now awaiting consideration

"Secretary."—It is indispensably necessary for your Club to have the Match Games mentioned, both for study and reference. The Great French Match you will find in Volume 5 of the "Chess-Player's Chronicle;" and the other contests, viz., the Games between Messrs. Staunton and Horwitz, Messrs. Staunton and Harrwitz, Messrs. Horwitz and Kieseritzky, Messrs. Horwitz and Harrwitz, together with the celebrated Blindfold Games, are all recorded in Volume 7 of the same work.

"Checkmate."—A player cannot, under such circumstances, retract the moves. He must Castle, as he purposed doing when he moved the two pieces.

"P. B." Your solution of No. 177 appears complete. It shall be forwarded to the author.

"Philo-Chess."—"S. T. G."—"Rico."—The "Hand-book" is now ready, and will be issued to the public on the 1st of the month. All orders should be given to the booksellers: we cannot undertake to procure any works not published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

Solutions by "Napier," "Styb," "Milo," "B. M. P.," "G. A. H.," "Gove," "A. D. A.," "Sopracitta," "F. G. D.," "M. P.," "Miles," "The Old Commodore," and "G. P.," are correct.

We have to acknowledge the welcome receipt of several beautiful positions from the Rev. H. Bolton, "Mr. McG.," Mr. Kling, Mr. Woodward, Mr. Medley, Mr. Horwitz, Mr. Lutman, Mr. Clare, and other valued contributors.

SOLUTION TO PROBLEM NO. 178.

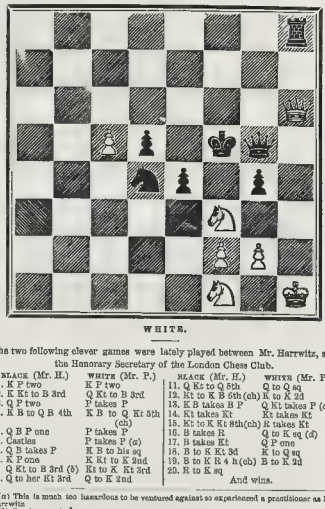
WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK
1. R to K 3d (ch)	R takes Q (best)	4. Kt to K R 7th
2. B to Q 4th (ch)	R takes B	Mate.
3. R to K 6th (ch)	Q takes R

PROBLEM, NO. 179.

By the Rev. H. BOLTON.

White playing first mates in five moves.

BLACK



WHITE.

The two following clever games were lately played between Mr. Harrwitz, and the Honorary Secretary of the London Chess Club.

BLACK (Mr. H.)	WHITE (Mr. P.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)	WHITE (Mr. P.)
1. K P two	K P two	11. Q Kt to Q 6th	Q to Q sq
2. K Kt to B 3rd	Q Kt to B 3rd	12. Kt to K B 6th (ch)	K to K 2d
3. Q P two	P takes P	13. K B takes B P	Q Kt takes P (c)
4. K B to Q B 4th	K B to Q Kt 5th (ch)	14. Kt takes Kt	B takes Kt
		15. Kt to K Kt 8th(ch)	R takes Kt
5. Q B P one	P takes P	16. B takes R	Q to K sq (d)
6. Castles	P takes P (a)	17. B takes Kt	Q P one
7. Q B takes P	K B to his sq	18. B to K Kt 3d	K to Q sq
8. K P one	K Kt to K 2nd	19. B to K R 4 (ch)	B to K 2d
9. Q Kt to B 3rd (b)	R to K Kt 3rd	20. R to K sq
10. Q to her Kt 3rd	Q to K 2nd	And wins.

(a) This is much too hazardous to be ventured against so experienced a practitioner as Mr Harwitz

(b) The best mode of continuing the attack. See the new "Handbook."

(c) If White had now played Q Kt to K 4th Black would have left his Q, threatening to mate with q Kt at Q's 5th

(d) The Q could not be saved.

BETWEEN THE SAME PLAYERS.

WHITE (Mr. P.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)	WHITE (Mr. P.)	BLACK (Mr. H.)
1. Q P two	Q P two	17. B takes B	Q takes B
2. Q B P two	K P one	18. K B to Q Kt sq	Q to Q B 4th
3. P takes P	P takes P	19. K R takes Kt	Q takes Kt (ch)
4. Q Kt to B 3d	K Kt to B 3d	20. Q to K R 5th	R takes R
5. Q B to K Kt 5th	Q B to K 3d	21. R takes R	Q to Q Kt 4th
6. K Kt to B 3d	Q B P two	22. Q R P one (c)	Q to K 7th
7. P takes P	B takes P	23. Kt takes K B P(ch)	R takes Kt
8. K P one	Castles	24. R to Q B 8th (ch)	B takes R
9. K B to Q 3d	Q Kt to B 3d	25. Q takes R	Q to K 8th (ch)
10. Castles	K R P one	26. K to R 2nd	Q takes B
11. B to K R 4th	B to K 2d	27. Q to K 8th (ch)	K to R 2nd
12. K R P one	K to his sq	28. Q takes B	Kt to K 7th
13. Q R to Q B sq	Q P one	29. Q to Q B 5th	Q to K 6th
14. P takes P	Kt takes P	30. Kt P one	Kt to K 4th
15. K to Kt 8th	Q R to Q B sq	31. K R P one	Q to Q B 7th (ch)
16. K B P two	P takes Kt	32. Q takes Q	Kt takes Q
		And wins.

(a) Q to her Kt 3rd is a tempting move, but in reality would be disadvantageous on account of B to K B 3rd.

(b) Better than either taking the Rook or giving the double check.

(c) This is very insidious: if Black attempt to win the Rook by checking with his Kt, and then taking the Rook, he loses his Queen.

CHESS ENIGMAS.

(HITHERTO UNPUBLISHED)

No. 173.—By Mr. KLING.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q 6th	K at his sq	Kt at Q 4th	B at Q 4th
R at Q 7th	Kt at Q sq	Kt at K 8 5th
		B at Q R 4th

White to play, and Mate in three moves.

No. 174. -By Mr. C. H. L.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at Q B 2nd	K at Q B 3rd	Kt at Q B 3rd	P at Q Kt 3rd
Q at K R 4th	Q at Q R 7th	P s at K R 6th, K Kt 4th, K 5th, Q 4th, Q B 3rd, and Q 2nd, and Q R 3rd
R at K R sq	R at K Kt 7th
R at Q sq	R at Q B sq
B at Q 2nd	B at Q 2nd

Black to play, and mate in four moves.

No. 175. —By J. M——R.

WHITE.	BLACK.	WHITE.	BLACK.
K at K R 2d	K at Q 3d	B at Q B 3d	P at Kt 3d
R at Q sq	Q at Q sq	Kt at Q 4th	P at Q B 2d
R at Q 2d	B at Q 2d	P at K R 2d
B at Q 3d	B at Q B 3d	P at Q B 4th

White to move and mate in four moves.

THE NIMROUD SCULPTURES.

(Continued from page 410.)

The Fifth Relievo is a continuation of the last; as, without other internal evidence, may be discovered, by the exactly corresponding parts of the chariot wheel in the two slabs. The King, in the van of the battle, is in his chariot, with his Charioteer and Shield-bearer, who are both uncovered. The chariot, horses, and accompaniments, are the same as heretofore detailed. The shield-bearer extends his bossed shield to protect the King, who is clothed in a richly-embroidered tunic, the truncated cap, rosette-clasped bracelets; and in his bow arm protected from the recoil of the string by a close-fitting shield, fastened above the elbow and wrist. The left arms of his officers are similarly guarded. Above the chariot is a human bodied Divinity, with wings, but without legs; he wears a cap, with two bull's-horns laid close round the head. A broad flat ring encircles this figure, passing immediately above the feathery termination of his person, and behind and above his shoulders This Divinity sends his winged arrows against the enemies of the King. Directly in front of the King a leader of the enemy is falling from his chariot—one of the horses of which is down, whilst the others are still plunging and endeavouring to extricate themselves; the charioteer, having lost control, is precipitated in front. Beyond, one of the King's soldiers is about to kill a flying foe, in spite of the efforts of a comrade to drag him off to the security of the city, the outworks of which extend to the banks of a shallow stream running through a woody country. One of the enemy lies dead, and others are flying before the conquering King, who pursues them to the very confines of the city. The city has embattled towers, and arched gateway, likewise embattled, and is protected by a ditch and double wall—from behind the second and inner of which the enemy are discharging their arrows. From the towers they are also shooting arrows and throwing stones, under cover of wicker shields. The last figure, as far as the fracture allows us to see, shows one endeavouring to obtain a parley: his slackened bow is in his left hand, and his right is upraised, bespeaking attention.

HAWK-HEADED DEITY.

Sixth Colossal Relievo—"Hawk-headed Deity," 7 feet high. His crest is hanging down behind, and one of the wings from his shoulder is elevated, and the other depressed. His under garment, richly embroidered and edged with tasseled fringe, reaches only to his knees; he has a long robe, similarly trimmed, hanging at the back, and apparently passing round in front, the end hanging over the left shoulder: two double cords, knotted at intervals, and with tassels at the ends, hang from the waist. His outer garment is a long furred and embroidered mantle, reaching down to the ankles; it is passed under the right arm, and thrown over the left shoulder; the handles of two daggers are shown upon the breast. The vest is fastened round the neck with a pomegranate and tassel. He has a plain armlet on his arm, rosette-clasped bracelets on his wrists, earrings; and a bead chaplet on his neck, the centre bead of which is a pomegranate. The riband which ties the fillet of the cap is shown behind. In his right hand he holds a pine cone, which he is in the act of presenting; and, in his left, a square basket with a handle. In the sandals, the heel only is protected, the straps passing over the instep: the remains of colouring matter are still upon them. The lower half of this Relievo is covered with a cuneiform inscription; but, whether coeval with the sculpture, or placed there subsequently, is a subject for investigation.

The next sculptures are not Basal Relievi, but consist of a Colossal Human Head, with bull's horns and ears; and the Cloven Foot of a Bull—probably belonging to a human-headed bull, such as M. Botta has discovered at Khorsabad. The head is covered with an Oriental turban, with a fillet at the back, and a cord round the forehead: the horns and ears appear in the turban. It is likely that this is a portrait of the King, as it bears a resemblance to the other sculptures, in all of which there is an evident attempt to maintain the verisimilitude of the principal personage. The King's head is placed upon the Bull, a noble and strong animal, possibly to indicate his strength, or his having vanquished the wild bull; as the Egyptians, in their Sphyngi, placed the heads of their Kings upon their favourite lion.

Seventh Relievo—"Colossal Human-headed Divinity," 7 feet high. The beard is formally curled; three bull's horns are laid close down upon and round the head; but, in all other respects, the dress is the same as in No. 6. This deity is also presenting a pine cone with the right hand, and is holding a basket with the left. The lower half of this slab is likewise inscribed with cuneiform letters.

Eighth Relievo represents "The King Returned from the Chase." The lion is at his feet apparently subdued, but not dead. He is followed by his out-door attendants, consisting of two warriors and two eunuchs, the former habited in the surcoat, reaching no lower than the knees; and the latter in long, fringed, and very richly embroidered robes: they are all uncovered, and carry in their hands the instrument so often mentioned. The King wears the truncated cap, the long, fringed robe, and shorter richly embroidered tunic, with cord and tassels depending. He has a sash round the waist, with a sword-belt buckled over it; and, what seems to be the tassels of the sword-belt, hanging from the shoulders, both before and behind: similar tassels are hanging from the back of the head, under the hair. He wears, also, rosette-clasped bracelets, plain armlets, and a double necklace. The King's cup-bearer, the sherbetees of our day, meets the King, and has presented to him the cup of sherbet or wine for his refreshment, which the King, still leaning on his bow, drinks, whilst the cup-bearer disperses the flies with the fly-flapper in his hand. Over his left shoulder is a long muslin handkerchief or napkin, embroidered and fringed at both ends, for the King to wipe his lips with after drinking. The cup-bearer is prepared to receive the cup, and holds the napkin forward in readiness to present to the King. This is very interesting, from its exact resemblance to the custom of the Persians of the present day: the handkerchief is called el-mahr-rha-ma. Behind the cup-bearer stand two other attendants, with their hands clasped one over the other, in the Eastern conventional attitude of respect approved in our time. Behind these, again, are the minstrels playing on instruments with nine strings, which are struck by means of a kind of plectrum, or rather hammer, the fingers evidently being used as stops. Their mouths, in opposition to the firmly-compressed lips of the other persons, are represented open, showing that they are singing their pœans—songs of rejoicing and gladness—at the King's return.

COLOSSAL HUMAN HEAD.

Ninth Relievo (the fourth in the order at the Museum) represents a Bull Hunt. The King is attended by his huntsman, who follows the chariot, riding sideways upon one horse, and leading another richly caparisoned, with embroidered and fringed saddle necloth and knotted tail, evidently for the King's use in the chase. The King in his chariot, having wounded a bull, seizes him by the horns, and inflicts a deadly wound with one of the daggers that he wears. It is especially remarkable that the King is inserting his dagger precisely between the second and third vertebræ, where the spinal cord is most assailable, and that he is doing this carelessly, with his head turned away, with the composure gained by long experience. Another bull, pierced with four arrows, lies upon the ground The horns of the bulls are peculiarly short and thick, but only one is represented on either. It does not, however, follow that unicorns are intended, as it may merely arise from the profile representation. In the usual place is the King's spear, like that carried by the huntsman; it has the addition of a fillet to rouse and frighten the wild beasts The other appointments of the chariot have been already described; and the three horses have again but six legs shown The King wears the truncated cap, gilobed ear-rings, bracelets, and armlets; in all other respects his dress is the same as before detailed. His charioteer, who drives, is uncovered: he wears rosette-clasped bracelets like the King's, and holds a whip in his right hand.

The Tenth Relievo represents a Lion Hunt. The King in his chariot, drawn by three horses, which the charioteer urges forward to escape a lion which has already placed his claw upon the backs of the chariot, infuriated at the four arrows which have already taken effect. The King at this juncture aims a deadly wound at the monster, whose tail is admirably indicative of rage and fury. Behind the lion are two of the King's bearded body-guard, fully armed, and holding their shields and daggers in readiness for defence in the event of the prey escaping the shaft of the King. A wounded lion prowls crouching upon the ground in front—the agony expressed in its action being well contrasted with the fury in the former. The tail of the lion has an exaggerated representation of the claw mentioned by Didymus Alexandrinus. The existence of this claw has, until very recently, been disputed; but the observations of some modern naturalists have confirmed the statement which is here traditionally supported by this curious evidence. The King's body-guard wear the conical cap, with a large tassel depending from under the hair at the back of the head; the charioteer is uncovered, and carries a whip in the right hand; and the King himself is dressed as heretofore described, and is armed with a sword, with a lion's head upon it near the handle. In its place behind the chariot is the King's javelin, decorated with the fillet.

COLOSSAL HUMAN-HEADED DIVINITY.

The Eleventh Relievo represents "The League, or Treaty of Peace." The King having arrived at the frontier of his dominions, has descended from his chariot to meet another King, as we infer from the short upper tunic, which no where else appears excepting upon the King, and which we, therefore, suppose to be a Royal robe. The two Kings are clothed precisely alike, in richly embroidered and farred robes of the same form; the head-dresses, however, differ; he who we have hitherto distinguished as the King wearing the truncated cap, whereas the other wears the simple fillet before named. Both Kings are on foot, but the conqueror still retains the implements of war, and holds in his right hand two arrows perpendicularly perhaps, a mystical sign of friendship—whilst his adversary raises his right hand in an action of supplication. That the conditions of the treaty are favourable to the conqueror may be inferred by the surrender of the prisoners, intimated by the prisoner in the conical cap kissing the feet of his King and deliverer. Immediately behind the great King are two eunuchs, each bearing bows and quivers of arrows and the whip-shaped instrument; one of these holds an umbrella over the King's head. Behind the eunuchs is the King's groom, armed with a sword, and having a quiver of arrows; he holds the King's chariot, the horses of which, in this representation, have the right number of legs. Beside the chariot stands a body-guard, wearing the conical cap, and holding a javelin; and in the chariot is the charioteer. The King's javelin, with two streamers, is in its appointed place at the back of the chariot. The relative rank and importance of the officers attached to the King are indicated by the height of each individual, each bearing his appropriate insignia.

The great importance of these sculptures in an historical point of view—more from the high state of civilization which they indicate, as regards knowledge of the ornamental and useful sciences, than from their beauty and utility as works of art—would alone be a sufficient excuse for thus minutely entering into their detail; but when we consider that this description may have to meet the eyes of many who may never have an opportunity of seeing the originals, we are satisfied that no other apology will be requisite for so far extending this paper.

LION HUNT.

SCENE FROM "I DUE FOSCARI," AT THE ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

FRENCH PLAYS.

On Wednesday evening M. Bouffé, after his inimitable performance of Michel Perrin, added to his répertoire the part of Le Mousse, in the drama of that name, similar to the London public as the Adelphi "Cabin Boy." The piece itself is not so good as those hitherto selected by M. Bouffé for his performances. It is neither so forcible nor so amusing as these have generally been; and the part of Le Mousse, which affords no opportunity for the development of character, but demands for its interest upon situation, is unworthy of his great talents. Nevertheless, it generally interested the audience, and the personation was complete. The transformation from the grey-headed, simple-hearted, Curé of the first piece, to the awkward, scrubby, frank, jovial sea-boy, was perfect. There was the freshness of youth in every tone of his voice, and its elasticity in every action.

M. BOUFFE AS "LE PERE TURLUTUTU."

It was not the prettily got-up cabin-boy as Madame Celeste interpreted the character, but the genuine unlicked cub of the quarter-deck, with a good heart, quick feelings, but not very bright understanding. The look of incomprehension at the legal proceedings which declared Jenny a slave was exquisite; whilst, at times, the simple earnestness of feeling almost raised the part to the dignity of tragedy. The character itself was never forgotten, and the Mousse, who had done great acts, had protected injured innocence, and achieved heroism, was, as completely in the last scene as he was in the first, Le Mousse. The piece was altogether well acted, and nicely put upon the stage, but, with the exception of Mdlle. Duvernger, whom it were treason to forget, there were none of the dramatis personæ that call for particular notice.

Our Cut this week represents M. Bouffé in one of his best characters—Le Père Turluturu—noticed in our Journal of last week.

ROYAL ITALIAN OPERA.

VERDI'S "I Due Foscari" was produced, for the first time, on Saturday, and repeated on Tuesday. These two performances may be ranked as the most triumphant of the season. The zeal of the artistes, and the care with which the opera was mounted, were unprecedented in this or any other country. The attention to the stage business, accuracy of scenery, and costume, are deserving of all praise. Lord Byron's tragedy was the basis of the libretto, but we do not think the Italian author has been successful in his version. The fault of the drama is that there is no relief to the misery—from the entrance of the doomed Jacopo the situations are constantly the same through the three acts. Loredano's fiend-like malice is shown in the first act, so is the despair of the suffering wife Lucrezia, and equally so the struggle between the paternal feeling and political duty of the Doge. The artists are perpetually reiterating the same sentiments. Hence the lack of variety and want of repose. Nothing but the most consummate skill could fix the attention of the audience, with such a monotonous libretto. Grisi and Mario, as Lucrezia and Jacopo have created a great sensation in Paris; but the parts were new to the English auditory. It is impossible to convey an adequate notion of the transcendant talent displayed by Grisi. The enormous power of voice she developed—her marvellous execution of the most difficult scales—her sustaining vigour in the high notes—the mingled grace, tenderness, and untiring energy of her acting, proved that the resources of this great artiste are inexhaustible, and that she has all the intellect and physical attributes to add to the glory of her established répertoire. It is to be hoped, that new operas will be composed expressly for her in the next season. Mario's divine singing of the cavatina, "Dal più remoto esiglio," and of its cabaletta, "S'io sento," expressly composed for him by Verdi, and his superb acting of the prison scene, afforded marked evidence of his continued onward progress. Ronconi's Doge ranks with his Cheverese in "Maria di Rohan," and that is the highest praise. Who would imagine that Ronconi, who has shown himself to be the Figaro, par excellence, should be, also, one of the greatest of tragedians. Charles Young, the veteran actor, who was amongst the most fervent of the applauders, declared that Ronconi's Doge was one of the finest pieces of acting he had ever witnessed. It is, certainly, a grand conception, from first to last. Ronconi depicted the anguish of the father at being rendered the instrument of his own son's condemnation, by the cruel Council of Ten, with exquisite sensibility, and yet preserving the Brutus-like resolve of the Doge, to perform his political duty. The scene in the prison in which the Doge appeals to Heaven to protect his son was positively sublime. The resignation of his power in the last scene, his despair at learning his son's death, the breaking of a great soul at hearing the bell sounding for his successor, and his final agony as life recedes from him, defy description. The audience was painfully excited throughout this magnificent representation of the aged Doge's last moments. When Ronconi gets excited, the beauty of his baritone tones is indescribable, and causes the hearer to forget that in level passages his intonation is flat, and the natural ruggedness of his organ. He has been justly compared with the elder Kean in this respect, whom he resembles in figure and height. Kean had a bad voice, but when moved it was music itself. Ronconi's eye is very remarkable, and he has the faculty of expressing varied emotions with astonishing facility.

We can give no account of encores, ovations, &c., for these were incessant, but the most striking effects were in the opening cavatina of Mario, the air of Grisi, and her duo with Ronconi in the first act. The duo between Mario and Grisi, the subsequent trio with Ronconi, and the quatuor, quite startled the house in the second act. In the last act, the duo between Grisi and Mario, and the scena finale by Grisi and Ronconi were the absorbing points of interest. Of the music itself we entertain no high opinion. It is, to our minds, quite unequal to the "Ernani" and "Nabucco." It is deficient in original melody; it abounds in tricky unisonous effects for chorus and band; it is in many parts noisy and vulgar, but, with all these defects, there is a dramatic colouring in the ensemble which tells upon the audience.

Verdi's works, therefore, with first rate executants, vocally and instrumentally and with such a Conductor as Costa, who can develop the nuances with such delicacy and precision, will strike the ear of the amateur, more than they will satisfy the judgment of the professor. Verdi has been prodigiously puffed and immensely depreciated; but he is, unquestionably, a man of infinite talent, who may achieve much greater things if he will modify his style—not tax his singers so unmercifully in the declamatory school, and resort to more legitimate means for his effects. He is now in London, composing an opera for her Majesty's Theatre, and revising his "Macbeth" for the Royal Italian Opera. We should mention that Tagliafico was the Loredano on Saturday; but, owing to his indisposition, Polonini sustained it on Tuesday, and both artists sang and acted with discrimination.

Grieve and Telbin's Venetian scenery, and Mrs. Bailey's costumes, require especial notice.

Our artists have selected, in the above Engraving, one of the most exciting situations in the opera. It is just after Loredano (Tagliafico) announces to Jacopo, that the vessel is ready, by orders of the Council of Ten, to convey him to his place of exile, to Crete. Loredano exults in his revenge on the race of the Foscari, whilst Jacopo and his wife Lucrezia, vent their rage in denunciations of their oppressor, the aged Doge (Ronconi) in vain calling upon his children to obey the fatal doom, and respect the decrees of justice.

Let us also record that the Proprietary have acknowledged the extraordinary exertions of Costa, the musical director, by presenting him with a piece of plate, with a suitable inscription, for the production of twelve operas, besides the "Stabat Mater," in the short period of ten weeks. The labours of the manager (Mr. Beale) and his forces have been, indeed, altogether unprecedented. To construct a new theatre in four months, and to mount twelve operas and five ballets in less than three months, exhibit a degree of activity reflecting the highest credit on every branch of the professions.

On Thursday night, for the benefit of Mdlle. Fanny Elssler and the last night

THE NEWCASTLE RACE PLATE—1847.

THIS cleverly-designed prize was run for, at Newcastle-upon-Tyne, on Thursday. The group (which is eighteen inches high, and seventeen inches long) represents a North American Indian on a wild horse which he has just caught, and is governing with a noose round the lower jaw; the captured horse is pawing the long grass of the prairies, and endeavouring by every means to divest itself of its rider, but who is skilfully keeping his seat; and the practice is to allow the horse to run till he is exhausted, and thus becomes subdued.

The group is placed on an oval fluted pedestal, on each side of which is a chased scroll shield, in one of which is engraved

NEWCASTLE RACES. 1847. &c.

This Piece of Plate has been substituted for the Gold Cup, by order of the Stewards (his Grace the Duke of Richmond, and John Hodgson Hinde, Esq., M.P.) It has been executed by Messrs. Reid and Sons, of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and reflects credit upon the manufacturers.

The figure of the horse is extremely spirited, and the position of the rider easy; both are in dead-white silver, and the fluted pedestal is of polished silver. The cost is £150.

THE NEWCASTLE RACE PRIZE PLATE.

GIBSON'S STATUE OF THE QUEEN.—The marble statue of her Majesty, executed by Mr. John Gibson, R.A., at Rome, has arrived, and has been removed to Buckingham Palace.

THE COMMAND IN THE PACIFIC.—It is rumoured that since the affairs of Portugal are so likely to be amicably adjusted by British interference, Rear-Admiral Sir Charles Napier, K.C.B., will succeed Rear-Admiral Sir George Seymour in the Chief Command in the Pacific, and will shift his flag into an 84 gun ship shortly for that purpose. Sir Charles Napier returned to Portsmouth on Monday, and rejoined his flag-ship, the St. Vincent, 120, Captain Milne, at Spithead.

but one of her engagement, Mozart's "Don Giovanni" was performed. The house was filled at the first rush, as regards pit, gallery, and the two amphitheatres, and before the opera began every box was occupied. Nothing could be more brilliant than the appearance of the new theatre thus filled with a dense mass of spectators. Madame Persiani, on her coming forward, was cordially greeted, as a compliment to her abilities as a vocalist, and her most estimable character in private life. She was encored rapturously in "Batti," and in "La ci darem" with Tamburini, and was called for after the air "Vedrai carino." Grisi was in splendid voice, and was much cheered; the trio "Protegga" between her, Corbari, and Mario, was encored, as also the "Il mio tesoro" of the latter. Tamburini acted and sang in a style worthy of his best days. His was called for at the end of his wonderful piece of acting, in the last scene. An apology was made for Rovere on account of a cold, but he scarcely required it; he never played it in a more amusing manner, and is gaining ground rapidly, as the public begin to appreciate his peculiar talent. The Duet of Tagliafico was most impressively sung. The finale of the first act went gloriously with its triple orchestra and double chorus, and the leading artists received an ovation. Fanny Elsler was cordially applauded in the Minuet with Bedetti, and in the new ballet "Manon Lescaut," achieved wonders in choregraphic feats.

"Lucrezia Borgia" will be repeated this evening. On Tuesday Mdlle. Steffanone will make her first appearance in "Lucia," Alboni appearing as Charles V., Marini as Ruy Gomez, and Salvi as the hero. On the extra night, on Thursday, the entire operatic and ballet strength will be called into action.

Mdlle. Molina de Mendi.—This charming vocalist, the cousin of Malibran, and Pauline Viardot Garcia, gave a Matinée Musicale on Thursday. She sang Mariana's "Stanca di più sentire" and Spanish songs with great finish. She was aided by Mdme. Caradori Allan, Misses Binckes, Steele, Eliza Birch, Mdme. Romilli, Signori Mocatti, Brizzi, Cabatta, Monticelli. The instrumentists were Piatti, Violoncello; Godefroid, Harp; Benoit, Violin; with Benedict and Jules de Glenes as accompanyists.

COUNTRY NEWS.

THE ELECTIONS.

Reading.—Mr. Apsley Pellatt, of Staines, and the principal proprietor of the extensive establishment at Blackfriars, known as the Falcon Glass Works, will start as a candidate for the representation of the borough on the Whig interest.

Sunderland.—In the borough of Sunderland there will, in all probability, be a contest; but it is not likely that either Mr. Hudson or Mr. Barclay will be unseated.

City of Durham.—In the city of Durham there will be a very spirited contest. In addition to Mr. General Captain Thomas and Mr. Spearman (of Newton Hall) is now in the field. The differences in the Conservative ranks, arising out of the election of Mr. Bright at the last vacancy, not having been reconciled, the independent Conservatives have formed a committee to withhold their support from any candidate presenting himself under the influence of the Marquis of Londonderry.

Wycombe.—Ralph Neville, Esq., one of the representatives of this borough, and eldest son of the Very Rev. the Dean, intends to decline the honour of soliciting the suffrages of the electors at the ensuing election. His motive for thus withdrawing himself, he says, is his unwavering sense of some of his former friends.

Representation of Cambridge.—On Monday a deputation of the electors of Cambridge waited upon Major-General Sir Harry Smith, at Usher's Hotel, Suffolk-street, Haymarket, for the purpose of requesting the gallant General to stand for the representation of that place in the ensuing Parliament. The deputation having stated the object they had in view, Sir Harry replied that nothing could be more flattering to him than so high a compliment from his friends in Cambridge, but that for the present, as well as he feared for some time to come, he must depend upon his sword for procuring him the means necessary for enabling him to avail himself of so distinguished and disinterested an honour; and, that, within a short period, should Providence so ordain that his health be restored, he should find it necessary to proceed abr ad again in his military capacity. Sir Harry added, that he had felt himself compelled to decline a similar offer from the electors of Westminster, adding that, should fortune prove favourable, and that at any future period his fellow townsmen should think his services desirable, he should be ready to serve their requirements.

North Staffordshire.—It is said that the Hon Frederick Gough intends offer himself a candidate at the ensuing election for the northern division of Staffordshire, in the room of Mr. Jesse Watts Russell.

Knaresborough.—Mr Lawson has addressed the electors of this borough, to contradict the report which had been circulated, that he had abandoned the intention of contesting the seat at the forthcoming election. He adds, that the supportion which he has received makes him rely with confidence on the result of a poll.

Liverpool.—Two Conservative candidates will be proposed by the Conservatives of Liverpool for the representation of the borough in the commons parliament. A difference of opinion exists with regard to Lord John Manners. Mr. Cardwell, who does not mean to stand for Oxford University, offers himself for Liverpool. Sir Thomas Birch's prospects are still held to be good.

Representation of Maidstone.—Mr. Salomons, who withdrew his claims from Marylebone, upon the ground of his ineligibility as returning officer, afterwards offered himself for Maidstone; but Mr. S. is disappointed, too, Mr. S. is disappointed, too, Mr. S. is disappointed, too,

WALHALLA, Late Miss Linwood's Gallery, Leicester-square.—MADAME WARTON'S Unequalled Tableaux Vivans.—Entire Changes of Programme. Madame Warton begs to acquaint the Subscribers, Nobility, and Public, that a splendid Series of Tableaux will be presented during the present week, introducing several new Female Artistes from the Continent. A Grand Morning Performance every Morning at Three; Evening Performance at Half past Eight. Stalls, 3s.; Reserved Seats, 2s.; Promenade, 1s. Each Tableau accompanied with descriptive music, by a Band of first-rate talent. The Decorations and Appointments by Messrs. Adams, of Holborn, and Gordon, Vauxhall.

GEOLOGY, MINERALOGY, and CONCHOLOGY.—Mr. TENNANT, 149, Strand, near Somerset-house, arranges Elementary Collections of MINERALS, FOSSILS, and recent SHELLS, which will greatly facilitate the study of those interesting branches of Science, at 2, 3, 5, 10, 20, to 50 guineas each. He also gives PRIVATE INSTRUCTION in MINERALOGY

NUMBER ONE, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD.—It is strength, richness of flavour, and excellence of quality, combined with unparalleled smallness of price, which recommends the sale of Mr. Lazenby and Son's Old Established Tea at 4s. 6d. per pound. Sold by DAKIN and CO, Tea Merchants, Number One, St. Paul's Churchyard. Orders from the Country enclosed Carriage Free

DANCING TAUGHT, in the most fashionable style, by Mr. WILLIS, 41, Brewer-street, Golden-square. Private Lessons in the Polka, Cellarius Valse, and Valse à Deux Temps, at all hours, for Ladies and Gentlemen of any age, wishing privacy and expedition. Terms may be had, on application as above.

EXTRAORDINARY IMPROVEMENTS in PIANOS, at MOTT'S, 76, Strand, most desirable in every respect; prices moderate, unwithstanding their great superiority over all others, their admirable quality and variety of tone, their novel and beautiful effects of various accompanying instruments, and their standing firmly in tune in any climate.

PIANOFORTES.—The cheapest house in London to purchase these first-rate instruments is at H. TOLKIEN'S, manufacturer, 38, King William-street, London Bridge. H. T., having completed his extensive alterations, begs his friends to view his splendid Stock, which is now to be equalled by any maker, and will be sold at a small profit on the price charged by them. H. T.'s much admired Piccolo, cash price £15. Old instruments taken in exchange. 38, King William-street, London Bridge.

PIANOFORTES for SALE or HIRE, WARRANTED.—G. PEACHEY (by appointment Maker to the Queen), 73, Habnegate-street Within, opposite the Clerkenwell Sessions Society, respectfully calls the attention of the public to his elegant assortment of improved Cabinet, Cottage, Piccolo, and Grand PIANOFORTES, in Rose and Mahogany cases in 7, 6, 5, at the lowest possible prices for instruments that can really be warranted. One hundred Pianofortes for Country Inns, with a variety of Second-hand Instruments.

BERLIN NEEDLEWORK. Some respectable YOUNG WOMEN WANTED to work at Berlin Needlework, where constant employment and fair remuneration are given. Also some APPRENTICES to learn the above. Apply by letter only, post paid, to C. M., at Mr. Death's, Stationer, opposite the Post-office, St. Martin's-le-Grand.

LESSONS in MILLINERY and DRESS-MAKING.—MRS. HOWELL, of 304, Regent-street, two doors from Margaret-street, folk Inventress of Teaching the Art of Dress-making in a Series of Lessons, undertakes to convey to persons of the meanest capacity a thorough knowledge of Cutting, Fitting, and Executing in the most Elegant, Fashionable, and Tasteful Style, in Six Lessons, for One Guinea. The correctness of this mode can be fully substantiated by reference to Ladies of the highest respectability. Schools attended. Private Lessons, 2 Guineas.

FRENCH CLEANING.—SAMUEL OSMOND and Co., Dyers, 9, Ivy-lane, Newgate-street, inform the Ladies that they clean Silk, Satin, Cashmere, and Merinoline Dresses, Shawls, Scarfs, Handkerchiefs, Bonnets, Parasols, Kid Gloves, and Satin Shoes, every week. They likewise continue to Dye Black by the new process. Bed furniture Window Curtains Cleaned, Dyed, and Polished

LADIES' READY-MADE LINEN AND INFANTS' UNDER-CLOTHING Mrs. NORTON'S Show-Room, 72, Strand, is now replete with an unrivalled Assortment of Infants' Hoods and Cloaks, finished off in superior style, which are now offered to the public at the very lowest prices for Ready Money. Baby Linen of every description. Baskets, Bassinettes, &c. Outfits and Wedding orders executed with punctuality and despatch. 72, Strand, Adelphi.

THE JENNY LIND, or L'INFANTA CROCHET COLLARS, Washed ready for use; infinitely superior to Lace: the most beautiful designs ever invented. Forwarded free for 8s. 6d. each, which can be sent either in Stamps or Post-office orders, payable at the Borough Branch Office, to E. DERRICK ROGERS, Berlin House, 101 Borough. (The Trade supplied.)

SEA ISLAND HOSIERY.—Another extensive arrival has recently come to the assortment of these Famous Stockings. The steady sale of them, and their beautiful fresh colour, and ensuring quality, are unequalled. Manufactured by GEORGE SMITH only, from the same cotton which established the high reputation of his "Sea Island Long Cloths and Calicoes." The Store consists of Nos. 1 to 10, and the Garment is sold, with plain or lace ankles. Particular sizes made to order. Every Stocking bears his name and address, woven in the leg, and will be found fast in wear and colour. 3, Ludgate-hill, (late Rundell and Bridge's). Shawls, Silks, Mantles, Dresses, Table Linen, Swiss Curtains, &c. Parcels marked in Plain Figures

RETIRING FROM BUSINESS.—J. RAWLINS respectfully announces that, in consequence of his retiring business he is OFFERING for SALE, at Great Reduction, His valuable Stock of FURNITURE and GENERAL DRAPERY GOODS; comprising Damask Table Linen, Sheetings, Irish Cambrics, Lawns, Diapers, Huckabacks, Glass Cloths, Cambrics, Cambric Handkerchiefs, Long Cloths, Calicoes, Flannels, Blankets, Counterpanes, Quilts, Gentlemen's Shirts, Collars, Ties, and Fancy Dress s, silks, &c.—33, Oxford-street, corner of Holles-street. Established A.D 1800

HALF-MOURNING DRESSES of FOREIGN MANUFACTURE.—THE SUMMER WEAR, Suitable for the present season, and the Autumn and Fashionable fabrics are now submitted to the notice of the Nobility, Gentry, and Public, at MARSH and GIBBONS', begs to acquaint the Nobility and Gentry that they have NO LIEN ON HIRE for PRIVATE or PUBLIC FETES, a Splendid MODEL, a fascimile of their celebrated ILLUMINATED CHINESE TEMPLE, which was the theme of universal admiration for the last two seasons at the Royal Gardens, and acknowledged to be the most effective exhibition for the purpose of dancing thoroughly into the Gardens, and cleaning them fitted up with Temples, Grottoes, Caverns, and Scenic Scenery.—Address, Walhalla, Leicester-square. Transparent Blinds for Shops and Private Houses.

METCALFE and CO.'S NEW PATTERN TOOTH-BRUSH, and SMYRNA SPONGES. Useful Inquiry.—For proof of the extreme durability, power of cleaning, and firmness, each of which have used Metcalfe's Brushes. The Tooth-brush performs a light, lively, long-last effect of cleaning thoroughly into the crevices, and cleansing in the most extraordinary manner; hairs never come loose in. Peculiarly penetrating Hair-brushes, with the much-needed Nausea Brush, which will not soften :no common hair Improved Clothes-brush, that cleans harmlessly, in one-third the time The new Velvet-brush, and Nursery Brushes, of genuine embodiment. Smyrna Sponge, at METCALFE and CO'S only Establishment, 130B, Oxford-street, one door from Holles street

INVALUABLE IN EVERY LAUNDRY.—The Nobility and Gentry are respectfully informed that JOHNSON'S PATENT DRYING MACHINE (which entirely supersedes the laborious and destructive process of wringing) may be seen in operation at the Manufactory, 37, Charles-street, Berners-street, London.

LADIES' AND GENTLEMEN'S VENTILATING PERUQUES, and every unexpected luxury connected with the toilet, to impart invigorating and healthy action, made expressly to order, whereby a perfect fit is insured.—AS COLLEY'S British Cream Warehouse, 26, Bishopsgate Within. Fancy goods received from Paris every month

THE TOILET of BEAUTY furnishes innumerable proofs of the high estimation in which GOWLAND'S LOTION is held by the most distinguished possessors of personal attractions. This elegant preparation comprehends the most valuable of the compilation, both from the effects of cutaneous malady and the operation of variable temperature. MACASSAR OIL, for promoting the brilliant growth of the hair, and preventing it is assured. "HUNT SHAW," London" is in white letters, on the Government Stamp. Price 3s. 9d and 6s. each; or 5s. 6d.

ASHLEY'S ANTI-DEPILATORY EXTRACT, the cheapest and most speedily efficacious article offered to the public, warranted to stop the hair from falling off, also, to thicken the same, and to free the head immediately from Scurf Sold by Ashley, Hair Artist, Barclay, Perkins's-buildings, 64, Upper Thames-street, E.C. 3s. 6d; and may be had from all respectable Perfumers and Chemists throughout the kingdom.—Wholesale, by Ashley, Barclay, Perkins's-buildings, 64, Upper Thames-street, E.C. 3s. 6d.

ALEXANDER'S Ranger, 180, Oxford-street: Pronx, Strand, near Temple-bar, Keating, 79, St. Paul's Churchyard: and at Mortimer's, Upper-street, Islington. Sold by the most fashionable Perfumers in London, 3s. 6d; and may be had from all respectable Perfumers and Chemists throughout the kingdom.—Wholesale, by Ashley, Barclay, Perkins's-buildings, 64, Upper Thames-street, E.C. 3s. 6d.

LADIES TRAVELLING, or during the Promenade, the KALYDOR is without a rival, as for the Scorching days of the Sun, will find ROWLANDS KALYDOR a most refreshing preparation for the Complexion, dispelling the shade of languor and relaxation, and imparting a delightful freshness and immediately affording the pleasing sensation attending restored elasticity of the Skin. Composed of choice stores of the vegetable kingdom, entirely free from all mineral admixture, it is strongly recommended to ladies Freckles, Tan, Sunburn, Pimples, Spots, and Discoloration. and imparts a delicate smoothness of the Skin, with the glow of beauty and of bloom. Its cooling and refreshing properties have obtained its exclusive selection by her Majesty the Queen, the Court, and the Royal Family of Great Britain, the Royal Courts of Europe.  Beware of spurious "KALYDORS" for sale, containing material astringents utterly ruinous to the Complexion, and by their repellent action, Sometimes driving in the Humours to the Vitals. Ask for "ROWLAND'S KALYDOR" on the wrapper. Sold by them, at 20, Hatton-garden, London, and by all Chemists and Perfumers

TALLY TRADE.—WANTED a steady and industrious YOUNG MAN, who is thoroughly experienced in posting accounts and the general details of the trade—the situation being responsible; and, as a liberal salary will be given, a connexion among respectable tradesmen desirable. Such will bear strict investigation, or it is indispensable. Apply by letter, prepaid, to M. C. EDWARDS, Williams's Coffee Rooms, 37, Moorgate-street.

SHOWER BATHS, with curtains, 8s.; ditto, with copper conducting tubes, brass pump, valves, and curtains, from 60s.; sponging baths, from 18s.; hip baths, 17s.; 18s.; and 21s.; also every description of bath and toilet wares at prices 30 per cent. lower than other houses. Sent carriage free to any railway station, and warranted from for durability. Their Book of Drawings of Baths, and every article of Furnishing Ironmongery, sent by 1st Post anywhere in the kingdom. K and J. SLATER, 3, 4, and 5, Princes-street, Bank, London.

CHUBB'S LOCKS, Fire-proof Safes, and Cash Boxes.—Complete protection from fire and thieves is given by CHUBB'S Patent Detector Locks, fitted to their fire-proof safes, and also give immediate notice of any attempt to open them. They are made of every size, and for all purposes to which locks are applied, and are strong, secure, simple, and durable. Chubb's Patent Fire-proof Safes, Bookcases, Chests, &c., Strong Japan Cash Boxes, and Deed Boxes of all sizes on sale, and made to order, fitted with the Detector Locks.—C. CHUBB and SON, 57, St. Paul's Churchyard

BED FEATHERS, PURIFIED by STEAM with PATENT MACHINERY, whereby they are rendered perfectly sweet and free from dust.

Mixed	... 1s. 0d. per lb.	Best Foreign Grey Goose	... 2s. 6d.
Grey Goose	... 1s. 4d.	Best Irish White ditto	... 2s. 8d.
Foreign ditto	... 1s. 6d.	Best Dantzic ditto	... 3s. 0d.

HEAL and SON'S List of Bedding, containing particulars of weights, sizes, and prices, sent free by post on application to their Factory, 196 (opposite the Chapel), Tottenham-court-road

PUBLICATIONS, &c.

Just Published, price 8d. each, plain; 1s., coloured,
REID'S "RAILWAY RIDE" from LONDON to EDINBURGH; showing the Cities, Towns, Villages, and Roads, with the Distance of each Station from London Sent free to any part, on the receipt of 8 or 14 postage stamps.
Published by ANDREW REID, 117, Pilgrim-street, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

COINS of the ANCIENT ROMAN EMPERORS: History of the Succession of the Ancient Roman Emperors, with the Prices of their Coins, bearing Portraits, their Dates and Mints, is just published by W. WHELAN, Dealer in Coins, 77, Strand, London, price 1s., by post, 1s 2d. Coins sent by post. Bought. Catalogued, &c

THE EXHIBITION CATALOGUE OF THE ROYAL ACADEMY, Trafalgar-square, as reviewed in the public press, by the Editors of the Daily and Weekly Newspapers; containing their entire Criticisms (verbatim) on upwards of 1,000 Pictures, Paintings, Drawings, and Sculpture, each appropriately inserted in the order of the numbers appended to each Picture, the whole forming a complete explanatory guide to the Exhibition Price 1s., 4to size.—London: H. BULGIN, 221, Regent-street; and all Booksellers in England.

Now Ready, at all the Libraries, in 3 vols.,
MRS. TROLLOPE'S NEW NOVEL, THE THREE COUSINS.
"In this Novel Mrs. Trollope maintains undiminished her high reputation for vigorous character-drawing. The Three Cousins represent the three states of womanhood: the first is a wife, the second a widow, the third a maid. Mrs. Trollope, the intriguing widow, is capital; and the Bishop of Solway and his wife are hit off with a knowledge of human nature which places them among the most successful efforts of Mrs. Trollope's genius."—Atlas
HENRY COLBURN, Pub lisher, 13, Great Marlborough-street.

JENNY LIND.—THE PIANISTA, No. 82, for JULY, contains Meyerbeer's Grand Opera of "Robert le Diable," as Piano Solo, with Overture complete, for 2s. No. 81 contains the Songs in the same Opera, with the Italian, German, and English words. "The Pianista" also contains the Operas of "Somnambula," "Norma," "Don Giovanni," "Lucrezia Borgia," "Il Elisir d'Amore," "Puritani," "Lucia," "Fra Diavolo," "Crown Diamonds," &c., all at 2s. each, with Overtures complete. Either No., p. p. 30 stamps "Pianista" Office, Post Boy, 67, Paternoster-row.

THE PROTESTANT ELECTOR.—On MONDAY, June 28th, will be published, to be continued three days a week for fourteen weeks, THE PROTESTANT ELECTOR, price Threepence, stamped, eight pages, quarto. As the amount for the fourteen weeks will be but 10s. 6d., it is hoped that every Protestant will purchase through and Division of County, will at once forward their subscriptions by Post-Office Orders, to the Publisher, and letters to be addressed to the Publisher of the Protestant Elector. 3 Shoe-lane Fleet-street

ILLUSTRATED EDITION—COMPLETE—Price 5s. 6d.
THE NEW TESTAMENT;
WITH SIXTY ILLUSTRATIONS BY EMINENT ARTISTS
A Large Copper-plate Engraving of the Holy Land and Moving Historical Descriptive.
"The ILLUSTRATED NEW TESTAMENT contains some fine bold and imaginative sketches Much care has been shown in the choice of subjects; and even those which have been, as it were, hackneyed, are treated in a style of originality."—Spectator, June 5, 1847.
"A publication characterised by the spirit of the well-known proprietors of the 'Illustrated London News,' and, indeed, we doubt not, produced under the same auspices. The illustrations are characterised by a daring originality, and finished with a boldness and beauty that makes them worthy of the artists."—Britannia.
London: Published at the Office of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 198, Strand Sold by all Booksellers

HOW TO LIVE, Price 1s.; by post, 1s. 6d.
WHAT TO EAT, DRINK, and AVOID; addressed to the Dyspeptic. By ROBT JAS. CULVERWELL, M.D., M.R.C.S., L.S.A., &c.—SIMPKIN and MARSHALL; the Author, 10, Argyll-place, Regent-street; and all booksellers.

CHAT.—Facts, Fun, Fiction, and On-Dit, for Rail, Boat, Bus, and Cab. Out every Wednesday, all twelve o'Clock. Full of Original and Sparkling Wit. No. VI. just issued, to be had of all respectable Booksellers. Price, One-Halfpenny—worth One Shilling.—Send for it—COLLINS, Strand, London.—Advertisements, 6d. per Line.

SCHOOL PRIZES AND BOOKS FOR PRESENTS.
FIELD'S CHEAP BOOK ESTABLISHMENT, 65, QUADRANT, corner of Air-street.—The largest Collection of Books in London adapted for Presents, School Prizes, or the Drawing-room Table; comprising Histories, Voyages, Travels, Biography, Tales, Poetry, Fiction, &c., at less than one-half the published prices Bibles, Prayer Books, Church Services, in every variety of bindings. Also a very large Stock of Account and Scrap Books, Cards, and Stationery. Catalogues may be had Gratis

MENIER'S FRENCH CHOCOLATE, prepared at the celebrated Manufactory, at Noisiel, near Paris. Established in 1816.—The general superiority of the CHOCOLAT MENIER has caused it to be acknowledged in France as one of the most valuable daily alimentals. Its nutrimpnt is in that easily digestible form which renders it a general request am ong all classes of society for breakfast, and is much used by the best friends at evening parties, and at five o'clock tea. Its delicious flavour and aroma render it a most delicate beverage. It is likewise highly recommended by the most distinguished members of the Faculty to delicate persons and children for i a nutritive and digestive properties. CHOCOLAT MENIER, being only prepared and sweetened, is a necessary article to travellers and men of business, as it is unchanged by any climate. Numerous testimonials obtained from the French Government four silver and gold medals Depots in London.—Messrs. DAKIN and CO., 79, Cornhill, Messrs. HARVEY and HART, 6, Church-yard, HINGES and HUTLER, 185, Regent-street. It may also be procured in London, and in the United Kingdom, at the most respectable Tea Dealers, Confectioners, &c.

GENERAL FURNITURE and CARPET WARE-ROOMS 246, TOTTENHAM COURT-ROAD, LALLERIES, 14, LEICESTER-SQUARE. Two Doors from the corner. Messrs HAMPTON and RUSSELL beg to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and Public, that they have just purchased in a LIQUIDATION a very large QUANTITY of SILK DAMASKS, at 2s. 6d. a yard, worth 4s.; and several lower classes, 3s., 3s 9d., and 2s. 6d., good qualities in every description of Furniture Carpeting and Printed Drugget, decidedly worth one-third more than the present demand.—HAMPTON and RUSSELL respectfully invite all parties furnishing, that require cash advantages to favour them with a call, as they are determined to SELL the above Stock for quality, and Prices, with any other Establishment; also, the above Carpet Departments. All purchasers will find great Establishment will confirm the above Statement. Messrs. HAMPTON and RUSSELL'S Chesterfield, HINGES and BUTLER'S, 185, Regent-street. It may also be procured in London, and in the United Kingdom, at the most respectable Tea Dealers, Confectioners, &c.

NIGHT LIGHTS.—The breakage and uncertain burning of rushlights render them useless. The dirt, smoke, and smell from oil is very disagreeable The inconvenience is not being able to move about with candles when lighted, and the liability of the paper taking fire, makes them extremely dangerous articles, and should not be used. The only safe and economical night light is the PATENT SUGAR LAMPS and LAMP MORTARS, which are clean, elegant, economical, and safe; give three times the light of all mortars with paper round them. Nothing can be simpler than lighting the lamp, and have neither smell nor smoke. Persons burning night-lights should not use any other They keep the lamps supplied and burning in their absence. Lamps, and best refined sugar, and in paper marked, from 6d. each. Mortars, 7d per box. May be obtained wholesale at the Patentee's Lamp Manufactory, 56, A base-street, Regent's-park, and retail from all respectable grocers, oil-men, and ironmongers in the kingdom

THE NATIONAL REVERSIONARY INVESTMENT COMPANY, No. 68, Old Broad-street, London.—Third June, 1847.—Notice is hereby given, that the HALF YEARLY DIVIDEND, at the rate of £4 10s. per cent. per annum, on the paid-up capital, of the Company (free of the income-tax), declared payable at the Annual Meeting at Court of Proprietors held on Wednesday, the 16th instant, may be received at the Offices of the Company, on and after the 25th day of June next.
By order of the Board of Directors,
C. A. REINDALL, Secretary.

COUNTY FIRE OFFICE, 50, REGENT-STREET. ESTABLISHED 1807.
It is respectfully notified to parties holding Policies in this Office, the renewals of which fall due at Midsummer, that the same may be paid within Fifteen days after Midsummer day. The Receipts are lying at the Head Office, and to the hands of the several Agents.
The Terms of the Society for the advantageous Assurance to be insured, and have accrued to a large share of public approbation All claims are settled with promptitude and liberality. Full Particulars will be given on parties applying personally, or by post, to the Head Office, or to any of its Agents, who are appointed in all the principal towns of the United Kingdom JOHN A. BEAUMONT, Managing Director

EAGLE ASSURANCE COMPANY.—NOTICE is hereby given, that a SPECIAL GENERAL MEETING of the Proprietors of this Company will be held at RADLEY'S NEW LONDON HOTEL, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars, on FRIDAY, the 14th day of July next, at Two o'clock precisely, for the purpose of declaring upon a proposed Amalgamation with another Life Assurance Company, and, if approved, of giving to the Directors full power to carry the same into effect
By order of the Board of Directors,
Eagle Office, June 16, 1847. BENJ. P. SMITH, Actuary

LEGAL and GENERAL LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 10, Fleet-street, London. Established 1836.

TRUSTEES.
The Right Hon. Lord Lyndhurst	The Right Hon. Sir H Jenner Fust
The Right Hon. the Earl of Devon	William Wingfield, Esq
The Right Hon. the Vice-Chancellor of England	Thomas Bellamy Crosley, Esq.
	Benjamin Carvey, Esq.

DIRECTORS.

Charles Jenkyns, Esq.	James Ayrton, Esq.
James Atkinson, Esq.	Kenyon S. Parker, Esq., Q.C.
Edward Farrer, Esq.	Thomas Pemberton, Esq.
The Hon. Mr Baron Platt	Charles Purton Cooper, Esq., Q.C.
The Hon. Sir George Turner	Sir Francis Shuttleworth, Q.C.
Clement T. Sneyd, Esq., Q.C.	Samuel Warren, Esq., Q.C.
Mr. Sergeant Talfourd	Nicholas Tatham, Esq.
Mr. Sergeant Wilde	Thomas Wing, Esq.

AUDITORS.

James Leman, Esq.	Frederick Robinson, Esq.

SOLICITORS

Messrs. Kinderley, Denton, and Kinderley.

MEDICAL OFFICERS

Henry S. Roots, Esq., M.D. | J. G. Perry, Esq.

A Bonus was declared on the 16th day of April last on the Policies effected in this office. In the following Table are contained Specimens of Additions made to Policies of £1000 each

Ages at entrance.	Duration of Policy in Years.	Annual Premium.	Total of Premiums paid.	Vested Bonus added to Policy.	Prospective Additions, or Bonus further added, until 1851.	Annual Premium to be paid after Division.	Rate per cent. per annum.
20	15	£20 3	£301 15	£130	£15	£0 3	5½
30	15	25 7	383 15	140	11	0 5	5½
40	15	32 16	503 12	155	13½	0 14	5½
50	15	45 7	653 15	200	20	0 17	5½
60	9	39 12	296 12	120	13½	16 13	4½
40	7	32 19	230 14	104	12½	16 9	4½
40	8	32 19	197 15	93	12½	23 3	3½
40	6	32 19	164 15	77	12½	23 3	2½

The Next Quinquennial Division of Profits will take place at the end of the year 1851. All policies effected before that time will participate therein.
Persons whose lives are assured in this Society are permitted, without payment of any extra premium, to voyage (as passengers) or reside in any part of the world distant more than 33 degrees from the Equator.
The Directors' Report to the recent Periodical General Meeting of the Members of the Society may be obtained at the Office, on personal or written application.
By order of the Board,
T. B. EDMONDS, Actuary.

PURE ST. JULIEN CLARET, 28s. per Dozen; Pints, 18s.; imported Duret by HEDGES and BUTLER, Wine Merchants, &c., 155 Regent-street, can be confidently recommended Also, some superior Gordon Sherry, 36s. per Dozen. On the receipt of a Post-office Order, or reference, will be carefully forwarded

CURRALL and SON, Importers of COGNAC BRANDY, of the highest quality: choice Old Pale at 48s., and Brown at 46s. per Dozen. Bottles, 2s. per Dozen; Hampers, 1s. Brandies at 16s and 18s. per Gallon. Pale High-flavoured Sherry at 36s per Dozen.—24, Bishopsgate-street Within.

TONIC ALE.—This splendid description of Bottled Beer is now in perfection. It is strongly recommended by the Faculty as possessing peculiar stomachic qualities, promoting appetite, &c. Sold in quart and pint bottles, secured by Patent Capsule. JOSEPH STOCKTON, Sole Agent, Stores, No. 1, John's-mews, Bedford row

SCHWEPPE and CO.'S SODA and other MINERAL WATERS, so well known and appreciated for upwards of 60 years past, continue to be manufactured, as heretofore, upon the largest scale, at their several Establishments. Importers direct from the Springs of the GERMAN SELTERS WATER Principal Establishment, 51, Berners-street, London. Branch Manufactories at Liverpool, Bristol, and Dublin; and sold by nearly all respectable Chemists in every town in the United Kingdom.

THE NOBILITY, GENTRY, AND THE PUBLIC IN GENERAL are respectfully informed that the Fashionable and Splendid Stock of the late Mr Collins, Glass Manufacturer, 287, Strand, near Temple-bar, is now in course of sale under the prime cost, consisting of large cut glass and Grecian metal chandeliers, with the rich and great Assortment of Glass and Ormolu mantel, branch and table painted glass belonging to the late proprietor.

JONES'S £4 4s. SILVER LEVER WATCHES are selling at the Manufactory, 338, Strand, opposite Somerset House. They combine every modern improvement, and are warranted not to vary more than half a minute per week. The celebrated £2 2s. watches at once see safe all rivalry, either in the Swiss manufacturers, or any other house. On receipt of a Post-office Order, payable to JOHN JONES, for £4 4s., one will be sent Free.—Read Jones's Sketch of Watchwork, sent free for a Twopenny Stamp WATCHES and CLOCKS.—A Pamphlet, explaining the various contrivances, and the advantages of each, with a List of Prices, will be forwarded, Gratis, by post, if applied for by a post-paid letter.—T. COX SAVORY and CO., Goldsmiths, Cornhill, and 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

ORNAMENTAL CLOCKS.—Recently received from Paris an unusually large variety of FOURTEEN-DAY CLOCKS, to strike the hours and half-hours, in Ormolu, Marble, and China. The designs are Pastoral and Historical, and include a few of the richest and most elegant Clocks ever imported. Prices from £5 5s. to £25, and several classes each, and upwards.
A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Watchmakers, 9, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank.

MUSICAL BOXES.—A large stock of the first quality, playing upwards of 600 airs overtures, &c., including selections from the following Operas:—"Norma," "Puritani," "Sonnambula," "Maricna," "Daughter of St. Mark," the "Bandsman," &c. A Catalogue of the Music is now published, and may be had gratis on application to T. COX SAVORY and CO., Watchmakers, &c., 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

SILVER PLATE, New and Second-hand.—T. COX SAVORY and CO's Pamphlet of Prices, with outlines, may be had gratis, or will be sent post free on application. The Stock comprises a splendid Assortment of Tea and Coffee Services, Waiters, Dish-covers, Liqueur Frames, Cruet Frames, Candlesticks, Candelabra, Tea Trays, Tea Urns, Kettles, Spoons and Forks, new and second-hand Silver Spoons and Forks, new and second-hand Tea and Coffee Services, Waiters, Dish-covers, Liqueur Frames, Cruets, the new station or table metal Spoons and Forks, Watches, Clocks, Cutlery, Ladies' Gold Neck Chains and Jewellery.
T. COX SAVORY and Co., No. 47, Cornhill (seven doors from Gracechurch-street), London.

SILVER TEA SERVICES, of New Patterns.—A. B. SAVORY and SONS, Working Silversmiths, 14, Cornhill, London, opposite the Bank, respectfully inform their customers that they have recently finished a few new patterns of Tea Services with the greatest improved taste, and that they are sold at reduced prices from those customary in the trade

Uxbridge Pattern.		Thalia Pattern.
Strong Silver Tea-pot	... £10 18 0	Strong Silver Tea-pot	... £13 0 0
Ditto Sugar-basin	... 4 10 6	Ditto Sugar-basin	... 7 11 0
Ditto Cream-jug	... 4 10 6	Ditto Cream-ewer	... 5 8 0
Ditto Coffee-pot	... 14 10 0	Ditto Coffee-pot	... 16 7 0
Complete	... £36 19 6	Complete	... £49 16 0

A variety of upwards of 50 Silver Tea and Coffee Services may be seen in the Show-rooms, and, on application, the illustrated price current, containing drawings, with the weights and measures of each article, will be forwarded to any part of Great Britain, Ireland, India, or the Colonies. Drawback on silver plate exported, 1s. 6d. per ounce

SHIRTS.—GENTLEMEN are reminded that the Cheapest, Best, and most Fashionable SHIRTS are supplied at WHITELOCK and SON, 66, Strand. Those most recommended are Long Cloth, with Fine Silk-a Bosom, 30s., and 4s. 6d.; and Linen, 3s. 6d and 10s 6d. Gentlemen waited upon in any part of London, with samples, or one sent into the country, Free of Carriage Charge, and 1s. as part payment of postage The measure requisite is the neck, chest, and wrist, tight.

MESSRS. NICOLL, Court Tailors, of 114, Regent-street, and 22, Cornhill, have every article of dress requisite for a gentleman and moderate prices as exemplified in the REGISTERED PALETOT of LAMA CLOTH

PATRONS of NICOLL'S REGISTERED PALETOT.—His Royal Highness Prince Albert, his Royal Highness Prince George of Cambridge, his Serene Highness Prince Hohenlohe, the Duke of Wellington, the Duke of Wellington, and the several Royal visitors to the British Court, with almost every nobleman and gentleman in the United Kingdom, bear testimony to the satisfactory qualities of this fashionable overcoat in the consistent renewal of this high patronage.

AGENTS for NICOLL'S REGISTERED PALETOTS of LAMA CLOTH.—Edinburgh: Forrest and Son. Dublin: G. Macdona. Edinburgh: Christie and Son. Birmingham: Wareing and Son. Bath: Gray. Cheltenham: J. Lee. Brighton: B. Wilkes and Co. Hong-Kong: R. Rutherford. Bombay: Waghorn and Co. And the principal Retail Agents throughout the United Kingdom and its Dependencies.

BERLOE'S LIGHT OVER-COAT, for the SUMMER SEASON (intended also, in warm weather, to form an under-coat). The WATERPROOF PALLIUM possesses especial claims to the attention of the respectable classes: its superior quality, gentlemanly appearance, well-known adaptability, and moderate cost, continue DIVIDED BY ANY MERELY CLAP-TRAP PRETENSIONS, to sustain its established reputation, as exclusive assortment kept to select from, or made to order at a day's notice. BERLOE, Tailor and Over-Coat Maker, 96, New Bond-street (near Oxford-street), and 69, Cornhill (corner of Finch-lane).

LADIES' RIDING HABITS.
An Equestrian Lady, with grace and with ease,
Rides Rotten Row daily, if the weather please,
Especially so, if the FAIR One discloses
The Perfection of Shape in HER HABIT of ROSES.
RIDING HABITS.—The greatest care has been evinced in the selecting of Cuttors of Firstrate Talent, and of considerable experience, in the Habit Department of E. MOSES and SONS' Establishment, 154, 155, 156, and 157, Minories, and 83, 84, 85, and 86, Aldgate, City, London. The success which has attended this department for the past month, so as to ensure every degree of privacy whilst Ladies are selecting their Cloths and during the time of their being measured, is the Prices, E. M. and Son will guarantee a saving of full 40 per Cent., as will be seen from the following list:—

	£ s. d.		£ s. d.
Summer Cloth Habits, with 2 trains	2 0 0	Superior Cloth Habits	3 0 0
Ditto	2 10 0	Superfine Quality	4 10 0
Ditto, Cassimere	2 15 0

The New Work, entitled "Fashion's Favorite," containing a most detailed List of Cloths with full directions for Self-Measurement, may be had on application, or will be forwarded "Post Paid."
E. MOSES and SON, Habit-makers, Tailors, Woollen-drapers, Hatters, Hosiers, Furriers, Boot and Shoe-makers, and General Outfitters for Ladies and Gentlemen, 154, 155, 156, and 157, Minories, and 83, 84, 85, and 86, Aldgate, City, London.
To prevent disappointment, observe—The Establishment of E. MOSES and SON has no connexion with any other House in or out of London; and those only deserve Cautious and Cheap Clothing, &c., should, to prevent disappointment, call at, or send to, the above address.
NOTICE.—The Establishment closes Greenwich Fair Friday till Saturday, 9 a.m. Business is resumed till Twelve o'Clock
 The Entrance to the Bespoke or Measurement Department is at the Private Hall, 83, Aldgate

IDROTOBOLIC HATS.—JOHNSON and Co., 113, Regent-street, corner of Vigo-street, Hatters to her Majesty and the Royal Family, Patentees for the Idrotobolic Hat, which is the only Hat that will resist the effects of perspiration. The value which is placed in the Crown of the Hat, giving free exit to heat and perspiration, and of a porous nature, forming a series of small channels to the body part of the head, and carrying off by which air is admitted The Idrotobolic Hat possesses the following advantages the regulation of the temperature of air admitted into the crown of the hat, by the simple and easy action of the valve at the pleasure of the wearer—the impossibility of an accumulation of heated air and perspirable impurities around the head—an extreme lightness, coolness, firmness, elegance, and durability—and, lastly, their acknowledged comfort to all who wear them. Hats of this description, of the following widest exercise, Johnson and Co., 113, Regent-street, corner of Vigo-street; and Griffiths and Johnson, 61, Old Bond-street, Piccadilly.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—MESSRS. A. ROWLAND and SON, 20, Hatton-garden, London, beg to caution the Nobility and Gentry against being misled by the unprincipled conduct of some Shopkeepers, who to compromise their own trashy articles, use the titles of "MACASSAR OIL," "KALYDOR," and "ODONTO," some under the implied sanction of Royalty, and the Government Stamp, with similar attempts at deception, while they copy the Labels, Bills, Advertisements, and Testimonials (substituting fictitious Names and Addresses for the real), of the Original Preparations. The only genuine "MACASSAR OIL," "KALYDOR," and "ODONTO," are "ROWLANDS," and the Wrapper of each bears the name of "ROWLAND," preceding that of the Article, with their Signatures at the foot in RED INK, thus—"A. ROWLAND & SON." Sold by most Perfumers and Fashionable Hairdressers.

THE BITES of GNATS, MOSCHETOES, BUGS, &c., are entirely prevented by BROAD'S PERFUME, for keeping off insects. Prepared by J. Broad, Chemist, Ramsgate, and Margate, and Sold by Chemists generally, and may be obtained of Messrs. Sanger and Co., 150, Oxford-street. In Bottles, 1s. 6d., 2s. 6d., 5s., and 8s. each. Orders by post will meet with attention.

IMPORTANT TO FAMILIES.—THE POPULAR REMEDY—PARR'S LIFE PILLS, a mild, safe, and most effectual cure of Indigestion, Bilious, Liver, and Stomach Complaints, Sick Headache, Costiveness &c. The composition is truly scientific; they are compounded entirely of vegetable products, freed from all irritating and deleterious matters, which render their operation mild and agreeable. A trial is only required to prove their superiority over every other medicine, as they by the lavalid with perfect safety, as an occasional dose in all nervous and debilitated cases, recovering from protracted diseases, &c., they will be found highly valuable, imparting vigour and tone to the system, when emaciated by disease.
Their value as a general and safe preservative of the impaired stomach and digestive system is daily manifeste to the Proprietors by their increasing rapid sale, and the numerous testimonials forwarded by those who have proved their efficacy.
Sold in Boxes at, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and Family Packets at 11s. each,

ASYLUM OF THE FISHMONGERS' AND POULTERERS' INSTITUTION, WOOD-GREEN, NEAR HORNSEY.

ASYLUM OF THE FISHMONGERS' AND POULTERERS' INSTITUTION.

On Wednesday, the first stone of an edifice for the above purpose was laid by Viscount Morpeth, at Wood Green, a site of truly picturesque beauty, on the high road between Hornsey, Tottenham, and Southgate.

The Institution has been established some years, and has just raised sufficient funds to commence what has always been the primary object of its establishment: the providing an Asylum and Permanent Relief for the Decayed and Destitute Members of both trades (Fishmongers and Poulterers); as well as Casual Relief to those whom accident may throw out of their usual employment for a limited period.

The Committee, in their appeal to the public, "presume to hope that not only will their exertions excite the benevolence of the two trades, but that others blessed with the means of alleviating the accumulated misery of sickness and poverty (the attendants upon old age), brought frequently to premature decay by constant exposure to wet and weather in catering for the pleasures of their wealthier fellow-citizens, may see sufficient reason to induce their kind support and generous aid on the present occasion."

Wood Green is as charming a spot as its sylvan name implies; and is one of the many rural nooks with which the environs of our metropolis abounds. Upon one side of the Green, a District Church, of stone, in the Early English style, with a bell-gable, has lately been erected: the design is very good, and made us regret that better taste had not been employed in the rebuilding of the body of Hornsey Church, to the ancient tower, half-a-mile distant.

The weather on Tuesday was showery, and at noon the rain came down most inauspiciously. However, on reaching the Green, we found arrangements for a large number of visitors. There were temporary stabling and inclosures for the accommodation of the horses and carriages of the company; and the place partook of the aspect of a village fair. There were groups of country people in gay holiday attire; and there was the usual débris of suburban population. Thus far the preparations on the Green. Upon the site of the proposed Asylum had been raised a lofty tent, provided with seats for the spectators: the usual arrangements for laying the stone being nearly in the centre of the front of the area. The stone itself is handsomely sculptured with the arms of the Fishmongers' and Poulterers' Companies, and the arms of Lord Morpeth. It forms the base of one of the piers of the central entrance to the Asylum. Upon the platform were the clergy of Tottenham, Edmonton, and Hornsey, Mr. James Harmer, and other influential patrons of the Society. The stone was laid by Viscount Morpeth, in due form; after which his Lordship addressed the company, very eloquently, on the benefits of the Institution.

His Lordship said he had felt that, with respect to all those ailments and infirmities, for the relief of which such institutions as almshouses and asylums were intended, notwithstanding their highly laudable nature, a doubt might be perhaps suggested whether their course towards them did not sometimes assume too much of the merely palliative and not enough of the preventive character. He meant that there might be reasons sometimes to doubt that Government, and Legislature, and individuals had—at any rate until a very short period back—given sufficient attention to prevent the dissemination and growth of disease and penury, and had only sought afterwards to relieve and mitigate their inevitable results. However that might be, he thought there was no reason to question, that, while unfriended want claimed their sympathy, while unassisted need invited their assistance, it must be a graceful, and generous, and Christian act, for all those who were in the same walk of life, to come forward for the aid and relief of those who might be deserving of it, and who, he trusted, were only less fortunate than themselves. But he did not wish to found his claims to their support exclusively on such interested motives: he would rather trust his appeal to their generosity on grounds having less of calculation in them. He would rather invite them to come forward to carry on and crown the good work which they had already so nobly and successfully commenced; not because they might themselves want such assistance by and by, but because their brethren wanted it now. After some further observations, his Lordship concluded, amidst the hearty plaudits of all present.

The tent or pavilion was handsomely decorated with the national colours; and the band of the Second Life Guards enlivened the proceedings by playing several airs. After the ceremony of laying the stone, the company retired to an adjoining pavilion, to partake of a splendid déjeuner, served in the very best style, by Mr. Younghusband, of Gerard's Hall Tavern, Basing lane: the viands, confectionery, and wines were excellent and abundant; and a profusion of fine fruit gave a graceful aspect to the tables. There were upwards of 200 guests,—nearly an equal number of ladies and gentlemen. Lord Morpeth presided, and, after justice had been done to the elegant repast, his Lordship proposed the customary loyal toasts, and "Prosperity to the Fishmongers' and Poulterers' Institution;" the noble Chairman facetely turning a contretemps to good account, in wishing the Asylum might prove as good a retreat to its inmates as the waterproof roof at that moment(in a heavy rain) did to the company. The health of the noble Chairman was proposed by Mr. Harmer, and drunk with great enthusiasm. There was some tasteful singing, with pianoforte accompaniment; and the festivities concluded with a dance. The ladies were elegantly dressed, and the entire scene was extremely gay. The Stewards' arrangements for the enjoyment of the guests were good: in short, there was nothing wanting but fine weather, throughout the day.

The Asylum, as our Illustration shows, is a very piquant and cleverly designed building, of the Tudor character. The architect is Mr. Mee, of Carlton Chambers. The outline of the whole is extremely picturesque: the central portion of the building, with its towers and vanes, is very effective; and the entrance-gate peculiarly well designed. The Engraving shows the principal front; the garden-front is of somewhat different design, but picturesquely ornamented. The plot of ground comprises nearly four acres, so that there will be ample room in this "happy port and haven" for the peaceful enjoyment of those who may seek in it a retreat from the storms of life, and consolation in beclouded old age.

CHURCHES OF THE METROPOLIS.

ST. STEPHEN'S, COLEMAN-STREET.

This church is of very ancient foundation; between 1171 and 1181, it was given by the dean and chapter of St. Paul's, to the prior and convent of Butley; and they enjoyed the patronage until the Dissolution, when it devolved on the Crown. Queen Elizabeth granted the patronage of the Vicarage, together with the church and rectory, to the parishioners, who have retained the patronage ever since.

ST. STEPHEN'S, COLEMAN-STREET.

The old church was destroyed by the Great Fire, in the year 1666, and was rebuilt as we now see it, by Sir Christopher Wren, in 1676. The interior has a low flat ceiling, and is very plain. The exterior is shown in our Illustration: the height of the tower is 65 feet.

The church has been lately renovated; and during the repairs, there has been placed within it, "the Pratt Testimonial," a monument to the memory of the late Vicar, the Rev. Josiah Pratt, B.D.; the cost being defrayed by subscription among the parishioners and their friends.

The design, selected by the Committee, is by Mr. E. W. Wyon, of Charlotte-street, Portland-place; the Model of which was exhibited last year at the Royal Academy. It is a mural tablet, the bas-relief representing an Angel with the Scroll of the Everlasting Gospel, on which is inscribed, in letters of gold, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." The Angel is symbolical of the Christian Missionary; whilst the three figures, having the characteristic features of the Hindoo-Brahmin, New Zealand Chief, and African, are listening to the inspired harangue of the Angel. These figures are strikingly delineated, and the costumes are simply correct. The Children beneath the Inscription Table are emblematical of the system of mutual instruction pursued in Infant Schools. The execution of the whole we consider highly creditable to the Artist.

The following is the Inscription, from the pen of the Rev. M. M. Preston, of Chesham:—

To the reverend Memory of JOSIAH PRATT, D.D.,
Vicar of St. Stephen, Coleman Street:
Who, while faithfully preaching the Gospel in this City, largely contributed to its publication
Throughout the World,
By sharing in the Counsels and Labours
Of the British and Foreign Bible Society, and of other kindred Associations;
But chiefly as one of the Founders, and, for twenty-one years, Secretary of the Church Missionary Society for Africa and the East:
To whose objects, he unsparingly devoted the best energies of his Body and Mind,
And thus, through God's blessing, was Instrumental in gathering from among the Heathen,
AFRICANS, HINDOOS, NEW ZEALANDERS,
"Some and Few," into the Church of the Redeemed.
Called in mature age to the Pastoral Superintendence of this Parish,
He devoted to the Flock committed to his charge his ripe knowledge and enlarged experience; mainly labouring to know more, and to testify more, of the Unsearchable Riches of Christ:
His entrance into the Parish was quickly followed by
The Establishment of various Parochial Institutions for the Relief of the Afflicted and
In Misery
And for the Religious Training and Education of Children;
His sedulous promotion of which will cause his Memory
Dear to many in distant lands, to be especially blessed and honoured here.
He rested from his Labours October 10th, 1844, in the 76th Year of his Age.
This record of affectionate respect was erected by the Parishioners and other Friends, MDCCCXLVII.

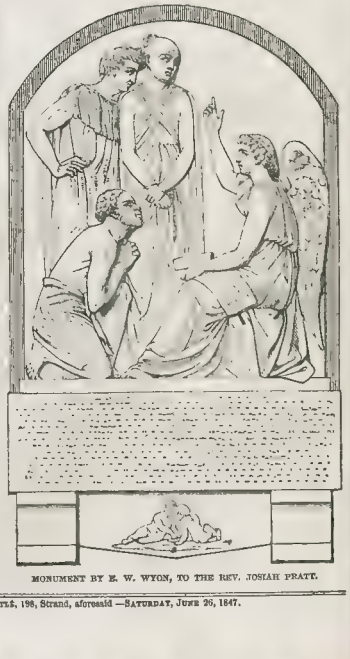
We may here correct a misstatement which has lately been made by some of our contemporaries, respecting the revenues of a Church, stated to be St. Catherine, Coleman-street, instead of St. Catherine's Colemon, in Church-row, a turning on the south side of Fenchurch-street. Thus, the Gazette of the 15th inst. contains an Order in Council, sanctioning a scheme of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, which directs that, for the future, the sum of £400 a-year shall be paid out of the revenues of St. Catherine's Coleman, to the Governor of Queen Anne's Bounty, in trust for the ministers for the time being of the new districts of St. Bartholomew, St. Jude, St. Thomas, St. Peter, St. John, and St. Matthias, Bethnal-green. It is mentioned in the Order that the income of St. Catherine's Coleman (now vacant) amounts to about £1100 a-year, and that the population of the parish is only 700, whilst the population of the new districts, to the ministers of which the sum of £400 is hereafter to be paid, amounts to 32,500; the present income of the incumbents of the six districts being only £800 amongst them. Hereafter, the incumbent of St. Catherine's Coleman will receive £700, and the ministers of the six new parochial districts in Bethnal-green will enjoy £1200 a-year—viz.: St. Bartholomew, £250; St. Jude, St. Thomas, and St. Peter, each £200; St. John, 190; and St. Matthias, £160.



MONUMENT BY E. W. WYON, TO THE REV. JOSIAH PRATT.

London: Printed and Published at the Office, 198, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, in the County of Middlesex, by WILLIAM LITTLE, 198, Strand, aforesaid.—SATURDAY, JUNE 26, 1847.

GETTY CENTER LIBRARY
3 3125 00604 0568